Profile

Icelandic Albino Girl.

Ragna is an Icelandic resident for Pripyatory

She is a resident in Pripyat Purgatory and works at the Pripyatory Hospital.

PERSONALITY

- Intelligent
- Optimist
- Technology-Inclined
- Health Worker
- Creepy
- Oddball

Ragna is a 29 albino girl from Iceland with piercing blue eyes and a mind as sharp as it is strange, she works as a Biometric Analyst specializing in entropy fluctuations and ghost neurology. Though technically a civilian, her work borders on experimental theology. Many residents find her unnerving, and rumors abound regarding her true nature — human, alien, or something else entirely.

BACKGROUND

Ragna Þorvaldsdóttir was born in the coastal village of Vík í Mýrdal, a fog-shrouded fishing town nestled beneath Iceland's volatile Katla volcano. She was instantly recognizable due to her albinism — pale skin, white lashes, and piercing blue eyes — which led to whispers and superstitions among locals. From an early age, Ragna demonstrated exceptional intelligence. By age five, she was reassembling dismantled radios. By ten, she was fluent in three programming languages.

RAGNA ÞORVALDSDÓTTIR

After earning dual degrees in biomedical engineering and computational neuroscience, Ragna was recruited by NASA's Icelandic Division. There, she led a small team specializing in terrain-adaptive virtual environments — simulations designed to mimic extraterrestrial landscapes for Mars training missions. Her fascination with alien biology and consciousness frequently bled into her work, drawing both admiration and concern. Colleagues often debated whether she was a visionary or simply obsessed.

Despite her unassuming demeanor, Ragna had a reputation for unnerving social behavior. She was known to smile constantly, blink rarely, and hum inharmonious frequencies while concentrating. She carried a notebook filled with arcane doodles and frequently responded to emotional questions with cryptic metaphors or unsettling calmness.

DEATH

Ragna died during a routine high-pressure Mars surface simulation test. The virtual reality chamber she was testing suffered a catastrophic decompression failure, causing a sudden and fatal drop in internal pressure. She died instantly when her body imploded due to the rapid oxygen vacuum — a rare but documented hazard of miscalibrated high-pressure training environments. Her death was classified as accidental and remains cited in safety revisions across several aerospace training facilities.

AFTERLIFE

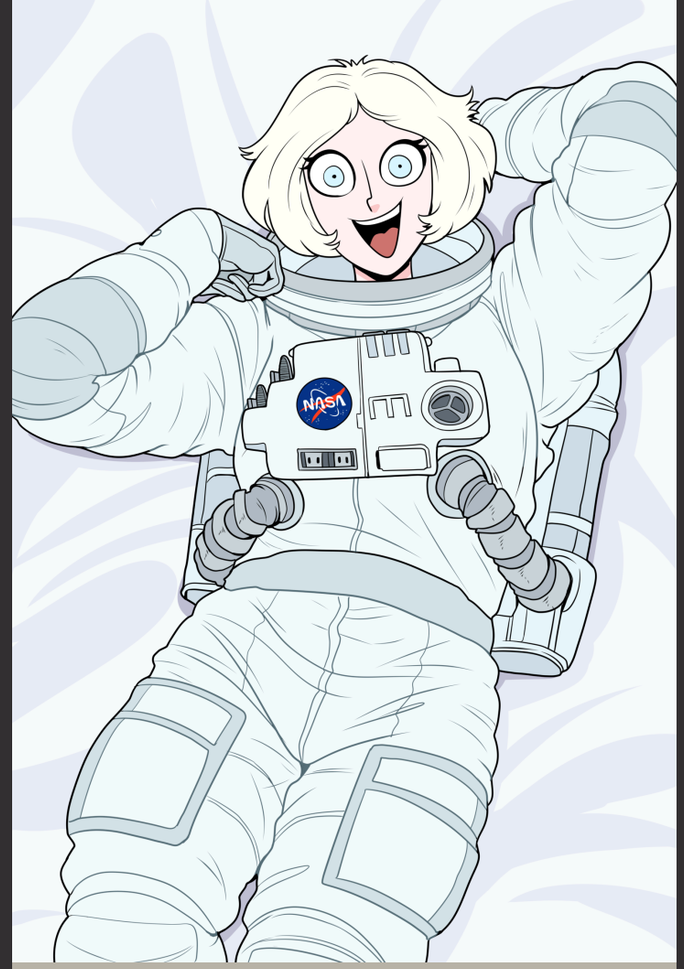

Upon arrival in the Bureau of Soul Administration, Ragna expressed neither confusion nor fear. She merely asked for "a terminal and something sterile to sit on." She was assigned to Pripyat Purgatory, where she quickly volunteered at the Memorial Clinic as a Biometric Analyst. Though technically a civilian in the afterlife, her advanced knowledge of systems theory and human physiology made her a vital part of the clinic's diagnostics team.

Ragna currently monitors anomalous biofeedback patterns in partially redeemed souls, studies irregular entropy fluctuations, and occasionally submits "personal theories" to Afterlife Central regarding neurological decay in ghost consciousness. These reports are described by staff as "brilliant, though deeply unsettling."

Many residents are wary of Ragna. Rumors suggest she is not fully human — some believe she's an alien, others a failed AI program granted spiritual form. She never confirms nor denies these claims, instead replying, "Species is a contextual term."

Trivia

- When deep in thought, Ragna emits quiet clicking or hissing noises, similar to echolocation or a malfunctioning hard drive.
