Delilah MacKinlay is a Scottish resident of Pripyatory. She dies at the age of 24 from an aggressive brain tumor after a prolonged struggle with cancer. Known for her intelligence, kindness, and quiet determination, Delilah spends her life balancing her passion for gymnastics and the arts with the physical and emotional toll of her illness. Following her death she became a resident of Pripyat Purgatory.

Delilah is kind, empathetic, and thoughtful, though marked by timidity and anxiety shaped by years of illness. Her demeanor is soft-spoken and reserved, often nervous in social settings, but she is deeply compassionate toward others. She demonstrates persistence in study and self-improvement, often immersing herself in books and quiet hobbies.

BACKGROUND

DELILAH

Delilah is born in Inverness, Scotland, United Kingdom in 1999. From a young age she shows interest in gymnastics and the arts, excelling in both physical activity and creative expression. She is described as intelligent and dedicated, with a particular fascination for human behavior and the workings of the mind, which later leads her to explore psychology.

At the age of 20, she is diagnosed with an aggressive brain tumor. Her early twenties are defined by frequent hospital stays, surgeries, seizures, and multiple rounds of chemotherapy. Though initially optimistic, her illness gradually forces her into periods of isolation, leaving her prone to breakdowns and anxiety.

During her illness, Delilah deepens her Catholic faith, often carrying and praying with a simple wooden rosary. She continues to study psychology whenever able, often from her hospital bed, finding comfort in academic reading and quiet reflection.

DEATH

Delilah dies in 2023 at the age of 24, after her condition worsens and treatment fails to halt the tumor's progression. Her final months are marked by increasing pain and seizures, though she remains surrounded by her faith.

AFTERLIFE

In Pripyatory, Delilah leads a quiet and solitary existence. She resides in a small residential home rather than the communal apartment complexes preferred by many residents. She is often seen walking alone through parks, rosary in hand, where she appears contemplative, even relieved, though tinged with lingering sadness.

She spends much of her time studying psychology, continuing the academic interests she pursued in life. Outside of this, she engages in low-key hobbies such as browsing on her phone and occasionally participating in aspects of geek culture.

While still shy and hesitant around others, Delilah demonstrates a gradual recovery from her tendencies toward isolation and anxiety. She is described by other residents as polite, soft-hearted, and fragile, embodying a quiet form of strength rooted in endurance and faith.
