Cold, Quiet, Dangerous

Hikari "GoGo" Okubo is a high-risk purgatory resident known for her chilling silence, complete emotional disconnection, and eerie stillness. A former cultist and chemical attack terrorist, she was a devoted follower of Aum Shinrikyo and idolized its leader, Shoko Asahara, as a literal God. She believed him to be the human vessel of divine truth, and accepted his apocalyptic teachings without question.

BACKGROUND

Born in the late 1970s in Shizuoka, Japan, Hikari Okubo came of age during a period of rising cult fanaticism. By 14, she was recruited into Aum Shinrikyo, the doomsday cult responsible for multiple acts of terrorism in Japan — including the 1994 Matsumoto Sarin Attack, which killed 8 people and injured hundreds. Although her specific role in the attack was classified, court documents revealed she participated in logistics and chemical preparation, with evidence suggesting she personally assisted in releasing the gas.

From the age of 14, Hikari served in various logistical roles within the cult, eventually becoming involved in the 1994 Matsumoto sarin gas attack, one of Japan's deadliest domestic terror events. While she never spoke a word during her trial, documents suggest she handled chemical storage and preparation, and possibly aided in releasing the gas. Despite overwhelming evidence, she never showed remorse — not once during her incarceration or sentencing.

DEATH

In 2006, Gogo was hanged by the Japanese state, and in character, she did not make a single sound as she died. No final words, no last rites. Just silence. The guards reportedly noted her lack of pulse before they realized she was already dead, when they removed their hood, guards report that she was staring at them.

AFTERLIFE

Despite early classification for Hell, Gogo's case file was flagged and reviewed by Afterlife Bureaucracy due to severe neurological dissociation and possible early-age coercion. Though found competent, she was re-categorized as "mentally compromised by indoctrination" and rerouted to Pripyat Purgatory under maximum containment.

She does not speak. She does not blink often. She sits for hours at a time, perfectly still, in places where she's not supposed to be. Her file states she "moves without making noise", and is often found standing at the far corner of rooms or staring through cracked doors.

Her behavior is considered "deeply unsettling" even by purgatory standards. She is permanently banned from sharp objects, string, or cables longer than 12 inches. Additionally, she is forbidden from being within 100 meters of the daycare sector. While records are sealed, internal notes hint at either a murderous or pedophilic history. Despite everything, GoGo is a gifted drummer. She plays in the grindcore band "A Child Corpse in a Trash Bag", alongside Petri and Cotard. Known for her astonishing speed she earned the nickname "Typewriter" for how fast and robotic her blast beats were.

She is known to self-harm without emotion, carving into her body with found debris or chewed-off fingernails. Some psychologists interpret this as an attempt to feel pain or reconnect with a body she barely recognizes as her own. She currently resides under continuous remote monitoring, sharing a 2-bedroom apartment with Petri and Cotard. She sleeps on the floor. She does not decorate. Her toothbrush remains unused.
