Profile

Creepy Hobo guy

Jeffrey is an American resident for Pripyatory

Jeffrey Darryl McMartin is an American drifter, drug addict, and self-proclaimed "dark priest" from Sacramento, California. A former airman turned homeless cult leader, he becomes notorious among local transient communities for his charisma, manipulative influence, and involvement in petty arson and a single cult-related murder. He dies in 2012 at the age of 48 after accidentally severing an artery during a blood ritual, He became a resident of Pripyatory..

PERSONALITY

- Oddball
- Creepy
- Sociopathic
- Outcasted
- Cynical
- Intellectual

Jeffrey has the psychological profile of a cult leader: charismatic, narcissistic, and manipulative. He scores high in the "dark triad" traits — narcissism, Machiavellianism, and psychopathy. Despite his ragged appearance and poor hygiene, he possesses a hypnotic speaking style and a deep, eerie voice that draws in vulnerable people. Jeffrey exhibits classic dark triad traits: narcissism, Machiavellianism, and psychopathy. He is a manipulator by nature, thriving on control over others while masking his intentions with apparent spiritual authority.

Jeffrey thrives on fear and discomfort, intentionally cultivating a creepy aura. His deep, rasping voice and habit of staring unblinking at people make social interactions unsettling. His ragged appearance — long hair, a tangled beard, hollow cheeks — makes him look decades older than his actual age.

He is described as eerily charismatic, able to talk for hours in a hypnotic cadence that captivates listeners, even when they know his ideas are nonsense. His followers considered as a prophet, while outsiders see only a paranoid, manipulative crazy hobo.

BACKGROUND

Jeffrey is born in San Jose, California, in 1964 into a liberal, permissive household. He grows to resent his upbringing, describing his parents as weak and hypocritical. In his early 20s, He briefly serves in the United States Air Force, but is discharged under unclear circumstances. During this period, he becomes addicted to painkillers, and his family eventually cuts ties with him.

By the early 1990s, Jeffrey relocates to Sacramento, where he lives as a transient, sleeping in tents beneath bridges and overpasses. Over years of drug use and homelessness, he begins presenting himself as a “dark priest,” gathering other homeless addicts and drifters into a makeshift cult.

Over the years, Jeffrey turns to darker pursuits. Combining his drug use with occult interests, he styles himself as a “dark priest” and organizes a cult of fellow homeless people. His charisma enables him to orchestrate crimes, including arson attacks and at least one alleged murder, the latter involving a prominent drag queen performer. Though never formally convicted, Jeffrey is rumored to have ordered the killing as a sacrificial act.

DEATH

In 2012, at the age of 48, Jeffrey dies during one of his rituals. While cutting his arms in a bloodletting rite, he severs an artery too deeply. He bleeds out in his encampment, surrounded by cult paraphernalia and candles, his followers too terrified or intoxicated to intervene. His death is recorded as an accidental suicide.

AFTERLIFE

In Pripyatory, Jeffrey remains a disturbing figure. He is largely a loner and outcast, avoided by other residents due to both his physical stench and the heavy, oppressive atmosphere that seems to follow him. His deep, resonant voice unsettles others, and some describe feeling short of breath in his presence.

Despite this, he occasionally attracts small groups of impressionable or unstable residents, attempting to rebuild his cult influence. Most, however, quickly abandon him, repelled by his odor, erratic behavior, or sheer creepiness.
