Big Polish Hooligan

Cichy is a Polish resident for Pripyatory

He is a resident in Pripyat Purgatory, Krzysztof “Cichy” Maj is a large, fat Polish skinhead and notorious football hooligan residing in Pripyat Purgatory. Known for his aggressive and loud behavior, Cichy embodies the dark underworld element of Pripyat’s criminal scene. A fanatic supporter of ŁKS Łódź, he is drawn more to the violence and chaos surrounding football matches than to the sport itself

PERSONALITY

- Outcasted
- Hot-Headed
- Bitter
- Obnoxious
- Stubborn
- Criminal

Cichy is boisterous, abrasive, and openly hostile, making him widely disliked by most Pripyat residents. His demeanor is marked by a blunt, often crude manner of speech and a willingness to provoke conflict. Despite his intimidating physical presence, Cichy is somewhat lethargic, spending much of his time eating sunflower seeds and drinking alcohol. His loyalty lies primarily with his small gang of fellow hooligans, and he views football riots as a form of expression and belonging rather than sport.

He adheres strongly to the stereotypical gopnik skinhead lifestyle: shaved head, Boots and braces, constant chewing of sunflower seeds, and occasional petty criminal activity.

CICHY

BACKGROUND

Born and raised in the working-class district of Łódź, Poland, Maj grew up in a neighborhood plagued by economic decline and social unrest. From an early age, he was drawn to the local skinhead scene, which offered a sense of belonging and identity amid instability. His adolescence was marked by petty crime, vandalism, and escalating violence at football matches.

Maj became a prominent figure in the ŁKS Łódź hooligan scene, renowned more for inciting violence and stirring chaos than any genuine love of football. His reputation was cemented after several arrests for public disorder and assault related to football riots. Despite repeated brushes with the law, he remained defiant and committed to the lifestyle.

DEATH

On 7 Oct 2008, during a high-profile match between ŁKS Łódź and Legia Warsaw at the National Stadium, Maj threw a Molotov cocktail into a dense crowd of supporters, inciting panic. Riot police responded with tear gas to control the situation, which escalated into a chaotic stampede. Cichy was crushed beneath the mass of fleeing fans, suffering fatal internal injuries.

AFTERLIFE

In Pripyat Purgatory, Maj lives on the fringes of society, unemployed and isolated from mainstream social structures. His presence is most commonly noted in rundown bars and street corners, where he keeps company with other marginal residents and minor criminals. Known for his abrasive nature, he is often avoided by law-abiding citizens but maintains a small, loyal circle of fellow hooligans and skinheads.

His daily routine consists of smoking, drinking cheap alcohol, eating sunflower seeds, and occasionally provoking fights or loud confrontations. Though physically imposing, he struggles with health issues related to his obesity and lifestyle choices.
