TEMPLE GROWS IN BROOKLYN

Ferra. One hour a lot about her, how gifted she is in business without guile, these ecstatic visions, how her exalted cool work wanders on the wandering consciousness of fools & angels, Ferra, Ferra.

"She's beauty," a stranger says to me near the temple, "she needed my spirit," Ferra, "perfect soul woman."

Then one night I met Jessie Masley, a young visionary activist reckless & beautiful enough to want to remake the world, in his consciousness image, desiring and working toward both economic & spiritual independence, and convinced "there's a lot more worlds than this fish bowl." For life is little lived when divorced from a meaningful contact with the spirit and its worlding.

Jessie Masley was sitting beside him, together they spoke of Ferra, you walked in on Ferra and she looked thru you knowing you before you said hello. But they didn't sit on knowing her & feeling strongly the death of her commitment to truth. The three of them got together with David Elder one night, and started talking about the spiritual problems of the world, and the young people's search for identity in Bedford-Stuyvesant, this nation's second largest black city nation (after South Side Chicago). And they started building. They wanted a temple to also embrace community activities and a store to handle "spirit goods." They were fired by dreams of a "new civilization."

That was little over a year ago, and a lot has happened in America & the world since. Assassinations and lawsuits turn into lot dimensional ravines of politics & strange movements, the Maharishi makes a million & returns to his coaching cave, more & more people seek refuge in love and lucid gardens, leaving intact the confused chaos.

And Jessie Masley, still the spiritual goal, had no regrets when I said I wanted to meet Ferra & do a story about their search for truth in Brooklyn which is alive & kicking and less dead than Thomas Wolfe thought. He was afraid of "underwater attention." It was not a show for people who break out on the beach without caring (or even daring) to fly from their temporal sludges to the strange yet beautiful and rewarding phantasms of creation where the holy & prepared are called to a shifted, logical, and transcendent engagement of the senses making it impossible to distinguish between self & love. For when the masks are removed, all life is infused with holiness and constant rebirth.

So I walked past Pratt Institute into the music of Big Badass, 224 De Kalb Avenue, filled with Ivo Badass, African holy masks & other associated goods of the spiritual life, a direct adjunct of the temple, officially known as the Museum of MADAU (Mansory Academy of Design Art & Universality) whose members dwell in the psychic mazes and the occult, all praise to Allah & His working beauty. They proudly showed the Badass from distant countries and how, even in the showrooms, they affect people's lives and dance beauty out of street kids and Pratt students who wander in from the hot cold streets, searching,

"There was this occasion," Jessie Masley said, "I was going to show up the Welfare Building, and walked in because he wanted help in finding a reading ground. See, he had this book. He made it. And he was going to use it. And he wanted it to work." so she and Jessie showed him his mind was the only book sure to work & show up all the bad vibrations that tempted him to destroy himself. And he was partly sheltered to Ferra as St. James Place.

So around the corner I was walking with Jessie Masley when a woman greeted us, her eyes plainly active motionally composed face moving with unrestrained openness. Ferra. She talked about the poor girl who was being tricked by "the owner's game," and didn't know whether she was "losing or going," and Ferra was straightening out her head. The still-thinking.

Ferra was at page 103 of THE POWER OF SILENCE is a study of the values & uses of the learner life by Deussen, and says she, upright, lady, like the young people who come to her for spiritual advice. She who is convinced that "massive love, and divinity reside in all of us, and the deciding virtue is how we express it," and she could love anyone & everyone because she was going to "contend stages" of the journey to enlightenment. "It's so simple," she said, "I can't see why people make it complicated. But then, I guess, they have to have something to do," she smiled her liddled cool & left David Elder to take me on a guided tour of his cool, arched, brownstone; four two doors filled with art work by Joe Overstreet, Hugh Harrell, Jessie Masley, Kitty Davis, Paul Smith, Yolanda Aponte, David Elder, some of the most together people in New York.

All is temple & holiness, everything, but there is the large meditation room, the adobe of sweetness & candid morning Ferra's persuasive spirit. And Ferra wants who who speaks the truth of the center of the Lord.

"Nobody practices black magic here," David said. "This is the real world. . . to help people — helping anyone." There is a "religious aspect" but MADAU "is not really a religion." MADAU is involved in "the war of life," and was physically existing (with the gift shop on De Kalb) for one year, and he and Jessie & Bessie keeping it together for development & growth. The spirit rewards those who know there's a heaven in the outer regions of every hell. Bedford-Stuyvesant is "usually the spiritual situation of the US — materially impoverished but spiritually volcanic." People are spiritual, but have been unable to direct the focus in their own life & emerge from consciousness & chaos to activate the people-power that is theirs.

"Others have discouraged their spiritual life, and are therefore dead."

"In fact," said David Elder who started hearing criticism at Ferra's spirit three years ago, "she has a divine mind. She doesn't have an earth mind at this point, he said very quietly. "Divine."

Then we were alone, Ferra & I, and she said "I'm just a woman who believes man is in his highest Clashes of American and South Vietnamese stability seem report after report of mounting death tolls and income fighting in Saigon have left the American public in a state of dizzy disorientation as the "credibility gap" grows ever wider. The N.Y. Post reports that death totals now expected to exceed Korea's. The cumulative totals as reported on June 14th were 27,764 killed and 83,542 wounded in need of hospital care.

Unemployment is at its lowest level in 15 years and the economy appears to be booming; whether or not this has anything to do with the death tolls of thousands of unemployed black youths (whose unemployment rate remains double that of white workers) will remain to be seen if and when the American people are able to influence their government to "bring the boys home." The unemployment problems which may result may be somewhat ameliorated as the season in our cities mounts to the point where there will be plenty of demand for trained soldiers (on both sides).

Freshets, pollen, and protests have caused the summer at Columbia University as students plan to renew their struggle this fall.

Undoubtedly by President Russell Kirk's premature statement of victory before TV cameras days after commencement exercises, the Senate Committee plans to compete with the University on an ideological level by the legality of increasing freshmen with a "counter-orientation." Throughout the summer, various free classes on such timely subjects as draft, the "housing crisis," and labor relations as well as weekly meetings and rallies are expected to keep revolutionary spirit at a high level during the summer months.

Underground sources report that Frank Sinatra is expected to be indicted by a Federal Grand Jury in the near future.

Student leaders from around the world appearing on a BBC show denounced the process of election as an effective means of bringing about change "and imposing the will of the people." This report would lend credence to Drew Pearson's recent revelation that after "extensive research" he is convinced that there is "an international student conspiracy." Good work Drew.

Admiral Clayton Powell is expected to resign his congressional seat despite Congress' refusal to allow him to occupy it officially.

Secret hearings as to the fate of the nuclear submarine SCORPION has spurred speculation that she was on a "secret mission." Underground press sources say the sub may have been engaged by wary Africans as she attempted to explore their unwise civilization.

A recent survey among overseas troops at Okinawa College reveal a virginal quotient of approximately 80%. Only 49% report they have engaged in intercourse. Hopes for the improvement of these statistics next year are expressed by leading members of Okinawa's male enrollment.

The NYO Best-Sport Award goes to the as yet unacknowledged loser in a dice game in St. Louis who drove his car into a group of winners killing one man and injuring three others.

Progress in the field of medicine was in the headlines as the New York Post scooped the National Enquirer with the sensational story "SHKEEP TO MAN TRANSPLANT" — PATIENT DIKE. The transplant fad is still going strong, as ever increasing heights of grotesque are mentioned. Doctors have become bolder and bolder as they circle falling patients with scalpils in hand waiting for the final gasp and their opportunity to grab headlines. The enterprising World Health Organization has found it necessary to set up a new "autopsy" method by which to measure the extent of human death. This "crossdown" system is expected to prevent the team of program-cobblers to blast-off at the earliest possible moment.

Scientists at MIT may be engaged in work which will one day point the way to a bold new future. A laboratory team has been successful in sustaining rat-life on a diet of "experimental" chemical compounds. Dr. Stanford A. Miller of the department of nutrition and food sciences has said that "there's no reason to assume we can't produce a completely artificial diet for animals and humans." He added, "We can do it today, but it would be expensive and might not be palatable." Although the N.Y. Times admits that "it might sound unappetizing" this new "food" would come from "man-made" micro-organisms, bacteria, yeast, algae and fungi — that are grown in oxygen-enriched solutions of hydrocarbons derived from ordinary petroleum! We assume these petrol-burgers would be available to the consumer at food service stations which may be the drive-in restaurant of tomorrow. Other techniques involve solutions of molasses, paper-cold wastes or treated sewage. The savings go on for some length . . .

COORAGEDDER ANIMALS AROUND THE GLOBE

AP reports that the "backyard of Grady Bell's home is a rainbow of color and a symphony of tweets." Bell keeps about 800 parakeets in his back yard. The reformed carpenter reports, ". . . it keeps me from twiddling my thumbs . . ."

From the New York Post: "A pigeon from Staten Island walked into the lobby of Georgetown University Hospital the other day and stopped by the information desk." Figurehead Dr. Joseph H. Galloway, displaying true nobility treated the ailing pigeon although he had no medical insurance.

Animals on the wrong side of the law this week include Chien, a 2-year-old German Sheppard who had a death sentence commuted to life in Emma, N.Y. The dog was found guilty of biting Ju Lynn Mitchell, 7. . . . Chien appeared in Rivine Reformatory for grand duty severity.

In London eleven walked doorknobs were held guilty for blocking traffic. The docks were charged with "causing a disturbance."

Actor William Boyd, now 74, was reported in satisfactory condition after removal of a tumor from the lymph gland. "Happy" will be released from St. Vincent's Hospital in Los Angeles soon.

Water conservationists around the globe have reason to rejoice. The Thames, traditionally one of the marksmen's haunts to be polluted by man is becoming less and less impure due to Britain's effective pollution control program. There have been scattered reports of fish actually feasting swimming in the formerly polluted water. It is a hopeful sign certainly, indicating that the process of industrial pollution of the world's air and water supply may one day be reversed if people demand it be done.

Don C. Baty, a 22-year-old draft resister sought refuge last week in the Washington Square Methodist Church. Baty was granted sanctuary by Rev. Finley Sobase with the approval of his congregation. Not giving a fig about tradition, Brooklyn Federal Judge Levett signed a warrant for Baty's arrest instructing marshals "to go get him and bring him to court."

Dr. B. T. Mead, chairman of the departments of pediatrics and serology at the Creighton School of Medicine in California, said recently that pregnant young girls would be doing their unborn children more harm than good by a hasty marriage. He recommends instead that each unplanned child be put up for adoption and adds that this is preferable to a broken home resulting from a probable divorce.

Jacrus, the latrine diameter misanthrope which passes close to the Earth every sixteen years, missed once again last Friday night by a slim four million mile-margin. Chances for cosmic upheaval from this source are postponed until 1987.

A Suck from our interdimensional scientific reports that the City of New York is currently keeping Harlem cool by paying off selected black militants. In an effort to improve police-community relations the payoff's are made by members of the NYC police force. Another giant step forward in the field of race relations.

Former Governor George Wallace of Alabama's American Independent Party is reportedly on the ballot in North Carolina after obtaining 58,773 signatures on their petition.

Before you settle down to a happy evening with your friends in the muggy security of somebody's basement, remember this: after drinking for five hours in one bar, a cop still has his legs.

They got Jerry Rubin while he was on the way to the movies. While in the streets was playing Thursday evening at the Third Street Playhouse, and Rubin was going to watch it for the second time in a row. A sometime candidate for Mayor of Berkeley he was understandably interested. Then, at the last minute, comes a knock on the door.

A knock on the door? What the hell is this? You was down at the front door in Rubin's building, unless you're some sort of crook — second story man, hitpich, child molester, Avon lady, fun . . . It was the feds. They wanted to see about a brochure in the Bronx, they think, and asked that they were from the narcotics division. "Do you have a search warrant?" Rubin asked. "Open the door, you can see us through your peephole," came the reply.

Unfathomably misled by this exchange, Rubin lifted the latch. They once shouldered it, and what shoulders, and appropriated the kitchen, where they stood about nervously and fished badges until a third cop appeared a moment later. Now Rubin had three cops, three extraordinarily large and serious cops, glowering around his little kitchen and smelling unmistakably of booze. "Do you have a search warrant?" he asked, fairly sure by this time that it made little difference.

"What do you know about a search warrant?" A scrap of paper appeared in front of Rubin's face, with his name and a judicial signature scrawled on it. Then he was grabbed by the elbow. "Do you have anything in here you shouldn't have? Where's the gun? If you don't tell me where it is, and I find a gun, I'll break you apart." Another one asked for dope, where was the dope? Then they found the desk, started rummaging through papers. "What are the Yippies going to do in Chicago?" Gave, dope, politics — these feds wanted to know everything about Rubin, without once offering to let him talk to a lawyer.

In fact, if Rubin has asked for a lawyer, he probably would have got his own kicked ass. These cops were definitely physical men, threatening to attack him every time he hesitated in answering a question; two of them were playing rough, shoving him around and calling him names, while one of them played soft, restraining the other two and whispering "No now." This went on for about a half hour, while the cops rummaged through Rubin's personal papers and ripped Castro posters off the wall, threatening to kick the shit out of him the first time he gave them a chance.

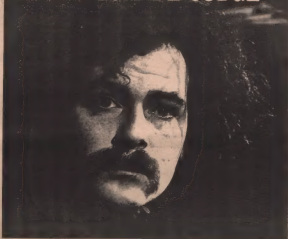

They were vitally interested in Rubin's Yippie correspondence in a few foreign papers, including the activities of Allen Ginsberg, ESSO, the Yippies, Communist China and Russian subversives. "We want to find out who your friends are." Turned out these efforts had been at Columbia, too. "We saw you at Columbia, and decided to come and get you," one of them said. "All I want to see minutes with you, I'll tear out every hair in your head and make you sorry you're alive."

Then they handcuffed Rubin, dragged him downstairs, and thrust him into a private car surrounded with two armed Sanwichmen. "We love America," they said, adding that if Rubin were in Cuba he'd get his hands cut off for acting like he does. Rubin had gone to Cuba in 1961, one of them recalled, over the better wishes of his government. "Do your neighbors know you are a Communist and that you hate America?" That sort of talk — they bustled him for dope, but dope did not seem to concern them anymore.

At the Ninth Precinct, who should appear but Rubin's old lady, Nancy Warren. Answering a call from some nameless "friend of Jerry's," she'd dragged by with Abbie Hoffman. The cops told her she could see Rubin — alone — and she was halfway along toward him when he yelled, "Why are you coming?" Seeing what was going down, Nancy made to split; she was grabbed, arrested, hooded, and grilled — did she have any friends in the Jewish army? What synagogue did she go to in Brooklyn? Why did she hate America? And so on.

Together, Rubin and his chick were then transported down to 100 County Street, in a patrol car undergoing what stages all the cops. There were of the tough sort, got out of hand, dragging Rubin into the jail by the collar, pushing, shouting, "You hate America." Alone in the cell corridor, he struck Rubin as the head a few times and shoved him toward a cell, to await arraignment. Then, with Rubin's back turned, he kicked him in the spine, knocking him over on his face in front of the other prisoners. "This guy is a Communist, he hates America, he won't fight for his country."

They got Rubin a Legal Aid attorney presently, who spent the entire consultation session worrying about the Columbia demonstration, which he regarded as a final stand in a great controversy; he then stood by while Rubin was charged with felonious possession of marijuana and levied a thousand dollar bid. The Hon. Edwards, Jr. presided over this session, at the behest of arresting officer Donald Smith (Badge No. 1780) and by shogun runners, officers Martinez and Hill. At length, after considerable complaining, the court saw, Rubin up to Bellevue Hospital, where a Doctor R. P. Hammer inspected his back. According to the X-rays, Rubin has a "probable fracture of the coccyx."

Bill Kuntz of the ACLU was retained for Rubin, and ball was forthcoming; by that time, Nancy had already gotten out of the stir — "false arrest," Kuntzler got it, simply enough. As for Rubin's case, Kuntzler was extremely anxious to see the warrant; it took a few days for the Department to come through, but, as soon as Kuntzler saw it, he moved for a preliminary hearing on July 2, to challenge the validity of the search warrant.

Apparently interested in Rubin's case might be to down at 100 County Street, on that date, Rubin may wear his Revolutionary War outfit again. Inroad for the Rubin Defense Fund should be sent in care of the YIPPIE office, 22 Union Sq. East, New York City.

This is clearly a political bust. Rubin feels, and Kuntzler himself regards the circumstances attending the affair as exceedingly curious. And the New York feds were rather uneasy about it — they broke his back, for God's sake, so fast over broke Rubin's back before. He's been busted four times in Berkeley, once at the Postage and once at Columbia — the occupational hazards of an "outside agitator," possessing a public institution to poison an inside — but never once did anybody break his back.

So, before you settle down in your muggy security, etc. . . think. You don't have to do anything, just sit like you hate America and some drinker can put beer into your red and break your back. Entering and breaking is legal under these circumstances. Think about it if you're afraid of going to Chicago, to Grand Central, to St. Mark's Place — if you're afraid of being kidnapped by Jerry Rubin, Paul Krassner, Allen Ginsberg, et al. You can always stay home and wait for some cop to manipulate your vertebrae.

Now that the Universities and Colleges have let out, I wonder who is passing the Revision? And I wonder since education has succeeded for a three month interim, is it headed for the streets? And what then?

I guess there are some of the questions that are now on a whole lot of minds. For those who are a night bit more grounded, and rightly so, the questions have already been answered by the ringing out of a shrill but more evocative and less menacing horn before the heavy loaded cathode eye of willows or by the crackling law machine grinding up the law of confusion between the mindless ones. But these are the changes in America, June 1968, and anyone who is not as sure of their is in poor shape or just plain dead.

Of course, why do we go from here becomes a solid-grounded sword. It can go either way. With all the distractions in the country taking place at the same time it's the same pin ball machine and the slightest jar will end the game. Also with all the bad reviews the political show off its candidates are getting, there is nothing left between reality and illusion to keep the people's interest and stop them from creating their own ultimate success or total breakdown. One can only hope for the best or avoid not fighting after being told for so long to "cool it."

What it's really all about, a slow trying to find something to believe in. The old TRIBUTE, FREEDOM, JUSTICE AND THE AMERICAN WAY is a lifeline some of America's best people, if not all the people of Vietnam, it's hard to take serious any action which supports to be Democratic when what they really mean is destructive. It becomes downright derisive when people are condemned by the words of the kind for having a conscience and trying to stop war, every day. If America's young citizens want anything, it's to make sure there is no more space in the Universe where the planet Earth need to be. What is really at stake is not just our bodies but our souls as well.

But on the other side there are some good things happening. People are beginning to talk about the sickness of America, her penchant for violence. They are beginning to see that things across the sea are exactly like that at home. We are entering and are being looked up in the single mind or Intergalactic World Vision which has been tapped by one instantaneous communication system for its last thirty years. If we see much more, they will be at least, if not more, 61% of America's population who are 17 and under and aware of their fate.

But the important question is, for those who are aware already, what can they do about it now? What recourse do we have to legal oppression? Recent trials and sentences of draft protesters are making meaningful action impossible within the framework of the law. We must build an existence which does not depend on the permission of government, police, or courts. Only then can we shake America into realizing that self-knowledge, not more facts, is the path through its problems. A political underground must be a permanent part of America, and the work toward building it is important beyond Vietnam, beyond today.

The following "illegal" newsletter is put out by the Resistance and is to provide further information which draft resisters cannot safely give:

DRAFT TECHNIQUES

Anyone who has a draft problem should see a draft counselor first; his legally given advice may be all that is needed, and at least it can clarify where one stands.

Information on leaving the country is openly available. For the Manual For Draft-Age Immigrants to Canada send one dollar to the Toronto Anti-Draft Program, 2015 Yonge Street, Toronto, Ontario, Canada.

The following techniques appear quite safe and usually effective:

1. Build a medical history. Best start early (say by 14) and use an ailment which cannot be exactly diagnosed, like back problems. If possible use something with some basis in fact; just use a doctor's name to build a record. Know what papers to take with you to your draft physical; your draft counselor can help you there.

2. Publications, magazines and other articles for way-out types, who are usually seen as odd even they are not. Pick a "wildcard" with some basis in fact; good ones are homosexual tendencies, drug use, feeling of persecution, delinquency, etc. A record of psychiatric treatment does help. Draft information can cover to the attraction of prospective employers, but it usually does not address one another for a government job or security clearance.

Movement leaders or publicists are best, when you can find them.

3. Political reasons. Join an organization on the Attorney General's list and refuse to sign the draft legally questionnaire.

The following ideas need more research:

1. Intending 4F medical results. We need a doctor to do all down with the regulations and go over the human body to develop means requiring prohibitively difficult or expensive countermeasures.

2. Buying a doctor's report. Doctors who sell prescriptions may be good because the government may be able to approach them through drug channels. Do what about investing a doctor or getting hold of interested; be carefully are these checked?

3. Never registering. We have heard of few cases because in the past few 18 year olds have been exempted or know-ignorance enough to do it, and because anyone who does should (and probably has) told so one. Successful non-registration probably requires getting a properly forged draft card and 4F classification card. We do not know whether proper documents can prevent discovery in event of arrest for an associated charge, or whether the documents should refer to persons actually classified (their names, numbers, and classifications are public knowledge at local boards). Also, how can competent lawyers and those who need them get to court?

4. Just not being locatable. There are persons who have no legal domicile. We do not know whether it is possible to prevent discovery through associated arrest.

5. Thinking or keeping deferrals, exemptions, etc. by sending false university or other papers. We do not know how to do this properly, but we do know that there are many ways that can work.

6. The role of an aid help by keeping false information carefully designed to keep officials and investigators busy tracking down things that don't exist. Research is needed. Also, could payment of officials make things safer for draft evaders?

These are just a few of the questions needing answers in what could become a vast field of illegal draft resistance. If you have any substantial knowledge it would be very helpful if you could publish it widely.

Since distribution or possession of illegal newsletters may be illegal, used as proof. Newspapers can probably reveal the existence of illegal publications, if we all do our best, as news, counsel lawyers.

In a timely decision, the University of California, Berkeley, through its Board of Educational Development, has approved a student-organized "Draft Resistance" committee. The committee is composed of students for the Fall, Winter, and Spring quarters (1968-1969), called the DESIGN OF ALTERNATIVE FUTURES.

As a "home" for the Design of Alternative Futures, UNIBAR, room 11, 2300 Bancroft Way, has offered the use of its auditorium and seminar rooms for the class. Moreover, those students in the class desiring an even more intense experience can qualify for the COLLEGIUM, the traditional W-House residence coexistent for residential living and biological studies which will deal with the DESIGN OF ALTERNATIVE FUTURES for 1968-1969. There are also plans at W-Soum for 13 men and 15 women. Therefore, the program will be a joint effort with UnibAR, headed at the Design of Alternative Futures, considering new technology, systems, and science, leads to a consideration of the meaning, value, and ultimate directions of Man, which are the concerns of philosophy and religion. By this combination, the program will foster a contextual dialogue and bringing between quantitative and qualitative aspects of the future.

The major continuing project of the year will be to "grow" a set of world cities and the global service networks that connect them. If the students begin "growing" these cities at 1968 they should have organized themselves into the year 2000 by the end of the program. (Day can be compressed to 24 students, or 1 min. = 1 hr.) In this stimulation of the future by unceasing world growth, small teams of students will each be responsible for the "growth" of a particular city and the region it represents.

Now the need for the new cities by the year 2000 in some areas of the world is a diversified one of making cities, the team responsibility will be to make the cities grow. The new cities, based on this major stimulation will be investigations of technology and phenomena that are common to all cities and characteristic of the system and the humanities in the world community as a whole.

The studies will focus on: (1) global systems that transcend/contain cities - the rail system, weather patterns, sunlight, the continental shelf, the great rivers, oceans, air masses, etc. (2) technologies that show promise of facilitating large-scale future urbanization - communications satellites, thermoelectric energy, computers, sophisticated biology. (3) interdisciplinary studies using the General Systems approach - creative problem solving/innovative methods, systems, information theory, game theory, decision theory, and such applied fields as systems engineering, operations research, and human engineering. (4) forecasting techniques - gaming simulation, the Delphi method, scenario, etc. and (5) the non-material aspects of the future - psychological attitudes, philosophical and spiritual. The questions they will ask "what will the church, family, school, and work evolve into in the next 100 years?" "What innovative institutions show promise of filling the present gaps in the transmission of culture, information, and values?" "What new institutions do we need to verify the independence in the final of progress?"

Thus, the basic format of the class is a major project of global scale which is the sum of many coordinated individual projects. In this format each student is a consultant to every other student, creating the maximum possibilities for personal interaction between students. Although a great deal of leadership will be given, the function of the teachers will be consultative rather than didactic, coordinative rather than authoritarian. No fear stimulus will be used, and the program will carry itself by careful planning and direction of the learning environment and by the interest and initiative of the students. Such interest would derive from the agency of the fundamental problems man has in contrast to the great transition of this last third of the twentieth century.

A typical week during the year will consist of four hours morning (or afternoon) sessions which will be for (1) individual studies, papers, and design team presenting their work, (2) lectures, discussion, and critiques by guest lecturers and a rotating series of U.C. assistant professors whenever their fields apply, (3) work sessions for team projects, and (4) any applicable field trips or excursions to special events and places in or out of the university. (Continued from Page 4)

"our old friend, Ann" have been stand out: "What is done and accepted by a consensus becomes the standard." "Other cultures are perhaps decisions of our's one"

Then a last whiff, in order to remain as the almighty mixer of the rain-wet-mud rhythm we were being subjected to, and the word FINISH flashed across the screen and the upper balcony, first upstage down then right-side up (for tea).

Curious whom . . . open: Miss Norman is seated, recline between legs, wearing a football jersey, shoulder pads, helmet, and high heeled shoes. Pats wants the curtain moved further back, because he is hidden: give up and utilize for moving the plane closer to stage center.

Veruca seems come to mind: Pats sitting at the piano, Miss Norman leaning close, knowing a marvelous moment of Scherzo at his piano while Lucy sighs and moans about and Charlie Brown (invisible on the stage) covers his ears . . . Pats, taking off his shirt, standing in most lacy pants and boxer shorts (visible over the pants which keep slipping) . . . turns on strobe light—right in the audience. Reaction, people close their eyes, make grimaces; one interposing fanily immediately over their shoulders and wait out that while gig . . . Miss Norman sees Pats at Collins kneels, holding her wrist from his back, one arm up, one down like he is trying to lock with a towel. Great expressions of weak-woman relationship—he is between her legs, being used, etc. . . .

There is constant anticipation throughout, now any climax or realization. The evening is a sort-of-fantasy, an aesthetic evolutionary improvement over abstract, unfortunately. I do not go to art creations in order to have a philosophical ideology soaked home to me in such overtones, ingesting fables; I do not need an art through approximately 3 hours in order to learn that ignorance is not a virtue, even though so much language teachers want to give me my lesson . . . The whole evening is naturally a prepositional, introductory class to the main event; all the talk which follows, all the explanation of why this stuff is set out. Many of the events—today complain that art form has no where else to go from the conventional of today except through a new exploratory period before the new standards can be set up—and make no mistake, these will be new standards just again. The Camps are divided into having divided that performance such as they are and a renewed extension of the old way or truly need a new form. The new is always regarded with suspicion and dislike, as it requires a new perception . . . Perhaps "open" such as this one, however, really can only for a valid awareness, an open, free evaluation without the intervening repetitive pedagogical stage.

Still—I really wish it didn't take so long for the message to get through the air-filters everyone seems to have set up, including the producers, especially performers who are so busy with their knowledge and jobs that they forget to have any recognition for their audience. I wish every act became an audience test to see who can suffer most.

The most interesting parts of the whole evening were at the end, the audience attempt to co-exist: the reverential fanily who used their umbrellas to shield their eyes from the strobes; people holding whitecloths back at the stage; the various attempts by restaurant to get a shot of the real Miss Norman while her image flashed on a screen during her artistic stop-time. Nobody missed much; she had on a 2-piece bathing suit. EVO, entreprising as ever, tried to go through the stage door on to the rear of the stage, and the last scene of the evening followed: Scene I: the photographer approaches the stage door, reports it thoughtfully for a long moment. Handheld. Scene II: the camera door, disappears inside. INTERMISSION. Scene III: door re-opens. Photographer re-appears, followed by a man shaking his head and pointing out towards the audience. Final.

On package this was part of the whole performance, and was not my favorite scene.

The superficial mystique of British groups becomes more obvious as the swarms of New York's pop and contemporary music lovers loudly crowd over every imported teenage group. Clamoring over each other, aging groups and followers of what's "in" have enthusiastically endorsed the latest of the post Beatles-Dylan music masters, The Jeff Beck Group. The former lead guitarist of the Yardbirds and his sidemen have received the traditional enthusiastic welcome in a pattern that followed The Who, The Yardbirds, Cream, Jimi Hendrix (who went to England to get mystique), John Marshall, and Zeppelin. Waves of raves and heavy publicity types always precede the groups, guaranteeing for them strong reputations as virtuoso performers before they even appear in the States. Hardest-hit Jeff Beck, having followed Eric Clapton as lead guitarist of the Yardbirds, is being hailed as the heavy new British Blues soloist. But his Fillmore performance ranked him as only fair — his southern playing was erratic — often dropping notes and missing chords. Bass and drums were merely incidental, while vocalist Rod Stewart, clad in British bell-bottoms & blouse projected a rather bizarre image as a blue singer. They recorded no better than scores of other white bands playing black music.

But the audience at the Second Avenue rock palace loved them — perhaps newly for their "rock" British patois between lines and the provocative nature of them as a new "in" group.

Alan, the doctored-up second-rate white blues group in clubs and concerts is wasting. Audiences, club owners, and promoters are becoming more aware of primary blues sources and Muddy Watson, Howlin' Wolf, B. B. and Albert King as well as excellent white blues artists like Butterfield and Bloodrock are getting more backing regarding them to the masses of rock fans.

The Yardbirds, meanwhile have broken up. Jim Page will re-form the group and remain as leader retaining the Yardbirds name. Page had disagreements over material with other members of the band. Page continues to be invited to play Funky, bluesy, acoustic while his associates were more interested in a 1967 Blues & Gospel super-tape. He is in Britain presently chafing between two vocalists and two guitarists. He hopes to have the vocalists play a millennium — honoring the first group to use the device in live performances.

The latest musical phenomena in England are "The Move" and "The Driess." The former who also straddle rock and roll — a "hard, raw, anti-social, solid straight sound" have had 4 strong hits on the British charts. Juice Driess, who sang with the jazz oriented Brian Auger Trinity, is nearly a sensation in France. Styling himself after Aretha Franklin, the beautiful Franz-bred "Juice" is becoming the first concertist white and singer in England where there are few big girl pop vocalists.

The Siegel-Schwartz Blues Band is debaucher. Jim Schwart, an underrated blues guitarist with a wealth of improvisational ideas as well as being an excellent country guitarist will take over as lead called Friend and Lover. Corby Siegel will start a new band of his own.

AM Radio stations have had their hands full the last few years. Some of them have attempted bypassing the Beatles, expressing the dirty lyrics of the psychdelic songs, and banning Gordon Lightfoot's folk interpretation of the Beatles' "Black Day in July." In the latest bit of top-forty nonsense, Wadsworth says, Jim Kent, strolled out of the concert room door and into the street during his 4-9 a.m. radio show after refusing to play, of all things, Tiny Tim's "Tip-Too Through the Tulle." "We in bed lands," he self-righteously bellowed to his WMAZ audience, "and you are a bad example for the younger generation." According to the trade papers, several other of the station "jocks including 7 side-lighters Johnny Walker and an eight hour Dave "The Hawk" Randall sided with Kent in a similar way—expressing anti-Tiny Tim sentiments, but remaining on the job." However, most listeners and Tiny Tim fans would rather hear the marvelous music (rather than the pop-rock-for-the-carousal-musicianism promoted by Kent and his "anti-jock" shocktroops). They have bombarded the radio station with requests for "Tip-Too" and other tunes from Tiny Tim's Happy Blues.

Have in correct a few inaccuracies from last week's column. The album by Dylan's backing group, The Crackers, is titled "Music from Big Pink" and Big Pink is not the name of Albert Grossman's Woodstock home. The Manfred Mann single, "My Name is Jack" was written by Jack Bruce, not Paul Simon. Jack is producing that Crackers album and the Big Brother LP on Columbia.

Jerry Lee Lewis is playing the role of legs in the rock & roll version of Othello at the Abravon in Los Angeles. Excited "Catch My Soul" is the Watt Group's answer to "Blair" and "You Own Them" and presumably better, reports Daily Dashi in New Magazine.

If you want to feel the week-to-weekly exploding masses of truly liberated music, catch Pharaoh Sanders at Stage this week. His album "Turbid" is one of the most exciting albums to be released in the last year and his music has appeal to the psychedelic rock fans as well as those followers of hard core avant-garde jazz.

Next Saturday, June 26, the Roberto Mayer Festival at Central Park, will present Bobby Group, Earl Hines, Waters, for $1.00.

The summer's jazz in the Garden state at the Museum of Modern Art directed by Ed Sheen, will feature a survey of contemporary modern styles comprising some of the various attempts at synthesizing jazz and rock. Earth Opera will give the opening concert, Thursday, June 20, at 8:00, and the Frank Tesoro Quartet will give the June 27 concert.

The concert, which Mr. Sheen is producing this year, will feature a variety of styles of contemporary music. He describes the new 1968 jazz as "An American program in this vein." Instead of hard bop, or jazz styles derived mainly from the late 40's and 50's, the scope of the series will be broadened to include Chicago and other blues styles, Gospel music, Psychedelic and Free-Jazz jazz, jazz rock, folk rock, and folk music. In addition to the more standard jazz acts — Mingus, Monk, etc., the entire Museum will be open every evening until 10. The regular Museum admission, $1.50, admits visitors to galleries and to 9 p.m. All changes in the admissions; there is no charge for Museum members; admission to jazz concerts is an additional 75 cents in advance.

As in previous Jan. 14, the Shades concert, tickets for such concert will be on sale in the Museum lobby from Saturday until the law of the performance. A few chairs are available in the garden terrace, but most of the audience stands on site on the ground. Candles may be used for $2 cents. Beer and sandwiches are available. In case of rain, the concert will be cancelled; tickets will be honored at the following concert.

evolutionary stage and going on to be more than man... coming into full divine being. And everyone will readily show his natural spirit," and reason is betrayed of the natural spirit. "I can love whoever is beautiful, and nobody — no creed or man — tells me how or when to love... The year life makes you beautiful within whatever you think enhances you... we must throw ourselves into the ocean of love and swim to our divine being... whatever you project and whatever enhances you is the god within you... playing on the least means finding your natural spirit, which is what the dreamer means when they say keep your eyes on the light, on your own consciousness — not on your fellow man," physician had himself, in special with the medicine, "The only least that man has to live in the least within himself — only one, and he can't hide anymore." She wants to sit & talk to people "and let it flow into them, for that they'll know." I've read to forehead she read my mind, how I was thinking how beautiful & cool you are, I see your wings "I'm very strong" she said, "I have a lot of energy... I love this me & them," and finally, "I've read of the spiritual levity of some people," she passed, "I want to be where it's safe, and couldn't tell whether she meant the mind or the street, but left it at that after deciding she meant both, everything."

She was gifted as a child, but had to hide it then. So what is it?

"It's like... it's very difficult to name... an energy, I call it a commensuration with the inner being of people... nothing magical... everyone has the power — if you want to call it power. But power is such a horrible word." Her power used to be "an everyday occurrence, always a natural thing," and she kept want of it to herself, but, because of the state of the world, and after becoming much stronger, "I had to come out, so to speak, and dedicate myself to it."

And how does she want to be known?
"If I had the choice, I would want to be known as the Goddess of Love," she smiled, laughed, stood up. I was writing, "But don't write that, it's almost correct."

My words said OK
And later on the third floor she related how she "piped words out to educate" the neighbors, a bit of Mozart, some Davi, and Arista singing THEM! Involving the community which is never a ghetto to those who live there & truly want to express their confidence instead of live in the sub-urban and other former people of fear the American way.

So MADAD (servicing the area in arts, crafts, & consciousness) is another very forthright example of what can be done, led by her everywhere, in music, respect and self-sufficiency and take care of soul & silver without betraying the natural spirit of universal consciousness.

"Isn't this love?"
It is! It's a two-score clothes & agendas in spiritual vitality, leaving there's no death — only the message. And she's not playing. Extruding only a process to make it so, as it flows into you.

"The Queen" is a beautiful film; its sensational and shocking subject matter is treated with such sensibility, taste and compassion that what might have been a grind-house movie emerges as an impressive human document and a finely made film as well."

by Eugene Schoenfeld, M.D.

QUESTION: My wife and I think it might be interesting for her to have intercourse, perhaps regularly, with a German Shepherd dog. We have not experienced it, however, because we are afraid of viral diseases that we might get. What's the deal?

ANSWER: Some scientists believe that venereal diseases originated in animals and were transmitted to man by lewd cowboys. But my shaggy veterinary assistant claims there are no modern diseases man can receive from animals through sexual contact. Venereal lymphogranuloma is a venereal disease of dogs comparable clinically to lymphogranuloma venereum in humans — a relatively rare VD caused by a virus and marked initially by blisters, ulcers and swollen lymph glands.

Affection for our furry and feathered friends should be tempered by the knowledge that many diseases can be given to man by animals (and vice versa), e.g. parrot fever, cat-bite fever, cat-scratch fever, rabies, plague, tuberculosis and several types of intestinal worms (which could be acquired by kissing your German Shepherd lover).

QUESTION: Would you please tell me how a male dog is conditioned to respond sexually to a human female? I would also like to know whether a satisfactory act of coitus is possible between the two and if a particular breed of dog is best suited for this type of relationship.

ANSWER: You might well have asked how a human female is conditioned to respond sexually to a dog — growing, peeing, etc. We may think Poodles go going to the dogs now but in the last century Pottions could watch a woman making it with a bull terrier for ten francs.

Perhaps the American Kennel Club should advertise its mascot in the underground press with photos designed to appeal to the apparently large numbers of dog lovers in our midst: Yorkies, beavers, modern, Irish or Russian wolfhounds, all stars, shaggy and colorful. Women also appear to see shortly in the classified ads lines such as "Frosty, healthy female, well fed with warm, dry pad, large yard and an month's supply of Dr. Ross' seeds will deliver readily" and "Owens should send photo and proof of Kleenex shag."

My laboratory assistant says she fell in love with Bernard, the St. Bernard who was my recent house-pet. But she claims it's only a platonic relationship. Maybe Lassie should be teased from television.

QUESTION: I was wondering about the medical literature, if any, concerning human breeding with the higher primates. Aside from the most obvious example of self-seed matings (males), I have read about gona/vesea ranches and live/tiger matings preparing offspring. It would seem to me that there just might be a close enough kinship to permit the birth of a hybrid in a human/higher ape match via artificial insemination.

Finally a theological question: if such a hybrid were possible, would the child (cat?) be eligible for Christian baptism? If not, would this mean that the child (cat?) would be born without the stain of original sin, or merely that the offspring was an atheist?

ANSWER: Hybrid animals have been developed to meet specialized agricultural needs, e.g. the offspring of a water buffalo and cow is more resistant to ticks and mites than the cow. Tigers, tigers and snakes are examples of progeny of mixed species — but the offspring cannot reproduce.

I am not aware of any successful mating of human and ape either in the flesh or through artificial insemination. Artificial insemination of female apes has undoubtedly been attempted but, aside from moral and ethical considerations, there might be a problem finding female volunteers willing to bear an ape-VD.

I'll have to pass on the question of whether an apeman would be guilty of original sin. Perhaps there are theologians among our readers who could advise the holy problem.

If such a creature were born, he could readily find employment as a professional football player.

QUESTION: I have fantasies of having a female gorilla or other large ape. What's happening? I don't desire this in the exchange of human females though I now enjoy all varieties of sexual experience with females from 14 to 65. I am 28 years old. This is not a joke.

ANSWER: You didn't give your sex or the ages of the apes you desire. Have your letter was postmarked New York City I would advise you to go to the Central Park or Bronx Zoo to observe at first hand the wooing of apes. Gorillas are quite affectionate but are also very awkward. Bestiality is prohibited by law. Besides, what would you do about those fangs and claws?

Man's love for animals is well documented in books such as Kinsey's Sexual Behavior in the Human Male and Kraft-Ebing's Psychopathia Sexualis.

Dr. Schoenfeld welcomes your questions. Write to him c/o East Village Other.

The other day these 2 bulls climbed over the top of Sugarloaf Mountain. At the sight of a herd of cows grazing below, the young bull said to the old one "Let's run down and fuck one!". And the old one rapped, "Don't be a drag, baby, let's walk down and fuck them all."

Romney Magic

by D. A. Lotimer

The Rt. Rev. Hugh Romney's Magical Medicine Band is on the road, by God, 'sley little kama kavaava threeding secretly through the vast expanse between the City and Coast. Oe Marvyla' Hugh and his tribe of sportsmen, lately of the fabled Hog Farm, they set off last Tuesday down the pits, off to conquer the continent. It takes three hours, they figure, and two towels, a van, a couple of govt. donors, a ton of sound equipment, light show gear, and one success generator to work it right. By the time of the Solstice, 21 June, there should be a raggedy line of blown minds and mad people between New York City and Santa Fe.

Displacement has been selected, naturally — the evil of the land creaches there and waits for you, best to plan for it beforehand, only safe way to get across the goddamn country is to fly. How to avoid disaster on a cross country tour? Why, take along a parson. Thus Hugh Romney has got himself ordained into some nameless California church: he can baptize babies in his bus, marry folk on the road stage, even bury loved ones along the hapless Oklahoma roads. He even wears a clerical collar: "HJ! make it harder for them to shoot us."

As a candidate for sainthood, Hugh Romney figures perhaps more prominently than most, even in the Midwest. He wears Tim Milt's hat. That, and his biceps and his pompadour and his beard and his wife, they lend him a certain eligibility. Tom Wolfe mentioned Romney conspicuously years ago, when the Merry Pranksters were frothing about in Keay's bar and spitting the muck in Golden Gate Park with legal zeal. Then things got inconvenient, Romney took his hat and beard and his wife and all that and split to Sonzard, California. There the Hog Farm prospered, up to a couple of months ago. Then Romney's lack fucked up — it's a bad year, he's back, just ask Jerry Rubin, — and he had to spend a couple of months in a Philadelphia hospital, attended by the very same therapist as worked on JFK. A couple of weeks ago he showed up in the East Village, wearing a beautiful white wickerashak chaf' tunic, and reassessed another Farm, a mobile one this time.

And it's all free, with free food thrown in, say place the local ordinance permit such as free food. The Hog Farm folk get their revenge from the things they gave, posters and pipes and beads and like that — charging for the music, hell, that's free. God makes it. Any bread beyond gas and food for their 'nudge gone into a smorgasbord for the next community.

By the twenty-first, which is the legend day in the year, Hugh and his people should be in Santa Fe. Negotiations are presently under way with some local leaders for the use of a Pueblo Village — low altitude, no snow, favorable conditions, ideal for site rites and other activities. Hugh Romney will exorcise the waning of the sun by attempting a Transcontinental Psychic Hurdle at four in the afternoon. At six in the evening, then, all New York heads orientated and perspiration should be broadcasting goodness and warmth all along the electromagnetic spectrum. Hopefully a strong psychic force field will take form all over North America, and the Neopositivists will be sent throated. After the Solstice, Romney's folks have nothing planned. See Francisco is always there. Oregon is turning on, the Summer of Love is happening in Toronto, there's the usual talk about infiltration of free folk into sparsely populated places like Arizona or New Mexico. . . Or if the Beatles show up in Santa Fe for the solstice — Ernest Grogan invited them — the Hog Farm, who know, may take their medicine across the Great West.

DANCING-BLUES-POP-CONCERT
TONIGHT THURSDAY
TRIPLE BILL OF RARE GROOVE

REKTRA RECORDING ARTISTS
EARTH OPERA
JEFF BECK GROUP

"They were standing and cheering for a new British pop group last night at the Ritzman East. The American band promises much head and soulfulness for the quartet. JEFF BECK, who distinguished himself for a year and a half as lead guitarist for THE YARDBIRDS, has earned a reputation as a highly polished and adroit guitarist. He and his band deal in the blues mainly, but with an urgency and sweep that is quite hard to resist... wild and visionary guitar playing by the intense and isolated howling of BOB STEWART, with gutsy backing on drums and bass. Their dialogues were lean and leant, the verbal ping-pong of a Fluter play. All told, an auspicious beginning for an exciting group." Robert Shelton, Times

YOUR PICTURE IN A NATIONAL MAGAZINE

That's right, one of America's leading magazines, Avant-Garde, will publish your picture absolutely free. All you have to do is take out a subscription.

In case you're not familiar with Avant-Garde, let us explain that it is a new national picture magazine, similar to Life and Look. Avant-Garde differs from Life and Look in that it is far more sophisticated, beautiful, and tuned in to today's swinging new scene (see detailed description of Avant-Garde below).

Although Avant-Garde is a new magazine, its readership is huge. It reaches over one million readers. This means that your picture will be seen by more than one million people. When you consider that movie stars, baseball players, and other celebrities spend thousands upon thousands of dollars for publicity in order to have their pictures appear in magazines, you'll realize what a fantastic offer this is. In fact, this is probably the most generous subscription offer in magazine history.

To enter your subscription—and have your picture published in Avant-Garde absolutely free—simply fill out the coupon below and mail it with $5 and your picture to Avant-Garde, 110 W. 40th St., New York, N.Y. 10018. The picture you send may be any size whatsoever, from a 35mm slide, to a wallet-size snapshot, to an 8x10 portrait.

But please hurry. The amount of space available in any given issue for the publication of subscriber pictures is limited. Besides, you don't want to keep your public waiting!

Avant-Garde: Dedicated to the Future

Avant-Garde, a bimonthly, stands at the forefront of contemporary thought and achievement. It covers Art, Politics, Science, Music, Cinema, and other such subjects, always with an eye toward the future.

Avant-Garde is probably the world's most beautiful magazine. Its pages abound with lavish artwork, creative photography, and lush full-color reproduction. Its art director, Herb Lubalin, is the world's foremost graphic designer, and Avant-Garde has won many awards for design excellence than any other magazine of our time.

Avant-Garde features works by such contemporary masters as Picasso, Archaic Miller, Norman Maser, Kenneth Tyrant, John Updike, Alex Gonsberg, Rudi Dohé, Henry Miller, Bert Stern, Elton Elisavou, Kenneth Rexroth, David Levine, Richard Avedon, Leonard Baskin, Salvador Dalí, Jean Genet, Lorenz Beckett, Jean-Paul Sartre, Yevgeny Yevtushenko, and Willem Burroghs.

Articles and features soon to appear in Avant-Garde, or recently published, include: "Revolution of the Dollar: 19 Artists Design a New One-Dollar Bill"; "The Future of Criminal Law," by Dr. Karl Menninger; "The Marilyn Monroe Trip," by Bert Stern; "An Interview with Richard Nixon's Gag-Writer"; "Richard Lindner: Ruler of the Low Generation"; "Metemorphic Jewelry: Last Word in Critics everywhere have loved about Avant-Garde. "Avant-Garde is aimed at readers of superior intelligence and cultivated taste who are interested in the arts, politics, and science," says The New York Times. "Its editors deserve considerable credit," says Life. "Really fresh and sane! Art buffs, rejoice! Avant-Garde contains mind-treasures of major proportions," says the San Francisco Chronicle. "A lively and prolific magazine that exploits with satire," says the Associated Press.
