OUR 20th YEAR In Publication

FANTASY - FACTS - AND THE FUTURE

Since the recent waves of U.F.O. sighting, landings, and contacts, have received so much publicity, many people are still inclined to condemn the government for it's hush-hush policy regarding the past 20 years of secrecy.

Now just put yourself in the official's place and what would you do? People elected and appointed to offices of responsibility, and the military branches, have a real lemon on their hands. Naturally they are going to make mistakes as we all make mistakes in judgement. Remember, the first Universal Law is "Judge Not Lest Ye Be Judged".

The people in authority are trying to do a job and maintain reason, and order, on a much larger scale than we have in our daily requirements in managing to make ends meet.

When our scientific know-how gets beyond the economic ability to use it, which it has, we are confronted with an automated society that loves to make things happen by punching buttons, but doesn't know what to do with the garbage. In 30 years we've gone from atomic discovery to economic instability all because only a few people understand the quantum theory and everybody knows how to spend money. In order to enjoy the luxuries of advanced science, the millions suddenly discover that pushing the button is only the last simple act to activate something that took miners, mechanics, technicians, and varied industries to supply and assemble. How many people who turn on a television set know what makes it work? How many people who elect a man to a governmental office know of the complexities of that office? People in science train for years to accomplish one technical classified part of that science.

In the midst of power principles based on coal, oil, gas, and atomic reactors, in a science of matter to energy conversion, we find a method of energy to energy conversion. Our economic system and way of life is operating on the principles developed over the years in a slow advancement of producing energy by employing millions of people to make the button work when we push it.

Suddenly we know how to convert two natural free energies, that only require 2% of the millions of people to make it work. Can we suddenly abandon the coal miners, the oil workers, the hydro-electric people, and the people in atomic work? Can 2% of the people support the other 98% of the people in order to use this new knowledge?

The U.F.O.'s brought us this new knowledge. Advanced people in outer space have been coming to Earth through two civilizations before this one. In one generation we have come from horses and buggies to men on the Moon. The efficiency of an atomic bomb is based on how many man hours of labor it can destroy. Now authority is stuck with a new principle of electro-static magnetic energy that can make a heaven on Earth, but it doesn't require labor, or tires, or pavements, or oil, or products that now support our economy. If you were the authority would you release this principle that would create chaos; that would wreck the economic structure; that would cause millions to starve to death because there is no place to employ them in this new science?

Humans cannot become super-humans overnight. The U.F.O.'s created the biggest problem science was ever faced with, that authority was ever faced with, and the economic system ever ran into. This was not the fault of the people from space, it was the result of one generation advancing so fast scientifically that we grasp the principles of universal power with a horse and buggy economic system. Nations divided cannot stand in a world trade war without destroying things in a military war. Making money is the ultimate drive to those who have. The money that once provided everything for us has suddenly become the monster that possesses us and science has suddenly provided us with a principle of propulsion and power that doesn't require laborers, or banks, or military methods of destruction in order to support an economy. The principles of this power spin galaxies, run suns and solar systems; it is everywhere. It cannot be sold through wires, or gasoline stations.

All energy radiates, forms fields, is in motion, and only requires the know how to harness it.

The Reason for Secrecy.

Radiation exerts pressure, which becomes more and more effective as the ratio of the surface to the mass of a body increases. When a body has a diameter of one-third the wave length falling on it, then the body is repulsed very efficiently. This is the principle of gravity nullification. The three "balls" under the "saucer" photographed by George Adamski are actually spherical capacitors. Being  $120^\circ$  apart, each subject to one-third of the wave length of the radiation of the encompassing field around the "saucer", relative to their charge, pressure is exerted upward when all three are charged alike. They tilt the craft when a differential of the charge is changed on any one of the "balls". When two are charged positively and one is charged negatively, they serve as directional controls acting on the "Biefeld-Brown effect".

The craft, being a large electro-static capacitor, with it's upper polarity and lower opposite polarity fields separated by a toroid coil above the portholes ( as shown in the Adamski closeup photograph), has a low center of gravity "hanging" from the toroid coil level around the upper dome.

The electro-static spinner in the outer rim, enclosed within all craft, supplies the static charge on the exterior of the craft and to all control capacitors.

The magnetic motor in the center lower portion of the craft works on a principle similar to E.V. Gray's magnetic motor. (Publicized in "National Tattler" of July 1 and July 8, 1973.)

The rotor, suspended in it's own toroid magnetic field, needs neither lubrication, or bearings.

All "saucers" are electro-static magnetic ships and the external charge on the ship can be resonated at a frequency to keep radar from bouncing off of the craft. As the craft accelerates, the external field corona expands relative to the speed and the lines of force it is crossing in it's travel. This encompassing corona can go through the colors of the visible spectrum from red, orange, yellow, green, blue and violet, to brilliant white according to the energy ratio of it's speed relative to it's mass and charge.

In the Earth's vapor charged atmosphere it can form a cloud around it, as an ionization of the vapor in the air is condensed relative to the charge of the electrostatic field around the craft.

The craft is also a battery. Using dissimilar metals in it's outer and inner skin construction, it holds a charge due to the mercury amalgum permeated insulation which separates the inner and outer skins. Thus it is a large two plate battery, with the negative charge on the external skin surface. We make small mercury batteries on a similar principle to operate electric watches and other devices.

Since the space people are often seen in metalized suits, it is possible the suits are also batteries on the same principle, eliminating the necessity of carrying "battery packs".

It has been established that a tissue paper will not scorch, or burn, with a negative electrical charge on it, even with a torch flame of 3000° aimed at the tissue. One can grasp why a spacecraft can fly at thousands of miles per hour with a negative polarity charge on it's outer skin without heating the exterior surface. A negative static charge on our returning space capsules would make it unnecessary for them to require a flame shield.

Since a manuscript comprising 17 years of the "Proceedings" has been stolen, it appears that some agency does not want the vast information it contains revealed publicly. Three publishers have had it submitted to them and all have failed to print it.

There is no "mystery" about the craft to advanced research agencies of governments. Several of them have been flying experimental models since the mid-1950's copied from downed craft like the ones at Aztec, New Mexico, written about in Frank Scully's book, "Behind The Flying Saucers".

Governments cannot be condemned for their "confusion security" on U.F.O.'s, because they are responsible for order in operating an advanced technological society. Since their effort is to change over from a money barrier society, on a world-wide basis, to a no money technology, it is necessary to withhold free energy principles to prevent chaos in a money indoctrinated world.

People might as well get it through their heads, that this change over is going to be painful, and costly, and restrictive, in order to convert without having to resort to military law which would be much worse.

Naturally in this one world conversion, there are several power interests who want to run the show. Those who lose out stand to lose everything they have. They must resolve this massive problem, or be committed to a suicidal conflict.

The space people, who have been watching this civilization, are standing by in event things go too far. They will not interfere unless things here get beyond the point of no return.

Those of you who are able should adapt to a survival policy and get in gear fast. The next four years will resolve this problem.

ECONOMY TIPS

With the new National speed limit of 55 miles per hour, one can prevent getting tickets for speeding by moving the drivers seat back a couple of notches. This allows the leg to assume its normal position on the accelerator without pushing it so far down. Be sure not to move the seat back so far as to prevent leg reach to put on the brakes.

All "instant" television sets have a unit that is turned on all the time. This transformer uses about the same electricity on your power bill as burning a 50 watt bulb all the time. One easy solution to this waste is to install a cord switch in the lead to the electrical outlet. This of course makes it necessary to wait a couple of minutes for the picture to come on.

THE LEAKING MONEY PIPE

Looking down from up here I couldn't quite get the picture at first. Then I began to realize that what I was seeing on this planet was a plumbing system that had money going through its pipes. Now there is nothing wrong with money, when it serves it's single purpose of exchange, for equal value. But what I was looking at was a system as obsolete as a cotton gin on a sheep ranch. The pressure in the pipes was even making the pipes crooked.

Money was originally intended to circulate and re-cycle, after accomplishing many things, back to it's source. The money pipes had bulges in them all over the system, but these bulges were not called bulges, they were called banks.

These banks didn't bulge because there was any more money at these points, but because there was more pressure. The pressure was the result of a lot of paper that wasn't money, but it kept track of where all the money was. This "no money paper" became the same as money and it was called assets.

The trouble with these bulges in the system was the pressure of "no money paper" had made the pipes leak. What was leaking out was called interest. The funny part of it was the leaks kept getting bigger and there were people with money buckets collecting the leaking interest.

These banks had calendars, and clocks, to keep track of the flow through the pipes. Then awhile back the system put valves on the bulges and let people have some of the flow if they would put part of it in the leak collectors buckets. They call this outlet loans.

Then the money people, who owned this marvelous distribution money plumbing system, thought they could speed up the flow by selling time from their calendars and clocks. The only thing was, they had to keep track and make sure the "no money paper" was replaced by money paper by the time the calendar said it should be. This system added masses of "no money paper" to the flow and the pressure went higher and the leaks got bigger. Then because a lot of the "no money" flow stuck in the pipes and never arrived on time, this slowed up the interest leaks. So being money people instead of plumbers, they didn't correct the "no money" cause of the trouble, they just went to the bulges and made the leaks bigger.

Since the governments had turned this system over to the people who held the buckets under the interest leaks, they too had to borrow "no money paper" and have it printed to look like money. This really made the pressure go up and the leaks doubled, and some "no money paper" was even coming out of the leaks. Still no effort was made to correct the system. The money people only got more people to hold more interest leak buckets. When the governments ran out of the funny money, they made out more "no money paper" to have the system print more "no money paper" to look like more money.

Now the governments went out and made holes in the system where there were no bulges because the "no money" had to get out somewhere or they would have to learn the art of plumbing. This horse and buggy point of time system would have continued to work as long as they could collect the flow out of the interest leaks. Someone decided they could peddle the leak flow and collect interest twice. After all it was all part of the same flow.

The systems in other countries started to plug up and Uncle Sam, being a good Samaritan, decided that the good old American people should help the situation out, so the people put more paper that looked like money into the bulges, in exchange for some "no money paper" that would give them the right to collect some of the leaks in paper cups at a future date. To keep track of this required more "no money paper". Since this wasn't real money, the government decided the people wouldn't mind putting more of it into the system to provide for the poor countries whose systems were rusting out. Naturally the recipient nations didn't intend to pay this back because it was only "play" money.

After many administrations of government had followed this no pay back policy, they suddenly discovered that the recipient nations were blackmailing them for more free money. In the meantime, the people had put in so much that now they haven't got it to put in, and the government owes $14,000,000,000.00 to the money system each year in "no money" money for interest, because the holes they drilled in the pipes weren't as big as the leaks in the bulges.

Now the "no money" money gets worth less and less each year, and it requires more of it in the pipes. In order to keep track of it, it requires more "no money paper" in the system also. This is what will plug the system.

The only answer left is to install a new worldwide pipeline, print new money with value back of it based on real estate, which cannot be transported to other countries; cannot be melted; and remains fixed as a value. Put valves where the bulges were in the old system, and then show the space age technological ability to run a money system like science put men on the Moon.

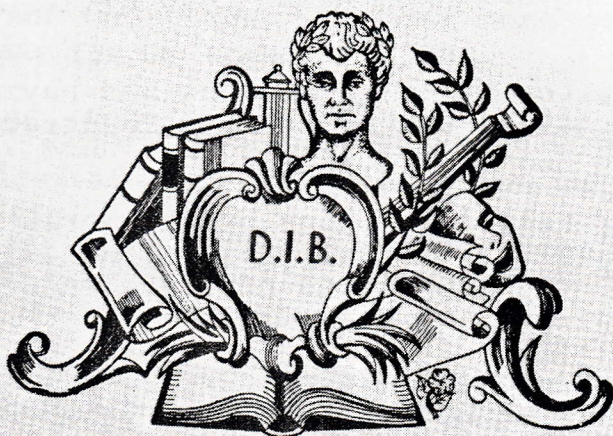

The Bible says in Ezekiel 7:19, "They shall cast their silver in the streets, and their gold shall be removed: their silver and their gold shall not be able to deliver them in the day of the wrath of the Lord: they shall not satisfy their souls, neither fill their bowels: because it is the stumbling block of their iniquity".

What this says in natural law, is that greed will cause it's own downfall. The money system is like a snake that was so hungry it started eating it's own tail. Now it has swallowed itself up to it's own head, and it cannot swallow it's own head from behind.

Things do not look good from up here.

RECOGNITION

We are reprinting a copy of the certificate awarded to our Founder and President of the Ministry by "The Dictionary of International Biographies". This English Biographical Society selects, after investigation of submitted nominees, the people most deserving of this honor.

RETROGRADE VISION FROM 1978

In 1978 the one world government was having trouble starting to function due to so many insurrections around the world.

In spite of well laid plans of the world's top bankers, politicians, industrialists, and military people, difficulty lay in the devisive internal split over control of people.

There were those who wanted to give the people of the world a voice in their problems, and those who insisted the only workable control over the masses was by absolute military dictatorship by force.

Since the world had come under massive regimentation principles, which started in 1974, world government authorities had found out that people did not respond as the computers had calculated.

Although transportation controls had confined people to limited distance in travel, it had also backfired in distribution of products and commodities.

Food rationing had worked as a weapon of retaliation against the "unbelievers" but not enough guards could be employed to stop raids on food supply centers. The "unbelievers" would jamb military police communications with simple spark gap transmitters. Radio instructions were difficult.

Curfews under military rule were the most difficult to enforce as night hid most activities. Since the United States was the center of freedom, it was the most difficult to control.

After the demilitarized zone was established between the Arab and Israeli states in 1974, a world division came about in the minds of the people. Despite the fact that the nations had pledged support in government authority for one side, or the other, the people did not accept these decisions in their minds. Patriotism disappeared.

Military rule was becoming the established policy of law enforcement.

World trade had bogged down, on both sides, due to constant sabotage of transportation.

News being censored, had made most people irritable because they didn't know what was really happening. Mail was censored and deliveries often were confiscated.

The economy had reached a new low before the war started. Apathy in civilians had reached a point where many people didn't care which side won.

After people had been required to register at their present address, they were not permitted to move without permission.

Massive geophysical changes were occurring in storms, floods, and earthquakes. These disasters added problems to authority as people panicked. Crops had suffered due to extreme weather changes. Food was scarce and relief of the people's hunger had slowed to a standstill.

Power had become a privilege of class as fuel could not produce enough electricity. Several hydro-electric dams were gone due to earthquakes. Atomic reactors were ageing and becoming radio-actively unsafe.

Science was straining it's brain power. Profit was losing it's initiative as the achievement of money was no longer a goal.

The military, on both sides, were having nervous breakdowns due to the constant tension of possible all out war.

Half of the churches were broke and spiritual inspiration was reverting to small home meetings by a minority of the people.

Nearly half of the people had arrived at a point where food came first and taxes later.

People had practically quit listening to radio and watching television, feeling it was all propoganda in one way, or another.

A political avatar had been pushed forward as a savior of the disaster.

The point of no return comes about when the world leaders find there is no cooperation anywhere.

This abysmal condition came about so subtly that those in authority began to realize they were pawns in something beyond their control.

Beyond 1978 cannot be printed now, as outside intervention in the future becomes apparent.

APOLOGY

We wish to apologize to some of our readers who write us asking why we do not answer all of their written questions. This is entirely due to the many scientific answers required. Mr. Van Tassel, and those associates capable of answering these questions try to get to as many of these letters as is possible.

KOHOUTEK COMET DATA

Not much has been released on the most investigated comet yet. The "Skylab" pictures, and information, have yet to be released by N.A.S.A. The following information tells us something about it being different than other recorded comets.

The temperature rose from  $-7^{\circ}$ , at the South Pole, to  $63^{\circ}$  as Kohoutek came out from behind the Sun. Scientists haven't yet explained this phenomena.

By ultra-violet spectroscopes, it was determined the nucleus contained hydrocyanic acid radical, methane, and ionized water. This tends to verify the "steady state theory" of the universe.

Scientists also cannot explain why the comet "dimmed out" when it was so bright when discovered. There was also a "bubble" formed around it after it passed the Sun.

THE "INTEGRATRON"

Progress here on the "Integratron" has been slow, but there has been progress, to about 85% of completion.

A new building has been built for storage of tools, and machinery, which now must be moved out of the lower floor of the Integratron. This structure is a 15 foot square prefabricated steel building. The cost is around $1,500.00.

We want to thank you of our readers, who know who you are, for the support that keeps things going here. We have had several of our readers pledge sums that would keep us going if we were to receive them. In event that more support does not come in very soon, we will be forced to shut down the program here.

If all of our readers, around the world, would extend gifts to us at this time, we could move faster.

PERMANENT RECOGNITION

Any individual who contributes a gift to "The College of Universal Wisdom" of $100.00, or more, will have their name stamped on an individual brass plate which will be visible around the base curb of the "Integratron". Their name will also be listed behind glass on the front of the office building. Each additional $100.00 gift, by anyone whose name is already listed, will be marked by an asterisk behind their name in the cabinet on the front of the office.
