

A COMMENTARY ON THE ESOTERIC PHILOSOPHY

No. 247 - KEYWORDS

Keywords are an important part of philosophical study, and used intelligently can lead the student to a much deeper, more effective understanding of the ancient and eternal wisdom. A keyword is literally a word that serves as a key or device, a means of gaining or preventing knowledge and understanding. A keyword exemplifies the meaning or value of a particular idea, concept, or relationship; a keyword indicates a thread or chain of philosophical (abstract) or scientific (concrete)(rational)(analytical) thought.

Keywords are symbols that represent a considerable amount of relatable information. In one sense, keywords overcome much of the limitation of language, for keywords contain (relate)(potentially) much more information than any verbal description or elaboration in itself (apart from keywords). Each keyword has an associated (intrinsic) energy (philosophical) value, an energy of some basic (fundamental) significance. Keywords are clues, uncluttered by verbiage, that indicate and implicate meanings by association and correspondence with other keywords and the ideas and concepts that they represent.

Keywords arise (derive) from the underlying philosophical (and scientific) framework of universal manifestation, from the grand (natural)(precursory) philosophical system that represents universal manifestation (life, quality, and appearance)(spirit, consciousness, and matter) in all its glory (systematic detail). That philosophical system is eternal (dynamic) and exists beyond language; it consists of the basic ideas and the subsequent or consequent details and relationships which can (in turn) be assigned symbols (keywords) or representation in any language. But keywords pass beyond definition and semantics, for the energy of a keyword is a deeper matter than the word itself. Language serves merely to introduce the concrete mind to the particular thought-forms which lead (in turn) to deeper realization (understanding). Definitions and semantics are only the (superficial) beginning; as more and more relationships are recognized, the greater (deeper) is the meaning embraced.

But without that philosophical system in the first place, keywords would have no intrinsic energy. The energy arises from association, from the deliberate (natural) attribution of a keyword to a particular thread of energy. The system simply ties all (meaningful) threads (ideas) together in a universal (interrelated) fashion. When the (enlightened or responsive) student embraces the body of knowledge that the system represents, any or every aspect of that philosophical system is available (potentially). First the student must develop the capacity for understanding and the ability to embrace the energy of the esoteric philosophy (the system)(body of knowledge). Then it is a simple matter of evocation using the various (selected) keywords to guide the mind in its love (inclusion) of truth (reality).

The necessary human link in this matter is the abstract mind of the soul and its relationship to a well-developed (trained and subordinate) concrete mind. It is the abstract mind that bridges the gap between knowledge and general (universal) understanding. The vision must necessarily be broad-minded, for infinite are the number of relationships that exist between the (selected) keywords. A narrow (closed)(predominantly concrete) mind will be unable to incorporate the associations and correspondences necessary to understanding. But the properly prepared mind can gradually improve its capacity and philosophical capability, as the keywords are studied and (especially) as the relationships between keywords are recognized. The set of keywords simply provides an index (simplification) to the entire philosophical system.

THE UPPER TRIAD

The Upper Triad is a journal of metaphysical, theosophical, and esoteric philosophy. The journal is published monthly by the Upper Triad Association, a tax-exempt, non-profit, philosophical society. The Upper Triad is distributed free of charge to any interested persons. This work is financed almost entirely by voluntary contributions. All contributions are tax-deductible.

Commentaries and quotations printed in the journal are intended to stimulate constructive thinking and further study along spiritual lines. Each thought may be accepted, deferred, or rejected, in whole or in part, according to the perspective of the reader.

SOME BASIC ASSUMPTIONS

1. THE UNITY OF ALL LIFE. That there exists one God, both immanent and transcendent, within which are differentiated all lives and all forms.

2. THE PURPOSE OF LIFE. That the purpose of life is the evolution of consciousness through experience and expression. That all life is conditioned by purpose within a grand scheme of progressive cyclic evolution.

3. REINCARNATION AND KARMA. That human evolution proceeds through many progressive incarnations according to a cosmic law of periodicity, ever onward and upward. That life is conditioned by the Great Teacher, the Law of Karma, which yields learning experiences and encourages evolution as a consequence of free will, through every thought, feeling, and action.

4. THE NATURE OF TRUTH. That truth can be found in philosophy, religion, and science, which are but aspects of one coherent and inclusive truth having no inherent conflict or contradiction. That there are many paths to God, embracing all religions and spiritual philosophy. That truth is relative and can be perceived in many ways and on many levels, according to consciousness.

5. THE PROBLEM OF LIFE. That the real problem of life in the lower worlds is the elimination of glamour and illusion. That glamour and illusion can be fully overcome, as the student achieves the alignment of a purified and integrated personality with the soul, through intelligent meditation.

6. PERSONALITY AND SOUL. That the true individuality is the soul which inhabits the personality. That the personality is composed of three interrelated instruments: the physical body, the emotional or astral body, and the lower mind. That the soul is the essence of the divinity within.

7. THE SPIRITUAL PATH. That the spiritual path in its many aspects embraces the higher stages of human evolution, as the human soul takes its stand and commits itself to conscious and selfless development. That this process encompasses the development of the inner, latent spirituality and the application of one's faculties in service to God and to humanity.

Keywords are an important part of philosophical study, and used intelligently can lead the student to a much deeper, more effective understanding of the ancient and eternal wisdom. A keyword is literally a word that serves as a key or device, a means of gaining or preventing knowledge and understanding. A keyword exemplifies the meaning or value of a particular idea, concept, or relationship; a keyword indicates a thread or chain of philosophical (abstract) or scientific (concrete)(rational)(analytical) thought.

Keywords are symbols that represent a considerable amount of relatable information. In one sense, keywords overcome much of the limitation of language, for keywords contain (relate)(potentially) much more information than any verbal description or elaboration in itself (apart from keywords). Each keyword has an associated (intrinsic) energy (philosophical) value, an energy of some basic (fundamental) significance. Keywords are clues, uncluttered by verbiage, that indicate and implicate meanings by association and correspondence with other keywords and the ideas and concepts that they represent.

Keywords arise (derive) from the underlying philosophical (and scientific) framework of universal manifestation, from the grand (natural)(precursory) philosophical system that represents universal manifestation (life, quality, and appearance)(spirit, consciousness, and matter) in all its glory (systematic detail). That philosophical system is eternal (dynamic) and exists beyond language; it consists of the basic ideas and the subsequent or consequent details and relationships which can (in turn) be assigned symbols (keywords) or representation in any language. But keywords pass beyond definition and semantics, for the energy of a keyword is a deeper matter than the word itself. Language serves merely to introduce the concrete mind to the particular thought-forms which lead (in turn) to deeper realization (understanding). Definitions and semantics are only the (superficial) beginning; as more and more relationships are recognized, the greater (deeper) is the meaning embraced.

But without that philosophical system in the first place, keywords would have no intrinsic energy. The energy arises from association, from the deliberate (natural) attribution of a keyword to a particular thread of energy. The system simply ties all (meaningful) threads (ideas) together in a universal (interrelated) fashion. When the (enlightened or responsive) student embraces the body of knowledge that the system represents, any or every aspect of that philosophical system is available (potentially). First the student must develop the capacity for understanding and the ability to embrace the energy of the esoteric philosophy (the system)(body of knowledge). Then it is a simple matter of evocation using the various (selected) keywords to guide the mind in its love (inclusion) of truth (reality).

The necessary human link in this matter is the abstract mind of the soul and its relationship to a well-developed (trained and subordinate) concrete mind. It is the abstract mind that bridges the gap between knowledge and general (universal) understanding. The vision must necessarily be broad-minded, for infinite are the number of relationships that exist between the (selected) keywords. A narrow (closed)(predominantly concrete) mind will be unable to incorporate the associations and correspondences necessary to understanding. But the properly prepared mind can gradually improve its capacity and philosophical capability, as the keywords are studied and (especially) as the relationships between keywords are recognized. The set of keywords simply provides an index (simplification) to the entire philosophical system.

Every aspect and attribute within the scope (framework) of human experience and beyond is qualified by one or another of the seven (energy) rays. These seven rays (lives) constitute all of manifestation and quite conveniently (naturally) classify (qualify)(organize) all of manifestation into seven fundamental domains. These seven rays can be studied (and understood) by their fundamental and applied nature (properties and characteristics) and by their domain, at least to the extent that the human mind can embrace and associate the various keywords that are naturally assigned to the respective rays.

Thus the seven rays (manifestation) can be understood (by degrees) by studying the various associated keywords and the relationships that exist between the rays through the correlation of keywords. Once a student has mastered the basic concepts involving the seven rays and has accomplished a comprehensive study of the rays (and has achieved a considerable understanding based on a well-developed mind and a balanced ability of discernment), it is a simple matter to recognize any word or concept as it relates to any one or more of the seven rays. Thus even words hitherto uncorrelated can be easily assigned to their proper places within the divine (natural) taxonomy of the seven rays.

However, in the natural assignment (realization) of keywords there are two governing principles: a uniqueness principle and (paradoxically) a conformity (plurality) principle. Each keyword can be uniquely (singularly) assigned to only one ray in the most basic, intrinsic sense. Or in other words, each keyword can be conclusively assigned to its (singularly) natural ray, according to its intrinsic character. But, at the same time, the same keyword can be assigned to each of the remaining six rays, depending on context (implication) (application). Thus, each keyword exists (correlates) in an active sense (in qualifying) as well as in a passive sense (by being qualified singularly). For example, the keyword 'energy' is associated uniquely with the First Ray, in the most basic sense, for the First Ray is the unique aspect (concept) of energy. But each of the seven rays is a particularly qualified energy. Second Ray energy can be distinctly contrasted with Third Ray energy, etc.

Another example is the keyword 'truth' which has a number of aspects or implications, depending on context. Truth in the sense of freedom is clearly within the First Ray domain. Truth in the sense of wisdom is clearly Second Ray. Truth in the purely philosophical sense falls within the Third Ray domain, while truth in the sense of knowledge is more closely associated with the Fifth Ray. Thus, the assignment of a keyword may depend very much on the implication (context). The assignment of keywords is further complicated (to some extent) by the relationships that exist between the rays, so that a keyword belonging to one ray may also belong to another (by inference) according to the relationship(s) between the rays. Though no limit exists on the number of keywords, the rules (patterns) that determine assignment are relatively few.

The natural order (organization) of universal manifestation into seven streams (categories) of qualified energy provides the underlying potency for keywords. In understanding the seven rays, the spiritual student can apply the various keywords to any aspect of his experience and learn through association (correlation) and integration (since all of manifestation is interrelated). Provided the student avoids arbitrary (personal) assignment and association, and recognizes the natural order (rather than an order of personal (human) origin), the keywords associated with the seven rays can be a considerable tool leading to greater understanding and realization.

In any philosophical study involving keywords, there are two primary considerations: a study of the various keywords individually (as a necessary first step), and a study of the various keywords by association (correspondence) (implication)(application). The study by association may proceed pairwise (involving pairs of keywords naturally related) as well as by correspondence with the seven rays and other (triple and septenary) implications. Pairwise association (and study) can be particularly potent in the case of natural dualities (pairs of opposites), especially where the student realizes that a continuum exists between the extremes. But this study of pairs of opposites is an intermediate stage, at best, for such a study is limited to one (primary) dimension and the pairwise association cannot be resolved at that level.

The advantage of triplicities is considerable. Triplicities allow several dimensions to be considered, while maintaining a relative simplicity (potency). Pairs of opposites can be resolved through a contemplation (study) of their natural triangular relationships. These relationships demonstrate a natural, dynamic interaction between the three points of focus. As the minimum (optimum) unit of circulation, triangles are usually more potent than other alternatives (though a number of unresolved pairs of opposites can be quite potent paradoxically). There are few examples of meaningful study by association beyond triplicities (mostly quarternary or septenary).

In synthetic triangles, a positive (clockwise) circulation (3:2:1) implies integration (synthesis) and the ascent of energy (consciousness), while a negative (counterclockwise) circulation (1:2:3) implies the process of manifestation and differentiation (the descent of a higher energy). In any circulation, a fourth keyword may emerge in the center of the triangle, signifying a product of synthesis. Keywords used in synthetic triangles should be of the same class (type)(category) or be linked together progressively. The triangle itself may belong to one of the seven rays in particular, in which case the three keywords function as subordinate elements (with appropriate secondary ray correspondence). So much depends on connotation and implication; the same keyword may be assigned different positions and/or different rays, depending on the situation (connotation)(and the implied relationships).

The procedure for studying keywords via synthetic triangles assumes some knowledge of the basic philosophy and some meditative (contemplative)(intuitive) ability. The exercise or effort expended in study should encourage the development of such ability. The student should first study the keywords individually, taking into consideration any apparent or implied correspondence with the seven rays. The student should then study each of the three pairs of keywords, taking into consideration the relationships of any correspondents. Then the student should consider the circulation of energy (thought) through the three points (keywords), in both clockwise and counterclockwise directions (since each may yield some insight). Finally, the student should apply the dynamic interactions of the three by inference. This last stage requires a meditative posture and the presence of intuition (and a comprehensive, abstract understanding of the various factors and their relationships). This effort leads ultimately to synthesis (realization) and a relatively profound conclusion (provided of course that the student is dealing with a valid triangle in the first place). The student should endeavor to remain openminded throughout this process, since concrete patterns (mental habits)(opinions, beliefs, and prior assumptions) serve as prejudice and normally limit the realization achieved.

THE UPPER TRIAD COMMENTARIES

No. 602 - KEYWORD INDEXING

The body of esoteric (theosophical) (metaphysical) knowledge (principles) (doctrine) is quite vast, and although rich and diverse (and complex in practice) it is also relatively simply organized (in principle) along the lines of the seven rays (which naturally qualify everything in one way or another and of which everything can be definitely assigned or related (particularly and generally)) and simultaneously according to relatively few basic ideas or groups of ideas (concepts). Redundancy is widespread and affords different approaches (presentations) to given concepts (and demonstrates correlation or association). Each such approach should complement or supplement the basic concept and provide additional means of (paths for) understanding.

Language per se is quite a help and quite a hindrance to learning. Language facilitates the conveyance of information, particularly where intuitive faculties are not well-developed (in the sense of no alternative) and particularly where intuitive faculties are well-developed (in the sense that intuition complements language and provides (for) understanding (correlation)). The problem of language (in the context of a relatively large body of information) (for the concrete mind) is organization, association, and comprehension. Keyword indexing, properly implemented, is a means of correlation and association without need for (objectively) mentally embracing the entire body of information; i.e., it facilitates a narrowing of the (mental) focus within a field of information, and conveys symbolically (concisely) the philosophical content (essence) of the field, allowing the student to recognize patterns and paths through the material of the field.

Keyword indexing involves the assignment or derivation of a relatively small number of keywords for each unit of consideration. Those keywords then convey, by association, the content of each unit; those keywords also provide an additional (multiple) dimension to the body or field of information. Semantics are important in the sense that each keyword should represent some reasonably well-defined energy (concept), consistently, throughout the field in which each keyword (or keyword phrase) is used. Inconsistency (in this context) leads to ambiguities and confusion. The effectiveness of keyword indexing depends in part on the quality and consistency (validity) of the index per se, and in part on the manner and effectiveness of utilization of the index by the reader (spiritual student).

Those accustomed to linear thinking rather than matrix or symbolic thinking will prefer conventional indexing. But where keywords (and the keyword concept) are recognized and valued, then a keyword index becomes a valuable tool for any relatively large body (field) of knowledge (database), that cannot otherwise be objectively (wholly) embraced. Individual realizations (recognitions of keyword significance) can complement and personalize a given keyword index to make it more useful to particular views or interests. Potency in keyword indexing comes from a consistent hierarchy of keywords within keywords (linkage in several dimensions); but in the final analysis, it is the (relative) validity of keyword assignments, correlations, and associations that make a keyword index effective.

Keyword indexing (or some correspondence thereto) is ultimately necessary in comprehension and assimilation, of a field of information (the esoteric philosophy) and of the overall experience of each incarnation. All knowledge and experience must ultimately be reduced to symbolic form for abstraction and retention (while the bulk of (particular) knowledge and experience is released), on every respective level of manifestation.

Notes for the Suggestion - Keyword References

1. The data that appears on the Keyword Index and Special Index has been derived from the keyword index generation or version data.

2. The no. that appears in parentheses in the right-hand column for each keyword or keyword phrase is the no. of keyword references for that keyword or phrase.

3. Articles are shown as A-1, A-2, ... A-25
 Commentary are shown as C-1, C-2, ... C-500
 Synoptic Triads are shown as S-1, S-2, ... S-500

4. Words or phrases that actually appear in articles or commentary files are primary references and are shown first for any given keyword with the respective title(s) if any. The following secondary references which are assigned keywords or keyword phrases and synoptic triads are shown. Each article and each commentary has up to 12 assigned keywords which represent its content.

5. In subsequent editions, for effectiveness, the no. of keywords may be reduced in order to increase the ratio of the no. of keyword references to the no. of keywords. Also, for subsequent editions, some of the keyword assignments and the way in which the output program processes articles and commentary files and keywords may change in order to improve the consistency.
