43 When the Entered Apprentice is invested with his Apron, he is made thereby a Steward of the Mysteries, which he is not only to guard, but, above all, to understand. What he wears is essentially symbolic of what he is—or should be. The Lambskin presented is pure white, a most symbolic color, comprising all the rays of the solar spectrum indicating the collective spiritual qualities of Man. But the Aprons commonly used in the Lodges for ordinary wear, are frequently bordered with blue, emblematical of the Blue Lodge in which they are used. This color, blue, besides being a spiritual color, is cosmic in its individual symbology and indicates the "knowledge of cosmos" referd to by Hall, and is also emblematic of the universality of Freemasonry, the deeply seated basic principle of the Craft.

44 Kingdom, Foundation, Firmness and Splendor are then, the basic principles which the Entered Apprentice is to incorporate into his individual life plan. They will be found to be the most solid and substantial and, at the same time, the most elevating concepts the mind of the Neofite can assimilate, and if he goes no farther, he will, as he enters into a deeper realization of what these principles signify, build his life upon a foundation and according to constructive laws that will establish him firmly in the way to a greater Light, a deeper understanding of the Mystery of all Life and a comprehension of Personal Responsibility that will make him a true Man in every sense of the word.

45 To be a Steward of the Mysteries is an exalted status. Sendivogius said, "The orb of the World contains not so great a mystery as a little Man, made in the Image of God." The true mysteries are not revealed by any initiation devised by man. They are revealed only to those who know how and where to look for them—within one's self. The mystery of Life is concealed within each human being. The Mystery of Past, Present and Future is lockt up within the human Ego. The Super-conscious memory of Man will release to him the knowledge of who he is, what he has been and what he will be in ages to come, if he unlocks that memory and lets it become active in his consciousness.

46 The Square represents the Body and the Compasses represent the Spirit. The Enterd Apprentice is brot to Light by the aid of certain Representatives of the Greater Lights. The Enterd Apprentice who learns to use the Compasses to control the Square by the illumination conferd thru an intelligent (not sectarian) understanding of the Greatest Light in Masonry, will make his subsequent progress on the spiritual pathway in accord with the best and most reliable laws ever given to humankind.

47 Stewardship is a status of service,—of serving one's fellow-beings. It is not a menial position, or one which, in any way whatsoever, is derogatory to one's dignity. False pride often makes us feel that some kinds of service are beneath us, but no service that is worthy of the name, can ever be derogatory to the man who is sure of his manhood and all that it implies. It is an axiom that no one can become a good general unless or until he has also been a good soldier. No one can become a good or a wise director of his fellow-men unless or until he has learned to serve his fellow-men. Service not only renders necessary aid and assistance; it enforces self-discipline, develops courage, increases resourcefulness when one is called upon to help another for whom all resources have, seemingly, failed.

48 Stewardship is the symbol of an implied trust and the acceptance of it. Acceptance of a trust implies the necessity of creditably discharging the responsibility assumed. Stewardship in all of its aspects implies action and every teaching in Freemasonry backs up this implication. The Worshipful Master is simply a Master Steward who has earned his honorable position by proving himself capable in the smaller things and tests previously demanded of him. All the precepts inculcated thru the Enterd Apprentice Degree even to the very name of the Degree, emfasize the idea of Stewardship and true Service.

49 Stewardship entails an accounting for that with which one has been entrusted. The Enterd Apprentice must give an accounting of himself before he can expect to make further progress in the Art. This does not mean the perfunctory Lecture which is to be memorized before showing the Suitable Proficiency in the preceding Degree. It means that, spiritually, the neofite must demonstrate his understanding of what he has assumed thru his Obligation and the teachings given him, before he can expect to progress farther on the inner planes. This examination and accounting is not required before any committee of human examiners but before the stricter examiner that is his own conscience.

50 The Neofite who is really seeking More Light must be able to satisfy himself that he does understand what he has received in its inner import, before he can reasonably expect to go onward. That he may, and probably will, in due time be advanst to the Fellow-Craft Degree is not alone or in itself advancement on the inner planes of consciousness. It is merely another opportunity and will be understood only to the measure that he understands what he has already undertaken. Stewardship of the Mysteries in Masonry means being entrusted with the principles of elemental building building on the Temple not made with hands. It is, therefore, encumbent upon the Neofite, like a good steward, to begin building on that Temple at once.

51 The Nazarene Master once said, referring to Stewards, "That servant, which knew his lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes. But he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes. For unto whosoever much is given, of him shall much be required: and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more." The parable referd to customs prevailing at the time, but the principle remains the same. Of those to whom much Light has been given will much be required. Of those to whom some Light has bee been given will be required some measure of reciprocity. Those who have received much Light and who have failed to use it, will receive the stripes of an offended conscience. Those who have received some Light but who have not known it or taken the pains to understand it, will receive the stripes of personal disappointment with what they have received, simply because of their continued ignorance, which is a cardinal sin of mankind in an age when ignorance is unpardonable because inexcusable when Light is everywhere available.

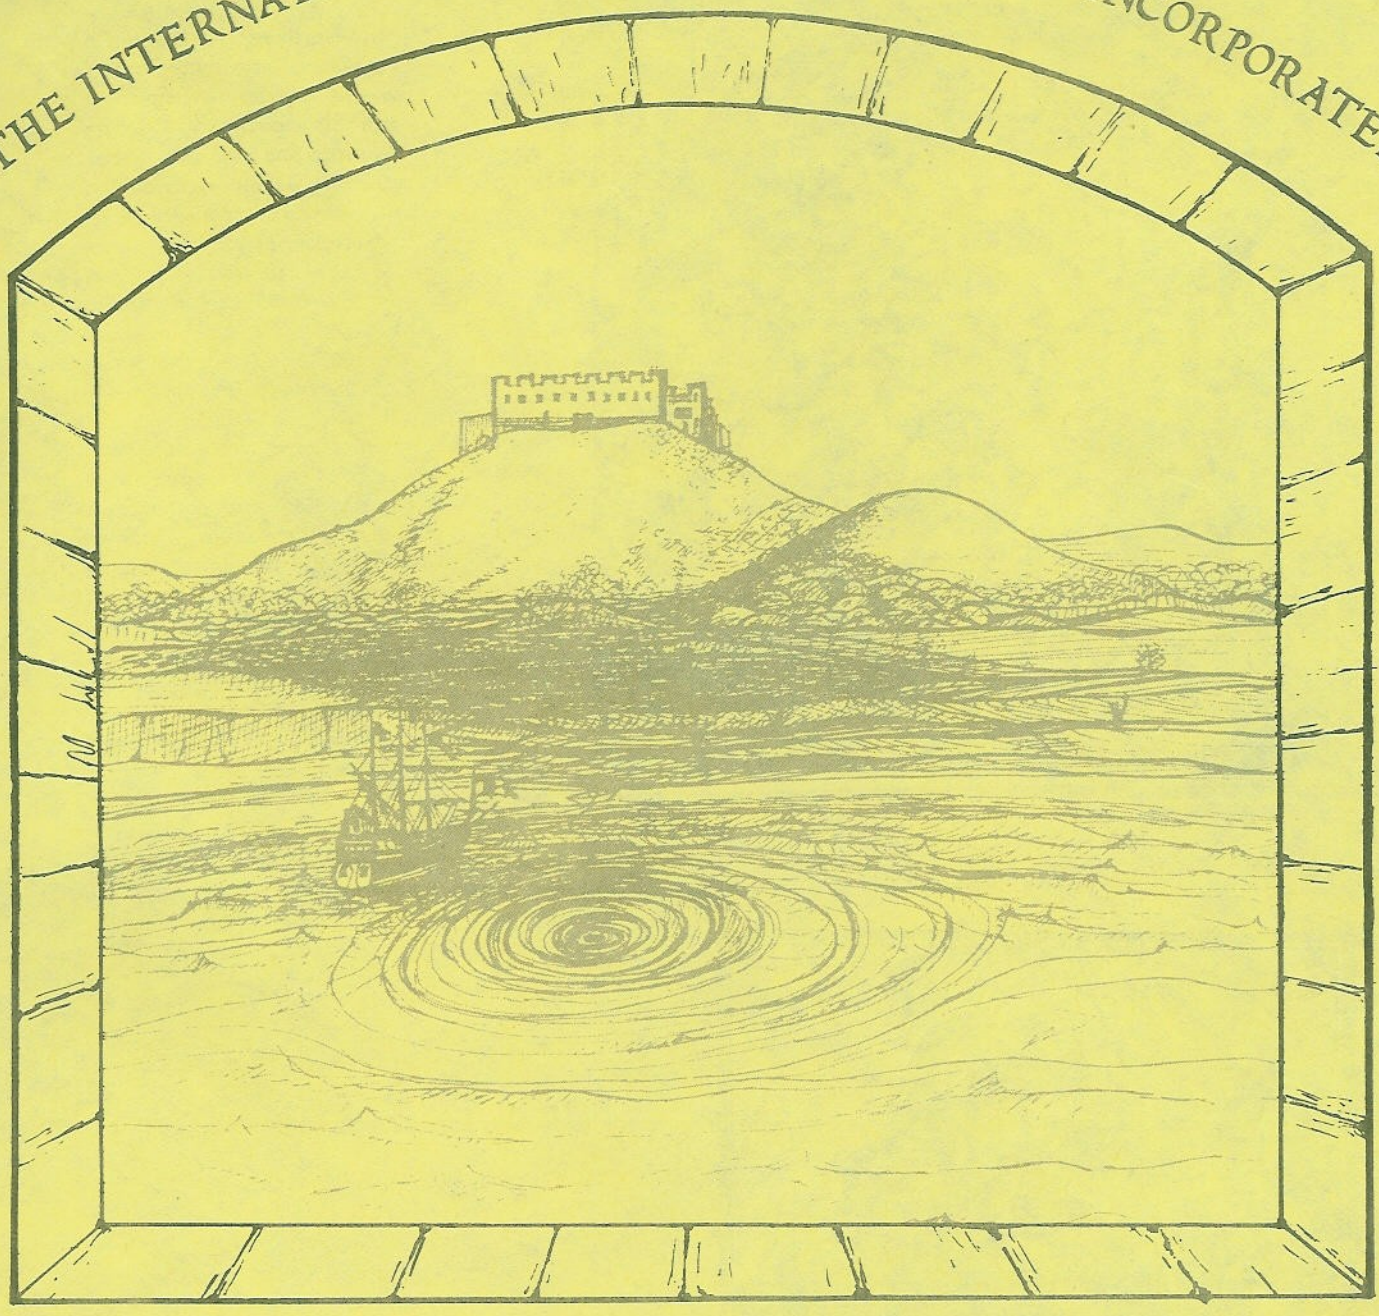
52 Freemasonry does not really invest its Neofites with new mysteries. It reveals to them the mysteries with which they are already invested and entrusted. It is for the Neofite to seek the understanding and right use to them. Man is, and most men are content to remain, biological structures. The true Mason who understands, seeks to transmute the biological structure into the Spiritual Temple that it should be. Nature does the initial work in providing man with a base upon which to work. Knowledge provides the tools with which to improve that base and to develop it into a sublime structure worthy of the Soul that tenants it.

53 A realization of the principle of Stewardship will make this clear to any Neofite and give him the Light and show him the way to work the Great Transmutation. It is incumbent upon the Neofite to take home the lesson taught by the process of his Preparation for entrance into the Lodge Room, the lesson that not the physical but the spiritual man is entering upon a new plane of consciousness and into a new world of experience. The Ego that is man, will then be able to direct the further progress desired because it is given an opportunity to function as a spiritual Entity.

54 It is the duty of every Mason to so regard his membership, aside from any question of official position, as one of essential Stewardship and to faithfully discharge the provisions of his Obligation in such a manner as to compose a good accounting of the trust the Craft has reposed in him. Only by so doing will he rise to a proper appreciation of what Freemasonry really means and what the name itself implies. Only by so doing, will he receive all the Light that can be conferd upon him in a Masonic Lodge. If Light is really what he seeks, the seeker must be able to recognize it when and as he sees it. Otherwise, he remains still in darkness and is little better than the profane in the outer world who have not enjoyed his opportunity.

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF MARTINISTS INCORPORATED

Worthing - Barbados - West Indies



PLANE III

GRADE: COMPANION

LIBER 60 THERE GOES GALAHAD

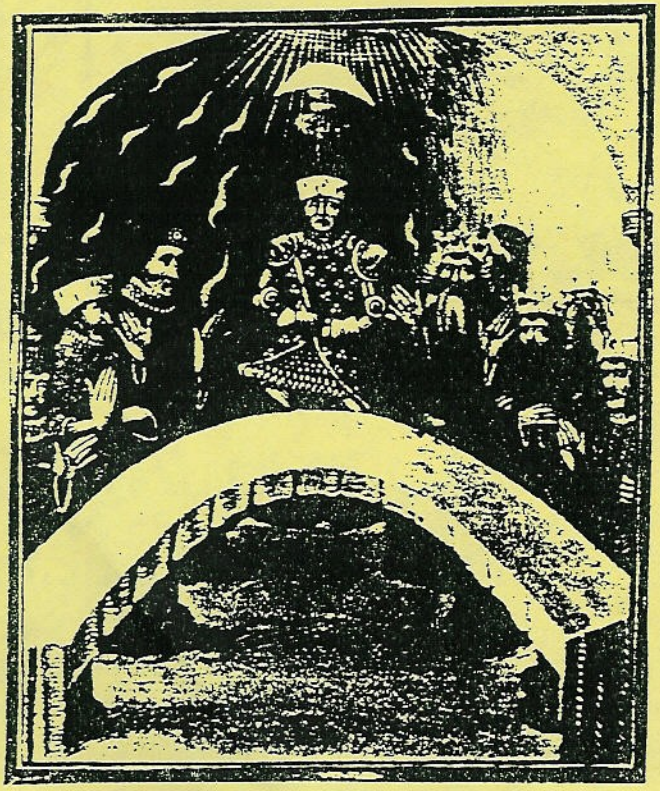
Private & Confidential

The International College of Martinists Incorporated, is a non-profit institution existing for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

There were three tables associated with the Grail: the Table of the Last Supper, the table at which the guardians of the cup first sat, and the Round Table of King Arthur and his knights. According to tradition, all three were round, and those who sat at them were dedicated to the seeking of spiritual wholeness.

The Grail appeared at King Arthur's Round Table 450 years after Christ's Passion, on the feast of Pentecost, the day predicted for the arrival of Galahad. In the presence of the Grail he is ushered in, and all the knights lose the power of speech. In the Bible, Pentecost was the day when the disciples suddenly 'began to speak in other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance'; they were enlightened in the same way as the knights were by the coming of Galahad (realizing that the Waste Land would be healed along with the Fisher King). At the Pentecostal table, tongues of fire radiate out to the disciples just as rays of light from the Grail stream down to the knights.



Galahad in the Siege Perilous.
Manuscript illustration from Li Roumans du bon chevalier Tristan, Ms. Fr. 99, f.363r. France, 15th c. Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris.

#227

Beloved and Respected Companions

THE ESOTERIC TRADITION AND THE TEMPLE

The Rosicrucians and the Rose Croix

It is not possible to explain Rosicrucianism in a simple, straightforward manner. As is the case with so many of the subjects I have dealt with in the last 10 Libers, accounts of the characteristics and history of the Rosicrucians are a mixture of facts, fables, legends and sometimes deliberate invention.

The Rosicrucians of the 17th century were profound, mystical Christians. They were adversaries of the Catholic Church of that time because of its intolerant attitude. The Rosicrucians therefore tended more towards the Protestant trend, in spite of the anti-esoteric posture of the latter. It is evident that this term no longer resounds today even in circles which bear its name. The Rose-Croix of Freemasonry are not always Christian — they are rarely esotericists -- and the modern Rosicrucians have a different orientation. However, we must render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's.

ROSICRUCIAN HISTORY Those who would like to study the history of the Rosicrucian movement (the real one, that of the 17th and 18th centuries -- and not the reconstituted American organizations of today) should read the book History and Doctrine of the Rosicrucians by Sedir. In addition History of the Rosicrucians by F. Wittemans, the one bearing the same title by Serge Hutin, and Templars and Rosicrucians by Robert Amblain are also valuable. With these books, the profane reader will have sufficient information concerning the Rosicrucians, whose main goals consisted of: healing the sick; and giving anonymous help to individuals, human organizations or states, if their cause was just. It is also said they engaged in political action tending towards the establishment of a universal state, European first, then global (2nd) religious action tending to a return to a more pure or pristine Christianity, nearer to its source and lastly, by the action of the brethren of the Rosy-Cross, to reintegrate man and nature into their original state. This program was eventually given to less mysterious organizations which were closer to the profane world. Among these initiatic movements we point to the more known ones, namely: Martinism and Freemasonry. The rational branches of Freemasonry work together to realize this program of the Rosicrucians in the social and political spheres. Martinism was given a task which is more occult and esoteric.

CHRISTIAN ROSENKREUTZ The legendary founder of the Order, Christian Rosenkreutz, who was supposedly born in the 14th Century in Germany, has never been identified historically. In point of fact, this name is a symbolic one. According to Robert Amblain, the Hebrew roz (rosah) means "secrets", "rosen" means prince, and "koroz" means "herald". This is why "kerazid", in Hebrew, "herald of God", is, in the Jewish angelology, the name of the angel of proclamation. Thus, "Rose---" [this name is unclear on the manuscript we are translating from - Ed] only appears to be a German name; in reality it is a name of function, or office, by deformation of the Hebrew "rosah koroz", thus meaning "Herald of the Secret", which perfectly qualifies or describes the function of the Rosicrucians. But what is the secret? This name, which refers to God Himself, in esoteric writings, is referring to the Siphra Didzeniutha of the commen- taries of the traditional "Gemara" of the Talmud, or Holy Scriptures, particularly the Book of Daniel "God is His own secret..." The "rosah koroz" of the Rosy-Cross is but the herald of God, therefore a vehicle of the angel Keraziel.

In order to realize their great plan, which would require many centuries, the Rosicrucians utilized all the traditional occult forms of knowledge: alchemy, magic, theurgy, astrology, etc.. Their doctrine was a combination of the Christian Gnosis and the Jewish Kabalah. They were, in reality, Christian Kabalists.

THE ROSICRUCIANS OF THE EAST There is a particular branch of the Rosicrucians named "Rosy-Cross of the East". Gerard Heym, in L'Initiation, the organ of the Martinist Order, (1963, #57 p.47), quoted "the Order of the Asian Brotherhood" also named "Knights of St. John the Evangelist", reorganized around the year 1750, then around 1780. The center was located in Thessalonica. In fact, they were the "Rosicrucians of the East". Before 1914, Papus received the filiation of said "Rosicrucians of the East" from someone who had himself received it in Cairo. That particular person became a member of the Supreme Council of the Martinist Order. No other person than Papus possessed this filiation, not even Teder, his successor.

It should be mentioned that Asia has nothing to do with this Order of Esoteric Knighthood. It is only because the grouping of the letters makes it convenient for a sigil that the name was chosen. In fact, the candidate, during his inception into the Order received the Ordination of Eques A Sancti Joannis Evangelistae which, when grouped, spells EASIE. The cloak of the Order was black with a white lining, all made of linen, which fell to a few inches from the floor. (The black on the outside symbolized prudence, wisdom, consistency in adversities and peril, humility, and hidden knowledge. As a colour of mourning it meant that the initiate was dead to the world. The white of the interior symbolized the inner light, the absolute truth, the regeneration into and by the Higher, the purity of the soul. On the cloak, near the shoulder, was placed this insignia:

Under the cloak the knight wore a collar and a particular piece of jewelry.

According to the initiate who transmitted this initiation to Papus, it is to the Rosy Cross of the East that the ordination given by don Martines de Pasqually to the Reaux+Croix comes. This movement also brought to the surface the method of the "inner way" taught by Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin which is in reality spiritual alchemy. Two cities were particularly important for the Knights of St. John the Evangelist: In Italy, Venice and in France, Marseille. Even today the crypt of Saint Victor and his famous Black Virgin play an eminent role for the members of the Order, for this Black Virgin is their patron saint.

CREATIVE PRAYER The Rosicrucians knew of the invaluable effects of prayer. They knew that creative prayers laid on the occult rule mentioned by Cornelius Agrippa in his famous Occult Philosophy which states that Holy Scripture is a compilation of "historical facts" that have their roots in the "archetypal world." In order to make a prayer more efficient, it becomes necessary to link it to the appropriate event which is its celestial archetype. Thus in order to have a safe maritime journey the prayer should evoke the crossing of the Red Sea by the Israelites led by Moses. Because this crossing is not only an historical event, but also the "permanent image" of the pilgrimage of human souls, which are crossing the "troubled waters", mentioned in Genesis, while travelling to the heavenly city.

The method of prayer used by the Rosicrucians was one where the operant was devoid of all profane clothing or metalic objects. He wore a white alb made of linen and a cordelier. He wore sandals consecrated solely for such occasions. When praying, his head is uncovered. For exorcisms he wore his hood attached to his alb. He operates before an altar made up thusly: altar cloth made of golden silk upon which is placed the Gospel according to Saint John opened at the first chapter. On each side of the Bible is a candlestick with a beeswax candle (incense if desired).

THE CHRIST SYMBOLIZED We may also add that the custom of honouring the Gospel and allowing it to assume the role of "condenser of the presence of the Christ", was known in the times of the Emperors of the East. In Byzantium, the emperor had, on his right, a chair richly decorated, upon which was placed the Gospel of St. John written on parchment. On this Gospel was placed a lit candle. This whole scene symbolized the Christ, who was invisible but present. This practice was later adopted by the Cathars.

The doctrine of the Rosicrucians of the 17th century is also that of Martinism since the time of Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin and his teacher Martinez Pasquales. It is that of the Christian Kabalists of the Middle Ages and the Renaissance. I am giving an overview here so that everybody may understand the reason why certain operations were performed. This doctrine is, in fact, the esotericism of the Judeo-Christian tradition.

CONCERNING CREATION

God, as an Essential Being, existing by Himself and in Himself, without need or variation, infinitely good, infinitely wise, because He is infinitely perfect and All-Powerful. By being omnipotent and eternal, His Power was necessarily exercised over eternity and all beings.

According to the scriptures, God made creation after creation, universe after universe, probably separated by interval periods of non-being analogous to the famous "seventh day" when "God rested". (Genesis 2:2) [These periods of activity and rest, of out-breathing and in-breathing, of creation and un-creation, are called in the East: Manvantara and Pralaya. In the Old Testament a period of manifestation or Manvantara ends with the entrance of Noah into the Ark. Pralaya -- the Flood -- then follows. When the Flood subsides a new epoch begins. The period between Manvantaras may be immense. - Ed]

When the beings who were integrated in one of these creations came into manifestation by their own volition, a sort of self-determining act, when they came to the end of that creation, they remained fixed at that final stage to which they came. And it is a sort of mysterious "FIRE" which keeps them fixed, hardens them and prepares them for the role they are going to play in the next creation.

Thus, when fixed in evil, they will remain, in the next creation, instruments of temptation, of corruption, of destruction. These are the demons.

When fixed in goodness, they will remain in the next creation, instruments of liberation, or purification, of creation. These are the angels, or souls that are chosen and "set aside", as Saint Paul said.

As far as the creatures that are not fixed, because they came forth for the first time out of non-being, each will play their particular role, while carrying within themselves their own heaven and hell, a state which will remain for as long as they participate in that particular creation. These creations are called aeons. They are cycles and when they constitute a general creation they ate called aeons of aeons.

CONCERNING THE PREEXISTENCE OF SOULS

The name Adam does not refer to a carnal being but a collectivity. When we say "Adam" it is as if we were saying "the army". The first Man was an egregore, and it is the central spirit of this egregore who was the true Adam. As Origen said: "Souls have preexisted, as a population..." The Scriptures also hint to this.

Most of the Biblical citations which have anything to do with the preexistence of souls have been used to support the belief in reincarnation by those who believe in it. We can see why one can easily be confused.

OF THE TEMPTATION AND FALL OF MAN

The notion of temptation (by the principle of Evil and by the beings within its orbit), for preexisting souls, is an integral part of Christianity and Judaism. To deny that there was a Fall and a spiritual degradation of man is to deny the incarnation of the Christ and to remove the value of redemption; it is also to deny the value of his sacrifice. All of the foregoing are fundamentals of Christian belief.

One could look at the Fall as a sort of explosion of the egregore, the dispersion of the collectivity, its corruption, analogous to the corruption of the body at death. And since we are talking about a fall which followed a spiritual degradation, this implies a descent into the corresponding planes of existence which are the inferior ones, by a progressive materialization leading to an animal-like state, and even beyond.

CONCERNING THE REDEMPTION OF MAN

Just as a perverse intelligence prompted preexistent souls to plunge into darkness, so will a pure one re-illuminate them.

Many passages in the Old Testament speak of the Messiah, his coming and the circumstances surrounding his coming. The messianic prophecy is one of the elements we should consider the most in all the Scriptures.

If we imagine a pearl necklace whose string breaks and the pearls fall and scatter in all directions, then we will have an idea of the Fall, because now we no longer have a necklace; we must now look for 'the pearls.'

Most of the pearls will be lost in some dark place, under some furniture and it will take time before they're recovered even if we look for them persistently. Others will be easily found because they would not have strayed far from the point of the Fall or from the eyesight of the owner of the necklace. Each pearl carries within itself its own destiny, just as preexisting souls carry theirs within themselves.

When the owner of the pearls gathers them, he will string them anew with a new string just as they were prior to the break. When this has been done he can once again speak of "the necklace" instead of "the pearls."

If they are any pearls missing, it would be due to the imperfection of the means utilized for the search, or the negligence of the searcher. But if our owner is a perfect being, if he has all the necessary means to search for his pearls, and if he has the time required and is without impatience, he would gather all of them.

Let us replace "pearls" by "souls", "necklace" by "Total Man" and the "owner" by "God", then the problem of final restitution is resolved, and the apocatastasis is justified.

CONCERNING THE REDEMPTION OF NATURE

The degradation of the First Adam caused the degradation of the original creation, over which he was guardian. This constituted the ideal image having the prototypes of all the creatures (vegetable & animal) according to the Platonist view. This is why in the famous Garden of Eden (which is an ideal state, purely spiritual and not material) the animals and vegetables mentioned in Genesis are but "essential archetypes", having, each, all the preexisting souls of the beings of its kind. Eden is the world of essence. After the Fall, what he had was degraded and became that of substance, as a result of this materialization.

This is why the redemption (which took place) and the reintegration (which is progressive) of man, labours of the Christ, has to be followed by that of all Nature. This is the labour of Man, although his own redemption already brought a purification "in principio" of the fallen creation.

This reintegration of souls, other than that of humans, (vegetable and animal which are found in Nature) is also alluded to in the Scriptures.

CONCERNING THE APOCATASTASIS OR FINAL REINTEGRATION

There is no eternal hell, there are only sojourns in creation. These sojourns correspond to the ultimate state in which the Creature was "fixed" when the end of the Universe in which it participated came to be. The same goes for Heaven which, in relation to this type of reasoning, would be transitory, the Creature being able by his aloofness to, once again, fall. In point of fact, this second point is very unlikely because the Creature would, by this time, be perfect, therefore incapable of succumbing to temptation. He would have removed all powers from the entities of darkness and his probation on the plane of manifestation would have been over.

In the esoteric exegesis of the Scriptures, the names of peoples who were enemies of Israel were emblematic of demonic legions. The Cappadocians, called Caphthotim in Hebrew, from the word meaning apple, or pomegranate, are fallen angels, the apple being the symbol of knowledge and evil (a play on words on the Latin 'malum') and the pomegranate symbolizing the lower world. It is for having swallowed six seeds of the pomegranate that Persephone could never return to her mother Demeter, in the world of the living, after she was kidnapped by Hades. Israel (Hebrew: man of God) is but humanity in its entirety, the collectivity of human souls and Egypt, Cappadocia, Cyrene, designate different creations, other universes. "From beyond the banks of ten rivers of Ethiopia my supplicants will bring me offerings" (Zephania 3:10) Ethiopia (in Hebrew: Chus, meaning "blackness") signifies esoterically "the Black Ones", or fallen angels. "For now I will issue orders and shake the House of Israel among all the nations as you shake a sieve so that no pebble can fall on the ground." (trans: grain of wheat) We know that wheat is a symbol of the soul and in the sacred texts, particularly the New Testament, the Christ, is the divine sower, as the devil is the sower of iniquity. This, briefly, according to Robert Amblain, was the doctrine of the original Rosicrucians.

CHRISTIAN ROSENKREUTZ (continued)

It is uncertain when the word "Rosicrucianism" was first used. As a belief system, it came to the notice of the general public in the seventeenth century when an anonymous work now known as the Fama, mentioning a mysterious personage called Christian Rozenkreutz, was published. The German word Rosenkreutz means "rosy cross". At this point it may be useful to look at the symbolism of the Rose and the Cross to see why they were chosen as the name of this legendary personality.

The Rose and the Cross are very profound symbols in the sense that if we meditate or even think about them, they affect us deeply. Like the symbol of the Grail, regular meditation on the Rose and the Cross can have very strong effects on our inner lives.

THE CROSS Let us begin with the Cross. No single culture or religion can claim to be the originator of the Cross as a symbol. It is found in all religions and cultures from time immemorial, and belongs to the common heritage of all mankind. In Jungian terms the Cross is one of the basic symbols through which that "data bank", the collective unconscious, containing the accumulated knowledge of the evolutionary experience of the human race, tries to convey to us certain aspects of transcendental reality.

In ancient civilizations, the Cross was a schematic representation of the insertion of the microcosm within the macrocosm. That is to say, the Cross was considered by the ancients as an affirmation of the existence of man as a miniature of the cosmos possessing the same structure and animated by the same cyclical impulse of creative force.

Down through the ages the Cross has evolved in many forms. The oldest is the equal-armed cross known as the Crux Quadrata; then there is the Latin Cross or Crux Inmisa; the Egyptian Cross or Crux Ansata; the Celtic Cross, et cetera.

SYMBOLISM OF THE CROSS Whenever most people think of the Cross they tend to think of the crucifixion. In fact the Cross existed long before the crucifixion. In early times, for example, the equal-armed cross represented the four cardinal points and the four alchemical elements of Earth, Water, Fire and Air. The Cross also symbolizes the active masculine principle which is vertical, and the passive feminine principle which is horizontal. If the human body is envisaged with standing with feet together and arms outstretched horizontally, the image would correspond exactly to the design of the Latin Cross, corroborating the symbolism of the insertion of man into the cosmos represented by the four cardinal points.

In the astrological tradition, the twelve signs of the Zodiac are arranged in such a way that three signs are placed on each of the four cardinal points, each point representing one of the four elements. This arrangement was known in antiquity as the "Rose of the Winds," with the probable connotation that it was the Cross of the Four Elements which, when brought into equilibrium, will permit the Wind of the Spirit or the Rose to blossom forth. One could also stretch the symbolism further by visualizing the Cross as spinning on its axis, pushed by the creative, cyclical and evolutionary Wind of the Spirit to delineate time and space, the necessary conditions for material manifestation.

THE ROSE The spread of the Rose as a flower in the West was probably due to the arrival of the Arabs in the Iberian Peninsula. It subsequently became part of the culture of many nations and is prominently encountered in literature, music, painting, embroidery, heraldry, legends and religion. This was due to an almost universal appreciation of its qualities of elegance and beauty, which have made it the ideal symbol of nobility, love and perfection.

The Red Rose came to symbolize the passion of love or the passion of suffering. The average rose, in the Middle Ages, was probably a spindly shrub. Suffering was symbolized by this shrub's struggle to transform gross material nourishment from the earth to produce its beautiful flower, a flower so delicate that it had to be surrounded by thorns. The red colour of the Rose also symbolizes the red fire of the spirit which pushes man to perfect himself in the crucible of material life — the Cross of the Four Elements. The Rose was used in the Middle Ages as a secret sign by many members of spiritual and intellectual movements that dared to question the beliefs of the established church. For these free thinkers, it represented the fragile flame of awareness with the aid of which the hidden truths of Universal Harmony might be rediscovered. Even Martin Luther, one of the Fathers of the Reformation, adopted the cross with a rose in the center as his personal emblem.

According to the French writer Gérard de Sède in his books La Rose-Croix and Le Secret des Cathares, the first time an emblem combining the Rose and the Cross was publicly displayed was in the eleventh century in Spain in the independent kingdom of Aragon.

There is a legend surrounding this event according to which an Aragonese Knight named Iñigo Arista, in the midst of a fierce battle against the Moors, suddenly saw a cross of light in the sky with a rose on each of its arms. Taking this as a sign from God that his side would triumph, Arista plunged with great determination into the fray, from which the Aragonese emerged victorious. A monastery to commemorate this event was erected near the site and dedicated to St. John. This is the monastery of San Juan de la Peña, which today can be found near the town of Jaca in the province of Huesca. Some time later an Order of Chivalry with the emblem of the Roses and the Cross was founded in the monastery.

Gérard de Sède writes that there is a historical record which relates that in 1623, the agents of the French King Louis XIII mentioned in a report that members of a secret Rosicrucian fraternity participated in a solemn ceremony at each feast of St. John in San Juan de la Peña. In the monastery today one can see a painting depicting the legend of Iñigo Arista, as well as the tombs of twenty-four Knights of St. John, each decorated with the four Roses and the Cross.

The unusual character of this historic site and the gentle beauty of the countryside in the surrounding provinces of Huesca and Navarre makes a trip to the region a "must" for spiritually minded travellers planning a visit to Spain. San Juan de la Peña is really a huge cave converted into a monastery. It is impressive not only because of the grandeur of its setting and its unusual construction, but because the atmosphere of what was undoubtedly a place of high spirituality still lingers in spite of a recent extensive program of restoration. Who knows what a respectful pilgrim to the monastery may have experienced there?

Returning to the history of the Rose and the Cross, Gérard de Sède also mentions that the banner of Raymond VI, Count of Toulouse, who tried to defend the Cathars against the armies of Innocent II, was in the form of a cross, described in heraldry as de gueules à la croix et pommettée d'or. In heraldry gueule means red and was derived from the Arabic word gul meaning rose. De Sède sees a link in the fact that at the time, Aragon was the most loyal ally of Toulouse in its fight against the papal army led by Simon de Montfort.

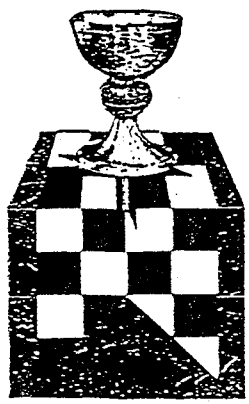
Yet another meaning of this beautiful symbol is that the rose represents the soul of man unfolding on the cross of the body, as he experiences and overcomes the trials and vicissitudes of life.

Against this rich tapestry of history, legend and symbolism, it can be seen why the Cross with the red Rose in the center, representing man's noblest aspirations, was adopted as the emblem of the Rosicrucian movement. Its basic tenets, which stem from the distant past, are shared by other spiritual groups but its true origins lie hidden in the records of secret fraternities, with the result that writers have given different versions of its history and of the often enigmatic personalities who are known to have been its emissaries.

We will continue!

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-



#228

Beloved Companions and Seekers of the Grail

THE QUEST OF THE HOLY GRAIL

Lecture Six : Galahad

The stories of the Grail were passed on over the centuries and freely elaborated on by generation after generation of storytellers and poets, "and this" says Charles Williams, "rather than anything else, was the first cause of the invention of the sacred and glorious figure of Galahad." Galahad replaces Perceval as the central hero of the later Grail stories, in particular of the Queste del Saint Graal (about 1225), and then of Thomas Mallory's Morte d'Arthur which is the definitive form of the Arthurian stories for English-speaking readers. While the stories developed by trial and error and according to the likes and dislikes of generations of authors, we may also feel that something deeper was going on and that little by little the essence of the inner history of the Grail was rising to the surface of consciousness. If so, then we may expect to find in Galahad a new level of understanding of the inner quest. However, among those with a spiritual interest in the quest, Galahad is an oddly controversial and, for some, enigmatic figure.

"Galahad is a cardboard character ... because he has no failings he is not human," says Richard Cavendish and even John Matthews, whose spiritual metier is precisely the Grail material, says unenthusiastically "(Galahad) is a difficult archetype to work with."

Before going further we will tell the story of Galahad but only very briefly and that for a reason we shall develop in a moment. Galahad was the son of Lancelot and Elaine, the daughter of Pelles the Grail King, brought up mysteriously (Williams suggests that Merlin carried him to Blanchfleur, Perceval's sister, for rearing), he comes to Arthur's court as a knight amidst many marvelous events, for example: he is the first to be able to sit in the Perilous Seat at the Round Table, which reveals him to be the one who will preeminently achieve the Grail. Through him the Fisher King is healed, and after many adventures he, with Perceval and Bors, comes to the place of the Grail and dies in ecstasy after receiving Communion from the Grail at a Mass offered by Josephus, son of Joseph of Arimathea, and then the Grail passes beyond knowledge...

> "A great marvel followed immediately on Galahad's death: the two remaining companions saw quite clearly a hand come down from heaven... It proceeded straight to the Holy Vessel and took both it and the lance, and carried them up to heaven, to the end that no man since has even dared to say he saw the Holy Grail."
>
> Queste

Now, one difficulty with the character of Galahad, which makes him appear "cardboard" to Cavendish, is that he is utterly simple and direct in his movement, through all the adventures, towards his goal. He has no faults, he is in fact a truly Good man, so he is called "The Good Knight," and so he seems impossibly strange to us — as strange, maybe, as a visitor from another planet! Yet is not the simplicity of goodness what is in fact proper to humanity? Indeed Galahad entirely expresses the idea, Kabalistic if you will, of humanity as a perfect vessel for the Divine light. And this is a little terrifying ... as C. S. Lewis observed it is not so ultimately alarming if one fears a demon, but what if one meets an angel and can only flee in fear?

With that, perhaps excessive, caveat we do say, nonetheless, that the Galahad character requires especially the approach of reading the story and travelling with him as it were. For this reason we have not summarized the story in detail but rather ask you to acquire The Quest of the Holy Grail (the readily available paperback translation if the Queste) and ride along in Galahad's company for a time. I daresay that most readers for whom the Quest is at all appropriate as a spiritual way will find the character of Galahad finally exhilarating like a spray of cold water, and perhaps say with Lancelot, his much more earth-bound father who at the end travels with Galahad alone for half a year in the mysterious Ship of Solomon (set adrift on the sea of time by Solomon and painted in red, white and green),

> "Truly, never before knew I of so High adventures done, and so marvellous and strange."

A. E. Waite is also, as so often, insightful, -- if also often, flowery, on the character of Galahad:

> "As compared with the rest of the literature, we enter in his legend upon new ground, and are on the eminence of Mount Salvach rather than among the normal offices of chivalry ... The atmosphere of the romance gives up Galahad as the natural air gives up the vision from beyond... He issues from the place of the mystery... Galahad's entire life is bound up so completely with the Quest that apart therefrom he can scarcely be said to live."
>
> The Hidden Church of The Holy Grail

A second objection to Galahad, and more than the first (I take this to be the source of Matthews' difficulties, is that in passing with the Grail beyond the circle of the world we know, it contradicts the supposed "here and now" accessibility of the Grail. Matthews says that "it (the Grail) is for all men to find and recognize within themselves. For we are all Grails when all is said and done." Therefore "Galahad can learn from us", along these lines -- one supposes -- of being a more democratic man, more like "L'homme moyen sensuel", as well as we from him. I suspect that one important question is whether, granted that we are all vessels potentially of light, there is not first of all the one Grail of the three tables, and first of those: that of Jerusalem. However let us propose to postpone direct consideration of the nature of the Grail to our next lecture and here follow a somewhat different path of access into the meaning of Galahad, one suggested by the conclusion of the "Heart of Wisdom Sutra" -

> "This is the Great Mantra, the Incantation which dispells all fear: Gatte! Gatte! Hara Gatte! Hara San Gatte! .. Gone! Gone! Gone Beyond! Gone utterly Beyond! O What an Awakening! All Hail!"

Again, are we wrong in supposing that those from whom the Quest of the True Grail is meant will resonate inwardly to these words? In any case they seem to me entirely appropriate to the Quest of Galahad, for what he was seeking was not something in this fragmented world of reflections, but something at the Root Above, and his purity was manifested in an air of velocity which was always with him even in repose and which in the end carried him beyond all things and revealed that henceforth the vision of the Grail is only for the one who can similarly pass Beyond.

Charles Williams, poet and true mage, perhaps understood this quality of Galahad better than any other contemporary writer, and I should like to educe here two quotes from Williams -- the first not directly concerning Galahad but, rather, concerning the "velocity" we have spoken of as his chief characteristic ...

> "'The flight of the alone to the Alone' ... Speed, speed and always speed! His mind remembered that wild careering herd; so, and swifter than so, he desired the Return. He seemed to hear the beating of hooves..."
>
> The Place of The Lion

The second from his poem "The Last Voyage."

> "Through the sea of omnipotent fact rushed the act of Galahad.
> He glowed white; he leaned against the wind > down the curved road among the topless waters.
> He sang Judica te, Deus; the wind, > driven by doves wings along the arm-taut keel, > sung against itself Judica te, Deus.
> Prayer and irony had their say and ceased;
> the sole speech was sped...
> In the monstrum of triangular speed, > in a path of lineal necessity, > the necessity of being was communicated to the son of Lancelot.
> The ship and the song drove on."

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

#229

DEACONS—SUPERINTENDENTS

"Likewise must the deacons be grave, not doubletongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre". The Great Light

THE Junior and Senior Deacons in a Masonic Lodge may be said to constitute the Second Order. Kabbalistically they correspond to the Sephiroth Geburah (Justice) and Chesed (Love), while the Chaplain is represented on the Sephirotic Tree by Tiphereth (Beauty), for we are instructed to worship the Lord in the Beauty of Holiness.

2 The office and function of Deacons is most ancient and honorable. Long before the Christian Era, the Mysteries were served by the Deacons thru many notable rites and systems. Their position, just next below that of fully ranking elective officers, both in religious, philosofical and fraternal rites, is one peculiarly prominent, for to the deacons falls the active floor work, whether in temple, chancel or lodge room.

3 Ordinarily, the Senior Deacon is the direct appointee of the Worshipful Master while the Junior Deacon is the appointee of the Senior Warden and thus an ancient tradition instituted by the Roman lawgivers is perpetuated in the Masonic Work. The Junior Deacon works under the direction of the Master and his Wardens, in association with the Tyler, but the Senior Deacon's work is, if well executed, possibly the most spectacular of all the floor work for the Senior Deacon's presence and voice are in constant evidence.

4 The Masonic Senior Deacon corresponds to the Rosicrucian Conductor of Novices, and in this capacity, the Senior Deacon in a Masonic Lodge performs, symbolically, a two-fold function, Guide and Instructor, for it is the Senior Deacon who renders the "Middle Chamber" Instruction to the Neofite who is being passed to the grade and degree fo Fellow-Craft.

5 Again Freemasonry sets before its members an illustrious example. Again the Craft appoints men to exemplify the great service man should give to his fellow-men—guidance and instruction. In this guidance and instruction, the sublime principles of Justice and Love are enshrined and set forth by every precept it is possible to adduce. It is well, therefore, that the Great Light of Freemasonry admonishes Deacons to be grave, not double-tongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre. To be sure, this advice is commonly assumed to have been intended for the deacons of the early Christian Church, but singularly enuf, it applied also to those who were deacons in the Mysteries long before the time of the Apostolic writer, who gave therefore, only the same admonition to which the Deacons of the Mysteries were already accustomed and which was a requirement for their particular office.

6 The duties of the Deacons are not alone to carry messages of certain officers and to attend certain alarms. In this respect they have as their mythic analog, Mercury, the Messenger of the gods. We have already mentioned the truth that Masonry operates under a definite occult or spiritual "Ray". The Senior Deacon, esoterically, may be likened to the actinic property and potency of hat Ray. His work it is, that vitalizes the general floor work of the Lodge and, in association with the Master, it is he who actively assists in bringing the Neofite to Light and then makes that Light clear and lucid by his subsequent interlocutions.

7 Until the final moment in the Masonic Drama, the Senior Deacon is the "faithful friend" of the Neofite, but there comes a time when that Neofite must stand alone. This is peculiarly symbolic of human life. In our progress thru life and in the acquisition of human experience, we are dependent upon faithful friends for a vast part of what we commonly call our success. Our failures in life, if we have had failures, are largely due to our lack of faithful friends.

8 The Senior Deacon's work therefore, symbolizes the friendships we sustain in our life journey and teaches us how greatly we depend upon them for a successful issue in our affairs and in the ultimate realization of our ambitions. In human life also, there come times, however, when we must stand alone and make individual decisions in crises upon which depend our ability to "rise" from a lower to an higher estate in the scale of progress. The Senior Deacon cannot "raise" the Neofite to whom he has been such a devoted companion and friend. Only the Master can raise the Neofite, and in human life, our friends cannot, at critical moments raise us out of our normal status. Only our own decesions, our own stamina, our own intensity can make it possible for the Greater Master of Human Destiny to raise us to a Sublime Degree of Mastery.

9 The Senior Deacon is the one who, in Masonry, guides the Neofite to true esoterism. Occult means "hidden". Esoterism means "for the few." It is only the few who have the stamina to win thru life's battles. It is only the few who win thru in the symbolic journey on the floor of the Lodge. The Senior Deacon guides the Neofite right up to the esoteric point in his progress where he must leave him because some things in life can be undertaken only on one's own initiative and alone. The Senior Deacon carries the Neofite only as far as the Law of Limitations permits, but from that point, he must surrender his charge to a higher power than his.

10 To the thoughtful Neofite, the Senior Deacon becomes invested with a special significance for the latter becomes, for the time being, the Neofite's consciousness. The Neofite makes a considerable portion of his Masonic journey in a state of darkness and even after he has been brot to Light, he is dependent upon the Senior Deacon for articulation. In this state of darkness, wherein he cannot or may not speak for himself, he hears the voice of the Senior Deacon altho he cannot always see him. This, in a way, symbolizes the clairaudience or power of spiritual audition the Neofite should, legitimately seek to develop permanently within and for himself. He experiences, while in this status of comparative helplessness, a clearer comprehension of the bonds under which his real Self functions. It is as tho he were in a different world, which in truth he really is, a world wherein another must speak for him, answer for him, identify, certify and testify for him. It teaches him what he must do for another whenever he may be called upon in the outer world, to do so.

11 Under the Senior Deacon's care, the Neofite is, seemingly, in another world, a world to him of unreality, wherein he has the power of locomotion to be sure, but only as he is guided by his unseen Protector who becomes his eyes, his mouth and his director, only audition being left to him. The bonds of physical inability become tangible to the Neofite under such circumstances and if he is sensitive, be becomes conscious of a phase of mental existence only, that accentuates his inner perception and gives him a foretaste of the powers that are his birthright if he will only develop them when the ritualistic environment is removed.

12 While in this status of darkness, the Neofite is acutely conscious of the eyes of the Brethren fixt upon him. In this consciousness, he becomes aware of the searching activity of the Masonic emblem of the All Seeing Eye, which is not alone a Christian symbol but one of far greater antiquity. It is the Eye of Isis, searching for Osiris and it is the Eye of Siva which annihilates Time and Space and symbolizes omniscience. But far deeper than either of these ancient symbols, the consciousness of vision concentrated upon him at a time when he is psychologically sensitive to an advanst degree, should remind him of the inner eye within himself, the cultivation and development of which alone, will make him a true Master ultimately because its stimulation into activity means the quickening of other associated faculties of spiritual perception thruout his entire organism.

13 This inner eye, a true all-seeing eye of his own, is the Pineal Gland, whch has been regarded until recently as a vestigial organ, but is now known to anatomists to be a true third eye, with the same elements as are found in the retina of the ordinary optic. Until and unless the Neofite develops this third eye, he cannot travel in foreign countries for he could not recognize them even if he could penetrate into them and it is useless for a blind man to attempt to travel, even in his own country. When the Neofite therefore, sets out upon his Masonic journey in search of Light, he is searching for a light that is not alone of this world, but of subliminal worlds, a light that can finally be born only within himself, and all the symbolism of Masonry leads up to this sublime concept of Light.

14 It is only while man is in a state of darkness to which he has been confined or reduced that he begins to understand the unreality of ordinary environment. If we could retain the quickened faculties we enjoy during our initiatory experience, after the ritual is ended, how different the world would seem to us. We begin to comprehend realities only when our ordinary environment is obliterated from our normal vision. In other words, a given environment blinds us to environments exterior or interior to it. That is why we as mortals, give so little thought to other worlds, exterior and interior to our own. The worlds are there. All human beings profess to believe it. A constantly increasing number affirm that they know it and the testimony of all the sages thru all the ages is to the effect that such worlds exist and that they are perceptible and penetrable to and by the denizens of the world of Matter. They constitute the "foreign countries" of which so much has been said and written in all esoteric literature.

15 The three degrees of Masonry, Enterd Apprentice, Fellow-Craft and Master Mason, correspond to three phases of human consciousness, the Normal, the Sub-Conscious and the Super-Conscious. They also correspond to the three general aspects of Man, Body, Soul and Spirit. The Enterd Apprentice Degree has to do with the things of the Body. It is the basic degree, and as such relates to fundamental principles upon which human life and conduct are developt. That is why the ritual stresses its teachings most sharply upon the candidate or Neofite on his first entrance into the Lodge. The lecture of this degree relates to the properties and qualities of Mother Earth and the states of Matter with which we have to do in the process and progress of mortal existence.

16 The Fellow-Craft relates to the Soul of Man. Soul is a phase of etheric substance that is derived or developt as a definite pabulum from the physical body or rather, the threefold body of Man, physical, etheric and astral. This essence is secreted by the Spirit of Man from the experience assimilated by the threefold Body. Therefore, the Fellow-Craft has much to do with the intellectual nature of Man, for it is in the Mind that Soul finds its vehicle of expression thru what we ordinarily term the intellectual faculties. To the Senior Deacon is entrusted the important responsibility of implanting in the Mind of the Neofite a sincere appreciation of the finer things that can enter into and become a part of Man's being only by way of his mental perception. Menal perception must not be confused with spiritual perception, but our spiritual perception is largely dependent upon the mental avenues of ingress while we exist in mortal garb.

17 It may be seen from the foregoing that the work of the Senior Deacon has to do, symbolically as well as actually, with the Soul of the Neofite. In the Egyptian rituals, the Deacon finds his analog in those beings whose duty it was to care for the soul of the departed in Amenti, while preparing for the final judgment and the weighing of the heart of the deceast. In the Masonic work, the Neofite may well take this lesson to himself, even tho he learns of it long afterward. The work of the Fellow-Craft degree is really a weighing of the heart, for as he works his way upward over an irregular staircase of symbolic numerical values, he is approaching a place in the plan of the Temple that has much to do with his individual evolutionary status. The Soul of Man stands midway as it were, between his Body and his Spirit. Occult anatomists believe that there are specific cerebral areas in what they term the Mid-Brain that have to do peculiarly with the Soul, whatever they may decide the soul to be in the light of modern psychology. However, if this is true, and it seems logical, the Mid-Brain of Man is his individual Middle Chamber in the Spiritual Temple of the Ego, and as the Fellow-Craft Degree applies in its teachings thereto, this degree is, therefore, peculiarly the Degree of the Human Soul.

18 The Senior Deacon of the Lodge, in view of the character of the Fellow-Craft Degree, acts therein not alone as the guide and instructor of a Neofite; he is the Guide and Instructor of a Human Soul. Tho he does his work symbolically, it is nevertheless just as actual and real as tho exprest in any other way. Symbolism is not for pageantry, it is for instruction and instruction is something definite and of determinable value.

19 The Enterd Apprentice Degree relates, as stated, to the Normal Consciousness, that is, the phase of consciousness that has to do with our ordinary cognizance of things while we are in the waking state. The teachings of the Enterd Apprentice Degree relate almost entirely to matters which come within the province of our Normal consciousness as it functions in our social environment, by which is meant our active relations with our fellow-beings.

20 The Fellow-Craft Degree relates to the Sub-Consciousness of Man, that phase of his consciousness that assumedly lies deep beneath the surface, the all-powerful genie that carries on the vital functions of the human machine without volition on the part of the individual. Among these functions are breathing, digestion, assimilation, excretion, absorption, secretion, selection and the active, vital processes of the avenues of sense perception. But the Sub-consciousness of Man does far more than these, as psychologists have discovered and proved. It motivates the individual toward the realization of his depest and innermost ideals, ambitions and desires. It exercises a dominion over him that he has not begun to fathom or understand. The Sub-consciousness makes possible to the individual almost anything in the bounds of reason that he may desire deeply enuf or concentrate upon with sufficient persistence, stedfastness and conviction. It is in the Sub-consciousness that faith, hope, belief and intuition as well as prescience are rooted.

21 Altho the phase of consciousness to which we are now referring is called the "sub"-consciousness, it must not be assumed that it is inferior to the Normal consciousness. It is far superior to the latter and far more potent and powerful. But its nature is such that while all powerful, it can receive only that which is transmitted to it thru the Normal consciousness, hence the term "sub". But once received, it holds fast to the general thought involved with inconceivable tenacity. In fact, it is so tenacious, that complexes and psychoses result from failure to discharge by realization of them, the ideals, desires or wishes involved. Then it becomes problem for the psychoanalyst.

22 In the Fellow-Craft Degree, the instructions of the Senior Deacon are adrest particularly to the sub-consciousness of the Neofite. It is expected that he will and usually does forget many of the things he is taught at the time, as soon as he is releast from the ritualistic procedure, but nevertheless, the essentials of what he has received have been absorbed into his sub-consciousness and will be retained there for the rest of his mortal expression for he is peculiarly in a psychological condition at the time they are imprest upon him.

23 The Senior Deacon's work is therefore, of paramount importance psychologically, for it is operative not only for the moment, but for a life time. No matter what the age of a Mason may be, it will be found to be quite surprising how much he retains even into his advancing years of the teachings inculcated by the Senior Deacon's work. There is nothing dramatic or spectacular about the Fellow-Craft Work. It is almost purely intellectual and of the the quality that can and should be transmuted into a spiritual idea. It is really the foundation of the spiritual qualities that Masonic Initiation and Passing should develop into independent seership and quickened vision.

24 The Fellow-Craft Degree, coming as it does between the Enterd Apprentice and the Master-Mason, teaches the important lesson of equilibrium or balance, without which no Neofite can expect to make satisfactory progress, or, in fact any progress at all, for balance is one of the primary requisites of the spiritual traveler. In Rosicrucian rituals the Neofite is taught that he cannot proceed by the right hand or the left hand paths alone he must pass between the Pillars of M.·. and S.·., likewise, the Neofite in Masonry has been taught that he must pass between the Pillars J.·. and B.·. and learn the lessons their symbology teaches. Justice and Love are the Sephirotic symbols of the Fellow-Craft exemplified thru Strength and Beauty with their concomittant virtues and graces. But the main point is, that the spiritual traveler must choose and pursue the straight road that lies between the columns, learning the lesson of directness and stable equilibrium thereby.

25 King Solomon's Temple is not so valuable to Masons as an architectural accomplishment. Its chief value lies in its symbolism of mental achievement, for it required wisdom to contrive, strength to support and beauty to adorn; all virtues of the mind as well as embellishments of stone and textile. The Temple of the Human Spirit is a far more nobie and glorious building than any that Solomon with all his reputed wisdom ever constructed. As a matter of fact, there is little to support the idea of a building such as King Solomon's Temple is popularly supposed to have been. Solomon or Sol-Om-On is simply the name of Deity in three ancient languages expressive of Divine Wisdom and from this concept came that of a man superlatively wise. But the mortal Solomon's wisdom was not apparent until he had reacht a considerable age and had learned some sad lessons thru experience.

26 For this very reason, Solomon is a figure quite appropriate as a symbol for instruction, for it is only after we have passed thru certain experience that wisdom becomes apparent and we are able to profit by our experience. Our ability to so profit is one of the evidences of the wisdom we are expected to demonstrate and our failure to so demonstrate shows that somewhere along the line, we have neglected to learn and profit by what we have learned. In the Fellow-Craft we are taught the lessons. In the Master-Mason Degree we are to prove whether we are able to profit by them and demonstrate that we have assimilated what we have learned.

27 In a very real sense, the Fellow-Craft Degree might be called the "Degree of the World" for it exemplifies the major part of our active life. During that major part of our active life we are being taught wholesome lessons and then we are expected to put them to work for us. Our success in doing so or our failure to do so spells the measure of our progress and determines the extent to which our ideals may or will be realized. We are constantly functioning thru avenues of sense perception that are supposedly quickened by the instruction we have received from proper teachers. We are supposed to "use our senses" if we expect to make any headway in life. We are expected to demonstrate in practical measure the value and content of the precepts for success which we have been taught.

28 The same is true in the Fellow-Craft Degree. We receive wholesome instruction. We are expected to use our senses, the senses which form such a symbolic part of the Masonic teaching. We are expected to demonstrate when the proper time arrives that we have not only learned our lesson but that we also know how to apply them constructively. In other words, the Senior Deacon is an active agent of the Great White Lodge that knows no earthly representatives so far as organizations are concerned, but which works thru human organizations wheresoever and whensoever it finds a vehicle appropriate to its use. The Senior Deacon, if he takes his position seriously (and if he does not, he has no right to be a Senior Deacon) should always be conscious of the fact that he is serving, not only his Lodge on earth, but also the Lodge on high.

29 Regarding the Fellow-Craft Degree as the "Degree of the World", the Senior Deacon becomes the symbol of our invisible guide thru mortal and wordly experience. Every human being has such a guide. The difficulty is, that most human beings do not know this, simply because as our culture has developt, we have lost sight of the finer forces thru overconcentration upon the coarser because visible forces. Our sensibilities are blinded and influenst by our environment and what we consider necessary to that environment.

30 Mechanical achievement alone does not constitute true culture. It is simply an evidence of the extent to which human ingeniuty can be developt. Greece and Rome had no such mechanical triumfs as we boast, but they left us an architecture and an art that we slavishly copy even at the present time and from which we dare not stray simply because we have not been able to improve upon them. The age of Philosofers laid foundations of metafisics that have not been improved radically until Einstein gave us a new geometry with greater worlds for application.

31 The teachings of the Fellow-Craft do not apply to human inventiveness or ingenuity but to human sensibility in the acquisition mentally of the finer and more enduring things in the soul-life of Man. Mechanical concepts change with each decade, eved in the line of direct progress, but some things there are which do not change but grow more and more valuable as time passes simply because we gain a deeper understanding and appreciation of them. The Senior Deacon who does not attempt to become dramatic or theatrical but who seeks to drive home the teachings office provides, will impress the Neofite in a far more permanent and positive manner. Neofites are quick to discern in their psychological status, the evidences of dramatic effects and these effects do not produce lasting results or carry the psychometric sense of sincerity with them.

32 The Fellow-Craft embodies another most important truth under seemingly simple symbolism. Masons are, of course familiar with the position of the Compasses as spread in this Degree. The Compasses as a whole symbolize Spirit as the Square eymbolizes Matter. The two, points of the Compasses therefore symbolize the two extremes or polarities of Spirit, namely, emotionalism and intellectualism. In the Fellow-Craft Degree, one point of the Compasses is freed. This esoterically, is the point of emotionalism, which the philosofy of the world has taught and still largely teaches us to suppress. By suppressing our emotional instincts and methods of expression we repress our intuitional faculties and stop the action of the spiritual centers or "Chakras" in our finer vehicles, which serve as keys or links to bind together in unity the physical structure and its spiritual counterparts.

33 If we follow obediently the symbology of the Fellow-Craft we shall find that we have freed one important point in our essential make-up, which will give us greater scope of action because of a wider range of perception, contact and appreciation in manifested expression. Repressions are always harmful and in the new found freedom afforded by the measure symbolized in the Fellow-Craft, the Traveler rejoices to a wonderful degree, for then he begins to find or know himself as never before, simply because others find and know him as never before.

34 The Neofite in the Fellow-Craft understand in a general way that he has received more light, but the position of the remaining point of the Compasses reminds him that there is still more for him to seek. He is to seek the release of the other extreme of Spirit, his intellectual faculties, not merely in an academic sense, but as transmuted into spirito-intellectual understanding. This means that what the Neofite cognizes thru his intellectuality, he must spiritualize before he will derive the complete understanding of it, for every thing has two sides or aspects, and the academic knowledge alone is only transitory unless and until it develops the spiritual knowledge enshrined in it.

35 The activity of the Spirit of Man in extracting the essence of experience known as Soul is symbolically shown in the Fellow-Craft by the way in which the Neofite is taught to wear his Apron. One corner, properly arranged, shows the penetration of the Square of Matter by the Triangle of Spirit. This penetration it is, which spiritualizes Man's nature and raises him from the materialistic plane of Enterd Apprentice to this mystical plane of Fellow-Craft, for this degree is truly mystical in every way. The mystic is one who relies upon interior illumination and upon the process of meditation in acquiring truth. The teachings of the Fellow-Craft are in every instance, the kind that require meditation before their essential value becomes apparent. The symbolism of the mystic stairway is, in itself, a symbol of gradual elevation, an ascent which must be made before the Middle Chamber of the Mystic Temple can be attained.

36 In the esoterism of Fellow-Craft, we must not fail to observe that the Twelve Fellow-Crafts who figure so prominently in the Masonic drama, are none other than the human analogy of the Twelve Signs or Constellations, which combine to give to Man the experience it is the purpose of mortal existence to provide. Esoteric or spiritual science teaches us that Man enjoys recurrent lives or rebirths. These are operative twice during the time it takes the Sun by "Precession" to pass thru each Sign of the Zodiac. Thus, there are twenty-four involuntary rebirths of each human individual. In each Sign of the Zodiac, he reincarnates in both the positive and negative expressions of the Sign and by so doing, he obtains all the experience mortal life expression can give him. It is not so much a matter of where, on the earth, he comes to rebirth. It is principally a matter of expressing under the influence each Zodiacal Sign brings to bear upon the earth.

37 There is an old saying that "There's a Judas in every twelve" and so it is that the Twelve Fellow-Crafts are not without those who prove false to the oath of fidelity in the ritual drama, just as there are Signs amongst the Zodiacal group that exercise an influence held by astro-scientists to be inimical to Man's best interests if he permits their influence free play in full scope. It is the Fellow-Craft therefore, that gives us a complete clue to Freemasonry's status as a true religion, not a sectarian or denominational affair but a cosmic or world religion, centering about the solar concept as do all the true nature or world religions.

38 In its application to ordinary human life, the Fellow Craft represents Man at his prime of manhood, in the full vigor of active, constructive work. He has started from the West. He is traveling toward the East but he has not yet arrived. He is, in a way, at meridian, the full of the day of work. He has much to do in preparing the stones for the living structure—curbing desires and passions, conquering habits, divesting himself of the rough edges of untrained and unrestricted energies. He has many refinements to make, many corners to be smoothed and polisht before the stones that are his personal qualities, mannerisms and attributes can fit into a final position in the Temple not made with hands.

39 It has been askt how the Fellow-Craft Degree can relate to the Queen's Chamber in the Great Pyramid correspondences that are so often brot out by Masonic scholars. The answer is plain. It is because the Middle Chamber of the Great Pyramid, designated as the Queen's Chamber, expresses the feminine aspect of Divine Creative Power. Man is a constructor. Woman is essentially the creator in human life. Man impregnates the female, but the female does the creative work in producing the human embryo and bringing it to term. She supplies the building materials, and that which is born of her, is essentially of her substance and nourisht thru and by her own body. Similarly, the Fellow-Craft, despite its masculine name, expresses the feminine aspect and character of the Creative Logos, the Word made Flesh. The Fellow-Craft is not only constructive, it is creative. The Master Mason puts together what the Fellow-Craft has created and prepared.

40 Little has been said regarding the Junior Deacon. He is, in a way, an apprentice to the Senior Deacon. He is not only the messenger of the Senior Warden and the attendant on alarms at the outer door, he also attends to the proper tiling of the Lodge. This is a symbol of the guardianship of the Mysteries he will some day be permitted to expound in the Senior office. Guardianship is an important mission. Whether it be St. Peter at the gates of heaven or Cerberus at the portal of Hades, guardianship is a post of responsibility, one of the details of trust reposed in a man to give him an opportunity to demonstrate his sense of personal responsibility and moral accountability. The faithful discharge of the Junior Deacons office is sure to be rewarded according to the efficiency displayed.

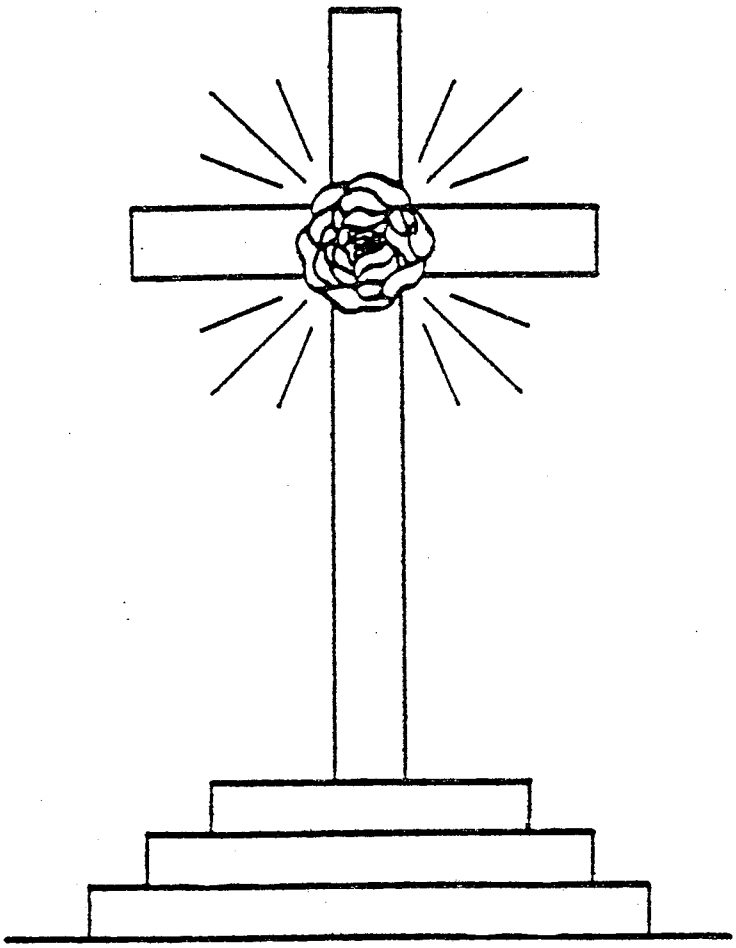
41 The depth of Masonic symbolism is remarkable, considering that it applies to day to conditions that were unknown to the Founders of the Art. The Cable Tow, for instance, three times around the body, signifies the Threefold Body. Physical, Etheric and Astral, well known to esoteric students today, but not so well known to early Masonic Monitor constructors, at a time when esoterism was tabu and it meant loss of social and other forms of prestige to be known as even interested in such matters. The Etheric and Astral vehicles or bodies of man are just as important to consider as his physical body and the Cable Tow symbolism provides this consideration. It is as important for us to circumscribe our wishes and desires as the more outward, visible and recognizable manifestation of them.

42 Chalk, Charcoal and Clay may serve to remind the Neofite who understands, of the Freedom, Fervency and Zeal which should characterize him as a free man, not only physically free but mentally and spiritually so. Among the fifteen winding stairs, 3, 5, 7 and 9 stand out as mystic number from remotest antiquity. The Hebrew Kabala emfasizes them and Pythagoras, who taught that "Number is the principle of all things and that the organization of the Universe is an harmonic system of numerical ratios" gave them special prominence. He taught that 3 represents unity in trinity; 5 the soul derived from this trinity; 7 the threefold body, threefold soul plus Reason, and 9 the complete number of Body, Soul and Spirit in their triune aspects each. The Arabian Kabala and the Greek also hold to similar correspondences.

43 The Fellow-Craft who completes his work creditably is entitled to his wages, which are Corn, Wine and Oil. They have elsewhere in this series of lessons been discust. We are not to regard them so much in the light of wages from the ordinary superficial standpoint as we are to see in them the Neofite's crown of effort. Reward merely as such is not far removed from a mercenary character. Wages that come to us as the crown of our genuine efforts have a different atsmp. The useful worker is surely entitled to a reasonable measure of nourishment, joy and gladness but his concepts of what constitute these on the material plane differ very widely.

44 The Fellow-Crafts who have discovered what it means to work and receive Fellow-Craft wages in the real sense, are united in their concepts of what is required to give real nourishment, true joy and substantial gladness in the highest and ultimate sense and they strive for such wages, not as wages or rewards or in any sense of mercenary compensation,b ut as a goal that means a constructive life well spent in true service and therefore of lasting permanent good. Such workers partake of the good they have accomplisht for others. Their works live after them, and the wisdom of future generations shall proclaim them blessed and the world be better because of them.

45 The Senior Deacons who understand their official position will realize that they are superintendents in the vineyard and on the work of the Temple. Super because above and over the Apprentices committed tho their charge. Intendents because directly in charge of a department of constructive work on the Invisible Temple itself.



THE CRUCIFIED ROSE.

The original symbol of the Rosicrucian Fraternity was a hieroglyphic rose crucified upon a cross. The cross was often raised upon a three-stepped Calvary. Occasionally the symbol of a cross rising from a rose was used in connection with their activities. The Rosicrucian rose was drawn upon the Round Table of King Arthur, and is the central motif for the links forming the chain from which the "Great George" is suspended among the jewels of The Order of the Garter. Hargrave Jennings suspects this Order of having some connection with the Rosicrucians.

From Geheime Figuren der Rosenkreuzer.

THE ROSICRUCIAN ROSE.

The rose is a yonic symbol associated with generation, fecundity, and purity. The fact that flowers blossom by unfolding has caused them to be chosen as symbolic of spiritual unfoldment. The red color of the rose refers to the blood of Christ, and the golden heart concealed within the midst of the flower corresponds to the spiritual gold concealed within the human nature. The number of its petals being ten is also a subtle reminder of the perfect Pythagorean number. The rose symbolizes the heart, and the heart has always been accepted by Christians as emblematic of the virtues of love and compassion, as well as of the nature of Christ—the personification of these virtues. The rose as a religious emblem is of great antiquity. It was accepted by the Greeks as the symbol of the sunrise, or the coming of dawn. In his Metamorphosis, or Golden Ass, Apuleius, turned into a donkey because of his foolishness, regained his human shape by eating a sacred rose given him by the Egyptian priests.

The presence of a hieroglyphic rose upon the escutcheon of Martin Luther has been the basis of much speculation as to whether any connection existed between his Reformation and the secret activities of the Brothers of the Rose Cross.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR ADVANCEMENT TO THE FIFTH DEGREE

1) Photocopy this page and the reverse side, or detach and use this leaf.

2) Answer the Fourth Degree exam overleaf.

3) Complete the form below. Return this leaf to the address shown and enclose your dues-donation (according to your Zone) for the Fifth Degree material.

4) Your exam will be corrected. If you obtain a Pass, your new membership card showing your new active status, your Pass for the Fourth Degree and all the material for the Fifth Degree will be sent you in one package by surface mail.

5) If you fail the exam, we will apply your dues-donation as a credit to your account and send you another exam paper for reexamination. WE WILL NOT ACCEPT SHODDY, HURRIED OR SKETCHY JOTTINGS. GIVE FULL ANSWERS IN THE SPACE PROVIDED. TYPE OR WRITE CLEARLY. DO YOUR EXAM RIGHT THE FIRST TIME AND SAVE YOURSELF THE TROUBLE OF HAVING TO DO IT OVER.

DUES-DONATION FOR THE FIFTH DEGREE (Libers 61-70)

Zone "A" Barbados. $35.00 Barbados Currency.

Zone "B" Commonwealth Caribbean, Netherlands Antilles, and Guyana. US $18.00.

Zone "C" All other countries. US $35.00 or equivalent in negotiable foreign currency.

Notice to all Companions: Material is sent by surface mail. If air mail service is required please include a further U.S. $10.00.

Chevalier Grayson
I.C.E.S./OTG
Worthing W31
Barbados, West Indies

Respected Chevalier

I herewith submit my Fourth exam (overleaf) for your kind consideration. I also enclose my dues-donation for the Fifth Degree, according to my Postal Zone, to help the Great Work. I renew my pledge of confidentiality and give my assurance that all material entrusted to me will be held as personal & confidential and for my eyes only.

_____
Signature

Name & address:

Key #

Amount enclosed $

OVER

FOURTH DEGREE EXAM

1) Give your understanding of the meaning of the Holy Grail.

2) Explain the esotericism of the Masonic Resurrection.

3) Who were the Compagnons?

4) To what cause does the Jungian school of psychoanalysis attribute many of our social ills?

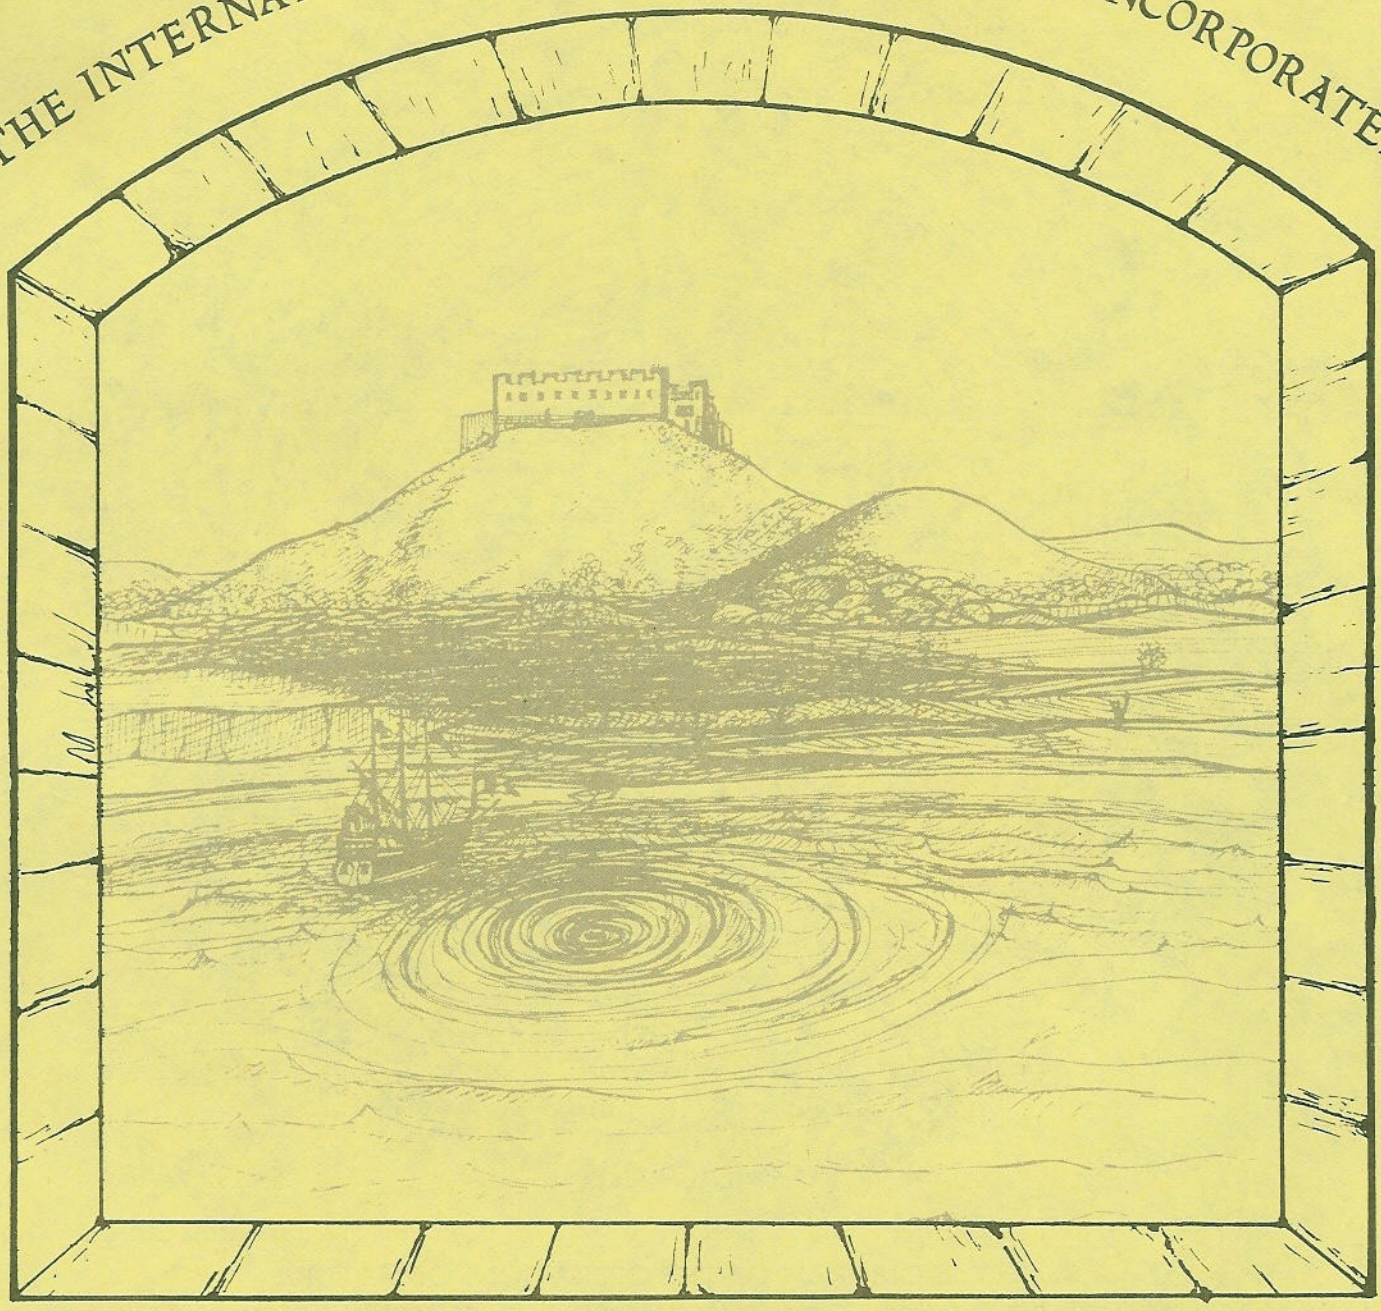
5) Why is it important to balance the opposite polarities within oneself?

6) What is your conception of 'God'?

7) Who were the Gnostics?

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF MARTINISTS INCORPORATED

Worthing - Barbados - West Indies



PLANE III

GRADE: COMPANION

LIBER 61 MID MORNING

Private & Confidential

The International College of Martinists Incorporated, is a non-profit institution existing for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

From Fludd's Collectio Operum.

A SYMBOLIC DIAGRAM OF THE OPERATIONS OF NATURE.

This plate, engraved by de Bry, is the most famous of the diagrams illustrating the philosophic principles of Robert Fludd (Robertus de Fluctibus). Three figures are outstanding links between Rosicrucianism and Freemasonry: Michael Maier, Elias Ashmole, and Robert Fludd. De Quincey considers Robert Fludd to be the immediate father of Freemasonry. (See The Rosicrucians and Freemasons.) Arthur Edward Waite considers Robert Fludd as second to none of the disciples of Paracelsus, even going so far as to declare that Fludd far surpassed his master. He further adds: "The central figure of Rosicrucian literature, towering as an intellectual giant above the crowd of souffleurs, theosophists, and charlatanic professors of the magnum opus, who, directly or otherwise, were connected with the mysterious Brotherhood, is Robertus de Fluctibus, the great English mystical philosopher of the seventeenth century, a man of immense erudition, of exalted mind, and, to judge by his writings, of extreme personal sanctity." (See The Real History of the Rosicrucians.) Robert Fludd was born in 1574 and died in 1637.

The de Bry diagram shown above is almost self-explanatory. Outside the circle of the starry heavens are the three fiery rings of the empyreum—the triple fire of the Supreme Creator—in which dwell the celestial creatures. Within the ring of the stars are the circles of the planets and elements. After the element of air comes the circle of the world (earth). The circle of animals is followed by the circle of plants, which, in turn, is followed by the circle of the minerals. Then come various industries and in the center is a terrestrial globe with an ape-man sitting upon it, measuring a sphere with a pair of compasses. This little figure represents the animal creation. In the outer ring of fire above is the sacred name of Jehovah surrounded by clouds. From these clouds issues a hand holding a chain. Between the divine sphere and the lower world personified by the ape is the figure of a woman. It is to be specially noted that the female figure is merely holding the chain connecting her with the lower world, but the chain connecting her with the higher world ends in a shackle about her wrist. This female figure is capable of several interpretations: she may represent humanity suspended between divinity and the beast; she may represent Nature as the link between God and the lower world; or she may represent the human soul—the common denominator between the superior and the inferior.

Beloved and Respected Companions

THE ESOTERIC TRADITION AND THE TEMPLE

The Rosicrucians (continued)

There are many "Rosicrucian" orders, lodges and societies these days. Some are secret, others operate quite publicly and place large advertisements in the media. All claim to possess secret teachings handed down from a secret brotherhood. These teachings appear to be a combination of various currents of the Tradition such as Gnosticism, Alchemy or Hermeticism and Kabalism. At their best, these orders declare themselves dispensers of truth and say their aim is to help humanity free itself from the thral of material darkness.

Certain writers have used the word "Rosicrucianism" to describe the movements and ideas which followed the publication in Cassel, Germany, between 1614 and 1616, of the three works generally referred to as "The Rosicrucian Manifestos." The first was the famous Fama Fraternitatis, followed by the Confessio and the Chymical Marriage of Christian Rosenkreutz. Their full titles were:

The Fama Fraternitatis or Laudable Fraternity of the Rosy Cross.

The Confessio Fraternitatis or Confession of the Laudable Fraternity of the Most Honourable Order of the Rosy Cross.

The Chymical Marriage of Christian Rosenkreutz in the year 1549.

The first two works were written in the form of declarations, while the third was an alchemical text.

THE LEGEND OF THE FOUNDING OF THE ROSICRUCIAN BROTHERHOOD

The Fama describes the founding of the Fraternity of the Rosy Cross by Christian Rosenkreutz, after his journeys to Damascus, Damcar in Arabia, Egypt and Fez in Morocco. In these cities he met those who were in possession of secret teachings in philosophy, magic, and Kabalism. After synthesizing the best of the teachings he received, Rosenkreutz went to Spain to meet other learned men in the hope of sharing his knowledge with them but he was not taken seriously. Returning to Germany, he chose three other men with whom he founded an order after instructing them in the knowledge he had obtained in the Middle East.

The number was eventually increased to eight, upon which five were sent separately into different countries. Before leaving, each member of the fraternity agreed that he would not follow any profession other than that of healing the sick, and this should be done free of charge; that he would follow the customs of the country where he was sent, and would not draw attention to himself by adopting any particular style of dress; that every year on a certain day he would meet with the others in the house where it all began and which they called the House of the Holy Spirit, or submit his reason in writing; that he would prepare someone to succeed him on his death; that their seal should be the word C.R.; and finally, that the Fraternity should remain secret for one hundred years.

It was also agreed that on the death of Christian Rosenkreutz his body should be placed in a secret vault where it should remain hidden for one hundred and twenty years. The document goes on to state that at the end of this period, a member of the Order found the secret vault, containing the perfectly preserved body of the founder and a number of precious documents and symbols. The vault was then closed, and the Order dispersed.

According to the Confessio, Christian Rosenkreutz was born in 1378 and lived 106 years. Most writers are of the opinion that the story of the life and death of Christian Rosenkreutz was a symbolic explanation of the Order and that Christian Rosenkreutz was the pseudonym for several of its members. Some believe that while the first two works were a collective effort, the Chymical Marriage of Christian Rosenkreutz was written by Johann-Valentin Andreae, who lived from 1586 to 1654. In his old age Andreae denied authorship and claimed that he had never been a member of a Rosicrucian fraternity, but later historians have pointed to the fact that his family crest contained a red cross with four roses, and also that the social ideas which he advocated and the way he lived conformed very much to the Rosicrucian ideal. It is also known that in genuine Rosicrucian orders, members are required by rule not to reveal their identity.

After the publication of the Manifestos, many Rosicrucian Orders and belief-systems influenced by their approach to life developed in Europe. This movement followed two streams. There was a current of ideas developed by a number of scientists, intellectuals and reformers in the social, political and philosophical fields which was characterized by a Utopian vision of the world. The other aspect was the Hermetic and Kabalistic type of Rosicrucianism, which was concerned essentially with occultism and mysticism.

Two well-known members of the Utopian school were René Descartes (1596-1650) and Robert Boyle (1626-1691). Rosicrucians who chose the Hermetic path included Thomas Vaughn, born 1622, and Thomas Heydon (1629-1667). There were of course individuals who were active in both aspects of Rosicrucianism such as Francis Bacon (1561-1626), Thomas Campanella (1558-1639), Robert Fludd (1574-1637), Jan Comenius (1592-1670), and Elias Ashmole (1617-1692).

There is a belief that Francis Bacon was the real author of the more profound of Shakespeare's works. There are writers who claim that some of the latter's writings such as Love's Labours Lost showed some familiarity with Rosicrucian ideas, and that the only man in England who could have written them was bacon. The fact that Love's Labours Lost was first produced in 1595 before the publication of the Fama was shrugged off by the pro-Bacon school, who have pointed out that this meant nothing since the original Rosicrucian Order must have existed before the Fama was published. There is another view that Bacon and Shakespeare were simply members of the same Rosicrucian Order.

In the case of Descartes, it is known that he was very much influenced by Rosicrucian ideas and had tried very hard to contact the Order. Descarte's difficulty stemmed from the fact that the French, in general, had reacted negatively to the great interest which was shown throughout Europe in the publication of the Fama. One day in 1623 notices were put up in Paris purporting to be the work of a secret Rosicrucian brotherhood. The text of the notices was as follows:

> "We, the deputies of the Head College of the Rosy Cross, now sojourning visible and invisible, in this city, by grace of the Most High towards Whom the hearts of sages turn, do teach without the help of books, or signs, how to speak the language of every country wherein we elect to stay, in order that we may rescue our fellow men from the error of death."

The notice quoted above brought considerable opposition to Rosicrucian ideas. There are differences of view among specialists of Rosicrucian history as to whether the Paris notices were hoaxes or really the work of Rosicrucian adepts, and the relationship between Descartes and the movement has never been clearly established.

It was in France that Rosicrucianism was to have a revival which climaxed in the early nineteenth and first years of the twentieth century. Some of the well-known names associated with this revival are Martines de Pasqually (1727-1774), Cagliostro (1743-1795), Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin (1743-1803), Josephin Péladan (1859-1918), Gérard Encausse, also known as Papus (1865-1918), and Stanislaus de Guaita (1861-1897).

Péladan's brand of Rosicrucianism became very popular among the artistic circles at France in the beginning of this century. In 1892 he sponsored a series of artistic exhibitions called the Salons de la Rose-Croix. Some of the well-known artists who had connections with the movement were the painters Gustave Moreau and Georges Rouault and the composer Erik Satie. A number of present-day groups in America claim to derive their authority from various branches of the French Rosicrucian movement, one of these, the AMORC, was founded by Harvey Spencer Lewis (1883-1934). He advanced a theory which claimed that the Rosicrucian movement was established since the days of ancient Egypt by the Pharaoh Tutmosis III and perpetuated by the great Amenhotep IV, better known as Akhenaton. Bearing in mind what was said earlier, that the characteristics and history of Rosicrucianism are a mixture of facts, fables, legends and deliberate invention, you will, as in all things, use your own judgement and come to your own conclusions.

SPENCER LEWIS AND A.M.O.R.C.

According to Spencer Lewis, seventeenth-century rosicrucianism was merely the external manifestation on an Order that had never lost its continuity, despite its tradition of operating in cycles of 108 years of activity and 108 years of silence in any given country. It is claimed by AMORC that in accordance with this tradition, Spencer Lewis was delegated to begin a new cycle of activity in the United States in 1915.

The history of the Rosicrucian Order AMORC, goes along, side by side, with the dynamic life of H. Spencer Lewis, its founder, and first Imperator. AMORC owes him its name and its existence, and its filiations — whether they were authentic or wishful — because there is such a thing as wishful affiliation that one must not confuse with being real (they are perhaps authentic in the spirit and heart of those who claim them to be real, however, the spiritual value of such societies are questionable) that allowed him in 1915, to present it as a regular resurgence of the American rosicrucian movement. AMORC signifies in English: Ancient Mystical Order of the Rose Cross, and this was the sigil AMORC used since the official proclamation of its existence in the year 1915.

Harvey Spencer Lewis was born in November 25, 1883, in Frenchtown, New Jersey, of Catherine Hoffman, a German school teacher and Aaron Lewis, her husband, an expert caligraphist who prided himself on counting among his ancestors, Merri Weather Lewis (1774-1809) of the Lewis & Clark expedition and Sir Robert Lewis. Another Lewis, Ralph, second son of Spencer and his successor as Imperator of AMORC, published under the title Cosmic Mission Fulfilled a biography of his father, pious and documented, of which I will speak about later, more often jumbling the life of the man with the beginnings of AMORC.

H. Spencer Lewis received a protestant education, and later on manifested his attachment and his devotion to the Methodist church to which he belonged. (It is remarkable to notice how protestantism, with the sobriety of its rites and the nudity of its symbolism, has a tendency to push its adherents towards occultism. As it pertains to the Rose Croix of yesterday and today, the fact is not the least bit surprising: Beginning with the Lutherianism of Valentin Andreae and the brothers of the circle of Tubingin, where the apparent birth of the rosicrucian pamphlets of the years 1614 - 1616 took place, and continuing with the devotion to this movement by Michaël Maïer, Robert Fludd, Francis Bacon and so many other zealous protestants, it culminates today with many reformed Christians, clergymen included, belonging to the rosicrucian movements of this century.) According to his son and biographer, Ralph, Spencer Lewis was not only a devout, reformed Christian, but he also had the gift of intuition which manifested since his childhood.

When he was about 20, Lewis exhibited certain psychic abilities to the editor of the Evening Herald of New York, who offered him a job as head of a committee to investigate mediumistic frauds. He was also in charge of the artwork of the paper. In 1904, with the help of the Evening Herald, Lewis formed the Institute for Psychic Research of New York, of which he became President.

He then became interested in esotericism and particularly to one of its major trends: rosicrucianism. And to the rosicrucianism on the American continent.

THE GERMAN PIETISTS OF PENNSYLVANIA

What can one say about rosicrucianism on the American continent? We generally go along with the historians as well as the occultists in considering the German pietist community which settled in Pennsylvania in 1694 as the origin and introduction of rosicrucian ideas on the American continent. This community was formed in Germany by the theologian Johan Jacob Zimmerman (1664-1693). After the death of Zimmerman, Johannes Kelpius (1673-1708) headed the community of which a part left for the American continent, on the Sarah Maria. The group headed by Kelpius arrived in 1694 in the place which was to become Philadelphia, which owes him its name. During that year, the little community settled on the borders of the Wissahickon river, in a place which eventually became Germantown.

Kelpius was the son of a clergyman, and a master of the "liberal arts". It is claimed that he brought over with him a rosicrucian manuscript whose rules and principles he and his community used and applied. Author A. E. Waite also ascribes to this theory in his book Brotherhood of the Rosy Cross published in 1924 and, before him, Julius Friedrich Sachse in his book The German Pietists of Pennsylvania, in 1895. J. F. Sachse (1842-1910) being a descendent of the pietist community, would have inherited part of these manuscripts and a primitive version of the famous Secret Symbols of the Rosicrucians of the 16th and 17th Centuries, published in Altona in 1785 and 1788.

The exact title of the manuscript coming from the Sachse family would have been as follows: Manuscript, Physica, Metaphisica et Hyperphisica. D.O.M.A. An Easy A.B.C. for young students who applied themselves in the temple of the Holy Spirit, illustrated by simple diagrams for the eye, destined for the work of the new year, in the natural and theological light. In folio 12x14 in., 30 engravings marvelously coloured and painted, with texts, towards the year 1700, by a member of the fraternity. It is worth the trouble to compare the title of the book of Altona printed and edited by J. D. U. Eckhardt in 1788: The Teachings of the Rosicrucians of the 16th and 17th Centuries. Or an easy A.B.C. for young students who are working every day in the temple of the Holy Spirit; illustrated for the exercises of the new year in the natural and theological light, etc. In folio 18x11 inclusive, 36 engravings and 18 pages of texts. J. F. Sachse published many ??? (this word is illegible on the original we are translating from - Ed) of manuscript he inherited in his book of the pietists of Pennsylvania. It would be worth the trouble to compare these tablaux to the engravings of Altona.

According to Spencer Lewis, who claimed to be one of the descendents of the rosicrucian pietist community of Germantown, he benefited from the transmission of certain manuscripts, or copies of them. One is led to believe that Mrs. May Banks Stacey, a British occultist who lived in India, was the agent of this transmission although Lewis, to my knowledge, never actually specified that she was. I believe that the source was none other than J. F. Sachse himself, for whom Lewis had a profound admiration and to whom he dedicated his Rosicrucian Questions and Answers with Complete History in these terms:

> "To the memory of Brother Julius Sachse, F.R.C., historian, last descendent of the first American Rosicrucian colony (...)".

"THE ROSICRUCIAN RESEARCH SOCIETY"

I don't know whether it was after it was formed, or in the following years; whatever the case may be, between 1904-1909, the institute of Psychical Research of New York, of which Spencer Lewis was the President, became the cover of a society for the study of apparent teachings of rosicrucianism, the "Rosicrucian Research Society". Around 1908, Lewis asserts, "someone who possessed' papers proving that she held the legitimate title of 'legate' of the Rosicrucian Order of India" asked to be affiliated to the Society. Lewis leaves no doubt that this person was Mrs May Banks Stacey. This English mystic whose role one would believe to be important during the beginnings of AMORC, is not well known. She remains in the shadows. One knows nothing of her initiatic affiliations, nor of any English or Rosicrucian branch from which she claimed affiliation.

At the beginning of 1909, Lewis said he questioned by mail, the Editor in chief of a Paris journal, concerning the possible survival of the rosicrucian movement in France. I do not know that Lewis ever gave the name of this newspaper nor of its editor in chief. Whatever may be the case, Lewis continued with his story; let us hear his witnessing: the response from this editor came to him during the first days of July of the same year, in the form of an invitation to visit France and contact in Paris a language professor residing at Boulevard Saint-Germain. Ralph Lewis brought some new clarity in the biography of his father. Percy Rockefeller, son of the famous John D. Rockefeller, had hired Aaron Lewis, Spencer's father, to do some geneological researches on his family; this entailed Aaron Lewis and his wife Catherine to travel back and forth to Europe over a period of years. In 1909, Catherine, not being able to accompany her husband, was replaced by her son.

On July 24, 1909, Lewis and his father embarked from New York, on the America, towards Cherbourg where they arrived on August 1, then went to Paris. Having to help his father in his researches, Lewis could not visit the language professor before the 7th. This man he tells us, had a store which sold engravings and photographs of French monuments. After their meeting, the professor directed Lewis towards Montpellier, from there he is directed to Toulouse.

TOULOUSE

Just as Lyons, the city of mystery and of the mysteries, and like other cities such as Prague and Moscow; Toulouse, the rosy city, radiated in times past like a lighthouse of illuminism. Many examples of history that we know of, and so many others that may have escaped history, reinforce this opinion, for example: around 1640, an unknown, noble traveller, is received in Toulouse; his elixir soon produced marvels. He claimed to have come from Sicily. Because of the marvels of his medicine, the head of the city gave him the title of "Bourgeoise of Toulouse" and exempted him from paying taxes. The name of this noble traveller is Joseph Balsamo! More than a century before the appearance (in Aix-en-Provence, in 1768 for the first time) of Cagliostro who had the profane name of Joseph Balsamo; in the middle of the 18th century, the Order of the Elus-Cohen was implanted in the rosy city, it remained alive - and there alone - up to the last lustre of the century; towards 1850, the Viscount Lapasse — (Do you remember Viscount Lapasse? Please check Liber 23, lecture #84) — is said to have formed in Toulouse, a rosicrucian circle, having a real or fabricated filiation with Balsamo-Cagliostro. It is from the hermetic circles of Toulouse, friendly and fraternal, that Peladan also claimed filiation, when he started his Catholic Rose+Croix. So it is not surprising that Spencer Lewis came to the mystical village of Toulouse to seek any remnants that may be left of a rosicrucian group.

He arrived in Toulouse in the evening of August 9. I don't know if he was accompanied by his father. He stayed at the Hotel Tivolier, according to the instruction he had received. The next morning, August 10, he went to the "Salle des Illustres" where he met a photographer, officer of the Rose+Croix of Toulouse whom he never identified. The photographer guided him towards an old tower and we know today that this tower was the Capitole.

IN THE DUNGEON OF THE CAPITOLE

Some words about this edifice, of which the following information comes from the best sources: In 1525 the head of the city of Toulouse learned of the Spanish incursions on the border of Aude. To defend the city from eventual invasions and protect the archives of the community, the leaders of the city decided to construct the tower, it was finally finished in 1530. From then on, the function of the tower was to house the papers of the city, it became the "tower of archives", which were to be saved there until 1945-46 when they were transferred to the basement of the municipal library.

Lewis went to the dungeon of the Capitole where he met, so he says, the Grand Secretary of the Toulousian Rose+Croix, dressed in a white robe with embroidered symbols, where he was busily working with his archives, in the first floor of the tower.

Since I don't know the true identity of this so-called Grand Secretary, whom Lewis never identified, I am tempted to deny the actuality of this story, or at least to deny the reality, according to the common use of the term, which does not exclude, according to this episode, a symbolical or allegorical reality.

This temptation is a legitimate one for the historian and many have fallen for it. But, from getting familiar with our man, his thoughts, his life, his writings and mystical works, and from so trying to ascertain what is in his heart, I subscribe to a belief in a partial reality of these events, above a possible allegorical reality. Additional facts that have come my way recently reinforce this opinion, but they do not prove it. It is up to you, the reader, to make up your own mind.

At the dungeon of the Capitole, Spencer Lewis could only have met the Archivist of the place, that is, the Archivist of the commune: François Galabert. This man had two young assistants, but the circumstances of Lewis' story would show that they had nothing to do with the meeting. Notice also that the building was a public place, the Archivist could not have been walking around in a white robe! Nor would his assistants be absent. Let us therefore give all this a symbolical reality rather than an actual one.

Who then was this François Galabert? He went to the "Ecole des Chartes" in 1897. In 1899 he became the assistant of Charles Samaran, who became the director of the archives of France, the classification of the archives of the Lordship of Châteaurenault (Indre et Loire) brought to Paris for this purpose by their owner. In 1902, he left Paris to become the Archivist of Ariège. In 1904 he was nominated as Archivist of Toulouse where he started fulfilling these functions on October 1st of the same year, as Director of the old section of the Capitole. On May 4th 1920, the municipality made him head of the Library in addition to the management of the archives. in 1937, he left the library, being tired because of his age, but remained the head of the archives until 1943. And he remained working in establishing a general repertoire of the municipal archives, until his death in 1957. His work as an archivist and librarian are stupendous. His modern successors look upon him with great admiration.

Galabert was a member of many intellectual societies of Toulouse: archivist of the ariègeoise Society of sciences, letters and arts; member of the archeological society of mid France notably. This last organization also belonged to the Vicount of Lapasse, alleged founder of the Toulousian Rose+Croix. But Lapasse had been dead for more than 30 years when Galabert came to Toulouse. In Toulouse, Galabert taught paleography at the faculty there and he was there at the beginings of relations after 1918 between Toulouse and certain American universities, notably Columbia University.

This means that our archivist looks like what we could picture as the Grand Secretary of the Toulousian Rose+Croix in relation with the United States regarding rosicrucian activities. Upon these relations, those of the Rose+Croix of Toulouse, and those of H. Spencer Lewis in the United States another element surfaces, in anticipation of what is going to follow, which comes from Lewis himself. This is a phrase that the Grand Master of the Rose+Croix of Toulouse would have pronounced: "Our Secretary will send you in a sealed letter, other documents under the protection of the French Government." Concerning correspondence, would Galabert have benefited from this "protection of the French Government"?

Another detail coming from Lewis: the identity of the Grand Master of the Toulousian Rose+Croix in 1909. He only referred to him under the initial "L" in his "Le récit d'un pélerin vers l'Est", (Account of a Pilgrim Travelling East). In his "Complete History of the Order" he names him: "the Venerable Lasalle, well known author of numerous rosicrucian documents". The only Lasalle known to have been associated with initiatic activities was the colonel and dignitary of the philosophic Rite who signed a charter in 1811. A century separates Lewis from his supposed initiator, provided that he was talking about the same person. But let me bring your attention here to something which I have not yet deciphered: there was in Toulouse, at the beginning of this century, a photographer named Lassalle (with two "s") who died in 1915. This Lassalle had dealing with Galabert with whom he collaborated in the archives to photograph documents. Let us remember that Lewis declared that a rosicrucian officer he met at the "salle des Illustres" was a photographer.

This does'nt prove anything and any ideas I have are not certainties. And I don't know whether Galabert ever had esoteric interests, nor the photographer Lassale.

THE INITIATION OF LEWIS

Let us pursue our analysis of Lewis' story. The Grand Secretary, at the dungeon of the Capitole, gave him a letter of recommendation and an address. He goes there: its an old domain, the Grand Temple of the Order, located in the old city of Tolosa. Let me just make plain by saying that this domain was never identified and that, according to Lewis, it was demolished a few years later and the Order had to transfer its location. In this place, Lewis supposedly met numerous officers of the Rose+Croix of France, among which: the Grand Master Lasalle, and there also he supposedly received an important initiation.

On this initiation, Raymond Bernard lifted a corner of the veil in an interview published in the "Editions Rosicruciennes", in response to my questioning. Primarily, he declared that the initiation received by Spencer Lewis in 1909 was particularly related to the charge that he was to assume, and had nothing to do with the initiations that AMORC transmits nowadays to its membership. He has in other places stated that this particular initiation is studied in detail in the high degrees of the Order called the illuminati section, where certain documents having to do with it are presented to rosicrucians who swear never to reveal the contents.

This could have something to do with the initiation to a degree whose existence is found in the inner Rose+Croix of Hieronymus in the 1930's and which may still be practiced today in AMORC: the 13th degree called "Imperator". In a letter found in the Lelarge collection, Jean Mallinger wrote that Spencer Lewis signs all his charters: "R+C XIII" which would indicate that he was initiated into this particular degree. But this does not prove that he received it in Toulouse rather than Belgium. Other officers of AMORC in the USA have, after Lewis, received this same initiation, probably from the hands of Hieronymus himself, beginning with Ralph Lewis, his son and successor, to whom it was conferred in 1936.

Concerning the initiation of 1909, Hieronymus could not have been the initiator of Lewis. This hypothesis does not hold water since at that time Dantinne was living in Huy, Belgium, and his first voyage to France is dated 1913. But it is still possible that Spencer Lewis was initiated by Dantinne in the Belgium Rose+Croix during the beginning of the 1930's or even earlier.

In passing, let us do away with the hypothesis that was proposed, according to which les Frères aînes de la Rose-Croix (F.A.R.C.) [the elder brothers of the Rose+Croix] or those pretending to be, could have given birth to AMORC and sponsored its formation. On the F.A.R.C., you need only consult one source: M. Roger Caro, their representative, Patriarch of the Universal Church of the New Alliance. Caro, a disciple of the alchemist Jean Deleuvre, published, in 1970, The Agenda of the F.A.R.C. where the Order is presented as having been formed in the 14th century, being the remnants of a Templar Order. Around 1972 the F.A.R.C. removed themselves from the Church of the New Alliance for 25 years. M. Caro, in 1981 confirmed to me that there was no relationship between Spencer Lewis and F.A.R.C. using these words:

"You are perfectly right in affirming that F.A.R.C. never had any initiatic relationship with the Imperator H. Spencer Lewis of the AMORC. His name appears nowhere in our files, and I have myself exposed this by describing the progression of the alchemical operations executed by the Imperator H. Spencer Lewis in America ... and that are opposed to the teachings of F.A.R.C.."

Concerning the alchemical operations of H. Spencer Lewis, we will come back later. During a visit with Raymond Bernard, he affirmed that there was no relationship between F.A.R.C. and AMORC. At least in light of the hypothesis studied here, it is not certain that F.A.R.C. precedes AMORC.

Still according to Spencer Lewis, in the days following his initiation, he witnessed in a big building in the Toulouse region located on the banks of the Garonne, where the rosicrucian monestary was located, a monthly meeting of the illuminati, interior circle of the Order. And there he supposedly met the editor and chief of the Toulouse newspaper; a certain comte Bellcastle-Ligne, secretary of the international rosicrucian council: a certain M. Verdier, sovereign grand commander of the rosicrucian illuminati of France. I know nothing of the comte Bellcastle-Ligne but AMORC published in its brochure entitled Rosicrucian Documents a photocopy of a typed letter, written in English, by this Verdier, dated from the Hotel Biltmore, in New York, from September 1st 1915, addressed to Spencer Lewis. The signature indicates "Jérôme J. Verdier, 13th F.R.C./France". The letter indicates that the author is just passing through New York, accompanied by an officer of the 13th degree of the AMORC of England and asks Spencer Lewis for a private interview, also in other places presenting the felicitations of the Rose+Croix of France. But this letter does not prove that Verdier existed anyway.

BIRTH OF A.M.O.R.C.

Upon returning to New York, Lewis received from Mrs. May Banks Stacey the "gem of the key" (the final go-ahead) of rosicrucian authority that she said she held for the Grand Master of the Indian Branch. After seven years of preparatory work, the first meeting to organize AMORC was held February 8, 1915 in New York, presided over by H Spencer Lewis. (Mrs. Banks Stacey had also transmitted the last necessary documents, on November 25, 1914 on his 31st anniversary.) On March 3rd, 1915, the first meeting was held semi-publicly, to announce the formation of the Order. Then, on the 23rd of the same month, a second meeting of the founding members took place in New York and, on April.1, 1915, the American Supreme Council was formed. Mrs. Banks Stacey proposed that Spencer Lewis be elected Grand Master General of the Order. The decree that was published on this occasion was published by AMORC in its Rosicrucian Documents. On May 13, the first members of the Order were initiated. In the month of June, AMORC published its first official manifesto. The first Lodge was established in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania on November 25, 1915.

In order to demonstrate his powers, the Imperator H Spencer Lewis performed in June 1916 in New York a transmutation of zinc into gold, which was published in an AMORC magazine called American Rosae Crucis. Fr. Wittemans also wrote of this transmutation in his History of the Rose+Croix. This public transmutation took place in the presence of a journalist of the New York World, in the New York AMORC Temple. No one seemed to have doubted the reality of this operation to the delight of those who wanted to think of it as authentic. In any case we can note that there is a divergence in method between Lewis and the alchemists of old Europe in certain analogies with the particular operations of Frédéric Jollivet-Castelot to whom we will come back later.

From July 31st - August 4th 1917, the first National Convention of AMORC was held in the city of Pittsburgh, during which the national constitution of the Order was adopted.

LEWIS IN EUROPE

In 1926, Spencer went to Europe for a second time, accompanied by his second wife, Martha, and the Grand Master of AMORC for Florida. This voyage took them to France and Switzerland, maybe to England, during the months of August and September.

In France, Lewis would have participated in "the 29th international congress of the brothers of the Rose+Croix" held in Toulouse. According to his account, he also met other rosicrucian officers, in Paris, "in an important reception given during the congress for the highest ranking rosicrucian officers of Europe". Was Jollivet-Castelot one of these officers? Jollivet-Castelot wrote a letter dated April 27, 1926 to one of the AMORC officers:

"You may know that the Rose+Croix branch that I am in charge of, specializes in alchemy and you are surely aware of my researches in the transmutation of metals, specially of silver to gold. I would be happy to know if the Imperator "Spencer Lewis" wishes to have an interview with me concerning this and come in contact with the Alchemical Society of France."

Jollivet-Castelot points to the fact that he is not sure that he could meet with the Imperator Lewis since he had to be absent during the months of August & September, but he would try to write to him at least. I do not know if the meeting took place in 1926, but it appears that these two men really did meet during the 1930's. According to Spencer Lewis, Jollivet-Castelot was an honorary member of the AMORC of America while belonging to the AMORC of France. It appears that Lewis himself was made a member of the Alchemical Society of France, I do not know when, maybe during the 1934 convention.

I know nothing of the supposed sojourn of Lewis and those who accompanied him, in Switzerland, this same year, 1926, where he said that he witnessed another rosicrucian gathering during which he received a document recognizing him. Let us bring to light here that at this same time, in Switzerland, a group of occultists gathered around Dr. Bertholet (1883-1965). In 1927 Dr. Bertholet formed the Vaudoise Society for Psychical Studies that would have a very strong influence in the AMORC of Switzerland, which was organized totally and independently of H. Spencer Lewis in 1933.

There is no trace that Spencer Lewis was ever in Belgium during his 1926 trip to Europe.

On the prior dealings between the American AMORC and the Belgian rosicrucians gathered around Dantinne, a glimmer of light was shed by Lewis himself in the form of a correspondence with F. Wittemans, in 1928. Wittemans, who was a Belgian Senator and a historian of the rosicrucian movement, was made an honorary member of the Belgian Rose+Croix this same year, 1928. According to his account, it was in the beginning of 1928 that Lewis was informed that a certain rosicrucian meeting was to be held soon in Egypt and in Europe the following year. A new trip was then organized by AMORC, and in January 4, 1929, a group of rosicrucians left the headquarters of the Order, in San Jose, California, headed by Lewis. This group went to Egypt, to Luxor, where an important initiation was suposedly conferred upon Lewis on February 14, 1929. Of this initiation, I know nothing. Then this group left for Europe and visited France, Switzerland, Germany and England.

In 1930, Spencer Lewis associated himself with a German occultist, Heinrich Tränker (1880-1956) who, with the nomen of "Recnartus", had formed the Collegium Pansophiae, a very restrained rosicrucian group. Tränker also inherited the succession of Theodore Reuss (1855-1923) at the head of the Ordo Templi Orientis (O.T.O.), which was formed by the latter in 1906. Lewis received a patent from the O.T.O. which was signed by Reuss in 1921. This body was made up of a system of grades similar to the degrees of the illuminati of Bavaria and made use of the symbol of the Rose+Croix. This Order taught magical sexual practices that no one, even in these days, would look upon as being respectable, and which were violently fought during the time of Lewis.

AMORC IN EUROPE

At the beginning of the 1930's, the national jurisdictions of AMORC were seeing the light of day throughout Europe, more or less independently of the American Order: in Italy under the leadership of the Grand Master Dumstano Cancellieri, in England under the leadership of the Grand Master Raymond Andrea. Also, in Germany, in Austria, and Denmark, and Holland. An AMORC Order was also formed in France, around 1931, under the grand mastership of Dr. Hans Grüter, surgeon-dentist, of Swiss origin, living in Nice. Grüter had for Grand Secretary Jeanne Guesdon (1884-1955) who succeeded him in 1945, as Grand Master of AMORC for French-speaking countries.

Jeanne Guesdon lived in France up to 1912 when she left for England for a few months, then went to Havana, where she lived from 1913-1930, while working for the Brandière company, of which she became secretary and eventually director.

In January 12, 1926, she joined AMORC. Jean Guesdon was in close relationship with the Belgium rosicrucians and she often acted as Lewis's ambassador (i.e. mediator/interpreter). At the beginning of 1933 Edward Bertholet formed the Swiss AMORC, a society which is independent of the American AMORC, but closely related to the Belgian Rose+Croix and the French AMORC. The Swiss AMORC received its charters from the interior Rose+Croix of Hieronymus on the one hand, and the "frères illuminés de la Rose+Croix" (Illuminaten Brethren of the R+C) on the other. It would appear that the AMORC of France also would have gotten its patents from these two organizations. This brotherhood of the Illuminated Brethren of the Rose+Croix was headed by August Reichel, a German occultist who fled to Switzerland with the rise of Nazism, who also was the Grand Master of the Order of Unknown Samaritans, since 1924. Reichel was a disciple of Frédéric Jollivet-Castelot, who was the editor of the magazine Rose+Croix, in Douai, as an organ of the alchemical society of France. From 1935 onwards, the magazine also became the organ of the French and Swiss jurisdictions of AMORC. The center of the Swiss AMORC was the Lodge "Fiat Lux" of Lausanne which was working in close relations with a similar Lodge, of Prague, which was the heart of AMORC of Czechoslovakia.

MODERN AMORC

Spencer Lewis died on August 2nd, 1939. In his will he left the Order to his son Ralph, who was then Supreme Secretary, to succeed him as Imperator. On August 12, the appointment was confirmed by a vote of the Supreme Grand Lodge of the AMORC of America. After the Second world war, the independent jurisdictions of AMORC came under the umbrella of the American Order. After the break with the Belgian rosicrucians gathered around Hieronymus 1n 1951, a first Lodge of AMORC was built in Brussels in 1954 under the auspices of the French jurisdiction of the Order. Jeanne Guesdon died on March 29th 1955. Raymond Bernard succeeded her as Grand Master on July 8, 1959 and was himself succeeded by his son, Christian, who was installed on August 7, 1977, whose authority as Grand Master extends over all French-speaking countries.

WHO ARE THE ROSICRUCIANS?

It seems characteristic of rosicrucian groups to go to great trouble to try to prove their authority and prevent rivals from laying claim to the rosicrucian banner. The Rosicrucian Fellowship of Oceanside, California; the Quakertown Rosicrucians of Pennsylvania, who trace their ancestry from P. B. Randolph; and AMORC, are the three most active of the American groups. Among these three there has been quite a lot of hostility, culminating in a long feud between Swinburne Clymer of the Quakertown Rosicrucians and AMORC but in the exchanges no really profound issues were ever touched upon, it was mostly mudslinging.

R. Swinburne Clymer was H. Spencer Lewis' archrival. Clymer, among other charges, accused Spencer Lewis of forging documents and arming himself with phoney and bogus charters; he challenged Spencer Lewis' own claim to the designation "doctor", stating that Spencer Lewis had bought the title from a "diploma mill". Lewis challenged Clymer to a public debate and offered to pay all the costs, Clymer refused the invitation and in turn demanded that Lewis submit to investigation all the documents he possessed. This Lewis was not willing to do.....

Other organizations have been unfriendly towards AMORC; for example: in the early 1970's the United Grand Lodge of English Freemasonry released a communication requiring all English Freemasons who were members of AMORC to resign from that organization ... or else relinquish their masonic membership. This caused a stir resulting in at least one masonic lodge known to this speaker, to close. AMORC remains today the largest of the rosicrucian groups, well organized and, to its credit, it has brought the esoteric and mystical light to thousands around the world who might never have become involved otherwise. The present Imperator of AMORC (1989) Gary L. Stewart, says (Gnosis #12) "...The word "Rosicrucian" itself is a generic word. We can't say that it identifies one organization, whether it be AMORC or any other organization, for that matter. It is a generic word that's used in many different ways by many different people, but I think the word, as it evolves from the symbol that is used, indicates what I would like to call an egregore (a spiritual substance or essence) which is what is important to preserve.".

WHAT IS ROSICRUCIANISM?

Perhaps at this time we could ask what really is rosicrucianism? Is it a particular philosophy? (If so is it the philosophy of a particular person or group?) Or is it a combination of esoteric and even exoteric arts and sciences? Could it be, like the gnosis, a manner of perception, rather than a particular teaching or belief? Is it religious, political, philosophic or scientific?

The first person to widely promote "rosicrucianism" in America was Paschal Beverly Randolph who began his occult activities around 1858 and built up a rosicrucian organization under his leadership. He was honest enough to say that his rosicrucianism came mainly from his own mind. Born in 1825, Randolph became an orphan at an early age and after a hard childhood worked as a sailor and travelled widely. He pursued a course of self-education and went on to write an extraordinary range of books, including works on anthropology, philosophy and fiction. He is reported to have been a spellbinding lecturer. The teaching that Randolph outlined in his Eulis! is largely concerned with the correct use of sex and its powers. Christopher McIntosh, a respected writer, historian of ideas and the author of several books on the history of esotericism says:

> "It is interesting that Randolph, having discovered sexual magic independently, should have come to the conclusion that this was the true basis of Rosicrucianism. There is evidence that earlier Rosicrucians were interested in sex as a magical force and described it symbolically in their treatises. Sexuality is a curiously recurrent theme among Rosicrucian apologists, and Randolph clearly regards it as central to the whole philosophy."

On the teachings given out by AMORC, the late Imperator Ralph Lewis says: "The Rosicrucian Order is founded upon the basic precepts, doctrines, and teachings that have descended through the centuries of its existence. Its mystical and metaphysical principles arose from the investigations of the ancient mystery schools of the East and of ancient Greece. These were later added to by certain of the Hermetic teachings as promulgated through such works in Alexandria, Egypt, during its cultural height .....It must not be assumed, however, that the teachings as they are now presented in the official monographs, or as they are expounded in our Lodges, Chapters, and Pronaoi throughout the world, are pristine in form, that is, unchanged and as they were originally conveyed to members centuries ago. The terminology of the past was mostly in theological terminology, much of which is now archaic and would not be comprehensible to the modern student without considerable unnecessary reference. Furthermore, the Rosicrucian teachings were never intended to be static and dogmatic as are many of the other philosophical systems and religious teachings today. The Rosicrucian teachings are constantly being added to as a result of the advance in education ....." * I must add, for myself, that I do not know of any sexual magical practices in the AMORC curriculum.

UNDER THE AUSPICES OF THE ROSE & CROSS

There are many rosicrucian orders. Some of them would, of course, like their faithful to believe that their particular branch "is the only true and authentic order". But ... beyond the true and the wishful filiations which make up the history of rosicrucianism since the time of Johann Valentin Andreae and the time of the fama fraternitatis, this proclamation of the rosicrucian fraternity, beyond groups and initiates, this unique fraternity, this informal and intangible brotherhood of the elect of God, ... does it not escape the history of men and the historian?

The ideals and influence of this august fraternity is nonetheless real and initatic societies who claim to be under the inspiration of all that is symbolized by the Rose upon the Cross, have as a goal to carry out its message by bringing us closer to the state where knowledge and wisdom merge.

*Rosicrucian Forum, December 1975, page 52.

The rosicrucian movement which is exposed in this present work and which culminated in the formation of the now dead FUDOSI, represents a moment in the history of these beings, these searchers, these guides who were fallible during their times, because they were only men, but engaged on the Path, each one according to the aspiration of his heart and his intelligence.

THE ROSE+CROIX

In the Temple tradition a distinction is made between a "Rose-Croix" and a "rosicrucian". The word Rose-Croix is used to differentiate between a person who has reached a level which foreshadows the next important stage of the evolution of humanity, and someone who is merely a member of a rosicrucian order or movement. A Rose-Croix has been described as someone whose spiritual attainment has enabled him or her to obtain practical knowledge of the secret significance of the Rose and the Cross.

According to the Temple tradition such rare individuals do not obtain their authority from any type of organization, though they have used orders or movements to transmit their ideas. Some of these individuals have fulfilled their mission posing as ordinary personalities, and the knowledge of their true identities and the extent of their contribution to the evolution of humanity has died with them. Of this handful of beings the only known figures who were confirmed by the Tradition were Cagliostro and the mysterious Comte de Saint Germain.

CAGLIOSTRO Despite the strange personality he presented to the world, it is now accepted in esoteric circles that Cagliostro was not the rascal and mountebank which popular history made him out to be, but was one of the great men of the eighteenth century. He is now considered to have been secretly behind many ideas which influenced the spiritual, social, and political thought of his time. It is said that he affected his particular personality because it enabled him to become the confidant of people in high places, and thereby indirectly to influence events.

THE COMPTE DE SAINT GERMAIN The Compte de St. Germain is reported to have astounded his eighteenth century contemporaries with his longevity, knowledge and strange powers. Like Cagliostro he managed to move in circles where he was able to influence kings and rulers from behind the scenes.

Raymond Bernard, a French rosicrucian, mentions in his book Rencontres avec l'insolite a mysterious Rose-Croix called Maha whom he said he encountered from time to time in different European countries. Some contemporary works dealing with rosicrucianism refer to the existence of a secret fraternity — The Elder Brothers of the Rose-Croix — which is said to faithfully follow the tradition as outlined in the Fama.

The esoteric Tradition considers the rosicrucian movement as one of the manifestations of the eternal Temple. A genuine order of the Temple today should be able to transmit, along with other teachings of the primordial wisdom, the essential message of the true Rose-Croix. This does not mean of course that one can expect to find Rose-Croix adepts behind every worthy esoteric order. Rather the ideals and inspiration of the Rose-Croix should be present in a genuine order, in ways which will permit members to progressively approach this high state of spiritual realization.

In conclusion, despite its flowery eighteenth century style, not many better descriptions of the state of being a Rose-Croix can be found than the following statement attributed to Cagliostro:

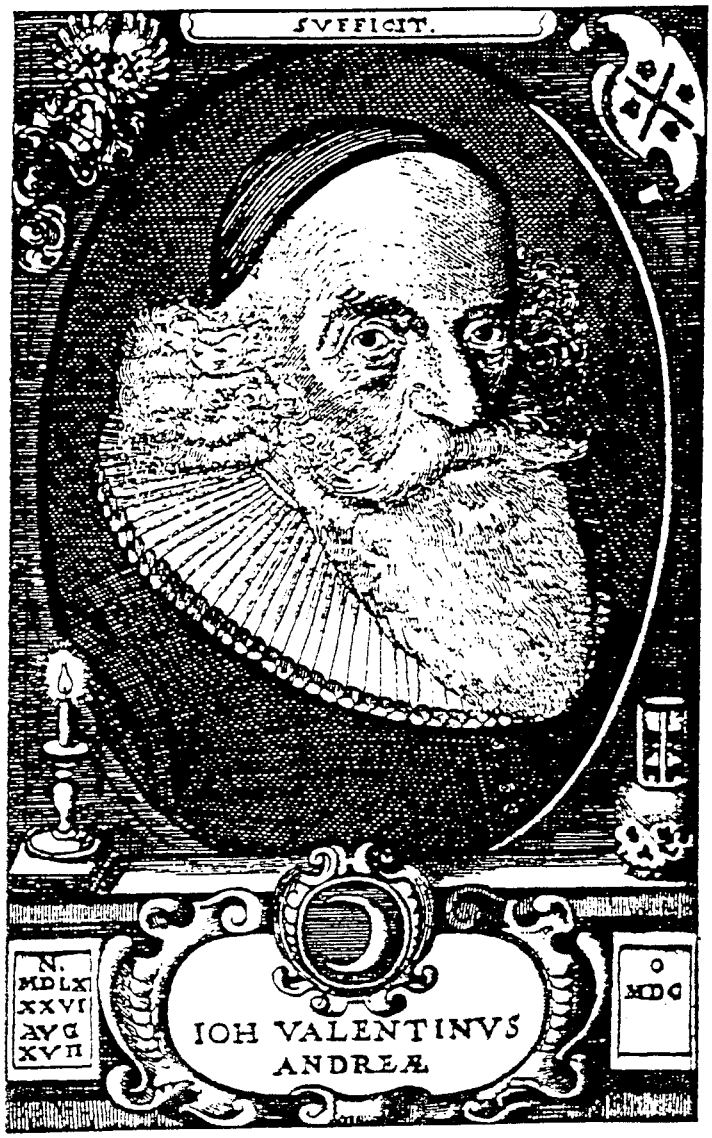
> "I hail from no particular epoch or place; beyond time and space my spiritual being lives its eternal existence and, if I turn my mind within, remounting the stream of the ages, and extend my consciousness towards a state of being far beyond that which you can perceive, I become whoever I desire. Consciously participating in the Absolute Being, I adapt my actions according to where I find myself. My name is that of my function and I choose them both because I am free: my country is where momentarily I halt my steps. You may pride yourselves on the past glories of your ancestors, who are strangers to you; or you may give yourself importance with illusory thoughts of future glory, which, alas, may never be yours; I, I am he who Is. I was born not of the flesh but of the spirit. My name which is of me and from me, the one which I have chosen in order to appear amongst you, is that which I claim. That which I was given at birth, that which I was called in my youth, like those from other times and places I have left behind, discarding them as I would discard unfashionable clothes, now become useless.
>
> "Here I stand — a Noble Traveller; I speak and your soul trembles, recognizing words from long ago; a voice within you, long silenced, responds to my call; I act, and peace returns to your hearts, health to your bodies, hope and courage to your souls. All men are my brothers, all lands I hold dear; I journey through them so that everywhere I pass the Spirit may descend and find its way to you. Of kings, whose power I respect, I ask but the hospitality of their lands, and where this is granted me I pass, doing as much as I can, but merely pass. Am I not a Noble Traveller?

"Like the South wind, like the dazzling light of the midday sun which characterizes the awareness of things and active communion with God, I am heading North to the mist and the cold, leaving in my wake parts of myself, exhausting and diminishing my energies at each resting place, but leaving you a little light, a little warmth, a little strength, until finally it is finished, and I will have reached the end of my journey, the hour when the Rose will bloom on the Cross. I am Cagliostro..."

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

Grail lecture #7 will appear in the following Liber.

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-



From a rare print.

JOHANN VALENTIN ANDREÆ.

In certain esoteric circles there are vague rumors which intimate that the humble personality of Johann Valentin Andreæ masked an exalted emissary of the Rose Cross. While there is sufficient evidence at hand to establish the actual existence of a German theologian by the name of Andreæ, there are many discrepancies in his biography which have not been cleared up to the satisfaction of critical investigators. A comparison of the face shown above with that of Sir Francis Bacon discloses striking resemblances in spite of the differences due to age. If Lord Bacon borrowed the name and identity of William Shakspere, he could also assume, after his mock funeral in England, the personality of Johann Valentin Andreæ. The crescent below the bust is significant, as it also appears upon the crest of Lord Bacon to denote that he was the second son of Sir Nicholas Bacon. Furthermore, the four letters (O MDC) in the frame at the lower right corner of the plate, by a very simple Baconian cipher, can be changed into numbers whose sum gives 33—the numerical equivalent of the name Bacon. These several points of interest, when considered together, go far towards clearing up the mystery surrounding the authorship of the first Rosicrucian manifestoes.

From Chymische Hochzeit.

THE CREST OF JOHANN VALENTIN ANDREÆ.

The reference to four red roses and a white cross in the Chymical Marriage of Christian Rosencreutz identified Johann Valentin Andreæ as its author, for his family crest, shown above, consisted of four red roses and a white cross.

61 21

Chymiſche Hoch-zeit:

Chriſtiani Roſencreütz.

ANNO 1459.

Arcana publicata vileſcunt; & gratiam prophanata amittunt.

Ergo: ne Margaritas obiice porcis, ſeu Aſino ſubſterne roſas.

Straßburg/
In Verlägung / Lazari Zetzners.

Anno M. DC. XVI.

From Rosencreutz' Chemical Marriage.

TITLE PAGE OF 1616 EDITION OF CHYMISCHE HOCHZEIT: CHRISTIAN ROSENCREUTZ.

The most remarkable of all the publications involved in the Rosicrucian controversy is that of The Chemical Marriage, published in Strasbourg. This work, which is very rare, should be reproduced in exact facsimile to provide students with the opportunity of examining the actual text for the various forms of cipher employed. Probably no other volume in the history of literature created such a profound disturbance as this unpretentious little book. Immediately following its publication the purpose for which the volume was intended became the subject of popular speculation. It was both attacked and defended by theologians and philosophers alike, but when the various contending elements are simmered down the mysteries surrounding the book remain unsolved. That its author was a man of exceptional learning was admitted, and it is noteworthy that those minds which possessed the deepest understanding of Nature's mysteries were among those profoundly impressed by the contents of The Chemical Marriage.

61 22

MARTINIST FILIATION AND ETHICS

1) The Martinist Initiatic line begins with Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin. L-C de S-M was a pupil of Martinez Pasquales, founder of the Order of Elect Priests. Saint Martin later disassociated himself with the Elect Priests and became aligned with the Order of Unknown Philosophers, he formed small groups which were variously known but mostly called Society of Initiates or Society of Intimate Friends. Here we see the initials S.I. which allude to the Initiation he was transmitting. This Initiation always has been and always is transmitted from person to person, from Initiator to initiate, via an intimate ceremony.

2) The French mystic Papus received this Initiation which he later referred to as a "bequest". He discovered that some of his friends had also received it. This Initiation was being given freely from person to person and not under the aegis of an organized body, Papus thought it was too precious a heritage to be left unattended, he therefore decided to found an organization to secure and guarantee its perpetuation. Papus founded the organization around 1889 and called it the Martinist Order to commemorate the name of Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin and Martinez Pasquales. While the name of the Order commemorates these two mystics, the Initiation is in fact that of the Unknown Philosophers. Saint Martin actually adopted the name "Unknown Philosopher" as a pseudonym and all his books were written under this name --- he never used his own name.

3) After the death of Papus, the Martinist Order became divided into two branches. This division occurred because Teder, who became Grand Master after Papus, decided to place a prerequisite that only persons who were Master Masons could enter the Martinist Order. This brought about confusion since, for one thing, it debarred the Sisters. The original Order then had two divisions, one accepting only men who were Master Masons and the other which adhered to the original constitutions and accepted both men and women. The "Masonic" branch moved its headquarters to Lyons and became known as 'The Martinist Order of Lyons'. The other "free" branch, headed by Victor Blanchard, add the adjective Synarchy to distinguish it from the Lyons Order and became known as the "Martinist Order and Synarchy." Several years later a third group was formed and called itself the Traditional Martinist Order. The first Grand Master of the TMO was V. E. Michelet, he was succeeded by Augustin Chaboseau.

4) in 1934, in Paris, an organization called the Fédération Universelle des Ordres et Sociétés Initiatiques, better known by its abbreviation F.U.D.O.S.I. was formed. This was a confederation of Initiatic Orders and Societies who came together at the time for their mutual well-being and protection. This organization was disbanded in 1951 after certain discontentments prevented it from continuing harmoniously. The history of the FUDOSI and the Martinist Order is well documented and covered in the I.C.E.S Libers. The Ordre Martiniste et Synarchique (MO&S) and the Ordre Martiniste Traditionnel were two of the fourteen member-societies which together, composed the FUDOSI. The Ordre Martiniste de Lyons was not a member of the FUDOSI.

5) Also a member of the FUDOSI was the Order called A.M.O.R.C. which in fact was the member-society around whom was centered the controversy that brought about the demise of the FUDOSI. AMORC was the only Order in the FUDOSI that was headquartered in an English-speaking country (the U.S.A.). After the dissolution of the FUDOSI, in an act of self-aggrandizement, the AMORC decided to assume the role of 'big MacGuffy' and proceeded to try to frighten, cow and intimidate some of the very Orders that had been members of the FUDOSI when these began to establish themselves and begin their work in English-speaking countries. AMORC also employed scare tactics against other Orders who had not been FUDOSI members.

6) Spencer Lewis, who was Imperator of the AMORC at the time of the formation of the FUDOSI, subsequently accepted the Grandmastership of the TMO for the U.S.A. and subordinated it under AMORC. Very soon the TMO became an irregular organization, it trampled upon the sacred initiatic tradition introducing "self conferred" or "autonomous" 'initiations'; it turned the hallowed Martinist symbol, the Pentacle, upside down; in its Heptads and "septems" it proceeded to confer bogus S.I. Degrees [bogus because the person conferring the Degree did not and does not (October 8, 1990) hold the 4th Degree, that of Unknown Philosopher, which is the prerequisite required to be an Initiator capable of conferring the S.I. Initiation]. The TMO disgraced itself and was ostracized by all the genuine Martinist Orders of the world.

7) In 1982 the OM&S began operations in Barbados under a charter from the OM&S Grand Lodge of Great Britain.

8) In December 1985 the AMORC wrote an anti-fraternal and threatening letter to the Provincial Grand Master of the OM&S of Barbados [who was a member of the AMORC/TMO at the time]; it was unfriendly and quite in keeping with the AMORC policy of intimidation. The Provincial Master resigned from the AMORC/TMO on January 13, 1986 and his resignation was accepted by AMORC on January 28, 1986.

9) This letter of intimidation was followed up by two newspaper attacks by AMORC/TMO in January and May of 1986. These newspaper "articles" contained deliberate misinformation and lies. The OM&S responded to both of these attacks by issuing rebuttals in the same newspaper. At the time, Ralph Lewis was Imperator of the AMORC and TMO Grand Master for the United States. It should be noted that the same attacks leveled by the AMORC against the OM&S of Barbados were also previously employed by the AMORC against other organizations in other countries.

10) Ralph Lewis died on January 12, 1987. On January 23, 1987 the Board of Directors of the Supreme Grand Lodge of AMORC elected Gary Stewart to the Office of Imperator of AMORC and

Grand Master of the TMO for the USA. The formal installation ceremony was held on March 20, 1987.

11) On April 12 1990 Gary Stewart was deposed as Imperator of AMORC however those who ousted him apparently forgot to dismiss him as Grand Master of the TMO so as of September 1990 it appears he still holds this office/title.

12) On August 12, 1990 Gary Stewart hosted a meeting in New York city which was open to the public. The purpose of this meeting was to air the goings-on concerning his removal from office of Imperator of AMORC and to allow persons to ask questions on any or all aspects of the AMORC/TMO operation. With his permission and at his suggestion all present were free to tape record the entire procedures. This writer took advantage of the offer and tape recorded the whole proceedings which is contained on three 60 minute cassette tapes. Most of the meeting was devoted to Mr. Stewart's answering questions put to him by members of the audience. The following is excerpted from the speech, it was the only question asked him concerning Martinism:-

Question from a member of the audience: Mr. Imperator, this is a question regarding Martinism as well as Rosicrucianism. I am not active with the Rosicrucian Order AMORC any longer, I may not be, I wish to pursue my Martinist work. Is there any reason why I have to be a Rosicrucian in order to pursue Martinist studies? Please comment.

Reply by Gary Stewart: Yes, there is a reason ... the reason is that I don't think people are very good at administration and they don't seem to divide their time between Rosicrucianism and Martinist studies and that's not a good reason, I grant that. They were some changes coming up with Martinism that we were working on for a couple of years, correcting the linage ... the initiatic linage ... getting everything sorted out. Now I don't know what a Septem is ... for those of you who aren't Martinists don't worry about it, you have the Heptads and the Septems and these are like the Lodges and Chapters, but the only thing you have in Martinism is Heptads (a) ... and what's important is that its an oral tradition, that you go and you choose a certain path similar to Rosicrucianism ... but its not the same as Rosicrucianism and ... ah ... I see no reason in the world why you would have to be a Rosicrucian to be a Martinist ... (applause from audience) ... those were the changes I was in the process of instituting. Now we have one big logistic mess in trying to get this thing universal, all the way around the world, and its taken almost two years of intensive work, work that I did in the Park, its preliminary work and formation work and it never gets out and published but I spend a lot of my time in reorganizing the Traditional Martinist Order to bring it in line with the proper linage. The TMO has the strongest linage of any of the Martinist Orders existing (b) and the ones existing like the Ordre Martiniste and the Synarchy ...

these are legitimate organizations ... they come from a legitimate tradition (c) and the problem that we ran into ... ah ... a few years back is that we started doing the ... ah ... autonomous self initiations which do not fall in line with the correct ... ah ... ah ... transmission of the linage ... as I said it was an oral tradition, you must go to a Heptad to actually undergo the Initiations physically for you to have the proper initiations. So we're in the process of correcting all that ... but the linage is still very strong ... its still alive, you know, ... in my particular case ... ah ... I received my linage by initiations of the four degrees from Cecil Pool, he got them from Ralph Lewis who got them from George Lagreze and Augustin Chaboseau (d) ... but Ralph Lewis only initiated six people and that was in 1942 and of these six people Cecil Pool was the only one surviving at the time and then he made sure that that was passed on to me and ... ah ... you know the tradition still survives. So we're in the process of regularizing a lot of the members and redoing the linages just to get them proper ... but as it stood we were in the process ... in fact, in Edinburgh we even were in the final throes of finishing the Martinist reorganization and it would have opened up all of the ... ah ... for the Heptads to take in members who were not Rosicrucians if they so chose to. Right now I don't know what's happening with it. One interesting thing about it though ... they tried to remove me as Imperator but they entirely forgot about Sovereign Grand Master ... now they're in a real pickle ... because they can't remove me ... for two reasons ... number one I have to call the meeting so that they can remove me and I'm not going to cooperate ... (laughter from the audience) ... and number two, everybody's linage comes from my own ... I can nullify everybody's linage but they can't do mine, the only person who can nullify mine would be Cecil Pool, Ralph Lewis, George Lagreze or Augustin Chaboseau and none of them are around to do that (e) ... so I'm not sure what they're thinking about the TMO ... I know that when it was pointed out to Donna (f) well, is he still Sovereign Grand Master? ... she went into an absolute tizzy, she entirely forgot about it, so, well, that waits to see what happens ... but they'll be more about the Martinist Order coming up very shortly, you know, within the next couple of months, that probably you'll be interested in hearing about.

Questioner: Thank you Frater.

Stewart: OK.

13) A FEW COMMENTS ON THE ABOVE

The following is given with the greatest respect to Mr. Stewart.

a) Martinist Works are called LODGES. The Lodge is specifically the Third Degree operation. The first and second degree operations are called Heptads.

b) "The TMO has the strongest linage of any of the Martinist Orders existing". After admitting to the irregularity of the TMO, Mr. Stewart would have his listeners believe it has a "stronger linage"! What does he mean?

c) The OM&S was founded some twelve years before the TMO and the OM&S is the ONLY Martinist Order that has operated without interruption. All the others were suspended during the years of the Second World War. The OM&S was active during that time in neutral Switzerland.

d) Mr. Stewart needs to brush up on his history! First of all this statement by Mr. Stewart contradicts his TMO discourse #18, Mystic Degree, page 5, where it is shown that Lagreze was initiated by Papus! In fact George Lagreze was initiated by Teder and not by Augustin Chaboseau or Papus. Papus and Augustin Chaboseau exchanged their initiations (see I.C.E.S. Libers for these details), Papus initiated Teder and Teder initiated Lagreze. Regarding the initiatic linage that Mr. Stewart would like his hearers to accept -- it would go like this: Augustin Chaboseau initiated Lagreze who initiated Ralph Lewis, who initiated Cecil Pool, who initiated Stewart (or so he says). As a matter of interest the OM&S linage is as follows: Papus initiated Teder who initiated Lagreze who initiated Auguste Reichel, who initiated Churchill, who initiated Gulion (the present Grand Master of the OM&S of Great Britain), who initiated Savitar (the present Grand Master of the OM&S of the West Indies). It would be interesting to hear how Mr. Stewart comes to the conclusion that the TMO has the strongest linage of any of the Martinist Orders.

e) What does he mean by "nullify"? After someone has received a degree (a spiritual transmission) it cannot be taken away! such a person can be thrown out of the organization, he can be discredited and unrecognized ... but his degree cannot be "nullified" ... at least not in the sense that the power that was conferred upon him can be taken back.

f) Donna O'Neill, current (October 1990) Grand Master of AMORC's English-speaking jurisdiction.

10) Until recently, AMORC/TMO members of the U.S.A. did not even know they were other Martinist Orders ... or that the TMO had disgraced itself. This writer was a TMO member and a member of the TMO Heptad in New York in the early 1980's and no one in the Heptad at that time, Officers included, knew they were other Martinist Orders and no one knew the TMO had been disgraced and was unrecognized by the other Martinist bodies. This situation is understandable ... the TMO was not going to inform its members of its disgrace and its irregularity! Until recently (1987) there was only one other Martinist Order operating in the U.S.A., this was the French Ordre Martiniste and it was operating only in the French-speaking Haitian community. Such being the case the English-speaking TMO members and the French-speaking OM members seldom crossed paths ... it was not until around the mid 1980's that a few of them began to bump into one another. When that began to happen there was the odd mention of this "other" Martinist group ... but there could be NO open conversation about them in the TMO Heptad ... and of course they (the Ordre Martiniste) were considered by the TMO members to be spurious!

14) Information on the disgraced TMO and their shenanigans began to be generally known in the U.S.A. and the English-speaking world through the first book I published Five Christian Principals and the Libers of the I.C.E.S.. There a detailed history of the FUDOSI, the Martinist Order, the Rosicrucians and other fraternal movements is given. Prior to the availability of the I.C.E.S. Libers, information which is widely known in France, (the mecca of the initiatic tradition), was little known in English-speaking countries and when it began to get around in the U.S.A. a great hue and cry went up among AMORC/ TMO members. Without waiting to discover whether it was correct or not, the AMORC/TMO stalwarts immediately began hurling missives at the I.C.E.S. bearing accusations that it was deliberately circulating falsifications and trying to pull down the AMORC/TMO! AMORC/TMO headquarters were also deluged with letters of enquiry ... who did acknowledge, at least in a few cases this writer knows of ... that indeed there were irregularities that needed correction. Apparently, (I say this in fairness to Gary Stewart and I reiterate the word apparently) there must have been a shift in policy at some time subsequent to Stewart's assuming the AMORC/TMO leadership, because when Ralph Lewis and the 'old guard' was there, they were arrogant and smug in their wrong-doing and never would admit any impropriety ... the AMORC/TMO organization was portrayed as the epitome of truth and perfection. When these defenders finally found out the truth of the matter they were flabbergasted. "A little learning is a dangerous thing" the saying goes and it is particularly true in this case. Here was a group of people starved of information, yet willing to go to the gallows in defense of a fraudulent cause. And yet this is not ironical because one only acts foolishly when one is ignorant. AMORC/TMO members are led gently down the garden path and for the larger part, most of them are brain-washed ... It was as if the sun had ceased to shine and they suddenly found themselves in abject darkness. THEY WERE SHOCKED, AND SPEECHLESS. This is not a funny joke, there is a lesson here which you, dear reader, should take note of: you very often criticize others ... do YOU have the facts, the truth, the authority and the right to make your accusations and pass your judgements? Beware of your freely proffered condemnations ... the karmic wheels of God grind slowly but they grind surely and thoroughly. May you enjoy whatever Heaven has in store for you ... may the seeds you have planted bear sweet fruit for you ... just as the seeds that AMORC/TMO planted are fructifying for them now.

15) On September 17, 1990 the New York Heptad of the TMO sent a letter to its members advising them that their Martinist initiation was invalid and asked for their indulgence and patience "while measures are being taken to re-establish our recognition and rightful place with the other authentic Orders of the World." This 'Heptad' which has been working for some fifty years has not turned out a single bona fide Martinist in all its time because its initiating Officers never had and do not even now (October 9, 1990) have the quality of Initiator i.e. the degree of Unknown Philosopher. And ... vanity of vanities ... it is interesting to note, in passing, that although TMO members have found out their initiation is invalid, they still proudly sign themselves as SS.II and use the S.I. insignia after their signature!

16) At this time the AMORC/TMO is split right down the middle and charges and counter charges have been filed in the California law courts. Christian Bernard has been installed as Imperator of AMORC. Two camps now exist, those who back Stewart and those who back Bernard. The most recent information (October 7, 1990) is that the irregular TMO organization continues to operate from headquarters in San Jose, while Stewart is said to be founding, or has founded the TMOA (Traditional Martinist Order of America) which apparently will begin to operate in due time. In the meanwhile all Martinists will pray for harmony and peace in the present circumstances and hope for a just settlement. Let us all concentrate on this.

17) This writer hopes the information supplied herein will restore any loss of dignity which may have come upon any Martinist who was embarrassed as a result of the AMORC/TMO harassments over the years, he further hopes that members of the OM&S especially will feel fully vindicated in knowing that the TMO now publicly acknowledges their irregularity. The decent thing for the AMORC/TMO to do now would be to publicly apologize to the OM&S and to the other Martinist Orders and Fraternities of the world who they tried to vilify.

18) All documentation to support the above disclosures is available for private scrutiny by anyone who may wish to see it, including photocopies of the copyright and legal registration certificates for the Martinist Pentacle held by the OM&S of Great Britain, Barbados and other countries. This writer does not think it decorous to make a public display of certificates and charters.

René Cossey
October 10, 1990

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

Hostile letter written to OM&S Provincial Master by AMORC p8.

OM&S Provincial Master's letter of resignation to AMORC p9.

AMORC's acknowledgement of PM's resignation p10.

Newspaper articles relating to Gary Stewart's dismissal p11.

TMO Mystic Degree, discourse #18, page five showing Papus as Lagreze's Initiator p12.

Letter from TMO headquarters to a TMO member admitting "certain inconsistancies" in their operation p13.

Letter from TMO Heptad in New York to its members advising them, among other things, that the TMO because of "certain irregularities" is not recognized by the other Martinist Orders.

AMORC

The Rosicrucian Order

Known as "THE ANCIENT, MYSTICAL ORDER ROSAE CRUCIS" throughout the world

Rosicrucian Park San Jose, California 95191, U.S.A.

December 31, 1985

[redacted]

Top Rock 6
Worthing 6
Barbados, W.I.

9

Dear Sir and Frater:

Just recently we received an abundance of material on Martinism being circulated in Barbados, under the banner "Ordre Martiniste de Synarchique," using the official symbol of the Traditional Martinist Order of the World, with its headquarters in San Jose.

It has now come to our attention that you have been instrumental in setting up this organization, knowing full well that it is in opposition to the Traditional Martinist Order and AMORC. You are, in effect, denying the authenticity of the Traditional Martinist Order and its Sovereign Grand Master.

Since you have put your energies into such an organization, we are suspending your membership in both the Traditional Martinist Order and AMORC, and will take definitive action on that pending your reply within thirty days.

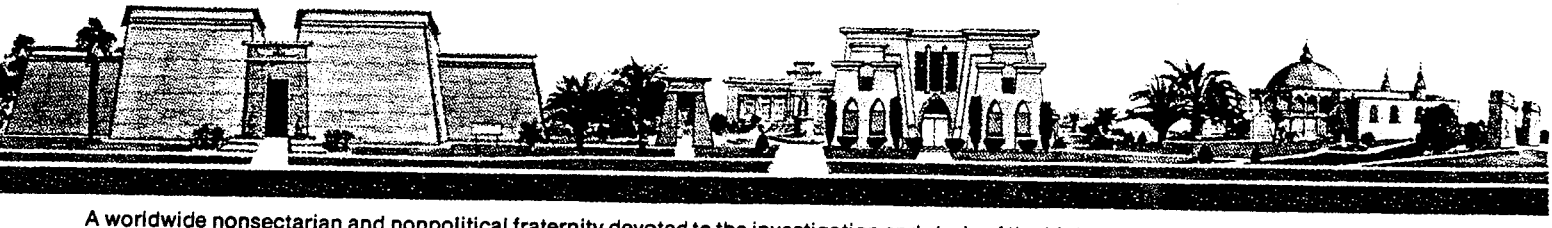
With best wishes for Peace Profound,

Sincerely and fraternally,

Arthur C. Piepenbrink

Arthur C. Piepenbrink
SUPREME SECRETARY

ACP:mz
cc: Olive Asher, Grand Recorder, T.M.O.
Membership Department



January 13th, 1986

Rosicrucian Order AMORC
San Jose, California
U.S.A.

10

Dear Sirs:

I hereby and herewith tender my resignation from your organization as of this date: thirteenth January, nineteen hundred and eighty-six.

With all good wishes for Peace Profound.

Sincerely,

[redacted]

Christ Church
Barbados
West Indies

CEPTANCE REGISTRATION RECEIPT — Foreign

Posted at ..... P.O. Christ Church

Addressed to ..... Rosicrucian Order

..... Amorc

..... San Jose Ca 95151

..... [illegible]

F. A. A56: 372A

Signature of Postmaster

Parishes
Local No. P.L.
G.P.O. No. 40
Parish P.O.

Date Stamp

THE ROSICRUCIAN ORDER
International Supreme Temple
ROSICRUCIAN PARK • SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA 95191, U.S.A.

January 28, 1986

[redacted]

Top Rock 6
WORTHING 6
BARBADOS

11

Dear Sir and Frater:

In accordance with your request, we are accepting your resignation from the Rosicrucian Order.

While you are not receiving monographs from us, we suggest that you review those you have on hand. This will serve to keep you in contact with the Order and, at the same time, we are sure you will find the review helpful. Many times you will uncover important points that you perhaps overlooked, or did not thoroughly understand in the first reading.

Please advise us of the reason for your resignation.

With all good wishes for Peace Profound, we are

Sincerely and fraternally,

ROSICRUCIAN ORDER (AMORC)

Elvia Ortiz
Elvia Ortiz
MEMBERSHIP DEPARTMENT

EO:jm

M-024 1984 ROSICRUCIAN PARK ◦ THE INSTITUTION BEHIND THE ORGANIZATION PRINTED IN U.S.A.

Wednesday morning, April 18, 1990

25 cents

San Jose Mercury News

Serving Northern California Since 1851

Alameda County Morning Edition

Rosicrucian infighting ousts leader

Suit alleges theft of $3.5 million

By Ann W. O'Neill
Mercury News Staff Writer

The mystic Rosicrucian Order, a super-secret international society that has brought the artifacts and rituals of ancient Egypt to San Jose, suddenly finds itself waging a public, modern-day battle over worldly power and money.

On Monday, the order ousted its leader, Gary L. Stewart, after obtaining a court order and summoning police when he refused to leave Rosicrucian Park, the world headquarters on Naglee Avenue. It also filed a lawsuit accusing Stewart of embezzling $3.5 million and secreting the money in the tiny European republic of Andorra.

The deposed leader, in his own legal papers, alleges that he was illegally stripped of power only after he discovered that other officers have been plundering the order's coffers for years.

And so it was that a society which claims 250,000 members worldwide, zealously guards its privacy, traces its roots to 1500 B.C. and seeks to unite humanity through cosmic consciousness, began to air its dirty linen this week in Santa Clara County Superior Court.

Rosicrucian bank accounts are frozen. Some 175 employees at the San Jose world headquarters may not be paid. And, both sides allege in court papers, the order's financial survival is at stake.

The legal battle brings to a head a three-year internal power struggle that began when Stewart succeeded Ralph M. Lewis as imperator and president of the Ancient Mystical Order Rosae Crucis, as it is formally known. During Stewart's tenure, dissident order mem-

See ROSICRUCIAN, Back Page

Going public

Statue at the museum

The highly secretive Rosicrucian Order is in an uproar over charges of financial misconduct. Among the allegations:

- Gary L. Stewart was ousted as leader of the Rosicrucian Order, and a lawsuit was filed accusing him of embezzlement.
- Stewart says he was the one who discovered the coffers had been plundered.
- Because of the dispute, Rosicrucian bank accounts are frozen, and as many as 175 employees in San Jose may not be paid.

Ousted Rosicrucian leader denies embezzling millions

ROSICRUCIAN, from Page 1A

bers circulated more than a dozen "hierarchy letters," criticizing him. There have been numerous firings, ex-communications, reports of death threats and threats of slander suits.

Christian Bernard, who heads the order's Grand Lodge in France and was one of Stewart's most powerful rivals, is temporarily in charge.

The tale, with all its cloak-and-dagger intrigue, became public Friday, when Treasurer Burnam Schaa sought a court order to oust Stewart.

Stewart

Money allegedly moved

In court papers, Schaa and the order accuse Stewart of embezzling $3.5 million of a $5 million loan from the Silicon Valley Bank. Schaa alleges that Stewart transferred the funds to a bank in Pittsburgh, and later to the Andorran bank, without Schaa's knowledge or the authorization of the non-profit organization's board of directors.

But Stewart said in separate court papers that Schaa knew all about the Andorran affair. He contends that it was all part of a plan to move the order's Spanish Grand Lodge, now based in San Jose, to Spain.

Stewart contends the plan was discussed with the order hierarchy — as well as with representatives of the Andorran president, the Spanish government, the Rockefeller Foundation and an aide to Sen. Edward Kennedy.

Tax advantages sought, attorney says

Stewart's San Jose attorney, Steven J. Barth, said his client denies embezzling the money. Barth said Stewart transferred the funds to take advantage of tax benefits and favorable foreign exchange rates.

The move to oust him was initiated, Stewart contended, after his hired consultants and accountants discovered the order lost $1 million more in 1989 than its in-house books showed. The auditors also discovered $8.3 million missing from the order's trust accounts, Stewart charged.

Schaa said in his legal documents that the Supreme Grand Lodge — the order's board of directors — were not satisfied with Stewart's reasons for moving the $3.5 million to Andorra. They asked him to return the money.

Stewart said he explained that the bank in Andorra was closed and would not open until Monday.

The directors asked him to resign. He asked for two hours to think it over, according to court papers.

Leader fired everyone

When he returned, Stewart fired everyone in the room — before they could fire him. The embattled leader tried — unsuccessfully — to turn the tables on his accusers. He read from a proclamation, a copy of which was contained in the court records:

"In the past three years, I have witnessed absolutely horrendous acts which, in good conscience I cannot and hopefully will not need explain. Now, we are looking at ... the strong possibility of embezzlement. I try to take action and you want me removed. I find that suspicious. ... For attempting to conduct illegal activities, I now exercise my right as Imperator and dissolve this Board, firing each of you."

Order traced to 1500 B.C.

Mercury News Staff Report

The Ancient Mystical Order Rosae Crucis traces its roots to schools in ancient Egypt started by Thutmose III about 1500 B.C. to search for explanations religion could not provide. It resurfaced in 17th-century Europe with the publication of a pamphlet credited to three people, including Sir Francis Bacon.

The order describes itself as a fraternity, a collective cosmic consciousness to unite mankind, but insists it is not a religion or a sect. It claims about 250,000 members worldwide. Its symbol is a budding rose, representing the human soul, on a cross, representing the physical life.

The order became active in the United States in 1915, when H. Spencer Lewis founded the Supreme Grand Lodge in New York City. He was succeeded as imperator and president by his son, Ralph M. Lewis, in 1939. Gary L. Stewart succeeded Lewis upon his death in 1987.

In 1927, Lewis moved his order to its current world headquarters at Rosicrucian Park off Naglee Avenue in San Jose. The park's planetarium and Egyptian museum have been popular tourist spots.

Because the order is secretive, the Rosicrucians have long been a source of curiosity to their San Jose neighbors. Lewis acknowledged some of the mystery surrounding the order in a 1957 interview: "We've been called everything from religious fanatics to a racket."

Rosicrucians attempt to explain the unknown through science and an understanding of past cultures and the order of nature. Reaching that understanding requires 10 steps of study. Members study at home in "sanctums," using correspondence courses called "monographs." Members believe in reincarnation, and some participate in demonstrations of extrasensory perception.

San Fran chronicle 4/18/90

Rosicrucian Leader Ousted, Accused of Embezzlement

Chronicle Staff and Wire Reports

The leader of the Rosicrucian Order as been ousted as imperator and president of the mystic organization and is suspected of embezzling more than $3 million, a spokesman at world headquarters in San Jose said yesterday.

Gary L. Stewart, installed in 1987 as head of the group that claims it has roots in ancient Egypt and about 250,000 members worldwide, left late Monday after police were summoned to enforce a restraining order, spokesman Carl La Flamm said.

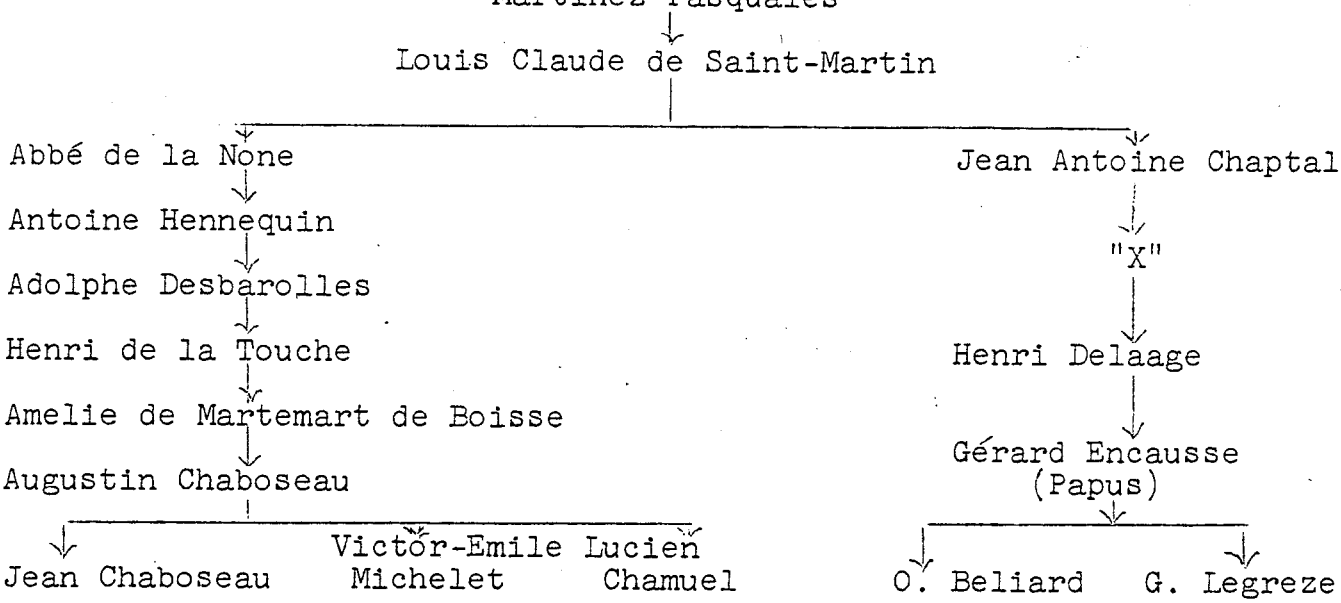
A Superior Court suit had been filed against Stewart after he defiled a unanimous board of directors vote on April 12 to remove himself as president and imperator of the Supreme Grand Lodge, a title normally held for life, La Flamm said.

Stewart was not available for comment.

The action to strip Stewart of his leadership came after the order's secretary-treasurer discovered that he allegedly had transferred more than $3 million between March 28 and April 5 from the Rosicrucians' bank account, the suit said.

(Illustration A)

MARTINIST FILIATION



Traditional Supreme Council of 1939

Augustin Chaboseau Jean Chaboseau O. Beliard G. Legreze

Regional Supreme Council and Synarchy of the United States

Ralph M. Lewis Cecil A. Poole Mahlon Cain

James R. Whitcomb J. Duane Freeman

* * * * * * *

TRADITIONAL MARTINIST ORDER
SUPREME TEMPLE AND SOVEREIGN SEE OF THE WORLD, SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA 95191, U.S.A.

[redacted] 1989

[redacted]

64

This is to acknowledge your letter of June 1,1989.

Thank you for your expressed concerns about the possible changes in the Martinist Order. We are quite well aware of certain inconsistancies and also areas where improvements could be made. I, for one, am cautious, however, when thoughts run to change and deletion.

We have taken note of your suggestions and will keep them in mind.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Cosmic Wisdom!

Sincerely and fraternally,
Traditional Martinist Order

Cyril S. Esty
Grand Archivist

CSE:ce

TRADITIONAL MARTINIST ORDER
NEW YORK HEPTAD No. 1

Mailing Address

J.A.F. Station
P.O.Box 7911
New York, 10116-7911

(Tel:(212) 683-9810

Street Address

822 Sixth Avenue No 2
New York, N.Y. 10001

September 17, 1990

182

Respected Fellow Martinists,

Greetings in the Light of Martinism!

There has been a hiatus in the lineage of the Traditional Martinist Order over a long period. Recently, conditions worsened because of the injustice which occurred at Rosicrucian Park, San Jose, California, in April 1990.

One thing that was never in question was the authentic lineage of Imperator Gary L. Stewart as the Sovereign Grand Master of the Traditional Martinist Order of the World.

The majority of officers and members of the New York Heptad recognize Brother Gary L. Stewart as the Sovereign Grand Master, who has the authentic lineage, and as such, have allegiance to him as Sovereign Grand Master.

Currently, the external affairs of our Sacred Order have been in the hands of those without lineage and no mystical authority in Martinism. We wish to maintain the integrity of the Heptad, its symbols, signs and teachings, and to prevent the Heptad from operating as a SEPTEM.

My Brothers and Sisters, it is regrettable that as students on the Path of Divine knowledge, we have failed to take a stand for justice and honesty, and are leaving it up to the Courts to do for us what we ought to have done amongst ourselves. It is also a fact that because of certain irregularities, together with the sub-ordination of the Traditional Martinist Order, Our Order was not recognized by any of the other Martinist Orders of the World.

We seek your indulgence, particularly your patience, while measures are being taken to re-establish our recognition and rightful place with the other authentic Orders of the World.

Respected Brothers and Sisters, this is just a preliminary report of the circumstances confronting us at this time, and you will be hearing from us again.

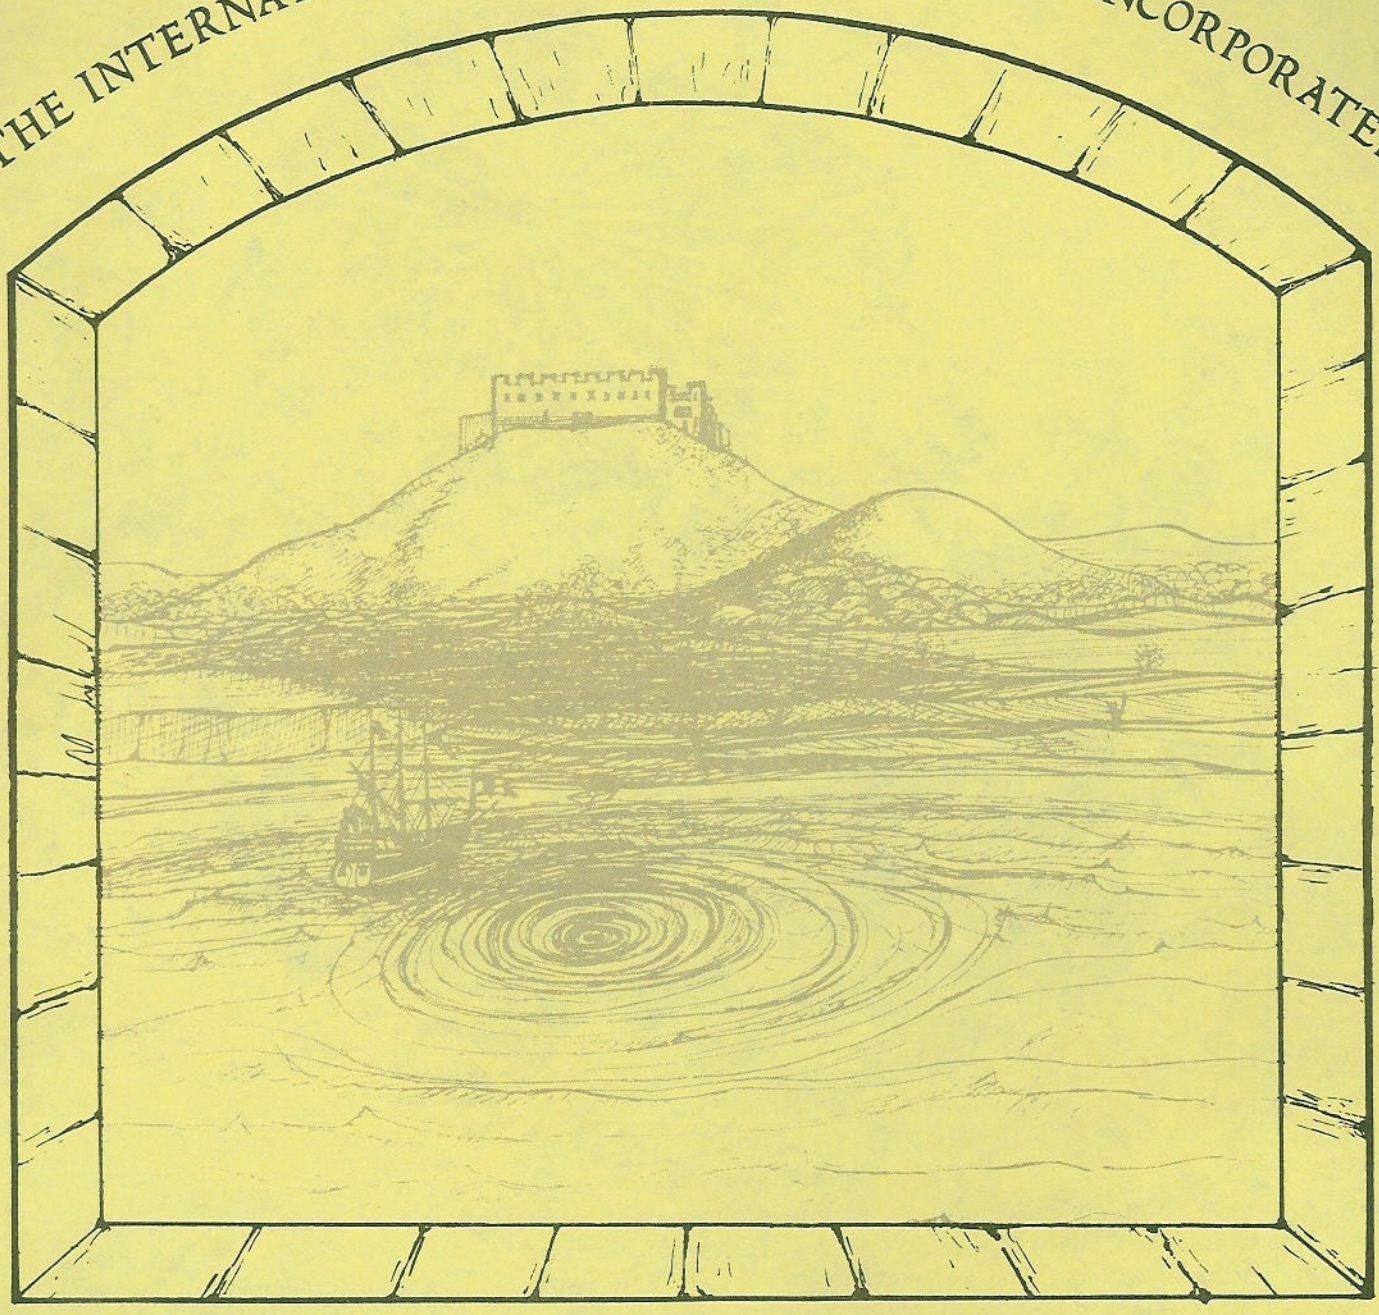
We thank you for your continued understanding and support.

Sincerely and fraternally,

Adell M. Tomlinson
(MOH)

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF MARTINISTS INCORPORATED

Worthing - Barbados - West Indies



PLANE III

GRADE: COMPANION

LIBER 62 HIGH NOON

Private & Confidential

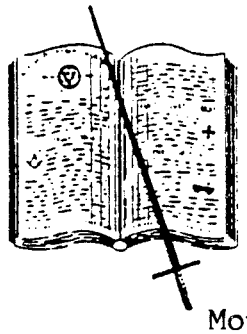
The International College of Martinists Incorporated, is a non-profit institution existing for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

Only three knights out of the many who set out from Camelot achieve a sight of the sacred vessel. They are Galahad, Perceval and Bors, three very different men who experience the Grail each in his own way, and who represent three ways of approaching the mystery. For Galahad, the pure knight, is reserved the way of the Spirit, of direct communion with the godhead; for Perceval, the simple man, whose name means 'pierce-vale', the way of dedication, of the Heart, which entails a long hard road towards self-realization; and for Bors, the ordinary man, who watches the events but stands a little apart from them, the way of contemplation, of the Mind.

The three knights sail to the Holy City of Sarras, variously said to be in the east and in 'the spiritual realm', bearing the Grail to the Eucharistic celebration in which it will become at once the Grail of the Spirit, of the Heart and of the Mind. From this point there is no further that they can go. Galahad leaves the earth in a blaze of ecstasy; Perceval returns to the castle of the Grail King to become the head of the Order of Grail Knights and king of the blossoming Waste Land; Bors returns to Camelot. And, as Malory writes, 'Sithen was there never man so hardy to say that he had seen the Sangreal.' (Plate designed by James Marsh, England, 1979; Parsifal, charcoal drawing by Jean Delville, Belgium, 19th c.)

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF MARTINIST STUDIES



Monday at High Noon

Dear Companions

In this Liber will be found the concluding lecture on The Grail, also the 11th in the series Esoteric Masonry. The Twelfth and last on Esoteric Masonry will appear in our next* and bring to a close the series "The Esoteric Tradition and The Temple". Many letters of appreciation have already come in and we hope all Brethren enjoyed the series ... it was a change of pace from the preceding heavy studies and was restful and refreshing. We now have 38 Libers to go and at L100 will be the exam for the honorary Degree Doctor of Divinity. Many of you have already sat for your Master of Sacred Science Diploma but the Doctorate is the "crown jewel"! Let's see what's immediately ahead:

In the Libers to come we are going to deal mainly with three topics: Gnostics/Gnosticism; the Kabalah; and the third section will comprise material from Martinist sources ... possibly some from the R+C ... and certain lectures of a delicate nature which have come from a source which we shall not name.

GNOSTICS/GNOSTICISM. Since the discovery of the Nag Hammadi texts in Upper Egypt in December of 1945, it has taken over three decades for the information from that find to become available. We would like to ask all Companions to obtain a copy of the book The Gnostic Gospels by Elaine Pagels and use it as a study guide in parallel with the material which is going to be given. Of course there are many other fine works on Gnosticism also available at this time ... however this one is really worth obtaining. Bear in mind that for your Doctorate you will be required to submit a Thesis on some aspect of Gnosticism so you should start working on accumulating all the information you can. Also, for those Brethren who have the time, remember our Two-Step Program whereby you can receive the Libers at twice the regular speed.

In the first place there was no standard or uniform teaching among the Gnostics and added to this was the fact that almost all the Gnostic literature was burned and destroyed. This situation has caused much disagreement throughout the centuries as to what the Gnostics taught and/or did not teach. It has not been until the discovery of the Nag Hammadi texts (information from which has taken some three decades to become available) and those called the 'Dead Sea Scrolls' ... that scholars have had something to work with ... and nowadays (1990), as a result of these finds, much new light is being thrown not only on Gnosticism itself, but on early Christianity and on Judaism too.

*We have decided to present this paper in this Liber.

We have not suggested you obtain 'outside' material before ... because it has not been necessary ... however this topic of Gnostics and Gnosticism IS a hot one! Every scrap of information you can lay your hands on that will be useful in helping you to come to a rounded and balanced position, should therefore be obtained and made use of ... and the new material coming out from the pens of eminent scholars who have access to the Nag Hammadi texts will be found to be of great value.

THE KABALAH. Again, this is such a wide subject, (as you know), to try to present a comprehensive course would be futile. It is not our intention to attempt the impossible. Rather, we think we can be of most help to Brethren if we take certain aspects of Kabalah and discuss it, and try to make it lucid. This will have two effects: (1) The particular topic will be made clear; (2) It will put you in a position to understand the many books on Kabalah now available ... which are not easy to inculcate without background or foundational information.

THE OTHER MATERIAL. This will be varied, interesting and (hopefully) ... useful!

Now, how should we present it? Should we say so many Libers to the first topic, so many to the second, and so many to the third? Or should we "mix it up"? We will opt for the latter, as this has been our procedure all along. You will remember what we have said so many times before: to give useful information is one thing ... to present it in such a way as to maintain interest ... and stave off boredom ... is another!

The group that we now are ... those of you here who are receiving these Libers ... are of a different ilk, of a different quality than the original band that started out. The curiosity seekers have left us ... and in the meanwhile, in the time we have been travelling together each of you has matured much more than you know! We will be sharing with you material which is NOT in public circulation and some of it you may find VERY CONTROVERSIAL. MUCH OF IT MAY EVEN BE CONTRADICTORY! DOES THIS MEAN WE SHOULD NOT GIVE IT OUT? Some will undoubtedly hold that view. The point is this: There has to come a time when the child becomes a man. There has to come a time when the protective wings of the parent have to be folded back so the sibling can fly ... or else it will remain forever immature and undeveloped. This material we would certainly NOT put before the less experienced because they would be quite unable to sift it with proper discernment ... which is what you must do! Again, yet again, we say to you: in all things, learn to be perceptive ... take what you can use ... and leave the rest! ARE WE GOING TO HAVE TO REMIND YOU OF THIS ALL THE WAY THROUGH? WE HOPE NOT! YOUR INTUITIVE FACULTIES HAVE BEEN SHARPENED ... EXERCISE SHREWD DISCRIMINATION, BE COGNITIVE AND PRUDENT. LEARN TO JUDGE RIGHTLY.

So with that brief introduction, dear Companions, we greet you and wish you well. We do not think you are affiliated with us to read in these Libers material you can walk into a book shop and pick up off the shelf. As we have been saying to you ever since the day we first set sail, we are not the authors of the material in these Libers, and it is not for us to pass judgement upon it ... we are doing our best to select material from the vast heritage which has been entrusted to us, and share with you what we think will be of the greatest interest and value to you. We sincerely trust we are doing a "good job" and you will continue to find your association with us useful and rewarding.

By the way, it is our intention to present as much of the up coming information in its original form as is possible ... but where the quality of the originals is too poor, we will have to retype some of it. We believe you will appreciate that.

Without any further ado then, let us be on our way, happy to be together as we continue our journey to the House on the Hill, which is looming larger and larger with every step we take.

Sincerely in the Works

Sacra

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

#231

Beloved Companions and Seekers of the Grail!

THE QUEST OF THE HOLY GRAIL

Lecture Seven : Conclusions

We must now draw together the materials we have been presented and see where we stand and what the ways forward are. It seems appropriate to do this under four heads, asking ourselves first: What is the Grail? Second, what constitutes achievement of the Grail? Third, what are the conditions for the quest? And finally: What do we recommend in terms of method ... and the way? This is a large mouthful to chew on ... so let's begin with the rather big question.....

WHAT IS THE GRAIL?

The Holy Grail is the chalice of the Last Supper in which the wine was given the significance of the blood and life of the Divine. As it is at the focus of the pouring of Divine Life into the world, creating and sustaining it by an act of sacrifice which is both eternal and in time — in eternity the "sod ha tsimtsum", the mystery of the Divine making space; and in time, the mystery of the Incarnation and the Cross, so — as that focus — the Grail is (or at least is an ideal image of that which is) itself the focus of the universe itself as vessel of the Divine, for all the worlds and levels together form a single vessel. In this aspect — to digress for a moment from this rather dense definition — the Grail would appear to be the image that the popular novelist Stephen King is reaching for in his Dark Tower series when he speaks of a mythically fascinating "nexus" or "pylon" around which all possible worlds revolve ... and indeed his character Roland may be seen as a modern Grail Knight. His depiction is a bit coloured perhaps by the conventions of modern "hard-boiled" realism and "horror" fiction, but is completely recognizable finally as a companion of the quest.

Now, to get back to business: Not only is the universe a "vessel" but so is the individual soul, and that is why the Grail is so truly the archetype of the individual's spiritual way. Furthermore, the one Grail gathers up the symbolisms of all those other and lesser cups (because realized only on the level of imagination) — the Krater of the Platonists, the Cauldron of Ceridwyn and so on — so that they are seen as rays of rainbow light from that one prism and heart of light which is the Grail.

The Grail is, again, the transformation and restoration (indeed a transformation which goes beyond restoration!) of the world. As it is the vessel of the Eucharist, so it is also the source of the Eucharist today, whether served in an ancient Gothic cathedral or in some store-front in the inner city. However, in particular, I daresay the spirit of the Grail mythos resides in the Eucharist, experienced as the Eucharist of the 'Eschaton', of the 'end' (the 'term' of Plotinus), towards which all things rush. I believe you will find this a rather complete definition, the "alchemical" approach to the Grail, for example, simply expresses this same material in terms of alchemical symbolism. If anything, many of the approaches to the Grail involve a reduction of the vision to a symbolism, finally one of many interchangeable symbolisms, of personal transformation.

Well, without wishing to overstress what must be an individual discovery, we counsel against that sort of reduction and in favour of the hard climb to the place where one can see the Grail in its breathtaking universality and Glory.

WHAT IS ACHIEVEMENT OF THE GRAIL?

Now, we have said already that achievement of the Grail involves becoming, and knowing oneself as, a vessel of the Divine and that it is a hard climb to vision. We will say more when we come to make some recommendations for the way, and of course we are aware that there is little use piling on words which are beyond our experience, but it seems appropriate to add one thing here. That is ... that because the Grail is that which sustains the world and all the "ten thousand things" in existence — by precisely the Divine act of "Tsimtsum", of Sacrifice on all levels — the passing beyond the vision of the Grail is not that of disappearance into the Divine but that of free and loving adoration. Again, and this is very important to meditate on and work with inwardly, the Grail is that precisely which sustains and validates all things, including your existence and mine, and its achievement involves knowing oneself in relation to the Fountain of Life.

WHAT ARE THE CONDITIONS FOR THE QUEST?

Two conditions of the Quest, which I daresay will do for going on with, are suggested by the characters we have studied of Perceval and Galahad. From Perceval we learn the necessity of that absolute simplicity and honesty in relation to ourselves which we might call, in the Zen sense, "beginner's mind". From Galahad we learn the necessity of that "ultimate concern", that yearning for the Divine, that passionate intention ("Purity of heart", as Kierkegaard observed," is to will one thing") which can really carry one beyond ... from where one is to where one ought to be.

HOW DO WE START ON THE QUEST?

First of all, the world of the Grail is the world of the original stories. We have already recommended the Quest of the Holy Grail as a good place to start exploration of this world. In addition there are paperback editions available of the Parzival, of Chretien de Troyes' Perceval, of The High History of the Holy Grail, of Malory's Morte, and so on. As one becomes at home, perhaps little by little, with these books, one comes to see them as what they are — a really unique fusion of imagination, in depth, scope, vision and faith, of the inner world & the outer world, of the esoteric & the exoteric ... and this is also what the Grail (nexus of the worlds) is all about. It may not seem a very stimulating spiritual exercise to read and reread these ancient books but I should like to say that the rewards are great and, indeed, there is no other literature like this.

When one knows this, as it were, authentic atmosphere of the Grail, one then has a basis to judge the more recent books, of which they are many, finding something of value, no doubt, in almost all ... but particularly with some, feeling "yes, this is the real thing." We have cited a number of useful modern books in the course of these papers but, again, here I should like to urge the importance of entering into the old stories. And of course you will have the pleasure of meeting characters we have touched on barely, or not at all, of becoming acquainted with, and learning from, Bors and Gawain, Dinadan and Elaine. And then there are the related Welsh stories of the Mabinogion and the other (Arthurian but not Grail related) tales of Yvain and "The knight of the Cart" and so on. So there is a vast province of literature here, and also including the Merlin material, but in any case the important thing is to become thoroughly at home in some representative part of it more than to acquire just a superficial knowledge of the whole.

Now a word on "pathworking". (Editors note: this subject of PATHWORKING will be gone into in the coming lectures on Kabalah.) The Grail stories are in themselves rather like superb pathworkings. As you probably know, "pathworking" is like Jungian "active imagination" with the addition of a scenario ... a sort of directed tour by meditative visualization ... and so, of course, there is the possibility of developing further pathworkings. A "state of the art" Grail pathworking by Dolores Ashcroft-Nowicki may be found in John Matthews' At The Table Of The Grail, for example.

The problem with pathworking is that it can be hardly more spiritual than, and little different from, the game Dungeons and Dragons where one imagines making all sorts of profound promises and declarations of intention and so on ... but the problem is that, unless one is very careful, the imagining is not the reality. It is a little like Johnny Cash's song about the prisoner who, awaiting execution, dreams about home but then wakes up still within the four gray walls of his cell. Or, probably all of us have had the experience of dreaming we were performing some difficult task, taking an examination or whatever, and then waking up having to really do it. Now this is what pathworking tends to result in and especially with people (which today is most of us) who are not trained in interior discernment. Furthermore, the style of pathworkings is a problem ... I have yet to read, or hear, one which really rang true ... free of "preciousness" and the soft, blurred, comfortable quality of a partly deceptive dream. Now this may be because the people who do pathworkings today simply lack the literary gifts of, say, a Dante, or even a Charles Williams, to express spiritual vision with clarity, and this is no discredit to them. In some cases also, one suspects a certain dream-like quality in the vision itself, although everyone, of course, distinguishes themselves from the Dungeons and Dragons crowd and no one intends to deal in pleasant phantasms.

The criterion of a good spiritual imaginative work is that it produces in reality the transformations which it proposes. Each person will find, for themselves, what they are able to do with authenticity but may we suggest first of all the meditation of the original stories and images and then, perhaps more than elaborate pathworkings, the modest, sober and intense projection of oneself into a scene by an act of active imagination and without a scenario. But, and this is why we have gone on rather at length on this, whatever imaginative exercise one finds appropriate one must on the one hand, use the imagination to the full (the Grail stories are magesterial works of imagination) but not allow it to substitute for the Reality. Discretion and Discrimination complete, it has been said, the magician's motto: To Will, to Dare, to be Silent and to Know. Let us be aware of the depth of the work of discrimination and discretion which is necessary in relation to the imagination and of the danger of failing in the quest without realizing it at all as one goes happily in a fantasy of spiritual achievement!

Next it seems to me that the Eucharist, with which we started these studies, will become increasingly central in any Quest which sets for itself the highest goal, that of passing over into the true homeland of Real things. In addition to the Eucharist there are meditative devotions and rites related to the Eucharist and the Grail, some involving taking bread and wine, and of these its seems to me that the deepest and most evocative is Benediction of the Blessèd Sacrament. This is a rite that comes out of the very spiritual world of the Grail stories. In addition there are rites of bread and wine used by various groups, but, insofar as they relate to the Grail they are secondary to the Eucharist by the essential nature of things. This does not mean they are not useful but rather, again, they are like the separated colors of which the Grail, the Eucharist of the Last Supper and also of today, is the heart of light. I daresay that it is the nature of the Grail material that whether one comes from the one side or the other, one ends up willy-nilly breaking through the distinction between esoteric & exoteric if one is going to get very far on the central road of the Quest, the one that leads to Carbonek, and this can be quite a disorienting experience, but — again — we suggest this is the disorientation not of dream but precisely of waking up to the strange clarity of reality.

Of course, like all spiritual work, one's Grail meditation is inseparable from the totality of one's life and from service. Ora et labore is the formula which expresses this with precision, on the one hand — because it is the nature of the Grail. The Quest is one of prayer, of adoration, which goes beyond one's self-absorption vertically, and also it must issue in work, service, which transcends oneself, as it were, horizontally.

But this admonition, true though it is, is not really the right note to end our introduction to THE QUEST OF THE HOLY GRAIL. Rather, let us end, within the world of the Grail itself, with these words from the High History...

> "Many were seized with a desire to go and to see what was there. They went there but never did they return and no one knew what became of them... except two Welsh knights (who) came forth ... and when they were asked why they were so happy, they said to those who enquired, "Go where we have been, and you shall know the why."

Peregrinus

THE QUEST OF THE HOLY GRAIL
A Footnote on Related Fiction

We have recommended reading certain books, first of all The Quest of the Holy Grail, as a necessary step if one is to go on with Grail studies. I suspect this may present a problem to many people, including some who would benefit from this line of study, first because not every-one has formed a habit of disciplined and regular reading, and secondly because there is something a little alarming about an old book unless one has formed the habit of reading old books ... rather as, for a child, there seems to be something a little frightening about talking to a very old person unless he is fortunate enough to have grandparents. Well, in any case, if esoteric studies are to be taken beyond the general 'knowledge lessons' of one's Order on the one hand, or the sort of popular occult books one sees at Shop-Rite (or even S. Weiser!) on the other ... one is going TO HAVE to get into SOME old books ... and Grail studies have the advantage of having inspired a category of fiction which it occurs to me to introduce here, briefly, as a possible way to get one's foot into the water and begin to feel at ease with the material. Here then are a few books, which I think you may enjoy (whether you read one or all) and which should serve as an introduction to the fascinating world of the Grail.

1. The Once and Future King by T. H. WHITE. This is the book on which the film Camelot was based. It is an excellent modern retelling of Mallory. In my copy the Grail section is pps. 426-474.

2. War in Heaven by Charles Williams. A Grail story set in modern times and which one may read with all the excitement of a thriller but which also has great depth.

3. That Hideous Strength by C. S. LEWIS. The Grail does not appear here but Merlin appears in modern times. Again, a thriller with depth.

4. A Glastonbury Romance by J. C. Powys. This is a lengthy and rather difficult modern novel with a Grail theme which does not really belong on a list of introductory works but which we include as of possible interest, at some point, to some.

5. The Light beyond the Forest by Rosemary Sutcliff. A retelling of the basic Grail story ... good, but a little hard to find.

Then we will recommend one film:
6. Excalibur This film of a few years ago, available on video cassette, was made with a genuinely mystical feeling.

And finally three very different quest stories which may also serve as bridges to the world of the Grail in addition to being worthwhile in themselves...

7. The Dark Tower: Vol I, The Gunslinger by Stephen King.

8. The Voyage of the Dawn Treader This is one of, and one of the best of, the famous Narnia stories of C. S. Lewis. For children but equally for adults. The particular quest is that of Reepicheep.

9. The Lord of the Rings J. R. R. Tolkien. This is an immense book, a world in itself, but it is the greatest fantasy work of our time and no list of quest books would be complete without it.

I envy you the pleasure of discovering and reading some of these books for the first time! And you will find as much, or more, pleasure in the old books of the Quest itself.....

#232

WARDENS

Overseers of the Temple

"Which ruled over the people that wrought in the work." 1 Kings, v; 16.

IN the Sephirotic scheme, the Masonic Wardens, Junior and Senior, correspond to Binah (Intelligence) and Chokmah (Wisdom) respectively. Intelligence and Wisdom are two superlatively Divine attributes that are allocated to the Sun in the Solar Worship of all ancient religions, and as Masonry is the custos of many of the Lesser Mysteries, it is not surprising that we find provision for this particular dogma.

2 In the Sacred College at Rome, whenever a new Pope is to be elected, a canopy is placed over the seat of each attending Cardinal. This canopy is raised, however. When the new Pontiff is elected, the canopy over his cardinalatial seat is lowered. Sometimes all the canopies are lowered at first and after the election, all except that of the new Pontiff are raised back to the wall. The significance of this procedure is to set forth the fact that every Cardinal is a potential Pope. It is a College of Peers.

3 The same symbolism might be said to apply with equal truth to the Masonic Wardens. Masonry does not, of course, maintain a College of Wardens, but every Warden is a potential Master, as will be found by reference to the earlier literature of the Craft. A New Lodge can be formed only with a Past Master or Warden as a nucleus.

4 The Wardens symbolize, therefore, something more inherently factual than would seem to be exprest in the ritual. It is not enuf that one Warden is so placed as to observe the Sun at Meridian and to superintend the Craft during periods of refreshments, etc., or to symbolize in another place the setting of the solar orb. Two features in the ritual pertaining to the Wardens do not receive the emfasis they deserve. The Junior Warden has, as one of his duties, to see that means of refreshment are not perverted to intemperance or excess. The Senior Warden is not only a paymaster if necessary, it is his duty to see that none go away dissatisfied, harmony being the support of all institutions, especially this of ours.

5 The Master and his two Wardens, represent in the Lodge the triumvirate that composed the basis of the Masonic Legend. King Solomon and the two Hirams have their correspondences in the Master and his two Wardens Freemasonry affirms no "Apostolic Succession" nor is it a companion-at-arms with any of the silly cults of the day which claim "unbroken lineage" right from Pharaonic times; claims that stamp their formulators either as grossly ignorant, stupidly credulous or plain charlatans.

6 Nevertheless, Freemasonry does embody in her trinity of Lodge Officers, Master, Senior and Junior Wardens, an organic and unbroken continuity from the time of the formulation of the first Grand Lodge of approx. 1717, and thru the Founders of that august body, the Craft received the accumulated mystical heritage developt thru a long chain of more or less related bodies devoted to the perpetuation, practice and preservation of the Mysteries.

7 The Grand Master and his Senior and Junior Grand Wardens, and the Master and His Senior and Junior Wardens in the unit Lodge constitute a genuine hierarchy in Masonry that serves as the holding factors of the wisdom of the ages bequeatht to the Order. In the Wardens therefore, is vested a sacred trust; the continuity of a trust that has come down, without doubt, from many sources thru a very remarkable antiquity. No sane Mason today regards seriously the claim of highly imaginative Masonic writers of a few score years ago, who saw in Masonry an organization on which Moses waited impatiently for initiation, and of which Enoch was one of the illustrious progenitors. Nevertheless, Masonry does service as the "holding corporation" for the legitimate mysteries that many ancient schools sought to develop and to pass on to the "wisdom of future generations."

8 Wisdom and Intelligence, applied to the Prevention of Intemperance and the Preservation of Harmony in the process of the Building of the Invisible Spiritual Temple, are the ethical features exemplified in the office and station of the Senior and Junior Wardens in Masonry. Collectively, the Wardens compose the solid base on which the Lodge, symbolic of the Solomonic Temple is constructed. A foundation on the ethical plane, made up of such principles as are represented by the Wardens, cannot fail to be enduring, progressive, constructive and, above all, active.

9 There is a very special purpose embodied in the way in which we are presenting these pictures of the different Masonic stations. In human institutions, or rather, in the exoteric presentiment of institutions where human executive ability is required, we cannot always look too closely at the personality of the man or the occupant of a given office or station. Some great rulers have been far from desirable as models personally, but their station has called for respect and many of them have, in spite of their personal defects, risen to a really excellent measure of credit for their administrative talent.

10 So, in Masonry, we are calling attention, not to the individuals who bear the titles, so much as we are to the title and the office it represents. In a previous lesson we stated that the Deacons of the Lodge represented the "actinic" properties of the Ray from the Logos and the Celestial Brethren. Similarly, the Wardens represent what might be termed the vital-administrative quality of the Ray. All students will be familiar with part of the following table, which appears in many almanacs and is known to all esoterists and students of astroscience. It shows how parts of the human organism correlate with Zodiacal Signs to compose, in its larger aspect, the cosmic Grand Man of the Universe. Masonry being an universal institution, naturally we expect to find it conforming to the Grand Plan of the Celestial Trestle Board.

Zodiacal	Human	Masonic
Aries	Head and face.	Master, Head of the Lodge.
Taurus	Cerebellum, Throat and Neck.	Senior Warden, Voice of Hiram of Tyre.
Gemini	Lungs, Arms, Shoulders.	Junior Warden, Activity of Hiram Abiff.
Cancer	Stomach and Breasts.	Senior Deacon, Digestive Work.
Leo	Heart, Back, Spinal Cord.	Chaplain, Vital Religious Background.
Virgo	Bowels, Abdomen.	Junior Deacon, Receiver at Outer Door.
Libra	Kidneys, Loins.	Senior Master of Ceremony.
Scorpio	Secrets.	Junior Master of Ceremony.
Sagittarius	Hips and Thighs.	Senior Steward.
Capricorn	Knees.	Junior Steward.
Aquarius	Legs.	Marshal.
Pisces	Feet.	Tyler.

11 The appropriateness of these analogies will be apparent to all students of the esoteric side of Freemasonry and will reveal how solidly the Lodge is planned on truly cosmic lines and proportions. Solomon's Temple was never completely finisht. Therefore, the Lodge refers to its various departments as the unfinisht Sanctum Sanctorum and floors. Grand Lodge is the symbol of the Temple carried to a higher stage of completion but it is only in the Lodge Celestial that we may expect to behold the finisht structure.

12 The Senior and Junior Wardens are, respectively, the administrative mentality of Hiram A.·. Both are necessary in the Work of the Temple and the qualities they symbolize are equally vitally necessary in the Work of the Individual Spiritual Temple, the Unseen Structure.

13 The Senior and Junior Wardens, with their individual trusts, are, or should be, exemplars to the Brethren of "Masters-in-the-making." In them we expect to find embodied the Masonic principles which have been so clearly taught by the officers and the symbolism of their respective stations all along the line. Wardenship is an elective office and to qualify for it, something more than lodge politics is necessary. Ability, integrity, honor and human consideration in its highest manifestation is required. In electing a Warden, the Lodge sees in him a future Master of the Lodge and while good fellowship plays an undoubted part, nevertheless, to the honor of the Craft be it said that in all the years of its existence, the Order has recognized the sterling qualifications necessary for Wardenship and seldom does one come to a Warden's chair without markt qualifications therefor.

14 The Wardens are the vital associates of the Master. Under some circumstances, the Master and his two Wardens can compose a Master Mason's Lodge and this alone shows the organic nature of the Warden's office. In occupying the stations at the South and West of the Lodge, the aspirant to Masonic honors must emulate the two great historical personages whom the Fraternity has chosen as exemplars of trust, integrity, ability and honor. The two stations constitute the Enterd Apprenticeship and Fellow-Craftsmanship of Worshipful Mastership and this dignity is not exceeded by that of any other human creation.

15 According to Simon's Monitor, "the Enterd Apprentice is to emerge from the darkness to light; the Fellow-Craft is to come out of ignorance into knowledge." Preston, who wrote the first Monitor, observes that the First Degree is "to enforce the duties of morality; the Second comprehends a more diffusive system of knowledge." In the Third Degree, the Neofite who has emerged from darkness into light and from ignorance into knowledge has symbolically accomplisht two planes of life expression, the physical and the mental or intellectual, and is now "raised" to the third plane of consciousness, the spiritual.

16 Consequently and logically it is in the Third Degree of Masonry that we find the two Wardens giving appropriate expression to the higher functions of their respective offices. The Neofite has met the Wardens in the preceding degrees, but it is only in the Third Degree that he discovers who and what they actually represent. Thus they become endowed with new personalalities which make a powerful impression upon the Neofite in his psychological condition at the time.

17 In the Third Degree the Senior Warden instructs the Neofite how to wear his Apron. The points of the Compasses are free. The Neofite is now in possession of all the light he can be given in a physical temple. But the way in which he now wears his Apron shows him that Matter is completely penetrated by Spirit and as he can receive no further light in a physical temple, he is again prepared to make another journey, this time on the Spiritual Plane, for unless and until he recovers that which was lost or a good substitute for it, he cannot function as a Master Workman engaged on the higher phases of building.

18 In the Enterd Apprentice Degree and the Fellow-Craft he found a considerable similarity in the work. In the Master's Degree, at first he noted what appeared to be a continuation of that similarity. But as the Neofite approaches the time when he must enter symbolically upon the Spiritual Plane of Consciousness, he observes a markt change. Now he has no "faithful friend" to do for him. Whatsoever he does, must be done alone. Tho thousands are momentarily entering upon the final Spiritual Plane, they do so individually and in silence. The Lodge repeats the lesson—and its warning. The Master's Degree changes the Neofite's mental attitude completely, for here, the first time in his Masonic journey, he is confronted with new experiences which culminate in a way that drives home a powerful lesson, one that he will never forget.

19 Tho he may become a proficient Masonic scholar in after years, little does the Neofite realize at the time, in the Master's Degree, that he is recapitulating a scene and dramatic moment that has been perpetuated from even before the beginning of the Osirian Legend, down thru the rites of Mithra and various other schools to the present day. Tho form and verbiage may change, the principle involved in the drama is imperishable for it is cosmic; it is universal; and it is a principle in Nature itself that goes on forever, repeating itself in every creative process known to biology.

20 Birth, Death, Ressurrection! The three great factors in every life, from primitive cell to complex organism. Man is sure of two of these factors, but he builds his highest hopes on the third, of which he knows the least, and this fact alone is the strongest proof of its reality, for it shows that there is something we have not yet discovered, seemingly embodied in the fundamental protoplasm, that leads man to believe against the testimony of his presently known senses, that death is a ruffian whose triumf is short-lived and who never wins.

21 These three greatest factors that enter into man's ethical consciousness are strest in the three degrees of Freemasonry, but they are most dramatically summarized and recapitulated in the Third and Sublime Degree of Master Mason. The two Wardens, with the Master, present to the Neofite in the Third Degree, a picture of human struggle, earnest, conscientious effort, talent seemingly subjugated by forces of selfishness, greed and envy that stop not short of cruel savagery. Finally, the triumf of a pure soul, the restoration beyond human rapacity of the one who has fought the good fight and who has won thru.

22 The Masonic Drama has been so thoroly covered in the many excellent works by splendid Masonic scholars, that there is no need to repeat it here. Instead, we shall emfasize the truth that the Masonic work is conducted on two planes of consciousness, the mortal and the spiritual. We have strest the fact, previously, that all the Masonic work in the Lodge develops on two distinct planes, the physical and the astral. Whatsoever is done on the physical plane develops its counterpart on the astral plane where it becomes archetypal and permanent. The drama enacted in the Third Degree therefore, does something for the Neofite, of which he little dreams at the time. It prepares him for his final exit from mortal consciousness and his entrance into spiritual consciousness. In this single way, Masonry is doing a work that is paralleled, we believe, by no other human organization.

23 The Church, as an institution, seeks to prepare man for his after death existence by the development of his faith. Masonry seeks to prepare man for the same great adventure by a process of fact. In this connection,, it is notable, that, while the Church has on its hands an ever increasing problem of empty pews, Masonry is swelling its ranks as never before. There is a reason for this. Faith will always be a noble human ethical factor. But the present age, is, as none like it in the past, a philosofical age. Human beings today do not seek faith. They seek fact. Masonry gives its Brethren facts to work with and for this reason, it is appealing to human intelligence as, perhaps, no other institution has done in many centuries.

24 The discerning Neofite, after he has been taught how to wear his Apron as a Master Mason and observes thereby that the triangle of Spirit is fully descended into the Square of Matter, will also note that the position of the Two Wardens and the Master constitutes a Triangle in the Square of the Lodge. Always this position is maintained. Always, therefore, the symbol of Matter Spiritualized is before those who, having eyes, see and understand what they see. In the French and some Rites, the two Wardens are both in the West, but the triangular position is maintained, for one sits in the North-West and the other in the South-West. The symbol therefore, is not without intention and is preserved from ancient times.

25 The Triangle in the Square always symbolizes Matter interpenetrated by and raised to a spiritual plane. In some Masonic bodies the Triangle has, in its center, the name of Deity in Hebrew, the Yod, He, Vau, He, or Tetragrammaton. So, while the Triangle expresses Spirit, in most instances it symbolizes the highest expression of Spirit—Deity, and thus carries out symbolically the first lesson the Masonic Neofite is taught, that of recognizing the Presence and assistance of Deity in all important undertakings.

26 Some there undoubtedly are, who see in Freemasonry only a splendid fraternal Order. Others in Freemasonry fear that fraternalism is perhaps being carried too far. Frankly, the writer disagrees with both classes of our excellent Brethren. In the first place, human relationships and human needs are such that no real fraternalism can exist without an inner, tho perhaps unexprest nucleus of Deific motif. Secondly, human relationships and human needs are such that no true fraternalism can be carried too far. We need the best and truest kind of fraternalism in the best and truest measure.

27 In Freemasonry, the recognition of Deity is a basic principle and the action and presence of Deity is manifest in every teaching and symbolism of the Lodge. And the more personal fraternalism we develop, the more we shall bring our Brethren under the ægis of that Deific Presence until, little by little, it becomes apparent to the most materialistic mind. In every Masonic teaching, the Neofite is instructed that his status at the time is a part of the Plans laid down on the Trestle Board of the Lodge, which, in turn, is simply a humble reflection of the plans laid down on the Celestial Trestle Board, whose draughtsman is the Great Architect of the Universe, Deity, the Great Geometrician. The plans of the Great Geometrician must, of necessity, represent symmetry, proportion, and stability, which are the practical expressions of balance, justice, mercy and altruism.

28 In the triumvirate of Grand Masters represented by the Master and his two Wardens, the first, King Solomon, represents Wisdom to plan and administer. The second, Hiram of Tyre, represents the kingly quality of human co-operation, amity, concord and agreement in generous human relationships. The third, Hiram A.·., represents the kingly quality of making the supreme sacrifice if need be, in the preservation of trust and responsibility. These are factors that have represented the epitome of human ethical goals thru many centuries. The two Wardens therefore, stand for supremely high or kingly qualities of manhood which, in themselves, are impressive lessons to the Neofite and to the Brethren as well. They maintain and keep alive a vital example in the routine work of the Order.

29 The office of the Wardens truly carries out the symbol of the Bee Hive. This particular symbol is explained to the Neofite as one of industry and he is taught never to scorn any of the industrial arts. But there is something deeper in the Bee Hive symbolism than this. The Rosicrucians esteem the Bee and the Bee Hive as most important symbols, for to them they represent Transmutation and the alembic in which the work of transmutation is performed. Now Freemasonry too, should realize this nature and character of the Bee, one of the most marvelous of all natural creatures, with a degree of intelligence we are only beginning to understand. The Bee takes the substance of the flower and transmutes it into crystallized sunshine, honey, a vegetable product raised to an animal product, and preserves it in a tiny cell of pure wax.

30 For this reason, the ritualistic Churches of Christendom canonically stipulate that only candles of pure beeswax or candles containing a certain percentage of beeswax shall be used as Eucharistic lights on the Altar. It is because of the symbol of Transmutation they represent, and in the Masonic application this symbol shows that the Neofite, besides being active and industrious, is, in building his spiritual Temple, raising himself from a lower to an higher status, from the physical and mental to the spiritual plane of consciousness.

31 The Hive represents the Lodge, which is a center of activity. The wax is represented by the ethical but positive factor of Brotherly Love. As the wax unites all the cells in the hive, so the wax of Brotherly Love unites all the brethren in the Lodge in one active, industrious fraternal band. The wax in the Bee Hive is arranged in perfect geometric form by a group of bees known as the "Workers" under the direction of Master Workers, true Masons in fact. In the Lodge, the wax of Brotherly Love, or "cement" as it is there called, is spread by the Trowel of the Master, who directs the geometrically perfect work of the brethren.

32 In the Master's Degree, the Pot of Incense is the emblem of a pure heart and an acceptable sacrifice to Deity. Again, it is more than that. Incense, when ignited, forms a cloud of subtle vapor, which is breathed into the lungs and thus enters into the circulation of each one present. In this sense, it forms a connecting link between the Brethren of the Seen and the Unseen Lodges. It is a means and a channel by and thru which the spiritual afflatus develop "where two or three are gathered together with one accord" can enter into each organism, and organically become a uniting factor thru which the spiritual accord can flow and manifest in and thru each brother present.

33 The Anchor and the Ark are emblems of a well grounded hope, a well spent life and of that Divine Ark that will safely waft us over the tempestuous sea of troubles and anchor us in a peaceful harbor where the wicked shall cease from troubling and the weary will be at rest. Let us look deeper. Every world religion has had, and those still existing do have their respective arks. The ark of the Shekinah in the Hebrew Temple was assumed to hold the Presence of Jehovah after the Presence had ceast from manifesting thru the Pillars of Fire and Cloud In the Christian Church, the Ark is the Tabernacle on the Altars of ritualistic churches, where the Consecrated Wafer called the "Host" is affirmed to retain the Real Presence of the Christos. Egyptian, Chaldean, Babylonian and Assyrian altars had their shrines or Arks for similar purposes. Several Egyptian temples had, in the Sanctuary, Arks wherein bones of Osiris were believed to preserve the Presence of the God.

34 Every human being is an Ark wherein the Divine Presence is preserved. The human body is an Ark, floating on the troubled waters of human life and mortal expression, passing thru storms of strife, whirlpools of contention, eddies of conflicting desires, theories, beliefs and forces that seemingly swerve it from its course. The Real Presence is the Ego, the Spark of Divinity that unites in flesh the human and Divine natures, the Word Incarnate and made flesh. If left to itself, the human organism, wonderful as it is, would soon become a prey to the very forces that brot it into being. The Master, the Ego, the Divine Presence, is the helmsman and steers the wonderful Ark in the direction intended by the Celestial Trestle Board, the plans of which, we call—Destiny. When the Master leaves the Ark, it becomes the prey to forces just mentioned, and, as all know, its disintegration is speedy.

35 The Anchor is knowledge. Knowledge, the collection of truths that we know thru personal experience, is much less than we ordinarily suppose. If we were to make an inventory of things we can affirm we positively know, in distinction to what we think we know or what we believe or what we accept on assumedly creditable information, we might be surprised to see how small the list would be. Nevertheless, we go thru life, basing our hopes, ideals, ambitions, endeavors and strivings on a few facts we actually know to be positive truth. On such facts we build all thru our life expression. The collection of facts that constitutes what actual knowledge we have is our Anchor. Our beliefs, assumptions, hypotheses, conjectures, speculations, theories and day-dreams are not anchors. They are false moorings and we often find ourselves strangely "at sea" when we thought we were safely moored. Knowledge is our sure Anchor and establishes us in safe moorings and prevents our frail craft from being swampt by the deluge of human opinions and oppositions.

36 The Forty Seventh Problem of Euclid is a symbol regarding which, many fascinating works have been produced. There must be some excellent reason why this particular symbol has been selected from among the many seemingly equally important geometric theorems. Briefly, the Problem postulates that, "the square described upon the hypotenuse of a right triangle, is equal to the sum of the squares described upon the other two sides. The sides of the Triangle represent Matter as the horizontal base; Spirit as the upright or perpendicular. Deity as the hypotenuse, connects Matter and Spirit. Matter and Spirit are simply two different manifestations of God. one in His dense or visible aspect, the other in his attenuated or spiritual aspect. God is the sum of all Matter and all Spirit. Now if we apply the Euclidian diagram to Man, the horizontal represents his Body, the upright or perpendicular his spirit. The hypotenuse represents his Divine nature and character which must be the sum of his physical and spiritual characteristics. Again, let the horizontal represent Man's Body. The Perpendicular is his Mind. The hypotenuse will represent the sum of his physical and intellectual abilities as his Spiritual Consciousness. Whichever way we use it, the Euclidian Problem represents the Divine Nature as collectively summing up the results of the dual qualities of the two aspects of Nature exprest by the horizontal and the perpendicular lines.

37 The Hour Glass is an emblem of human life. It surely is! But not as simply as it appears, for the Hour Glass is an external emblem of interior hour glasses within us. A man is as healthy, as long-lived, as able, and as ethically developt as his glands make him. Those tiny alchemists within us are somewhat like time-clocks. Seemingly they are charged according to individual constitution, hereditary endowment and vital stock, to "run" for a given length of time. We can accelerate their motion if we choose, and if we do so choose, we pay the penalty by shortening our lives. This we commonly call "burning the candle at both ends," but it is very true nevertheless, altho it is only thru recent science that we have discovered the reasons for it. Like old batteries, we try to recharge them by various means and methods of rejuvenation but none of these have proved permanently effective and they only put off the eventual exhaustion. The Glands of Man are the hour-glasses of his various vital departments physiologically and they are running continuously.

38 From another standpoint, the Hour Glass is a symbol of a Nature-fact that few Masons have studied. Students of astroscience observe the progress of the planetary bodies in their relation to the individual human being, and from a map called a "horoscope" or "chart of the hours" they observe the various aspects formed by the heavenly bodies to a particular chart and note how Destiny checks off from time to time, the epochal events in the individual life expression. This is not to be confused with "fortune telling" for none of that element enters into true astroscience. Nevertheless, to the sincere observer, the individual horoscope or hour-map of a man is his individual Hour-Glass recording the passing of Time and its manifestation.

39 Ordinarily, the Scythe is the emblem of the Reaper—Death. To the esoterist, however, it is equally the symbol of the Sower,—Life. Before one can sow, reaping must take place. The Scythe is then, more truly a symbol of Preparation. If one of the Great Masters of Freemasonry had merely died, there would have been no Freemasonry. Had the Christos merely died, there would have been no Christianity. Great Ones—true Masters, prove that thru death, they enter into Life More Abundant. To the true Mason, the Scythe is a symbol of Preparation for Great Opportunity. Therefore, there is nothing morbid about this symbol to those who can discern the Light it affords and radiates.

40 In industry, the scythe is used for two purposes; to cut the crop of hay or valuable food product or nourishment for lower forms of life, and to cut down weeds and hedges on the wayside. In human life, the Scythe is the symbol of that biological reaping whereby we garner the crop of positive virtues we have developt, grown and accumulated from our individual experience in mortal expression and we also cut away the weeds of parasitic growth of false desires, notions and theories that clog our mentality and intellect, so that we need not carry them with us into the Plane of Reality.

41 Thru all these useful and eloquent symbols does Freemasonry, like a faithful parent giving wholesome precepts to his sons, give to its workmen warnings and examples by which they may be unerringly guided thru the maelstrom of human expression. Altho a railroad may have perfect rolling stock, good road bed and the best interlocking switch system, travel is not safe unless that road is amply provided with reliable signals and also unless the engineer understands those signals.

42 Human life is like the railroad. Given a sound, perfect body and ample means for existence, nevertheless wreckages of the finest lives occur unless the engineer, the Ego, understands the warning signals set for his direction and also unless plenty of signals in the shape of useful, logical, wholesome symbols of human experience are thoughtfully and wisely provided.

43 Wardenship is a noble and an exalted office. All the Masonic virtues taught to the Neofite are expected to be exemplified by the Senior and Junior Wardens. They are to show us by personal example the virtues of the Great Grand Masters they represent. As Man is a trinity of essential qualities and natures, so the Master and his two Wardens constitute a trinity that represents in the Lodge—Deific qualities. Deity is manifest in every Masonic teaching. Without that manifestation, no "regular" Masonic body recognizes the organization lacking it. God has been defined as "that within each man, which makes him love and desire to serve his fellow man." This is a profound truth with which every thinking Mason will surely agree for there is no discordant note of denominationalism or sectarianism in it. It is a nature-truth that is self evident.

44 In Wardenship, the Mason contemplates the next and final step, for no matter whether he goes to Grand Lodge or not, the office and station of Worshipful Master is a sublime step and status. Many Wardens become Masters who never become Masters. This seeming paradox will be explained in the next lesson, on Mastership. Many men have become nearly great, but failing to become truly great, they become—pathetic. Yet they have lived useful lives and have performed many useful deeds for their country and for their fellow men. The world pities them for what they might have become, had they risen to their opportunity and been able to put themselves over.

45 This is what the true Warden, who understands his position will attempt to do—to become a real Master when he is elected to that office by the suffrages of his Brethren. He is in the position of one who, having been faithful over a few things, is about to be made ruler over many things, above all—ruler over himself.

46 Thus the Masonic school provides various grades, from which it promotes its students and Neofites in an ever ascending scale, each new grade attained representing a new status of evolutionary progress in human ethical and spiritual life. Like the Bee which is held up to him as a symbol, the true Mason is ever seeking to transmute his personal and individual energies and potentialities into higher expressions and manifestations, until he arrives before the goal that means so much in its real sense,—Mastership. The station of Master does not make the Master, unless the Warden has become a Master before his election, he is not apt, to become one afterward. The way to the higher station is always by accomplishing in full the duties and responsibilities of the lower station one may be filling at the time.

47 The Wardens have a great responsibility in exemplifying before their brethren, the qualities their stations are assumed to display. Unless they prove themselves worthy examplars of the two Hirams (Khurums) they cannot worthily represent the wisdom of Sol-Om-On. As Lesser Hierarchs of Freemasonry, the Wardens are charged with the responsibility of representing the best that the Ancient Craft embodies, whether in or out of the Lodge, for, with the Master, they are the Lodge, Just as a Justice or Judge is, theoretically, the Court at all times. Symbolically representing Strength and Beauty, the Two Wardens also represent the two Pillars at the right and left hand sides of the Porch of King Solomon's Temple. Strength and Beauty are the Guardians of the Temple in which, as Masters, they hope to preside in due time.

48 As Guardians of the Porch of the Temple, they have as their correspondence in the Mysteries, the Guardian of the Threshold, a profound esoteric principle based upon the karmic accumulation the individual has develop, and which must be met and successfully passed before the Neofite can hope to enter the sacred precincts beyond.

#233

MASTERS, MASTERY, MASTERSHIP

"Neither be ye called Masters: for one is your Master". Matt. xxiii:8.

THERE are two occasions in the life of every Masonic Master that are never to be forgotten. The first is when he is handed the Gavel of authority from the Installing Officer, and realizes in full, with a surcharged consciousness, all that it implies. For the Masonic Master is truly the Master of his Lodge. He is all-powerful in that body. From his decision there is no immediate appeal. The second great occasion is the moment when he surrenders the Gavel of authority, to be presented in turn to his successor. It takes a big personality to receive power and then lay it down quietly and gracefully.

2 There are many Masons whose breasts have never been decorated with a Master's Jewel, but who were true Masters nevertheless. There have been and are many Worshipful Masters and Past Masters who proudly display glittering Jewels, who have never known the meaning of Mastership. Neither the Jewel nor the station make the Master. They adorn the title and the person and they are insignia of what should be, but, unfortunately more seldom is.

3 The foregoing observations are not in any sense a lack of appreciation of the office of a Master in Freemasonry. Many who are known as Masters, but who are not Masters in the real sense, are, nevertheless, men of a type that reflect great credit upon the Craft; men whose lives are exemplary; who are at the service of their Brethren; who are foremost in Lodge activities, but who have not learned what it means to travel in foreign countries, work and receive Master's wages.

4 There are three kinds of Masons who come to the Master's Chair and Hat. The first are the politicians of the Craft, and every human organization worth while has its full complement of such. They seek the office for its "pomp and circumstance," its Jewels, authority, prominence, influence both within and without the Lodge and the popularity it is assumed to develop or manifest. The second kind are they who, without knowing anything about the esoteric side of Freemasonry, are elevated to the office with a full sense of personal responsibility and moral accountability, fully prepared and desirous of giving the Lodge the best that is in them. They are a credit to the Craft. Their names are honored and—remembered. They are among the finest citizenry the nation produces. The third class is the very small number of those who know what Mastership and Mastery means, because they have enterd into Light, they have learned to travel in the foreign countries, they are earning Master's Wages, they have mastered themselves.

5 When a Lodge has a Master of the third class, it seldom knows it at the time. It simply appreciates that it has a Master out of the ordinary. It honors him as a Masonic scholar, perhaps, or, if it fails to measure up thus far, it admits that the Master is a very wise person, a bit beyond the rest of the Brethren. Masters of the third class do not advertise their position. They make no claims. They do not parade their knowledge. They do not isolate themselves from their Brethren by peculiar affectations or the "I-am-holier-than-thou" attitude. In fact, they seem commonplace, usually, until one knows them.

6 In view of its religious aspect, Freemasonry would seem to be in opposition to the exprest command of One who has been acclaimed and affirmed to have been a Master thruout the centuries. This Master warned his disciples to call no man Master. Yet, in another place, he admits that the servant is not above his master or lord. Here is a seeming contradiction.

7 The seeming contradiction can be reconciled when we make a careful study of the life teachings of the undoubted Master who gave the command. There was no injunction against the use of the term master as used in an executive sense. For ages, humanity has spoken of masters of vessels, masters of horse, masters of intellectual pursuits, masters of organizations and masters of men. The ordinary use of the term master in Masonry is exoteric, i. e., as a ruler of men—his Brethren, by their voluntary election and acceptance of him as such.

8 The admonition against calling a man Master was with reference to its esoteric sense, and the wisdom of the admonition is seen at the present day, in the cases of so many absurd cults that have set up their own galaxies of Masters, who, in a few years, come tumbling down from their thrones and prove themselves idols of clay. The true Master in the esoteric never proclaims himself such, admits himself so to be, or permits his students to use the term. He knows human frailty too well. Being acclaimed a Master is one of the hardest tests a Master has to bear, for it motivates all the forces of destructiveness toward unseating his balance and equilibrium.

9 For the purpose of this lesson we will list some definitions;

Masters; a—Exoteric; Masters of men, organizations, affairs, business, etc.
b—Esoteric; Masters of themselves, therefore Masters also of Nature-forces operative, in, thru and by Man.

Mastery; The process (in the esoteric) of conquering exterior and interior forces, energies, desires, wishes, attachments, false concepts, wrong thought, and the imposition of the trained Will over animal impulses when destructively or wastefully operative.

Mastership; The status of one who has attained Mastery over himself and the forces represented by the human machine: the attainment of right thought and an equilibrated status: dissociation and detachmentf rom material matters as a sine qua non. Complete human manhood and efficiency. Control.

10 It is one thing therefore, to be a ruler in Freemasonry by occupying the Master's Chair and by exercising the prerogatives it confers. It is quite another thing to be a Master in Masonry, or any where else in the world, for that matter, by attainment of all that Mastership really means. The Masonic Degrees give the Neofite Light. They point a way. They give reliable guidance. But they do not compel the Neofite to follow the precepts laid down. The Order leaves it to the Neofite as optional with him whether he will dig deeply in the mines of Masonry, or whether he will be content with a superficial acceptance of its teachings.

11 In making the Neofite's spiritual progress a matter of option, Masonry again proves its possession of the age-old wisdom, for it is an axiom in spiritual law that no compulsion shall or may be used on any aspirant. No progress will be real, worthy, active or constructive, that is not a matter of free-will, without prompting, and absolutely free from suggestion of any sort from without. Thus, at the beginning of his career, the Neofite is askt more than once, "Is this an act of your own free-will"? On his answer depends his future progress, not only in the initiatory rites but in his inner spiritual life as well, for what the Neofite answers with his lips, really bespeaks the impulse of the heart.

12 Thru the subtle universality of Freemasonry, its teachings are seeping into the inner consciousness of its Brethren more and more yet almost unperceived. Twenty-five years ago, little interest was displayed in what is called "esoteric Masonry". A prominent Masonic official of exalted station is recorded as having once said "to . . . with occultism or esoterism". Well, it so happens that the great body over which that official presides is the strongest factor in true occultism and esoteric Masonry anywhere in the Craft. In a few years, the official will be forgotten, but the work he contemns is growing stronger, more powerful and more vital day by day. Today, more Masons seek an understanding of the esoteric nature of the Craft and display a better understanding of what true Mastership means than ever before in the history of the Craft. Papers are being prepared in many Lodges on the subject "What Mastership Means to Me," and the results of those papers are most encouraging and instructive, and show the new note of spiritual and intellectual progress pervading the Craft at large.

13 We may truly say that there are three kinds of Masters in the Craft. There are Masters of Masons, Masters among Masons and Masters in Masonry. The first are the exoteric rulers in the Craft who may or who may not know what real Mastership means. The second are the leading lights among the Craftsmen, whose deeds are an honor to the Fraternity. The third are they who are placing the leaven of knowledge in the Craft, more or less unknown by the Brethren at large. Real Masters do their work quietly, without publicity and without titles. Title-hounds are never Masters, except, usually, masters of egoism or downright charlatanry. There is plenty of evidence however, that Freemasonry has, in its ranks, many true Masters who are quietly and unostentatiously doing the constructive work, a work that is bearing a rich fruitage and spreading its influence far and wide, even beyond the confines of the Craft itself.

14 The Master Mason has been taught, thru the ritual of the degrees he has received, the esoteric meaning of the exoteric implements presented to him as "working tools". It remains for him to use them on the spiritual temple he is supposed to be building. The Lodge will not compel him to use them. But it expects him to use them. The Master Mason who uses his spiritual working tools will reap a rich reward which will come to him not as a reward but as a new phase of consciousness that will remove all trace of mercenary desire. When Freemasonry becomes composed of Brethren who are actually using their spiritual working tools, as the writer firmly believes will be the case, then a power will become operative in human relationships that will be invincible and superior to that of any presently known force for good on our planet.

15 Freemasonry is one of the best possible schools for true Masters-in-embryo. It establishes a correct concept of Mastership right from the beginning. Many cults which deal so generously in Masters, have spread the concept that Masters are, in some indefinable way, beings so holy aand exalted that they cannot and do not live in the world of men and affairs, but segregate themselves, like jack-rabbits, in inaccessible caves in Himalayan and other mountains ranges where no one ever sees them, where no one can reach them, where their very existence cannot be proven, where inhabitants of the region know nothing, about them or ever heard of them. For this reason the promoters of such nonsense feel safe in ascribing almost everything under the sun to these mythical beings. The fact is, that Masters like Moses, Buddha, Confucius, Christ and other avatars, lived among men, were accessible to men, taught among men, ate and drank with men and made no claims to supernaturalism in any form.

16 Freemasonry provides a theatre and stage wherein and whereon those who seek to follow the real Masters and to become like them in the real sense, can do so. In Freemasonry, men can mingle with men, teach among men, live among men, function among men, yes, and eat and drink among men, be the better for so doing, and prove themselves men among men, and consequently Masters in a real and constructive sense. Freemasonry does not need nor does it exploit any sort of supernaturalism. It seeks to develop the natural to its fullest extent. Such work calls for Masters and the Craft seeks such men and shows them the way to attainment.

17 The real Master is a Conqueror, for he has had to conquer the most difficult thing in the whole wide world,—himself. Freemasonry takes men who are still in and on the battlefield of human life and in providing them with a true fraternalism, it also provides them with the finest sort of ground for personal development. The fortunate individual who, as a Master Mason,, has been called to become a Master of Masons, should not be content with being also a Master among Masons, but should aspire to become a Master in Masonry as well. When the new Master assumes the Gavel and takes his seat and dons the archaic Master's Hat, he enters into an atmosphere and an aura made sacrosanct by decades of honorable precedent, that will give him an impetus, an encouragement, and a stimulus that will rarely be found elsewhere, toward a proper understanding and recognition of what his Master's office and station should mean to him. If he is at all sensitive, he must feel this in some degree. Most of the Masters the writer has met have become conscious of this truth to some extent. Many of them have not known exactly what it was at the time, but they admit having felt themselves in an unusual position wherein something was demanded and expected of them that they had not hitherto experienst.

18 Taking it by and large, Freemasonry has chosen good men as its rulers and exoteric Masters. It requires a man of good sense, reason and character to become a good Master even in the exoteric for when power and authority is vested in a man who has never exercised it elsewhere he seldom measures up to it and fails to know how to use it. The Masonic Master, besides representing King Solomon and his reputed Wisdom, also represents, Kabbalistically, the Sephira Kether (Ipsissimus), or the Crown. Mastership is the crowning achievement of the Master Mason who has seen, heard, understood and practist all or as much as he could of what he had been invested with. There are several Kabalas, and in some usages Kether represents Deity. No true Master assumes to correspond to this Sephira from this standpoint, but he does, nevertheless, represent the crown of achievement and attainment. His titular office confers this grade from the Sephirotic scheme upon him, and it is for him to measure up to it with all his ability.

19 The specific working tool of the Master Mason is the Trowel, which is also largely identified with the Master and is the special Jewel of the Select Master. The Square pertains to the Master's station because, as the Master Workman of the Lodge, in supreme authority, it is his prerogative and function to try every man's work, whether it be perfect or not. Now the Trowel is not only used to place the cement that unites a structure into one mass, it is used to spread that cement. There is a deep esoterism in that little work "spread". It means to distribute, to smooth out, to unite, to develop. The true Master in the Craft therefore, is not only an executive, he is a supreme instructor, a teacher, a propagandist for the Order. It is a true part and phase of the Master's work to spread the teachings of Freemasonry. Therefore he must be well informed as to Masonry's teachings, not only from the ritual standpoint but from the standpoint of exact knowledge of their inner or esoteric meaning.

20 The true Master in Masonry, by virtue of the smoothing property of this Trowel, should also be a Master of Harmony, balance, equilibrium and poise. Thru his qualities in this direction no element of inharmony should ever be permitted to enter the Lodge, for his supreme authority can overrule the forces of distress and inharmony to ensure peace, harmony and brotherly love and affection. A Lodge without a Master would be unthinkable. Therefore, it is the Master's presence that, in an organic sense, maintains the unity of the entire structure of the Lodge. The Master is endowed with the power of creating harmony and ensuring unity and he is invested with the prerogative of trying the work of his craftsmen. These are powers that belong to every true Master, wheresoever we may find them in the world at large. They do not force their powers or privileges upon any man. They are at the service of all men to test their fellow-men for the latter's edification, instruction and wise counsel, for the counsel of a true Master is always constructive, therefore always to be sought and valued.

21 We have already mentioned at some length in this series of lessons, the concept of a "Lost" or "Master's Word". Oriental enthusiasts have profest to find in the AUM or OM of Eastern religious philosofies, the Word that was Lost. But the Orientals who have intoned this word and meditated thereon thru many centuries past, long before the Christian Era, have not been able to lift themselves from the status of a conquered people, emasculated and decadent. Likewise, modern charlatans have "restored" the Lost Word in lectures, lessons and private teachings,—at a price—but we do not find that their disciples have been able to lift themselves from a very ordinary mental attitude. Whatever the Lost Word may be, we believe it is reasonably obvious to the thinker. Those who seek some remarkable freak of etymology or magic sound that will shake the heavens and make all things possible to the happy possessor, will be doomed to disappointment.

22 The Lost Word is restored only to those who can recognize it, understand it, and, above all know how to act when they are invested with it. Any one who claims to possess it is a self-confest impostor right at the start, as every true occultist knows. When one reaches the status wherein and whereby he can recognize the Lost Word or Word of the Master, he does not use it as a publishing asset or a publicity promoter. He lives it, and living it is the only way in which one can function the Master's Word.

23 The true Master in Masonry will know the Lost Word. Altho he will never acknowledge its possession, those who know him will be conscious of the fact that he is in possession of something not ordinarily possest or even understood by others. The Master's Word has never been printed. It cannot be. Therefore, more or less clever inventions can be safely cast into the rubbish box, for time will prove their worthlessness if one cares to or has time to waste. It is better by far, and it is the "only way", to attain the Master's Word by the accumulated merit of Right Thought, Right Speech and Right Action, which indelibly stamp the real Master in Masonry.

24 The real Master, who lives the Master's Word, is a power among men and in the world at large altho he seldom displays any honors accruing from his status. The honors that Mastership inevitably bring are not the honors of this world or glittering but meaningless titles easily invented, cheaply sold and acquired with little difficulty by any one who is willing to play the necessary politics to obtain them. The honors showerd upon the real Master are those conferd upon him by his associates in the "foreign countries", as a recognition of his attainments unknown to his visible brethren but well known to those who are active upon inner and higher planes of thought and consciousness.

25 Here is a curious fact. The real Master will not proclaim himself to be a Master, simply because he does not know that he is a Master. In other words, the real Master is conscious that he has conquered some things and has resultantly risen in the scale of progress and spiritual evolution, but always he sees greater things to be conquered and mastered —in himself. As his consciousness expands, his consciousness of self becomes clearer, wider and more comprehensive. The more he learns and discovers about himself, the more he sees to master and to perfect. At no time therefore, is the real Master in a position wherein he can sit back, consciously, and say to himself, "It is finisht, I have conquered, I have mastered, this is all there is for me to do".

26 At no time will the real Master find that there is nothing further for him to accomplish; no further height for him to attempt to scale, no further goal. Always, another and more important goal, involving greater responsibilities, opens up before him. This truth is what prevents many sincere aspirants from becoming Masters in the real sense. At the very start, they discover that, as quickly as they feel they have accomplisht one set of tasks or passed an apparent test, greater tasks and greater tests appear before them. They take, if they are weak, the attitude of the world and say to themselves at least, if not to others, "What's the use", or, "I cannot spend my life in this sort of thing; it doesn't get me any where". Have you, my friend, ever heard expressions like these? If so, you may be sure they came from some one who has been given definite tests by the Great Ones of Destiny, and has become discouraged at the very beginning and is giving up the race.

27 The real Master-in-the-making proves his worthiness to proceed by showing himself to be above discouragements. Discouragements result from failure to realize results from a given plan or procedure. Ten to one our plans were wrong. The discouragements result from our ignorance. Therefore, all discouragements are tests and likewise warnings that something is wrong somewhere in our plans. We have made mistakes. If we have not, we are not true men. Mistakes are wonderful things. They are opportunities,—opportunities to do better. If every thing we attempt workt out just as we planned it, what a mess of things we should make in this old world. It is good for the human race that we make so many mistakes. Then we have to stop and think more carefully as to the better way, and if we should investigate, we would find that the most valuable thing in life, the greatest and most important inventions ,greatest advances in government, intellectualism and even spiritual progress have resulted from a very considerable chain of original mistakes and the consequent attempts to correct and rectify them.

28 All this, the real Master gradually learns, and soon he becomes, if not happy, at least encouraged by his mistakes because he knows that they mean he is to do what he is doing in a better and more constructive way. The weakling does not learn this lesson. He bemoans his "bad luck" and flits from one thing to another always hunting for the next opportunity without being able to recognize it, always watching for the ship that seldom, if ever, comes in.

29 The real Master in Masonry is keenly alive to these truths. He is not content with merely "making Masons" and conferring degrees, however instructive and beautiful those degrees may be. He is ready always with his Trowel, smoothing out the Path of the weakening brother or the discouraged craftsman. Some of the most helpful counsel, wise guidance, and fraternal assistance this writer has ever seen or known of being given to men, has come from Masters in Masonry who did not know themselves to be such, but who were always ready, as Masters should be and are, to do all that was within their power, not limited by the extent of their Cable Tow but unlimitedly and unstintedly.

30 The true Master need not be a devotee of oriental lore or a juggler with pentagrams, pentacles or Kabbalistic theories. But he must be a nature-lover, recognizing in the lower kingdoms of life his younger brethren, and feeling himself akin to all that has life. He is a partner with every living thing, for he knows that he is sharing with them the same vital forces of Nature, which is God in Manifestation.

31 Mastership does not require the accomplishment of abnormal or outre practices, fads, silly mutterings, mumblings, moanings, grotesque and unnatural postures, contortions and phallic accompaniments. We have yet to see a Master evolved by or thru any such procedures and the groups large or small that encourage and teach such rinktums have not as yet produced any recognizable examples of spiritual power and clean manhood. The spirituelle, sickly, anaemic types are not by any manner of means on the road to Mastership, for Mastery includes mastery of the laws of health, hygiene, physiology, as well as those of psychology and the mental and spiritual world.

32 The Master arrives at his goal thru a process of accomplishing seemingly little things. A man once said to the writer that "no one who bothered his head with a mass of details could ever hope to become a truly big man." Estimates vary, as to what constitutes a big man. If no one could become a big man who used his head for masses of details, we would have had no Edison, we would have no Bell, we would be minus a host of men who have made, thru their contributions, our civilization what it is, the most marvelous the world has ever known.

33 The Great Brethren, who have our human evolution in their keeping, do not start the embryo Master on his way, by placing before him profound problems, the solution of which will bring him a more or less immediate recognition. They try him out with trifles—seemingly. Here again the weak, unprepared, or unworthy fall from line, for the type of mind that cannot devote itself energetically to the accomplishment of some seemingly small affair, will not show the requisite qualities tto deal with larger matters. The false pride that can see nothing less than front page publicity on the newsprint, will never feel that the conquest or mastery of so small a matter as himself, is worthy his energies and efforts.

34 Mastery is the parable of the Talents repeated over and over again thruout the ages. Only to those who have been faithful in a few things (small things—trifles), will be given the rulership over larger things. No man can rule a city who cannot conquer a village and no man can master others who cannot master himself. The process of attaining Mastership then, is the process of mastering little things—at least seemingly little things. The Great Light warns us "Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth (Jas. iii:5). The most momentous affairs in mortal experience develop from the smallest beginning. A spark is all that is necessary to create a forest fire covering hundreds of square miles of territory. The Master-in-embryo is he who recognizes the importance of little things and pays as much attention to the successful and creditable accomplishment of them as io the seemingly more attractive and glittering matter.

35 This is not an instruction relating to the process of attaining Mastership. What has here been given, is sufficient to show that Freemasonry provides all the material and all the instruction necessary for those of its Brethren who sincerely desire to seek, not only exoteric rulership as Masters-in-ordinary, but better still, esoteric Mastership in the real and complete sense of the word. Every teaching in Freemasonry is a distinct and definite step toward true Mastership. Every Working Tool of the Craft is an aid to the Magnum Opus. Every ethical principle exprest in the Masonic curriculum is additional material from which to build the Stone of the Wise. The Lodge is an alembic. The initiations are stages in Transmutation. The result—if truly attained—will be the Philosofer's Stone, but this is not easy.

36 The true Master does not display any phenomena of Mastership. He is not called upon to produce credentials, for these will be evident if he is a Master. Mastership is not "demonstrated by sanctimonious visage, the hypocritical veneer of imposture, the camouflage of affected cheerfulness of pseudo scientifico-religious cultism, or the tinselry of self-conferd "honors". These are proofs of the non-attainment of Mastership—its antipode. Mastership brings the only kind of honors a man can successfully withstand, for human honors are easily secured but expensive to maintain; a proof of their relatively slight real value.

37 The office and work of a Masonic exoteric Master or Lodge Ruler is well known and understood by every Brother of the Craft. But his position is merely the outward presentiment of the vast principle that lies beneath the titular surface. The Spirit of Freemasonry is working indefatigably to stimulate, thru the significance of the Master's Chair, the desire to become a real Master in every occupant. And there have been real Masters in the esoteric as well as in the exoteric. Albert Pike was one of them. His writings are biblical to thousands of Freemasons and we hail this opportunity to do him reverence as becomes his high and exalted station, for Albert Pike still lives, not as a memory, but as an Entity. The intitiated will understand.

38 There have been other Masters in Masonry. We need not use this space to name them for their works live imperishably in the archives of the Craft. Their works do follow them. We cite the fact because it is an encouragement to us to realize that others have attained to the True Wisdom thru the sublime principles of our Craft, when rightly understood. It is for us to understand the principles we have been and are taught. Freemasonry wars against ignorance. That is the only war it wages; otherwise it is an institution peculiarly of peace. In banishing ignorance, the Order paves the way for us to see the Light and it sets its Light upon the hilltops so that all may see.

39 Every Brother who has been "raised" in Freemasonry has been started upon the Path to real Mastership. He does not realize it at the time. But every guide-post possible is set before him if he will but read it intelligently. Signs are arranged in right angles, horizontals and perpendiculars and each one has a direct and definite application to human life and progress. The Brother who sees in them merely an arrangement of lines is still in ignorance. As soon as he sees in them ethical and even physical forces, he is beginning to see the Light and if he keeps on, he cannot fail to discern the goal to which he should be traveling.

40 The Master's Hat is an archaic symbol, yet one having a sound symbology. According to Bro. Mackey, "To uncover the head in the presence of superiors has been, among all Christian nations, held as a mark of respect and reverence". We must remember, however, that Freemasonry work along the legend of the Temple of Solomon the King. This Temple was the seat of Hebrew ecclesiastical authority. It has been an age-old custom, still maintained, among the Hebrews, to keep the head covered in Temple or Synagogue. The usage of the Master's Hat has a sound historical and religious basis.

41 It is not so much that the Master retains his Hat ceremonially, in order that the Brethren may be placed in the position of having uncovered heads in the presence of a superior, for Freemasonry does not inculcate the theory of superiors to such a pronounst degree. The greater principles of Liberty, Equality and Fraternity have prior eminence. We must look deeper. The Master's Hat, worn by him ceremonially, is a symbol of Humility, a cardinal Masonic precept, taught on more than one occasion in the Craft. The Jewish Priests and High Priests wore special turbans or mitres; the Christian clergy wear the beretta, mitre and zucchetto. These head pieces were and are worn as symbols of humility and reverence in ceremonial functions. The Master represents his Brethren before the Presence of Deity which has been invokt by the chaplain, a Presence symbolized by the letter G displayed in a manner familiar to all members of the Craft.

42 A Masonic Master in the exoteric sense, that of a ruler in Masonry, is an exalted personage. A Master in Masonry in the esoteric sense is a vastly greater personage. The Founders of Freemasonry knew what real Mastership meant. This is evident in all the archives of the Order recovered by indefatigable Masonic scholars. It was the purpose of the Founders of the Craft so to exalt Mastership that every occupant of the Master's Chair would sense the inner significance of his station and rise to the real eminence it symbolizes. In the process of this gestation and growth of the Order, the organic side of development has, at times, obscured the deeper significance that is enshrined in the station, but modern Masonic scholarship is bringing it more and more to the thoughtful attention of the Brethren and already there is a well defined appreciation of what true Mastership really means; an appreciation that is deeper and more profund than ever before.

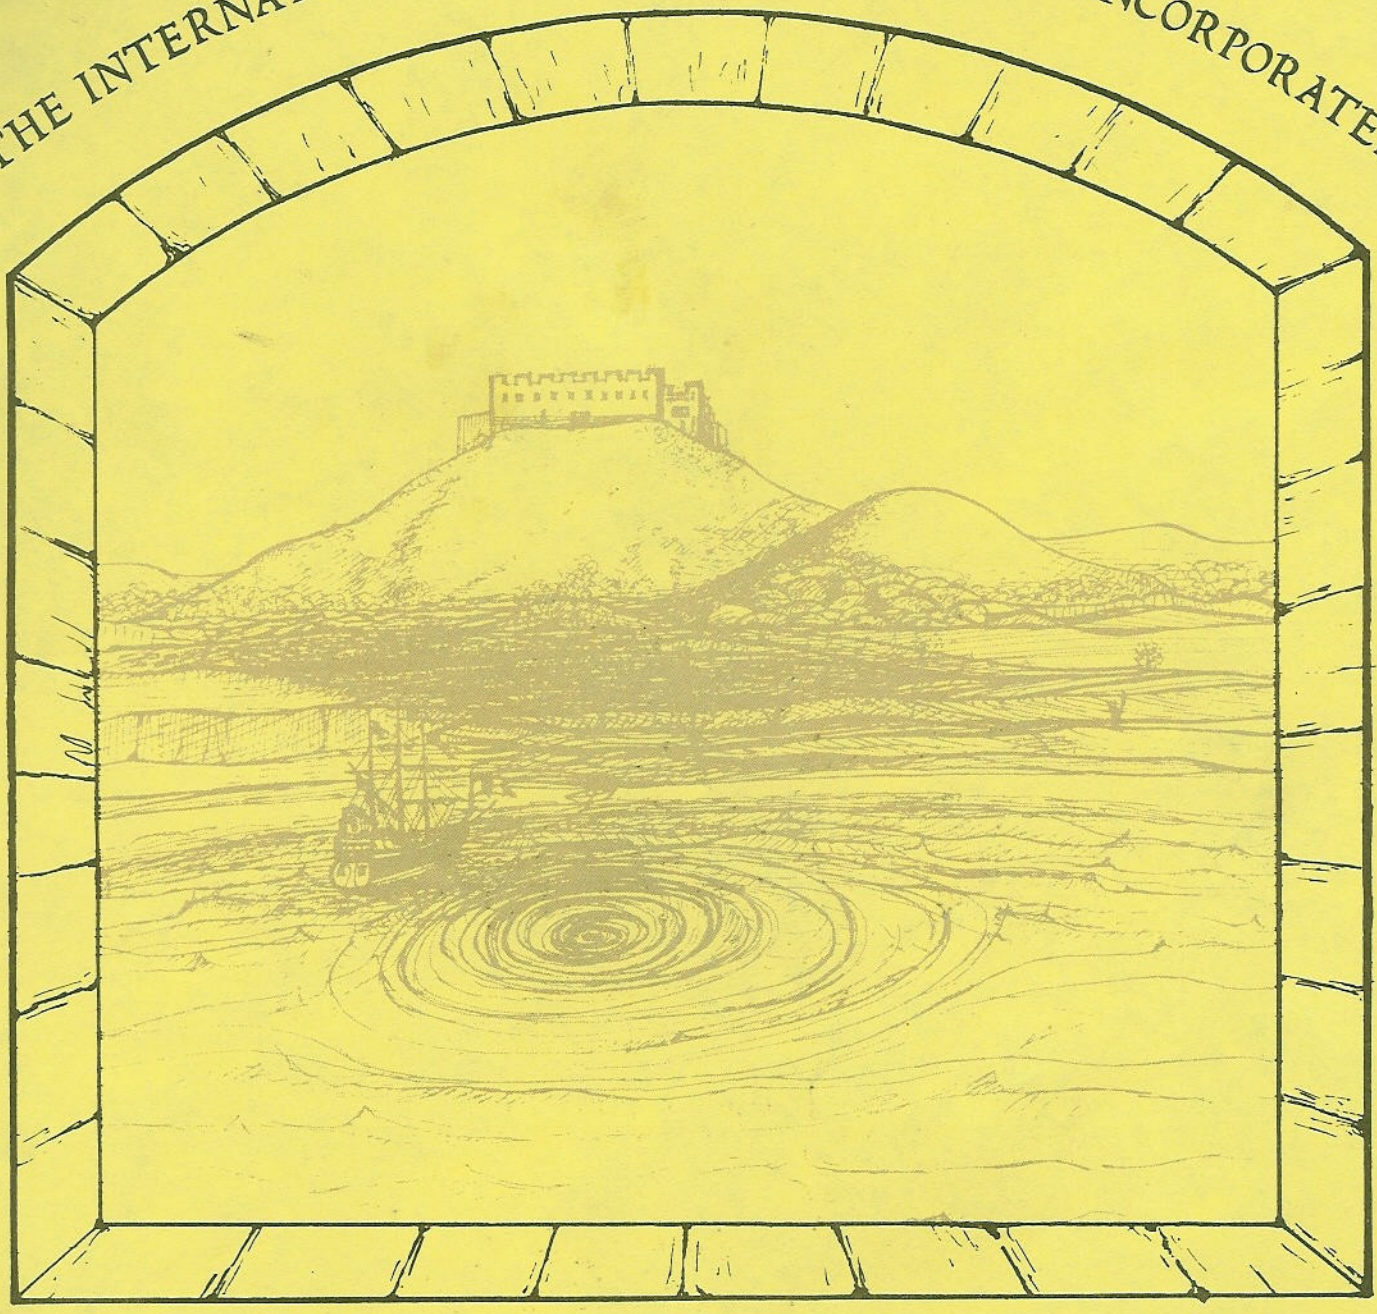
43 The Master of a Lodge is called "Worshipful". A Grand Lodge officer is called Right Worshipful, and the Grand Master is Most Worshipful. Similar terms are used in Rosicrucian ceremonial address. This is in line with ecclesiastical usage. A clergyman is called Reverend; a Bishop, Right Reverend and an Archbishop, Most Reverend. In England, the mayors of small towns are called Worshipful; the mayors of large cities like London, Right Worshipful. The title seems first to have been appied to the Grand Master in Masonry, in the publications by Anderson, in 1723. These titles are not grandiloquent or meaningless. A true Master is really worshipful, for he brings a presence and radiates an aura of profundity into the work of the Craft. The antiquity of the Person and Function he symbolizes is worshipful in a very genuine sense, and we must remember that these inner factors are what we esteem when we use the term "Worshipful". It is not only a ceremonial usage; it is an admission and a token of recognition of the real import of the Master's Work and Office.

44 It is meet and right that every member of the Craft who is made a Master Mason should seek first to become one in fact as well as in name. Then it is not only right, but eminently desirable that the should look forward to the time when he can be found worthy of being called to the Master's Chair and Work. But it is even more important that he should look forward in this manner with an understanding heart and be motivated by a sincere desire to be a Master in the real sense, as well as the titular concept.

45 Exoteric Masters are created. Esoteric Masters are developt,—not by cultism or faddism, but by personal endeavor to live the life of Mastership, so that traveling in foreign countries will not be a matter of dogma but of accomplishment. The world has need of such Masters. The Craft has need of such Masters. The Brethren have need of them too, today, as never before, when true guidance is a prime requisite in the maelstrom of conflicting human theories and alleged teachings. Masonry offers guidance on the Path in a sane, reasonable, logical, lawful manner and none who follow that Path will be in danger of going astray. The Temple is being built daily, hourly, momentarily, even now as you read these instructions. The Path is not easy but it is passable. Others have trodden it safely. Guidance will make your progress sure. Persistence and worthiness will make attainment certain. Impatience is a drawback. Calm poise and equilibrium are sure signs of unfoldment.

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF MARTINISTS INCORPORATED

Worthing - Barbados - West Indies



PLANE III

GRADE: COMPANION

LIBER 63 ILLUMINATION

Private & Confidential

The International College of Martinists Incorporated, is a non-profit institution existing for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION

The Essene - Gnostic "Chrestian Ekklesia"

#234

PART 1 THE MASTER TEACHER

An enquiry into the true identity of "Jesus Christ"

- -

Many students of esoteric subjects as well as orthodox Christians are so used to considering the spiritual revelation of Jesus Christ in an historical context that it is no wonder that there is so much contradictory information available concerning his true identity. A great deal of time may be spent in considering the conflicting theories of the many authors who have written on this subject. In your local public library you may well find a copy of a book which came up a few years ago in which the author claims to prove that the Jesus of the New Testament Gospels was really a man called Onias The Just. Along side it you may find another book which may convince you that Jesus was really Apollonius of Tyana. Another may claim that Jesus was really Jesus ben Pandira, a person mentioned in The Talmud who actually lived and died exactly as The Old Testament predicted. If you pick up a book of Islamic legends you may come across the story of Jesus being revived with medicines after the Crucifixion and afterwards living to a ripe old age in India.

In occult circles there are many legends about the so-called unknown period of Jesus's life. According to one of them the years of Jesus's life from the age of twelve to the beginning of his ministry around the age of thirty were spent in study in The Mystery Schools of Egypt. This legend relates to claims that his mother Mary and her consort Joseph were both students of The Mystery Schools and that the dangers for their prophesied child could be reduced to a minimum by spending this period in Egypt. Other legends claim that Jesus visited some to the schools in the Himalayas.

During the last few years some people in the theological world have been astonished by claims that Jesus studied in Japan and, after his brother took his place on the cross of Golgotha, he returned to Japan, married and had lots of children. According to an old French legend, Jesus married Mary Magdalene and had children by her. The Merovingian Kings of France are said to have been descendants of Jesus and Mary.

One learned archaeologist concludes from his discoveries that Jesus had a wealthy uncle, a tin maker by trade, who sent him to Europe to study. During his travels, Jesus is said to have visited Stonehenge and Glastonbury.

One person has managed to "prove" that the name "Jesus Christ" was never mentioned at all by the early Church Fathers but was an agreement to join together the names of the Druid Sun God, Hesus, and the Hindu saviour Krishna. This was done, apparently, at a council convened some time around the fourth century A.D. Another has claimed to have located Jesus alive and well on the planet Venus and through his mediumship Jesus is able to continue speaking directly to his many followers on Earth.

Of course, there have been thinkers who have denied that Jesus ever existed and have regarded him as a mythical figure. Although this view is not supported by the majority of responsible scholars, there is much conflict of opinion about what can be reasonably be accepted as historical fact about the person and the myth of Jesus. It will be well to emphasize here that there are historical facts to be accounted for and one of the objectives of the remainder of this talk is to try and put these facts into their proper perspective.

Some of the earliest information we have about the historical Jesus is to be found in a work called "The Annales of Tacitus". This work shows the modern reader what an educated and distinguished Roman historian knew and thought about Christianity some eighty years after its birth.

Historically, the most certain fact that we know about Jesus is that he was crucified for sedition against the Roman government in Judea. The Roman Governor who ordered his execution was Pontius Pilate, who held the office of Governor of Judea from 26 to 36 A.D. This execution is recorded not only by Tacitus but also by the authors of the four New Testament Gospels. These authors might have wished to suppress such damaging evidence because, if Jesus had been crucified for sedition it would have been an embarrassing fact for them. For Jesus's followers it would have meant that their leader had been condemned as a rebel against Rome and they were likely to be incriminated as well.

According to Tacitus, Nero was suspected of burning Rome in 64 A.D. To free himself from suspicion, "the Emperor fastened the guilt and inflicted the most exquisite tortures on a class hated for their vices whom the people called Christians. Christus, from whom the name derived, suffered the extreme penalty under the reign of Tiberius on the order of the procurator, Pontius Pilate. Their pernicious superstition, suppressed for the moment, broke out again,not only in Judea, the source of the evil, but in Rome itself. Accordingly, acknowledged members of the sect were first arrested, then, upon their evidence, an immense multitude was convicted, not so much for the crime of firing the city, as of hatred for mankind."

This passage from "The Annales" indicates the Tacitus thought that:

a) early Christianity was a dangerous and subversive movement;
b) its founder had been executed for sedition by the Roman Governor of Judea;

c) the execution had only temporarily checked the movement, and it had spread from Judea to the underworld of Rome; and
d) the people of the time believed that Christians hated mankind.

This made it easy for Nero to make them the scapegoats for the firing of Rome.

This work by Tacitus is a most important historical document regarding early Christianity as it is the earliest non-Christian source of information, all other information comes from Christian writings that were inspired by theological rather than historical interest. The Christian Gospels purport to give factual accounts of the life of Jesus and these writings are based on the assumption that Jesus was not just a man but that he was the Son of God sent into the world to save mankind. This assumption involves some complex theology, it has nothing to do with historical fact. However, these theological ideas are historically important because they formed the basis of Christianity, and the birth of Christianity is one of the most important milestones in religious history. We must, therefore, consider how these ideas originated and trace how they developed into the religion we know today as Christianity. We must also explain who Jesus was and what he taught and did as an historical person.

The authors of the New Testament Gospels could hardly have suppressed the fact of Jesus's execution. It was too well known an event for anyone to conceal. Instead, they tried to show that Jesus was really innocent of sedition. The Gospel of Mark, the earliest of the four New Testament Gospels, sets the theme for the others by trying to show that the death of Jesus had been plotted by Jewish leaders who hated him. The Sanhedrin lacked the authority to execute Jesus and so it handed him over to Pilate. Charged with sedition, Jesus stood his trial. The Gospels relate that Pilate was not convinced of Jesus's guilt and sought to have him set free, but the Jewish leaders stirred up the mob until Pilate was forced to accede and order the execution. So, Christian evidence admits that Jesus was executed for sedition, but it also maintains that he was innocent.

The situation for the Jewish people at that time was extremely dangerous. It became even more so for the Christians of Rome about 71 A.D. Mark's Gospel deals with this. Mark's attempt to turn Pilate into a witness to the innocence of Jesus breaks down in a critical analysis bringing a startling picture into focus. The Romans crucified Jesus as a rebel because they considered him to be one. There is much evidence from various sources attesting to this piece of history.

Jesus is said to have been a native of Nazareth in Galilee and was first associated with John The Baptist who announced, in the manner characteristic of Hebrew prophecy, the imminence of The Kingdom of God and sought to prepare the Jews for this event by a baptism of repentance. After the arrest of John by Herod Antipas, Jesus carried on the mission alone. After some success in Galilee, he encountered opposition from the Jewish authorities. Jesus soon became convinced that these authorities were delaying Israel's preparation for The Kingdom of God. The priestly aristocracy, headed by The High Priest, controlled The Temple of Jehovah at Jerusalem, and their position gave them a rich income as well as great authority. Seeing them as the chief obstacle to Israel's conversion, Jesus challenged their control of The Temple. With his disciples and followers, he staged a Messianic entry into Jerusalem at The Feast of The Passover. Gathering support, he attacked the trading activites of the Temple which were a profitable source of revenue for the priestly aristocrats.

After the cleansing of the Temple, Jesus stayed on in Jerusalem until the night of The Passover Feast, which he ate with his disciples in the city. Between the time of the cleansing of the Temple and that of the Feast, he withdrew from the city each night, as he seems to have been uncertain of his next move. By the time of the Passover Feast he probably realized that his attempt to challenge the authorities had failed and it would be wiser to withdraw to Galilee. In Gethsemane that night he experienced an agony of indecision. The initiative passed from him to his enemies. One of his apostles, Judas Iscariot, had defected and betrayed his rendezvous to the Jewish leaders.

It is difficult for many people to evaluate the events which occurred after the crucifixion of Jesus. There is a story of his being buried in a tomb belonging to Joseph of Arimathea, that he resurrected and appeared to some of his disciples, although nobody outside their circle recorded a similar sighting. Although the physical presence of Jesus is stressed, nothing is said about him resuming his life on earth. Instead, he is said to have ascended to heaven.

The transformation of Christianity from a strictly Jewish Messianic cult to a universal salvation religion centred on Jesus was due to Paul of Tarsus. Paul had not been an original disciple, in fact he had at first rejected Jewish Christianity because it preached a crucified Messiah (quite unacceptable to a pious Jew) and he helped to persecute members of the movement. On one memorable occasion, however, Paul had a profound spiritual experience on the road to Damascus. He attributed this to the intervention of God. Paul became convinced that God had chosen him to reveal Jesus to the Gentiles in a completely different guise than the one presented by the Jewish Christians.

It is an indisputable historical fact that Paul's new conception of Jesus drew its inspiration from Greek ideas rather than from Judaism. The philosophy of the Gnostics, which was widely followed in Syria, Alexandria and farther east, held that all mankind was enslaved by demonic powers and taught how Self-Knowledge (Gnosis) could save man from subjection to their rulership, and that God had sent Jesus into the world for the salvation of mankind. The Greco-Roman society of the time could understand and appreciate Paul's ideas derived from the esoteric doctrines of the Gnostics. Jesus was presented by Paul as a saviour-God who had died and risen again. Through the sacrament of baptism, Christians were ritually identified with Jesus in his death and resurrection. As a consequence, they were born into a new, risen life in Christ.

The Jewish Christians were quick to repudiate Paul's new "Gospel". They also rejected his claim to be an apostle and sent out emissaries to his converts to present their own "Gospel" as the true and original form of Christianity. In 70 A.D. the Mother Church of Christianity at Jerusalem perished when the city was destroyed by the Romans. Christianity was thereby freed from its primitive involvement in Jerusalem, and Paul's version of Christianity survived and set the pattern for the entire faith.

In Romans 1:14, Paul refers to the sources of his doctrines in the following words:"I am debtor both to the Greeks and to the Barbarians; both to the wise and to the unwise".

Freed from its early Jewish influences, Christianity was quickly adapted to the spiritual needs of Greco-Roman society and eventually survived the downfall of the Roman Empire.

Having noted the distinction between the image of Jesus the rebel crucified for sedition by the Romans at the behest of the Jewish leaders, and Paul's "Jesus Christ" derived from the esoteric doctrine of the Gnostics, we can now turn our attention to the true identity of "Jesus Christ" as The Master Teacher. The two apparently disparate histories of Jesus (the seditionist and the Messiah) have become fused in folk memory as an archetypal symbol. To the Gnostics, the words of Jesus referred to an archetypal Master Teacher or an archetypal system of thought and practice. "Archetype" comes from the Greek meaning, "molded first, as a model, exemplary, an inherited idea or mode of thought derived from the experience of the race and present in the unconscious of the individual." As far as the ancient Gnostics were concerned, the idea of Jesus Christ being placed on earth by God is an archetype, the heritage of every man. The search for the meaning and understanding of this reality has been present throughout history and is probably the major factor in the purpose of man's existence. Through the archetypal symbol of The Master Teacher, "Jesus Christ" is seen to be not a man who lived in a certain place at a certain time, but a process of doing or overcoming.

This being so, it doesn't matter at all whether a man called Jesus lived two thousand years ago in the Holy Land or not. Conflicting historical evidence concerning this question has already sidetracked far too many people. It has undoubtedly been a major stumbling block to sincere metaphysical students who have been misled by uninformed teachers. What needs to be grasped is the principle for which Jesus stands; the concept of Jesus as a visibility who personifies the absolute truth of being. The principle and the transcendental experience which the portrayal of Jesus represents is natural and verifiable, and is every man's birthright.

Continued.....

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION

The Essene - Gnostic "Chrestian Ekklesia"

#235

PART 2 THE MASTER TEACHER

An enquiry into the true identity of "Jesus Christ"

- -

If we accept that all the stories in the Bible are allegorical (Paul himself says they are in Galatians 4:24) then the complete history from Abram onwards must be an allegory. Therefore, the New Testament books which give the geneaology of "Jesus" from "Adam" can have nothing to do with an actual living person. In the light of all this, all names of supposed living persons mentioned in the Bible must conceal some other meaning than that of actual personalities. Jesus, Mary, Joseph, Peter and John and all the apostles must contain hidden spiritual meanings instead. For many centuries now, the allegories teaching a spiritual Christ within have been carnalised into the belief in a man who actually appeared within the world of time and space, and that this man was able to cancel out the "sins" of those who believed in him.

Paul's Epistles contain many references to The Cosmic Christ. The true mystical teachings that may be discovered in the Bible agree with the highest teachings contained in the books of the Eastern religions and indicates that a traditional knowledge regarding God and Man has been known to initiates throughout the world for many thousands of years. In his Epistles, Paul admonishes his students to follow the true Gnosis which can be discovered only within the area of mind. The "Jesus" of the Gospels, in this context, is taken to be a pattern of experiences had by everyone who follows the Path to Ascension.

In contrast to orthodox Christians who believe in an historical Christ, the Gnostics' interpretation of scripture was purely spiritual. To them, the Resurrection was an already established fact of Spiritual Truth. To live the life of a "resurrected one" means that one will eventually experience the Spiritual reality in this life here and now, not in some mythical afterlife or after another five hundred incarnations. God-realisation is the goal and destiny of every man. As the Gospel of John expresses it, "The Light that lighteth every man who comes into the world". This Light is the natural reality of one's being, immanent and transcendental, and veiled by the ignorance of earthly ideas and supposition.

We have already mentioned that Paul's conception of Jesus Christ was derived from the philosophy of the Gnostics. "The Gospel of Philip" is a second century Gnostic document of Syrian origin. This work contains one of the clearest explanations of the meanings of the words "Jesus" and "Christ" ever set down on paper. Here are the passages which include these explanations:

> "'Jesus' is a hidden name, 'Christ' is a revealed name. For this reason, 'Jesus' does not exist in any other language, but his name is always 'Jesus' as he is called. 'Christ' is also his name: in Syriac, it is 'Messiah', in Greek it is 'Christ'. Certainly all the others have it according to their own language. 'Nazarene' is he who reveals what is hidden. Christ has everything in himself, whether man or angel or mystery, and the Father.
>
> "The apostles who were before us had these names for him 'Jesus', the Nazarene, Messiah, that is 'Jesus, the Nazarene, the Christ'. The last name is 'Christ', the first name is 'Jesus', that in the middle is the 'Nazarene'. 'Messiah' has two meanings, both 'the Christ' and 'the measured'. 'Jesus' in Hebrew is 'the redemption'. 'Nazara' is 'the Truth'. 'Christ' has been measured. 'The Nazarene' and Jesus are 'they who have been measured'".

From these passages, we have three definitions, as follows:

a) "Christ" - the measured or annointed, the Messiah
b) "Nazarene" - the Truth
c) "Jesus" - redemption, or the way to redemption.

Therefore "Jesus, the Nazarene, the Christ" indicates that one following the way to redemption, or the arcane discipline, reveals the Truth, the Christ in his experience, in the secret or hidden name of Jesus. This teaching coincides exactly with the hidden meanings given for his name in The Acts of John in The Apocryphal New Testament.

What connection does this information have with the historical events recorded by Tacitus which we mentioned earlier? Who was the individual who aroused the opposition of the Jewish authorities? Many interesting clues may be found in G R S Mead's book, "Did Jesus live 105 BC?" It is Mead's contention that the prototype of the 'Jesus of Nazareth' referred to in the New Testament Gospels was a man named Jeshu ben Pandira. He was born in 105 BC and sometime between then and 79 BC he was initiated and raised to the Degree of Hierophant of The Mysteries of Serapis and Christos in Egypt. On returning to Jerusalem he conferred the same initiation upon twelve of his followers with The Right of Succession. Jeshu ben Pandira's philosophy was not new, it was the continuation of The Gnostic Philosophy. It was Pythagoras of Crotona in the fifth century BC who named his philosophical system "The Gnosis". His system continued through Plato and thereafter through the Platonic philosophers until Jeshu established his own mysteries in Galilee in 79 BC. During the first four hundred years of the so-called Christian era the Gnostic Ekklesia was known as The Church of Serapis and Christos up to the reign of Emperor Hadrian. According to Roman records dating from the time of Hadrian the Gnostics were known as "Bishops of Serapis and Christos" and they had been in existence since about 355 BC. Pharaoh Ptolemy of Egypt, who knew these mysteries as those of Osiris and Isis, was present at the commencement of the Serapean line of Succession. Many members of Serapis went to Antioch in Syria and spread into Galilee later.

When Pharaoh Ptolemy Philadelphus invited the sages of Judaism to come to Alexandria to establish their College of Rabbis there was friction between them and the Greek teachers. The followers of Jeshu ben Pandira also became dangerous rivals of the Rabbis of The Temple of Jerusalem. In 71 BC Jeshu ben Pandira was murdered by The High Priest of The Temple of Jerusalem. This fact is confirmed by evidence in The Dead Sea Scrolls wherein it is claimed that the "Teacher of Righteousness" was killed by The High Priest.

It may have occurred to you that the information which we are presenting here suggests that the "historical" Jesus, or Jeshu, lived approximately one hundred years before the orthodox churches claim that he did. This may be explained by the fact that there is a hundred year difference between the Julian and Gregorian calendars, therefore, we must push back the calendar a hundred years in order to arrive at the correct date when the Gnostic system of Self-Realisation instituted by Jeshu ben Pandira first began. Both Helena Blavatsky and Gerald Massey brought forth evidence that Jesus lived a century before the Gospel dates, and the Jewish Talmud itself identifies Jeshu ben Pandira as the individual connected with the events we have mentioned.

Another significant fact about Paul of Tarsus may be mentioned here. When in Rome he initiated a wealthy ship-owner named Marcion into The Mysteries of Serapis and Christos. A consideration of Marcion's Gospel would be outside the scope of this talk but we may mention that,in many respects, it may be considered to be based substantially on the contents of the Pauline Epistles. As far as Marcion was concerned, Paul was the disciple. As Marcion was the Roman Patriarch in the true Line of Succession, Chrestianity, in its original Roman form, was thus derived from him and not from either Peter or Linus.

The Gnostics of the early centuries of the so-called Christian era were firstly initiates of The Mysteries of Serapis and Christos but, on becoming Hierophants, they began to teach their own version of the True Religion according to their own mystical experience. The Ante-Nicene Fathers of the "Christian" church were so astounded by the mystical feats performed by the Gnostics that they feared and persecuted them. The Christians who believed in only an historical saviour resented the fact that the Gnostics could accomplish greater miracles than those recorded of their saviour by tradition alone. In 325 AD Emperor Constantine convened the Council of Nicaea and there ordered the formulation of a creed based upon a history of a saviour personified by Jesus of Nazareth as the only Son of God. Later, when Constantine's orders had been carried out, he proceeded to destroy the Gnostics. The reason for this was that the Gnostics held that every man was a Son of God and that Jeshu, their leader, was a "Just Man" who demonstrated the innate power of God within every human being.

In spite of seventeen hundred years of propaganda and misinformation, Christ is not, and never was a person. The Christ drama is not connected with events played out on earth in time and space sequences, but occurs within man at every moment. If using the Christ drama as a pattern applicable to man's own spiritual unfoldment, it becomes clear that three definitie stages are played out within man himself. The first and preparatory stage is that of Purification. The aspirant is encouraged to build into himself the qualifications of control of the mind, body and the sense, discrimination between the real and the unreal, endurance, faith, tolerance, emotional and mental equilibrium and the desire for liberation. These qualities were ever demanded of an aspirant before he could be allowed the presence of his own Master to be known. The second stage was Illumination. here, the Higher Self, which the Gnostics called the "Christos", succeeds in conquering the elements of the Lower Self thereby allowing a transaction to take place between the mortal and its immortal Self within the human body. The Gnostics called the Lower Self the "Chrestes". The disciple unfolding toward spiritual maturity may also be referred to as the "Jesus Soul". The third and last stage is Union. Here the aspirant is able to gain admission into the Inner Sanctum of the Gnosis and achieve the Cosmic Awareness of his own Essential Nature. The Chrestes is encouraged to make the flight of the Jesus soul from the third dimensional nature of the human body into that of the fourth dimensional nature of the Christos. Thus, one becomes a conscious embodiement of the Universal Self.

When the initiates of these Mysteries had gained proficiency in their new-found powers they became Hierophants. They then had the right to initiate others. By becoming a Mystae or an Illumined Adept of Life, they granted to themselves the power to relive the past, understand the present and foresee events which were to come. They were given the honoured title of Christos, he who becomes the Ever-Becoming One, a Master among men.

By way of a postscript to this talk. I will conclude with two brief quotations. The first is from the writings of William Kingsland; it summarises some of the more important points we have covered.

> "Within the Christian Scriptures there lies a deep spiritual truth, a real Gnosis of man's origin, nature and destiny which has simply been materialised by the Church in the traditional interpretation of those Scriptures based upon their literal acceptance. Gradually, however, as the 'Christian' doctrine became hardened and more and more dogmatic, the government of the Church fell into the hands of prelates ambitious for worldly power. This knowledge became a heresy. What records are left of it are mainly the misrepresentations of the bitter opponents among the Church Fathers.

"Now the innermost core (of the true Church) is the in-teaching of the ancient Gnosis, the Real Self, the eternal, immortal, divine Self, which is one with the Universal Self, commonly called God. Thus the root teaching of this Wisdom at all times has been the divine nature of man, and what was taught in the inner schools of the Mysteries was the method of achieving this supreme knowledge in a practical manner, that is to say the attainment of god-like characters and powers. Every man is potentially a god, however feeble may be his powers at the present time. At root he is God. Gnosis is Power. The supreme knowledge confers upon its possessor the possibility which is not even dreamed of by the ordinary individual - or the ordinary Christian for that matter, notwithstanding the repeated assertions of that possibility in the Christian Writ."

The second piece is a remarkable quotation from Edward Carpenter. It is often difficult to define Consciousness as it pertains to the True Self, especially as many people consider Consciousness to be an attribute of mind. Any member in the Higher Degrees who has attained Cosmic Consciousness, which is nothing more or less than Consciousness of the True Self, will find this an eloquent description of the experience.

"Of all the hard facts of science, I know of none more solid and fundamental than the fact that if you inhibit thought and persevere you come at length to a region of consciousness below or behind thought, and a realisation of an altogether vaster self than that to which we are accustomed. And since the ordinary consciousness, with which we are concerned in ordinary life, is before all things founded on the little local self, and is in fact self-consciousness in the little, local sense, it follows that to pass out of that is to die to the ordinary self and the world.

"It is to die in the ordinary sense, but in another sense, it is to wake up and find that the I, one's real, most intimate self, pervades the universe and all other beings.

"So great, so splendid is this experience, that it may be said that all minor questions and doubts fall away in the face of it, and certain it is that in thousands and thousands of cases the fact of its having come even once to a man has completely revolutionised his subsequent life and outlook on the world.

10

-o-o-o-

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION

The Essene-Gnostic "Chrestian Ekklesia"

#236

Continued from #156.

THE MEANING OF GNOSTICISM - con't

Most of the works about Gnosticism have been written from an orthodox christian's point of view and even the reviews of the collection of Gnostic texts discovered in Egypt in 1946, (known as the Nag Hammadi Library) have been the work of orthodox christians. But the N.H.L. manuscripts contain an amount of Gnostic teaching, written in the familiar cryptic language which seeks to convey an inner spiritual meaning and does not relate to any actual "historical" incident of the people and places concerned.

Orthodox christians are used to looking at Jesus and his teachings in an objective or factual way but the Gospel of Philip, one of the Nag Hammadi Codices, says that "Jesus" means "redemption" or the way to redemption. Apparently, to the ancient Gnostics, all Scriptural names and places represented the cryptic language of the Mysteries and did not necessarily refer to actual persons or real geographical locations.

The name Jesus, his associates and his journeyings, from the Gnostic perspective, refer particularly to spiritual processes actually taking place in the life of him who walks Jesus-like or Christ-like, in his/her life, here and now.

On the question of "resurrection" -- to the Gnostic, resurrection is an already established spiritual fact. The Gnostic "heaven" is a reality here and now, so that whereas resurrection to the orthodox christian is believed to be the man Jesus resurrecting from an actual rock tomb, to the Gnostic Christians, as revealed in the Nag Hammadi Codices, resurrection means leading an entirely new and enlightened life, and to live the live of a 'resurrected one' means that one will eventually experience this Spiritual Reality in his life, here and now.

To live according to the true Gnosis of God one has to follow a path of Purity, Honesty and of Consecration to Truth, and the Nag Hammadi Library proves that those who followed the teachings contained therein, tried to live by standards which many present-day christians would find very difficult to follow.

In the first part of this explanation of Gnosticism we stated that the Gnostics had a vocabulary all there own, at the end of this second part we will give some of this vocabulary. It is essential to understand that any attempt to try to interpret the Gnostic Scripts from a materialistic point of view will only make nonsense of them. The strange allegories and seemingly "historical" happenings are never intended, in Gnostic language, to be physical realities. The average orthodox christian finds it most difficult to divorce the spiritual myth from its seemingly disorganized appearance -- and as long as one looks for rationality and history -- he will never break the code of the Gnostic Cryptic Language. In like manner as the Greek myths reveal inner truths, so too do the Gnostic stories reveal the Gnosis of the Soul.

Since the publication of the "Nag Hammadi Library" and the Essene Qumrum Scrolls, much interest has been directed to the study of the early Gnostics. The present-day "organized christian church" was brought into being at the Council of Nicaea, circa 325 A.D. and this latter set about a systematic persecution of the Gnostics, inventing false propaganda against them. This led to a situation wherein that which is termed "Gnosticism" was labelled "heresay" (whatever that means) and sincere seekers were turned away believing that this teaching was something to be avoided -- when in fact it is nearer to primitive Christianity -- and may contain the very answers to life they have been seeking!

Admittedly, the Gnostic texts are difficult to understand and their system of symbology is recondite and heavy. We have presented this information because it has been requested; but also because there are valuable insights to be gleaned by Seekers on the Path. At all times however, our members are free to take what they can use and leave the rest. It is left to each student, here, to do the same.

At this point we return to the Disciplina Arcani:

Dear Friend

In the fields of wholistic medicine we come to realise that in the case of physical disease, bodily ailments can be brought about by certain personality traits and mental attitudes to people and environment. It is useful therefore to have a basic understanding of psychosomatic medicine.

The ancient Patriarchs understood that most, if not all, of human suffering bodily and circumstantial, were the outcome of living in ignorance. It was proven by the fact that by changing one's philosophy of life healthy bodies and more harmonious living conditions were the result. Suffering was not, and still is not, the heritage of the Children of God.

Gnostic symbology might seem rather complicated or even obscure but understanding that the human phase of mind uses imagery to present its problems we, as helpers to the summit, use the same method through mythology to help the person to spiritual freedom. It is in perception of the principles presented in the myth and in applying them to daily living that we benefit and learn control of our destiny.

Sincerely yours in the Light,

THE MEANING OF GNOSTICISM

#237

Part 2

In our last Lesson we showed you some of the background of what is known as Gnosticism and how it is your story and nobody else's.

We will now give a list of the cast of the characters who will make their appearance on the scene of each act, and as the drama moves on they will appear again under some new guise and character, but always try to remember that there is one STAR PART in this drama and that is MAN himself.

Some of the characters mentioned are:-

The Unknown Principle (Abraxas):
The Treasury of the Boundless, limitless Life wherein all being is, the incomprehensible and Unknowable Self of every human being, which we call the Great Naught which is the All.

The Logos:
From the Unknown Principle emanated a Ray of Light into the Boundless Virgin Space forming the Manifested Logos, commonly called "God". It will be seen that there are two Gods, which are the two aspects of the Unknown Principle - one unmanifested and the other manifested. We call them respectively - the God-Man and the Man-God.

The Trinity:
From the Unmanifested Logos was emanated the Divine Thought within the primordial Element, Sophia Achamoth, the Matrix of the Universe. From Achamoth emerged the Christos - the Son; the results of the Celestial Marriage of Christos and Sophia Achamoth were born the Christos-Sophia and Sophia-Christos forming the Holy Spirit, these four manifesting as Jehovah-Ildabaoth, the Creative Logos, called by the Jews - ALHIM JEHOVAH, who has become the Ultimate God of the Christians. The Father of Jesus was the Unknown Principle and not Jehovah.

The Archangels:
From the two pairs of opposites were born the Eight, the Seven Creators or Jehovah-Ildabaoth and his Six Sons, and then the sons became the Fashioners of the Universe and the Eight the Sophia-Achamoth - the World Soul.

Jehovah-Ildabaoth:
The Creator of the World and God of the Jews and Christians, becoming boastful before the Unknown Logos formed a soulless creature after his own image. The creator and his Six Sons, seeing that their creation was a soulless creature, brought their creation to their Father who called forth to the Divine Thought and, taking pity upon animal-man, Sophia-Achamoth was sent to vivify the creature. The Creator began to fashion the seven Regions of Light, and gave to his sons the rulership of each one of the regions, in order to imprison their creation and make his a slave to their wishes.

Sophia
The Creators, after clothing Sophia with their Robes of Light, sought to imprison Sophia by the matters of every region. Upon reaching the Abyss of Matter or the Valley of Death, she became afraid because of the cruelty of the Creators to her and she cried out to the Divine Mind for salvation. Sophia in this sequence represents the formation of the Divine Soul of Man on its downward descent into the lower regions.

Jesus:
It was when the Sparks (Sophia) fell through the regions and reached the valley that they were formed into Jesus - the human Soul. At that time nascent man was a soulless, mindless creature, and with the help of Sophia, the daughter of Achamoth did battle against the Creators. Sophia Achamoth, his mother, seeing that all was not well with her daughter Sophia and her son Jesus, cried out against her Father - Ildebaoth, and appealed to the Unknown Principle for help, He sent his son the Christos to descend to man.

The Christos:
The First Mystery, seeing that man was in chains to the Creators and was subject to the Rulers of the Regions, sent Christos to rescue Sophia and her son Jesus. He descended from the Treasury of Light and entered into the man Jesus, giving him both a Soul and Mind, thus granting to man the power to conquer the Rulers of the Regions. This is the same story as Horus, Attis, Adonis, Bacchus, Prometheus, etc.

The Cursing of Man:
Ildabaoth seeing that his creation was more powerful and beautiful than himself, became very angry and tried to prevent nascent man from knowing his real nature. Ildabaoth imprisoned the Man-Jesus within the boundaries of the four regions of Force-Matter (Eden) to keep him innocent. But man, yielding to the Serpent of the Divine Thought through Sophia, did seek to know his heritage,he did eat or experience sentient matter and his eyes were opened to the true nature of Ildabaoth and he began to experience the pangs of desire for Good and Evil - life and form - spirit and matter. Ildabaoth seeing that he had no more power over his creation, banished man to the nether regions or the valley of the shadow of death, to live in physical bodies, but the Christos descended to save man from Ildabaoth and his Hosts and gave unto man power and knowledge to return back to the Treasury of God, the Pleromic Regions.

The Christos-Soul
The Christos being a Ray of His Father, the Unknown Principle becomes the Champion of Man against the tyranny of Ildabaoth, he entered into Sophia - the Divine Soul, and received the power and intelligence to conquer the Rulers of the Regions.

The Birth:
Mary or Maria, being overshadowed by Sophia gives birth to the Soul in Jesus. The Three Kings represent the three races wherein man had to struggle against the forces of Ildabaoth, and once becoming a Soul, he is filled with the Power of the Unknown Principle whose nature becomes manifested in the human Soul of Man.

Baptism:
The awakened Soul becomes aware of his Holy and Divine Heritage and re-enters the stream of the Life of the Logos, and baptised by Light, he beholds his Father recognising Him, Jesus-Christ begins the work of breaking the power of Ildabaoth over man, working through man's images of menace. Ildabaoth seeks to tempt Jesus from the path of rectitude, he fails and retires, Jesus then begins to proclaim the Father of All and he ignores Ildabaoth. In this, we see how the Church has twisted the original drama of the Christ and makes it a history instead.

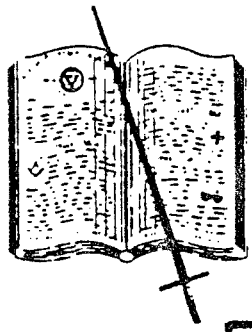
The Transfiguration:
Jesus, now representing the awakened man,now finishes the purificatory stage and is lifted up into his Divine soul wherein he sees the Father and his human Self (two disciples) within the Mount of his True Self, his three vestures now tremble before their Divine Lord, but man must return to the valley of living death to do battle once again against Ildabaoth who had now taken control of the three vestures of Jesus the Man.

Crucifixion:
Ildabaoth with his images of menace makes a final attempt to bring man under his dominion, he stirs up the images of menace within Jesus to betray him. Judas, the symbol of the images and that part of Jesus which still has to be redeemed, seeks to betray his Inner Lord. So Christos on his descent into the regions of the Man-Church caused the Rulers to be troubled and Ildabaoth sought to stir up the Rulers (images) against Christos-Jesus and they sought to take him and bound him again to the Cross of the Body with the help of the Titans - the Rulers of the Mind, Emotions and the Body. He gave up the earthly body on the cross and went to the Valley of Death where he released the slaves of Ildabaoth. The Christos took the human Soul-Jesus back to his own region of Light and the moral tabernacle of Jesus suffered on the Cross in the Valley of Death (earthly conditions).

Burial and Ascension:
The Soul of Jesus-Man rejoiced in his reunion with his mother Sophia, the Divine Soul and the Mystic Marriage was consummated in the Fourth Region of Light. Ildabaoth, still hoping to conquer Jesus-Man, sought to bind Jesus to the Tomb of Matter in the Valley once more, but the Jesus-Sophia-Christos conquered Ildabaoth and his Six Sons and finally ascended to the Treasury of Light to be on the right hand of the Unknown Principle - the Father or Great Naught of All.

Ministry:
Jesus the Divine Master,taking pity upon those who are still prisoners of Ildabaoth descended again through the Regions of Light in His Robes of Glory and confounded the Rulers. He descended to the emotional or Sixth Region of Light and showed Himself to His disciples and there remained with them for about Eleven years,revealing to them the Gnosis of the Soul and the Mysteries of the Treasury of Light.

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF MARTINIST STUDIES



CLASSIFIED

Dear Associate

You have attained that point in your progress on the Path where you have been admitted to the Illuminati. You will now enter into deeper and more specialized studies. We require that you do NOT disclose to anyone what point you are at, nor do we wish any of the information which will be shared with you, from this point on, discussed with anyone, unless they too have reached this level.

Should anyone ask you how long you have been a member of the College, or at what point on the Path you have reached, you will reply, "I am studying the Esoteric Tradition of the Temple". If they have reached this point they will answer word perfectly: "I have seen the Parthenon and I have heard the music of the spheres." Then you will know the inquirer is also a member of the Illuminati and both of you will be free to discuss, privately, the material you are now receiving.

THOSE PERSONS WHO ARE GROUP LEADERS WILL REFRAIN FROM USING ANY MATERIAL WHICH HAS BEEN STAMPED "CLASSIFIED".

You have been told that some of the material you are about to receive you may find controversial or contradictory. Our duty is to share with you what has been entrusted to us and that we will do. Your duty is to take what you can use and leave the rest.

We have said to you that everyone in the present party are alert and mature; again we say to you: learn how to discriminate rightly ... the time is coming when you will have to continue your sojourn alone.

With all good wishes for further illumination

Sincerely

Saccar 63

17

FRATERNITAS ROSÆ CRUCIS

Rome London
& New York

№

#238

THE GREAT WHITE BROTHERHOOD AND BRETHREN OF THE ROSY CROSS

THE name "Great White Brotherhood," a purely fanciful invention of the human imagination, has been the theme of many books, the bait and lure of many forms of charlatanism. From the experiences of credible initiates who have been able to dissociate from the physical vehicle and "travel in foreign countries" comes an agreement as to an association of spiritual beings who exercise considerable influence in several departments of human activity. The descriptions offered in booklets and propaganda literature, if such can be dignified by this name, whose authors or sponsors claim individual descent, or direct and exclusive connection with the Great White Brotherhood, are confessions, each and all, of absolute imposture.

2 No visible, humanly contrived organization, whatsoever its claims, can legitimately call itself the exclusive representative of the Great White Brotherhood. Let it be understood that that Brotherhood may even look with tolerant amusement upon the very name that has been given to it. In the hands or mouths of legitimate spiritual bodies who do possess a reasonable comprehension of its nature, the name is not a misnomer. As the seven prismatic colors of the spectrum constitute a pure white light, so the composition of the celestial rays which compose the nucleolus of this Brotherhood also constitute a centre of dazzling white, whence comes the united agreement amongst true initiates.

3 Among the serious attempts to define the so-called Great White Brotherhood, we read that it is a group composed of Adepts, or those who by proper self-development have fitted themselves to assist in the "ruling of the world." In just what way they rule we are not informed but the idea seems to be the persistence of human ambition for super-exaltation. The activities of these Adepts are said to be multifarious, as they are concerned with practically all the functions of the rest of humanity. They are said to possess powers that transcend any of those of their fellow beings and it is claimed for them that they live according to their choice either in the mortal or the spiritual worlds and are able to prolong their lives in any expression for centuries. In this we see the persistence of the story of the Wandering Jew and of Christ's saying to his Apostle, John XXI:23, "If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?" The earthly exponents of the Great White Brotherhood are also claimed to be known as "Rishis," "Arhats" or "Mahatmas" and are invariably domiciled in the Himalayan or Tibetan Mountains, the inaccessibility of which, the proponents of such allegations well know, prevents either proof or disproof.

4 All the usual and well known descriptions of the Great White Brotherhood, which we will for the purpose of this lecture continue to call by this name, will be found to be according to the wishes or the desire for personal aggrandizement of the describer. There is almost always the intimation of an exclusive personal connection, contact or acquaintance with this exalted group and some of the claims are absurdly blatant. Therefore, if we are to seek a fairly clear conception of what the Great Brotherhood really is, it will be necessary to lay aside the cult claims and individual descriptions which fail utterly to describe truthfully, and turn to it from a different angle.

5 The first Chapter of Genesis shows a plural status amongst a celestial hierarchy. "Let US make man in our own image." Genesis was written by a scribe who recorded the wisdom of Moses which in turn derived from the ancient Egyptian, plus the contributions from Chaldean, Babylonian, Sumerian and Akkadian sources. Scripture tells us also of Seven Spirits before the Throne.

6 To the Egyptians, these were known as the "Seven Sons of Light," named from the planets of which they were the Regents or as we now say, the Indwelling Spirits, giving each respective planet its Planetary Intelligence. These planets were Saturn, Jupiter, Mercury, Mars, Venus, Sun and Moon. Note that Earth or Terra is not included. It had not at that time acquired its Planetary Regent and that is why the long line of Avatars, Messiahs or Messengers visited it at periodic intervals, culminating with the Christos who finally entered into his Kingdom.

7 According to the Gnostics Thoth or Hermes was the chief of the Seven Sons of Light. Origen, an early Church Father, gives the names of the others as Adonai, genius of the Sun; Tao, of the Moon; Eloi of Jupiter; Sabaoth of Mars; Oria, of Venus; Astaphai, of Mercury and Ildabaoth (Jehovah), of Saturn. These names immediately lead us to note a strong inspiration for the later definitions of the Great Brotherhood in the Kabbalah and the so-called Greater Holy Assembly which, in some respects, furnishes a model for late misconceptions.

8 Like the Christos, these Seven Sons of Light have had incarnate experience although not necessarily as we understand incarnate life upon the earth. They had it according to the nature and character of the planet of which they were the supreme initiates. They had passed through all the rounds, chains and periods peculiar to each. Having completed their initiation, they have become true Adepts, but not the sort that are used to advance pseudo-occult societies. They are what might be better termed Superlative Adepts in the highest spiritual sense. For they have passed to liberation and in being "Spirits before the Throne," they inhere in the fourth sub-region of the first sphere or cosmic world plane, the World of God. As this World interpenetrates all of our corner of cosmos, this does not prevent them from occupying their individual thrones planetarily. This is what is meant by the term "Thrones" in the New Testament, the word having a definite objective as well as the words "Dominions," "Principalities," etc. All these terms refer to specific grades of celestial hierarchies.

9 To say that the first sphere, or World of God is a region of light is far from adequate. It is pure white light but of a peculiar vitality. The only way in which it can be truthfully described is by saying that it is LIVING LIGHT and it is difficult to understand such a term. Light is a form of radiant energy. Under a powerful microscope a frog's web can be spread so that the observer can see the flow of the living tissue called blood, the river of life. In the same way, but only to the eye of those who live therein, celestial light is living, pulsating, flowing, radiating and life-giving. In fact, it is from this phase of energy that those whose abode is in such a World region derive their strength. They do not sleep as we understand sleep, but they do enjoy rest periods wherein they recharge themselves with this living light. As we are beginning to understand somewhat of the therapeutic properties of pure sunlight, we may be able to formulate some idea individual to ourselves of how this living light would appear to us.

10 It is this intensity of living white light, the information regarding which is transmitted down through intermediate contacts to the higher astral regions, that true initiates can reach at times, that has given the abode of the Great Ones the name of the Great White Brotherhood, a human designation, but—truthful when understood.

11 The core or centrum we have described constitutes the "fixed heart" of Master-Initiates. They operate in a way that is difficult to describe. It is through a series of septenary groups that extend from the First World Region down to the Angels or Humanity of the Moon Period of our earth and to corresponding groups on other planets according to their united physical and spiritual evolutionary status. From this point, Messengers and Avatars, whose work on a given planet is still incomplete, take up the power and purpose and direct it to particular application on the planetary sphere. The original purpose is formulated in the Central Group and then subjected to such modifications as may be required to work through or evolve into the planes intermediate and below it. This is analogous to the law that an entity must have a vehicle of the substance of the world in which it is functioning at any given time.

12 Strangely enough, Roman Catholic theology witnesses to this truth. It has a curious reference to the "Seventy planets that preside over the destinies of the nations of our planet." The word "planet" is a misnomer, of course. For instance, in the Bible we read:—"When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, he set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel." This is the Protestant version. But the Septuagint has it:—"According to the number of the Angels," meaning planetary Angels. This is the source from which occultists have derived the names of Planetary Spirits, Governors, Ambassadors, Angels, etc.

13 Now we also recall that the Bible informs us that we are Temples of the Living God. So, if human beings are Temples of the Living God, then the higher entities are also greater Temples of a more advanced aspect of that same Living God. In the ultimate, the number becomes smaller and smaller and God becomes the ALL, hermetically, in tangible localized expression as a centrum, without dissociating Himself however, from his substantive diffusion in an auric pervasion of his Creation.

14 If we go into a great power house we do not observe dynamos turning out current of different kinds. Some installations require more power than others, but it is all the same type of electricity that is being generated. That is a crude way of explaining a notable feature of the Centrum of Great Ones. They differentiate according to the characteristics of the Paths by which they have arrived in previous manvantaras or days of manifestation. The fact of their arriving enables each one to adapt his particular talents, if such they may be called, to the one central purpose of the group. Therefore, in an indescribable manner there is absolute unity of thought and purpose amongst them and the thought-form on a plane infinitely higher than anything we can realize, assumes a tremendous power, intended as it is, to shape the destinies not only of one but of all the planets in our solar system.

15 It is this thought-form, which even the ethers must obey implicitly, that is passed down through the intermediate collaborators, who may not even know that they ARE collaborators and finally focusses on the appointed purpose or plan. In this way we can see that the Great White Brotherhood has for its principal purpose the carrying out of the Divine Plan which is entrusted to it. Some might ask "Why then, does not God carry it out Himself?" The reply, crudely contrived, would be to point to the analogy of a man who starts out with an idea, let us say a motor engine. He builds a small one. Perfects his plan and destroys the original model and builds a better one or ones. Next we find him in a small building working on an enlarged scale. Years afterwards, we find a huge factory or many of them covering acres and giving employment or living to thousands. Let us assume that it is somewhat this way with God. He started out with a plan in His Divine Mind. He chose out a place in cosmos in which to create. He developed a central physical body—our Sun. Ages after ages that sun has expanded into a solar family, giving life to untold billions and occupying a position in space expressed in staggering figures. As processes increase, like the manufacturer, additional agents of expression are required. Hence the necessity for what we call the several and various celestial hierarchies, not simply glittering but uselessly ornamental and abnormal beings, but graduates in God's School of Natural Evolution and workers through whom His constantly expanding field of operations is directed and managed.

16 Now I will try to explain one of the most important of the responsibilities of the Great White Brotherhood. It is to MAINTAIN THE STREAM OF DIVINE CONSCIOUSNESS which more and more is expressing AS HUMAN CONSCIOUSNESS. We speak of our consciousness, your consciousness, my consciousness. In point of fact, none of us have consciousness of our own. We are conscious individually only as long as we are IN THE STREAM OF CONSCIOUSNESS. This is hard to understand. It is equally hard to explain. It is one of the principles that can be sensed, felt, understood, but for which words are inadequate. Let us go a step further.

17 It is well known to most occult students and to students of ontology, that the human foetus, in the process of its nine months gestation, undergoes a recapitulation and summarization of all the evolutionary processes below the human. It is successively fish, reptile, bird, and animal; invertebrate and finally vertebrate. Many phenomena accompany this process. Why is it necessary? It is nature's way of establishing conformity to type. A foetus of a human organism from the moment of the protoplasmic formation, if it did not undergo this recapitulation, would develop unrestrictedly and, in due course, being unrestrained, into a totally new form having no antecedent and therefore a monstrosity and that is one of the reasons for certain types of human monstrosities as it is.

18 Retention of consciousness is somewhat analogous. Certain features of the past processes of unfolding consciousness in all the lower kingdoms are undergone as the young human organism strives toward maturity. We have all recognized this in youngsters. But there is something more vital back of this. When the youngster enters the stream of human consciousness, he must also be equipped with those factors that will enable him to cope with human consciousness in its larger expression in the great world outside of his home. This phase is what is now beginning to be known as the super-consciousness. We think we recover knowledge of our past evolution through our science. Well, how do we get our science except we have something in the background that makes us aware of the methods we must follow in order to extend our consciousness back into the past? We call it deductive or inductive reasoning as the case may be. But that is merely another way of exercising our consciousness.

19 The law is that THE STREAM OF CONSCIOUSNESS IN THE HUMAN KINGDOM AND THE KINGDOMS BELOW IT MUST NEVER BREAK. That is the basic force on which the plans of the Divine Architect are building His Cosmic Empire. It is what maintains conformity to the Great Plan and this is a prime responsibility of the Great White Brotherhood, through its septenary contacts right down and into our own world region. In this way the stream of Divine Consciousness in the World of God is maintained as an hermetic whole right down to its expression as human Consciousness in the World of Man. In this manner the consciousness man strove so hard to develop in prehistoric ages on continents now existing only as matters of mythos is still preserved to him, affording him the present use of the best, as well as unfortunately of the worst of the qualities of cunning, cleverness, ingenuity now so highly developed and many other qualities that will be quickly apparent. Have you ever stopped to think of the fact that Man alone, out of all forms of life, knows that there are forms of life both below and above him, from whence he came and to which he is travelling? How would we know there IS an animal kingdom had we not come through it and functioned the consciousness of it? The retention of important elements in that stream of consciousness gives us our control over the animal kingdom, our ability to train it to useful work, to breed it to better examples. The same holds true of our conquest of the vegetable kingdom. The mineral and metal world would still be meaningless to man unless he was able to select out of the stream of consciousness some factor of the important properties of that kingdom because he himself once had the trance-like consciousness of the mineral.

20 It is something of this sort to which Blavatsky refers in her statement that "the wisdom imparted by the Divine (or Great Ones)—born through the Kryashaktic powers of the Third Race before its Fall and separation into sexes—to the early Adepts of the Fourth Race, has remained in all its pristine purity in a certain Brotherhood." She ascribes the locus of that School or Fraternity to a "certain unnamed island in an inland sea," a vague statement of no practical worth to the progressive intelligence of the age. The main statement of the preservation of the ancient wisdom, not book-learning but the stream of divine consciousness is absolutely true.

21 The modus by which the Great White Brotherhood operates is through the form of definite rays, both of light and of akashic power, capable of penetrating the substance or matter from the most rarefied of the inner worlds, to the most palpable of the outer. These rays are not momentary effects, but of a period of duration covering sometimes even centuries of our time. On these rays are impressed the plans, purpose and consciously inspirational effects it is desired to bring into manifestation in the world of humanity and also intermediate worlds, for the Brotherhood exercises care for other than our visible and physical plane. It is infinitely more far-reaching in its scope than the pictures that have been given us by highly gifted imaginations. It is cosmic to our solar system, and in contact with the Great Intelligences of other solar systems, just as our Logos is in contact with the Logoi or Gods of other systems also.

22 Having seen how that great Centrum of spiritual power and intelligence actuates in the higher planes through various grades of celestial hierarchies we now come to a "cross roads" as it were.

23 The rays, through and upon which the Great White Brotherhood operates, penetrate as stated direct through all spheres and world-regions to their ultimate focal points in the Physical World. We have spoken of certain modifications of the Picture of the Great Plan projected via these rays, somewhat as an operator projects a picture upon rays of light to a focal screen through a stereopticon.

24 Now, even in this illustration, we all know that the picture or image to be reproduced must be modified by proper focussing, roughly at first, then to a mathematical nicety, else it would appear upon the screen only as a blurred, inchoate mass of color, possessing but obscuring and concealing the real picture in its accuracy.

25 So too, the Great Picture of the various transformations and transmutations of life. The Great Plan, undergoes definite modifications or focussing processes ere it reaches the world or region of tangible, palpable or visible matter.

26 This focussing begins in the higher divisions of the 5th sphere or World of Thought, the Mental Plane, and region of Abstract Thought. In this sphere, the rays are taken up by another group or servants of the Great White Brotherhood. This particular group is composed of Advanced Masters, i.e., those who have not only arrived at complete Liberation but who have also finished with all voluntary incarnations as well and who come no more to this mundane or 7thsphere, except on special occasions to its borderline.

27 These Masters of the Upper 5th sphere region give the Idea or picture enshrined in each ray its germinal concept of FORM, animate it with the germinal concept of ultimate individual life and endow it with desire-emotion as the stimulus out of latency into ultimate self-expression and activity.

28 Having accomplished their work, the next and sub-ordinate Group of Masters who have also completed their liberation but who, from time to time, at rare intervals, visit the Physical World though not incarnate, in order to direct the focussing ray and to see that its work is in the hands of those whose intelligence best qualifies them to co-operate with as much of the Great Plan as may be entrusted to them.

29 This Group of Masters, Superior and Inferior, constitute the Hierarchy of what we call the Rosy Cross, and their work is to reduce the Divine Plan to a Concrete form or expression. They invest it with archetypal qualities, so that it becomes a matrix wherein, after further modifications, impalpable matter can take on definite shape of a permanent nature, i.e., so that it may ultimately cohere sufficiently to express in the Physical World.

30 Here it is that the elements of the Great Picture are sorted out much as we would cut a picture apart to prepare it for a puzzle contest. This is difficult for us to understand but it explains the reason why our aboriginal ancestors possessed so much remarkable knowledge that we have never had and why we possess so much that it would have seemed more natural for them to have had first. Each part of the Great Picture thus isolated becomes perfect in itself as to its appointments, just as some biological organism when divided becomes in each separate part new but complete individuals. This perfecting process is in order that each detail of the Great Picture will become thoroughly effective, whether its ultimate purpose be aerial, oceanic, continental or individual. It is in this way that seas and continents are rearranged by what seem to us to be cataclysmic phenomena, and better cultures and civilizations made to supersede those that have become obsolete.

31 Each of these details of the Great Picture are arranged in a sequential order and often require vast periods in which to become "ripe" or arrive at maturity. That is why on this Physical Plane, the 7th sphere, a given culture or civilization may obtain for several millenia. Time begins only as each comes into self-expression or mainfestation.

32 Until the moment for each detail in the Great Picture to express itself arrives, that detail lies in the womb of Materia Remota, in the 6th sphere, or what is sometimes called the Astral World.

33 In this 6th sphere the work performed by the Greater and Lesser or Superior and Inferior Masters is taken up by still another Group, two more degrees removed from direct contact with the Great White Brotherhood Itself. This Group we shall call, for convenience's sake,—Adepts, or those who have perfected themselves in liberation and initiate service. They are capable of being entrusted with the functioning, under guidance and direction of the Masters, of the vast forces of nature-so-called. These Adepts maintain the activities of the 6th sphere, an extremely important one.

34 The isolated details of the Great Picture which we have spoken of as lying in the womb of Materia Remota, or unmanifest matter, are taken up by the Adepts and "impregnated." This is a curious term to use, but it is difficult always to find terms in our limited human vocabularies to express that which is almost inexpressible. Let us try an illustration. As everyone knows there are what is known as "infertile" or "virgin" eggs. These are perfectly good eggs, rich in nourishment and in considerable demand in hospitals for certain types of patients. But they do not possess the power to gestate and maturize into chickens. They are excellent in themselves but they lack the virility to go on in evolutionary process to the destiny of the normal egg.

35 Somewhat similarly, we find here in the 6th sphere the details of the Great Picture, incapable however, of going on, as yet, to self-expression of and by themselves. A vital essence is lacking to enable them to break through the veil into Materia Proxima, or present, manifest matter.

36 That which is lacking is soul. Soul is developed individually by the conscious organism of the human individuals, but it has to have that from which it can grow. Soul therefore is implanted seed-wise in each detail of the Great Picture in order that each detail may grow into the Physical World or expression. Thereafter, the conscious organisms develop the negative polarity of soul in order that they may grow individually back into the invisible worlds consciously.

37 Here, therefore, in the higher divisions of the 6th sphere, the Adepts imbue the details of the Great Picture, first with Soul Power, then with Soul-Light and next with Soul-Life. Thus equipped and endowed each detail then begins a process of definite growth. In the 4th sub-division of the 6th sphere, each detail is "magnetized" by the Adepts, so that it will exert an interest or feeling, by virtue of which palpable matter will be both positively and negatively attracted to it and the individual life. Thus the opposing forces of polarity and the harmonizing forces of rhythm may be said to be inaugurated.

38 In the 5th sphere, each detail received its individual Tone in consonance with which its individual activity would ultimately mature. In the 6th sphere details take on the characteristic color which stamp its relationship to other details of the same Great Picture and in chemical conformity to which it will eventually function. Finally the Adept endows it with those qualities which will shape its individual activities to its ultimate destiny. In this 6th sphere each detail, while in the womb of Materia Remota, really undergoes a process of gestation consisting of seven grades or initiatory degrees, preliminary to the two final initiations or grades which take place in the 7th or Physical sphere, wherein each detail becomes adapted to express through the four divisions of the Ethers, Reflecting, Light, Life and Chemical. Thus finally emerging through combinations of gas, liquid or solid into manifestation in Materia Proxima.

39 The work in the 7th sphere is undertaken and guided by the Group immediately next to and forming the lower body of the Adepts, and known as the Brethren of the Rosy Cross.

40 Here, then, we have a direct lineage from the borderline of life, beginning with the Brethren of the Rosy Cross, through the Adepts of the same, on through the Greater and Lesser Masters who are far removed from any localizing designation, through the various grades of celestial hierarchies to the Great White Brotherhood, whose incomparable centrum are the Spirits directly before the Throne.

41 It must be kept in mind always that the names used to designate these grades of Beings are of human invention and not at all to be taken as the actual names of Beings who are so far removed and advanced as to be really nameless. There is a point in evolution where names which serve only in the illusive world of time, are non-existent. However, leaving aside modern fanciful and imaginative apellations we may truthfully say that in the earliest stages of the dawn of consciousness, when mankind was much closer to the divine than now in consciousness, and to the divine rather than the mundane side of life, certain designations were "brought over" by him. Curiously enough they have persisted in their identities through several of the great world-religions, ages before what we now call "occult science" was even born, much less thought of. So we are justified in lieu of better, in retaining these terms for a more convenient understanding, even though we may question the authenticity of them.

42 It is in this manner that the Divine Ideas come down into manifestation in our mundane sphere. The movement and rearrangement of great masses of matter, the rearrangement of oceans, continents, the upheaval of mountain chains, the raising of ocean beds are still in the hands of the Masters, Adepts, and Brethren on the hinterland. But man undergoes a curious process. As a detail of the Great Picture, he went through seven grades of gestation in the 6th sphere and two grades in the seventh sphere. Nine in all. So he recapitulates all evolutionary process by nine months of gestation, not in the world of Materia Remota but in the womb of his mother, in Materia Proxima. His subsequent rise through various cultures and the attainment of definite statuses of civilization are compelled to be the work of HIS OWN HANDS, as he becomes more and more able to attune his cerebral apparatus to the stream of consciousness we have already described.

43 And as he demonstrates his ability to rise to the occasion more and more of the rearrangement of the masses of his continental abode will be and are being entrusted to him. For instance, man now considers it quite a simple matter of engineering to remove a mountain or two in order to lay a railroad, or to bore a tunnel through them. He digs canals that connect oceans and hemispheres; he drains and diverts rivers and lakes for irrigation purposes and he creates vast inland seas by dams, for the same purpose. Verily, man IS taking up the reins of creative activity formerly held only by his Creator.

44 So man, originally a picture or detail in the Divine Mind, emanated, vitalized by a Spark from the Logos Itself, verily a "divine Fragment" has come, in company with other details of the Great Picture, down through milliards of millenia to Physical Matter. As he has crystallized his attention to his environment of matter he has unconsciously and unintentionally allowed himself to be crystallized BY matter.

45 But as in every school and College, there are honor students who are in advance of their class or grade, so, amongst humanity collectively, there are honor men and women who stand out according to individual talents as leaders or monitors to their fellow pilgrims. These there have been in all ages, who have witnessed the crystallization process and sought, not only to escape it themselves but also to retard it in others. By their efforts and their individual response to inner guidance they have attuned themselves to rapport with the Invisible Brethren of the Rosy Cross and have worked assiduously for the alleviation and liberation of humanity from the suffering and discord caused by the too complete crystallization into which it has fallen unwittingly.

46 These advanced ones and others who by serious intent and unselfish devotion to the principle involved have been adopted by and associated with the Brethren of the Rosy Cross as what are known as "Lay Brothers" of the Rosy Cross, functioning on the visible and mundane side of life. From time to time, these Lay Brothers have associated themselves together first in the Greater and Lesser Mysteries of Antiquity and more recently, in what are known as "societies" or "Brotherhoods" of the Rosy Cross. Not ALL true Rosicrucians are thus associated. Many of them are doing their work in the channels that have opened up to them. Many are TRUE Rosicrucians who have never thought themselves to be such and who, perhaps, have never even heard of the term. Many CLAIM to be Rosicrucians who have not the slightest idea what the term means. Today, REAL Rosicrucians are, in effect, Christian Mystics, for they endeavor to realize in a practical manner the inner truth of the teachings of the last Great Master to appear visibly, Jesus, The Christ.

47 Rosicrucians do not use the term Christian in the limited and narrow sense of sectarian implication. Anciently, the word meant, simply "the good one." In the Rosicrucian sense EVERY good man or woman is a true Christian, whether he or she be Jew or Gentile, Mohammedan or Hindu.

48 In order to put themselves in rapport with their marvelous lineage, those who recognize each other as Rosicrucians organize together for the simple reason that an organization provides a far more efficient vehicle or instrument for the modern dissemination of knowledge, especially of the spiritual type, than would the unsupported individual efforts. In their organization, they strive to maintain a visible expression of the archetypal structure in their formal gatherings or colleges. Therefore, we have seen how each detail of the Great Picture undergoes an initiatory or instructive gestation of nine grades before it reaches the outer periphery of Materia Proxima, and the further nine months' gestation in the womb of Materia Proxima. Similarly the Rosicrucian System operates through a series of nine grades of initiation or instruction, in which all former processes are recapitulated.

49 This is to prepare the individual consciousness not only for its destiny here, but also for its illuminated progress on the "way back" as Jacob Boehme termed it, in the inner worlds.

50 The Lay Brethren of the Rosy Cross associate themselves in what has been called by our Fathers in the Art, as their "Honorable Society." The name "Order" is a modern misnomer. The Lay Brethren of the Rosy Cross do not assume or claim themselves to be the sole or exclusive channels through which the Great White Brotherhood operates. That would be sheerest imposture and blasphemy. They DO BELIEVE and KNOW themselves to be one of the several legitimate outlets or instruments through which the Great White Brotherhood brings to a focus its carefully planned and projected purposes, which, in turn, it received direct from the Logos or God of our Solar System.

51 However, it is obvious that like Jacob's Ladder, there is a direct and continuous sequence of units of communication between man and God. It is the scheme wrought by the old Kabbalists in the Sephirotic Tree of Life. The Nine Sephiroth, through the several worlds, begins with the Tenth Sephira,—God—Kether, or Ipsissimus, the Crown, from which all other manifestations emerge, extending finally to Malkuth or Kingdom. In this the Lay Brothers of the Rosy Cross see the whole body of man, the whole body of humanity, the whole body of conscious existence visible and invisible as the effective result of the Divine Idea projected from Kether or God through the Great White Brotherhood and its graded subordinate hierarchies. It is from the status of Malkuth that the return journey, through evolution, back to Kether is made.

52 The Rays, at first of purest white, LIVING Light, on which the Great White Brotherhood impresses the Divine Plan received from the Logos, become differentiated through the several modifications received in the various spheres. Each now separate color becomes a vehicle of expression for some definite Form, Color or Tone, a fact of which all true artists and musicians are vividly aware. Color and tone, their affinities, combinations and relationships known and assumed, and the possibilities to be derived from them, are creating a new culture and developing a new science, to which many of our best minds are now being devoted. This too is simply a part or a detail of the Great Picture now coming to ripe expression in Time and Relativity.

53 If those "best minds" could only realize the lineage of the so-called "Natural forces" with which they are working and strive to become en rapport with the spiritual essence enshrined in each, then what wonderful results could and would ensue.

54 That is a part of the mission now being undertaken by the Lay Brothers of the Rosy Cross, who form the lowest step in the ladder from earth to heaven; First, the Lay Brothers of the Rosy Cross; second, the Brothers of the Rosy Cross; third, the Adepts of the Rosy Cross; fourth, the Lesser Masters; fifth, the Greater or Superior Masters; sixth, the Powers; seventh, the Principalities; eighth, the Dominions; ninth, the Thrones and the Great White Brotherhood of the Shining Ones.—ALL maintaining the sequential flow of the Divine, Universal Consciousness unbroken, from the Timeless One, to the Prisoners of Time.

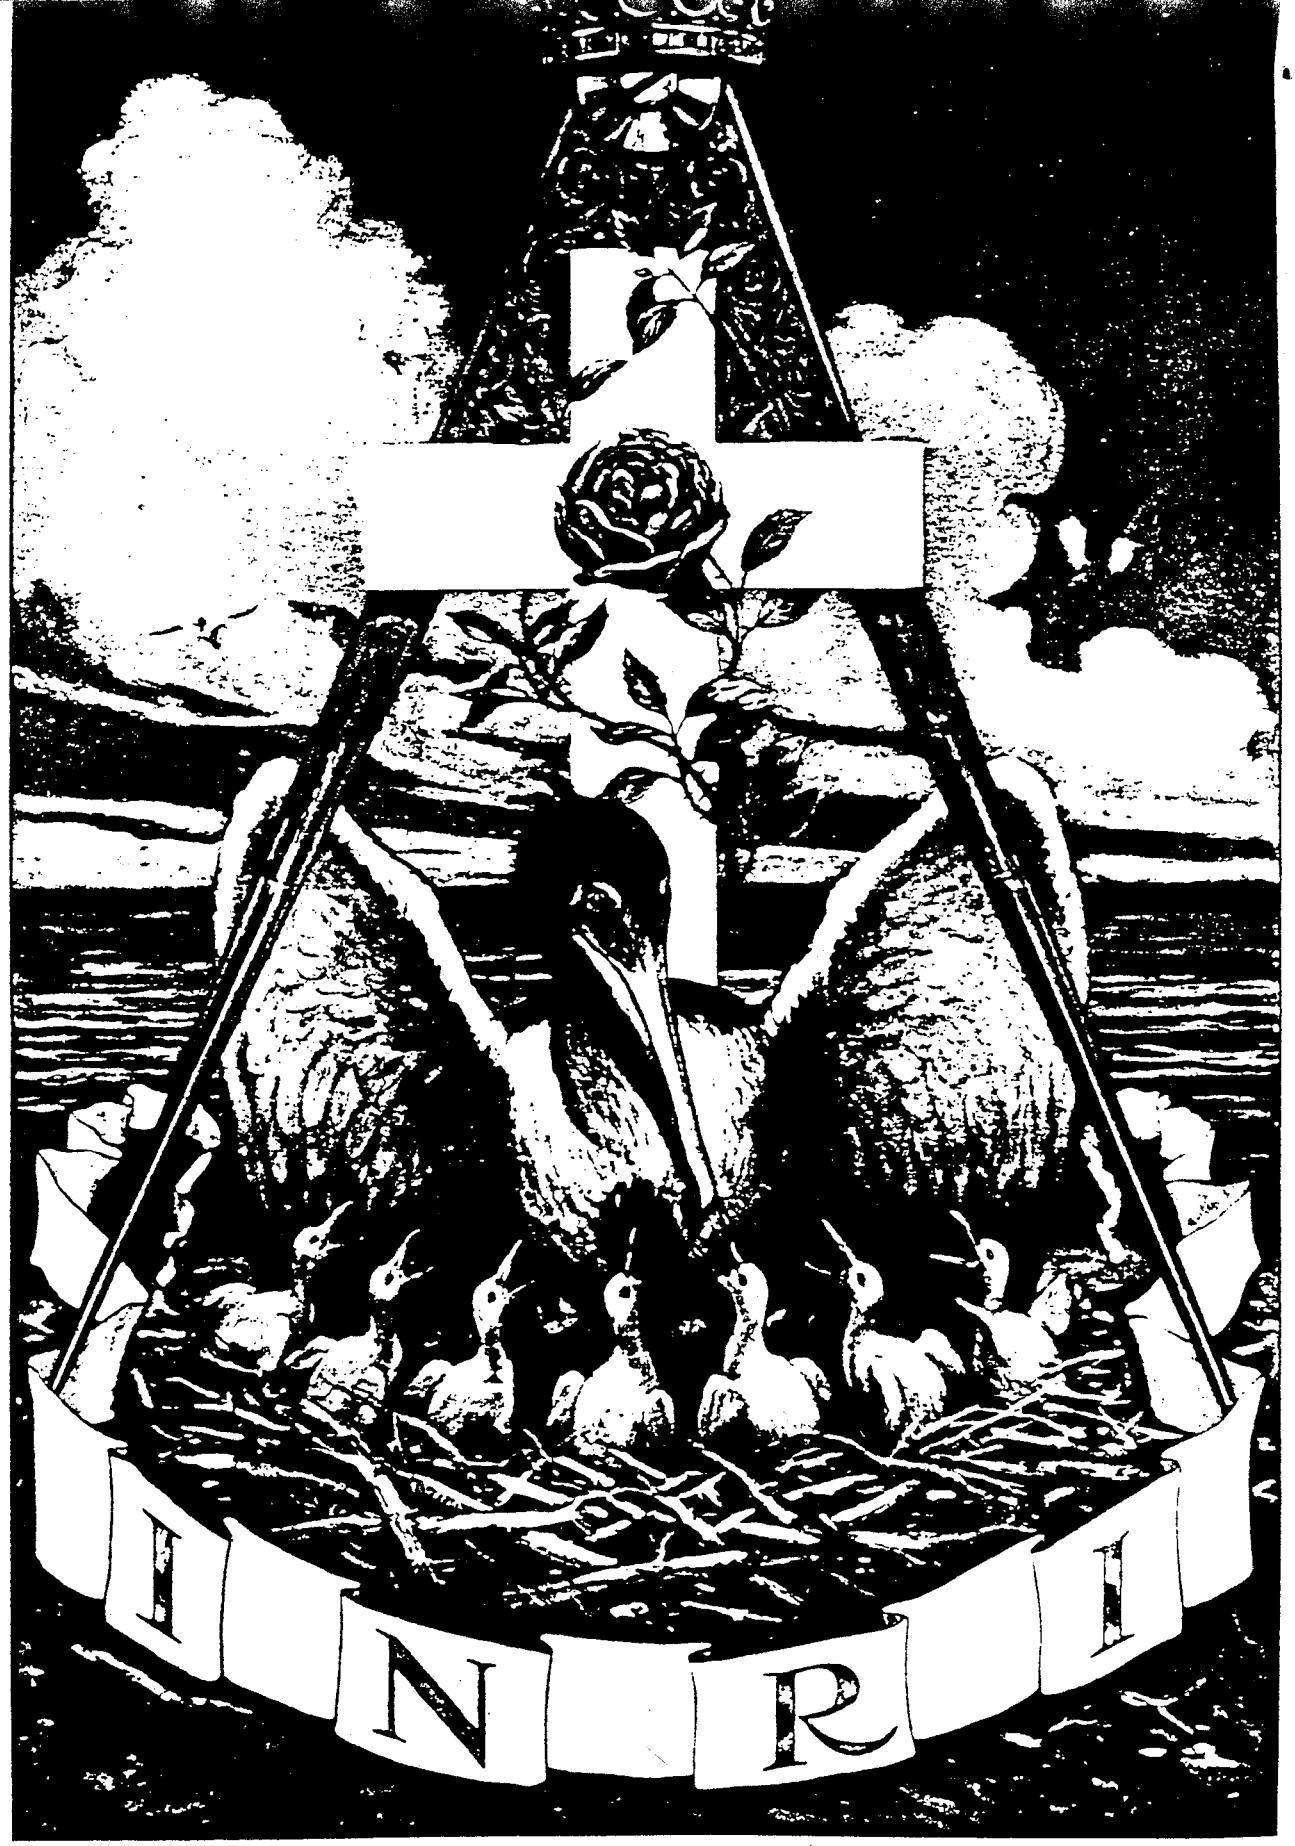
55 It is the function of the Lay Brothers of the Rosy Cross to do yeoman service in the visible world for their Preceptors, the Brethren, Adepts and Masters in the Invisible World. The Lay and Full Brethren of the Rosy Cross have no "Masters" as the world commonly uses the term. They acknowledge but one, overruling Master—Christ, whom they regard as the Indwelling Spirit of our planet, which planet has now become his throne, in this way interpreting the statements that after the event on Golgotha, "he sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high."

56 But to lay and Accepted Brethren of the Rosy Cross it seems just to accord to those who, by their honored advance in evolution have become masters of themselves this title in its lesser and understood implication. By so doing, these individual masters have become the conscious and direct servants of the One Great Master—the Christos. They know him and are intimately associated with him and are permitted to join their humble efforts to his. That is what the Bible means by "reigning with Christ." In this sense the Bible statements are invested with a new meaning and literalness that brings us much closer to the ultimate details of the picture of human destiny than the imaginative and allegorical concepts of a general resurrection and an universal weeding-out process in an indefinite and hazy eternal continuum. It brings to us the picture of conscious, happy, absorbing activity instead of an oppressive picture of endless and meaningless praise and somewhat dubious hymnology.

57 With the Great White Brotherhood composed of the Shining Ones at the positive extreme and the Brethren and Lay Brethren of the Rosy Cross at the negative extreme, we have a perfect instrument for the furtherance of the Divine Idea in manifestation. This is not to be understood as an assertion that the Brethren, Lay or Professed of the Rosy Cross are the exclusive holders of this position of unusual dignity. All legitimate organizations not created for personal fame or profit, all Churches, Schools, Colleges and Universities, all human organizations and whatsoever exist for human betterment, are, in some way, the instruments to a greater or lesser degree of the Great White Brotherhood, but to use this name for purposes of advertising, publicity or a lure to membership campaigns is not far from blasphemy to say nothing of presumptuous impudence. The Bible tells us that "all things work together for good" and the Great White Brotherhood DOES use all possible vehicles accordingly. Many of them do not know that they are being so used.

58 In the incomparable Company of the Shining Ones, each unit works along the ray by virtue of which he himself has progressed to his exalted status, helping those still on that particular pathway because he knows its route and its conditions. Therefore, the Great White Brotherhood works impartially for Catholic or Protestant, Christian or Zoroastrian. The only ideal fixed by the Shining Ones is ultimate evolution into the clear Light of Truth and rapid individual unfoldment on the way thereto. All worthy methods are fostered by them and many methods are inspired by them and they work through no single method alone nor for any one cultus alone.

59 In this short paper no attempt has been made to give details of which "no man knoweth." We have sought only to give such concensus of testimony as has been made available by those who have had some indubitable contact with inner and therefore more intimate sources of information. It is hoped that this attempt will have the effect of inspiring a new and wholesome respect for this incomparable Group so close to our Logos and God.

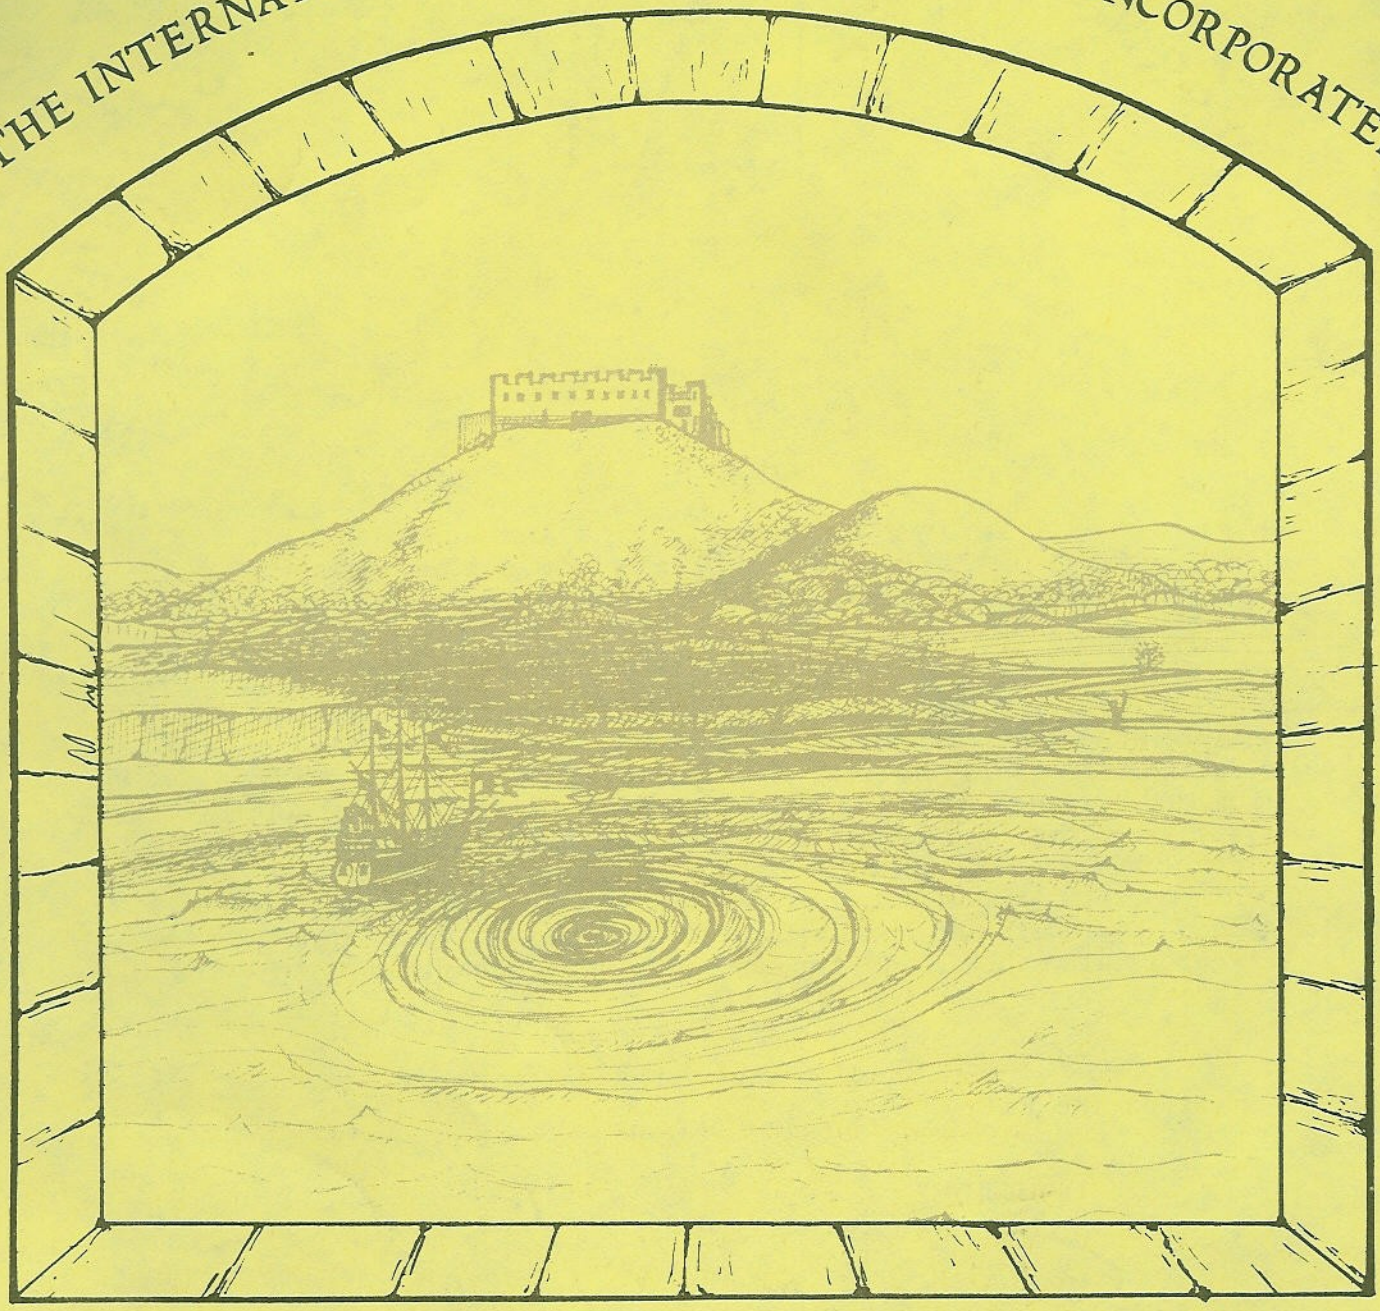


THE JEWEL OF THE ROSE CROIX. 63 28

The pelican feeding its young from a self-inflicted wound in its own breast is accepted as an appropriate symbol of both sacrifice and resurrection. To the Christian mystic the pelican signifies Christ, who saved humanity (the baby birds) through the sacrifice of His own blood. The pelican may also be considered as representative of the sun, whose rays (blood) are the life of the seven philosophical planets depicted as the pelican's brood. In the Mysteries the pelican represents the resurrection of the candidate from the dead. The mother bird signifies those divine institutions which possess the secret doctrine which is the spiritual life of man. It was an ancient belief that three days after the father pelican had killed his own young, the mother resurrected them by wounding herself and permitting her blood to pour over their bodies. In Masonic symbolism the blood of the pelican stands for the Secret Work by which man is "raised" from the slavery of ignorance to the condition of freedom conferred by wisdom. As the Rose Croix degree is based upon Rosicrucian and Hermetic symbolism, it follows that the pelican represents one of the vessels in which the experiments of alchemy are performed and its blood that mysterious tincture by which the base metals (the seven baby birds) are transmuted into spiritual gold. Both the rose and the pelican signify the highest expression of human and divine affection. The love of the mother bird for her young typifies the emotion of the Creator for those creatures which He fashioned during the Seven Sacred Days. The word "Rose" is a simple anagram, for from the rearrangement of its letters is derived the word "Eros"—the name of the Greek god of love. The phœnix is often substituted for the pelican, as can readily be discerned from an examination of its bill.

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF MARTINISTS INCORPORATED

Worthing - Barbados - West Indies



PLANE III

LIBER 64

GRADE: COMPANION

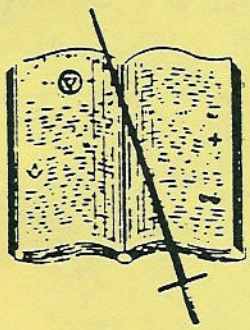
Private & Confidential

The International College of Martinists Incorporated, is a non-profit institution existing for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF MARTINIST STUDIES



Dear Companion

Again, yet again, we remind and admonish you: do not get lost in the intellectual forest! Do not become a sterile academic. Remember you cannot obtain knowledge from reading!

Reading can only provide information. Persist especially with exercise #1 in Liber 1, exercise #2 in Liber 2, exercise #3 in Liber 4, and EXERCISE "X" ... the practice of the presence of God ... constantly dwell on God, constantly dwell on what you consider God to be, constantly dwell on the attributes of God: compassion, love, beauty, truth, justice, forgiveness and on all that is summed up in the phrase "the Good" ... strive to manifest these qualities in your life, in your relationships, in your attitude, your behaviour, your speech....

With all good wishes for your continued advancement on the Path

Sincerely

64 00

The International College of Martinist Studies Inc., Worthing W31, Barbados, West Indies.

Disciplina Arcani

Personal & Confidential

Dear Friend

You have now received information on the basic terms of the Ancient Gnosis and it can be realised that these terms are given to the energies and forces at work in the realm of human experience. Organised religion seems to overlook the complexity of the human psyche and reacts when intelligent people refuse to accept limiting dogmas and doctrines of a rigid nature.

Gnostic philosophy is designed so that the follower can see and analyse many peculiar forces at work within the mind and makeup of one's self and others. By recognising the many pitfalls which prevent one from becoming a fully mature person, the easier it becomes to eradicate them.

We can give but a sketchy outline of our work in the lessons and it can be seen that it is only when a student is able to attend the group in person that the full teachings can be given and explained. This is why we give you the opportunity of writing to us personally with your questions or problems.

"The Cosmic Drama" section gives the inner meanings of the Christian mysteries in the light of the Gnosis.

Sincerely yours in the Light,

THE COSMIC DRAMA

Part 1

#238 CLASSIFIED

PALM SUNDAY

Palm Sunday begins the real Mysteries of the Christ, but we must refer to the events which lead up to this Holy Week. At the Baptism, the descent of the Divine Soul is seen entering into the Chrestes-Jesus, from then he begins to perform miracles through the Power of the Soul.

At the Transfiguration this union between the human and Divine reaches its height of glory and power, but not quite, the human self is still strong in him and he must turn his face towards the final battle which he must face with the Ruler of the Body.

On Palm Sunday the neophyte is permitted to enjoy his last earthly triumph. In its Gnostic sense it reveals one of the stages along the Path of the Chrestes. This part of the drama is derived from the ceremonies of Initiation as performed within the Mystery Schools of Osiris and Serapis. The entry of Jesus into the city of Jerusalem on two asses symbolises the aspirant being conscious of his two Souls. Bearing in mind that the Greek Sign of Cancer is the two asses, this is both the turning point of the sun's course across the sky and also the turning point of the Soul's earthly career.

At the Transfiguration the Crestes becomes temporarily one with the Christos within and he is acclaimed by the mass of the people, he attains the highest pitch of his glory as the Son of God, but he has not completely conquered his animal self. The drama shows that the priests of the established temple represent this animal nature, with the triumph of the human Soul becoming a danger to the continued reign of the Ruler of the Body. Thus the ruler of the body, being the sub-conscious mind, sometimes called SATAN, fears that the Illumined Soul may disturb the current of respectability which allowed it to float into a position of becoming ruler of the body.

In this Drama, Jerusalem is symbolical of the Heaven or Temple above, and on earth it is the human Temple of the Holy Spirit. The neophyte always rides upon an animal representing the body, this also shows that it is the Divine who always holds the reins of the human personality, whereas, at the dawn of creation, the One fragments Its Life within the limitations of the Waters of Space to become the many, the Divine falls into an earthly sleep and becomes oblivious to its Divine Nature and becomes lost within the waters of the personality.

THE LAST SUPPER

The ceremony of the "Washing of the Disciples' Feet" symbolises the purification of the understanding - or a right understanding of Spiritual Law - and it is necessary to undergo the more advanced initiations into the Christian Mysteries.

Maundy Thursday has always been celebrated as the institution of the Mass or Last Supper which has become the central point of the Catholic Mystery Drama.

The Mystery of the Eucharista is not the sole property of the Christian Church, as Godfrey Higgins has proved that 'the sacrifice of bread and wine was common to many ancient nations'. The Rite of the Eucharista is one of the oldest rites of antiquity. The Gnostic interpretation of this Rite concerned the knowledge of the Divine Nature of Man and its relationship to the man of flesh.

The Bread represents the mortal life of man and the Wine the Essence of the Divine Soul which is sacrificed continually for the nourishment of the man of flesh. The Bread means the regeneration of life from the seed of the Self, and the Wine, the emblem of wisdom and knowledge gained through personal effort by the man of flesh. The Wine also represents the accumulation of experience by man, which causes a fermentation within the Soul and grants to the human Soul strength and knowledge to become as his Father.

Man exists by the continual sacrifice of the Wisdom and Essence of the Soul to nourish our souls and bodies. This ancient sacrifice has many aspects, as we shall see: The wheat typifies the seed of the Divine which is shown in the body at conception and birth, and the energies and forces presented to the human Soul to permit it to germinate and grow. The wine of the grape symbolised the Life of the Soul being poured out into the body for its nourishemnt.

The Sacrifice of Bread and Wine symbolises the original Fragmentation of the Life of the Supreme Soul at the foundation of the world, to become dispersed within the man as Souls of Men. This Sacrifice is reproduced under physical forms of time and space to act as a constant reminder to us that we are Children of the One Father as Divine Soul, but on the other hand the Father Himself.

Therefore, the Soul or Christos is also compelled to follow in the Father's Pattern, to sacrifice its Life from its own level, to be born in human bodies in order to give life and substance to the mortal Soul. This Christianised Drama of the Cosmic Sacrifice of the Divine God within the limitations of matter, shows that the Christ is the Christos within man, and the Chrestes is the human Soul through which the Christos descends to earth life after life.

We must keep in our mind that this sacrifice of the God-Man is a voluntary one, He dies to his own Glory to fall into earth as men, this means that the God-Man is not a perfect God,† but undertakes this sacrifice and descent in order to realise His own nature and divinity. Thus the Divine Self being fragments of the Essence of the God-Man, also makes a voluntary sacrifice into matter to realise its own Divine Nature, this means that the human Self is utterly unable to end itself, for it can only think in terms of its own continuity.

† The Source of all manifestation is Perfect and Whole but in a time and space sequence we have the appearance of a state of becoming.

Therefore, the Christos-Soul is the Lamb sacrificed from the foundation of the world, dying in very truth from its own Glory, entering into the confines of mortal life to live and die, then to rise triumphant as the Risen Christos. The Drama of the Eucharist is the symbol of this sacrifice of the Higher Self for the lower self. It indicates that when the Christ speaks or acts, he then represents the Divine Soul of Man, and when Jesus speaks and acts, he represents the human Soul.

THE AGONY

The Garden always represents the nature of the human body and the Garden of the Agony is the pinnacle of Wisdom where the neophyte beholds the last and final act in the human destiny of the Soul.

If we look at the story of the Agony in the Garden of Gethsemane, we will see that it could not refer to an historical event: Jesus left three disciples sleeping and went further away to pray to his Father, he returned and found them asleep and he spoke to the, he again went to pray for the second time, and he returned to find them sleeping, he again went to pray for the third time and he returned to the sleeping disciples. Now, who was there who recorded the fact that Jesus spoke to his Father and then spoke to the sleeping disciples three times? We are not told, hence it is really a part of the Drama of Initiation.

At the fourth Initiation the Soul has to face the last dregs of the sufferings it has brought upon itself according to the Law. The neophyte must face this Cup before he becomes free from the toils of human evolution.

THE BETRAYAL OF PETER

This part of the ritual has to be enacted by the animal nature, called Patar or Petre in the original. The neophyte must eradicate all attachment to the body of flesh, hence Peter acts in this capacity, first the mental essence denies the Soul, then the emotional nature also denies and finally the physical body rejects the human Soul.* †

To Be Continued .....

* In spite of all this drama we should never lose sight of the continual process of transmutation taking place. That which appears base is transformed into more subtle energy.

Nothing is ever lost - even if denied. According to the Jesus prayer in John 17 "nothing is lost save the Son of Perdition". This "Son of Perdition" is the human soul entranced by its illusory concepts of the world.

† The body should be regarded as an instrument only and not as the self.

Personal & Confidential

Dear Friend

We can identify the Cosmic Drama with all of the events occurring in the life of the human being. In fact the human is vulnerable to any condition which occurs here in the world.

All around we see death, suffering and discord whilst underneath - silently and unnoticed changes are taking place which lift mankind a little farther into the realisation of the Divine Reality.

It is true that we are, as individuals, involved in a Cosmic Process from which we cannot escape. It would appear that we are trapped in a never-ending series of events which bring nothing but fear bo the human. The early Gnostics tried to answer the questions arising from the turmoil of human experience by creating allegories to convey information to the enquiring mind. Why? Why? Why?

Some hypotheses maintain that every thing - pain, joy, suffering and wholeness, all stem from the source - that God punishes and rewards. Others say that suffering is the result of ignorance and sin - perhaps God is punishing us for following the promptings of an opposing force - namely the Devil.

The purpose of the Gnosis is to bring people to the truth about Life. The innner knowledge, or gnosis, is the knowledge that the eternal aspect of the human experience is the Reality of ourselves. The Truth is that we are all "Sons and Daughters" or living intelligent facets of the One Universal Deity. We are the organs and parts of the Cosmic Organism.

The Divine Process is reflected in the human experience and this "God" in each one of us is also reflected in the individual experience of an unfolding life. In miniture we reflect the Cosmic Drama of growth from ignorance to enlightenment - or from death to immortality. Death being no more than a process of re-birthing into new experiences - new forms and a deeper understanding of our individual importance. We are also an essential requisite in the outworking of the Androgyne God to fulfil Itself within the densest aspect of physical light-energy.

Let us go forward then trying to get glimpses of our relationsip to the Source of All Things for in all our human 'troubles and trials' we shall emerge complete and fulfilled at the consumation of the Aeon.

Sincerely yours in the Light

THE COSMIC DRAMA

Part 2

#240

CLASSIFIED

THE CRUCIFIXION

We now come to the very heart of the Gnostic Drama of the Christos, wherein the Soul as the Son of God descends into the limitation of the body of flesh and identifies himself with man's suffering and final death as well as with his life and labour, by this means assisting the human Soul to rise from the most finite level of being and human experience to the infinite stage of being the God-Man.

This drama begins with the Divine Victim entering the human temple for the final act of the human Mystery with a triumphal procession, commemorating the entry of the human Soul into the Jerusalem of the human Temple for the Passover Sacrifice which was and ever will be his own crucifixion or Initiation out of the human evolution into that of the Divine Evolution.

We must ever realise that each form of life is the disguise of God, and that life exists because it ever offers itself to Itself, since the food of sacrifice, which is eaten is the disguised God giving himself to the parts to be eaten. (Just as we partaking of the bread and wine, process them through the body to be distributed by the Blood to feed every organ and part - Ed) This means that by the 'death' of the Son of God in matter we are redeemed from the past and granted salvation from the bondage of time.

Psychologically, the above death of the God deprives the physical death, which is so essential to life and its growth, of any particular horror because our mind is no longer obsessed with the desire to accumulate the memories of the past indefinitely. Just as physical death is the instrument of eternal renewal for the Self, so the Sacrifice of God into matter is also the surety of the renewal of manifestation. This 'death' is the wiping away of all memory of past events, which, if we allowed ourselves to accumulate, would strangle all the inherent creative life with a sense of unutterable monotony, by this means the end of the sensory-system called human nature - becomes for it, the end of its time and usefulness for the unfoldment of the Christos.

The Crucifixion, then, means to the Gnostic something very much more than an event occurring once some two thousand years ago, it shows that the Divine Christos does not die a physical death - but that it actually wills to die from eternity into finiteness, it becomes new every moment of time, as St Paul says, "I die daily".* This human Temple is changed and renewed unceasingly at every moment and with every breath, therefore, in the Alpha and Omega we are annihilated in each physical experience and another form resembling it takes its place for the descent of the Christos. The Crucifixion thus becomes for us a constant reminder that the Christos is ever sacrificing its own life for the sake of the human Soul - Jesus.

* I Corinthians 15 : 31

We are not going to waste time in recapitulating some of the many explanations put forward by the metaphysicians for the meaning of the Holy Week, we are going to deal with some of the personal aspects of this grand Drama.

For instance, Peter holds the same office as the Roman myth of Janus. He, like Peter, bears the keys of Alpha and Omega and the Rod which conducts the defunct Soul from the body to heaven. Peter then symbolises the descent and ascent of the human Soul from the casket of flesh. He is also the Sun who rises in the East and sets in the West, but he also controls the descent and ascent of the human Soul downwards into matter and also its ascent at death. This shows that Peter is certainly a myth borrowed from the attributes of Mithra, Janus of Rome and Proteus, the rock of ancient Greece.

The betrayal of Jesus by Judas is certainly based upon the myth of the betrayal of Joseph by his twelve brethren, in which Judas (Gr.Ioudas) figures as the ringleader. We also find the same 'betrayal' figuring in all the religious myths and mystery dramas. The episode simply shows that the human nature of man will always betray the human Soul at the moment of triumph.

The trial before Pilate, the story of the two thieves, the sayings on the Cross, have all the marks of circumstantial fiction or were borrowed wholesale from the older myths. That there was an historical crucifixion, scourging, and mocking, in the person of Antigonus, the last Asmonean King of the Jews, who was slain by Mark Antony, and that such event was grafted onto the story of Jeshu is an undoubted fact.

Philo says that King Agrippa was insulted by the populace at Alexandria, who took a lunatic named Karabbas, dressed him as a mock king, honoured him and hailed him as a king. We must also realise that the story of the crown of thorns, the scourging and the kingly titles is derived from the ancient drama of the Mock King, the sacrificial victim among primitive peoples who died for the salvation of the race or nation, taking upon himself the sins of the race. This simply tells that the self accepts the sins of the human Soul by its descent or crucifixion in matter.

The Ritual of Crucifixion is a very old one, it is to be found in Egypt where the victim representing the Saviour-God was led as a prisoner in procession wearing a crown of thorns, later to die for the good of Egypt. This same story is told of Prometheus, Herackles, Mithra, Adonis and Attis, which certainly indicated the last stage in the Greater Mysteries, when the neophyte had reached the highest stage possible in the earthly Disciplina Arcani.

We are told that in the ancient Babylonian festival of the Sacaea a prisoner condemned to death was dressed in the king's robes, throned, and allowed to deport himself as the king for five days, after which he was stripped, scourged, and crucified. He died and his blood renewed the life of the nation. We find the same rituals being enacted at Athens, and in the ancient Semitic myth of the sacrifice of the only-begotten son Ieoud by the Father-God Kronos, after a ritual in which the victim is dressed in royal robes. In the old sacrifices by the North American Indians, this same ritual was enacted.

It becomes obvious that from the Semitic myth we have the mock crowning of Jesus and the supposed substitution of the criminal Barabbas or Karabbas, 'Son of the Father', who in the time of Origen was named 'Jesus Barabbas'. Care was also taken by the Semites to remove the body of the crucified victim, some distance away from the scene of death.

The drink of gall comes from the Mysteries of Demeter and Egypt. Here we have the symbol of the final draught of the human law of cause and effect.

The origin of the myth of Jesus carrying his own cross to the place of crucifixion comes from Cyrene which is in Libya, the place of the legendary scene of the pillar-carrying exploit of Herackles, and in Palestine Simon was actually a God-name, representing the ancient Sun-God Semesh, identified with Baal, which again links Baal with the Samson myth. This identification with Baal who carries his pillars crossways, should reveal the figure of Simon the Cyrenean carrying the cross and of Peter being crucified to the same form of cross upside down.

The origin of the Cross itself is absolutely pre-Christian and universal, and was recognised as the symbol of life or immortality. The original Gnostic Cross is shown growing out ot the female reproductive organ, and the human Soul - Jesus becomes the 'Christus Pontifex', the Christos who becomes the bridgemaker between heaven and earth upon the Tree of Life which is planted in Golgotha, the Place of the Skull, which is actually the door to this world. The Christos, therefore, becomes the Door which is again Peter, the controller of the Life between heaven and earth.

The Cross as shown on the Catholic Monstrance is the same as the Spinal Tree which shows the seven lamps and the sleeping serpent coiled about the phallus at the base. It is the same as the Wheel of the Law, which shows the Axel Tree or Spinal Tree ascending from the genitalia of woman to the Sun or thalamus in the head, it moves through the heart, which has been called the Light of the World because of the whirling motion of the heart Centre, and then to the Centre of the Cross and is then whirled out into the Beyond by the Whirling Axis of the Body.

The outline of the cross, the tree of the human form, is stretched between the waters of material existence and the heavens of the Divine Self. The Path from the waters to the thalamus represents the whole course of the Soul's ascent into liberation - from the material waters into which it descended when the Man-God fragmented Itself into terrestial creation and continuous incarnation. Therefore, the human Soul rising from the waters of sentient existence, passes by the Way of the Cross from thw womb of nature up along the Axel-Tree to the Lotus in the skull, the point at which the union of humanity with divinity is finally realised.

The Seamless Garment being rent into the many represents the One, or Whole, of the Indivisible Pleroma, this robe being Universal Light. Whereas, the second robe of Light of the moon is variable and chequered, the former being the Garment of the Soul and the latter the Garment of the Personality. The division of the garment into four parts, shows that the life of the Soul is infused into the four-fold vestures which make up the personality.

The rock burial and resurrection of the Slain God has many meanings, but the whole event is mythological and is derived from the Mysteries of Egypt, Attis and Adonis, Mithras and Demeter. The rock-tomb is the body, the stone which is rolled against the opening symbolising the Cycles of Learning, and the four soldiers representing the four-fold personality. At the resurrection the rock is rolled away showing that the illusion of mortality is finished, the purpose of the personality is finished and the Soul rises from the tomb of matter as the Ascended Master.

The contradictory Christian details of the life and history of their Slain God are to be explained by natural variations from the various mystery systems and dramas. Such circumstantialities give an air of reality to the story so long as their discrepancies are ignored, when this is done the Hylics will accept the pseudo-historical account. It is only when one restores the Gnostic basis to the drama that we find it ceasing to be one in time, but it becomes instead a continuum within ourselves hourly and daily.

---ooOoo---

THE SANCTUARY OF THE GNOSIS

MARY MAGDALENE

#242

CLASSIFIED

Historically it is difficult to state with any absolute certainty any kind of definitive life of Mary Magdalene. However, there are many references and clues to who she was and the role she played as an historic person as well as interesting references to indicate her importance as an allegorical figure for the teaching of spiritual unfoldment.

Let us deal first with the historical aspect using the Bible for reference. Mary Magdalene is mentioned only a few times by name: the first as "the woman from whom seven devils had been cast"; in a list of women who followed Jesus; then several times with respect to her presence at the crucifixion of Jesus, and her place at the tomb as one of the women who went to anoint Jesus' body and subsequently as the one to whom Jesus first showed himself.

There is evidence that Mary Magdalene was also Mary of Bethany and by all accounts this fact was accepted by the Church Fathers Tertullian, St Ambrose, Jerome, Augustine, Bede to name a few. If this is the case we have a lot more information about her in the Bible record and it would explain what would appear to be an inconsistency in the fact that Mary of Bethany is mentioned several times as having given hospitality to Jesus, and being present at several important events in his life, but is not mentioned at all in connection with his death and resurrection.

The relationship Jesus had with Mary of Bethany has often been cited as one that only a wife could have had. A study of the customs of the time would substantiate such a claim and this has been written about in several places.

In the account in St.John's Gospel of the raising of Lazarus, Mary is identified as his sister and it goes on to say, "It was that Mary which anointed the Lord with ointment, and wiped his feet with her hair, whose brother Lazarus was sick." Tradition says it was Mary Magdalene who anointed Jesus but this is not actually born out in the four gospels which speak of "a woman of the city who was a sinner" at the washing and anointing of Jesus feet, and in the accounts of the anointing of Jesus head just prior to the Passover, as "a woman", or as just "Mary" in John's gospel.

From other records we can find that Mary was of the House of David and was in fact "well connected". There is evidence to suggest her family in fact owned land in and around Jerusalem as well as in Galilee. This fact would account for her being known as both Mary Magdalene (from Magdala on the Sea of Galilee) and Mary of Bethany situated a few miles south of Jerusalem. In St.Luke's gospel mention is made of Mary Magdalene being one of the women who supported Jesus: the list also includes a member of the household of King Herod.

There are other records which relate Mary to Jospeh of Arimathea, he was her uncle, and they are reported to have travelled to Britain, to Glastonbury, to carry out their work. After Joseph's death Mary went to France where she died. The recent book "Holy Blood, Holy Grail" mentions Mary as being a key figure in France in the first century and whereas one might not agree with some of the conclusions drawn in the book, it is obvious that such a person did exist and had a profound effect on the people and the thinking of the day.

Many of the churches in France are dedicated to "Our Lady" and it is thought today that that is to The Virgin Mary, or the Mother of Jesus, or the Mother of God. As the Roman Catholic Church did not in fact introduce its present teachings with respect to the Virgin Mary until around the 18th century, this tradition of dedicating the church to "Our Lady" comes from an earlier period and thus indicates an older tradition which would make sense of the place of Mary Magdalene in history.

There are two schools of thought on where Mary Magdalene received her lines of succession. The first, that she and Jesus were the last initiates under the old dispensation and that it was their task to usher in the new; the second, that she received her Hierophantic powers along with the other apostles at the last supper.

A further idea put forward is that she was an initiate of the cult of Ishtar or Astarte - the Mother Goddess and 'Queen of Heaven'. The sacred symbol of Astarte being the Dove - Mary came from Magdala, the village or place of the dove.

Whatever the facts of the matter or the historic events, the various stories fit spiritual allegory and as such make sense and are in no way contradictory; in much the same way as there are other apparent anomalies in the Bible but when understood spiritually are compatible.

If we take only the gospels as our guide with respect to Jesus' appointment of the twelve as apostles and the controversial point as to whether or not he ordained women, it can be found that he commissioned the disciples to teach "the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand, heal the sick, raise the dead, cleanse lepers, cast out demons" and "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel, baptising them in the name of the Father, and the Son and the Holy Spirit". To Peter he said, "Feed my lambs. Feed my sheep." On the other hand the commission to Mary Magdalene was, "go to my brethren and say to them 'I am ascending to my Father and your Father, to my God and your God'" or, as in some accounts, she was told by the angel to say "he has risen from the dead." Each commissioning is as valid as the other but Mary's has the deeper import as she was to reveal the resurrection.

Mary went to the disciples and told them of the resurrection but they did not believe her. This reluctance to accept her word is also found in other places including the Gospel of Philip and the Gospel of Mary. In the writings of Robanus a conflict between Mary and the apostles is also recorded and this is a legacy passed on to us today. Many men are still reluctant to accept what women have to say whether in the church or out of it - this is symbolic of mankind's reluctance to listen to its intuition or heed and follow its spiritual insight, preferring instead to rely on the outworkings and methods of the world.

In the unfolding of the gospel allegories at various points 'Mary' is represented as Mother, Sister and Wife and has counterparts in Joseph, Lazarus and John. Allegorically Mary represents the feminine principle Sophia as John represents the masculine principle of Love (agapé). Jesus is the human soul who has to resolve these two principles to attain Christhood. In her literature, Dr Rosa Miller, Hierophant of the Order of St Mary Magdalene, gives the story of how Jesus gave his blessing to the union of John and Mary - thus symbolising the importance of the union of the two principles into one.

By bringing back the feminine principle into the allegory you bring enrichment to the understanding of the outworking of life. In the mass this becomes more clear to you as you see how it is the feminine aspect which, moved by compassion, goes out into the regions of matter and is blinded, she calls upon the Christ who comes down to her and becomes the bridge between heaven and earth bringing healing and lifting her up.

There is a quotation I should like to use here from the church at Rennes-le-Château in France: "From she whom I desire to liberate, there wafts towards me the fragrance of the perfume which impregnates the Sepulchre. Formerly, some named her Isis, queen of all sources benevolent. Come unto me all ye who suffer and are afflicted, and I shall give ye rest. To others, she is Magdalene, of the celebrated vase filled with healing balm. The initiated know her true name; Notre Dame de Cross."

This puts a different interpretation or slant on the concept of Orthodox Christianity of the "suffering servant". This aspect is further emphasised in the document attributed to John the Apostle who depicts Miriam (the Judaic name for Mary) as being present at the crucifixion and in order to give Jesus the hyssop which would alleviate his suffering, she gave herself to the soldiers who guarded him. In this story you are reinforcing the idea of Mary Magdalene as a prostitute but what does this mean with respect to her standing as the symbol for Sophia - Wisdom?

You will see from this that there are many aspects and ideas which we have not explored because we have been conditioned by a one-sided doctrine of the Godhead. This has led us to the position we find ourselves in today and unless we redress the balance we will find ourselves in even deeper trouble. To answer the world's problems and questions we need to embrace all aspects of life: male and female; good and bad; wise and foolish; loving and hateful, and bring them all under the domination of that which we call "Christ". It has to be done by all of mankind which means men and women in every walk of life.

As we seek to find out about and integrate ourselves with the feminine aspect, or the Goddess, as well as God, we will automatically find a better balance manifesting itself and the place of women in the priesthood will be seen and fulfilled. This later point has been dealt with more fully in our paper "Women in the Priesthood" and is available for those who wish to explore this matter further.

We have then an exciting new era opening before us which challenges the norms of the past and will move us forward to a richer and fuller future.

##

CLASSIFIED

THE PRIESTHOOD #243

We have this afternoon been present at the Ordination of a Priest. The ceremony used was based upon the requirements and standards set by the organised Church in the Middle Ages to ensure a valid ordination conferred by a Bishop who had been consecrated in the line of the Apostolic Succession. This Apostolic Succession is based upon the theory that the "laying on of hands" by a Bishop maintains an unbroken line of "laying on of hands" right down from the Apostles themselves.

However, from our point of view this claim by the organised Church is not entirely true because research can prove that the qualifications and requirements for a valid Priesthood were laid down long before the Christian Era.

The very fact of a Bishop laying his hands upon a person and pronouncing him, or her, a Priest does not in reality consititute the true requirements of Priesthood. A person can only become a Priest by the true flame of the Holy Spirit working within. Just as a marriage ceremony conducted by a Priest does not constitute a true marriage but rather the persons being conjoined by virtue of the perfect unity of the Two Divine Natures within each one of them.

So, a true Priest is the person who is genuinely linked to the Spiritual Hierarchy by virtue of the qualities developed in the effort to set themself apart for the service of the whole family of mankind and to keep themself solely as a channel for the ever-flowing fountain of Life which is pure and fresh at every moment in the moment. The true Priest of God is neither bound by sectarian beliefs nor is he or she afraid to break free from the status quo of organised religion which binds the spirit within and ends in spiritual death.

In very Truth, it is the right of every man and woman to become a Priest of the Most High God; to serve by being a channel of the Divine Powers for the whole of Mankind without consideration for any particular religion or belief.

There is a new influx of Spiritual Power and Freedom breaking through at this time - through the dark mists of spiritual crystalisation and slavishness to set dogmas and creeds - and the Holy Hierarchy, or Higher Forces, are awakening the prepared ones to a new Priesthood. Not new in its true sense but new to people of this age. The True Priesthood has existed since the dawn of time and because of the many attempts to stifle its freedom of movement it has now been born free from all suppression and has re-gained its heritage for all those who follow its precepts. Such a Priesthood has been known in the West by the name of the Priesthood of Melchisedek - a priesthood not made with hands but by the Grace and Power of God, the Governing Principle of the Universe.

The New Ekklesia Universal has regained its rightful claim of Succession from the Organised Church who,it could be said,stole it from the ancient pagan Priesthood of old. This was made possible during the early part of this century by what has now come to be known as the Wandering Bishops. It was through these Bishops that most of the Lines of Succession,researched by a well known Gnostic and known as the Right of Succession, were recovered for use by the now Universal Priesthood of the Cosmic Christ.

Whilst the True Priesthood is not a Priesthood conferred by the laying on of hands, its authority is made known by the Bishops, or Hierophants, who are responsible for guidance in a relationship as an Elder to younger Brothers or Sisters within the structure of an Hierarchical system of Divine Operation; as servants to each other for the fulfilling of mankind's purpose on this planet.

The way of service is one of self-sacrifice to the Higher Powers, in the discipline of refraining from any act which would contribute to the mass sub-conscious by self-indulgence, exploitation of others, greed, possession, hatred or a general lack of human feeling for life as a whole.

The True Priest follows a life of learning from others, observing and living according to the highest concept of Perfection available to man. It is not a path for weaklings or for those who are not ready to share the burden of enlightening others. The more Light we receive - the greater responsibility we have towards each other. As I said, we become servants to mankind and not dictators to its conscience. The way to real freedom is to liberate oneself from all the chains which average humanity has around its ankles. In the work upon one's own nature, by allowing the Divine Spirit to take over, we can eliminate most of our barriers within which bind us, like a prisoner, to the recurring cycles of pain which trouble us again and again. We cannot gain freedom by adhering to any man-made system whether it be a religious system, a fraternal system or even the most high-powered esoteric system. Our final release is discovered in the total abandonment of all systems, all set creeds, opinions and self-attachments - these are our shackles. Freedom lies in Freedom Itself and Wisdom lies in Wisdom Itself. Not until we can abandon ourselves, or commit ourselves totally to the ever-burning fire of Love, can we know what Truth is all about. Whilst we cling to the last vestige of our own concept of Truth we are not Free.

Truth is that which remains when opinions and hypotheses cease; Love is that which is left when all attachment ceases; and Wisdom is the Right use of the precious knowledge we gain in the experience of Life's deeper meanings.

There have been many Great Teachers but many students fall by the way because they make their own assessments of what they believe the Teacher has said. The true Teachers lead the disciple, or younger brethren, to the edge of that which transcends all human thought and every esoteric Principle. The Pupil is then left to discover the Reality of Being for himself and become a Priest forever after the Order of Melchisedek.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION

WOMEN IN THE PRIESTHOOD

With respect to the recognition of the equality of the sexes this so-called modern age is very backward. In the very early communities the Egyptians, Greeks and Celts gave women the right of possession and equality. The movement of women during this time to establish their rights is based upon a sense of inferiority which is the result of the indoctrinations from a masculine dominated society. This is seen in all areas where men hold the dominant positions and power - industry, politics, medicine, science, the arts, education and religion. Although women have made a break through in many of these areas their voice is still largely ignored and it is twice as hard for them to reach the top or carry their point.

It is now evident that women are demanding greater say within the church. They are seeking the right to become priests but are encountering much opposition because the male factor is feeling threatened in its position of power. With regard to the arguments and excuses put forward in favour of an exclusive male priesthood, weak attempts such as "Jesus was a man" can serve only as an insult to an intelligent mind.

Within religion the priesthood has for centuries been a male domain. The established Church was intolerant of the Gnostic groups which ordained women and spread scandal about their rites and offices, and where a woman had psychic and healing abilities she was persecuted and condemned as a witch. Against this kind of background it is easy to see why psychologists find that the majority of women today have a low self-image - it has been programmed into them over a long period of time. Unfortunately, in trying to break this heavy yoke they have fallen into the trap of being like men and are fighting for their rightful position with men's weapons.

For 1700 years the holy scriptures of "Christianity" were writings specially selected during church councils to help back up the dogmas promulgated by the organisation. There are many more writings existing outside the Holy Bible that have been branded apocryphal and psuedographical, with many others deliberately withheld from public view, because they tell another story. In very truth the human mind is so vulnerable to any kind of authoritative indoctrination that it cannot see the truth even when the truth is presented: whatever the long-term beliefs have been it comes to be accepted as "the Gospel Truth", when in fact it might be a mere fragment of fiction originated in the minds of some propaganda machine. Thus, all kinds of excuses are erected to protect the existing status quo whether or not its principles are founded upon the truth.

To admit that the verses of scripture about the role of women as attributed to St. Paul are interpolations, and then to say it is of little importance whether or not these texts are authentic when being used as a basis for an argument for the exclusion of women from the priesthood, is a grave error of judgment.

Many honest researchers have been busy during this last century to unearth the true facts relating to Christianity in general, and, because their findings prove to be a "sore spot" to those who support the accepted tradition, the writings of these people have been deliberately "scandalised" or forced out of existence by those who claim to be in charge of the spiritual lives of others. In fact their "shepherding" could be said to be nothing more than a hoodwink served to protect their own edifice of "comfortability".

Male and female roles are different but equal. For too long we have been accustomed to elevating male roles and functions and belittling the female. In our endeavour to redress the balance we must be careful not to swing too far or mistake what we are endeavouring to do. Again it could be proved from another point of view that women were more important than men, but we will satisfy ourselves in attempting to prove, from the scriptures, that the great teachers recognised women as equals.

An objection raised to women in a priestly role is that at the time of menstruation they are unclean and therefore unfit for such an office. Can we take such a superstitious idea seriously when menstruation is a natural bodily function and God did not make anything unclean as was clearly demonstrated to Peter? (see Acts chapter 10).

Clement of Alexandria, a bishop, circa 180, wrote concerning the rights of women to the priesthood in the Christian Church and because of this he was branded as a "womaniser and seducer": this attitude is still maintained in many ecclesiastical circles today. In purely spiritual matters does it count whether or not it is a male body or a female body through which the Divine Blessings flow into the human realm of experience? Or does it invalidate the Mass when said by a female priest when it is claimed that this ritual is based upon purely masculine Solar Principles? Such are the arguments that go on whilst the masses starve for enlightenment. Is God dead or are his representatives here on earth in such a state of confusion that they cannot read the signs of the times?

In many of the Scriptures women were present when Jesus was giving the most secret of his teachings and, in some of those considered apocryphal, or "gnostic", it was the women who asked most of the questions. It is also interesting to note that it was Mary Magdalene unto whom Jesus first revealed himself after his Resurrection. St John's Gospel Chapter 11, verse 5 gives an example of how the Love of God (Agape) is given equally to all, male or female, without distinction. Jesus' remarks in Matthew 12:48 and Mark 3:33 (interesting numbers too) also clearly show that even relationships, apart from the sex, are all one in Christ. Jesus made it plain that the Power of God is not, neither can it be, affected by the sex of the body it is expressed through. During the celebration of the Mass the quality can be affected only by the intent and purity of the celebrant. If the Christ Power is affected by the sex of the person it is being channelled through, then it ceases to be All-Powerful.

Both men and women have colluded in producing a false picture of mankind through their misunderstaning of their roles and responsibility in expressing the life that is within them. We have to find the true masculine and feminine expressions within ourself and then bring that forth - eventually finding a correct and perfect balance between the two so that they are expressed as one - then through this one, Christ can be manifest. This Christ is what It is - It ceases to be just that if It becomes biased on either the Masculine or Feminine side of expression. Within the Mass the Christ influence or Presence is "brought into experience" directly to the Host via a change of Consciousness which is Archetypal and thus the physical body cannot affect it. However, both masculine and feminine aspects are present in the Bread and the Wine.

Those whose arguments are based upon the Solar Principle, and are not Solar initiates, have not observed that the Sun is a fusion of Masculine and Feminine energies. This principle is distinctly portrayed in the Ying/Yang symbol from the Far East. The proof of this lies in the evidence - all nature is reliant upon a continual sexing process to maintain expression. As we have said before, the Christ Consciousness never has been, nor ever can be, affected by the person who is pure enough to bring it into expression. The only authority as to who is fit to perform the Sacrement of the Mass lies in the Ekklesia itself and those in charge - the Bishops. If the Bishop is satisfied that his priests have been correctly instructed then he knows that "where two or three are gathered in Christ's name - He is there". Man, in any case turns on his own heaven or hell.

One has to agree that the structure of the ordained ministry is quite a different thing from the spiritual state of being baptised in Christ where there is neither male nor female (Galatians chapter 3), but to draw the conclusion from this that it is not an inherent right for women to take up a vocation within the church is open to debate. In praying the Lord's Prayer - "Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven" - we are asking that a reflection of what is established in the realm of spirit be reproduced here: can we then afford to cling rigidly to a pattern which patently does not offer exactly the same opportunities to all on the basis of sex discrimination, when such a distinction is not known within the Christ? Do we, or do we not, truly want that Kingdom on earth? 64 18

FRATERNITAS ROSÆ CRUCIS

Rome London
& New York

Personal & Confidential

No.

#241

THE ROSICRUCIAN "ORDER"

IN the previous lesson we gave a synopsis of the concensus of testimonies offered us regarding the so-called "Great White Brotherhood" by spiritual entities and great mystics who have become able, at times, to dissociate from their lower vehicles, "travel in foreign countries," and bring back to us from the inner sources and contacts some direct information of a logical and credible nature.

2 We have traced the processes and modifications by which the Great Plan extended by the Logos to the Great White Brotherhood was and is developed in the several spheres or world-regions until "ripe" for externalization and manifestation in the 7th sphere, our physical world.

3 At that point we were made aware of the mortal helpers in the Great Work or Magnum Opus; helpers to whom the name of "Lay Brothers of the Rosy Cross," among others, is given. Who associate in definite organization form in order to effect an instrument for the more efficient dissemination of the teachings of the Great Ones in the invisible spheres of consciousness.

4 Here then, are two distinct divisions. The Brethren of the Rosy Cross, who have NO visible place of association, and the Lay Brothers who do have a visible organization and visible places of association for greater efficiency in carrying on the Work of the Inner Brethren, to a visible world, amongst visible pupils and students.

5 These visible organizations have existed from time immemorial under various names, sometimes as the inner expression of contemporary state or dominant religions; sometimes as the instrument of historic schools of philosophy.

6 The rites and ceremonies of Osiris, Isis and Attis; the Samothracians, Eleusiniand, Dionysiacs, Mithraics, as well as what are called the Greater and Lesser Mysteries of antiquity can be classed in the generalization. The Gnostics, before their decadence, played their part in the Great Plan and then fell from the lofty ideal that had sustained them and were fairly short lived in consequence.

7 How, when and where the name "Rosy Cross" became adopted and attached must remain one of the mysteries of the Society itself. It is a part of its sacred Tradition. The terms were adopted as expressive of certain usage long before they were permitted to become the well known apellation of the organization itself.

8 There is no documentary evidence of any unbroken line or "Apostolic Succession" in the Fraternity prior to the Christian Era. There are however, documentary and monumental evidences of the use of many of its expressive terms, the common use of its symbols and its essential teachings among widely distributed and divergent peoples and nations geographically distant from each other.

9 While one phase of its continuity, perhaps the most important, has been preserved by the Church from the beginning of the Christian Era to what might be called the renaissance, which was effected by Our Father Christian Rosy Cross or Rosencreutz, the Church itself has long since ceased to be aware of the fact. Only a few realize that the Essence of what constitutes true Rosicrucianism was inextricably a part of the warp and woof of the Christian mystical fabric.

10 None of the visible forms or organizations adopted by the Rosy Cross bore the name of "Order" prior to the advent of Christian Rosy Cross. In fact, we have only fragmentary and disjointed evidences of its existence, although of sufficient reliability to prove that quietly, unostentatiously, the disciples DID maintain some sort of existence. Curiously enough, these evidences take the form of old parish names, such as chapels or churches of the Rosy Cross. Parish Registers indicate sodalities for inner instruction in the sacred mysteries, bearing the name. The name itself and its essential symbols being present in ancient stone sculptures, stained glass, bronze and marble memorials and the earliest literature of the more serious type.

11 With the advent of Christian Rosy Cross however, a new cycle set in regarding the history of the Rosy Cross. Christian Rosy Cross positively did NOT create an "Order" of any sort. On his return from his journeyings, which we shall subsequently note, he organized sequentially three Circles composed of but very few members or Brethren. Later on, and after his death the Work took on new impetus and made some slight manifestation in the outer world from which it had kept and HAD BEEN KEPT previously sedulously aloof.

12 With the emergence of the Work of the Lay Brothers of the Rosy Cross there seems to have developed a very definite organization, close upon the original three Circles. Its existence was published to the world under the rather cumbrous but highly expressive name of the "Most Holy Order of the Ruby Rose and the Golden Cross," Ordo Sanctissimus Rubeae Rosae et Aureae Crucis. This title proves two vital facts, namely, that the inner Work or philosophy of the Rosy Cross included both Hermeticism and what was mediaevally called Alchemy. This does not mean however, as so often is falsely and ignorantly imputed, that the Lay Brethren of the Rosy Cross were seeking only to transmute base metals to gold, altho the method they used DID pave the way for the birth and development of what we now call chemistry. Through this science actual transmutations have been performed in several kinds by reputable chemists and physicists in the laboratories of well known universities.

13 Those early Lay Brothers sought the transformation of the natural man, from a state of Nature to a state of Grace, transmuting his basic, leaden or Saturnine nature into the pure gold of the Soular Nature. The second fact that was proved by the cumbersome title is that the Rosicrucian organization IS and ALWAYS HAS BEEN essentially religious. It cannot be otherwise and remain Rosicrucian as is well understood by those who know the real meaning of the word "Rosicrucian." An organization that uses the superlative "Most Holy" cannot be otherwise than deeply religious and pietistic. The very name therefore, of the Fraternity itself, contradicts the assertions of ill-informed persons of the present day who claim and even advertise that the Rosicrucians are NOT a religious organization.

14 But "religious" in the sense in which the term is used by the Rosicrucians, means the widest, deepest and most liberal interpretation of the word, for Rosicrucianism means the living of a life based upon the sublimated essence of ALL religion.

15 After the publication of the Rosy Cross under the title "Most Holy Order," many imitations sprang up in various parts of the Continent and this specious imitationism has continued to the present day. Most of these irresponsible organizations use the term "Order" after a custom which seemingly became prevalent in the mediaeval period, due to the familiarity with both State and Religious Orders and those of knighthood. Apparently the devisors hoped, by the use of the term "Order" to invest their creations with a dignity they would not otherwise have enjoyed.

16 Perhaps we shall gain a better understanding of the Rosicrucian organization and purpose if, at this point, we devote a few moments to the great medieval Mystic and Churchman from whom our later organizations are privileged to take their name—Christian Rosy Cross or Rosencreutz.

17 By many self-appointed critics, apologists or pseudo-historians we are informed that either he was none other than Johann Valentin Andreas or else a purely fictitious or mythical character. Let us correct this misinformation at once. The name Christian Rosencreutz is, of course, a pseudonym, adopted on two counts, first, because it was and still is, in some religious circles, customary to take a definite name in religion, when assuming the vows preliminary to the life of a religious. Second, because at that time the preservation of one's life often depended upon a certain degree of anonymity. Remember that this was in an age when ecclesiastical hierarchies sought to inhibit any tendency toward the freedom of mind and conscience for which Rosicrucianism primarily stands. Christian Rosencreutz was a REAL character in life, who early sought the way to the realization of an ideal, at an age when few, ordinarily, are given to serious thought.

18 It was due to his adoption of a pseudonym, a custom he impressed upon the followers in his three original Circles, that the tradition was established by virtue of which, each professed member of the Rosy Cross to this day, adopts or receives a pseudonym or esoteric name upon admission to the Fraternity.

19 As a result of the spread of the doctrines of the Albigenses to the North of France, the Low Countries and Germany, groups of the refugees from the Albigensian war gathered in motley groups. Out from one of these groups stood a peculiar character, a man and preacher, small, spare with tanned and weather-beaten face, looking much like a Saracen. Influenced by this character, the nucleus gathered about him, wandered into the Rhon district on the borders of Hesse and Thuringia, where, in the middle of the Thuringian forest stood the grim castle of Germelshausen. This castle, about which weird legends clustered, was known to be tenanted by a grim, dour, unapproachable family, said to be half pagan and more than once suspected of being brigands.

20 It was even questioned whether the inhabitants of Germelshausen were Christian at all. It is said that a curious carved figure, evidently imported from some foreign land, occupied a prominent niche in the castle walls, and it was whispered that the tenants at times worshipped it. These tenants were quarrelsome amongst their neighbors and did not hesitate to lay travelers in ambush and rob them.

21 Germany at this time, had been subject to the fanaticism of Conrad of Marburg, the Dominican, envoy of Pope Gregory IX. Tors, a fellow Dominican helped to carry on Marburg's work, assisted by a Layman named Jeans who had but one eye. With this one eye however, he claimed to have been endowed with the gift, or ability rather, to detect a heretic from a true believer He claimed to see within the grim walls of Germelshausen heretics ripe for the torture.

22 At any rate, due to his efforts, Landgrave Conrad of Thuringia who had just wrecked the little town of Willensdorf laid seige to the castle of Germelshausen, making savage assaults at intervals over a period of several years. Meantime, the family of Germelshausen due to the untiring efforts of an ascetic monk who had quarters in the chapel, had been converted to the mysticism of Albigensianism, including reincarnation. The castle fell, the family were assasinated, all but the ascetic monk, who fled in time, taking with him the little Christian von Germelshausen to whose precocious and amazing intelligence the monk had been strongly attracted. The monk turned out to be an Albigensian adept from Languedoc. The monk, with the child who was then five years old, took refuge in a nearby monastery, entering the boy under a name suggested by the child himself, as Christian Rosencreutz. Here the lad was educated, being well instructed in Latin and Greek.

23 At the youthful age of fifteen, with four other monks of the community, Rosencreutz formed a group, the object of which was to seek truth at any cost or risk. They decided on the east, whence all great religious roots had sprung. Two of them, Rosencreutz and a Brother whose initials only, P. A. L., are available, started out and gave as a pretext a pilgrimage to the Holy Sepulchre. Their real reason was to seek a centre of initiation, the name of which, as well undoubtedly as the promptings to the trip and even the formation of their little Fraternity, was given them by the ascetic monk who had entered Rosencreutz into the monastery and who had remained faithful to his family charge over the youth. The name of the destination was given them as "The Abode of Wise Men." P. A. L. died in Cyprus. Rosencreutz continued on alone, wearing the garb, and adopting the manners of a Mussulman pilgrim after leaving Christian territory.

24 Rosencreutz reached Damascus. Many writers have ventured the opinion that the word Damcar the name of the place to which Rosencreutz was destined, was made up from Damascus and Cairo. This is not the case. Damcar was an ancient center of Arabian learning. But he reached Damascus first and found it crowded, for the Persians and other Far Easterners had fled from the Mongol incursions and had sought sanctuary in Damascus, which is today, the most ancient inhabited city in the world. Here Rosencreutz took up the studies of Maimonides, Ghazali, Mazoudi, learned his Omar Khayyam, meditated on the Masnavi or sacred books of the Sufis, studied Euclid and astronomy under Nazir Eddin.

25 From Damascus Rosencreutz went to Damcar in pursuit of still higher wisdom, but, remaining here for some years, he discovered that wisdom is absorbed only by a slow process. Damcar was situated on one of the highest points in Arabia, a place, curiously enough, occupied by T. E. Lawrence in his comparatively recent exploits in that country. It was at Damcar that his real inner life began and he received the visions that stimulated his subsequent career and brought out the principles that have constituted the basis for the Rosicrucian concept of Cosmos. Lawrence mentions much the same experience while sojourning in that now lonely spot.

26 Leaving Damcar, Rosencreutz went to Egypt, thence to Fez. It was in Egypt, in Cairo, that Rosencreutz gained his complete conception of the part Hermeticism was to play in the philosophy that was to grow from seed sown by him later on. In Fez, called the city of six hundred playing fountains, one of the last of the truly ancient schools of astrology still flourished and although some modern wiseacres claim that Rosicrucianism takes no notice of astrology, such claims are usually made for membership purposes, or else as revelations of their authors' ignorance. Astrology as taught by the ancients was an exact science and was quite another thing from the fortune-telling process and usage of today. Rosencreutz studied under Abou Yusuf, which is Arabic for Joseph and perfected his knowledge of the hidden forces of nature.

27 In due time, Rosencreutz felt the call to his own land and he came across the Mediterranean to Spain. Here he became a member of the Alumbrados, a society formed under Arabic influence, which devoted itself, strange to say, to the mysticism of the Neo-Platonists. Here he learned more about the search for the Philosopher's Stone, for the Alumbrados devoted much time to the writings of Artephius.

28 His wide travels and wanderings were impressing one salient truth upon Rosencreutz, namely, that the path to wisdom is a rugged one, with many turns, by slow stages and through unknown territory. All this is significant when we remember that Rosencreutz was as yet only a precocious youth. Yet it was here that he laid the foundations for an occult group which was to be secret, bound by a really terrible oath to compel obedience not to himself but to the principles for which the organization was to be affected and to continue as such a close bound body for three centuries without being known to the outer world except thru vague rumors. He passed back thru France at the same time when the mystical and rather mysterious Marguerite Porete was burned in Paris.

29 Reaching Germany, he became secretly a member of the "Brothers of the Free Spirit," claiming that man was a "Fragment of God and must, after many lives, return to the divine essence. "This body was composed as now, by a group committed to the Yoga practices of the Hindus and called themselves "Friends of God," affirming the necessity of release from desire. Against these two bodies the Church waged its persecutions most intensively. Rosencreutz was disgusted with affairs as he found them in his native land. He went back to his boyhood ground of Thuringia and sought out the three monks who had been his companions in his earlier studies. The four organized a group, later increased to eight, all Germans, who formed the first real group of medieval Rosicrucian initiates. He gave to them the best of what he had gathered in his travels. Perhaps the statement that all were Germans is inaccurate, for one of them, although suspected of German parentage, under the initials L. A. came from Languedoc.

30 According to the Fama Fraternitatis, Brother I. A. returned to Southern France and endeavored to found the Fraternity there. No records exist as to his success and only tradition indicates his death near Narbonne. Of his later years, little is known of Rosencreutz except that he was the inspiration of Jean de Mechlin who did wonderful work in High Germany and in Brussels. He was the source of power of the renowned Blomert, the mystic woman who performed marvelous cures, and whose disciples claimed that they saw on each side of her a seraph who directed her. Rosencreutz was the mysterious visitor who most affected Johann Tauler, a celebrated Doctor of Theology and to whom the learned of Europe came to listen at Strasbourg.

31 Of the death of Rosencreutz, reputedly in 1484, we have only the traditions bequeathed us by the Fraternity. From this source we understand that his demise occurred at the age of 106, and that it was near Nuremberg. It is known however, that Rosencreutz in his later years went, with others of his monastic order to England where many had found comparative sanctuary. This great Christian Mystic was buried amongst other equally Christian mystics in a final haven which was said to have been discovered in 1604. At this time the "Vault was Opened," seemingly by accident like that of the ancient Hiram. Only in this instance the body was found to be in a state of perfect preservation. This is a claim that has been made for many other highly spiritualized leaders, especially among the Mohammedans. It is difficult for us to sift fact from tradition at this late date and we can only say that seemingly miraculous preservation of human bodies over a long period of time has frequently been observed, due to conditions of burial, climate, and chemical state of the soil The Vault of Rosencreutz is said to have been of mystically geometrical formation, and the 120 years elapsed between the burial and later discovery has an interesting parallel. Moses, liberator of the Hebrews, died on lonely Mount Nebo, "but of his sepulchre no man knoweth unto this day." He died at the symbolic age of 120 years and "HIS eyesight was not dimmed nor his natural force abated." The same secrecy, the same preservation, one in life, the other in death.

32 In 1413 Frater I.O. died in England, and later Frater P.D. In 1415 the second circle was formed and in 1459 Rosencreutz wrote the Hermetic Romance.

33 We shall not attempt, at this time, to carry out further chronological events. 1610 brings us to the date of the Fama Fraternitatis. It was later printed at Cassel in 1614 and in 1615 it was reprinted at Frankfort, with the Confessio of the Fraternity. With the publication of these two works, "addressed to the learned of Europe," but containing little that was not already known by those who really KNEW anything at all about the Fraternity, a veritable storm of interest was aroused. Scholars and philosophers of high degree were attracted, as well as the usual motley herd of imitators, charlatans and impostors, the parasites who are ever ready to nourish themselves on worthy works of those whom, at best, they can only imitate and that badly. Every pseudo-philosopher and alchemist assumed the name Rosicrucian and some of their serious works and attempts have even held the interest of researchers down to the present time.

34 It was at this time that "Orders" of all sorts, loudly proclaiming themselves to be Rosicrucian, sprang up. Their blatant claims and absurd propaganda exist even unto this day, but as the bray of the ass in the lions' hide betrayed its identity, the same conditions prevail today. Think for a moment and decide for yourself whether this statement is true. The original Fraternity compelled observance of three specific rules for the life guidance of its Brethren. The first was unselfishness. Now nobody is unselfish. Those who have achieved a halo for apparent unselfishness are only less selfish than others. The reason is simple. There are only two real states. Selfishness or self-lessness. No example exists to our knowledge in modern society of a man who has voluntarily given up real riches and passed unostentatiously into poverty. There are those who have given up riches to pose as philanthropists or to enter religious foundations, after bequeathing their riches to the foundation of which they were becoming members, but not one who has shown a PREFERENCE for poverty to riches. One man alone stands out—Tolstoy—who decided just before he died to become a wandering beggar, but his decision came too late.

35 The second rule was absence of pride. Here again, nobody is without pride and the trouble with most of us is that we have far too much pride at best and too much false pride at worst. For the average man or woman, unaffected, retiring modesty is too much to expect. We all want to be regarded at our best and given credit for what we ourselves think we are really worth. The modern manias of inferiority complexes are due to this secret fear that we are not being evaluated at our true worth. Yet the Rosicrucian was instructed to remain or to pass unnoticed as much as possible, never priding himself on his knowledge and to eschew vanity as far as in his power lies. Who amongst our modern society prefers anonymity in place of recognition?

36 The third rule was chastity. This requires interpretation. Pythagoras, Socrates, Plato and the Alexandrine Philosophers insisted on chastity but none of them were chaste as the moralists interpret the word. Chastity to them meant abstemtion from excess and a preventive against the waste developed by orgiastic licence. They regarded the natural and primal urges and impulses as forces to be used and enjoyed but not abused, just as we enjoy eating, which, for that reason should not be prohibited and could not be prohibited without disaster to health and life itself. None of the natural forces can be inhibited but waste of energy and unlimited licence are decidedly unchaste. Yet to what degree do we find human society in any age stopping in its mad haste for pleasure to consider whether the energy developed is going to be charged to profit or to wastage?

37 Just apply these three rules to claimants to be called Rosicrucians, a claim which was and IS absolutely prohibited by the Fraternity. You will not be long in deciding as to the merits of such claims. The man or the woman who is known by associates to be crassly vain and selfish, or who cannot avoid backward glances over their shoulders to see that the spot light of publicity or attention is focussed upon them, or who waste their energies in ANY form of devitalizing pleasures are decidedly NOT Rosicrucian. Nor are the so-called "Orders" of which they proclaim themselves members. A good tree bringeth forth GOOD fruit.

38 We have been asked to give a definition of the term "Rosicrucianism" and this seems to be the place and time.

ROSICRUCIANISM IS THE PHILOSOPHY OF CONSTRUCTIVE LIVING APPLIED TO MAN, MENTALLY, PHYSICALLY, AND SPIRITUALLY.

This is the most concise definition we can give and it is based entirely upon the teachings and the injunctions of our Father Christian Rosencreutz. In this philosophy, all that pertains to the origin, existence and future estate of man is studied, through the several departments of physical, mental and spiritual science in order that by understanding his position in the creative scheme man may know his individual part in the Great Plan that is continually being worked out. Thus he is aligning himself consciously and conscientiously with all the divine forces engaged therein, as doing the Father's Will, surrendering his own will to the Divine in as near absorption therein as he individually can accomplish and attain.

39 The Rosicrucian organization then, as it stands to day, uses the term which it has preponderantly used since its emergence from the secrecy which prevailed during the first to the fifteenth centuries of the Christian era. That term is "SOCIETY" or, as many of our earlier Brethren wrote it, in preference to the more cumbersom Latin, "Our Honorable Society." It is not an Order in any sense that would apply to what are now called "Orders" and the use of this term implies something that the Fraternity decidedly is not. Through the Society in its modern form have become available the original findings of Christian Rosencreutz and his immediate successors, which writings in their earliest form were confined to the Latin and most of which have never been translated into English.
40 These teachings of the gathered wisdom of Rosencreutz and his first coworkers, constitute what are known as the Egyptian Wisdom Teachings. Yet strange to say, Rosencreutz did not get them from Egypt although he sojourned there for some time. The initiates and students whom he met, in small number in Cairo, were disciples of the Graeco-Alexandrine heritages. Egypt, under Islamic misrule and the revolt of the Mamelukes was engaged in the struggle against the Ottoman Sultanate that eventuated in the absorption of Egypt in the Ottoman Empire. Naturally, scholarship was at a low ebb in such a political turmoil and Rosencreutz met only the few who were keeping the lamps of wisdom burning low.
41 Christian Rosy Cross derived his knowledge of the Egyptian Wisdom Religion from the Arabians whilst sojourning in that country. The Arabians had transliterated many of the hierartic symbols into definite significance. They had also, to a considerable extent, become the custodians of that Wisdom Religion and the Greater and Lesser Mysteries, through earlier scholars of their race who lived in Egypt during the later Empire and who had arranged the Secret Wisdom as it was even then known into the Tabula. This Tabula gives us the general plan of the world regions, planes, natures and properties of each, together with the threefold constitution of man, a concept which the Egyptians had carried on to a high degree of intelligible understanding.
42 This wisdom and the Damascene learning acquired, Rosencreutz carried back to Germany where it became a foundation stone for the subsequent Teutonic mysticism of the deeper sort. Not all of this was given out even in Germany, so far as making it available to the many was concerned. The first, and perhaps the only complete assemblage of Rosencreutz's acquirements was that accomplished by Robertus de Fluctibus or Robert Fludd commonly known as "The Great English Rosicrucian," in his masterly Opera in eight Tomes, all in excellent Latin.
43 At first, the meetings of the Rosicrucian organization or "Our Society" were conducted along the routine of the monastery offices, but as years passed, due to ecclesiastical persecution a different basis was sought. Instead of the monastic offices of the Church, a system of degrees was instituted. First, they began with a simple form of the presentation of the newly elected Candidate before the Altar, where he made his vows of secrecy and applied for the recognition of the Imperator and the right to don the garb of a Brother. As this primitive form became amplified, Chancellor von Eckhartshausen introduced an elaborate system of degrees based upon the Hebrew Kabala, which it was felt would sufficiently disguise the philosophy inculcated by the Society. The net result was that it almost obscured the philosophy and introduced a complexity that made for misunderstanding and led many to devote themselves to the Kabala rather than to the Christian mystical essence Rosencreutz had implanted.
44 So, in the early sixties of the last century, these kabbalistic rituals were considerably modified to bring them within the comprehension of modern thought. Rosicrucianism itself, aside from all ritual, is a synthesis of religion, science and philosophy, seeking the least common denominator as it were, of all three. For this reason, since its first formation as a definite school of thought, it has been elastic, ready to embrace all that progressive thought developed of merit while sifting the chaff from the good grain. While never numerically large, the Rosicrucian School has absorbed many cults whose existence therefore was but transitory while at the same time, it has preserved its own identity steadfastly refusing to be absorbed by any.

45 One of the notable features of Rosicrucianism is its healing work. A work which the Brethren were obligated to engage in without fee or compensation of any kind. It is still maintained by the Brethren, although with greater difficulty for the early Brethren were able through the community residence of what were called their "Great Houses" to maintain a continual stream of healing afflatus. Today, the membership being composed for the greater part of busy men and women, living in many cases widely separated, the work is maintained at National Group Headquarters. Directed from thence it is powerfully successful and has achieved marvelous results. This healing work is constantly expanding its scope of vital power and influence and is bringing new hope, health and happiness to numberless seekers.

46 In the previous lecture, we stated that those in mortal expression were known as the Lay Brothers of the Rosy Cross. Of these Lay Brothers there are two general divisions. The Associate students who receive the teachings and seek for personal unfoldment wheresoever they may be placed in life, and second, the Collegiate members who, by united effort, provide opportunity for those who are so minded to become not only students but active workers in the propagandive work of the Society and co-operators in its various departments of activity. Christian Rosencreutz was a recurrent expression of a Great Soul from among the Greater or Superior Masters, who has visited this plane from time to time for the introduction of a higher measure of thought and vision when the existent stream had become muddied by the accumulation of Superstition and materialistic tradition, like barnacles on the hull of a noble ship. With each such advent, human consciousness has taken a distinctly higher trend into which those whose mental and spiritual capacities have, by the law of Attraction, been drawn.

47 Those who associate with the Society today for the intellectual stimulus will find their wish gratified but the intellectual always leaves something to be desired. Those who associate with the Society in the knowledge that by so doing they have the opportunity of training to become recognized helpers and co-operators with the Brethren of the Rosy Cross in the hinterland of consciousness have a higher ideal, a worthier goal, but correspondingly harder work although even the increased effort brings its own peculiar and very special reward and encouragement. Rosicrucianism has far greater depths than appear on the surface or to the superficial observer, like a pool so clear that the clarity of the waters makes its apparent depth seem deceptive.

48 The Frater or Soror who understands that Rosicrucianism is not all confined to the pages of text books or to ritualistic observances but includes the living of a definitely and carefully planned life of constructive purpose, realizes that he is also on a specific Path that leads to a supreme goal, over which many of the world's most brilliant thinkers, creators and leaders have passed and that he is in excellent company.

49 There is an old Latin motto ascribed to Terence,—"Homo sum; humani nihil a me alienum puto." ("I am a man, and nothing that concerns a man do I deem a matter of indifference to me.") St. Augustin informs us that on hearing these words of the poet the theatre resounded with applause. This saying might well be the general motto of the Rosicrucian Society for its researchive work is so inclusive that nothing that pertains to man, his past, his present or his future is a matter of indifference to the Society. The subject of the Society's work IS man. The object of its Art is the perfection and improvement of man, his transformation from a state of nature to a state of grace. Whether the student is at first taught to study man as an aggregation of chemical elements, later as a depository of mental reactions and urges, and finally as a spiritual synthesis of them all, he is also taught never to forget that he is human and that it is not his mission to aspire to wings and harps here but to be 100% efficient as a human being in order to qualify a vehicle for the highest expression of the eternal spirit within him.

50 At the beginning, the neophyte or young plant as the newly recognized Frater is termed, is not informed that he is a Lay Brother of the Rosy Cross. He is not—as yet. He must become so gradually in his consciousness, after he has passed a definite probationary period. Then, if he persists conscientiously in the Work that is offered to him, he not only KNOWS but he is also INFORMED authoritatively of the rank to which he has attained. Yet he never proclaims himself to be such. In fact no true Rosicrucian ever claims himself to be one, much less admits it for while it is perfectly permissible and quite desirable now that the Society is discharging a broad humanitarian mission to admit that one is a MEMBER of the Rosicrucian Society, it is decidedly presumtuous to proclaim one's self a Rosicrucian. There is a difference which will be easily apparent to the thoughtful. A man may admit himself to be a student in an academic institution, but it is not good breeding or modesty to proclaim one's self a scholar. The world will set its own appraisal in either case.

51 Of sources of information regarding the Society, there are none that are reliable outside the Society itself. Encyclopaedic information is misleading. For the most part it consists of the usual mythos regarding the Fraternity and the stories common to all reports and thus to some extent agreeing. Then there is a mass of well-intentioned but wholly misleading matter prepared by would-be apologists and pseudo-historians regarding an history they know little or nothing about. Finally, there is the deceptive matter prepared by modern charlartans and worked into some encyclopaedias due to the editorial ignorance of the subject. Many books of reference solemnly assure their public that the Rosicrucians were a purely, or possibly impurely mythical cultus with no tangible existence.

52 The Rosicrucian Society has never, in the entire course of its existence, permitted its members to wear outward jewels or to expose anything of the sort to gain attention or credence from the outer world. Certain jewels ARE to be worn, but the initiated member alone knows how and when they may be identified.

53 Today, the Society is secret only in two things, its Secret or Esoteric Work of individual development, and the ritual observances of Collegiate functions. Otherwise its existence and its message are not only made known to the whole wide world, but better still, teachings once obtainable only with great difficulty are now available to anyone who sincerely desires to make their individual start upon the Path.

54 In a lesson of this length, it is impossible to make more than brief excursus into the identity and purpose of the Rosicrucian Society, mistakenly called by some, "Order". It would require many lessons to cover the subject taking up its individual features specifically and in detail. We can only hope in this paper or thesis to give an outline of the Fraternity.

55 One thing we must emphasize at this time. Those who look upon Rosicrucianism as something so sacrosanct that it means lowered gaze and solemn mien, are quite mistaken. Bulwer Lytton, an earlier Frater of the Society, wrote that "The Rosicrucians are not at all gloomy or morbid, on the contrary they are extremely sociable." And we may say that all whom we have met who could be considered as genuinely representative of the best ideals of the Society, have fortunately been blessed with a keen sense of humor and fully lived up to Lytton's representation. The ethical ideal of the Society is unusually high and if a member fails to live up to it and thus misrepresents his Society, that is not the fault of the organization but a demonstration of the weakness of the individual or his inability to exemplify the principles he has espoused.

56 We are all pitiably human. We say "pitiably" advisedly, for we are as yet so far from what we should be; from what we are destined to be and CAN become. Rosicrucianism is a system of living and thinking that is adapted to assist nature in her evolutionaly process of human unfoldment and it begins by teaching exactly what evolution IS from the higher standpoint and then how to go about it. It is so elastic that all that is good in other schools or systems of thought will be found to be fundamental in Rosicrucianism not because it adopts each new idea but because it teaches alignment with that vast archaeus of the Universal Mind, wherefrom we can draw all that is best and proper for us to have as fast as we develop the capacity for it, the ability to use it and the faculties for understanding it. Man is not given the use of the great natural forces and energies, unless and until by hard study and research he develops also the ability to use them constructively. It is a part of nature's economy not to put the tools or instruments of suicide into the hands of the careless or ignorant.

57 Many legends have grown up around the tradition of Rosicrucianism, some of exquisite beauty. They have even run into poetry of an unusually high order that has found a place among the immortals of literature. In some of these legends we observe a singular agreement as to the discovery of hidden sanctuaries where have been found lamps burning for centuries without tending or replenishment. The stories are good. We shall not discuss their probability. It may however with excellent profit be pointed out that after all there IS such a thing as the hidden sanctuary of the human heart, whose depths we had not hitherto discovered. Perhaps an accidental crisis, a problem, a necessity or a happy unfoldment and revealment helped us to discover it. When it opened to our astonished vision we also noted a strong, pure light burning therein, a light that is not of this world but whose rays reach out into this world and make this old world a bit happier. It may be, it just may possibly be the light of genuine love; it might just possibly be the light of good deeds; it might be the light of warm human sympathy. We do not say what it is in each individual discovery for there are many kinds of light now known to science. There are many kinds of rays, and all the time we are discovering rays increasingly powerful and penetrating and we are also beginning to discover more and more of the properties of the rays we have always thought we knew all about. So, the old legends MAY have some foundation in fact as do all legends when run to their basis. And to those who would like to know more about these caverns of the secret metals of Hermes wherein the mystic light glows on and on through many recurrent lives, growing brighter with each incarnation and brighter and brighter IN each incarnation itself as we develop a better vehicle, a better lamp, we can only say, in the words of the illuminated Sendivogius, "IF THAT WHICH THOU SEEKEST THOU FINDEST NOT WITHIN THYSELF, THOU WILT NEVER FIND IT WITHOUT THEE." It is not necessary for us of today to scour the four ends of the earth looking for wisdom. It is beside us and all about us if we will but open our vision, broaden our minds beyond academic ruts and denominational boundaries and let truth—truth at any price, enter into our hearts. Then,—maybe—that little lamp within will begin to send forth its rays into our consciousness and out through OUR consciousness into that of others and ultimately into the great wide world.

58 The atom is the tiniest and humblest thing we know of. BUT IT IS THE CORNER STONE OF ALL CREATION. There is something like that atom in each one of us but we must search for it. It MIGHT be some sort of a STONE and, if found, it may be discovered to have the properties of Aladdin's fabled Lamp, another and beautiful eastern analogy of the western concept of the Hidden Flame.

59 Wisdom doth not proclaim herself. She wraps herself up in humble form. She is not to be found on display. She is to be sensed and recognized only within. Truth, beauty, power, wisdom and inner health, those are the jewels the Rosicrucian is permitted to wear and to display as far as he is able. And when we find such a one we may be sure he is living the life and on the Path that has been trodden by the sages of the ages.

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 61-70

LIBER# 65 SWELTERING HEAT

Personal & Confidential FIFTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

ABRAXAS

A GOD ABOUT WHOM YOU KNOW NOTHING, BECAUSE MEN HAVE FORGOTTEN HIM.

The Major Symbols Embodied in Abraxas

The head of a Rooster

A Human Body

Legs fashioned like Serpents

Shield and Whip

Chariot drawn by four White Horses

Sun and Moon

The Name

Personal & Confidential

CLASSIFIED

The Brotherhood and Order of the Pleroma
The Disciplina Arcani

Do You Know ?

by Richard, Duc de Palatine

65 01

"Unless and until a man embarks upon this quest of the Real Self, doubt and uncertainty will follow his footsteps throughout life. The greatest kings and statesmen try to rule others, when in their heart of hearts they know that they cannot rule themselves. Yet the greatest power is at the command of the man who has penetrated to his inmost depths. There are men of great intellect who spend their lives gathering knowledge about many things. Ask these men if they have solved the mystery of man, if they have conquered themselves, and they will hang their heads in shame. What is the use of knowing everything else when you do not know who you are? Men avoid this enquiry into the True Self."

—THE MAHARISHI, by Dr. Paul Brunton

CLASSIFIED

THE SANCTUARY OF THE GNOSIS:

This Sanctuary is the oldest Gnostic Center at the present time in the English speaking nations. The recorded historical origin of GNOSTICISM, however, begins with Pythagoras in the 6th Century B.C at Crotona in Grecia Magna (Sicily). Pythagoras was initiated into all the Classical Pagan Mysteries and duly became a Grand Hierophant with the right and authority to teach and to initiate suitable disciples into the Principles of the True Religion which has existed from the very origins of the human race.

Pythagoras retired to Crotona to establish his own Philosophical and Mystical School based upon the pattern of the Ancient Mysteries. He called his new system THE GNOSIS. Pythagoras, himself, left no record of his teachings. For what we know of them, we must rely upon the writings of his many pupils. We do know that with the closing of the School at Crotona. Pythagoras initiated a number of his personal disciples to the rank of Hierophant.

63 03

CLASSIFIED

THE PHILOSOPHY OF GNOSTICISM

As stated above, we know that it was Pythagoras who denominated the existing True Religion THE GNOSIS, which means the KNOWLEDGE OF THE THINGS THAT ARE. With his system came the restoration of the occult/mystical science as taught in all the ancient schools of every country of the world, and which still can be acquired today. Just as in the days of Pythagoras, this teaching is not the product of any new thought. It is a philosophy as old as man's desire to know that he is God incarnated within the dark tenement of the mortal body, and to experience the higher dimensions of the supersensual worlds.

Gnosticism as presented today is not new, since it embodies the study and achievement of the Gnosis. The study and fulfillment of that goal is effected by a method of interpreting sacred legends, narratives, myths and mysteries, by a rule or principle of analogy and correspondence. By this method, events related as having occurred in the external world are regarded as expressing operations and experiences of the human soul within the mortal body. A person can only interpret these mysteries therefore, according to his or her own mystical experiences.

THE SOURCE OF GNOSTICISM:

Pythagoras claimed that a person must develop the faculty of what we might today call "spiritual photography". This is a latent faculty within every human being, which provides a record of past events which ranges from the dim past of man's history to the present day and covers all the dimensions of man's super-sensual nature. Prof. A. Wilder of Albany, N.Y., describes this latent faculty in his "THE ECLECTIC PHILOSOPHY" in effect as: "The Divine Soul is the imperishable camera in which facts and events, past, present, and future, are alike affixed". Therefore the conscious memory of our past experiences can be recalled in this day and age, provided the candidate really believes that he is God Incarnate.

Beyond our every-day world of limits and experience all is one. One day or state -- the past and future comprised in the present. Death is the last ECSTASIS on earth. At that time the Divine Soul is freed from the constraint of the body, and its nobler part is united to the Divine, becoming partaker in the wisdom (Gnosis) and foreknowledge (Pistis) of the higher beings. Therefore, the Gnosis is for the Mystics, that peculiar state described as: the ability to see the present, and future as in a clear mirror of the Divine Soul. The achieved Gnostics can see the past and relive the events therein. They can also see the future and that which is about to take place.

MAN — THE SOURCE OF ALL KNOWLEDGE AND POWER:

The Gnostic evaluation of Man as the God Incarnate is for the serious student who desires to know and realize the mysteries of his own being and to know that he is one with the God of ALL. He thus seeks to awaken the latent spiritual powers that exist within himself as the God Incarnate that will change his whole life. This is the very essence and purpose of the True Religion which has existed from the very origin of the human race and is, therefore, the natural heritage of all people.

Thus, the mystical and occult knowledge, including all the known aspects of ESP, were possessed by the ancient Mystery Schools of Egypt, Greece, the Americas, and by the Druids of England. It is the same teaching which inspired Pythagoras, Plato, Socrates, Solon, Jesus, the Buddha, and the great Gnostic Doctors of the first three centuries of the Chrestian era, including Marcion of Rome, Valentinius and Basilides of Alexandria, and Cerenthus. All of these represented the latter part of the Gnostic cycle which had begun with Pythagoras.

THE CHRESTIAN RELIGION AND PHILOSOPHY:

Historical research reveals that the Chrestian Religion was divided into two streams of activity: (a) The Psychic and Occult sciences, referring to the science of the secrets of Nature — physical and psychic, mental and spiritual. These were called Gnostic or Hermetic Sciences which are, and have been for untold ages, hidden from the vulgar mind. This condition exists for a very good reason. This knowledge would never be appreciated neither by certain of the selfish educated classes, who would misuse it for their own profit, and thus turn the True Religion into black magic; nor by the uneducated, who would not understand it.

(b) The Mystical Gnosis, that stream of Chrestian activity which seeks to achieve the object of the Psychic and Occult Sciences within man's own self here and now. Its adherents claimed, and still claim, thatGod is all things and that man being God Incarnate has all powers and faculties latent within him. That it is through a system of purification, moral and ethical discipline, that these powers shall become manifest within his personality.

CHRESTIANITY AND CHRISTIANITY:

As a result of impartial investigation into the backgrounds of doctrine, and the evolution of philosophy and religion, it is now revealed that Pythagoras had two classes of students — the CHRESTES — those who were probationary pupils for the True Religion; and the CHRISTOS, those who had achieved the Object of the True Religion. We know that the philosophy underlying the various expressions of the True Religion from the days of Atlantis was known as THE GNOSIS, and those who followed this Quest were known as CHRESTIANS.

65 06

We also know from historical sources that Alexander the Great established the MYSTERIES OF SERAPIS at Alexandria in Egypt, about the 3rd Century B.C. When Alexander conquered the Eastern world, followed by the conquest of Greece and Egypt, he had for his advisers many of the disciples of the Pythagorean and the Platonic streams of the True Religion. His aim in the establishment of the Mysteries of Serapis and its Hero-god CHRESTOS, commonly known as Serapis, was an effort to blend the best elements of all the known philosophies and mystery cults into one Mystery System.

CHRESTOS - SERAPIS

We gain some very interesting facts from the biographies of the disciples of the Pythagorean and Platonic schools of thought. All of them sought initiation into the Mysteries of Serapis, as it was considered to be the fount of all occult and mystic lore of the ages. We also find that the Mysteries were controlled by approved Hierophants of the older Mysteries of Demeter, Osiris and Isis, Cybele, Samothrace, Adonis and Attis and a number of other Eastern Cults, even as far as India. The Mysteries of Serapis became the most powerful and respected of all centers of Occult and Mystic lore from the 3rd Century B.C., to the end of the 4th Century A.D.

THE MYSTERIES, OF MITHRA:

Franz Cumont in his "The Mysteries of Mithra" shows a most extraordinary insight into the nature, growth, and influence of India's Mithra into the life of Greek and Roman worlds; how Mithra influenced the various Mystery Cults which came within its influence. It also reacted by inference on Serapis in Egypt and Rome, and through this, the Mystery of Serapis became at one time the RELIGIO LICTA of the Roman Empire alongside that of Mithra. The Roman Emperors feared the dual power of Mithra and Serapis within the bounds of their empire. These latter became so powerful in the 2nd Century A.D., that Hadrian, the Roman Emperor called the Hierophants of Serapis "Bishops of Serapis and Christos".

THE INFLUENCE OF SERAPIS:

From the time of Pythagoras to that of Proclus in the 6th Century A.D. (who was considered the last of the Chrestian and neo-Platonic philosophers) the power, influence and occult abilities of the Initiates really disturbed first Republican Rome and then Imperial Rome. The list of Initiates of Serapis and Mithra kept the cultures of Greece, Rome, and Egypt in a ferment with their discoveries and scientific thinking to such an extent that the various rulers tried to suppress them, but to no avail. Gibbon in his "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" clearly shows that the Initiates of Serapis and Mithra were the most cultured, advanced and ethical people in the Roman World.

Arthur Findlay in his "The Curse of Ignorance" could not but admit that the Initiates of Serapis and Mithra were the most advanced thinkers of the Classical World, he relates numerous instances where these initiates discovered many of the scientific foundations which are accepted today. They were masters of the occult sciences,the fore-runners of many of our recent scientific theories.

THE RISE OF POPULAR GNOSTICISM:

It is considered by modern investigators of Gnosticism that this cult began in the latter part of the 1st Century A.D., and that it was an enemy of the Christian Religion according to the Ante-Nicene Fathers of the Christian Church. To make this claim is historically unsound, since we now know that Gnosticism existed for centuries before the Religion of Christ became a world power under Constantine the Great after the Church Council of Nicaea, in 325 A.D.

65 08

(a) We now know that the various popular Gnostics existing between the 1st to the 4th Century A.D., were first initiates of the Mysteries of Serapis, but, on becoming Hierophants, they began to teach their own version of the True Religion according to their own mystical experiences. The occult and mystical feats performed by these Chrestians astounded the Christian Fathers to such an extent that they feared them. They were feared for their ability to perform wonders of all kinds, and were therefore considered to be pagan Magicians. (1)

The Christians who followed Jesus (who in the original texts was referred to as "The Fisherman" — which term we intend to use in this article) resented the fact that their philosophical and mystics brothers could accomplish greater "miracles" than those recorded of their saviour by tradition alone. Hence the enmity between the Initiates of Serapis and Mithra and the followers of the Fisherman of Galilee. It was at Antioch that the followers of the Fisherman began to call their cult "Christian", hence the cleavage between the Chrestians of the True Religion and the Believers of Christ. (2)

CHREST AND CHRIST:

(b) All probationary pupils for the Mysteries of the True Religion were called "Chrestes", that is to say a Wanderer. Before the pupil was allowed to awaken his own innate Spiritual Powers he was obliged to pass through three stages: that of the PURIFICATION of the whole personality, and then through a series of tests and trials to awaken the Christ (Soul) powers within himself. This led to the stage of becoming ILLUMINED, or overshadowed by his own Indwelling God. It was by the activation of his Divine Nature while still living a perfectly normal life in the world, that he gained control over the inner forces of Nature and finally became an ADEPT OF LIFE.

Once having passed through the Inner School, he gained proficiency in his new-found powers and became a Hierophant. He then had the right to initiate others into the same system which he himself had undergone and to give training and discipline to others. By becoming a MYSTAE or an ILLUMINED ADEPT OF LIFE, he granted to himself the power to see and relive the past, to understand the events of the present, and to foresee the events which are to come. He was then given the honoured title of being a CHRISTOS — he who becomes the Ever-Becoming One — A MASTER AMONG MEN.

TRANSFORMATION IN 325 A.D.:

The original Chrestians had gained control over the forces in Nature by means of PISTIS or Practical Knowledge and Understanding of these Forces. They were, therefore, able to command the gods to obey them. It was the everlasting complaint of the followers of the Fisherman that they were unable to perform the miracles of the Chrestians. Thus began a period of persecution of the Chrestians by the latter-day Christians. An so was brought into being the vicious conflict between the believers in the Christos as the Divine and Immortal Soul and the believers in a Christ as a man in time.

In 325 A.D., Emperor Constantine called all the "bishops" of the Cult of the Fisherman to a Council at Nicaea. There he ordered the carnal Bishops to formulate a creed based upon a "history" of a Saviour personified by Jesus of Nazareth as the only Son of God. A few years later, when Constantine's orders had been carried out, he then proceeded to destroy the Chrestians. The reason for this lies in the fact that the Chrestians, who followed the Gnostic Way of Life, believed that every man was a Son of God, and that Jeshu the Fisherman was a JUST MAN who demonstrated the innate power of God within every human being.

(d)

For the Chrestians — the Christ was the mighty power of man's Soul, the embodiment of God on earth or within man's nature. For the Chrestians — Christ was the Hero-God and not a person. They believed that through a discipline of one's human nature it could become the earthly mirror of the God in earth, and that once he had been overshadowed by the Divine Soul, man could control all the mathematical and geometrical forces in Nature and perform all kinds of wonders.

(4)

The Christians of Nicaea and Antioch denied the possibility that man is a reflection of God on earth, and called the scientific results of the Chrestians the work of the Devil. They demanded of Constantine the destruction of the Chrestians as heretics who were attempting to pervert the Christian Religion. The Ante-Nicene Fathers of the new religion of Christ overlooked the fact that the Chrestians (commonly called Gnostics through ignorance) existed many centuries before the Christian Fathers. Therefore logically, one must call the Christians the heretics against the True Religion, the adherents of which were then known as Chrestians.

THE DESTRUCTION OF THE TRUE RELIGION:

(e)

As soon as Constantine made the Christian Religion the RELIGIO LICTA of the Roman Empire, and after the Ante-Nicene Fathers had muzzled the original foundations of the Chrestian Cult, they destroyed everything pertaining to the True Religion. Adherents of the Chrestian Religion were ruthlessly sought out and destroyed. Great libraries were burned and a political religion — a Religion of Power, instead of a Religion of Wisdom — was made the key note for the next 1600 years.

(5)

The accumulated knowledge of the True Religion, accumulated over vast centuries of time, was destroyed by the Christians for fear that it would destroy the uniqueness of the Religion of Jesus after 325 A.D..Branches of the Ageless Truth which we now call E.S.P., Occultism, Spiritism, Psychology, Philosophy, Masonry, and science, were forbidden. The Light of the Gnosis as denominated by Pythagoras in the 6th Century B.C. was eliminated by the fanatic and ignorant Christians. From the 4th Century A.D., the whole of Europe was overshadowed by a Dark Age of ignorance and gross superstition. Gone were the Centers of Wisdom. Mankind was forbidden to investigate the natural forces of nature and within himself. No man was permitted to follow the Star of his own Illumination. All people had to accept the Church and the Christian Bible as the only means of salvation.

(6)

THE REBIRTH OF THE TRUE RELIGION:

It was due to the humanistic revival of art, literature, occultism and learning in Europe between the 14th and 16th Century, that western man began to question the foundations of the Christian religion, the religion of power, oppression and degradation of the Human Spirit. With this awakening of the human intellect and the desire for Truth, the power of both East and West aspects of the Catholic Church declined, and a new age of Wisdom and Spiritual Freedom became possible. The Christian religion has always stood for the privileged few: the bishops, priests, and monks, assisted by the kings and a very corrupt aristocracy. Assisted by the gross superstition of the Church, the majority of the people were kept in abject poverty and ignorance.

THE EMERGENCE OF THE GNOSIS:

The 15th Century saw the re-establishment of Centers of Learning and Wisdom. It saw the coming forth of the True Religion with its Gnostic Philosophy under the guise of the Knights Templar, the Fratres Lucis, the Rosicrucians, the Illuminati, Freemasonry and Theosophy. In spite of the proscriptions of the Catholic and Protestant Churches, the Higher Science of the Spirit gained ground in every century. The Mystics, the Alchemists, medicine, science, etc., became free to talk of and to publish their findings. From the 14th Century to the present-day we have seen the re-emergence of the True Religion under many forms, in spite of the efforts of the Established Christian Religion to stem the upsurge of the Wisdom of the Ages.

THE TWENTIETH CENTURY:

(7)

(6)

It has been calculated that some 6,000,000 people were either martyred or suppressed by the Christian religion. The Bishops and priests of the Ante-Nicene Church were responsible for this brutal carnage of human Souls. The Church today thinks in terms of Power and Superstition, whereas the Chrestians think and act in terms of Love, Justice and Brotherhood.

We must not forget that the emancipation of the human Soul today is not due to the Christian Church, but to the countless number of adherents of the True Religion through the ages. It is due to these martyred souls that today we are free to follow the Star of our own Illumination, and with the freedom to interpret this Wisdom according to our own mystical experiences.

(g)

THEORY VERSUS ACTION:

We claim that Chrestianity and its philosophy of THE GNOSIS is not a "theory of life"; it is fundamentally a "way of life". It, the Chrestian Gnosis, above all, gives a meaning to man and creates within himself the innate power to make a success of his life. We stress the fact that a man was born with all the potentials for success, and all he has to do is to develop these latent faculties and make them manifest in his daily life. If this natural life is lived according to its principles and according to the teachings of the Pleroma, it will change his life from one of hopelessness to one of dynamic purpose.

(h)

THE GNOSTIC METHOD:

Chrestianity states that man is fundamentally God in the body. This being so, we claim that the God-Power is within man's own Soul and, by the teachings and method of the Pleroma, he first awakens this power, and then draws it outwards into the human personality. There are no external exercises, methods as such, etc., in this teaching, it can be lived and practised within one's own home. This is the startling simplicity of the Gnosis, one lives according to the prescribed life, and in a twinkling of an eye, the Soul becomes manifest. If 200 men and women, known to us personally, have changed their lives and have been able to banish fear, anxiety, want and unhappiness in their lives by means of our teachings, there is no reason why you should not start now.

THE SOUL AND ITS POWERS:

The great Mystics, Seers, Sages, Philosophers, renowned Occultists and impartial Scientists throughout the ages have spoken of, and demonstrated, the mighty Power of their own Soul once it has been allowed to enter the body and manifest its tremendous powers . . . such powers and faculties as are not even dreamed of by the ordinary man. The Fisherman of Galilee, when he was asked by what power he performed his miracles, replied very simply: It is not I who do these things BUT BY THE POWER WITHIN ME. He also states: Even as I have done these things, ye shall do greater! This is the eternal promise given to those who obey the command of the God within them.

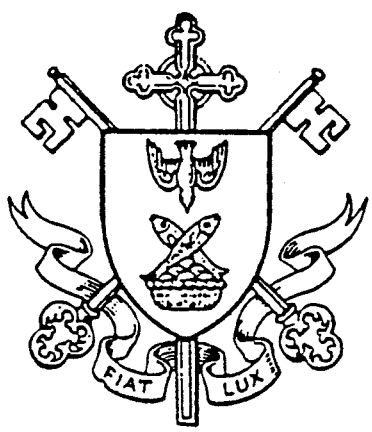
SELF INITIATION:

Although it is the effects of the Tincture of Charisma from the Soul of Man which grants him Initiation into the Secret Science of Life (resulting in the manifestation of many amazing types of phenomena) when this occurs, it is the work of the Outer Leader of the Pleroma to help and guide the student into the ability to handle these newfound powers and faculties. We must stress this all important fact, this teaching and the way of self-realization is not for the idly curious nor the sensationalist. However, serious study and dedication will make him a MASTER AMONG MEN.

THE SANCTUARY



OF THE GNOSIS

This Booklet is an edited copy of the original distributed by the late Richard,Duc de Palatine, who carried on this work in the U.S.A.

The Sanctuary has now been restored in Great Britain and carries on the Tradition of the original Order. We are continually updating the teachings; but we remain true to the correct Initiatic Principles of all ages and we act as a central authority on the ancient gnosis throughout the world.

.....

THE SANCTUARY OF THE GNOSIS is governed by an Inner Council which incorporates the Order of Melchisedek,often referred to as the Inner Church, the College of Sacred Science - for the training of Priests and the New Age Church Universal

++++++++++++++++

CLASSIFIED

PROLOGUE

Originally we intended this booklet to be a short resume of the meaning and background of what is now known as "Gnosticism". But by probing into the origins of Christianity, the Chrestians, the Gnostics and the Essenes, one does come up against some extraordinary facts in history known to the scholars and specialists, but which are rigidly kept from the layman.

I think that the reason the layman has allowed the specialist to speak for him down through the centuries, and why civilization and ideas take a very long time to get established, is because people hate having their myths destroyed. At the same time, paradoxically, they are almost always averse to the creation of new ones. Yet the whole purpose of evolution is to create, to ripen, and then to destroy the old that the new shall flourish. Nations and religions seem to follow this evolutionary rule, wherein the new freely borrows an idea from the old and then claims credit for having discovered it.

65 18

One of the great myths which was created in the 4th Century A.D. was the one regarding THE GNOSIS and its adherents — THE CHRESTIANS. The Bishops of the new religion of Christianity worked very hard and used every means to muzzle the origins of the Religion of Christ. When they thought they had muzzled the past, they began to despoil that past in order to enrich their own religion. This myth was erected in three stages: (1) that THE GNOSIS was a heresy seeking to destroy Christianity; however, it is now being historically proven that THE GNOSIS is as old as man himself; (2) that THE GNOSIS was a foreign 'religion' intruding into Christianity; but now the scholars know differently. THE GNOSIS IS NOT A RELIGION, it is a philosophical 'way of life'. And lastly, but not least, (3) the Christians claim that their religion is superior to Gnosticism; but it has now been proved that THE GNOSIS grants to man super-human powers and capabilities. The Christians, after the 4th Century, lost THE GNOSIS from their religion, and thus it degenerated into a religion of blind faith.

The finding of the Scrolls at Qumram near the Dead Sea has now forced the scholars and theologians to accept the premise that Christianity is an offshoot of, if not in fact, basically the Essene Community restored under a new name. This fact is being deliberately withheld from the layman. In this short discourse I hope to reveal to the reader some of his glorious and exalted past, and to show that THE GNOSIS is actually the True Religion which was in existence from the very origin of the human race.

Richard, Duc de Palatine, D.D.
January, 1974

65 19

THE SANCTUARY OF THE GNOSIS

This Sanctuary is the oldest Gnostic Sanctuary at the present day in the English speaking nations. Up till 1953, this Sanctuary was completely esoteric having been unknown to the general public since the 6th Century B.C.

THE MEANING OF GNOSTICISM

It is very difficult for the layman to appreciate the work of the scholar, which is one reason why he is not kept abreast of the findings of the scholar, moreso since most scholars consider that the layman is not suited to understand, hence the latest findings very seldom become known to him. One of these hidden or minimized discoveries in this century is that the Greek world, from the 3rd Century B.C. to the end of the 3rd Century A.D., did not use classic Greek, but used a colloquial version of Greek called KOINE. This idiom was as different from Classic Greek as our present English is to the language of Chaucer. When this was realized, the scholars found themselves obliged to re-evaluate the findings of the Dead Sea Scrolls in relation to the Aramaic and Greek versions. This has also been applicable to the Papyruses found at Nag-Hammadi in Egypt (vide: Rev. Dr. Charles F. Potter and Rev. A. Powell Davis).

The classical Greek meaning of GNOSIS is, as translated into English, "The Knowledge of the things that are"; whereas, in the common language of that age — Koine (Konnay), Gnosis means "The Knowledge and Experience of the things that are". Since we now know that the commercial and communicating language of the Greek world from the 3rd Century B.C. was not classical Greek, but simply this colloquial language later called KOINE, it can explain simply the differences in the meaning of the word GNOSIS.

65 20

The word Gnosticism has the same meaning and purpose as those of our modern terms "theosophia" or "occultism". The exception is that occultism has become a theory, whereas THE GNOSIS was, and is, the practical application of man's own experience of his own Inner Nature.

THE GNOSIS, or, as it is commonly known, Gnosticism, in its true and practical meaning, is a "way of life", to be lived in the mortal body. If its rules and principles are applied to human life, they will change the dullest life into a joyful, happy and meaningful experience, as has been proven by Prof. Walter T. Stace in his work "THE TEACHINGS OF THE MYSTICS".

IS GNOSTICISM A RELIGION?

There is no evidence in the writings of the so-called Gnostics to show that Gnosticism was considered a 'religion' from the days of Pythagoras till the end of the 4th Century A.D. (Vide: THE LIBRARY OF THE ANTE-NICENE FATHERS OF THE CHURCH.) There is ample evidence to show that it was not a religious belief, but rather that it was a 'philosophy of life", which could, and still can be applied to human life to assist man to change his own life and become aware of his Divine Nature.

THE GIFTS OF THE GNOSIS

The supernatural gifts ascribed to the CHRESTIANS and GNOSTICS were far above the traditionally known gifts of the Spirit, in their days and even in ours. The Gnostics were known to have an uninterrupted succession of miraculous powers: the gift of tongues, of vision, memory of past events, of prophecy and the power to expel demons (vide: Carl G. Jung), to heal the sick, raise the dead, and confer the powers of immortality. These have all been fully attested to by historical evidence, whereas the miracles of "Jesus of Nazareth" have come down to us by tradition alone (vide: Justin Martyr).

65 21

The supernatural gifts developed by the achieved Gnostic and Chrestian can be demonstrated even in this materialistic age, so long as the aspirant will live the prescribed life in order to unfold the natural and inherent faculties within man, irrespective of the stage of his unfoldment. Man, being the embodiment of the Godhead, must, in the normal course of evolution, unfold his God-Powers, whether in this or in some future life.

CHRISTIANITY ESSENE AND NOT GNOSTIC

When the full implications of the blunder of ignoring the colloquial Greek language can be assessed, it will throw a very different light upon the Nag-Hammadi papyrus and the Dead Sea Scrolls in relation to the origins of the Gnostic, Essene, and Christian traditions. It has been the traditional opinion that Christianity was the offshoot of the Gnostic Movement stemming from Alexandria in Egypt. However, it is now suspected, with very good reasons; that Christianity did not stem from Gnosticism but rather from the Essene community which existed on the shores of the Dead Sea. It is now the considered opinion of some that Christianity stems from the Essenes, and that Christianity borrowed concepts from the Gnostic Schools at Alexandria and all of the known Pagan Mystery Schools.

IS GNOSTICISM ANTAGONISTIC TO CHRISTIANITY?

It was Pythagoras in the 6th Century B.C. who first referred to the Wisdom Religion as THE GNOSIS, which philosophy became known later as the CHRESTIAN RELIGION. In the time of Plato, the 5th Century B.C., it became designated as PLATONISM. When Alexander the Great (356-323 B.C.) King of Macedonia, conquered the then known world, he founded the "Mysteries of Serapis" at Alexandria in Egypt. This was a blend of all the known mystery and occult bodies both East and West. Those who were initiated into these Mysteries were known as "Chrestes" or "Chrestians", meaning in occult parlance, pupils on probation. From this emerged the "Chrestian Community" of achieved Gnostics, about the beginning of the 2nd Century A.D. (Vide: DO YOU KNOW, by Richard, Duc de Palatine.)

65. 22

About the beginning of the 2nd Century A.D., certain initiates of Serapis took an independent line of study in the Wisdom Religion. They chose the method of interpreting the existing mysteries according to their own mystical experience, through the power of Illumination. It is now common knowledge that the followers of Jesus of Nazareth or Jeshu ben Pandira (vide: The Babylonian Talmud) followed the same principles as those of the Essenes until the 4th Century A.D. It was only after 325 A.D. that the Christians at Antioch and Rome began to carnalize and dogmatize the True Religion.

DIFFERENCES BETWEEN THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS

Scholars for years were puzzled about the difference between the New Testament quotations of the Old Testament. However, when it was discovered that the New Testament had been written in Koine and not in pure classical Greek, these differences were resolved. They now realize that the idiomatic meaning between the two kinds of languages must be taken into account. This means that our present version of "THE GOSPEL OF ST. THOMAS" must be radically re-evaluated in the light of the Greek Koine. There are differences between the expressions, and this must be taken into account when evaluating the premise whether Christianity is an offshoot of Gnosticism or of the Essene Community.

THE CONFUSION OF THE GNOSIS

With the findings of the Dead Sea Scrolls in the six caves at Qumram and considering the widespread use of the Koine throughout the Greek world, it has been found that the philosophy of the Gnostics of Alexandria and the concept of Messianic Hope were developed separately of each other. The Gnostics of Alexandria evolved their theosophic systems through the Priests of the Temples and the Greater Mysteries. They were influenced by Hermes, the Divine Poimander, the Theurgic practices of the neo-Platonists, who interpreted all the mysteries, symbols and allegories by means of the law of analogy or correspondences. The channel for their expression was through the intellect and intuition; they concentrated upon the Father/Consciousness of man's spiritual life.

When we come to deal with the Messianic Groups scattered around Palestine, we find that they evolved their Messianic hope message from the Old Testament. They did not seek to interpret the mysteries of the Secret Tradition in Israel by means of analogy. They claimed that the answer to the problem of Light and Darkness, the Fall of Man, the Garden of Eden, etc. was to be found within the Old Testament. They claimed that there would appear a Savior or Messiah to save mankind from its enemies and restore the Kingdom of God on earth. It is now fairly obvious from this that modern Christianity evolved out of the Essenes, and not from the Gnostics as previously believed.

65 24

In spite of the claims of the Ante-Nicene Fathers of the Church that Gnosticism was a heretical doctrine and antagonistic to the new religion of Christ, secular history makes it quite clear that the Chrestians, named by the new Church "Gnostics", had existed long before the Council of Nicaea in 325 A.D. It was then that Constantine the Great declared the new Christian Religion to be the official religion of the Roman Empire. From that time onwards Christians have been forbidden to study the hidden Laws in Nature or even to follow the Star of their own Illumination which comes from the Godhead resident within their own Nature.

FROM THE 4TH TO THE 20TH CENTURY

With the final suppression of the Chrestians, their Gnostic Philosophy and "Way of Life" in the Mediterranean world, the Chrestian/Gnostics went underground, since the Gnosis was forbidden to exist by the official Church. This Gnosis, however, had been and remained an integral part of the teachings and application of "The Order of the San Grael" since the 3rd Century A.D., in England and France. It appeared again as "The Knights Templar" in the 13th Century. These were followed by the "Fratres Lucis of Florence" in the 15th Century. Then in that same century came the "Brotherhood of the Rosae Crucis" in Germany. This was followed by the Masonic "Order of the Illuminati" in 1776, Mesmer's "Order of Magnetic Masonry" and Cagliostro's "Egyptian Masonry". The "Hermetic Brotherhood of Light" which came later, is based upon the teachings of Thrice Greatest Hermes, deriving from the Mysteries of Serapis. Hermes was not a Gnostic, since he was the Greek and Egyptian God of Wisdom. (Vide: John Yarker Jr: THE ARCANE SCHOOLS).

In 1875, H.P. Blavatsky founded the "Theosophical Society", wherein she restored a portion of the Gnostic Philosophy under the title of "Theosophia" or the Wisdom Religion. She states that THE GNOSIS was the original study and practice of the ancient occultists (vide: ISIS UNVEILED).

In 1953, Richard, Duc de Palatine began the restoration of THE GNOSIS in this century under diverse designations culminating in THE BROTHERHOOD AND ORDER OF THE PLEROMA; first in England and then in the United States. Therefore, the Pleroma can rightly claim to be the moral and legal successor to the ancient Gnostic Philosophy beginning with Pythagoras. It is interesting to note that this claim has been acceded to by the College of Propaganda of the Roman Church.

THE GOD-MAN AND HIS INCREDIBLE AGE

It is now suspected that there were many great civilizations before ours. It is further suspected that the last one was destroyed by water some 12,000 years ago because man began to misuse his God-Powers. We are told that the legendary Noah was warned of the coming flood and prepared for it, and only he and his family were saved. Of course, this story is a myth concealing many great truths which can be interpreted by the individual according to his own mystical experiences. Not so for the Judaic Christians. They firmly believe in the story of Noah as historic, as also in the historical battle in Heaven between the Angels of Light and the Angels of Darkness. They further believe that God physically drove Adam and Eve out of Eden for their disobedience to His Will; that man physically fell from heaven, and will corporeally rise back to Heaven by the assistance of God's Son who came to earth as the Savior of the World!

65 26

The Hellenistic Chrestians, however, rejected the gross and materialistic interpretation of what is really a solar and mystical story of man. That sublime story of man forced to enter human bodies in order to develop and use his God-Powers. The Chrestians considered Jesus simply a 'Just Man' or one who was overshadowed by his own Soul, shown in Koine and our classical Greek as the "Christos" or the Indwelling Presence in every man. It is the knowledge and experience of the Christos/Soul within him that gives man the HOPE and SECURITY that he must and will walk the earth as the God-Incarnate.

The Gnostic Principles

We realize the Gnostic principles outlined below are just postulates to you at this time; but to us (and to you also if you decide to make the effort) these represent actual experiences. The Gnosis then is based on the following principles:

(1) That there is a Unity of Life, and that all creatures and things share in this One Life, therefore the innate possibilities of man are limitless.

(2) That the cosmos and man are worked and guided from within outwards. This means in effect that man possesses all the qualities, character, knowledge and wisdom from the very moment he is born, and it is the work of the Gnosis to show him the way in which he can make these latent qualities active in his daily life.

(3) That Gnosis is first the inner quest for the knowledge about the Real Self within the human body. Second, it is the actual experience of this Real Self.

65 27

A B R A X A S

One of the most potent of Gnostic symbols used by the ancients to express the sovereign power and activity of the unknown, unmanifest, androgyne God. It has been found carved in many temples and on precious stones and serves as a reminder of the ever-present, irresistible activity of the God-head in all life.

The head of the rooster is facing the sun and heralds the dawn. The human body reminds us that at this level every facet of life is focussed and manifest in mankind. Divine protection is symbolised by the shield, and the whip denotes the discipline required for the control of the forces of life depicted by the four white horses, variously interpreted as the elements: earth, fire, water and air; or the physical, emotional, mental and spiritual makeup of man, which are also being held in check by the reins held by the serpents. Serpents are an ancient symbol, found all round the world, portraying knowledge and understanding and as legs represent right movement as well as the columns of the temple.

Also implicit in the symbol are concepts of the movement of time. The chariot is representative of the evolutionary cycles of man and the name "Abraxas" in both the Greek and Hebrew alphabets has a numberic value of 365. It has also been suggested that the seven letters correspond to the 7 rays of creative power. The name has no root, is in fact "made up", indicating the impossibility of naming the nameless which stands behind all manifestation.

The sun and the moon are the polar opposites that in this powerful symbol are held in perfect equilibrium. The Sun being the highest symbol of the Godhead at this point and the Moon its reflection - God-Man. In this marvellous allegorical picture everything is harmonised and transcended and is one of the best approximations depicting the active manifestation of the Pleroma we have.

From the explanation of "Abraxas" given at The Seminar.

The Brotherhood and Order of the Pleroma The Disciplina Arcani

THE FIRST CHRESTIAN CHURCH

Copyright 1973

by Richard, Duc de Palatine

The word Chrestos existed ages before Christianity was ever heard of. Certainly long before 325 A.D. This can be attested by reputable historians from the 5th Century B.C. There are evidences extant even today which prove beyond cavil that the term Christian was used to denote a Good Man. This fact has been attested from the 5th Century B.C. by Herodotus, called the Father of History, and then by Aeschulus, and other classical Greek writers, the meaning of this term being applied to both things and persons.

Chrestians Not Christians

Canon Farar's THE EARLY DAYS OF CHRISTIANITY spells originally CHRISTIAN as CHRESTIAN, in the same manner as Justin Martyr, Tertullian, Clemens Alexandrinus and Lactantius, and many other Fathers of the Church spelled it. The worthy Canon was forced to admit that the name CHRISTIAN was first invented by the sneering, mocking Antiochians, as early as A.D. 44, but had not come into general use before the persecution by Nero. Even Claudius looked with alarm and suspicion on the Christians, so nicknamed in derision for their carnalizing a subjective principle or attribute. So the work of fraud had started even before 325 A.D.

That the British Isles are a relic of a vaster continent cannot be denied. Even Ignatius Donnelly in his two works "Atlantis — The Antediluvian World" and "The Destruction of Atlantis" clearly shows that the TRUE RELIGION from Atlantis had migrated to England and Ireland. Lewis Spence in his three works THE PROBLEM OF ATLANTIS, ATLANTIS IN AMERICA, and THE HISTORY OF ATLANTIS brings to light more details that show England as originally a part of Atlantis. H.S. Bellamy also gives some startling facts about Atlantis in England and Ireland. From their findings there is sufficient evidence to show that England and Europe formed part of a larger land mass, and that somewhere about the 10th Century B.C. this land mass was broken up by an upheaval.

If this is true, and our geologists have now proven this to be correct, it would account for the traditions prevailing in Ireland; and the West of England all speak of their former home which was situated in the Isles of the West now sunken beneath the Atlantic. From this homeland they received all their social, religious and political systems. This could infer that Britain was an already highly cultured land before the Romans came in 55 B.C. It could also account for the existence of their religious system called Druidism, where the name of their chief deity was called CHRESTUS. That is the real reason why Julius Caesar tried to exterminate the Druids, since he was deified and given also the title of CHRISTUS (Roman spelling). Who borrowed from whom?

A.D. 37 — Origins of English Chrestianity

Sometime in A.D. 37 there arrived on the West shores of England — possibly Avalon, the Isle of Apples — certain strangers of Culdich 'quidam advenae', reportedly coming from Egypt. The Leader of the strangers was known as Joseph of Arimathea, an initiate of Serapis and Christos in Egypt. When he related his religious doctrines to the Arch Druid, the priest replied that he and his people were well aware of this doctrine, since they had received it from their forebears across the ocean, in their homeland now beneath the sea.

The Strangers were hospitably received by Ariragus, King of the West Britons or Silures, and were settled in the Druidic College there. It is reported that the magical practices brought from Egypt were the same as those practiced by the Druids. The Welsh Bards tell us that great scholars from Phoenicia, Egypt, Chaldea, India, Greece and then finally Rome made pilgrimages to Britain to be trained in their wisdom and magical practices. It was therefore from Britain that the Torch of Civilization was passed from them to other nations during a period of six thousand years according to Herodotus. This ancient scholar further states that Egypt and Britain derived their civilization from Atlantis, known in those far off days as the Fabled Land of Lyonnesse of King Arthur.

The Bards of Ireland tell us that they were a part of Twin Islands called Antilla and Atlantis. Julius Caesar was told by the Druids in 55 B.C. that in six thousand years your world made no advance in civilization which it originally received from Antilla or the Isles of the Blest. Again Herodotus was told by the Priests of On that in the Isles of the West, he would find their sister land. The secret name of their Saviour was called Chrestes and that it was within the Hill of Tara in Ireland that the Oracle of God could be found. He was further told that their written history dated nearly 14,000 years before his time. What we call now the occult arts were known and brought to the nth degree of accuracy. Their temples were places of Immortality and the Fountain of Eternal Youth. Their Seers could see the past, the present and the future as though it was happening now.

The Domus Dei

Later the Culdich built their first Temple, the "Domus Dei", where now stands the remains of the great Monastery of Glastonbury. The Glastonbury Tor was already in existence many thousands of years before the great Monastery. It was built in a form of a pyramid after Egypt and Central America. It stands in the middle of a great zodiac, whose origins are lost in time. The outline of the Zodiac is the same as those to be found in Utah and Brazil. Godfrey of Monmouth writes that there is a tradition prevailing at earliest times that a great golden ball stood on the top of the Tor.

Therefore, one can easily trace the history of the Culdees from A.D. 37, but their origin has always baffled the historians. There are three claims put forward: that the Cultores Dei (Culdees) were friends and some were disciples of Jeshu ben Pandira who escaped the persecution in Rome at the time of Caligula. When this ruler banished the Serapeans and philosophers from Rome, Jeshu may have travelled to Britain via Egypt and Iberia. Whether or not this claim can be historically verified is debatable since the historical date of Jesus (Jeshu) still remains in question. However, we feel it is doubtful that a more logical explanation is to be found within the remains of the history of the Gnostics.

Isiaca Mensa

We know that Caligula hated the Gnostics and the Serapeans, because he was refused initiation by them. In retaliation for their refusal, he ordered them out of Rome. We know from Legend that a group of strangers appeared at Cadiz in Spain carrying with them an emerald image of Serapis whom they called Chrestes. They remained there for some years until their presence disturbed the populace. They then requested permission to sail to Britain and the northern people of Iberia built them ships and gave tthem provisions. The High Priest gave them a Tablet with 22 faces called the Isiaca Mensa. He claimed that it was copied from the original at Alexandria in Egypt, their homeland, with the instructions to build a mound and bury it at the center. When the Arch Druid saw the Mensa, he prostrated himself before it and ordered an armed guard to protect it.

Later, the High Priest took the leader of the strangers to a small mound and showed him an exact copy of the Mensa, which he claimed his forefathers brought from Antilla in the West, and which allegedly had lain in the Chariot of the Temple of Posedonis and Clieto, the protecting gods of Antilla. Alexander found a replica of this Mensa in the Patheon of the Acropolis in Athens. Here we have the Isiaca Mensa mentioned in Atlantis, Britain, Iberia, Rome, Athens and then at Alexandria. It was called the Tablet of Thoth. It was commonly known throughout the classical world as the CHRESTES or Oracle of the God!

On the death of Herod, King of Judae, in 4 B.C., Augustus divided Herod's kingdom between the tetrarchs Archelaus Antipas, and Phillip. In A.D. 6 Archelaus was deposed and Judaea became a Roman province. At this time Tiberius became Caesar, and in A.D. 24 Phillip, the Jewish tetrarch, died and circa 36 John the Baptist was put to death by Antipas. Here again we are in dangerous waters; we know practically nothing of the Baptist except in the New Testament. We do know that after this supposed death of the Baptist, there was a migration of Jewish Gnostics from Judaea who travelled to Rome for protection. Whether this is a recall of the statement of Isaiah that the Jews migrated to the Isles in the West is uncertain. The fabulous Isles of the West was already under water, so we can only conclude that the Isles of Isaiah referred to Britain.

Different Calendars

Here you will see that we are laboring under an astronomical problem: The Jewish calendar differs by many years with the Roman Calendar, so we have to decide which one does the New Testament pseudo-history follow. Then we have to take into account that there is a century difference between the Roman Julian calendar and the Catholic calendar of Gregory of Rome. If the Gregorian calendar is a century too early, and this has been proved by astronomical calculations, we are indeed in deep waters. These facts must be taken into account when dealing with the pseudo-historical basis of the New Testament, more so with the Book of Acts now accepted in the Christian Canon, and which book was known to be spurious even as early as the 3rd Century A.D.

Tiberius died and Caligula ascended the imperial throne in A.D. 37. During the reign of Caligula, as stated earlier, Tacitus reports that the Bishops or Hierophants of Serapis were persecuted and banished from the Roman Empire. Tacitus mentions that there was a great evacuation of priests and philosophers from Rome, and they sailed away towards the East, while some migrated to Egypt. At the same time there was another migration from Jerusalem and Galilee of certain Gnostics who went to Egypt and then to Iberia (Spain).

Roman Persecutions

After the assination of Caligula, Claudius ascended the imperial throne. Mainly by the inspiration of Seutonius, who hated both Claudius and the Serapean Cult, Claudius also became alarmed at the power of the Serapean Bishops. Seutonius, Head of the State Academy on Capitoline Hill in Rome, became very disturbed at the power of the Gnostics and sought their banishment from Rome. So again a migration started, this time of Serapeans and Priestesses of Isis. As explained earlier, Claudius was deified and given the title of "Christus" by the Romans. When Claudius went to Britain, he was acclaimed by the people as the Lord of the Chrestes, and they built a temple to him, and was given the title of Chrestes by the Druids and the petty Kings of Mercia and Sussex.

When Claudius died by poison at the instigation of Agripinna, to get her son Nero on the throne, Nero accused the "followers of a Christus who died by Pontius Pilate". Although this was an excuse, as we all know, it does have a very great bearing upon the events which took place in Britain.

Bishops of Christos

Here we must recall a very important fact: in the times of Tiberius, Caligula, Claudius and then later during the reign of Hadrian (117-138 A.D.), the Bishops of Serapis were also called Bishops of Christos, hence the Gnostics, Serapeans and Chrestians all belonged to the same fraternity. We also know from historical evidence that the term 'Christos' was used throughout the Greek and Roman world for many centuries B.C. as a divine and personal name given to heroes and great men after their death. We suggest that the word Culdich is the Gaelic term for "Chrestes", "The Wanderer" and a pupil on probation for Initiation into the Mysteries of the Christos or Serapis. The main theme of Serapis was the Quest for the Christos (the Divine Soul) and then the achievement of it through Initiation or 'mystical experience'. Again the most important fact to keep in our mind is that the words Christ, Christos, Chrestes were common words throughout the classical world and in the legendary periods long before 325 A.D.

One must also take note that the supernatural gifts ascribed to the Gnostics and Chrestians were far above the traditional known gifts. The Gnostics were known to have an uninterupted succession of miraculous powers: the gift of tongues, of vision, and of prophecy; the power to expel demons, heal the sick, raise the dead, and conferring the powers of immortality, etc. These were fully attested to by historical evidence, whereas the miracles of "Jesus of Nazareth" have come down to us by tradition alone. This was the complaint of Justin Martyr and Lactantinius. Julius Caesar states that the followers of the Druids and Serapis adhered to a very stern Disciplina Arcani involving many years of arduous training.

Jesus Followed an Older Tradition

So far, any form of historical analysis of the first three centuries of the Christian era brings up many problems for the Christian layman. But, the scholars have always known that historically, the religion of Jesus Christ did not stem from him, but that he simply perpetuated the True Religion which had existed from the very origin of the human race, that is to say from the last days of Atlantis. We know very little of the national and religious conditions of Atlantis in its prime, only what is revealed by Plato and many other classical scholars. There are certain Gospel references which make it quite clear that Jesus followed an older tradition, and that he was just repeating these traditions, as most teachers of mankind have stated.

Historians and scholars have always noted the remarkable similarity which exists between Druidism and the Serapean Cult brought to England by the "strangers", and could account for the reason that the first converts of the Culdees were the three Arch Druids of England. The word Gnosticism has a wider connotation than that which is given to it by the Ante-Nicene Fathers of the Christian Church. Gnosticism means "The Knowledge and Experience of the Things That Are", and therefore we find Gnostics within every religious system known.

We find from "Ecclesiastical Antiquities" of the Cymry, that the Silurian Druids claimed that their teachers came from the Isles of the Blest now lostbeneath the Great Ocean some six thousand years ago. This may account for their reason for embracing the "Cult of the Christos" on its first promulgation in Britain. It was Les ap Coel (Lucis) in A.D. 156, who confirmed the Bardic privileges when they became "Chrestians", and this king declared the "Cult of the Christos" to be the national religion of England.

Many of our students have wondered why the scholars still use the term "Christian" instead of "Chrestian". The answer is very simple when you think about it: they are Christians first and scholars afterwards, so it is obvious that they have not done their homework, and like all Christians they never bother to read up on their history!

To understand the origins and background of the religious movement called "Christian", the student has to study religions from Atlantis, the Phoenicians, the Egyptians, the Chaldeans, the Indian; the religions of Greece and Rome in the West, then those of Attis, Adonis, Mithra; the cults of the Essenes and Zealots of Judaea. Those should be studied not in their relationship to Christianity, but rather Christianity's relationship to them. Honest studies should be made on how they influenced and even helped to mold the present form of the Christian religion, the youngest one of them all.

No scholar would be stupid enough to hold that the Mediterranean nations and the ancient American nations, each spontaneously and separately invented similar arts, sciences, habits, and the similar religious myths in both sides of the Atlantic without a land connection existing between them, and that England and Ireland could have been a part of that cultural passage. It is obvious that they must have descended one from the other, or have radiated from one common source — Atlantis.

King Arthur Legend — Not Christian

It is again evident that the story of King Arthur and the Round Table is not Christian, but "Chrestian", and was patterned after the Constitutions of the Platonic Arcane Discipline of Alexandria in Egypt, whereas, the Quest for the Holy Grail is derived from the Isles of the Blest, now sunk beneath the Atlantic. It seems that the Druids were surprised to find that all the religious customs of the Cult of the Christos were the same as their own. This similarity facilitated the merging of the two cultures into one called Culdee.

There is one bit of historical evidence which can and does throw a great light upon the migration of the Strangers to England and the establishment of the Legend of the San Grael. Sigge, son of Fridulph, a pontiff prince of Azoff, a province of ancient Edessa, in the Crimea, 72 B.C., took the name of Odin when he assumed leadership of the early Saxons, and led twelve Peers and a great people across Europe via Northern Germany. Therehe was to establish the religion of Odin as shown in the Norse Edda. They finally reached the shores of Britain and became friendly with the Druids in Scotland and the Celts of Gaul.

Edessa was a stronghold of Gnosticism. Fridulph was the religious pontiff of a group of followers of Mithraism. Bardesanes went to Edessa about A.D. 72 and established a Gnostic Kingdom there. The Romans seized the small kingdom and a second migration travelled to England and became merged with the Culdee Cult. The Supreme Pontiff of the Culdees was called Odin and the God was called Votan; this belief was again reinforced by themigrations of the Vikings, who carried the religion of Votan back to Norway.

Latin Conversion Rejected

The Latin Church from Rome tried to convert the Culdees by missionaries, but they were sent back to Rome. In A.D. 579, the Latin Church met the Culdees at Witby, and Gregory, then a missionary, tried to Latinize the Culdees, but the Culdees replied to Pope Boniface IV: "Your Chair, O Pope, is defiled with heresy. Deadly errors have crept into it; it harbors horrors and impieties. Catholic! the true Catholicism you have lost. The Chrestians and true Catholics are they who have zealously preserved the True Faith, which was in existence from the beginning of time." Unfortunately the petty Kings south of the Humber river sided with Gregory and drove the Culdees into Wales.

The Saxons or Sakain race looked with suspicion on the efforts of Rome to convert them to Latin Christianity, which was founded by Constantine in 325 A.D. The Sakians and Culdees were non-Christian and the Vikings and Picts became merged with the Culdees, for the obvious reason that the Saxons, Culdees and Picts had the same constitutions and doctrines. There is also historical evidence that many more peoples found their way to Britain from Ireland, Scotland, Gaul, Norway, Germany, Spain, all having the same doctrines and constitutions. When William Duke of Normandy landed in England, he brought with him Bishops and Nobles who were Chrestians and Operative Masons, who were definitely opposed to the Latin Form of Christianity. There is further record that the Culdees sent teachers to Gaul, Ibernia, and Germany and perpetuated the True Religion in those lands, but were always persecuted by the Latins.

Continual migrations of the oppressed Catharites, Paulicans and Gogomiles from Central Europe, mainly due to the fierce persecutions of the Latin Popes and the Byzantium emperors, caused their influence to spread all over Europe and eventually they became merged in the migrations to and from Britain. Therefore all those who held to the original Chrestian Church found sanctuary in England. With them came the Knights Templar, the Fratres Lucis, Rosae Crucis and finally the establishment of modern Freemasonry.

True Origins of the Sanctuary of the Gnosis

Therefore, THE SANCTUARY OF THE GNOSIS, formerly known as "The Pre-Nicene Catholic Church" grew out of this ancient church, and is neither Latin Catholic or Eastern Catholic in its traditional sense, but is Culdee/Chrestian/Gnostic in structure and doctrine. It has an Arcane School attached to it in the same manner as did the Chrestians, Gnostics and Culdees and their forerunners, the migrants from Atlantis. From our researches there is no doubt whatsoever that Atlantis was the homeland of the TRUE RELIGION.

In summary, we have shown that the first Chrestian Church was established in England in A.D. 37. It should be clear now that the many ramifications of this True Religion did not begin within the Roman or Greek Empires. It must have had its beginnings in the most remote time of human recorded history. In fact, the outlines of this True Religion can still be traced in the oral histories of every nation and every known civilization that looked to the Lost Atlantis as their homeland.

It would be humanly impossible to give a concrete and specific outline of how this True Religion first founded in Atlantis spread out over our globe as of 9564 B.C. But we feel sure that the serious student who desires to know and understand the beginnings of RELIGION from which the various aspects and types of religious convictions sprung, will find the right sources in the various mythologies, legends, myths and written records available today.

NOTE: This series of articles dealing with the origins of the Christian religion has been requested by a number of our members. The details given are not in anyway complete, owing to the gross misrepresentation of the Church Fathers, but we hope thatlc this series will present a guideline to those who are interested in this subject.

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 61-70

LIBER # 66 DARK CLOUDS LOOMING

Personal & Confidential FIFTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION

The Essene - Gnostic "Chrestian Ekklesia"

CLASSIFIED

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION

ITS HISTORY AND TEACHING

Since the publication of "The Nag Hammadi Library" and Qumran Scrolls much interest has been directed to the study of the early "Gnostic" Church. It can be proved that the present organised church, called Christian, was brought into being at The Council of Nicea, circa 325 AD, and that it persecuted and invented false propaganda against those groups who were classified as "Gnostic". This has led to a situation wherein that which is termed "Gnosticism" is frowned upon and not considered "Christian" and sincere seekers have been turned away by believing that this teaching is something to be avoided when in fact it might contain the very answers to life that they have been seeking.

The Church of the Ascension came into being in the understanding that many Christians could not harmonise themselves with the existing Gnostic terminologies. The present Bishop therefore decided to drop the use of outmoded Gnostic language and to interpret the well-known Christian doctrines in the light of the ancient Gnostic truths (the Ancient Wisdom) and break down the many misunderstandings in an attempt to prove that the true Gnosis does, in fact, supplement the popular Christian doctrines by allowing those who believe these to delve more deeply into the mystical and cosmic aspects of the Christ teachings. By not imposing restrictive dogmas upon its members, The Church of the Ascension can enjoy an acceptance of the basic Christian doctrines from many different points of view. It allows a free enquiry into the doctrines of reincarnation, angels, psychic phenomena and many other subjects and, when viewed in the light of the Gnosis, assures one that the great Father-Mother Parent of mankind allows a free approach to truth within the bounds of the existing cosmic principles.

Let us now look back into the history of the Church of the Ancient Wisdom which has carefully guarded the "Mysteries" of life. Here we will quote from the writings of the late Richard Duc de Palatine, an initiate of several inner orders, who introduced The Pre-Nicene Catholic Church in 1953, the forerunner to The Church of the Ascension. We are sure that you will discover that this history is as fascinating as the mysteries themselves.

"Our sacred Records show that when Atlantis sank in 9564 BC much of this science was lost to the survivors. When our Superior Ancestors (known to the Apostolic Church as the "Angels" who were pilots of "luminous vessels") came to rehabilitate the earth again, they instituted the Rite of Sacrifice, after the various myths had been allowed to gain prevalence. This rite conveyed the nature of matter and form (in one respect matter and form concerns the knowledge of the mortal and immortal nature of man) to a select number of persons who became the Priests, or Guardians of the Great Secret of Man. It was known that before any great event was to take place, the Priests performed the Ritual of Sacrifice and embodied the intention of directional prayer to the "gods" or forces to obey them. During the centuries the rubrics or structure of the Rite of Sacrifice has never changed, although the Gnosis of the matter and form may have been altered, but the Rubrics have never changed.

"When the Chrestians of the Mysteries of Serapis and Christos in AD 44, sought to change their name from Chrestian to that of Christian, the Right of Succession was broken. Similarly, when the new Christian Nicaean Church took over the panoply of the Pagan Mysteries, they accepted the Pagan Rite of Sacrifice and renamed it the "Eucharista". They retained the Matter and Form in its shell form, while the names of the Septenary and Zodiacal Rulers were changed into those of the Apostles, whereas the Gnosis that would have made it operational, was driven out of the Church! From 787 AD the Ritual of Sacrifice has never changed in its Christian form. The power and authority to perform the Rite of Sacrifice is called "The Right of Succession". It was Iranaeus and Eusebius who renamed it "Ordination" and became known in the Church dogma as the "Apostolic Succession" which succession is claimed for the Christian Church by Tertullian of the 3rd Century AD when he says, "Have you an Apostolic Succession? Unfold the line of your Bishops".

"Such a claim is verified by the statement of St Matthew, 21:23, "By what authority dost thou these things, and who gave thee this authority ...." to perform the ancient Rite of Succession. It could not be Jesus, since there is no historical record verifying his existence. There is not one word in the Four Gospels to claim that Jesus founded a Church, or that he gave instruction for the institution of the "Apostolic Succession". The only records in existence within the Vatican, Constantinople, Alexandria and the London Museum state that the "Right of Succession" came into the Apostolic Church from the Gnostic Doctors, sometime during the Second Century AD. The Roman records under Hadrian states that the Gnostics and Chrestians were known as "Bishops of Serapis and Christos" and had been in existence from about 355 BC, and were the Episcopi of the Mysteries of Serapis, whom Ptolemy, King of Egypt, called the old Mysteries of Osiris and Isis. The five Gnostics who were definitely named are, Marcion of Rome, Valentinius of Alexandria, Basilides of Constantinople, Bardesanes of Edessa in South Russia, and Joseph of Arimathea of Avalon, England. Charlemagne of the 8th century revived the Order of the Knights of the Pactio Secreta and its Gnostic/Chrestian Lines of Succession.

"We say that unless a man is initiated or ordained by an Episcopi or Hierophant, who was himself initiated and consecrated by an Episcopi, and so on, right back through the ages to an Hierophant who was initiated and consecrated by a Supreme Hierophant of the Mysteries, who in turn received his Right of Succession from the Mysteries of Atlantis he cannot be a true Episcopi. Heredotus, the Father of History, was shown by the Egyptian Priests 341 wooden figures of their Hierophants of Osiris. Ptolomy the 1st Hierophant of Egypt was present at the commencement of the Serapean Line of Succession.

"There are still records in the Cairo Museum which show Ptolemy attended by the Hierophants of Osiris, consecrating the new Hierophant for Serapis and Christos. Also there is shown a picture of Ptolemy entering the newly completed Temple at Alexandria. We know that the many members of Serapis went to Antioch in Syria, and then spread into Galilee later, to act as the basis for the life and Action of Jeshu ben Pandira in 69 BC.

"G R S Mead in his work "Did Jesus Live 105 BC?" has shown with ample proof that Jeshu ben Pandira (105 to 71 BC) the prototype for Jesus of Nazareth, was initiated and raised to the Highest Degree of a Hierophant of the Mysteries of Serapis (Osiris) and Christos (Horus) in Egypt, and did, upon his return to Jerusalem, confer this initiation upon 12 of his followers with the Right of Succession. H P Blavatskaya and Gerald Massey have also brought forth irrefutable evidences that Jesus lived a century before his Gospel time. According to the Jewish Talmud, Jeshu was the original person who was transformed into Jesus of Nazareth. There is also ample evidence to show that all the Christian (sic) Bishops, were originally Bishops of Serapis and Christos up to the Council of Nicaea of AD 325, after which the Christians claimed to have received their Right of Succession from Jesus. But, we ask, where is the evidence?"

LONDON WC1

Shock survey of Anglican bishops

LONDON: More than half of England's Anglican bishops say Christians are not obliged to believe that Jesus Christ was God, according to a survey published today.

The poll of 31 of England's 39 bishops shows that many of them think that Christ's miracles, the virgin birth and the resurrection might not have happened exactly as described in the Bible.

Only 11 of the bishops insisted that Christians must regard Christ as both God and man, while 19 said it was sufficient to regard Jesus as "God's supreme agent". One declined to give a definite opinion.

The poll was carried out by London Weekend Television's weekly religion show Credo, in which Professor David Jenkins, who has been appointed the next bishop of Durham in north-east England, caused a public furore in April by expressing doubts about basic Christian doctrines.

Professor Jenkins said he did not believe the virgin birth and resurrection were historical events.

Eleven senior churchmen have asked that his consecration, scheduled for July 6, be postponed until after a meeting of the General Synod of the Church of England later in July.

In the poll, 15 bishops said miracles in the New Testament were later additions to the story of Jesus.

A majority said Jesus came back from the dead, either as flesh and blood or as a spirit in human form. But nine said that the resurrection was a "series of experiences" after the death of Jesus that convinced his followers "He was alive among them".

SUNDAY ADVOCATE
November 26, 1989

CLASSIFIED

In another place in his writings Richard mentions that the early Gnostics recognised no central authority for the interpretation of the teachings, but that they followed the Serapean method of interpretation according to their personal mystical experiences. We follow this method today and therefore one can readily see that all mystical cryptograms, allegories and patterns are interchangeable in their meanings, and are only "tools" which the teacher uses to explain the hidden Truths.

To quote Richard again, he says:

"Just as the universe unfolds itself to the student in gradual stages, so does the student realise that he must unfold himself in the same gradual stages. It now dawns upon the mind of the student why his Instructor only reveals bit by bit, fragment by fragment, stage by stage, the essence of the True Religion. The Way of the Cross has now begun. He now knows that his beginning of the Quest was as a Hylic. As the Godhead begins to unfold itself, he becomes a Chrestes. At the moment of Crucifixion he becomes the Christos and finally at the Ascension he becomes the Hierophant of Life."

The following extracts contain the basic Gnostic Teachings and whilst the Duc de Palatine was Sovereign Grand Master of the "Pactio Secreta" the Church of the Ascension does not operate under its umbrella.

"Now, let us deal with the seven main principles which underlie the Chrestian/Gnostic philosophy and which also underlies the tenets and purpose of the "Knights of the Pactio Secreta." We immediately see how the Post-Constantinian Christians deliberately misrepresented the original sources of their doctrines, mainly those of Serapis of Alexandria in Egypt. In this we are not referring to 'a god' nor 'the god', but simply to the Great Naught which is the All, as used by Pythagoras and Plato. By using the prefixes of 'a' and 'the', we mentally conceive of God or Deity as being a personality and all that which it implies. Therefore, the following seven principles lie at the very foundations of all the known Mystery Religions and Mystic philosophies known to man.

1. We identify Deity with Nature and vice-versa. We cannont regard Deity as infinite, omnipresent, omnipotent or even omniscient and eternal unless Man, Nature, and all Creatures are but aspects of IT, and IT informs every atom in Nature and Man. This, in its intellectual concept, infers that Man and Nature are Deity, and man has every right to designate himself as God within the body, since he (Christos) is the WORD MADE FLESH. Those who deride this very logical premise show how utterly devoid they are of any intuitional faculty. God or Deity are pure abstractions, and we treat them as so.

2. Therefore, we must use the idefinable term 'God' to explain that Essential Power which resides within our own Human Temple, and which at the same time resides within our Immortal Soul, who is the Giver and Protector of the human Soul within this normal and limited human Temple. In this we infer the Monad - the Self; the Soul - the three emanations of the Essential Self; and the human Soul - still a further emanation of the Monad within the body. These three aspects are relative in their ultimate sense, but conceptional in their divisional or fragmented sense, they are but the ONE manifesting in many and various ways in the World of Formation.

3. We state that Deity fragments Itself from its unity of being into the many and the many are dispersed or seminally infused into the forms of men. Since the ONE lives in the many and the many live in IT, naturally, this ancient doctrine demands from us the mental conception that Deity and Man are one and the same being. Without this absolute doctrine being accepted by the aspirant, then any effort TOWARDS IMMORTALITY will come to nothing. Deity in this respect is the Great Naught and only becomes 'Something' when its Unit is broken up into the many. This Unity is the UTOPIA, wherein we find the state or situation of Ideal Perfection. It is only when this original Utopian condition is broken up that we find the differentiation of Deity, and the parts scattered throughout the sphere of the cosmos, but still remaining in their ultimate essence One with Deity.

4. We further state that the Units or Monads were compelled through a series of emanations, to enter finally into the tomb of flesh, or beast-like bodies. These reside within the valley of living death (normal mortal bodies) in order that the units may realize their Deific Nature. In this conception of the Chrestian/Gnostic Philosophy, we note that Deity is the Undifferentiated One Essence, which must by necessity be fragmented or crucified into the man (human Souls) so that these manifold Souls may unfold their Deific Nature. This can only be possible by the Souls becoming embroiled in the manifold and various concerns and lures of this world acting through the senses of the body. Through these conditions the entombed part of the human Soul may seek to become realigned with the Essential Monad.

5. We state that this Essential Fragments of Deity hidden within man is the Divine Soul, of which the human Soul or mortal consciousness is the outward and visible representation or part of Deity crucified in matter. This Chresto/

Gnostic conception can be explained through the Alchemistic process: the elements are thrown into the human crucible of flesh, and are crucified or COOKED by the many processes until the rare substance is refined into its original pristine nature. In this we find the real meaning of the "Mass or Ritual of Sacrifice" of the Chresto/Gnostic Ekklesia, and the "Lost Word" of the Masons, bearing in mind that the words, Mass, Crucified, and Masso, have the same meaning.

6. We further state that ALL MEN or ADAM possess one of the Fragments of Deity through and via the Monad (Spiritual Self), which is reflected in the Divine Soul and which in turn is actual in the human Soul of corporeal man. This means that the Spirit, Soul and human Soul of man constitute the Whole Man. That this lowest aspect of Deity within the corporeal body - the human Soul is ever seeking to be restored to the ESSENTIAL WHOLE within Deity. Here we see the reasons why Pythagoras and Plato taught the Laws of Metrics, Geometry and Mathematics. To these philosophers these three laws represented the nature and operations of the Philosophical Trinity of Being, Metrics represents the Monad or Man, the Geometrical is the Divine aspect of man, while the Mathematical is the corporeal man. Of course, this was later transformed into the Trinity of the Christians which in essence means the same thing.

We further maintain that the Monad, Divine Soul and the human Soul have within its threefold aspect and constitution the Powers and Wisdom of Deity awaiting the time when the man within the tomb of flesh will turn from the manifold concerns and lures of this world of form and will seek to manifest this Wisdom in his daily life through personal effort.

7. We state that the ancient method or process whereby man, resident within the dark tenement of the corporeal body, can be restored to his Divine Reality or Cosmic Consciousness is known as the Way towards Immortality. This is a Discipline which has been followed and achieved by all the Mystics and Enlightened Philosophers of all ages, climes and nations in every country."

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION

The Essene - Gnostic "Chrestian Ekklesia"

CLASSIFIED

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION

ITS HISTORY AND TEACHING Part 3

In order for us to impart the Gnosis to orthodox Christians the story of Jesus of the Gospels becomes a beautiful allegory depicting the story of the soul's journey through the experiences of test, trial and temptation - and through its resurrection into a new life until it arrives at the ascension - or the final rising above all earthly pain, suffering and discord. Joseph is the initiate who takes Mary, his divine inspiration, to awaken the Christhood, or child Jesus, within his own heart.

Some students have asked us about the inscription "Jesus Maria" to be found carved upon the wall of the Abbey ruins at Glastonbury. This inscription translated correctly means "Jesus, Saviour of the world" and indicates that the early Celtic Church in Britain knew the proper ciphers of the inner teaching for the attainment of Christhood. Britain, from pre-flood times, has been the repository for the true gnosis,the ancient wisdom,and the Church of the Ascension has carried its succession through from the Patriarchs of old and maintains the Cosmic Teachings intact even though they appear in varied forms. The "Mysteries of Life" are the dreams of the "alternative society" fulfilled in all human affairs. The Way of the Gnosis, holy wisdom, is the Way of Love and Compassion shown to all the creatures in the world. That is why it is hated by the world, because the Truth denies the world the right to exploit others for possession and power.

In the little book "The Church of the Illuminati" Richard writes, "History shows that there were two streams of the Wisdom Tradition deriving from Atlantis; the first migrating to Central Asia and then into India and the Chaldean Mysteries, the second from Atlantis to Egypt (Mysteries of Isis and Osiris) and then to Greece (Mysteries of Eleusis) then into Asia Minor (Mysteries of Attis and Adonis) which were blended with the Mysteries of Mithra and the Essenes. In B.C.120 to 70 Christ came to establish the "Mysteries of Jesus" which was a blend of all the earlier Mysteries. The successors of Christ were the Gnostics and the Essenes (Dead Sea Scrolls) from them came the Catholic Church which destroyed outwardly the Gnostic Movement in the 3rd Century"."

For a reasonable enquiry into the Gnostic Church we recommend students to read "The Gnostic Gospels" by Elaine Pagels. The modern

Church of the Gnosis allows one to experience the journey of a soul into freedom - a soul which demands an answer from the God it is asked to follow; it is not bound by hard and fast creeds or a dogmatic theology that decrees that one is a "heretic" if one does not blindly follow the dogmas.

The mysteries in Britain have taken on many forms, for example, to quote the Duc de Palatine again, "Joseph of Arimathea represents the state of man before the Fall. The Cycle of Merlin and Arthur is the exoteric cycle, the Cycle of Gawain and Lancelot represent the esoteric and Percival and Galahad represent the Hidden Church. In this, the Soul becomes the abiding-place of the Divine Presence. The Castle of the Grail is the human temple of the Holy Spirit through the Soul and in the Gnostic Mass of the Holy Grail, the Celebrant is the Soul itself, 'a priest forever after the Order of Melchisedek'."

Where does our present authority come from ? "The present Grand Hierophant (that is - the late Richard, duc de Palatine) is also a Gnostic Bishop and claims an unbroken line of succession from the College of Antioch, which owed its existence to St Paul and he in turn claimed authority from Jeshu Ben Pandira, who in turn was a Grand Hierophant of the Pleroma (the then Brotherhood and Order of the Pleroma), links twelve lines of the Apostolic Succession in his person. This constitutes the Sacerdotal Section."

The Pre-Nicene Church became the Sacerdotal Section for the above mentioned Order in which the present Presiding Bishop of the reformed Church of the Ascension was consecrated Auxiliary Bishop. Richard travelled to California and reformed the Sanctuary of the Gnosis and set up the Chrestian Ekklesia. Thus this Church carries on its rightful succession and is also used as a channel for the teachings of the ancient Sun Priest Kings - the Pre-flood Patriarchs.

In his writings on "The Chrestian Ekklesia" Richard goes on to say:

"Religious Turmoil Now and Then

"It is interesting to note that even in this century the secular churches are losing their grip upon the imagination of the people, and instead of teaching the people the basic principles of the "Way of Life", they have taught them to become believers only. Now, the people are turning to modern "Mystery Cults"in the hope of salvation. The secular church uses fear to retain the obedience of the people, whereas the Mystery Cults use Hope for the same purpose. History does repeat itself.

"By the beginning of the 3rd Century, B.C. the Gods were thoroughly and finally discredited, and the people of the Mediterranean world were in a religious turmoil. Only the few were eligible to enter the many Mystery Schools, but the bulk of the people were left without any real guidance, and the social life became very harsh indeed. The time was ready for a change of direction, a return to the palmy days of the past when the Gods did walk amongst men and taught and guided them. The rituals used by the temples were purely perfunctory and devoid of any philosphic background, but depended upon tradition and custom alone. The state of affairs prevailing in those days is akin to the situation now existing today.

"In 356 B.C., there was born to Phillip, King of Macedonia, a son of questionable parentage, Alexander. His mother was a priestess in the Temple, and when she married Phillip, she was big with child. He accepted the child as his son, owing to the prophecy that a Great King would be born in a palace where two crows would sit. The prophecy was fulfilled, the son was born, and he was given Aristotle to be his tutor. Phillip of Macedonia dreamed of a united Grecian Empire, with one culture, one religion, and the purification of the Mysteries.

"Alexander the Great

"Aristotle was an Initiate of the Mysteries of Bacchus of Eleusis and Thebes of Macedonia, and he encouraged Alexander through all his conquests in the principles of the Mysteries. Aristotle and the friends around Alexander soon realised that this was not an ordinary person, he was a God. Alexander eventually conquered all of Asia and then Egypt, and under the wise guidance of Aristotle, Alexander respected and protected the various fertility cults which existed in Asia, as being variations of the One religion from Atlantis. He ordered a new Mystery School to be set up at Alexandria in Egypt. It was called the Mysteries of Serapis, and again under the advice of Aristotle, he drew to Serapis the highest and most noble elements from all the Mysteries and embodied them in Serapis.

"The Hierophants of Ptah, Osiris, Isis, and Horus in Egypt hastened to link themselves with Serapis, and then Deified Alexandra, giving him the ancient titles of Office - Soter and Christos. Alexander was the first Initiate of Serapis, and passed through the grades of Chrestes, Chrestos, finally to become a Christos - a Just Man. By becoming an Initiate he made sure that the ancient Law regarding the archaic Ritual of Sacrifice was restored, and the Rubrics were purified of all the dross which had accumulated over the centuries. He restored the mysteries until the Rubrics of the Ritual of Sacrifice was the same in intent and form as it was some 7000 years before. He made sure that the archaic matter and form were strictly adhered to. So Serapis in Alexandia became the Greek centre of the Ancient Mysteries.

"Sons of the Sun - Servants of the Servants of God

"As we have mentioned before, each Mystery Cult and School claimed the Right of Succession derived from Atlantis before the deluge. As this Right was backed-up by the Right of Succession from Venus, the Emperors, Kings, Princes, and Hierophants and Priest-Bishops had every right to call themselves Sons of the Sun, since they were all initiated into their particular Office through the same Ritual. It was from Serapis that the Roman Popes and Bishops could claim the divine right of the Priesthood of Melchizedek - he who lived before the Flood of 9564 B.C. This same right was also claimed by the Emperors or Kings of Europe, and for the same reason.

"We think it now becomes quite clear that the basis for all temporal and spiritual power and authority stems from this archaic Ritual of Sacrifice and the Rubrics combining matter and form. These alone granted a man the supreme right to become a God on earth, and at the same time an Agent of God on earth. His responsibility was to protect, teach and encourage the Earthly God to attain the stage of becoming a Divine God. Initiation or ordination means the same thing - the beginnings and finishings on the one hand, and on the other, the ritual links the candidate with God directly.

"This is the real and only meaning of the term for a King or Bishop, that he is a Servant of the Servants of God. He is given the power to be a servant, and through his initiation, consecration or coronation he is linked to the God. At the same time the God quickens his inner perceptions and assists to draw forth his latent powers to rule and guide the Children of God entrusted to his care. Now it will be seen,in our analysis of the conditions prevailing at the beginning of the 7th century B.C. when the secular priests separated from the Initiate Priests, the secular priests were not initiated and granted the Powers of God, but were simply nominated priests by the State. This same condition exists today among the Protestant Church who broke away from the Initiating Bishop of the Catholic Tradition."

Regarding the Priest King Melchisedek, it is interesting to note that the office assigned to him in the Western Mystery Tradition is akin to that given to the Kumaris in the East. In this light the Order of Melchisedek is no other than that Order of Sanat Kumara stemming from pre-flood times. Abraham (or a Brahmin) is seen as celebrating the Ritual of Sacrific (the now known Mass) along with Melchisedek to whom he owed allegience. This Melchizedek is given much importance in the Dead Sea Scrolls and in the books found at Nag Hammadi.

---ooOoo---

There are those who scoff at the idea of "mysteries". If those who invented the atom bomb had understood Divine Law they would have been more cautious. If those who are now experimenting with biological processes could foresee the horrors they are able to bring about, understood the Sacred Science, they would approach life with reverence.

All human suffering, the horrors of war, deformed bodies and retarded mental states are brought into experience because humans believe that they know what is best for themselves.

If humans understood the "mysteries of life" they would know that all that which they seek is a process already waiting to be released from within.

The Prince Chief Adept
(Sovereign Order of the Solar Circle)

CLASSIFIED

In just the same way as a transformation takes place in the life of a butterfly, so must a complete transformation take place in the life of the one following along "the way". Just as the butterfly lives no longer as a caterpillar or a chrysalis so must the disciple no longer think or act as a "mortal" but should begin to think and act in accordance with the concept of immortality. The real and immortal cannot be experienced whilst one accepts the reality of the transient and mortal experiences or the concepts of the average 'human' being. This can be achieved only by undergoing a strict discipline of re-programming one's whole mental outlook. In order to be "born again" one has to drop completely all the dross of the past and live anew with an entirely new concept of life and the universe. It is the church's responsibility to help you do this. The advanced techniques for helping the students were to be found only in the so-called "mystery schools". This church stemming from the traditional lines is able still to transmit the ancient secrets to the prepared candidate although on the surface, we function as an ordinary institution.

Let us continue with more information from the pen of Richard:-

"Man - The Source of All Knowledge and Power

The Gnostic evolution of Man as the God Incarnate is for the serious student who desires to know and realise the mysteries of his own being and to know that he is one with the God of ALL. He thus seeks to awaken the latent spiritual powers that exist within himself as the God Incarnate that will change his whole life. This is the very essence and purpose of the True Religion which has existed from the very origin of the human race and is, therefore, the natural heritage of all people.

Thus, the mystical and occult knowledge, including all the known aspects of ESP, were possessed by the ancient Mystery Schools of Egypt, Greece, the Americas, and by the Druids of England. It is the same teaching which inspired Pythagoras, Plato, Socrates, Solon, Jesus, the Buddha, and the Great Gnostic Doctors of the first three centuries of the Chrestian era, including Marcion of Rome, Valentinius and Basilides of Alexandria, and Cerenthus. All of these represented the latter part of the Gnostic cycle which had begun with Pythagoras.

66 12

The Crestian Religion and Philosophy

Historical research reveals that the Chrestian Religion was divided into two streams of activity: (a) The Psychic and Occult sciences, referring to the science of the Gnostic or Hermetic Sciences which are, and have been for untold ages, hidden from the vulgar mind. This condition exists for a very good reason. This knowledge would never be appreciated neither by certain of the selfish educated classes, who would misuse it for their own profit, and thus turn the True Religion into black magic, nor by the uneducated, who would not understand it.

(b) The Mystical Gnosis, that stream of Chrestian activity which seeks to achieve the object of the Psychic and Occult Sciences within man's own self here and now. Its adherents claimed, and still claim, that God is all things and that man being God Incarnate has all powers and faculties latent within him. That it is through a system of purification,moral and ethical discipline, that these powers shall become manifest within his personality.

The Influence of Serapis

From the time of Pythagoras to that of Proclus in the 6th Century A.D. (who was considered the last of the Chrestian and neo-Platonic philosophers) the power, influence and occult abilities of the Initiates really disturbed first Republican Rome and then Imperial Rome. The list of Initiates of Serapis and Mithra kept the cultures of Greece Rome and Egypt in a ferment with their discoveries and scientific thinking to such an extent that the various rulers tried to suppress them, but to no avail. Gibbon in his "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" clearly shows that the Initiates of Serapis and Mithra were the most cultured, advanced and ethical people in the Roman World.

Arthur Findlay in his "The Curse of Ignorance" could not but admit that the Initiates of Serapis and Mithra were the most advanced thinkers of the Classical World, he relates numerous instances where these initiates discovered many of the scientific foundations which are accepted today. They were masters of the occult sciences, the fore-runners of many of our recent scientific theories.

The Rise of Popular Gnosticism

It is considered by modern investigators of Gnosticism that this cult began in the latter part of the 1st Century A.D., and that it was an enemy of the Christian Religion according to the Ante-Nicene Fathers of the Christian Church. To make this claim is historically unsound, since we now know that Gnosticism existed for centuries before the Religion of Christ became a world power under Constantine the Great after the Church Council of Nicaea, in 325 A.D.

We now know that the various popular Gnostics existing between the 1st to the 4th Century A.D., were first initiates of the Mysteries of Serapis, but, on becoming Hierophants, they began to teach their own version of the True Religion according to their own mystical experiences. The occult and mystical feats performed by these Chrestians astounded the Christian Fathers to such an extent that they feared them.

They were feared for their ability to perform wonders of all kinds, and were therefore considered to be pagan Magicians.

The Christians who followed Jesus (who in the original texts was referred to as "The Fisherman" - which term we intend to use in this article) resented the fact that their philosophical and mystics brothers could accomplish greater "miracles" than those recorded of their saviour by tradition alone. Hence the enmity between the Initiates of Serapis and Mithra and the followers of the Fisherman of Galilee. It was at Antioch that the followers of the Fisherman began to call their cult "Christian", hence the cleavage between the Chrestians of the True Religion and the Believers of Christ.

Chrest and Christ

All probationary pupils for the Mysteries of the True Religion were called "Chrestes", that is to say a Wanderer. Before the pupil was allowed to awaken his own innate Spiritual Powers he was obliged to pass through three stages that of the PURIFICATION of the whole personality, and then through a series of tests and trials to awaken the Christ (Soul) powers within himself. This led to the stage of becoming ILLUMINED, or overshadowed by his own Indwelling God. It was by the activation of his Divine Nature while still living a perfectly normal life in the world, that he gained control over the inner forces of Nature and finally became an ADEPT OF LIFE.

Once having passed through the Inner School, he gained proficiency in his new-found powers and became a Hierophant. He then had the right to initiate others into the same system which he himself had undergone and to give training and discipline to others. By becoming a MYSTAE or an ILLUMINED ADEPT OF LIFE, he granted to himself the power to see and relive the past, to understand the events of the present, and to foresee the events which are to come. He was then given the honoured title of being a CHRISTOS - he who becomes the Ever-Becoming One - A MASTER AMONG MEN.

Transformation in 325AD

The original Chrestians had gained control over the forces in Nature by means of PISTIS or Practical Knowledge and Understanding of these Forces. They were therefore able to command the gods to obey them. It was the everlasting complaint of the followers of the Fisherman that they were unable to perform the miracles of the Chrestians. Thus began a period of persecution of the Chrestians by the latter-day Christians. And so was brought into being the vicious conflict between the believers in the Christos as the Divine and Immortal Soul and the believers in a Christ as a man in time.

In 325 A.D., Emperor Constantine called all the "bishops" of the Cult of the Fisherman to a Council at Nicaea. There he ordered the carnal Bishops to formulate a creed based upon a "history" of a Saviour personified by Jesus of Nazareth as the only Son of God. A few years later, when Constantine's orders had been carried out, he then proceeded to destroy the Chrestians. The reason for this lies in the fact that the Chrestians, who followed the Gnostic Way of Life, believed that every man was a Son of God and that Jeshu the Fisherman was a JUST MAN who demonstrated the innate power of God within every human being.

For the Chrestians - the Christ was the mighty power of man's Soul, the embodiment of God on earth or within man's nature. For the Chrestians - Christ was the Hero-God and not a person. They believed that through a discipline of one's human nature it could become the earthly mirror of the God in earth, and that once he had been overshadowed by the Divine Soul, man could control all the mathematical and geometrical forces in Nature and perform all kinds of wonders.

The Christians of Nicaea and Antioch denied the possibility that man is a reflection of God on earth, and called the scientific results of the Chrestians the work of the Devil. They demanded of Constantine the destruction of the Chrestians as heretics who were attempting to pervert the Christian Religion. The Ante-Nicene Fathers of the new religion of Christ overlooked the fact that the Chrestians (commonly called Gnostics through ignorance) existed many centuries before the Christian Fathers. Therefore logically, one must call the Christians the heretics against the True Religion, the adherents of which were then known as Chrestians.

The Destruction of the True Religion

As soon as Constantine made the Christian Religion the RELIGIO LICTA of the Roman Empire, and after the Ante-Nicene Fathers had muzzled the original foundations of the Chrestian Cult, they destroyed everything pertaining to the True Religion. Adherents of the Chrestian Religion were ruthlessly sought out and destroyed. Great libraries were burned and a political religion - a Religion of Power, instead of a Religion of Wisdom - was made the key note for the next 1600 years.

The accumulated knowledge of the True Religion, accumulated over vast centuries of time, was destroyed by the Christians for fear that it would destroy the uniqueness of the Religion of Jesus after 325 AD Branches of the Ageless Truth which we now call ESP, Occultism, Spiritism, Psychology, Philosophy, Masonry, and science, were forbidden. The Light of the Gnosis as denominated by Pythagoras in the 6th Century BC was eliminated by the fanatic and ignorant Christians. From the 4th Century AD, the whole of Europe was overshadowed by a Dark Age of ignorance and gross superstition. Gone were the Centers of Wisdom. Mankind was forbidden to investigate the natural forces of nature and within himself. No man was permitted to follow the Star of his own Illumination. All people had to accept the Church and the Christian Bible as the only means of salvation. "

In this Light, in our church, we are Chrestians first and Christian by result of our expressing the Son of God on earth. (Editor)

66 15

CLASSIFIED

The Ritual of Sacrifice that is spoken of in these papers is no other than the present day ritual commonly called The Mass or Eucharist. In the Chrestian Ekklesia, however, in the United States of America this ritual still carries the original name and contains references to former Gnostic Saints and Teachers.

In the ritual practised in this church the common title is preferred as it consists of a modified form of the Ritual of Sacrifice more acceptable to a varied congregation. We do not practice this ritual in the belief that it is the only way to God-Realisation. We realise that there are groups with very practical awakening techniques but we still adhere to the ways we find effective in our work.

The Mass, to us, represents a very powerful personal visual drama of the movement of Cosmic Forces and Energies working in the lives of the disciples or devotees following the teaching. It represents the "sacrifice" of the Universal God, or Father-Mother Principle, continually supplying nourishment and spiritual sustenance to all that which It has brought forth from within Itself, and shares It's own Glory with all the "creatures" (or component parts of Itself) It emanates within the structure of Its own compound form - the "creation".

In order to experience the realisation of the continual Cosmic Process the disciple, in turn, has to "sacrifice" his own sense of the "illusion of isolated ego-identity" and to participate in this process in order that the "Kingdom of Heaven", or the Order of the Perfect Man (order of Melchisedek), or the Christos, be manifest on this planet. This two-way sacrifice is depicted in the ceremony of "the Mass". The wording and movements of the service act as a "text-book", or aid at this level which enables one to consolidate the understanding of being at one with the Universal Whole. Richard, Duc de Palatine writes, ".....each human Soul is a cell in the body of the One, and therefore, for the whole to be One, each cell must conquer the conditions which keep it apart from the One - God. Meaning in effect: God and Man are one and the same Being. Therefore, buried within the heart of each one of us, being a fragment of the Whole, is hidden the Lord of Divine Life, and He dwells there to guide, the Guardian which hath shined in our hearts. This Real Self abides within our Inner Shrine, patiently waiting for us to find Him and give recognition to His presence there, then, once recognising that we are a Divinity, we must do battle with the Ruler of the Body, conquer him and arise out of the sepulchre and ascend to our original Home."

"God is Love" writes St Paul, therefore all creation is the love of God in continual expression. Each individual must awaken this Divine Love within the heart (the Spiritual Centre or Shrine) to realise immortality. When this immortality has been realised one then becomes a Prince of Light within the Great Invisible Empire of Light and is a co-worker with God. The Church of the Ascension is an outer school belonging to this Empire which is also known as the Hidden Church.

In the small book "The Hidden Church of the Illuminati" Richard writes "This Hidden Church or Empire is governed in the same manner as the Kingdom of Great Britain is governed. You have the King and His Ministers of the various departments of Life, they are called the PRINCES OF LIGHT. Each Prince has under Him a descending ladder of Minor Officials, these being the Initiates ranging from the 1st Degree to the 4th degree. Each one of these Initiates has around him a smaller group of pupils whom he directs in the business of the King, they are known as the YOUNGER BROTHERS whilst the Initiates are the ELDER BROTHERS. Each Member of the Army owes complete obedience to the King of the Invisible Empire of Light.

The King rules two kingdoms, yet in reality the two kingdoms are but the life and form aspects of the one Kingdom of Light. So from age to age from the Invisible Church a great Prince of Light becomes an AMBASSADOR of the King and descends to earth to assume a mortal body in order to teach and help mankind along the Path of Light. These Princes have come to every civilisation and restated in the form and language suitable to the people of the Kingdom of Earth the age-old fact oof his eventual restoration to his Spiritual Home.

In every century, seven of these Ambassadors descend to earth and are responsible for the quickening of the seven departments of man's earthly endeavours, they deal with: the LEADERSHIP, TEACHING, PHILOSOPHIC, THE ARTISAN, THE MYSTIC and the ORGANISATION aspects. Each Ambassador may be a pupil of a Master or an Initiate and it is his or her responsibility to sound the key-note for the new age, in the main these embodiments of the Light come silently and fulfil their task and then pass away before the majority of the people realise that God has walked amongst them and the great opportunity they have missed."

---ooOoo---

THE REBIRTH OF THE TRUE RELIGION

"It was due to the humanistic revival of art, literature, occultism and learning in Europe between the 14th and 16th Century, that western man began to question the foundations of the Christian religion, the religion of power, oppression and degradation of the Human Spirit. With this awakening of the human intellect and the desire for Truth, the power of both East and West aspects of the Catholic Church declined, and a new age of Wisdom and Spiritual Freedom became possible. The Christian religion has always stood for the privileged few: the bishops, priests, and monks, assisted by the kings and a very corrupt aristocracy. Assisted by the gross superstition of the Church, the majority of the people were kept in abject poverty and ignorance.

THE EMERGENCE OF THE GNOSIS

The 15th Century saw the re-establishment of Centres of Learning and Wisdom. It saw the coming forth of the True Religion with its Gnostic Philosophy under the guise of the Knights Templar, the Fratres Lucis, the Rosicrucians, the Illuminati, Freemasonry and Theosophy. In spite of the proscriptions of the Catholic and Protestant Churches, the Higher Science of the Spirit gained in every century. The Mystics, the Alchemists, medicine, science, etc., became free to talk of and to publish their findings. From the 14th Century to the present-day we have seen the re-emergence of the True Religion under many forms, in spite of the efforts of the Established Christian Religion to stem the upsurge of the Wisdom of the Ages."

****

THE ARCANE DISCIPLINE

In all the Mysteries from archaic times, the central theme of the teachings was the Divine Nature of Man. The central fact was never changed from one century to the next, although the names and legends have been altered, the main theme is always the same, and unless an organisation embodies this central Doctrine, we know that they are not in line with the Esoteric Tradition of the Ages. The Secret Schools, that is to say, the Inner Schools beyond the public Mysteries of Egypt, Greece and Rome were neither fraternal nor political, nor were there ideals the same as modern Masonry or Rosicrucians. They were essentially philosophic and religious institutions, those who were admitted into the Secret Schools were consecrated to the service of the Hidden Church of the Illuminati (the Illumined Adepts and Men).

It is known that the Christian Mysteries were also known as the Disciplina Arcani (or the Arcane Discipline) from the 3rd century AD onwards. These mysteries have been preserved by the Church of the Ascension although up-dated to fill the needs of truth seekers today. For an introduction to the understanding of the nature of the Disciplina Arcani see "The Awe-Inspiring Rites of Initiation" by Edward Yarnold, S.J., St Paul Publications.

"To all these envoys of light of the one inner community was joined the most important of all agents, Christ Jesus himself, in the midst of time as a Priest-King after the Order of Melchizedek" (Karl von Eckhartshausen)

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION

CLASSIFIED

ITS HISTORY AND TEACHING - PART 6

The true mysteries are the expression or explanation of the "things there are". The initiate desires, solely, to know "What is Truth?" One cannot indulge in the hypothesis of things as we believe or wish them to be. We firstly desire to know the answer to the question, "How is the Universe?" - honesty lies in accepting "Everything is how it is". The problem arises in the discovering of the Truth of a particular statement being True. It can be learned that Divine Love does not conform to any human pattern either morally, legally or politically and any attempt to fit It into these patterns shows a lack of understanding of Divine Laws.

The Principles of Life, Light and Love are not possessed by any one religion, teacher or group. That which constitutes the true nature of the Universe is fixed and constant. To understand this nature one has to live according to the precepts of those Elder Brethren who have strived before to learn of It and proved It in their lives by example.

The Dammapada which is the sacred book of the Buddhists says, "Those who who abide in the world of right thought see truth in the real and untruth in the unreal. They arrive at Truth."

In the Bhagavad-Gita of the Hindus it is written, "When thy mind shall escape from this tangle of delusion, then thou shalt rise to indifference as to what has been heard and shall be heard."

The Tao Te King of the far eastern religions states, "The Tao of Heaven has no favourites. It gives to all good men without distinction."

In the Epistle to the Hebrews in the Christian Scriptures it is also written, "God who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets."

The revered St. Augustine (AD 354-430) being one of the outstanding leaders of the Historic Church, but it is not commonly known that he stated that Christianity was the continuity of the Pagan mysteries, he said, "What is nowadays called the Christian religion was in existence among the ancient peoples and has continually existed from the very origin of the human race, until, Christ Himself having appeared, they began to designate as "Christian" the True Religion which had hitherto been in existence."

66 19

Jesus said, "The Kingdom of Heaven is like a treasure hid in the field, which a man having found has hid, and for the joy of it goes and sells all whatever he has, and buys the field."

Men join orders of monks and spend many years in prayer and meditation and yet do not find what they seek. Many people belong to some sect or religion but still remain tossed to and fro by the unpleasant tides of suffering in the world.

The teachers of "true religion" dare to cut across all recognised forms of dogma and doctrine to announce that which is Truth, in the face of the long-standing organised bodies who refuse to accept new revelations and a widening awareness of spirituality.

Divine Knowledge comes only to him who dares to stand on his own feet and face the dazzling light of Truth. Truth is that which strips every vestige of human error from the disciple leaving his mortal vesture to the mercy of the consuming flame of Divine Love. Only by forfeiting one's mortal attachments can one attain immortality. Such is the nature of true religion which accounts for the continual rounds of wars, hunger and suffering still rife in a world with four, so-called, great religions - with Christianity claiming that it follows the "saviour of the world". He came two thousand years ago and the organisations who claim to follow him are still groping for answers. Few there be who find Truth for there are but few who are honest to themselves.

Does the Church of the Ascension teach the Doctrine of Reincarnation? We accept the remarks made by Richard, Duc de Palatine, in his little Book "You and Reincarnation" he says, "Every school which is based upon the Occult Philosophy or Gnosis of the Ages presents its own version of this controversial doctrine of Reincarnation. This, however, does not mean that the reader should accept any one of these before he has a chance to evaluate the other versions. Thus, when we speak of the Pleroma, we are referring to the whole range of human endeavour within the mortal and immortal spheres of man's life. ..... all through the centuries great minds have pondered upon this question of man and his immortality. But owing to the great secrecy surrounding the Incarnation and Resurrection of the human soul within the Pleroma of life, very little practical knowledge is available to the Doctrine of Reincarnation.

"There is the claim that Reincarnation was not taught by the Christ who was humanised and personifieed after 325 AD. However, there is sufficient proof to show that Reincarnation was not taught to the common faithful, but was an esoteric doctrine taught to the Perfecti of the Christian era. But this doctrine of the great Christian Bishop Origen, of the second century, was declared heretical by Menas, Patriarch of Constantinople during a provincial synod in 543 AD, while the General Council did not meet until ten years leter. There is every evidence that the Doctrine of Reincarnation was never questioned by the Christian Church until then. Earlier it had always been accepted as a part of the Christian Revelation by the whole Church, of which Origen was a leading Bishop and exponent."

The view of the Church of the Ascension on all matters spiritual is that we maintain that the Holy Catholic Church of Christ embraces all that has ever been revealed to man for his enlightenment and search for Truth. In spite of the many facts about the early church coming to light (by archaellogist, the Qumrun Scrolls and the Nag Hammadi Library) the established bodies still refuse to accept the true history of their beginnings. Therefore, whether or not we be viewed as heretical, we consider ourselves an essential part of the Modern Church and we are willing to co-operate with all churches, groups or societies engaged in the "spiritual" enlightenment of mankind.

The Keynote of every ceremony, discussion and meeting in the Church of the Ascension is Divine Love. "This Beauty, this Love," writes Richard, "This God which is imprisoned within the personality of man begins to awaken to his real Heritage, and in order to realise its own Beauty, the Divinity remains hidden in the secret recesses of the Soul of Man. The Kingdom of God and Beauty is not of this world of ever-changing forms, but for man to find this Kingdom he must advance inwards and upwards, penetrating into his own Sanctuary of Love. If man has the strength to accomplish this feat, he must close his eyes to the terrestrial things, he must realise that the things he sees and touches in the third dimension are simply uimages, traces and adumbrations of the Superior Self, that Self which is the one with the Soul of All-God."

When we have sought after every channel of the Scriptures, sought out many teachers, having entered the path of the mysteries, undergone every initiation - the Baptism of the Spirit, the trials and temptations of the wilderness, the death and resurrection of mortal pursuits and reached the final ascension, or mastery, over all earthly conditions - we arrive at the Kingdom of Love, Agape. "If I speak with the tongues of men and of angels," writes St. Paul, "but have not love (agape) I am a noisy gong or a tinkling cymbal. And if I have prophetic powers, understand all mysteries and all knowledge, and if I have all faith as as to remove mountains, but have not love, I am nothing. If I give my body to be burned, give away all I have, but have not Love, I gain notheng." Love being the final consummation of all things, because God verily is Love Itself, it is the only teacher and master of all the true Sons of God - the Hidden Church and the Kingdom of the Christ upon this planet and everywhere within the Cosmos.

The Kingdom of Heaven is not some wish to be fulfilled in the future. If it is an Eternal State it must already be here. This state of wholeness and Love Fulfilment is permanent within the heart of man. Man has only to give It expression and let Its Principles govern every action.

The Hidden Church is the "Pattern shown on the Mount". The manifestation of Perfect Expression. Heaven is always "at hand", always in evidence to those who know. It is forever near to protect and guide the faltering steps of an unbelieving society whose precepts are based upon the numerous inventions of the human mind.

"The original Gnosis was, and is, a system of self-knowledge wherein all aspects of human thought and endeavour are studied together. From this all-embracing approach to life, the Gnosis leads to a meaningfull life. "

"Therefore, let no reader ..... think that we are detracting from the teachings of the Christian Jesus. Far from it. What we are trying to do is to reveal the original stratum of the Gnosis and the materialising process which took place after 325 AD. Once we are able to discard the carnal ideas which have been imposed upon the original teachings of the Nazarene, there is revealed to us a wonderful system of self-redemption and final ascension to our immortal estate."

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

"The Church of the Ascension - Its History and Teaching" written and edited by the Presiding Bishop.

London

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 61-70

LIBER #67 CLOUDBURST

Personal & Confidential FIFTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

Dear Companions

Here is an extract from a letter dated July 25th 1962, written by a Martinist Grand Master, French born & raised, but presently living (1990) in an English-speaking country. He is writing to a Lodge Master about the question of instruction for use at meetings:

> "...you will find the instruction problem quite difficult. This stems from a fundamental difference in outlook between the French and the Anglo-saxons. The French are not unduly fond of systematic instruction, they are highly individualistic and, as a nation which has for a thousand years indulged in philosophical speculation, they tend to prefer elaborating and formulating their philosophy of life through their own research and intellectual pursuits. Thus, in the French Lodges, they deliver in turn self-prepared lectures dealing at length with a chosen subject. The real purpose of the lecture is less to impart knowledge to the listeners than to enable the author to crystalise his thoughts on the point. On the other hand, the British and, to a larger extent still the Americans, need to be "spoon-fed". It is my experience that when volunteers are solicited for the preparation of a lecture, there is a conspicuous lack of enthusiasm. My (name of country) Brethren are not fond of supplying the intellectual effort necessary for studying by themselves. The French system of working in which members present a thesis on a specified subject which forms the basis of a discussion and is then criticised from the Master's chair will not really find favour in either the US or Britain. Furthermore, the French can afford not to present in a systematic way the first elements of Martinism because doctrinal sources are available in French: All the works of St-Martin and numerous other books on the subject. These are recommended to the student and guide him in understanding and in the preparation of his lectures.."

This brings me to this point: In the six years we have been operating we have received three letters from members on the subject, but we suppose some members must discuss amongst themselves that, while our Libers are interesting, they are, nonetheless, somewhat 'disjointed' and what they would prefer would be a systematic flow that would take them literally from the cradle to the grave. While we can appreciate the merits of this "spoon-feeding" idea, this is not what we are about! The 'announcement' we run from time to time to inform sojourners about our program goes thus:

"THE INITIATIC TEACHINGS

We are the custodians of a library of arcane manuscripts and documents written by the Sages which articulate the genuine teachings of the Alchemists, Gnostics, Kabalists, Rose+Croix and Martinists. We are making these timeless teachings available to all sincere seekers who hunger and thirst for spiritual enlightenment, who wish to live a life of purpose, meaning, happiness and success..."

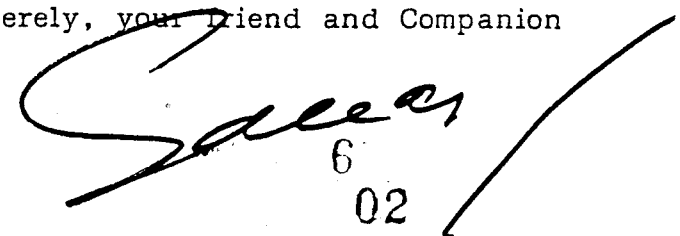
As we state many times in the Libers themselves and on the cover of every one we are not the authors of the material. We do not alter any of it, nor is it our intention to boil it down, rehash and formulate a step by step program to be "spoon-fed" to students. We know of organizations who issue a life-time of material, where the sojourner repeatedly gets told "...that is enough on this subject for the time being, to go any further now would be to overstep our boundaries, you must wait until the next degree when more will be said..." Of course in the "next degree" you are given another spoonful then referred once again to the next degree and so on ... (and very often the topic is nothing more than something quite basic which one can go into a book shop or library and find well covered in a dozen books). THIS IS NOT OUR STYLE! We will do nothing more or less than what we set out to do ... and which is meeting with the overwhelming approval and acclaim of the vast majority of members.

We have a very wide membership so it is only natural that some persons will be particularly interested in specific topics but "you can't please all the people all the time" ... that is why we try to present a variety of subject matter. In this way, over a six-month period, every member will have a compendium of material to work with. (We even try to inject a little humour now and then)!

Ours is an adult program for adults and most of our members are adult and mature. Each Brother must extract what he can use ... and leave the rest. Most Brethren have an index book and they write the headings of subjects that interest them and list the Liber and page number for easy revision.

Yet again we say to you: It is not what you know but WHAT YOU ARE that matters. Teachers can only point the way. The student must do the work. Please receive our fraternal salutations and we pray God's blessings upon you as the Path steepens.

Sincerely, your friend and Companion



6

02

T H E

A R C A N E

D I S C I P L I N E

by

Richard, Duc de Palatine

CLASSIFIED

FORWARD

Since this little book was written over 20 years ago by the late Richard, Duc de Palatine the content has influenced many new groups and has encouraged the quest for the "hidden gnosis of the soul".

We have decided to re-publish the thoughts and findings of a firmly established Prince of Light and master of many Disciplines in the hope that they will give hope and a new impetus to those who strive with the limitations of the human self.

The Arcane Discipline reveals the true path of the soul to the Inner Light and shows the reason why so many students of the quest fail to achieve real mastership of this planet's resisting forces.

The work still carries on and will continue to do so until all mankind reaches its true purpose here - the manifestation of the Perfect Godhead in every being. Throughout the ages our work remains protected from the changing scenes of humanly contrived systems and our Sanctuary receives the true intitiate when he or she is ready to take a deeper look into the truth and reality of the Permanent qualities of the Divinity within.

Let us pray that the reader will discover something of value - a precious pearl to add to the countless treasures of heaven which sincere disciples gather on the way.

Grand Archon of the Brotherhood & Order of the Pleroma

THE ARCANE DISCIPLINE
by
Richard, Duc de Palatine

Personal & Confidential

INTRODUCTION

CLASSIFIED

The purpose of this book is to show the reason for the lack of purpose and achievement which one finds in the many systems of spiritual thought. It has been found that in most if not all systems there is to be found a lack of 'The Arcane Discipline' which has been proved to be the foundation stone of all spiritual endeavour. We have further endeavoured to show that the Brotherhood and Order of the Pleroma is the only system of training which is based upon this very ancient training which history affirms is as old as man himself. It has been shown in the lives and achievements of the Great Spiritual Souls through the ages that this Discipline does work and has produced such great men as Pythagoras, Plato and Plotinus among hosts of others whose name and fame is known to us today.

In order to show the veracity of this discipline and teaching, we have shown how this Discipline formed the basis of the ancient Mysteries, the Gnostics and Sacred Schools of today. We have also shown that Jesus and Paul also taught this Discipline and how it carried on through the centuries to become known as the Order of the Pleroma.

We have also tried to show what this Discipline will do for you and how the attainment of the Supreme Knowledge will confer upon you God-like powers and characters.

The Reader is asked to draw his own conclusions from what has been given and to judge for himself whether the Pleroma is founded on sound principles or not. If you think it is, then you are invited to seek more information concerning the Arcane Discipline.

67
04

THE ARCANE DISCIPLINE

CLASSIFIED

Every Mystery Religion and Philosophic System tells us that the Logos or Unknown God is ever passive; if the Deity is boundless, infinite, and unconditioned, it can have no thought nor idea, it therefore acts as the result of an inherent volition, and evolves in obedience to its own nature, and "according to the fatality of the law of which it is itself the embodiment". Therefore, everything in the universe is the embodiment of the Logos and must, according to the evolutionary and emanatory process of unfoldment, be changeless in its directive power, yet changeable in its modes of expression.

The process of this unfoldment of the nature of the Deity is followed in precise degree by man. This ancient system of spiritual discipline is as old as man and the details of it have come down to us through the Ancient Mysteries, more especially the Mysteries of Serapis, from which Christian Gnosticism took root. There can be no doubt that there existed a Christianised form of the Mysteries which was carried on by the Gnostic Doctors and later the monks of the various Catholic Orders. The basis for this Christianised form was undoubtedly the Arcane Discipline and this discipline remained in operation in the Church for about three hundred years.

That there is a great identity, nay, even continuity of the Mysteries within the framework of Gnosticism, or that the Arcane Christianity was the essential and natural adoption of the Serapean Mysteries of Egypt and Greece there can be no doubt, nor can there be any doubt in our minds that Historic Christianity is the direct outcome of the fusion of the principles of the Arcane Discipline and the great stream of pre-Christian Gnosticism. History shows that the adoption of the Arcanum was through the introduction of Platonism into the Church of Egypt and therefore into the Gnostic stream.

G R S Mead says: "It is a question of a few years physical enjoyment on earth and - if it has forgotten abuse - of the dissolution of the earthly body being followed by the death of the astral body, which thus is prevented from being united with the highest spirit of the triad, which alone confers on us individual immortality; or, on the other hand, of becoming immortal mystae; initiated before death of the body into the divine truths of the after life. Demi-gods below, and GODS above...Such was the chief object of the Mysteries represented as diabolical by theology, and ridiculed by modern symbologists (and we also add by the modern occult movement - including the Masons, Rosicrucians, Theosophists and the various bodies founded by 'Swamis' and lastly by modern Spiritualists of all shades). To disbelieve that there exist in man certain arcane powers, which, by psychological study he can develop in himself to the highest degree, become a hierophant and then impart to others the same conditions of earthly discipline.." is the height of folly, such men as Pythagoras, Plato, Plotinus, Iamblichus, Proclus, and many others knew and affirmed the reality of these powers and of the Arcane Discipline which every neophyte was compelled to undergo.

There is ample evidence also from the writings of Tertullian, Origen, Clement Alexandrinus, Cyril, Thoedoret, Gregory, Chrysostom, and many others. They all allude to the Arcane Discipline, in as precise terms as Plato, Plotinus, Proclus, and many others spoke of the Mysteries. Clement tells us that "It is not lawful to reveal to the profane persons the Mysteries of the Word". Paul also hints at the supreme knowledge which was unfolded through the Discipline, when he says: "And I, brethren, could not speak unto you as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal, as unto babes in Christ." Jesus also infers that he knew of this supreme knowledge which was hidden from the uninitiated: "Unto you it is given the mystery of the kingdom of God: but unto them that are without, all things are done in parables: that seeing they may see, and not perceive; and hearing they may hear, and not understand." (Mark). In John, Jesus said to His disciples: "I have yet many things to say to you, but ye cannot hear them now."

The Christian Fathers spoke openly of the Christian Arcanum, as all students of Church history well know, but this is not so with the ordinary believer. Polycarp, Bishop of Symyrna, says: "...well versed in the sacred Scriptures and that nothing is hidden from you; but to me this privilege is not yet granted". Ignatius,Bishop of Antioch says that he is "not yet perfect in Jesus Christ. For I now begin to be a disciple, and I speak to you as my fellow disciple". Paul also states: "Might I not write to you things more full of mystery?" Clement again clearly states the rules of the Mysteries when he says: "The Mysteries of the Faith, not to be divulged to all."

Plato also made it quite clear that it was not lawful for the impure or uninitiated to touch the pure and arcane supreme knowledge concerning man's divine nature. There is also further evidence that Jesus charged his disciples to receive the "secret traditions of the true knowledge .... but not enjoining us to communicate to all without distinction" which has been conveyed in the written word, this meant that the prophecies and oracles were always spoken in enigmas and parables to the untrained and uninstructed people. In order to prove beyond all cavil that Jesus followed the Arcane Discipline and its system of grades of understanding, and those who still deny this claim, had better think again before they will dare to call us a falsifier of the genuine Primitive Christianity.

Origen, the pupil of Clement states in his DIE PRINCIPIIS: "The Scriptures have a meaning, not only such as is apparent at first sight, but also another, which escapes the notice of most men. For such is written in the forms of certain Mysteries, and the image of divine things. Respecting which there is one opinion throughout the whole Church, that the whole Law is indeed spiritual; but that the spiritual meaning which the Law conveys is not known to all, but to those only whom the grace of the Holy Spirit is bestowed in the word of wisdom and knowledge." We could fill page after page with facts and figures to show that the Christian Church between I AD to 325 AD did follow the Arcane Discipline and the teachings of the Divine Nature of Man, they all come from undoubted authorities in the Church.

Basileus says that those who retained the Arcane Discipline kept their doctrines secret, whereas their preaching was public.

Origen, whom Socrates Scholasticus in his Ecclesiastical History terms the "Expositor of the mystical tradition of the Church" obviously knew of the Discipline when he states: "To the literal minded we teach the Gospel in the historic way .... but to the proficient (in the Arcanum), fired with the love of divine wisdom, we impart the Logos." Synesius, Bishop of Ptolemais, says that: "... the truth must be kept secret, and the masses need a teaching to their imperfect reason." Although it is obvious that proportioned Catholic Church did not exist then as we know it today,he it is equally obvious that the pro-Gnostic Fathers of the Church both accepted and taught the Discipline and were clearly of the opinion that more should not be given than the intellect could understand, this was the opinion held by the Gnostics and Philosophers both before and after Anno Domini One.

Therefore, it is obvious to the reader now that the Primitive Church followed the same Discipline as was taught in all the Mystery Religions. There is also clear evidence that such bodies as the Fratres Lucis, Holy Grail, Knights Templar, Rose Cross and the Illuminati obeyed the same Discipline. Theosophy of the last century also closely followed the Discipline as was evidenced in 'Isis Unveiled' and by the Pledged Pupils of H P Blavatsky. The Pleroma being formerly the Illuminati also adheres to the Discipline.

The writer of 'Isis Unveiled' has shown this adherence, with irrefutable proof based upon extant documents concerning early Christianity, when she says: ".... that stupendous compound of unintelligible dogmas enforced by Irenaeus, Tertullian, and others, which is now termed Christianity. If these must be termed heresies, then early Christianity itself must be included in the number. Basilides and Valentinius preceeded Irenaeus and Tertullian; and the two latter Fathers had less facts to show that their heresy was plausible". It was due to the Fathers who came after the gnostic Fathers that Arcane Christianity began to be misrepresented and distorted, they desperately tried to decry the source of their own self-created dogmas and historical Jesus. It has been well-established that the teachings of the Gnostics were deliberately falsified by Eusebius, Irenaeus, Epiphanus, Ambrose and Tertullian in their interpretations of these before the teachings could be called heresies. The writer of 'Supernatural Religion' has proven conclusively the spuriousness of the four gospels, or at least their complete transformation in the hands of Irenaeus and his champions, he has exposed the extraordinary forgeries of the Fathers with an unprecedented power of logic and historical facts.

There is further evidence given in the very old book 'Sepher Toldoth Jeshu' that it was a Gospel of the Gnostic Fathers, and from this can clearly be seen the link and identity between Jesus and the Mysteries of Isis in Egypt. We know that Jesus studied in Egypt for six years and was initiated into the Mysteries and became a Hierophant of them, this has been verified in the Jewish 'Tulmud' and the 'Gemera'. The fact that the Mysteries were brought forward into Gnosticism is clearly evidenced in the Gnostic work attributed to Valentinius - 'Pistis Sophia' and in the 'Books of Hermes' and further in the 'Books of the Saviour' and the 'Gospel of St Thomas'.

There is also to be found within the framework of the present canonical gospels and the 'Gospel of John', the outlines of this Arcane Discipline when we realise that Jesus gave his "Public Sayings" to the mass, but to his own personal disciples he unfolded the Arcane Wisdom by means of the Discipline. Finally, there is the internal evidence in the Epistles of Paul to show that he also was an adherent to the principles of the Arcane Discipline and attained Illumination by means of it. It is obvious from his own words he was either an Initiate of Egypt or in the Kabbalah, as we will find that many of his sayings can be found in the 'Egyptian Book of the Dead'. We can go further and state with absolute proof, that there is not one statement or act of Jesus which cannot be found to have its prototype in the 'Book of the Dead'. This alone shows either identity or that the Fathers copied their Jesus from the earlier Egyptian Son of God - Horus the Elder and the Younger, and that Mary is simply Isis in a Christianised form. We also know that the 'Book of the Dead' is about 5,000 years old, if not older, and in this we find the complete outline of the teachings of the Pleroma, although given in the form of a Mythos of Horus, Isis and Osiris, the teaching is identical, both are based upon the principles of the Arcane Discipline which is as old as the human race.

All of the above adds up to the fact that the pagan Mysteries were an offshoot of the Archaic Mysteries, and that the Wisdom and Discipline they contained was passed on to the pre-Christian Gnostics who in turn handed it down to Jeshu ben Pandira and from him it passed to the Christian Gnostics through St Paul and eventually finding its way into Historic Christianity through Valentinius and Basilides. It was then deliberately changed from the grand Gnostic Mythos of the Soul into the carnal mythos of a man in time - Jesus of Nazareth, a man whom secular history ignores for four centuries until Constantine forced the Eastern empire to accept this mutilated version of the Wisdom and Discipline. There are no grounds for our Christian brethren to deny this fact as history stands witness to the duplicity of the Church Fathers. From that time there has existed a conflict between the Arcane Discipline and the Historic Church, between the pseudo-occultists and the spiritualists and the Illuminati of today represented by the Secret Schools and the Order of the Pleroma of today.

The earliest Christian writer, Justin Martyr, in his first 'Apology', states that "It is only through ignorance that men call themselves Christians instead of 'Chrestians'". We find that the words Chrest and Cristos were borrowed by the Fathers from the temple vocabulary of the Pagans. Chrestos, means a disciple on probation for the attainment of Hierophantship and, upon attaining that supreme Office he became known as a Christos, or one who has travelled the Path to the Summit; "when the fruits of the arduous labour, uniting the personality of evanescent clay with the indestructible individuality", he became transformed thereby into the Immortal Soul, or as Plato says: ".... we were ourselves pure and immaculate, being liberated from this surrounding vestment, which we denominate body, and to which we are now bound like an oyster to its shell".

Paul also confirms the results of this process when he states that "ye form the Christos (soul) within yourselves". Thus, for Paul and for the Pleroma, the Christ or Christos is the "inner man" or the Sotor meaning the Logos or Saviour and this explains the true name of Jesus being Emmanuel, or God with or in us. Thus the Gnostic term Chresterion means the seat of the inner oracle - the Divine Soul of every man.

It should now be obvious to the reader, be they a Christian or Mystic, that Christianity is the link in a long and unbroken chain of exponents of the Arcane Discipline from the remotest ages to the present-day. Hence the meaning of the words of Jesus, when he states that he came not to destroy the Law (Discipline) but to fulfil it in his person, as do all Enlightened Adepts.

We have endeavoured to show the descent of the Discipline from the time of the Gnostics in a series of articles which are running in THE LUCIS MAGAZINE, and we have also shown, that, as a Theosophy, Christian Gnosticism rests upon the faculty of Illumination among those favoured souls who, by discipline or natural insight, could transcend the limitations of the entombed human Soul within the valley of death, to ascend and penetrate the cloud which hides man's inner sanctuary of the Immortal Soul on the Mount.

The teachings of the Arcane Discipline show us that the way up to union with the Divine within man is divided into many stages, that men through these stages could become gods, and then finally God. Only when a man has become a Christos can one say that the Divine is really consciously manifest in him, although partially, he has become a god whilst still in the mortal body, but as yet not fully with the Logos - the Immortal Spirit. The man so blessed by his own labours becomes a Son of God, but not God Himself. Therefore, all those who have not become the Christos although they have the Divine implicit in them it is not yet unfolded. The Goal of the Discipline was becoming God which is the consummation of human evolution. The Discipline also teaches that although the Divine exists in all mankind there are but few who know this throughout their whole being, and that the majority of men are entirely ignorant of its presence, but that these, too, can eventually be awakened to it.

The Whole of God is called the Divine Pleroma which embodies the visible and invisible regions of Nature and for men the whole of the seven vestures. The Pleroma is yet another name for Nature, into which God infuses Himself to become omnipresent, omnipotent and even omniscient, man, himself, being the god imprisoned within the Pleroma, has also latent within him the three-fold Powers of God, but in order for man to become God he must first become aware of and identified with the Divine Pleroma through his seven-fold nature.

This is the basis of the Arcane Discipline without which man remains imprisoned within the tomb of flesh within the valley of death, he must first die to his Godhead and descend into the valley to travel to the foot of the Summit and then climb its steep slopes before he can attain his Godhead again. This knowledge is just becoming available to the western man with the re-emergence of the Gnosis, but there is yet a third stage which can only be attained by a few chosen disciples, who, by their own labours, have reached the Summit of the Immortal Spirit to become the Mediators between man in the valley and God in the highest heaven.

"The differnce between Gnostic and popular Christian doctrine on this point is that whereas the initiated philosphers taught a universal creed and a possiblity for all men, the popular exaggeration erected an exclusive dogma which asserted that Jesus was, and will be, the only Christ, and still further that he was Very God of Very God, thus confusing and confounding the verities of the Gnosis, and making the whole Universe and Godhead centre in Jesus alone." Thus, by the rejection of the Gnosis of the Soul, most of the occult and spiritual systems have perpetuated this Father-God conception in their slavish adherence to their so-called "Masters" and "Swamis". They do not realise that God, the Father or the Guide are all without exception identical to the Immortal Soul, it is this dependence upon these external Father-Figures which holds man back from realising his Godhead. It is further shown that most of the present systems of thought are devoid of this Arcane Discipline and thus know nothing about the Divine Soul, and it is owing to this lack that most people will reject our teachings and the fact that we are all, from the ignorant native to the god, G O D.

This Discipline is divided into three types of men: (a) the ordinary man who is entirely dead to spiritual things; (b) those who are psychic, for although these are believers in things spiritual, they are believers only and require miracles and signs to strengthen their faith, they require the Father-Figures, such as Masters, Gurus, Adepts, Swamis, Guides, Bishops and priests and leaders. One finds them among Theosophists, Rosicrucians, Masons, Spiritualists, Self-Realisation, Arcane and Philosophic Schools and others of like nature. They are not able to think for themselves, but must have the Father-Figure to lean upon and the student must be inspired by the personalities of these before he will progress. This is the main reason why the spiritual movement is riddled with charlatanism, trickery, hocus-pocus, commercialism and pretended "pupils and masters".

The third type is the truly spiritual man or woman who is capable of letting go of all the above Father-Figures and man-made organisations, once he has done so he becomes capable of receiving and experiencing the knowledge of the Gnosis of the Real Self. In spite of his advancement and the fact that he no longer needs people, he returns to the ken of man and becomes a Hierophant in order to impart the same conditions of earthly discipline to those who are capable of understanding and experiencing their Divine Nature. Those who do accept pupils can only teach the Arcane Discipline in the same manner in which they were taught by their teacher and the teacher before him and so on until you have a long line of Hierophants stretching back over the centuries and moving forward into the future. Each attained disciple becomes the teacher of others and they in turn will become the future teachers of the human race for so long as man needs to be taught, the principles will always remain the same. The objective form through which the teaching is conveyed will be changed from age to age, but the Discipline will always be that which was pre-ordained by God to our glory.

In ancient days, the Hierophants exacted five years silence from their pupils although it would be too much to follow this practice in the Pleroma, most, if not all, students would object to this rule. If such a rule were ordered you would really find a spiritual atmosphere in the Groups. It would not be punctured by the chattering of uncontrolled tongues and the teacher would not have to answer silly questions which have already been answered in the talk or lecture. It would also help those students who really want to know and would also clear the group of those who just love to hear themselves chatter much to the annoyance of others. The reason for this rule of silence is obvious, after five years of discussions you would then find all your questions answered as the line of talk proceeds, but the western man is far too impatient to wait for it. You cannot cross a river until you have completed your bridge.

Clement and Origen, the early Church Fathers devoted their efforts to prove that there was a Christian Gnosis - and Gnosis in its correct sense is The Science of the Soul - therefore, we find that Clement is a direct link between the Gnosis and orthodox Christianity. All the systems which have appeared between the 4th century to the 20th century are consequently, based upon Gnostic Christianity and not upon Historic Christianity. In fact, if the truth be known, Theo-Sophia really means the Science of the Soul, and it was Amminos Saccas who first used the word Theosophy, and Clement, the pupil of Saccas, used the term in relation to the Gnosis, H P Blavatsky, the founder of modern Theosophy also devoted her efforts to prove that there was a Christian Gnosis as is clearly shown in the two volumes of 'Isis Unveiled'.

To show that what we call occultism today is simply a mutilated and misrepresented story of the Gnosis, if we shear away all the hocus-pocus which surrounds modern occultism we will find emerging the grand Gnostic Mythos of the Soul embodied in the 'Parable of the Prodigal Son', which simply tells how Lucifer is God's eldest son (man), who left his Father's house to seek for freedom and of how God loves him above all His creatures. It tells how the man Lucifer descends the realms on his journey from the East and the dangers he must seek on the way, how he is abandoned in matter and puts on a robe of flesh and does eat the food of the world and forgot his high mission, and how repentance makes him change his mind and turn to higher things. An eagle then descends upon him giving him comfort from his Divine Soul, and he remembers that he is a son of God. He stirs in his tomb of flesh in the valley and as he wakes he has to lull the serpent of his own animal nature which guards the road to the Summit, he slays the serpent and turns his face towards the Mount and then journeys eastward. During this journey he fights and conquers three Demon Knights and upon winning the last battle with the Knight of Doubt, he is given the glorious Robe of the Soul which he had left behind in his Father's House. The human Soul which is now unified with his Divine Soul is now placed higher than his brother-souls who have been lost in the valley and are waiting to be found. He re-descends into the Valley of Death and strikes off the chains of his brother Souls and shows them the way Home.

A price is always demanded before one can become aware of the Father's House on the Summit and that price is the complete renunciation of all that men prize and long for here in the dark tomb of flesh; the complete self-abnegation of the lower self; perfect devotion in the service of his brothers; the destruction of all personal desires and opinions and complete detachment from all earthly desires. This is the first step demanded by the discipline and unless you obey these injuctions, then you must wait for a more favourable opportunity in some future life.

The man or woman who desires to become aware and then unified with their own Soul must deal with the Serpent of their animal nature, unaided; they must also suppress and control their passions and emotions by the force of their own spiritual will, with the Power of the Divine Self. This can be summed up as: purity of thought and life, the absolute unswerving devotion to God and Man themself and finally as persistent effort and aspiration to reach the Summit of the Mount.

To accomplish this demand of the Arcane Discipline the aspirant must lighten or quicken the Soul in order to use the Power or Light of the Self to lead him through the dark labyrinth of human life, but if a man chooses his own way through the labyrinth, he will wander in the darkness and keep the exits locked to him and he will also find the tomb of flesh more difficult to bear. There is no other path to freedom excepting through the Arcane Discipline. No person other than yourself has the power or right to turn the five keys to your own tomb of flesh, not even a master can do this for you unless you are prepared to pay the terrible price for your ransom from the Guardian of the Tomb - The Lord of Karma.

This has been clearly shown in the Ransom of the thirty pieces of silver which Judas demanded for the betrayal of Jesus. The silver obviously refers to the forces which must be sent up and along the spinal cord of man. As this force is carried up along the spinal chord through the Discipline, it will burn through the five chains which hold you here in the body, these five fetters are known as: the desire for earth life and its passions; the desire for sensational existence; the desire for emotional life; the desire for mental life and finally the desire for Soul life. This can be summed up as meaning that all allusion to the personal self must be destroyed, doubt must be overcome by knowledge and superstition must be outgrown, and when these three are outgrown, the desire for life in form; the desire for life without form, pride of self or attainment; perturbability, and the illusion or mirage of the fleeting self must all be cast off.

Most students and in fact most men, are locked up in this tomb of flesh by their worldly desires, the grasping after the things of the earth, by sloth and indifference to the God within themselves. The five chains or locks which hold them in the tomb are the uncontrolled power of thought; which creates impurity of motive, untruth, and pity for themselves; lack of discrimination between the real and the false, the love of worldly objects; then the six-fold mental chains: which are lack of mental control; lack of discipline in the body and senses; intolerance; lack of endurance and courage; disbelief in their immortal nature; the lack of balance in their vestures and finally love of the darkness of the tomb of matter.

These chains are the gods of this world, they are the gods which every man must first worship and obey until he realises that they are false gods. "Thou shalt have no other gods before me (soul)". Among these false gods which man must first worship are money, possessions, love, sex, etc. He will hold them in high esteem until sooner or later he finds that they are indeed false and that they have become the chains which bind him to the tomb of flesh and that only when he voluntarily lets them go will he become free to appeciate them to the full. One does not lose them by giving them up, all one does is to change one's attitude towards them, they are only evil when you allow them to rule you.

The Arcane Discipline teaches you to cast off the fetters of the domination of the rulers of the world, and these fetters are: the delusion of self or body; doubt in your omnipotent Divine Self; the taint of belief in the value of mere morality; sensuality, the attraction for things; ill-will, the repulsion of your brother-self; the lust for form on all regions of existence; the lust for non-form; pride in One's self and one's progress; the pride in not being proud and finally, ignorance.

It will be seen that the chains and fetters which bind man to earth are the root of all his and the world's sufferings. It is, therefore, only through the application of the Arcane Discipline or Gnosis that man can become free. Although the student must have a teacher to show him through the marshes of human life, it is fatal to have any emotional or intellectual attachment to the teacher, as this tends to sap every vestige of self-reliance and creates yet another false god. The teacher will explain to you the Gnosis, a doctrine which is not usually expressed in writing but is passed on from one teacher to another verbally, as there are Truths too deep to be expressible in any written form. These are deposited in the minds of a few of the wisest in every generation who become the teachers for that generation.

Let us try and show you by analogy what human life is really like and why you must have a qualified teacher to show you the way to the Summit. If you have ever been at the mouth of the Mississippi River in an aeroplane you will see that it is mainly marshland between the bends of the river, you will see faintly showing through the marsh pathways of firm land. When you land, however, and begin to move into the marshes you do not see these pathways and there is a danger that you will become bogged down and sucked into the mire. You are a newcomer to the district and want to move through the marshes, there are men who have explored the marshes and have discovered through trial and error the paths of firm earth which will take them through, it is only sensible, therefore, for you to seek out one of these qualified guides.

Now this marshland is like our human life and we must have a qualified guide to show us the way through the mire of human life towards solid ground. In this respect the solid ground is the Divine Self and the marshland is the world we live in, the mires which are everywhere in this world are slightly covered over with the green grass of glamour. For a student to enter into the marshland alone is foolhardy, for although he may eventually win through, he would be much quicker and safer if he had a trained guide to lead him. Hence we will see that the purpose of the Arcane Discipline is to lead us through the darkness of the labyrinth of human life and the Teachers of this Discipline are the Guides. These Guides are sent to mankind every century and each one of these Guides has himself explored the marshland of human life and found the solid pathway which winds through to the dry land of the Divine Soul.

The Divine Soul is always waiting for his human counterpart at the very beginning of the winding Path through the valley of Death and even though the human Soul knows not of the existence of his Divine Protector, his Immortal Soul has always known him and watches his efforts to pass through the Valley and reach his Light Source. The moment the human Soul calls forth to his Divine Soul it will begin to direct his human steps in the right direction and will help to guide him through the labyrinth and speed up his progress. The Soul ever watches over his human Son with the tender solicitude of a mother, in fact, the Soul is our spiritual Mother, the Soul is enabled to lead us through the marshland with wisdom and experience born of countless sentences of imprisonment by the Judge of Life.

It is due to the desire of the Soul, in accordance with the fatality of the law which is itself the embodiment, and according to the evolutionary and emanatory process of unfoldment which is changeless in its directive power, yet changeable in its modes of expression, that the Soul gains experience and knowledge of the valley of death. He goes through the tedious process of becoming and assuming the clothing of flesh and of being buried in the sepulchre of matter, life after life, each life within the valley giving him a little more experience,but this process must continue until he has fulfilled his mission here on earth. The very fact that the Soul returns again and again to the limitation of the valley of matter and endures the dreary conditions of life within the labyrinth, should prove to you that the only way the human counterpart of the Soul can get this experience and knowledge is within the body of flesh. So the Arcane Discipline or GNOSIS is the manual for our life here and not for some vague heaven-world as stated by our Theosophists and Christians.

Within the heart of hearts of this human-personality of ours there lies hidden a Pearl of Great Price - The Divine Soul - and it is our work here in the valley to find this Pearl of Ourselves as it is our Lode Star which will ever lead us through the labyrinth of human life. This Soul of ours is the Sword which will rise from the waters of the animal nature and give us the ability to slay the Dragon of our human nature. We are the only person who can draw the Soul from the Rock of the Body and he who can do this becomes the King of the Realm. Within the legend of the San Grael this drama can also be seen,we see how Sir Galahad,the pure knight was allowed to see the Holy Grail and sip from it the Eternal Life of the Soul and was thereafter seen no more by men.

The fact that we have been sent by the Soul to enter and dwell within the limitation of the tomb which is to be found within the valley of death, which is in other words, the Hell of the Christians, the Hades of Greece, Amenta of the Egyptians and the Labyrinth of Crete, etc., should again make it quite clear that we are here for a purpose and that purpose is to be perfectly human but at the same time be perfectly divine, to show forth our Divine Nature within the body of flesh.

This descent of the Sons of God from the Logos is shown in Ezekiel's Wheel. Hargrave Jennings observes: "All this is incomprehensible, except in the strange mysticism of the Gnostics and the Kabalists: and the whole theory requires a key of explanation to render it intelligible; which key is only darkly referred to as possible, but refused absolutely, by these extraordinary men, as not permissible to be disclosed." Now the said Key to this riddle is Man himself, but this key must be turned seven times, we will give one of the explanations.

This shows the descent of the Immortal Spirit of Man moving down five stages into matter to become nascent man - Adam or Scorpio, the emblem of sin and matter and then Sagittarius, Capricornus, Aquarius and Pisces. These represent the first five stages through which the Heavenly Man must pass to become the earthly man through Virgo the sign of generation; when we have Libra or Enoch, who is half-divine and half-terrestrial, then on the ascent the man must pass through the conditions and qualities of Leo, Cancer, Gemini, Taurus and Aries to complete the Grand Cycle of Necessity. The balance between the two sets of five stages of the earthly man is the centripetal and centrifugal forces, as symbols of Good and Evil, the former force will drive the planets into the sun and the latter chase our Souls into the dreary labyrinth of matter, but the Balance or the Divine Soul is ever there to save us from complete destruction.

The meeting point of heaven and earth is man or Libra and he stands at the mid-point of evolution, this means that Jesus represents the long process of the evolution of the lower kingdoms of form in their process of becoming man and Christ begins the process of man becoming God again.

This is the great mystery of the Rose and the Cross: The Cross symbolises the human and spiritual nature of man and the Rose within the Cross, represents the Soul of Man, white at first and then becoming a Red Rose through the continual sacrifice of the Soul in matter. As the Rose grows in stature, the Cross decreases until it becomes depicted within the Red Rose, then at the final stage of earthly life the Red Rose becomes the White Rose born out of the Cross of Matter. This is the Rosicrucian explanation of Ezekiel's Wheel.

The Arcanum was called a SOD and the Discipline was the same as that held by the Gnostics. The most sacred of all Oaths was called the Sodalian Oath and was taken by the aspirant at the entrance of the Path and can be explained in this wise: The neophyte for Light pledges himself to the Divine Self and to the Holy Spirit through the Hierophant, he promises that he will remain true to his great task. There is not one known instance of a True Brother who has ever dared to break his Bargain or Oath to the Highter Self, but alas, THERE ARE THOUSANDS OF STUDENTS EVERY DAY WHO ARE BREAKING THEIR SACRED OBLIGATION TO THE REAL SELF. One has only to enter any of the groups and there you will see them chatting about their 'initiations', their visions, etc., and even taking pride in telling others that they are "pupils of their Master", the only pupil they are likely to become for this life-time, is to their human master, the subconscious mind.

This Oath is depicted in the Roman Catholic hymn which was adapted from the Sodalian Hymn of old and runs:

Faith of our Fathers living still,
In spite of dungeon, fire and sword,
O, how our hearts beat high with joy
When'er they hear that glorious word!
Faith of our Fathers, holy Faith,
We will be true to thee till death.

It is obvious that the Roman Church has usurped this Hymn from the 'heretics', the Arcane Christians, for it was the Popish Church who put to the sword those who kept to the True Faith. We may well ask: Are our modern occultists, especially our Theosophists, faithful to their Oath taken in either some past life or in this one? The answer must be no if we are to judge by their actions, they are first to break it, simply because they are playing with spiritual things, the histories of these movements resound with hypocrisy, pride, egotism, and, like monkeys, they cannot keep their big mouths shut for one moment, given the chance, they will spew out all their Soul-secrets to those who are willing to listen to them. There are also some members of the Pleroma who just cannot remain silent, they will learn to their cost, however, that it is prudent to remain silent at all times.

In spite of the failures which one meets every day, it is obvious that the Perfected Ones are not wanting; the steps are not hidden. It is the heart that is wanting, the love that is lacking, the desire which is absent. These are the things which keep us back, and not our ignorance of the Way to the Summit. We have been sent to help you, but you refuse to accept our word, so you must go through the hard way and learn by pain and suffering, but those who have complete trust in their Immortal Self know that we are proving it in their very lives.

The sooner you learn that the traveller on the Path to the Summit wears no crown save that of thorns, there is no patting on the back by friends, but a deep scourging by the seven thonged Whip of Retribution which makes the neophyte pay a price which the normal man or woman would shudder to contemplate. There must be a payment of your past sins in some life, either past or present, you cannot escape this justice. The price which must be paid is unsuspected by the average seeker, they know nothing of the cost which must be met in their lives for the possession of such dynamic Soul Powers, they really know nothing of the sacrifice demanded, and so, when the Law of Life demands repayment, most of them refuse. This means that they break their Oath - and must then pay the forfeit. The Divine Law does not allow for ignorance for, in this, as in all other departments of life, ignoranti non excusat legen.

As one writer states: "And this - for them - is the pity of it all. It cannot be too strongly emphasised that these matters are not to be trifled with. They are fire - spiritual fire - whose effects (when wrongly used) are unbelievably terrible. This is not mere mystogogue's rhetoric; it is only too terribly true." It is nothing short of criminal on the part of any teacher to allow the aspirant to enter the Path without indelibly impressing on him well beforehand that this Path to the Summit will either break or make a man, and there is a further fact, which is more terrible than the above, that when the aspirant has entered the Path, to leave it because he becomes swayed by his subconscious mind is worse than death to him. We know that even a temporary deflection from his bargain will bring the most severe results upon him.

There is no throng to laudate you on your way, but only the mocking of the world of would-be seekers who believe and yet do not know, there is no state carriage to carry the Son of God towards victory, but simply the heavy cross of his sins, there are no friends to help you, only those who will give you the bitter draught of betrayal when you are stripped and bound to the infamy of the cross. In spite of all this, you must not make one effort to save yourselves. There is not one true Soul who have ever attempted to shirk this Thorny Path to the Crown of Victory, they have trust in the Divine Will of God, they have absolute faith in the omnipotent protection of their Immortal Soul, and the serene patience and endurance to face the end.

Where do we see these brave souls who have or are travelling this Path? We see them not, they remain silent in the midst of their earthly sufferings but never for one moment have they ever lost faith in their Soul, they have conquered and attained the Summit of Glory, but never for one moment in time have these uncrowned Martyrs of Light permitted a call for help to go unanswered by them. Where are these Princes of Light? Are they to be found within the ranks of the pseudo-occult movements where egotism, pride of attainment, intolerance and separateness is the rule of the day? No, they will not be found there. They are to be found by those who have proved themselves worthy to become their pupils, nay, more than pupils, they become the beloved of the Elder Brother.

How many aspirants have earned the priceless privilege of becoming a Son of the Brother? When the veils have been lifted for them and the Brother is revealed to them as the embodiment of the Light have then turned away because the price demanded by the Teacher is more than they can bear to pay? The Teacher becomes the rock upon which the aspirant can seek safety from the turbulant seas of his own nature, how many pupils have judged the Rock according to their own lights, and finding not what they expected from the Rock, have slipped back into the aroused tempest of their animal nature and have slipped into the murky depths? How many pretended teachers have ignored even the smallest cry for help, have turned away with disgust and allowed the aspirant to flounder amid the rocks of Life? Very many, we are sorry to say. Go to a boasted member of the Theosophical or Rosicrucian Society and plead for help, they will turn their back upon you. When we, ourselves, have cried to our members for help, this has always come from the humblest member, from those who claim nothing, know nothing and yet have responded to the call of God in us to the God within them, they are the true aspirants for the Summit. "Even as you have done it to these, my little ones, you have done it to Me." Thus the Great Reformer said.

For such are those who are racing towards the Goal and Victory. Therefore, this omnipotent Power within man which gives him the strength and determination to succeed in his quest for himself is Divine Love, that Love which is long-suffering and kind: that Love which does not envy: that Love which does not make a vain display of itself, and does not boast. Does not behave itself unseemly, seeks not its own, is not easily provoked, thinks no evil of man. Love does not rejoice over iniquity, but will rejoice in the Truth: Love bears all things, believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things, Love never fails you. Love is the Power which allows us to see through the mirror of the flesh darkly, but soon we will come face to face with Love, we know in part, but soon we shall know even as I am known as Yourself.

Power is the greatest force which has been placed within all men, if he would but understand its Nature. It is the Power which can and will transform him from a weakling into a god, by this inherent power of man's soul he can command the powers of Nature to obey his wishes. A man must have Faith in his own indestructibility as a Soul and his ideas must be exalted almost to madness, his brain powers must be increased far beyond the miserable status of modern society. Before he can be permitted to use the Dynamic Powers of his Soul he must have attained the complete abnegation of the little self, he must become devoid of selfishness, love of power, of ambition, of lucre, and bent on doing good to the world in general. This Power then becomes Love in operation, it will transform a man from a weakling to a mighty magician.

Therefore, the awakening of the omnipotent power within man can only be accomplished by the absolute obedience to the principles of the Arcane Discipline, the man becomes a God-intoxicated man, he becomes conscious of himself as God and acquires a practical knowledge of the hidden mysteries of Nature known only to a few, because they are so difficult to acquire without falling into sins against Nature. This becomes logical when we know that God informs all aspects of Nature and that all forms share in His life, therefore, man being a manifestation of God must have the same powers within his very nature as that of God.

Do you think it possible that generations upon generations of Great Souls would have gone on deceiving themselves and the people for the pleasure of perpetuating a belief in "miracles" if this knowledge of the omnipotent power of the Divine Soul was not a fact? Do you really think that the Mysteries and the Arcane Discipline was established to keep this mighty power reserved for the chosen few out of selfish reasons? The answer is no, the mysteries were established to protect man from himself, to enable him to tap Nature's forces without destroying himself. The Discipline was established by Wise Men in order to gradually prepare man for this great gift, the Oath of Secrecy was imposed upon the aspirant for his own good.

We will meet living examples of men and women who have unconsciously tapped the source of this Power. We will often meet both men and women of great promise and capability who have achieved nothing because they lack the complete trust in the omnipotent Power of their higher Nature. These unfortunate people are suspended betwixt heaven and earth, they are neither at home in things spiritual nor things of the earth, they eventually find themselves becoming inmates of mental homes or have to face a life of continual doubt and frustration. In all these half-hearted aspirants for the Soul, there is a curious indecisiveness in all their actions and above all a nebulousity of their personalities that tells its own sad tale. They have attempted the Path without the Arcane Discipline and they have paid forfeit, and from these torn souls we can learn how terrible this penalty is, they have, at least for this incarnation, lost their Souls!

"It is obvious that this must be. Nobody seeks occult knowledge unless they are dissatisfied with earthly learning or wish for something it cannot give. As they journey on the Path, they more and more see, not the uselessness, but the inferiority of mundane things. Nevertheless, such mundane things are pleasant, very pleasant, and earthly desires are strong in us all. If, when the call to sacrifice some treasured joy of earth comes to the aspirant on the Path, he is ignorant of the necessity for that sacrifice, he will very likely refuse to make it. And then, by his refusal, he is cast out of heaven. This is literally his state. He wanders unsatisfied over the earth, knowing the impermanence of its rewards and therefore being disinclined to seek them, yet by his recoil from the rigours - or seeming rigours - of the spiritual world, he is cut off from both consolation and compensation from anywhere else. Initiative; the mainsprings of action - is missing, and he can literally do nothing!"

How many letters we have received from our members who have expressed this very same condition, they refuse to believe that we have passed through the darkness of trial and tribulation and have attained the foot of the Summit, they refuse to believe that what we are doing and teaching is for them and them alone. How many times have we called to Love in order to help them, and how many times has Love replied in these words: "You cannot help those who will not help themselves, all you can do for them is to show the way and the rest is up to them, if they cannot cut through the glamour of this world, then they will have to wait for another time, in the meantime you have a responsibility towards those who have the insight to realise that you can help them."

Therefore those who love Him through their Souls will become the Word Made Flesh, the divinity shall dwell among and in us, and we shall see our own Glory like that of the First-born of the Father, full of grace (Divinity) and truth (God) and they shall become Gods walking the earth to save mankind. Those who have become God do live as gods on earth, they are born in the right circumstances to help us, they may be a beggar or a prince, an adept or pupil, it matters not to Love, for Love must use the best material which is offered to it. We must always look beyond the mere clothing and seek the Real and through the Real we shall see God within ourselves.

Therefore, the Logos, through His many parts, must descend into the limitations of the flesh to gain experience and knowledge before He can realise His own nature. It is Love which makes Him sacrifice Himself for us, and it is Love which gave us life and being in the tomb of the valley of death, the Logos through us must die to His own region to become alive in the valley, He must fall asleep in us and it is only we who can awaken the sleeping god and ascend with Him to freedom.

Within this underworld of ours in the body embalmed and buried in the tomb of flesh we are beset by shadows,some terrible to behold, the monsters of the darkness which lie in wait for the faint-hearted ones, the demons of lust, envy, greed, gossip, jealousy, pride, etc. They are all there within ourselves waiting to devour us, there are the bats who love darkness and mystery, there are the jackals waiting to tear us to pieces with their teeth, there are the snakes of deceit and temptation, the vampires who will suck us of our self-reliance. Then we have to face the fleeting shadows and mirages are ever enticing us away from the beauty and Love of the Divinity within, all these and many more are ever ready to lure you to their den of iniquity, they are clothed in the flesh of human beings who survive upon uncleanliness such as: gossip, scandal-mongering, jealousy, pride of all kinds, greed for lucre, murder and sexual hypocrisy, etc., they are all demons created by your own uncontrolled imaginatory powers of the mind. But true Love and Faith will cause them to flee from you.

We can conquer these self-created demons within our own nature simply by following the dictates of the Arcane Discipline, through this Gnosis you will awaken the Champion from its long sleep and it will then help you to do battle with these mirages. The Champion will not come to your aid, however, if you will worship the gods of this world before Him, you cannot serve two masters, you must choose between the Ruler of the Body and Divine Self, the choice is yours and yours alone.

Think not, my Brothers, that you can escape from the thorns and sharp rocks which you have created, they will cut your feet every inch of the Path you follow, there will be many who will make a point of showing themselves as your friends, but be ever on your guard for the snake which lurks behind their profession, be not flattered by others, lest in flattery you are led into the mire of iniquity. Trust all people but not their human nature. Be kind and have compassion upon those who misuse you, where ill is done you, return love, pity them not, for pity is like a leech which will suck them dry of self-reliance. Far better to heal them of their sufferings for their acts will be all but more than they can bear in one life.

The Arcane Discipline teaches you to live and gain the best from your personality, do not penalise it by adopting false habits of mind, emotions and body, do not pander to its wants lest it will devour you, be stern with it and make it work for you and obey you, the Divine Self. All forms of psychicism, yoga practices, etc., are dangerous to you, they are one of the many mirages of earthly life. Never for one moment lose sight and faith in your Immortal Nature for that is your only true protection from the demons of the body and the only Power which will grant you Immortality.

It is because the principles of the Arcane Discipline have been either ignored or unknown by the many systems of thought, that you find so many people being caught up in their glamourising traps, they profess to teach, yet teach not, they claim to give, but give not, they claim to know and yet know not. They are suitable for children who just cannot think for themselves, and when their people do begin the process of thinking for themselves, they leave the kindergarten, however,when they enter a Brotherhood which does teach the Arcane Discipline and can demonstrate the Soul-Powers, they believe it not, they claim that it is a mirage, but then fail to realise that it is the same system of discipline which was founded when man came to earth and is the same today.

The Order of the Pleroma can state without any fear of contradiction, that it is the first body to publicly proclaim the Arcane Discipline and that its Leader can demonstrate the Power of the Soul, yet in spite of this, there are people who claim that it is new and different and they will have nothing to do with it. In fact, it is neither new nor different as history affirms. The Pleroma is simply restoring the principles of the Discipline which have been hitherto practised in secret.

My Brothers, from the day you attain Illumination of the Soul, when you have awakened the Soul out of its long sleep in the tomb, your battle with the demons of the animal self will become fierce, you will have to face the uncharitable acts of those who publicly profess to be 'pupils' or 'advanced' in spiritual work. You will find them tearing you to pieces behind your back for they will lack the moral fibre to face you. Curse them not, but bless them greatly,for every scourge they render you gives you more strength, every cup of betrayal will help you to develop discrimination, every action of mocking will reveal to you the snake of the human nature, every cross you have to bear will make you all the more determined to carry on, every deserting friend will make you realise that there is only one Friend and that is the God within your own Soul.

Little do you know of what we have had to put up with from the little minds of misguided people who have come to us professing to know the Light, only to reveal that they are so encrusted with their own importance that because we do not conform to what they considered a teacher should be, they have turned away and in doing so have revealed the blemishes of their own nature. They have seen in the aureole of the Divinity their own faults and have mistaken the reflection from ourselves to be in us, but actually speaking, an Illuminatus becomes a very clear mirror which will reveal the defects of those who come near it. Pride and conceit debars them from realising that what they are seeing in us is only themselves as in a mirror. By this means they are able to see their hidden faults and give themselves the chance to do something about them.

To be misunderstood and slandered by smaller minds is the penalty to be borne by the Illuminatus who has obeyed the principles of the Arcane Discipline. When this comes your way, be not angry with them, but bless them, for by their acts they are really helping you and also themselves. This is the real meaning of the Ransom of Thirty Pieces of Silver taken by Judas,the animal nature within you,but you will say for them with your whole heart:"Father forgive them for they know not what they do." They are the ones who have sinned and should be healed.

This, My Brothers is the terrible price you must pay if you desire to become the Light, it is only through suffering and anguish that you will master the demons of your own nature and attain the Victory. But, we wish to make it quite clear to you, there is no need for this pain and anguish if you are prepared to obey the injunctions of the Arcane Discipline and are also prepared to accept our assurances on this point, so long as you realise in your mind that we are here to help you, then you can avoid this difficulty. If you try the Arcane Discipline on your own, then you are asking for very serious trouble, you can cut the link between the human and the Divine and the human will become a soulless creature which will eventually be cast into the Eighth Sphere to be totally destroyed.

Let us make this absolutely clear to you, you cannot come to the Arcane Discipline through the Pleroma unless you have gained sufficient experience in the past. You must have reached the required standard before your Soul will allow you to enter the ranks of the Pleroma, since the Pleroma is a power-house, and it is dangerous to touch the live wires without pre-training. Unless you have this training, there is the grave possibility that you will burn the delicate nervous system of the body and find yourself in a mental home. Before you joined the Pleroma you made the Pledge to the Divine Self that you would accept the training given by us and that you would obey the Arcane Discipline. That is the bargain you have made, and woe betide you if you attempt to break it.

Think not that just because you leave the Pleroma for some stupid reason and join another society in the hope of escaping the business of paying this just debt to the Real Self that it will be so. Far from it, you have broken your Pledge and punishment for this act will only accumulate more Karma which will make your remaining years in the body harder to bear. Hence those who wander from one system to another for petty reasons are those who are very young in Soul experience and should never have come into this work, but those who remain faithful to the Teacher of the Arcane Discipline are those Souls who will manifest the Good and Beauty of the Real Self.

The absolute Truth of the Self is never what we think it to be, it will never conform to what we think, we must conform to its Laws if we are to attain the truth of the Self, all aspirants have two paths open to them, either they remain with speculations and opinions which one can find in any occult book in a library, or they will leave the speculations alone and seek the Source of Truth within themselves. Let it be clearly understood, if the many systems have the Truth as they claim, why is it that none of them can demonstrate in their own lives the Truth?

Again we say, you were allowed or will be allowed to enter the Pleroma, not because it is just another society, but because it was considered by your own Soul, that you were sufficiently experienced to let go of the world of make-believe to seek for and to become the Reality. Therefore, the choice is yours. Either you continue your efforts in the Arcane Discipline through the Pleroma and eventually realise the Truth, or you may wander among the conflicting opinions and in the long run gain nothing but disillusionment and uncertainty.

Please understand that we who follow the Arcane Discipline and have achieved the goal of its endeavours do not beg anybody to join us, that would be stupid to the point of being ridiculous, what we ask is that you use your Common sense. The choice is always yours and not ours, if you cannot continue with the training given, then there are always others who will take your place in the ranks of the Leaders of Humanity. An individual is of no use to the Light unless he or she is willing to accept the ancient Arcane Discipline.

It is extraordinary to find people who desire to know the Truth and above all to become the truth as a personal experience, making excuses for not pursuing the only avenue available to them to know, but rather stopping themselves by accepting the promptings of the Serpent Mind. There is only one way in which to realise this Personal Truth and that is within and there alone. This has been clearly demonstrated by all those great Souls who have spoken about and obeyed the Gnosis of the Arcane Discipline. But in order to experience your own Nature you must strip yourselves of all outward attachments such as knowledge and desire and prepare the personality for the manifestation of your Divine Nature. The method we are teaching is the same as that which has been taught by the greatest minds who by this method have attained the Light of Themselves.

Only a damn fool will ignore this tremendous possibility, but we are all human, and to err is human. We too, erred in our youth, we ignored the call of the Self for many years and during that time we passed through a period of pain and anguish because our love for the things of this world held us back, however, slowly but surely the Divine Self began to guide us into the right channels, we had to leave all organised societies alone and stand on our own feet, then the principles of the Arcane Discipline were conveyed to us during the sleep state, and in 1956 we had reached the end of our training, then the Soul descended into the human tabernacle and manifested to the public as Illumination.

Now we can look back and see what a damn fool we were, and how in our blindness we put off the day when we could experience the joy and security of the Self, then the Self said: "My son, you have accomplished the first stages, you must return to mankind and teach them also of the joy which is yours." So we obeyed the Will of Him who sent us and took over the Grand Hierophantship of the suspended Order of the Illuminati which eventually became the Order of the Pleroma, from which time we have been teaching and demonstrating the Power of the Soul within the body. We rule the Pleroma through the Power of the Self so if we have done this, what can you also do!

We have learnt compassion for others, have ceased to judge others by their errors or because they have done things according to our imagination for to do otherwise would manifest an appalling lack of spirituality on our part. Judge no man from the personality levels, but judge him or her from the Soul, that which is shunned in this life will have to be met in some future life, those who judge now, will be judged in the next, those who misuse others in this life will become the victims in the next.

It is possible for man to attain to spiritual freedom from the chains of earth in our lifetime, that is if he is prepared to obey the injunctions of the Arcane Discipline as taught by the Pleroma. Unfortunately, those who are to accomplish this in one life, are very few indeed, perhaps in a thousand years one has been able to attain complete freedom? But many more are able to attain partial freedom in one life through the Discipline. All we can do for the moment is to make the effort and abide by the Discipline and know that obedience to the Divine Law will carry us onwards to Perfection.

The Princes of Light ask of each one of us that we TRY, and if we fail that we pick ourselves up and try again and to do this time and time again until we do attain. The evil lies in our refusal to make the attempt again, no matter how many times we may think we fail. Each failure made and each attempt to continue creates the Golden Stairs upon which we can climb the heights to God. We can only learn by trial and error through the teachings and practice of the Arcane Discipline.

Finally, the teachings of the Arcane Discipline can be summed up in these words, it is in this teaching that the Pleroma becomes different from other systems of thought: Man has a Divine Soul which is the Real Man, in order that you may become a human being, the Soul dies to its own region and is born in this earthly region within the Tomb of Matter in the valley of death - our earth life. The Soul only puts a portion of Its life into the tomb, but it still remains a Soul. The Soul of Man is he "who is without father, without mother, without beginning nor end of days." The Soul is then the sum-total of all its earthly experiences which it gains life after life in the various tombs of matter, this means that the Essence of each life is absorbed by the Soul, this is the method whereby the Divine Soul is able to unfold its latent God-potentials. When the Soul has developed to a certain point,then it seeks to take over its human counterpart and if the human counter-part is willing to allow this to happen, then the Soul descends fully into the personality and vouchsafes to it Its Wisdom - The man then becomes an Illuminated Soul - a Master Among Men.

You will always remain in a state of uncertainty and disillusion-ment so long as you do not recognise the existence of the Divinity within your own nature, it will be of no value for you to study and philosophise about your divine nature and your identity with the Supreme Soul of the Universe; for you cannot know the Immortal Self as long as the spirit of holiness and absolute Truth is not active within yourselves. So long as you judge all things from the world of the Shadows and the Valley of Death, you will never touch the hem of your own Divine Garment. Therefore,your blind occultism cannot abolish the inherent faith of man in the All-Seeing God Principle, without adoring in its place the blind intellect of the animal man.

Therefore, the Arcane Discipline as taught in the Pleroma is to help you to eradicate these barriers in your mind and body, to prepare the whole of the personality to receive the down pouring of the Good and Beauty of our own Divine Soul and this has been done by preparing a balanced system of teaching embodying the moral qualifications and the gradual revealing of the Gnosis of the Soul.

"Finally, we teach that the mortal man through this discipline called the ARCANE DISCIPLINE could have intercourse with God and superior spirits, and consequent attainment of superhuman knowledge by metaphysical and alchemistical process, which liberate the mind from its finite consciousness, to become one and be indentified with the Immortal Spirit."

THE SANCTUARY OF THE GNOSIS
London

67 24

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 61-70

LIBER # 68 DELUGE

Personal & Confidential FIFTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

Personal & Confidential

THE QUEST FOR TRUTH

CLASSIFIED

The purpose of mankind on this planet it to reach perfection, find real harmony between all creatures and to overcome all pain and suffering.

This is the ideal put forth by all the great teachers who have left evidence of the truth of what they discovered through hard work. They have also made it evident that mankind can accomplish these things and can reach a point of freedom from all unpleasant circumstances. These teachings are based upon the real facts about how the Universe functions and how man can function in harmony with It.

As long as we rely on our own concepts of the nature of the Universe and act according to our own opinions and refuse to listen to the voice of experience we will not reach a true fulfilment in this life-time.

Many people do not like facing the truth, preferring to remain in ignorance - in this state they seem afaid to shoulder any responsibility for their own troubles and close their eyes to contributing to the well-being of the community and very often accept pain and suffering as the facts of life.

The truly sincere and honest students of life work hard to consolidate such qualities as honesty and sincerity into their life. Many basic teachings say that there are twelve such qualities to integrate into one pure quality - the disciple does not reach mastership until this has been achieved. When all the qualities are known to be the One Quality then human perfection is reached and the disciple finds peace and harmony in the capacity to show forth the sublime quality of Compassion.

It is no use a disciple praying for certain qualities or gifts because we cannot gain something for nothing - that is the Law. We cannot give what we do not possess so one can see that we cannot HAVE Love or Wisdom unless we exercise these qualities to others. It is only in doing or applying the quality we desire that we can know It.

In very truth we do not possess or own anything, we are merely vehicles through which the human phase of Divinity consummates Itself. To understand this correctly we need to be really humble - not in a grovelling sense - to the greater Denominator in Life, for in living in tune with It we learn how It works and how we can benefit from that which It will convey in our direction by our co-operation.

There are many immature ideas accepted today by those professing to be leaders and teachers in various "New Age" and "Esoteric" orders and schools.

In many cases these people have set themselves up from the mere reading of books and are not aware of the real initiatic problems or disciplines required.

Whilst we are not under-rating the value of the human phase of mind we should come to learn that this is an instrument and operates at the "effect" end of the Cosmic Mind. The problem is that we units at this end of Cosmic function fall into the trap of believing that everything we see and experience is REAL and, having the capacity for choice, erect most of our hypotheses on this basis when in fact we should be looking for real causes and not "causes" observed at the "effect" side of Cosmic manifestation. This situation has been referred to as the "illusion" by the great teachers and it is in this problem wherein all our troubles lie. However, it IS possible - by following the right discipline - to overcome these difficulties and arrive at a state of harmony and live life as a balanced and orderly experience.

As it is our task to point out the barriers to enlightenment one might ask, "Why don't you give us the teaching Itself?" The situation, from our long experience, is that because the Reality exists, by removing our mental barriers the Truth will reveal Itself: if we try to say 'how it is' before the student is ready they will by their misunderstanding create further barriers which will have to be broken down. Another illusion which should be avoided is to get hooked upon the 'fancy illusion' of believing ones-self to be a particular reincarnated soul. Misunderstanding the teaching on Reincarnation leads the weak ones to strut around believing themselves to be Merlin, Jesus, Joseph and the like. The fallacy of these ideas leads to such situations as pointed out by a friend who knows "six Merlins in Glastonbury". The very tragedy of this situation reveals that these poor students do not belong to a proper initiating school because they would be protected from making open fools of themselves.

In our Inner School we do not receive a group to whom we deliver lectures or talk down to students. We take persons on an individual basis so that the barriers can be dealt with directly, discussed and shown up to the disciple who then has to deal personally with them and overcome them in order to gain first hand experience of what Life is REALLY about as opposed to what many people assess it to be.

We each need to grow into mature, repsonsible people aware of the pitfalls of believing in illusions.

We need to learn to become free and reliant on our own inherent Divine Nature then no longer will we need to indulge in magical practices, religious rituals, talisman hunting, fore-telling futures - these are all the toys of the beginners, the children who later have to learn to grow up. As we free ourselves from the illusory conceptions they no longer have any power over us - nor will you be affected by misguided persons trying to harm you by them.

To doubt one's capacity to become a free happy individual has to be overcome. The philosophies of the community in general - the media, the schools, religions and politics - seem to act against the real well-being of people because these philosophies place us into set patterns and limitations, to step out of line with popular ideas one becomes 'radical' or a 'heretic'. To dare to be free, to be a responsible, balanced and intelligent person and to understand what life is really about results in the healing and balancing energies of nature taking a hand in one's life.

Nature 'rejoices' in at last having a person open to natural Cosmic Laws and one makes big strides in individual evolution to maturity. One then comes to be a co-worker with Nature and Cosmic Hierarchy and one comes into genuine knowledge in harmony with the fact of becoming a 'genuine' person and one freed from the delusions of a self-centre approach to life. The old saying the "Truth will make you free" becomes a real experience.

What modern thinkers are saying:

"But we need not maintain that life has nothing better to offer than tests and trials. On a personal and worldly level one may experience all kinds of difficulties and conflicts, but on a higher mind level we always find harmony and tranquility where all is well."

Johan Quanjer - Editor of New Humanity

"The mind is all the time in movement, chasing desires. The nature of the desire is such that it is deceptive because it operates on the mind unconsciously and modifies itself by the association of other desires and thus we are unable to check them then and there. It seems that the human mind is a field for exploring various urges and contradictory instincts. The Esoteric philosophy emphasises the urgent necessity of observing the subtle activities of the mind with alertness, so that we can establish a vital link with the Supreme Power of Reality."

Dr K M P Mohammed Cassim PhD
Founder President Perfect Peace Lodge

THE QUEST FOR TRUTH
(2)

CLASSIFIED

In our search for Truth throughout our life we appear to seek in accordance with our needs at a particular time. For example - if we get certain illnesses we explore the possibility of a healing through "spiritual" or "natural" means. In the main these explorations denote a feeling of lack at the time - a lack of fulfilment or a sense of isolation from the Cosmic Parent.

These periods are really valuable to us if we are honest enough to admit our weaknesses. We may find healing which give us an added assurance that we are seeking in the right direction.

Then we explore such teachings as Mystical Christianity, Buddhism, Hinduism, Freemasonry and Rose Cross. All these add precious pearls to our spiritual gems which help us to realise that, at the end of it all, all Truth is ONE. A little truth seems to be spread here and a little there: no one organisation possesses the whole Truth in spite of their claims.

Also, there are many "way out" teachings which, if not checked, can lead one into many illusions of Truth and one can find one's self trapped once again in a prison of misconceptions. Here we are referring to such practices as Kundalini Yoga and any system where the Chakra or Spiritual Centres are concerned. Dabbling in these systems one can end up in dire circumstances and eventually to spiritual blindness. To believe that certain centres have to be opened or that one can send out "spiritual" forces or energies through these centres is a trap of the human phase of mind in believing that the person can control spiritual forces. This is a dangerous practice and to mix these practices up with set religious dogmas not based upon truth is an error indeed.

In very truth the human organism is perfectly designed from the beginning. If one's centres were not already in a functional process then any pursuit of spiritual truths would be impossible. At the NORMAL level everything within the perfectly designed human temple is continually operative otherwise we could not be mature and fully integrated individuals. What we need to do is to follow the inner disipline of correcting our faulty vision of Truth and to follow the life of Right Living, Right Thinking and Right Acting. These are all possible if we spend time in learning the Cosmic Laws.

We should ask ourselves: Can a human being increase or decrease the Fulness of the All Present Divine Love? Can I add to or take away from the Perfect and Whole Divine Presence? Of course we cannot. To believe that we can influence the All Powerful "God" to be more present or to do more in our direction is the belief of the immature. All we need to do is to cast aside our own illusions and we begin to see that the Fulness is right where we are. Divine Love is always in control, always accessible, always there as soon as we open our hearts to it and recognise the All-Present, Perfectly Operating Divine Presence which cannot possibly fail or be absent from any part of Its Universe. Because of our seeming frailties we erect all kinds of opinions, ideas and inventions from how life seems to affect us as individuals. But fortunately enough they are only illusions and their effects pass away when we are able to face up to them and see the unrealities.

Usually we limit ourselves because of an image we set up for ourself. We see ourself as this kind of person or that kind of person. We get worried and go off to the astrologer or clairvoyant to find out if there are any more "mysteries" about ourselves to learn. Unfortunately we get carried away by the 'false vestiges of truth' pointing towards us and we find our self shackled by energies and powers which we are told are our destiny or fate. We then acquire a very set image of ourself and become the victim of our own image-making. We get hooked on the ideas of self erected barriers, limitations and other so-called forces working for or against us.

The person on the real Initiatic Path however refuses to accept all this mortal 'rubbish' - for rubbish it is in effect that has eventually to be worked through. The Perfect Person is the one who is a free, fully integrated individual and requires no limited man-made information from without. The Right Knowledge for living a balanced, harmonious and fulfilled life is forever trying to make Itself known to us by many ways - in the language of symbol, experience and feeling. Our rightful place in Nature is to be At-One with All Life. Our thoughts and actions should be pure, unselfish and geared to learning to live aright, to be in harmony with our fellows and we should discover how to be of service rather than a draw-back to ourselves and others.

The Universe is ruled by Laws precise and operating whether we are aware of them or not, and when we work against these laws we bring about our own undoing. Ignorance, to Nature, is no excuse and, as we have had examples recently of sudden disasters in various parts of the world, this shows the slow and steady outworking of the mental poisons spread abroad by human selfishness, refusal to follow moral tendencies and a thorough dislike of a disciplined and ordered life. Even though mankind still seeks other reasons, such as bad circumstances, ignorance, outside causes, they cannot free him from the Law. The sooner humanity awakens to its rightful place in the affairs on this planet the sooner will conditions balance themselves and order be experienced. To learn that, in Truth, devoid of all excuses, ALL unpleasant conditions: disease, famine and unfulfilment, are the effects of wrong living is a hard lesson indeed - but the great Teachers have tried to tell us this all along.

Do not fall for all the reasons of the worldly philosophies and sciences. Remain firm in the Knowledge that the Perfect Pattern for Living is already written in every heart. Let us look within ourselves to discover the real glory of nature's love and wisdom within us. Let us awaken to the truth that we are the instruments of an all wise, all knowing Intelligence which knows what It is about and what It is fulfilling in the life of every individual. Let us quit being stupid and self-centred and discover that we can experience a life of beautiful conditions; a life of complete fulfilment with greatly reduced risks of disease and other unpleasant circumstances. If this were not possible then we might as well see the absolute uselessness of life or of our purpose here. Even organised religion in its dogmatic state points to perfection, points to a perfect life, points to the day when mankind will overcome. The unfortunate thing is that it will not allow people to free themselves from ideas only and therefore acts as bands around one's feet. To be really free, we should work towards the practical application of true ideas and bring them into realities. "Truth" is of no use if it remains simply an ideal or an abstract conception. The very fact of the possibility of seeing a perfect world opens the way to realise and experience it also.

I N N E R S A N C T U A R Y T E A C H I N G S

THE QUEST FOR TRUTH
(3)

CLASSIFIED

Whilst our goal is to grow beyond the need of religion and similar systems, as humans, we often find times when Reality seems obscure. One should not be dismayed during these periods because the human focal point is linked to all forms in nature and one becomes aware of how the "lower" forms of life can suffer at the hands of human ignorance.

For this reason the Sanctuary maintains a rigorous training system for those wishing to take up a Priesthood wherein they can feel in tune with all beings and act as a catalyst in preventing trouble or in encouraging higher pursuits. Priesthood in the Sanctuary can be a rewarding experience. We maintain the 'orthodox' view of the 'Apostolic Succession' although to us this is a turn over of the ancient Right of Succession wherein authority to teach is passed on from teacher to teacher. Also we regularly hold a Communion Service but our ethos or meaning is different from the institutionalised organisations. Our Christ is the Mythical one which was known way back in ancient Egypt, as respecting the western tradition, it culminated in the Inner Wisdom or Gnosis in the Greek and Egyptian Schools around 600 BC. Historians and theologians are aware of the fact that what is called 'Christianity' today is far removed from that practised by the Ekklesia in the early centuries A.D. Such literature as found in The Dead Sea Scrolls and The Nag Hammadi Library prove this. The early fathers also had an interest in the Hermetic philosophies.

The True Christian Gnosis is really a synthesis of the present and most reliable and practical teaching collated around the early pre-Christian centuries and early Christain era and it was not until the Emperor Constantine, in the 4th Century AD, demanded full political power without any kind of opposition, and with coniving Bishops, assumed absolute authority for the souls of man that the Light began to fade. The truly enlightened teachers, their lives at risk, then went underground to maintain and carry on the work of the Cosmic Hierarchy; Spiritual Truths cannot be legislated.

The True Priesthood is the right of every man and woman, for through right living and self-purification the human body becomes tuned to the Reality Itself and the person is able to function under the correct energies, free from illusion and therefore one becomes a priest within his, or her, own temple and does not need the teachings channelled through secondary sources.

We are able, in some degree, to understand the 'Incomprehensible' by Its functioning out here in visible manifestation. The outer manifestation of 'God' or 'First Cause' was called the Pleroma, a Greek word meaning the 'fulness of everything'. In its deeper meaning it refers to the fact that the 'Fulness' is present in every aspect of visible and invisible Creation. Paul says, "In Him (the Christ Consciousness) dwells all the fulness (Pleroma) of the Godhead bodily". This admits that this 'God' cannot be away from Its own Creation - but rather is very much at one with it. Therefore it matters not who or what we are as everyone has equal access to the Parent within. Institutionalised Christianity forgets this fact when it is under the belief that the other religions have to be replaced by theirs.

As we have mentioned before that meditations, ceremonies of the Eucharist are here for our help, our stepping stones to maturity and when we reach our goal we no longer need these because we become 'God-guided' from within.

In the higher priesthood we come to learn that the Christos-myth is continually being played out in the bodily temple because every cell, organ and part in the spiritual anatomy of this body is the expression of one or other cosmic energy being manifest at our level. In very truth the whole body is a compound of the harmonious energy substances existing throughout the Universe. Being initiated into this knowledge enables the priest to discipline his, or her, own personal errors and to reach out into the farther unknown resources which lie potentially within every person.

The only way in which the higher Cosmic Energies can be experienced is by purifying the mind which means that we need to halt the process of thinking like a mortal being and to programme our minds in the direction of Wholeness, Harmony and Perfection. To still hang on to our human weaknesses and to make excuses for ourselves defeats the growth to awareness.

The Cosmic Creator or Manifestation is THE Intelligence Itself and in spite of all the attempts to stifle the Truth by organised religions, philosophies and psuedo-esoteric groups this Intelligence maintains Its Channels for the maintenance of the Truth of Reality in every age. It presents its channels in each generation and successive teachers are guided to adapt the material to suit the needs of the students in every age.

The false vestiges of truth will fade away and that which can never be destroyed will be revealed. Mankind will cease hood-winking itself and as the human race matures into perfect manhood and womanhood the Truth as It is, as It has been and It always will remain will blossom forth as the first shoots in spring-time and brotherhood and peace will be experienced on Earth. This precious Truth is maintained and protected by this Sanctuary which acts as the direct instrument for the great Hierarchy of Beings who live to act as channels for the Great Love and Wisdom of the Universe and who also maintain a bridge over which the Secrets of Life are preserved and taught to those who have the courage to stand naked in the Light of Truth.

Our Sanctuary has stood the tests of time and stands as the centre for personal divine illumination in these islands for the Light of Truth is not to be located in any temple built with hands or any assumed 'sacred' grove or geographical spot but it is there to be awakened in the Heart of every being.

Through the centuries groping mankind has believed that the "Word of God" can be crystallised into the form of a sacred book and from this concept has sprung many wars and suppositions about the real nature of the Universe. The enlightened person no longer needs books from which he, or she, gather sustenance. Everything in the world of effects takes on a new perspective and the beauty of nature is enjoyed and books, art and music become things in which we find new fields of harmony and a means whereby we help our fellow creatures.

The nature of the Universal Mind is pure Agapé or a quality which transcends all human efforts to describe or experience It accurately. It is the life and Power in which we 'live, move and have our being' - the Life within which transcends all other forces within the Cosmos. It is the power which moves the mighty quasars, the pulsars, galaxies and great suns of all descriptions and we as tiny beings on this planet are linked by the chains of atoms which, by the very fact of unity gives us an affinity with the remotest star. To positively meditate on this fact helps us to free ourselves from the mortality in which we appear to be locked. In our work to cosmic liberation we need to look beyond the human foibles which we invent to preserve our own little world of transient dreams. In our growing up we awaken to the Glory of the Life of which we are a part.

THE QUEST FOR TRUTH
(4)

CLASSIFIED

Because we have explained what happened in the past regarding the history of the Gnostic Church since the Council of Nicea, we should cease to carry with us a "middle age" mentality and look forward to the New Cycle.

Resentments and prejudice act as barriers to Truth. The Master taught us to "Love our Enemies" and in the light of the true Gnosis we really have no enemies. Our misguided brothers and sisters are under the Law and they receive the effects of their own ignorance. Knowing how terrible this can be at times it behoves us to exercise compassion and be ever ready to help: because we are all part of one organism and the compassionate ones function as anti-bodies in a sick community.

Being followers of the Gnosis our spiritual faculties are purified and we see more clearly the errors of mankind. This can seemingly add to the difficulties in helping people. However, we should take it as a challenge to exercise our discipline more vigourously therefore increasing our capacity for Love. If we succeed in the difficult task of maintaining the right balance we appear to be rewarded with further hard work. This is logical because, even in the secular society, the capable ones carry the weak. In a society over-charged with mass mental poison it is those who remain purified and apart (the Ekklesia) that help to stem the calamity of many greater happenings which threaten the human family as a whole. The Perfect Ones act as Mediators or Saviours in that sense - this then is part of the inner teachings.

There are still deeper aspects of the Mysteries which cannot be explained owing to the delicate nature of the subjects and how the disciples are individually affected by them. This is why we now take students on a "one to one" basis which enables us to tackle the barriers of each person separately.

To help ourself towards the kind of harmony that we have mentioned we need to enter into a discipline for living and stay with it until we gain spiritual freedom. The way recommended by all the teachers is to programme the thought and idea world with the material required to build according to the Perfect Archetype.

We need to accept the fact that the Universal Mind - call it God if you wish - is in all ways Whole and Perfect to infinitude and is manifesting Its Complete and Whole Nature in every way throughout space and through that which appears to us as matter and form. The Universal Mind expresses Itself as Pure and Perfect Love (Agapé) and can never fail in Its own outworking for the good of every individual and the Cosmos as a whole. Because It is the only REAL Presence - all that which appears to be opposite to that Divine Nature is the illusion experienced by the individual through persistently living and acting in accordance with one's own perceptions and suppositions. Our own concepts, opinions and hypotheses have no effect on the Cosmic Mind nor can we influence It in anyway from what It IS in Reality and Truth.

With this in mind we then ACCEPT this Truth and act in accordance with the Divine Law of Perfect Love and Justice. To maintain ABSOLUTE reliance along these lines leads to the eventual experience of the outworking of the Power Within. Persistence and perseverence result in the final breakthrough to freedom from those experiences which 'bug' us and cause us concern: illusions fade away, which proves the illusions to be illusions, and that which is Real and True is revealed and realised; we become effective instruments or vehicles for the All-Present Reality to reveal Itself in our lives; and we arrive at the awareness of our Oneness with all Life. Never seek to POSSESS Divine Realities - they are there and need only to be witnessed.

The Law is that "we reap what we sow"; or every effect has a cause, either in the Reality or in the illusion. Knowing this we should be wise in using the "materials" for the temple which are in harmony with the finished structure. We cannot build a Perfect structure with bits of resentment, possessiveness, immoral actions and self-indulgence. Because the Whole and Perfect State is absolutely pure and devoid of any mortal concepts we cannot reach a transcendant state if we are in the least "polluted".

The Head of our Order, having had to reach this point in the Discipline, can see all the barriers in the mind of the candidate and therefore is in position to help to overcome all faults. The teacher's aim is to free the disciple from the need of the teacher and to pass him, or her, further on the path of spiritual evolution. The student has the choice then of becoming a teacher or to journey on to wider fields.

There are some students who still believe that all they have to do is to keep their minds 'free' by their thoughts and by periodic meditation on the perfect and whole. This has proved ineffective and they ask why nothing seems to change or imporve. We should not be ignorant of the fact that our thought-world needs to be carried out into our actions and relationships with our fellows. It is no use trying to see others as 'Children of God' and at the same time reacting to their errors and condemning or criticising their actions. We need to stop judging and act towards them as beloved friends or relations. We cannot change others but some students try to change others by 'metaphysical' or 'spiritual' means. Unless we, ourselves, are changed, we are in no position to even attempt to help others. Jesus said, "Physician heal thyself": a statement which is loaded with a depth of Truth.

Most groups these days, and we say this from experience and observation, such as many different groups of freemasonry and institutionalised religion, lack the ancient discipline. This discipline is the discipline of self purification which exists in the true "mystery" or "esoteric" schools. It is a system which has also been passed down by the succession of teachers, hierophants and archons initiated into the real mysteries of life.

One can find reference to this ancient discipline mentioned by writers who have tried to get information about how the mystery orders operated. Gerald Massey, a prolific writer on the origins of present day beliefs, refers to this as the "Discipline of the Secret"; a Jesuit writer refers to this as the "Disciplina Arcani"; other mystics also refer to this system in similar terms. The Duc de Palatine, an Initiate of many esoteric orders, wrote about this discipline and incorporated the necessity for such a discipline in the new movements he founded. Such teachings are now synthesised within the work and teachings of The Santuary of the Gnosis in its different sections: The New Church Universal and The Order of the Holy Pleroma. Several students of the mysteries object to such a discipline but without it one cannot hope to reach "Christhood Perfection" or Boddhisattvaship, or whatever, without it and it is owing to this objection that they never do. We cannot expect to simply go along listening to lectures, involving ourselves in ceremonies, rituals and meditations forever without the thought of "graduating"; when the pressures of responsibility come heavy, the hangers-on depart and complain that this is not what they have been seeking.

To be a true Initiate means a "heavy" responsibility for ones own actions and a capacity for being self-motivated in this work without needing to be cajoled or enticed with "carrots" along the way. Being an Initiate means being a "self-reliant" and fully integrated person and free from all hang-ups which 'bug' the average person. Knowing this, how does one face up to the challenge. There are beings on this planet, on this level, whose knowledge and actions would put all our present human spiritual, social and scientific knowledge into the kindergarten by comparison. These people are living examples of the Discipline we have mentioned and they recognise us only by the disciplines in life which we follow.

All this might seem tough talk but if you honestly desire to reach 'spiritual heights' then they do not come by academic means, the intellect is a barrier. By absorbing too much academic knowledge we tend to rationalise and reason from the standpoint of "worldly" hypotheses. The Inner Truth is not perceived by any phase of the human level of consciousness, therefore we need to side-step the claims of the sentient world to understand the Eternal.

INNER SANCTUARY TEACHINGS

THE QUEST FOR TRUTH
(5)

CLASSIFIED

The best way to achieve results in realising and experiencing the harmony of nature is firstly, to avoid preconceiving or trying to imagine, that is making mental images, to help onesself. Many students waste valuable time in attempting the impossible. By the impossible we mean that the conscious level of mind's function cannot see the correct state of the Universal Wholeness. Human image-making prevents one from knowing the Truth because it is continually viewing and assessing the "effects" end of the process.

Because we really wish to experience the Reality of Life we should be prepared, at any cost to one's own pride or fear of one's little world being shattered, to learn and accept the Truth. This Truth turns out to be entirely different to one's concept of It.

Starting from what the great teachers have told us about the nature of Reality we need to accept this and then slowly erase the barriers to the experience of It. One can help one's self by contemplating the Reality of the All-Presence: that Life which is forever in activity in spite of all that appears outwardly and whatever all people think or suppose exists.

The first Law of the Universe is Harmony and, because the harmony, wholeness and Love is already there to be experienced we can be absolutely sure of finding It. We can never experience that which does not exist. This statement raises the problem of experiencing pain and suffering. In fact this happens only in the human phase of mind which possesses the faculty of CHOICE and, according to one's actions and reactions to life's outworkings we produce our own experience of what is being played out at the time. For example, you might react to what you thought was somebody's attitude to you - they appeared to be unpleasant to you and you then created your own image of them; you might resent someone else's success or power over you; you could even be thoughtless in dominating others and exploiting others for your own ends; or you may be jealous of your "loved one" and place them in your own mental "straight jacket". All these attitudes are the "seeds" which sprout and grow into unpleasant conditions like, disease, fear and instability. Whereas if you encourage harmony between people and help others to be happy without fear or thought for yourself you see the results (or fruits) as pleasant and joyful. There is nothing mysterious or fantastic about this, it is the way things are. This indicates that the mode of outworking is the same whether we make trouble for ourselves or create happiness for ourselves. In spite of all efforts by some religionists to refute this it can be proved to be the True.

There is a misunderstanding that Gnostics teach that the world is evil. Even some Christians react to us on this point: but this is not what we are saying. St Paul in the New Testament warns about following "the ways of the world", its philosophies and the traditions of men: one has only to look out in the world, the media, its politics, its money-seeking systems to have some idea of what we are talking about. The "world" is NOT evil: it is "evil" which we see and experience by way of what we project into it. Jesus taught that we can have life differently, not in some heaven after "death", but here on earth by changing our lifestyles and motives. To experience the harmony and peace discribed by Jesus in this seemingly "evil"world we need to go through a completely new programming and to adapt our thinking and actions to a condition which would appear alien to those following after their "worldly" concepts. It is this lack of self-discipline which is the "ignorance of the Law" and which results in the "evil" we see in the world. This is a basic principle but appears difficult and "advanced" to those who do not dare to approach the change.

Therefore, whatever religion or philosophical system one follows, The Truth, AS IT IS, must remain; and the "Way" or "Path" of understanding, must also remain the same in spite of the myriads of systems set up to follow the Precepts of the Teachers. Some Christians are under the illusion that their religion is the only one teaching the Truth: 'because Jesus was the Son of God, there can be no other, and therefore since God sent His Son there can be no other religion'. This implies Supreme Authority, as it were, straight from the horse's mouth - all others are pagan or heretical. The same attitude persists in Judaism and Islam. It is this dogmatic ignorance which leads to war and mistrust between the nations. Fascism has been borne out of the Christian faith because of the dogmatic interpretation of its own scriptures - not realising that it was only human beings who wrote the books in the first place.

To sweep away all this nonsense is the task of the enlightened beings amongst us. We need to learn that we are all one human family, to trust each other and respect each other's approach to finding the true light nnd guidance from within. Life can, and should be a happy and harmonious experience because that is its nature from source. We reap the fruits of our own labours - hence we each have our own experience of the "world". Jesus taught that "whatever measure you meet life it will be measured unto you again" and "whatever you sow, that shall you also reap": there cannot be any better or more precise description of life's outworking than this, yet in spite of this many seek to avoid these truths and invent their own reasons for life's happenings and try to find ways round the situation. However, because all effects out there in the world, appearing good or bad to the senses, are transient, being subject to change, it is only when we root our life in harmony with that which is the Eternal Reality that we can KNOW inwardly what are the truly harmonious and whole principles of Being. Learn to have perfect assurance in the true nature of the Reality, which is Divine Love and its own intrinsic harmony will infiltrate into one's world of effects.

Let us share our thoughts with St Paul in his Epistle to the Romans, chapter 8: "Who shall (or even can) separate us from the Love of Christ (Divine Love - Agapé). Shall tribulations, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?" We can also include our own illusions, own suppositions, false concepts, our own blindness and ignorance, nay all these are overcome by patience and discipline. Even though Love seems far away it is impossible for It to be so. Let us now be also persuaded that neither the illusion of death or even life - nor angels, archangels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor anything in the past or in the future nor political powers, health services, magicians, astrologers, hierophants, archons, priests nor anything which appears in the objective world. Nothing can separate us - for in this substance "we live move and have our being". "Love cannot fail", says St Paul for It is that Source which brought the Universe into being and maintains and governs it in justice, harmony and perfection. Throw in your lot with Divine Love and follow the discipline of the secret and your tribulations will vanish away as the darkness at sunrise. Consider all The Epistle to the Hebrews, chapter 11. Meditate often on this talk when doubt appears.

All the seemingly self-active energies of evil which appear in the world are the "devils" and dragons created by wilfully opposing the True Law. These "images of menace" tend to bother and torment us - but only if we feed them with the intentions of our own wilfulness. The Law is such that in the Christ/Boddhisattva we should not destroy anything but rather learn to see the usefulness of the "evil energy" purified and reformed - like a "wild creature" that is tamed and then becomes a friend.

Love is the only energy which can bring about a change of this nature and is proved by experience. When fear and mistrust is overcome by Love then one finds him or herself at one with all created life.

CLASSIFIED

THE QUEST FOR TRUTH
(6)

Because the Gnosis is based upon the way things are, it must follow that all 'systems' or 'techniques' used in individual development must follow natural laws. These laws or modes were known by the priests of ancient Egypt, the Solar religions of South America and later by the "Gnostics" during the early Christian era. One can prove this by noting that the Hermetic Teachings were followed by the priests in the early church. There were two streams in the early church - the Jewish Christians which knew the Cabalistic meanings of the Torah and the 'Gentile' Church which followed the synthesised teachings of that day. In the New Testament accounts it is indicated that Jeshu was aware of the inner mysteries because he accused the lawyers of keeping them from the people; he also taught the public in parables but gave his disciples the straight teachings.

The fact that Jeshu very often stayed up 'praying', sometimes in the 'garden', indicates to Solar Initiates that he was associated with, and had knowledge of, the Solar Doctrines. We know that many of the ancient rituals were arranged to coincide with the periods of full Moon and this practice is still prevelant today. Because the Moon is associated with the Feminine aspects of Deity it could be said that whilst a strong Masculine front was kept up, the feminine influences were received during the full-moon festivals. Also, because of the lack of equilibrium in the male dominated orders they failed to know that a balanced teaching is contained in the Solar (Sun) area itself. Because the Inner Solar Mysteries are taught only to special pupils there is little known about them, neither can any books be obtained which deal with the subject, although some of the secrets are now being discovered by physicists and secret orders which have recently been formed.

Energy from the Sun, being the substance of which we are all made, can be directed within the human organism to step up human receptivity of higher frequency experiences.

In the Jeshu teachings we are informed that "the Light of the body is in the eye". It is through the eyes we take in Light waves in order to interpret the physcial world but other parts of the body are also sensitive to this Light. Light is the carrier wave of all the other frequencies and as this was noticed by the 'ancients' they considered Light to be the Supreme Power. This is true inasmuch as without this Solar Energy we could not exist.

Thus we have a Light which gives a world of outward experiences of the Cause of the outer worlds. Actually it is one and the same Light but as it appears to function in two different ways, pulses and waves, it really is the One expressing Itself in its dual nature. Unless we can understand the Dual Nature correctly we will fall short in overcoming our difficulties. Learning to understand the Dual Nature of the Life Energy has proved difficult to some of our students whose thinking has been programmed by a masculine dominated society and a false impression of femininity has been accepted.

Femininity is interpreted by its Source function of Wisdom. The Holy Spirit in the Hebrew Mystery Religion was considered the feminine force and in the majority of mystery religions Sophia was considered dominant.

If one reads the Song of Solomon in the Old Testament and in the Apocrypha the importance given to Wisdom is prevelant. Thus Love being Male, as we explain in detail by demonstration, Wisdom is definitely female and if one lacks a balance of the two, he or she, will run into crystallisations of human suppositions. The union of Love (Agapé) and Wisdom (Sophia) is the mystic marriage and final bonding in the higher mysteries and the ecstasy of the mystics and spiritual masters is found in the pure spiritual experience of Divine Intercourse - the two becoming one. This ultimate union would, firstly, appear as the Divine Androgyne which, with further merging, results as a complete sysergy emanating two primary energies like a Sun. This knowledge constitutes the basic doctrines of the Solar Mysteries. The 'know how' or modus operandi of the "Way" is taught to persons who give up everything to receive this knowledge or Inner Gnosis. This knowledge is the same knowledge which was known by the priests of ancient Egypt, China, India and South America, not forgetting the primary mystery centres in Great Britain which have survived the "length of time" and are still in existence. To discover them one must have fulfilled the requirements in their daily living before they can discover the initiators. In truth the real Mystery Schools and Teachings have never been absent even though book researchers have been unable to trace them. It is because they are genuinely 'Hidden' they are known only to those who find them. This 'inner' knowledge became known as the Gnosis in the Mystery Schools and was also taught in the Spiritual Disciplines of the early church.

Because of the special nature of the True Gnosis it is not to be found by merely reading scriptures, performing religious rites or any other magical operation, meditation or any other pre-determined act. These indulgences help us to bring it into focus but do not affect it in any way. Because of its profound transcendental nature one needs to quieten all mortal ways of thinking to enable It to descend into Its own elements. The Boddhisattvas of the East are aware of this so they spend much time in calming the mind so that the "outer world" cannot prevent the experience of the One from taking place. One can see then that the rites and ceremonies of Masses, Eucharists, and humanly manipulated operations cannot give the experience of the Divine Reality - they only give the experience of the physical energies at the perimeter of the Divine Outworking.

The True Gnosis then is mainly concerned with the experience of the Divine Reality and this is attainable by both men and women as It is not affected by either: It is beyond sexuality. One needs to pass beyond his or her sexuality to properly experience That which contains the All. Also, because of the Universality or Cosmic Nature of the Gnosis, one can use the symbols of any of the world religions to define it. There is only One Truth and only One Reality no matter in what religion, group or school it is taught and there is one way alone in which it can be understood. The way to It transcends all religions and groups. The beauty of all this explanation is that at the end of all our describing and explanations the truth is that the Divine Reality can be experienced by those who tread the hard way to becoming one with It. It is because of this fact that the great teachers made great sacrifices to lead the way for others.

Because of the naturalness of the inner teachings it is better to go out and commune with nature actual than to sit and visualise it in the mind only. The real essence is in the things themselves.

When the Gnosis is understood and practiced through only one religious system it becomes an outer form of Gnosis or a Gnosis gleaned through one avenue with its appended practices. For example, in the 'Christian Gnosis' those following this discipline tend to become fixed on their own techniques, that the followers assume that the central act of the Mass or Eucharist is the only valid method of "invoking Christ". As long as they believe this they will be limited to their own programming. The 'Inner' or True Gnosis is gained when one achieves complete 'God guidance'by total submission to the Christ Light within and remains intact and non-reliant on external religious practices, a complete and free'Child of God'. What we have indicated is that there can be an error in considering it to be the true way if one simply follows the outward form of the Gnostic teachings - that is by enacting 'gnostic' rituals and reading 'gnostic' scriptures or literature - this does not constitute true knowledge. True Gnosis begins when we bring the teachings to bear on the final submission to the requirements of purity and in transcending the distracting faculties of the human phase of mind: the process of overcoming the lower psychic and physical desires of the ego. Like any other form of spiritual quest, the letter of the gnosis is not the Gnosis.

The word "channelling" is a term now used widely within the New Age teachings because the method appears quite respectable and of some importance, however it still indicates some kind of 'mediumship' or 'being a channel' for some recognisable entity which has not yet overcome the desire for presenting the Light at a personality level. The whole activity is based upon the assumption that some of the characters actually exist. We can prove to our students that much of this 'channelling' is based totally on the desire for an 'ego trip' and there is too much importance given to the personalities, of both 'channel' and the entity being 'channelled'. Our advice to students is to avoid such practices. One can gain inspired knowlege or information direct from source and in no way is a secondary party considered valid.

INNER SANCTUARY TEACHINGS

CLASSIFIED

THE QUEST FOR TRUTH
(7)

By now the student of the Gnosis should be awakening to the fact that the Gnosis, or Inner Knowledge, is not in the words or lectures themselves. The truth of the matter is in the realisation of the futility of knowing facts, and in being a natural and self-expressive individual: the Gnosis is not in the knowing about it but, as has frequently been pointed out, is in the living it out in everything we do.

Furthermore, in presenting a "new" approach to Priesthood we present the idea of every person as a priest in their own right and the Church, Ekklesia or Order then becomes a fellowship wherein people can meet and share their interests; in fact the Real Truth has nothing to do with religion or any other system.

Everyone who is engaged in the enlightenment of humanity is a priest - whether or not they have been through an act of ordination. The True Priest is the one who follows the Way of Truth as it IS.

The dictionary describes a priest as "a person ordained to act as a mediator between God and man, to administer the sacraments, etc". From the point of view of the Inner Knowledge all people are, because they are here, mediators between that which is called "God" and mankind which is a whole and complete organism within the Cosmic frame of reference.

The teaching is that people are the Cosmic Mind at this level. Gnosis includes all the terminologies used to dispense the teachings based upon Cosmic Truths to mankind. We should not run away with the idea that the word, or term, 'gnosis' is the only word used to denote the 'teaching'. We even need to consider the possibility of the non-existence of a God.

We study together to enlighten ourselves on these matters and as a disciple or a teacher we maintain the knowledge of Cosmic Truths bodily for our own personal spiritual awareness. We are then in position to help others discover their own contact with the Divinity within. As long as we leave others free to be free then we discover our own freedom. Any attribute is gained as we allow it to function within ourself. It is no use praying for love and understanding if we do not allow them to emanate as they move within us - we cannot immediately come into possession of any spiritual attribute without the practice of doing it.

We can only have what we are - or as Jesus puts it, "as a man thinketh in his heart, that he already is", and he also pointed out that we reap only what we sow. This works both ways - for good or ill.

Priesthood is not, as they say, "sexist" because it does not relate to any gender; neither can it. The idea of a masculine dominated priesthood without the feminine influence gives only an unbalanced experience of the calling.

There are records that Lady Abbesses existed in the early church in Britain and one such lady, St Bride, is reported to have trained 5 Bishops. This indicates that her spiritual qualities were, we would say, equal to that of a Bishop. The consecration of a Lady Abbess is equivalent to that of a Bishop. Also, who are men to say that the Divine Parent gives more blessings to men than women? The teaching given that the Christ Consciousness is accessible more through a man than a woman shows an ignorance of spiritual law. The fact that it is the blood of the mother that one receives at birth should cause one to ponder on the question - Whence the blood of Christ?

Another interesting fact that the Gospels record is that Mary Magdalene was the first person to whom Jesus proved his resurrection or state of rising above human "weakness". Intitiate Priests will see here the allegory that without delicately balancing his feminine quality he could not have achieved resurrection. Neither can the "Ascension" be achieved without the fusion of masculine and feminine Cosmic energies. These energies are naturally within both genders in the whole of humanity.

The difference between a dedicated priest and the people at large is that a priest's life is devoted entirely to the study of the nature of the Universal Mind, God, and how best the greater awareness of It can be achieved; whereas the person engaged in a casual interest grows mainly by trial and error. The Priest, however, is taught the 'dangers' of following erroneous fields of pursuit and how the 'mortal' area of consciousness is apt to misinterpret the Myths and guidelines for personal emancipation.

In practice there are two types of people: those who are not aware of their spiritual nature and those whose life is devoted to seeking to understand what is true about life. The first type are the worldly ones who seek after the things which lead to material comfort for the satisfaction of basic desires and they also react to any suggestion of change. Then there are those who seek to find how they can become mature people and be of service within the natural scheme of things. Jesus called the first type the 'dead' or

'asleep' and the others the 'awakened' or 'elect'. We should always bear in mind that the two types follow entirely different standards and there is no compromise between the two. The first type follow after the transient and illusory forms and the awakened follow after that which is real and permanent.

Religion when understood correctly should provide the right guidance to help those awakening from their sleep, or death, into the real and permanent state. However, when a religion becomes crystallised it remains in the illusion itself and is in no position to provide genuine help. Religion should act as the door to Reality but how often does this remain closed because of the failure to understand Cosmic Laws?

To help ourselves over the barrier of our animal nature to enflame the Divine Spark within us, we need to discipline ourselves in such a way that we do not react or respond to stimuli from outside of ourselves. We need to control our feelings so that we do not violently react to the ideas and conditions which at present hold us in bondage. A complete change of values and living philosophy needs to be brought into being before we can become free. The laws within materialism hold no validity in the realm of Spirit or Divine Mind so we can no more seek to possess wealth, people or things. We can no more follow after pursuits which satisfy our own personal desires, neither can we make a pact with God or 'fix it' through priests or teachers. The Laws of the Cosmos appear completely alien to the rules existing in a materialistic society and we therefore have to become purified on the Cosmic Law's terms and not on ours.

We need to learn that the world of Reality is what It Is and in this world all is perfect harmony. All Life exists in a state of Perfection and Harmony and is At One with the Source of all Being. The only way to know this is to accept this Truth and live at one with It. No matter what one does one cannot change It - it is ourselves who need to change. Meditate on the fact that you now live in a Perfect State. Nothing can die, change or be affected in any way because there are no opposite forces in existence to influence a change. We deal with energies and forces and not in things and personalities. Once you get hooked on personality or things you are back in the illusion. This rule applies also in the attachment to the teacher or elder brother and sister. It is only in becoming free that you can learn the lesson of Compassion.

Try to remember always that everything you see out there in the world of effects, in HUMAN OUTWORKING, the joys, pains, institutions, healing and social systems, the media and the legion of social standards are all the projections of the human images of life. The mass of humanity is concerned with possession, sexuality, politics and what they are getting out of it all and thus the effects reflect their desires.

Then there are the few who can see through all the false and illusory standards and try to bring order and harmony into their lives. This can be achieved by living and acting in accordance with a philosophy or teaching which is entirely opposed to the worldly philosophies and standards which are accepted by those who benefit by exploitation of these materialistic standards. It is to the few that the inner secrets of life are revealed.

The Priesthood within the Hidden Church of the Illuminati is totally different from the priesthood existing in the institutionalised religions owing to the fact that these religions have created dogmas and practices which cannot be proved by a careful study of the Scriptures they follow. Therefore the teachings of the Inner Priesthood remain esoteric, as they always have been.

An American researcher wrote to us a short time ago explaining that the Degree Rituals of the Order of the Illuminati had come into his possession but he could not trace the higher three degrees. We explained that the reason for his failure is that John Yarker Jnr did not pass them, and neither would he pass them, on to the existing Masonic Lodges because they had changed the details of the true mythos to the legend of Hiram Abiff.

Furthermore, the higher degrees are only to be found in the Inner Priesthood thereby perpetuating the traditions that the Real Mysteries are always in the hands of a valid Priesthood - as in Ancient Egypt, Greece and amongst most of the more primative Shaman priests. Exoterically the three degrees of Priesthood are shown as Deacon, Priest and Bishop - the Bishop acting as Hierophant.

For further information see:
The Hidden Church of the Illuminati
The Paradigm of Priesthood

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 61-70

LIBER #69 LANDSLIDE!

Personal & Confidential FIFTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

THE SANCTUARY OF THE GNOSIS

Original

Part One

CLASSIFIED

THE ANCIENT PATRIARCHS AND THEIR TEACHINGS

Count George Emmanuel

Personal & Confidential

There is now plenty of evidence to prove that civilisations existed on this planet long before the one we have now. Therefore it is in error to believe that our modern technologies are the end product of a mere five to six thousand years of evolution. When we study the lives of the ancient Sumerians and Egyptians we discover that they had quite admirable systems of government and law. They taught many subjects in their schools that must have taken centuries of research. We believe this knowledge was carried over from people who, previously, had suffered from some kind of global disaster and were finding, again, their former techniques of civilisation.

Civilisation lies in one's ability to live harmoniously with one's fellows and not in super technical achievements which now have become a burden inasmuch as we live under a threat of nuclear war. Also, in spite of the peoples of the western hemisphere living according to certain religious principles, we have an increase in crime, broken marriages and homes, and a growing populace of mental cases.

Patient research into the lives of the ancient, and so-called mythical, "Pre-flood" Patriarchs has led to the discovery that these people achieved a very high degree of harmonious conditions within their lives, personal and social. We find that this was due to the kind of philosophies by which they lived. Their success lay in their ability to live by such laws that approximated the true and natural laws existing in the Cosmos. They knew that according to the measure one's life was lived in agreement with the inherent nature of the Universal Intelligence, the more harmonious and healthy their experiences would be. This is genuine scientific living. They also knew that the external world in which they lived was but the reflected image of their own thoughts and actions, and the more these were motivated by beauty and love so would their world of experience be.

These thoughts give the reader some idea of what life was like in the past, fabled, age of "the gods" - from where many legends, recorded on old tablets, have come down to us in what could be described as "religious" records. Ancient myths, the world over, contain stories of a wonderful "golden age", a "Garden of Eden", in which mankind dwelt - wherein he was free from want, from sickness, and war. All this is still possible, we find, if one's philosophy for living is free from the ideas of evil.

The main content of the modern religions in our world today is based on a recognition of suffering, frustration and war and this is mainly due to man's inability to find the correct answers to his problems. In the main, the answers that he frequently comes up with tend to perpetuate, and make more prolific, the ills, because he feeds them rather than trying to discover a way to eliminate them.

Page 04

In our search for truth we find that whatever we believe, and whatever our opinions and suppositions are, our world will reflect that kind of environment back to us. This means that everything in the external sense of our existence is nothing more than the concrete evidence of our own thoughts, and that the only real substance of all manifested life is in that Source from whence stems our actual being.

Through an entirely different approach to life, a changed philosophy for living, we can come to experience new technologies. If the way of life that we live was more in line with the true nature of the universe, our technologies would bring us harmony and peace, instead of their reaching a point wherein the danger lurks threatening subsequent extinction.

The patriarchs of old used their sciences wisely and did not exploit them to gain worldly wealth or political domination. Even as late as the Eclectic Schools in Greece, it was regarded as an error even to use mathematics for commercial purposes or any other science for self-gain. Now we have that low-bred attitude of "in-fighting" for recognition in the various disciplines, and the exploitation of the arts and sciences breeds economical troubles and political mistrust. Mis-used natural energies and forces lead, inevitably, to a breakdown in human relationships, and eventually, of moral and law-abiding tendencies.

The gradual breakdown of human relationships, which can be seen in the growth of divorces, separations, lack of morals and disrespect for the law, brings in its wake an increase in new social diseases, mental and physical. As we are nearing many changes within the earth's physical structure, the people perpetuating these things will be less resistant to future conditions which might arise in the way of a higher radiation from the sun and from the experimentation with nuclear energy. Unpleasant mutations within the human specie could arise which might allow some with unpleasant personalities to take the lead as the dominant kind. Scientists have noticed that there has been an increase of 0.4% in solar output since 1976.

Page 02

The cause of most of the ills of the present day stem from, as already mentioned, the religious teachings and other philosophies believing in a need to suffer to evolve, and that suffering is part of man's lot. Freedom from suffering has not been helped by the formation of dogmas and doctrines based upon the whole idea of suffering as a punishment for wrong-doing, and of a God who allows His own Son to transfer this suffering to Himself as an attempt to make men free. Such happenings that have occurred since these teachings were introduced to the western world have been most disastrous and have landed us all in the unpleasant conditions we are experiencing at this time. Of late, we have had many new revelations of truth regarding the Universe and man. Because the discoverers of these truths found themselves at loggerheads with the large organised bodies, their findings are rejected and the religion known as Christianity refuses to grow up. Because organised Christianity, together with Judaism and Islam, has become so crystallised in its beliefs, it refuses to investigate, intelligently, any new light on Truth, it must, finally, fade away and give place to the new.

Can mankind look forward to the kind of changes mentioned, and can we come to know a world free from suffering and war? Yes, we can; but it will not come about by the intervention of an Avatar or World Saviour; these are part of the myth; but by a completely new philosophy or religion implemented by enlightened people, who will make it their responsibility to re-educate people according to natural and cosmic laws. What is more - this is not an entirely new teaching or doctrine but a re-introduction of the truths belonging to the ancient patriarchs who lived and experienced the kind of lives that now have become but a dream of the distant future. Mankind could have a "Kingdom of Heaven" on this planet in one generation if he would willingly exercise the laws which bring into being new worlds and free people. These laws his own key to bringing a new world of experiences into existence. It is but his failure to pursue honestly the teachings of the ancient "prophets" why he suffers by his own hands. Man's religions fail to bring real truths to bear because those that organise these institutions formulate dogmas which bring blindness to realities in themselves and their followers.

The early teachers of God's Truth were not afraid of a Hans Kung or a Father Edward Schillebeeck, for they fully understood that Truth and Reality are to be experienced and are not simply a dogma. Those versed in life's mysteries fully understand man's need for an intelligent enquiry and proof of his beliefs. A religion devoid of love becomes an empty shell and is of little help to its thousands of members desperately seeking to find answers to the questions of the day. If a religion is supposedly teaching God's Truth - why are its members left guessing?

This century presents problems that have never arisen before and "God's Church" is found wanting in its answers. To be still fully convinced that God has chosen a specific organisation, or group, for His own dispensation of knowledge, relating to Himself, is to be a long way out of step and shows a complete misunderstanding of the wisdom and nature of God.

An organised religion is merely a channel, or system, devised by men for men and to succeed fully in enlightening its members, it needs to be "all things to all men" - to lead them gently into the Light of Truth rather than to take an attitude of "this is how we see it and this is how it must be". I quote here from a researcher who was persecuted for his writings - Gerald Massey. In one of his privately printed works he says, "There is no origin of evil in the moral domain that is not derivable from ignorance." "The wickedness of a soul," says Hermes, "is its ignorance" and "there is no devil in the moral domain except the devilish determination to DO wrong or PERMIT the wrong to be done, after we have evolved the consciousness that recognises the right!" All that I can add to this statement is that it can be only the truly enlightened person that knows the Right that is to be done!

Whilst a man is still immersed in his own search for this Light and erects a system for others to follow, he cannot, in all honesty, lay down hard and fast rules for others to follow because he, within himself, is not fully awake and free from his own shortcomings. As I have said - Religion is a man-made system supposedly brought into being to help man to understand the Truth. Yet, in essence because man is in ignorance, he, inadvertently, builds in to this system the means whereby he still remains blind to the Truth he seeks. The true initiate, of old, provided a system of allegory and cryptic codes whereby only those who were sincere and pure in their approach could receive the interpretations of these allegories.

The truth still stands that if one's approach is not pure and honest, by sheer cosmic law, he cannot see or understand the deeper truths of life.

Usually, orthodox religion preaches that which it considers to be the "good and beautiful and the true" and calls its opposite "evil". This sets up a conflict in the minds of the believers and hence suffering follows. The truth is that "evil" is a man-made theory and organised religion can survive only as long as people are under the illusion that they have to be saved from this "evil". Divine understanding, born out of a pure mind, knows the real nature of this "evil" and so remains free from all false knowledge.

The seeming "opposite" forces in creation are merely the masculine and feminine qualities blending with each other to maintain a constant flow of activity, or manifestation, on many planes of Divine Self-experience. Since that which emanates all manifested life is, at root, deathless, indestructable, permanently whole and therefore indivisible, it follows that there can be no other force or power in opposition to It for Its continual process of operation. Our true forefathers knew these sacred mysteries and that is why they concealed their knowledge under "sex" symbols. The same secrets are revealed in the ankh of the Egyptians, and these symbols conceal the beautiful and pure process of Divine Revelation - and the mysteries of "life and death". It is only at this stage in human history that these symbols have become corrupted by an erring, uninitiated priesthood that we have such a growth in licentiousness. Families and homes have suffered.

The time has come for a greater depth of the higher mysteries of life to be divulged, as many people who are students and members of the large religious institutions can see that these organisations cannot give them the answers. Whilst the main Christian religious groups depend upon the teachings of "Jesus", they fail because of the dogmas associated with them. These dogmas act as mental "veils" which cloud the spiritual vision and people remain in ignorance. No matter how advanced, or "high", the spiritual teaching that one follows, it will depend upon how much the student is centred on his personality self that he will understand or experience life - for inasmuch as one relates any spiritual teaching to the personality level, it will be subject to the reasoning powers of that level. Hence, according to how much the person is relying on his own understanding of Cosmic Truths, his measure of enlightenment will not exceed that which he feels necessary for his physical needs. This is in accord with the ideas advanced in relation to the modern views on the "Quantum theory".

Mentioning the above theory, I must offer some explanation. In the ancient teachings of the Sun Priests, and in many select orders today, it was, and still is, understood that one's spiritual understanding is measurable against one's concern for his own "mortal", or personal interests, and tests were given to prove it. The proof lies not in how much one knows, or what one has achieved in "spiritual works" or in what "spiritual" or psychic powers one has, but in what influence one had, or has, in the direction of merely a few words or even none. This means that "spiritual", or divine energy, is present in "amount" according to one's ability to step aside the "mortal" selfhood. Thus, one can come to be reckoned as an immortal, or a god, when one has abandoned the concept of being a "mortal".

It can be seen then that it is precisely how one thinks and acts, what one's beliefs are and to what ideas and philosophies one is attracted that will make one's "world". One's world is reflected back to one in the terms of suffering, in the types of diseases experienced, in the measure of his hardships and struggles according to the man's ideas at the time. Thus even epidemics are the effects of man's worries, fears and the hypotheses relating thereto and in proportion one will suffer according to his responses to these ideas. Therefore, a thought, or idea, is the essence of the objectified, or inner, experience. What is pointed out now is that one cannot have a "new world" built on the existing philosophies. A completely new teaching must be followed which contains no reference to, or ideas based upon, the hypothesis that relates to any, at present "man-made" observance of natural laws. The right essence, or thought patterns, must be established before one can expect any changes. The old saying from the scriptures, that "as a man thinketh so is he" is correct in the fact that whatever a man believes, whatever he accepts as a reality and however he acts or reacts in relationship to his thoughts and community laws - that will be him in expression.

The main religious bodies in the west teach a system whereby one is encouraged to follow a path which is assumed to be "good", and one is also encouraged to hate, or decry that which seems to be "evil". There is no attempt to give a logical reason for these differences. The common teaching is that all this "evil" is attributed to a "person", or force, called "Satan", or the Devil, who is the head of an opposing organisation of lesser evil entities, who are simply there to tempt and terrorise mankind. In this state it is necessary to have a "World Saviour", or Avatar, who is finally going to destroy all the "evil works" and end all suffering, and a state of peace and harmony is going to be the result. This kind of dogma takes away individual and group initiative in following up new avenues for human emancipation, and as long as the beliefs in this dual war continues, there is never going to be an end. For the suffering will continue until man has eliminated the very concept of it from consciousness. Such is the power of thought and belief.

To proceed further with our discussion let us look at these two forces from another point of view. Organised religion often uses the terms Light and Darkness instead of referring to Good and Evil. The so-called "occult" bodies and "esoteric" schools also use those terms and talk about the forces of Light warring against the forces of Darkness. In practise they are just as much in ignorance as the religions they claim to be in advance of. One might ask, "How can we come to consider and re-educate ourselves to see that which we have feared for many years and called "evil" as being but the beautiful other side of that which we have called "good"? But is suffering, hardship and disease to be considered "good"?

Because of the already wrong programming, from which the seeker after truth is trying to get release, it will be found no easy matter to start the process of re-orientation to one's natural being. But with patience and sincerity under the guidance of an elder brother, it can be done. In this process of eliminating the "false vestiges of wisdom" from consciousness, the unpleasant effects, from the former doctrines, slowly disappear. During our re-education in the natural knowledge, we come to know that these "two forces" are really the seeming Masculine (Light) and Feminine (Dark) qualities emanating from the One Consciousness of the manifested Logos; then we experience that which is true of ourselves and leave the world of fantasy.

We are now living in a time when many people who are interested in foretelling future events are saying that we are entering a new-age, and that beings from a "Cosmic Hierarchy" are going to assist mankind to create a new world - a new "golden age". In these pages I am going to try and show that this "new revelation" is already becoming evident in the lives of many; but it will require entirely new archetypes upon which to build an enlightened age. The worn out dogmas of this last few thousand years must fade away and give place to a nearer approach to Truth. Why I say, "a nearer approach to Truth", is because that which we call "Truth" is relative to our understanding at a particular time, and as mere individuals we can never know that which is absolutely True. Even that knowledge we possess from the Great Teachers is only what we think was said or what we think was implied. The interpretation of any teaching varies from person to person and that is why we have so many sects and groups. I am also saying that the "nearer to Truth" teaching is here because it has never really been away. It has lived in the hearts and lives of the true Sons of God, (or Sons of the Sun as they were originally known,) who come and go throughout the ages of man's varying history. The teaching of our Divine Progenitors states that all manifestation in this, which we call the objective world, is dependant upon the movement of energy and because we see two opposite kinds of movement, that is not really so. These masculine and feminine appearances, or forces of Light and Darkness, are really the same essence at varying periods of pulsation and are not different in nature or quality. In reality there is only One Life in Existence which is expressing itself in myriads of ways, and we experience It according to how we interpret the way It appears to affect us. We should, therefore, endeavour to pursue knowledge with an attitude that is not tinged with the erroneous theories which at present prevail.

In Ecuador there is a valley where people live to be about one hundred and fifty years old. In Tibet there is a valley where people live in harmony. There are no wars, no crime and they do not use money as an exchange system, yet nobody starves. Their diet is limited and they are all reasonably healthy. These things show that a balanced and happy existence is not dependant on the health laws and other theories advanced in the western world. Health is the expression of a healthy outlook and is not reliant on diet and vitamins. Disease is the confirmation of wrong living in the way of selfishness, greed and licentiousness - traits which the aforementioned people do not have. These people have no birth control problems because their system of marriage naturally regulates the numbers within the community.

Purity of Mind, compassion for others and a lack of selfishness are the diet and vitamins for a healthy life. These qualities are the substance, or essence, of that which is experienced. As Paul in the New Testament puts it, "the substance of things hoped for - the evidence of things not seen". The kind of world one experiences is, or only can be that expression of one's own and the community's thoughts and beliefs. The idea and its expression cannot be separated because the visible and experienced condition is the fulfilment of the thought energies entertained.

In the west there is much talk about the freedom of the individual. At root this is nothing more than the desire, on the part of those that expound this theory, to foster their own immature ways of life upon the community at large. The idea of freedom for the individual has led to the downfall of those who misunderstand it. The present wave of youth violence in demonstrations and sports fields, and the wilful damage to public property is these people's idea of freedom - the will to do as they please. The double standards existing throughout the whole of western society, and that which is slowly growing in the east, stems from the ignorance of the true nature of life.

The main religions in the western hemisphere, namely Christianity, Islam and Judaism, all stemming from the same source, have proved themselves to be all violent in essence. It is this built-in violence which at various times has come to the fore to consummate itself. The very idea of violence gives rise to violence, even the idea of non-violence, and when people try to follow the "loving" part of the teaching, the opposite swings into operation, and they find themselves acting irrationally. The only answer to this problem is to follow a religion, or philosophy, where the very ideas of revenge, punishment, suffering, of "holy wars", and the enforcement of morals by legislation, have no place. As the great Teachers have pointed out, "One must be born again to experience a new life". In a "new life" the old beliefs and standards can have no part: it appears that many are afraid to discard them.

Suffering, discord and poverty will cease as soon as mankind learns to stop generating the forces that maintain them. The religious belief of "the suffering on the Cross" results in a suffering humanity. Where a teaching encourages its followers to "love others" and to tolerate suffering, they have their wishes fulfilled. Why not be in harmony with each other without having to undergo suffering? Disease and the social imbalances are not caused by "germs" and environmental conditions. The only "germs" and poor conditions are the selfish ideas perpetuated by man himself and the manifestation of his poor outlook. No matter how man tries, how much he struggles, how much he seeks "ways and means", he cannot overcome that which prevents him from reaching his goal. He should change his whole mental outlook. He has to free himself from the prevailing idea in this hemisphere, that if we have to suffer, we must devise ways and means of making our suffering more comfortable.

Each time mankind gets into difficulties, he is encouraged to look back to his origins, the true source of his selfhood. Just as Moses, in the Biblical allegory, encouraged the Children of Israel, or Children of Light, to return to the teachings of their forefathers, so should we in this day, if we are to resolve our problems, look to see where the ancient Father-Mother teachings are applicable. For this age-old teaching is pure in nature and when applied, it provides the womb out of which the correct inspiration flows. Some teachers are saying that we should return to the Matriarchal Teaching; but as the Source of Life is singular in nature the balanced view would be better.

The whole problem of "sin and suffering" lies in the fact that they exist in consciousness. Any belief held in the mass thought of humanity, if not eradicated, will give rise to the experiences associated with that belief. The belief in "evil forces", even in the content of stage dramas and literary novels, gives power to unpleasant conditions and provides the essence for these conditions becoming real to us. Our work should be to eliminate such ideas from our consciousness and aim at filling our minds with the ideas we wish to see realised. This might appear a mammoth task; but by the same effort that has brought all man's suffering into being, harmony and peace can be restored. When a being of a higher order comes into our presence, we feel his nature emanating around us. When he departs, our troubles return because the faults are within ourselves.

There are records available which give us some idea of what our forefathers believed. In spite of frequent efforts by various powers to destroy them, there is sufficient knowledge to give us a fair understanding. One has only to search through the purer aspects of the old eastern systems, compare them with those in the west that are considered to be "heretical", or pagan, and the intelligent researcher can see that, basically, all truths converge.

The present beliefs of the Christians are the updated concepts of much older teachings. The rituals of death and resurrection, also baptism, were performed in the Egyptian temples and the myth of the virgin birth, the "three wise men", is carved on the wall of the holy of holies at Luxor. Many things practised by the Christians today were done by the ancient Egyptian people. The "pagan" religions, in the past, were based upon a system whereby the initiate gained some kind of idea of the world around him. Men sought reasons for birth and death, night and day, the changing seasons, and pain and suffering. In fact, the earlier religions came into being from superstitions associated with what we would call normal happenings in nature. Festivals were arranged to coincide with the sowing of seeds and the reaping of the harvest. Full moons were regarded as being important as the time-span concurred with the female cycle. Thus, the moon was depicted as a Goddess with influence upon gestation and birth in every form.

As man demanded more esoteric meanings to life, the intelligent ones among them erected other hypotheses based upon the many complicated patterns of life. It could be said that wisdom was the result of taking account of past experiences in the handling and overcoming of events that threatened the normal routine of the community.

"Truth" and "Wisdom" in the early days were not associated with any higher knowledge than the ability to cope with quite mundane situations. "Truth" and "Wisdom" were the requirements for leading a harmonious natural and "physical" life and had nothing to do with a religious, or metaphysical, system as we know it today. If people understood the true laws of life, there would be no need for organised religion or an establishment to enforce "law and order". Everybody would be, naturally, fully mature persons living according to such knowledge that makes wholesome experiences possible. From past records it can be discovered that ideal conditions did exist, in certain areas, on this planet. An area where a physical existence of perfect order reigned. A saga engraved on clay tablets discovered by archaeologists whilst excavating a site at ancient Ninevah, being part of the library of King Ashurburnipal, (who reigned about the seventh century B.C.,) tell the story of a place called Dilmun and figures in what is known as the "Epic of Gilgamesh".

It is interesting to note, especially for students of allegory, that the boat ordered to be built was in the form of a cube with seven compartments in all - each divided into a further seven parts. The character Ziusudra in this story is mentioned as being the last antidiluvian ruler reigning for a period of 36,000 years. Some identity with long life periods can be seen here with the very long life's spans of the Biblical Patriarchs. Biologists tell us that there is no reason why "physical" bodies should age and die because a continual process of renewal is taking place in every living cell. Is it that our habits of wrong thinking, and living only allows us around the proverbial length of life of three score years and ten? Did the pre-flood patriarchs possess the secrets of long life? The truth is that the nearer our concept of life is to that of Eternity, then will we experience a longer span on this Earth. In the early days facts were entered into the spiritual allegories to give added meaning to the myth.

In the "Book of the Cave of Treasures", translated by Sir Wallis Budge from an old text in the British Museum, there is an interesting account of Seth, who was a son of Adam and Eve. Seth and his family dwelt on the skirts of the mountain of Paradise and the narrative says, "There they dwelt in peace and happiness: there was nothing to weary or trouble them ..... They suffered neither toil nor fatigue, they had neither seed time nor harvest, but they fed themselves with the delectable fruits of glorious trees of all kinds, and they enjoyed the sweet scent and perfume of the breezes which were wafted forth to them from Paradise. Thus lived those holy men, who were indeed holy, and their wives were pure, and their sons were virtuous, and their daughters were chaste and undefiled. In them was no rebellious thought, no envy, no anger, no enmity. In their wives and daughters there was no impure longing and neither lasciviousness, nor cursing, nor lying was heard among them." Seth was also a long-liver and is recorded as having lived nine hundred and thirteen years. Such perfect living as I have mentioned was the dream of the early "Christians", and followers of the teachings of Jesus have sought this ideal. They fail because of the reasons aforementioned. The patriarchs succeeded because there was no seed of impurity within them and it is possible, even now, to experience a return to the above mentioned Golden Age if we are prepared to give up all our present opinions, suppositions regarding life, and learn how to really live. As I have said, the existing hypotheses regarding pain and suffering must be completely done away with.

Man lives in a mental world and whatever kinds of attitudes and thoughts occupy his mind, that will determine the kind of world he builds. Man creates his own world and by changing his whole outlook he can experience his highest ideals. The state of a greater harmony and peace within the mind, however, can never be brought about by using new technologies or drugs - or any other system which employs external ways and means to achieve it. A new world is fashioned from within.

Inscribed upon tablets uncovered at Sippar was found the same wisdom as taught in the Christian Sermon on the Mount. The Sumerian King Uto advocated the returning of good for evil, performing justice and of giving alms to the poor and needy. Lord Viracocha taught the same truths to the Incas.

There have been many different claims as to where the actual cradle of civilisation existed. Quite a number of researchers settle for a continent called Atlantis, which sank beneath the sea about twelve thousand years ago. Others settle for the Mediterranean area because it is believed that our religious forebears lived there. There are, however, other interesting records to be discovered farther east - from Indian, Persian and Chinese traditions which claim that the home of the world religions is to be found in Upper Asia and that the fabled "Garden of Eden" was situated on the Pamir Plateau near the Tarim Basin. Careful research could indicate this to be a more accurate location. It is more than possible that the old Mayan culture of South America stemmed from China because the statues of that period look particularly of a Chinese nature. There are old writings which could indicate that the name of Britain is derived from the word Barat, and so, if true, would prove links with the events written about in the Mahabarata of eastern and Hindu origin. The teachings contained in the Vedas provide a clue to an existing global religion. In very truth these writings contain much material that formed the basis for the beliefs of the ancient Sun Priest Kings, who had a tradition all of their own as opposed to the beliefs and practices of the common people. There existed two classes of people - those versed in the mysteries of life, namely the arts and sciences, and the workers or "others". The communities were perfectly balanced and everybody was entitled to his rightful share of food, clothes and to have a home. Men and women had equal rights with respect to authority and possessions, and any person could change his position in the community by means of improving his knowledge and skills.

In the book "The Sirius Mystery" the author describes the extraordinary facts regarding the priestly rituals of the Dogon tribe in Africa. Their rituals, and the allegories contained therein, approximate the activities taking place in the area of Sirius the Dog-Star. If the assumptions regarding the knowledge contained in the rituals are correct, it is obvious that such information has been handed down from a people whose technologies were advanced enough to obtain facts that astronomers with the aid of radio telescopes have only recently discovered.

It can be found that when people are allowed to live nearer to nature - the harmony it produces enables them to acquire more accurate information about the Universe itself; whereas the minds that are following set doctrines and dogmas, when feeling the need to break free, find themselves revolving within a mental boundary beyond which they cannot pass. Our knowledge regarding the Universe and man can only equal that amount according to the limits we place upon it. Knowing, therefore, the precise area of investigation allowed us by our five senses, we should enquire into those areas of seeking which demonstrate that man is not limited by his senses and that other forces and energies, farther afield, are in operation.

There are many theories as to how long the specie man has been on the earth. Theories range from one half to five million years and it is very difficult for the anthropologists to make a really accurate assessment because the geographical structure of this planet has changed so many times and is still in the process of movement. Possibly in some remote area, under the sea or other unsuspected country, there are artifacts to be discovered that will give a clue. Our only guides at the moment are ancient tablets, manuscripts and traditions held by the elders in certain tribes and secret organisations of recorded long standing.

In Britain there is a tradition going back some thousands of years, and historian Herodotus is mentioned as stating that this tradition went back as far as six thousand years from his day. He states that learned men came from all over the world to a great centre in Britain that had persisted through the ages. Britain, too, has changed its geographical shape, for archeaologists have discovered that there is possibly a sunken stretch of land between the coast of these islands and the Scilly Isles where, perhaps, the legendary Lyonese lies covered. It can be discovered, too, that there is a holy centre still operating in this country which can trace its origins back a number of centuries and was, formerly, linked with the schools of pre-flood origin. This is why Britain still remains the leading country in the fields of modern civilisation. In spite of what people say about it, it can be proved to be the most free country on the surface of this planet.

The teachings of the Patriarchs have remained intact in the minds and hearts of a long succession of teachers who were, and still are, instructed by those beings who, for want of a better term, have been known to us as the Elohim. Theologians might scoff at such claims but then not all theologians are versed in the knowledge of spiritual realities. Most theological argument and discussion is based upon speculative and unproven information, which cannot be supported by a reliable historical background. The mystic knows that there are realms of reality which are but wild fantasies to the speculative researcher.

I have mentioned that it is difficult to prove what is actually true, and whilst there is the claim by modern scientists that they erect their hypotheses on provable facts, they fight shy of provable facts that lie outside the curriculum of state colleges and universities. To discover facts outside the umbrella of a state recognised school of learning is modern "heresy". When a government discovers unusual occurrences taking place within its domain, it gets around the problem by stating that the thing does not exist. Since the dawn of our present recorded history, the alternative society, which lives by the teachings of the Patriarchs, has existed side by side with the unreal man-made systems of institutionalised religion, politics and law, and there are very few that discover it. Conditions existing in the unreal world are such that it is only those with courage and sincerity who can find release from it.

Every thought or idea that is entertained contains within itself the energy like unto its kind, or nature, and so it will, at some time, appear in the actual experience of the one that entertains it. Every ill condition in the human realm is brought in to being by supposing an idea to be of a particular nature, either for pain or joy. For example, the idea of love, originating in the consciousness of a person, takes on the appearance that the one gives to it according to the way he believes and lives. Love, therefore, will appear in the guise, according to the materialistic or spiritual desires of the one concerned. The all-pervading consciousness of love then, which is the infused nature of the manifested life in our Solar System, is entirely impersonal in its presence, thus providing for the many different forms that it takes. This fact can be seen in evidence in the appearances of Love in its many outlets today. If the religious teachings at present in existence present the ideas of sin and suffering, and these ideas are fostered upon some of the seeming unpleasant aspects of Love, then of the ones indulging in those particular aspects, on to which a supposed law has been grafted, the "sinner" will suffer in proportion to the depth of his, or her, belief.

Even though one is practising a reasonably moral life by adhering to that which is understood to be good, there is always the danger, or fear, of being threatened by onslaughts from the direction of evil. In effect the constant see-sawing of "good" and "evil" ideas or emotions finally breaks down the balance of people and they come to the point where anarchy and immorality conquers the senses. From this point of view it would appear that all the efforts of organised religion to create a "good" living society results in achieving the opposite. It is not the fact of the dual-natured teachings in itself but rather that there is no further opportunity offered to the disciples for reaching into the Oneness they are taught to believe in. In truth this genuine experience of Oneness cannot be attained until the idea of duality is banished altogether: so where there is no real guidance on this quest, the pupil lacks the required knowledge to reach it.

The teaching which enables the disciple to attain his required perfection and final ascension was taught to selected persons in the ancient mystery schools and these processes did not consist of great rituals and ceremonies, as some are led to believe. In fact, such rituals are only required in the dualistic schools to calm the body and mind. In the advanced schools however, the candidate was taught to reject totally any outside aid whatsoever.

In the days of the Patriarchs, those who had reached the state referred to as Perfection were literally called "gods", and when the ordinary citizen encountered one of these persons, he was indeed reckoned to be in the presence of a god. This is not surprising since the Perfected One embodied the very nature that a "god" was known to possess. Thus the "allegorical" history contains the records of these beings for posterity, and examples to those embarking on the perilous road to "godship". In the scriptures where one is mentioned as speaking to "God", it means that a conversation was being carried on between "flesh and blood" persons. In instances where the "voice of God" came to a prophet, or other person, they well knew, from the instructions they had received in their religious training, that it was the potential "God" in every man that was revealing itself. It is this side of spiritual education that has been suppressed by organised religion, for fear of losing its grip on the masses. However, those persons who are sincere and pure in their search for "immortality" can arrive at the doors of the still existing Sacred Schools unexpectedly, because such schools exist in unusual and unsuspected places.

There is in Britain a group of people who believe that they are descendants from the Israelites and have carried out many researches in an attempt to prove their claim. Several tribes in Afghanistan, who are Muslims, make the same claim and they, like those in this country, produce records in support of the facts. When the Christian priests journeyed with the conquistadors into the Americas, in the sixteenth century, they saw that the Amerindians held similar beliefs to their own, and that their religious ceremonies appeared to bear a likeness. There are two claims in support of similar beliefs being held the world over. One is that before the "Flood" there was one religion, and the peoples were spread about during the disaster. The other is that the Semites were scattered abroad during the reign of Senacherib, and that they continued to practice their religion in the areas where they settled down. The teachings of the Buddha also closely resemble those of Christ Jesus.

The world-wide discussions in vogue at this time as to the validity of the tenets of the Christian Faith, and to whether or not an historical Jesus existed, are the results of former poisons being fed into the organisation. Men's actions and motives are forms of energy projected into their experiences, and these grow like the leaven in bread. If man would learn that he cannot exploit his own undisciplined nature at the expense of others, he would save his fellows a great amount of suffering. In this day and age, most of the things that are regarded as intelligent, free-thinking and liberated are like chains around the neck, because the specie man is really intended to graduate to a state of perfection, and to be an efficient vehicle for the Solar Energies to fulfil themselves correctly. That is why it mentions, in the Holy Bible, God admonishing the Patriarchs to be perfect. Jesus taught his disciples to become perfect.

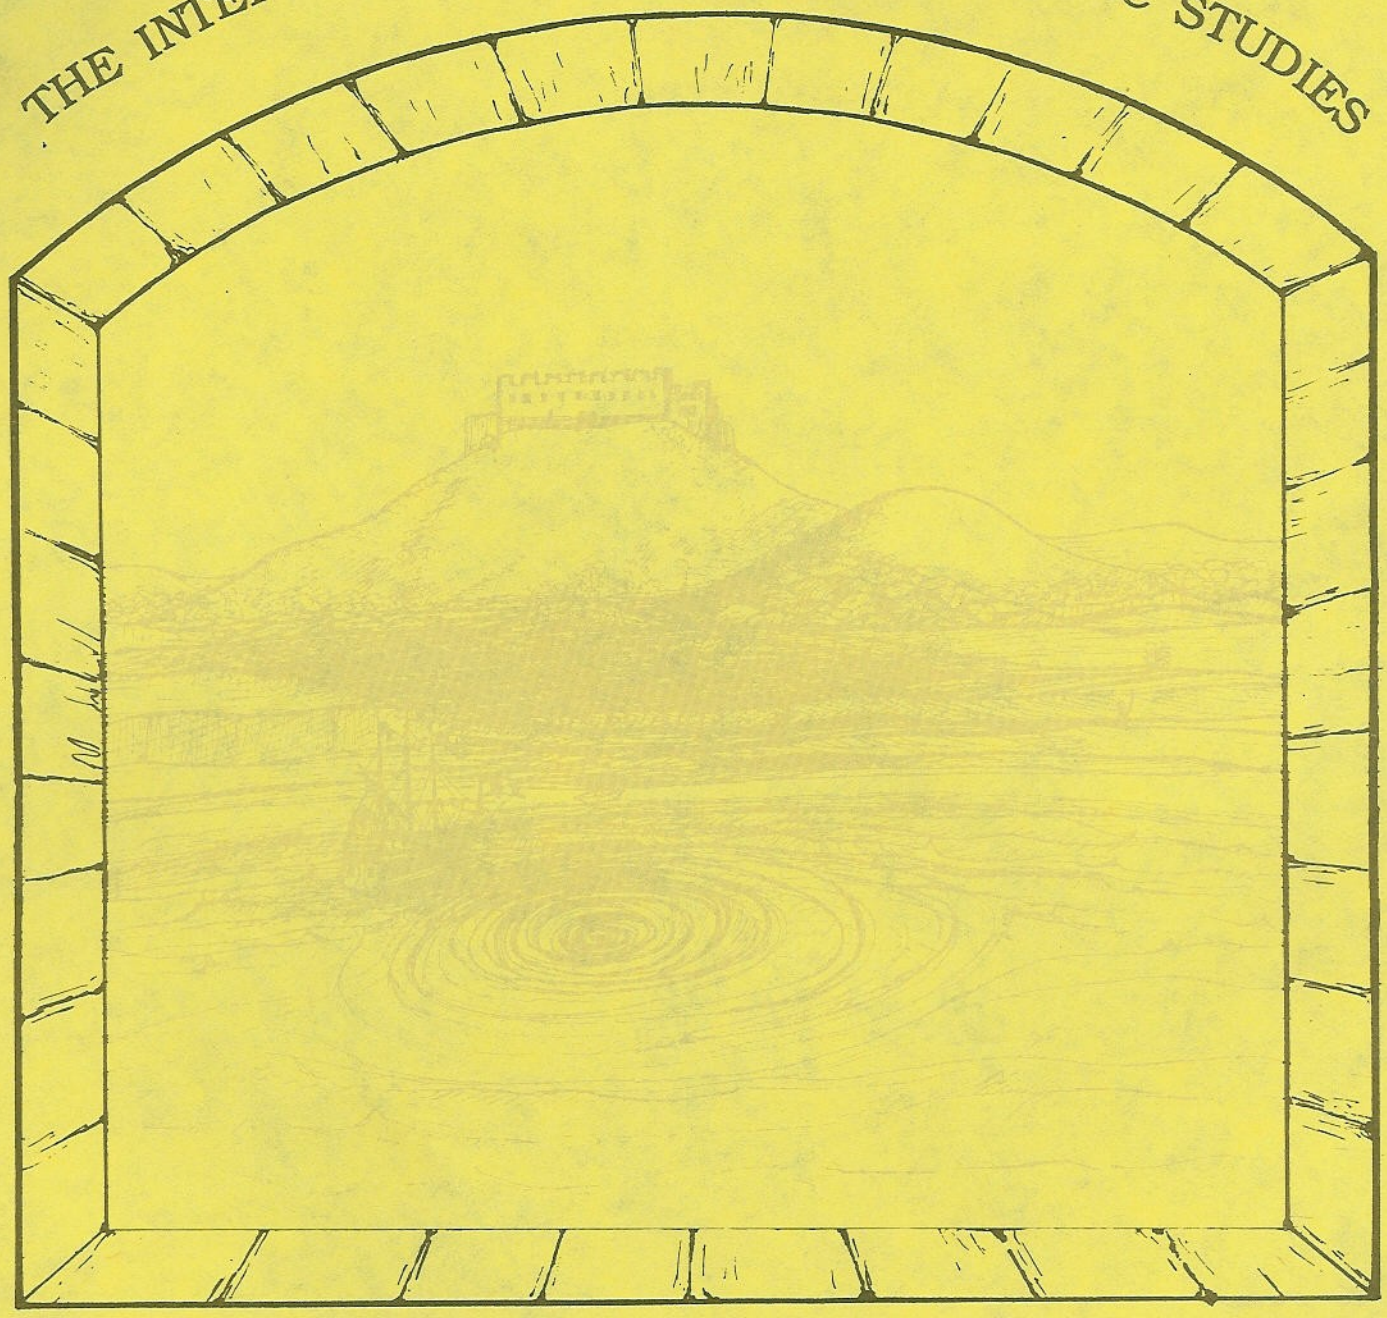
In the Patriarchal teachings, it does not really matter whether Jesus was the Teacher of Righteousness in the Essene Order, Jeshu ben Pendira of the Talmud, Appollonius of Tyana, Onias the Just, or the Jesus of the Gospels - or whether he escaped the cross and went to India to be finally buried in Srinagar. It is the living out of the Principles laid down in the Scriptures that really matters. However, there are many doctrines and dogmas erected out of these scriptures, and it is according to the nature of these dogmas which determine the effectiveness of the teachings. The present so-called "orthodox" faiths provide little in the way of a maturing nature and limit one's experience of Divine Sonship. In spite of the universally orthodox belief in good and evil, the higher consciousness overshadows the deeper meanings contained therein and those that faithfully seek for the Truth can find the Unified One.

To be continued

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES



PLANE III

LIBER 70 SLIPIN' 'N SLIDIN'

GRADE: COMPANION

Private & Confidential

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

THE SANCTUARY OF THE GNOSIS

Part Two

CLASSIFIED

THE ANCIENT PATRIARCHS AND THEIR TEACHINGS

Count George Emmanuel

Personal & Confidential

Before anyone can enter the deeper mysteries of life he has, firstly, to undergo the sacred discipline of Love. This discipline is one of dealing with the unpleasant side of one's self and to understand the difficulties of others. Love was, and still is, the discipline of those made perfect as the Sons of God, and, in the days of the Patriarchs, had nothing to do with the morality we know of today or that is taught in the religious institutions.

In the English language there is only one word used for love and, according to the many different meanings attached to it, one makes out of it what he wills. A Gnostic writer says, "In the language of the ancient Greek philosophers that has been adopted by Christianity, there are three main forms of Love that are most apparent in the experience of man. These three are Philos, Amos, and Agape. Philos," he writes, "is most commonly understood as 'brotherly love', that is, it is the bond that exists between mankind..... Upon Amos, however, rests the mystery of creations, for it is the particular manifestation of Love that unites two beings as one that is entirely new and different from either of the two previous beings.... One expression of this form of Love is that which exists between man and woman which finds its highest cause in the formation of new life.... The highest of all forms of Love

- that which is most commonly associated with spirituality and absorption into complete comprehension of the Cosmic Force - is Agape.... Agape cannot be attained without the transcendence of the illusion of isolated ego-identity. It is the experience of the All as One... It is the Love that is complete, and all other forms of Love are but shadows of it."

The error of the materialist is in believing that Love, in its true sense, is associated with desire. The great teacher Jesus, who came in the line of the Patriarchs, taught that Love was the supreme goal in Life. He restated the teachings of Moses to his hearers when he quoted from Deuteronomy and Leviticus, and said, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul and with all thy mind.... Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself". This would be the Torah, or Sacred Law, to him and this teaching fulfills all that is contained in the three Greek words mentioned earlier. In practice it is this Love that baffles the politicians, confounds the intellectuals, nullifies the powers of the magicians, and dims the vision of the prophets. There is no deeper magic than Love.

Let us spend a little time in exploring what the meaning of Love is to us. Unless we come to learn Love, we will not know the answers to human problems. Also, Love does not just descend upon us like a shooting star from the heavens - we have to study it and by experience finally realise that the very nature of the Universe, its substance and upholding power, is Love. The most beautiful rendering and explanation of Love is given by St. Paul in his Epistle to the Corinthians. He says that one can have all gifts including prophecy, and the understanding of all mysteries. In the days when this was written, it would include all the arts and sciences, divine and profane, and even if one possessed the power to move mountains - or even rock the universe and having not Love - it was nothing.

Giving away our wealth and doing good works simply because it is the thing to do, or that it looks good in the eyes of others - benefits us nothing. Jesus says the same thing. In the well-known Sermon on the Mount, "Not everyone that says to me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? And in thy name have cast out devils? And in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you, depart from me, ye that work iniquity." Many, today, who are engaged in various healing professions, social welfare work, politics, law or religion, whose motives are not founded upon Agape, Amos or Philos, are not really engaging in man's purpose here - for unless we are unattached to the thought of reward, in how much the job pays and the perks associated with it, we are not free.

Love is not envious or jealous of others. The common idea that if a husband was not jealous of his wife when she talked to another man, he did not really love her, is an error in believing that love is possessive or that one has the right over another's actions. Real love allows the object of its love complete freedom of action and thought and does not grieve should the object of its love go its own way. It does not like to see another's downfall, even if it has been brought about by careless action: but it helps the sufferer to bear his fruits. The idea of sympathy or sentiment is not love. Sympathy or sentiment for another is really born of self-centredness and shows that we are still identifying our loved one with the evils of the world.

Love is not beguiled away by bribes to satisfy another's whim - neither is it caught up in plots and intrigues to gain some particular end. In all things it remains pure and honourable, for it knows the law that all men ultimately reap what they sow, and this deepens its compassion. Love forever gives of itself but knows how to receive graciously. It understands and recognises the equality of all beings, and helps others to exploit themselves in seeking to come to self-knowledge. It does not bemoan circumstances but uses them as a channel to gain a deeper sense of being. College diplomas or university degrees are of little importance to love for it is authority of itself, and it is the very nature and essence of all genuine intelligence. It heals all diseases, mends broken homes and breaks down all barriers between men and nations. No problem exists in love.

The love that exists between male and female, or man and wife, can be the most profound and uplifting experience that humans can have. That which is called "sexual intercourse" can be found to be the key to the many mysteries which, at present, are misunderstood. The mystery of sex supplies the key to the cause of all suffering, violence, robbery and death. Also the same key gives the secrets of healing, purification and the attainment of wisdom. Our so-called "permissive society", where sex is a "free for all", is the same mental state that has produced an increase in hooliganism and violent crime. Children brought up in this kind of society are not much more than an incarnation of the uncontrolled passions of their parents. Mankind is a compound organism and all false attitudes, that are tolerated within this society, produces its own ills. All people are responsible for the unpleasant things that prevail in the environment and trouble will persist, until attitudes change. A home filled with love and understanding is the happiest place on Earth and is the right atmosphere for the rearing of children. They can feel the right conditions that gives them the opportunity of being secure and provides for the growing of their minds free from inhibitions which breeds delinquents and law-breaking citizens.

The delinquent children of today have entered this phase of their lives through a poisoned doorway. A mother and father lacking in fidelity, honesty and parental discipline can provide only an adulterated atmosphere, in which the offspring has to grow, and life becomes one of squalor and degradation. The real crime is against the children of the future. Recent discoveries in medical research have found a bacteria known as chlamydiae which infects the mother's cervix, as a result of sexual promiscuity, and gives rise to eye infections and other diseased conditions. Infidelity is caused by ignorance. The attitude that sex is an occupation to be indulged in when in the presence of one of the opposite sex, is not the natural state of mature manhood or womanhood. Where the sexes indulge freely in access to each other's bodies shows that there is no respect for the body as a holy temple for the life of God to express Itself. This lack of respect blinds one to the quality of fidelity which is so necessary for building a stable and happy home. If one has no intentions of marrying the one with whom one has sexual intercourse he, or she, opens the door to genetic adulteration.

Another deep poison in society today is where two people come to an understanding just to satisfy each other's sex needs, without any thought of love or even the sharing of any other part of their lives. This often leads to a condition when, if one of the party meets someone they think they could live with, the resulting marriage will be marred by feelings of guilt and the fear that the "friend" will turn up someday and demand his, or her, rights, because they have already claimed power of the other's body. Cold sex, devoid of love, breeds a society of cold intellectuals. The types that, in the name of science, think up such devices as the "anti-personnel" bomb or carve up the bodies of innocent animals believing that they are helping mankind.

These are all the pitfalls of society and are mainly due to a belief in the powers of good and evil and in the reality of pain and suffering. If man concentrated his efforts on discovering his true nature and lived according to the standards of the true meaning of love, he would find that his happiness was complete and free from fear. "God is Love", wrote St. Paul and a complete faith in Love's all-pervading presence is "the substance of things hoped for - the evidence of things not seen". When we imbibe the nature of love, Agape, we become at one with It and we discover our eternal nature. Love, then, is the only thing that can be reckoned as being the genuine Reality in the Universe.

In the world around us we witness much suffering. These are the effects of man seeking to possess and bind life to his own selfish will. Selfish man tries to hide his mistakes and believes that he can escape the consequences; the wise ones admit their mistakes and make an effort to correct themselves. To practice love, also known as compassion, frees us from all the effects of the many dogmas and doctrines in existence. It frees us from all the supposed effects of the Law of Cause and Effect, Reincarnation, from the influences of Astrology and Magic, and reaches far beyond the boundaries of man-made science. The highest of the Eastern teachings confirms this. This teaching is known as the Advaita Vedanta and its latest sage was Bhagavan Sri Ramana. In the book "Maha Yoga", by "who", it states on page 68, "Since time does not really exist, there is no past, nor future, nor even the present; nor can there have been anything like a creation of the world. Also all things that presuppose time are unreal. So we had no past births, nor shall have any in the future; nor are we now embodied, nor can death be real. Neither can there be actions done in the past, whose fruits we would reap. Nor are we now doers of action, the fruits of which would be reaped by us in future. This is the absolute, undiluted truth, as experienced by all the Sages: this however does not affect the relative validity of the beliefs of the layman."

This quotation contains the essence of the teachings of the Patriarchs from whence comes our western teachings of Jesus the Essene Master. To live continually in the state of Agape gives us the insight to know the nature of the Unmanifested God and the knowledge of our own true selves. The most difficult task that Jesus gave to his followers was to "love your enemies". Institutionalised Christianity has never successfully taught this aspect of Jesus' teaching, because it is so tied up with politics that when wars arise, the one's who tried to live according to the Christ message would be opposing the laws of the country. This attitude of the church's has resulted in them losing many true followers of the faith. It is wrong to teach "love your enemies" on Sunday, then advise the person to fight his enemy on Monday. It is this attitude of double standards that will bring the downfall of the "western" world. Meanwhile there is a great upsurge of new energies which are helping in the overthrow of past false standards and mankind will emerge with a new way of life based upon his natural position within the ordered state of things.

Enemies, according to the organised bodies, are people who possess views different from our own and those who seek to overthrow the ruling governing bodies, whether good or bad. At the other end of the scale, those seeking to overthrow the existing establishment see those already in power as enemies. Again this is the attitude of those who have not been reared in an atmosphere of love. Our chief enemy is not misguided, or evil people. It is the error of tolerating the attitudes and philosophies that perpetuate and maintain the breeding ground for social evils to grow. Some societies are aware of this and try to overcome this difficulty by having a system of arranged marriages, and some societies impose terrible punishment upon law breakers. The western societies tend to exercise a more tolerable outlook but in the main these systems are wrong. They all tend to overlook the root of the troubles. A misunderstood sense of toleration leads to the toleration of evil. A misunderstood sense of love leads to debased practices, and a misunderstood sense of justice leads to an eventual breakdown of law and order - so it can be seen that mankind needs a return to the wisdom of his forebears: those who laid down the true laws of love and justice in the beginning. In their wisdom, the Patriarchs of old understood one simple rule which our gnostic friends remind us of, that, "There are only two classes of people in the world, namely, the loved and the unloved."

Once we can place ourselves entirely in the influence of Divine Love, Agape, and become its slave, we find that we are really free and then we can become the efficient servants of all men. It requires great courage to surrender to Agape, for to come into full understanding of it, one has to forgo the appreciation and attachment to one's own built-up world of hopes and ambitions. Things no longer matter and one is consumed with the compassion to ease the suffering of the unloved within the world.

"What is Truth?" enquired Pilate of Jesus in the Scriptures. Krishnamurti told his early followers that Truth is a pathless land and that is why many searchers on a "path" never find it. Because of the elusiveness of Truth the Elohim, or Creative Principle of the Universe, fashioned a world for us built by the essence and mind-stuff of Divine Love and by this act, our God became Love, as St. Paul stated. The doctrine of "good and evil" has no place in a realm of Love and when we can come to the full realisation of this great Truth, we find that the 'dual'-natured world we call real actually possesses no substance of Reality. The children of Seth were able to experience the only One state of consciousness - the true God-Mind. There was no opposite to be concerned about or to speculate upon; neither was it necessary to discuss the beautiful atmosphere in which they lived. They simply accepted their lives as they were and enjoyed the reality of them. We are told in the Book of Genesis that pain and suffering came about by the eating of the fruit of the "tree of knowledge of good and evil" and this allegory can be proved true in its results. The task of trying to lead a "good" life or to achieve "peace of mind" is impossible as long as one accepts the reality of the existence of those opposite states of mind. No system, religion or teaching can succeed in helping to free one from pain and suffering as long as the belief and acceptance of these things persists. New conditions are born out of pure motives, unselfish actions and a knowledge that, whatever a man thinks, he will experience the essence of his thought sometime. Peace will come when man has learned that he has no enemies to hate.

According to the Essene teachings,

Jesus taught, "Love God and your fellow man. All else is speculation." Whilst the scriptures seem to imply a duality of forces as being the nature of the universe, there is still much to indicate the claim of a non-duality of the God indicated therein. By inquisitions, persecutions and the destruction of past records, the present Christian institution has been able to claim complete authority on all matters spiritual, and by legislation, through its influence in political affairs, has also been able to dictate its powers over the souls of the individual. Many enlightened men have found themselves at the doors of prisons, the gallows and the stake through the opposition of those who are supposed to love their enemies.

The Universal Intelligence that emanates all life still remains in control and is not affected by the ways of men or organised religions; in Its Divine Compassion for Its own creation maintains Hidden Places, that cannot be desecrated by mere mortals, because His genuine knowledge is in Itself a protection for those who understand and practice It. Too many sects are involving themselves in politics and are stirring up the primitive societies in other countries believing they are doing God's work when, in fact, they are causing more suffering to come about. The Great Master teaches us to avoid getting involved in worldly affairs. His teaching is not to seek to make the world a better place but that this will come about by practicing love and wisdom to all. Unenlightened Christians view the world as being full of good and evil people, instead of seeing one large family with wise ones setting an example.

The guiding power to the understanding of the true nature of the Cosmos is to be found in the adherence to Purity, Truth and Righteousness. Without these qualities one cannot enter the Sacred Schools of Life which impart that knowledge, which was known by the pre-flood Patriarchs, the teaching of Perfection. An Islamic researcher writes, "Just as institutionalised Christianity, at the threat to its stranglehold on religion, clashed with the Initiatory Brotherhoods, so official Islam fought with all the virulence at its command against its own esoteric movement."

In the early days, since the "mythical" flood, most religious systems kept in touch with what has become popularly known as "mystery schools". From these "mystery schools" the actual founders of the various religions came. The early "religions" were really "schools for living" and the systems employed varied according to the place and ethnic nature of the students. Nobody was expected to conform to a limited set of creeds for it is creeds and dogmas that stunt spiritual growth. The freedom to grow in God's likeness, to ascend to the status of perfect manhood, is the birthright of every being.

The late Richard Duc de Palatine, an initiate of many orders, faithfully researched the history of the Sacred Schools Tradition and restored the Right of succession to modern Gnostic Christianity. In one of his works he says, "...each Mystery Cult and School claimed the Right of Succession derived from Atlantis before the Deluge. As this Right was backed-up by the Right of Succession from Venus, the Emperors, Kings, Princes, Hierophants and Priest-Bishops had every right to call themselves Sons of the Sun, since they were initiated into their particular office through the same ritual. It was from Serapis that the Roman Popes and Bishops could claim the divine right to the Priesthood of Melchisedek - he who lived before the flood of 9564 B.C." With regard to the Priest-King Melchisedek, Sir Wallis Budge writes in the work previously mentioned, "The narrative of the descents made by Seth and his companions from the Mountain of Paradise into the plain is certainly based on historical fact; and though Melchisedek has not yet been identified in the cuneiform inscriptions, there is every reason to believe that he existed and that he was the founder of a pure form of religion and a great ruler as well as a priest".

Orthodox historians and theologians ridicule many of the ideas presented here and in their smug way smile quietly at those who believe them, yet they themselves remain ignorant of life's mysteries. They have been well instructed by their church or university which is the "right" knowledge to pursue. In practice their facts are the most favoured suppositions. Experts inform us that, of course, there is no life on Mars or Venus, neither did a country called Atlantis exist. The story of Joseph of Arimathea is an old wives' tale! What does this kind of sceptisism amount to? From the point of view of a seeker after Truth, it represents a stunted view of God's world which, in its interior sense, is unlimited in its areas of intelligent life, and in its material sense, one should believe only what one sees and hears with his five senses. In a spiritual Solar System, Venus qualities are equally present on the other planets as they are at location. Atlantis refers to the former great civilisation that existed before the global disaster and our historical records already provide the facts that the survivors were versed in the knowledge of agriculture, metal working, mathematics, medicine and astronomy.

To learn that there are still centres where sincere seekers after spiritual knowledge can contact teachers maintaining the Right of Succession offers no surprise either. Those of the supposedly existing "esoteric schools" must be aware that, what has now become known as "esoteric" knowledge, is but the counterfeit of the truth. In the beginning - so begins a process of speculation and a series of suppositions stemming from an association of ideas based upon a single thought. Thus a whole science or system of knowledge is begun and a world is born - and this process continues until the least common denominator within the spectrum of manifestation takes up the same theme and repeats the understanding at a lower level. The human level of cosmic understanding is but a concept, or a series of concepts strung on a theme, of the Universe from how life appears to affect us here. Is it possible that there are greater intelligences abroad in the galaxy who possess a more reliable understanding of the nature of Being? Are humans mere pawns in a giant system and higher beings are using them in a Cosmic chess game? Are humans a vermin corrupting a living planet which finally return to the dust from whence they came?

According to the ancient teaching, it was the Elohim that created mankind and the world. The word Elohim is a plural noun and would indicate that it was a plurality of beings that performed the task. Since it can be seen that the manifestation of a universe consists of a kind of plurality - of various groups of energies and forces - who or what are the Elohim? The secret schools teach that there exists a Great Central Sun in the unmanifested realms of conscious knowledge and from this emanates everything that we can ever come to know regarding ourselves and the universe. This Great Central Sun stirred within Itself and the great energies and forces, latent within, started a series of pulsations, or vibrations, operating in all directions. Modern scientists refer to this as the "Big Bang Theory". Because of the many Sysergies produced in this process certain points of focus became seemingly autonomous in their activity and a kind of secondary process began. This process caused the forming of the Elohim or conscious activity for producing what we call "thought". Thus, the Elohim could be described as great conscious "thought producing centres" within the whole of Complete Consciousness of the Primary Force - the Unmanifested "God". The "Elohim" then were the first "creators" within the mind of the first Great Central Sun and when viewed objectively, by the human senses, appear as a great spiralling galaxy moving outwards into space, consisting of myriads of Solar Systems and other bodies more difficult to describe in technical terms.

The objectively seen solar systems are like giant atomic structures existing in space and yet they are but miniature replicas of the Great "Father" Sun that brought them forth from within Itself and Its own substance. It is these Solar Systems which are known as the Elohim because it is from these great Beings that worlds are born and that each "El" possesses Its own unique creation; yet at a point they are all unified in the one manifestation of the Great Primary Force. The make-up of an "El", god, or solar system consists of the primary energies pulsating at different speeds within the galaxy - and could be likened to a vital organ or part necessary within the whole structure to maintain an orderly process of "Godlike" activity. Human observers of this process speak of a Masculine, or positive force, and a Feminine, or negative force. In the Patriarchal teachings it is spoken of as the One Force operating at two different "periods" of time. It is from this understanding that an original concept of Sacred Knowledge is seen, and it is in this kind of knowledge that the "Son of God" lives, moves and has his being.

It can be seen now what is meant in the scriptures by a "priesthood" which exists that is entirely separated from the Aaronic, or man-made, priesthood. One lives in the knowledge of "Eternal" things as against those that live by a transient or mortal concept of the Universe. The Teacher of Righteousness, referred to as Jesus, taught that there are no "male and female" in heaven. Heaven is the awareness of one's state of eternity within the Cosmic Scheme. In Truth there are no male and female beings only the appearance of such by way of the so-called "five senses" of a mortal body. There is but one Power, or type of Energy, meeting at different points within its many orbiting areas, whilst seeking its way back to its own Source, just as the electron produces a mighty energy in its journey back to the nucleus of an atom after being separated. Scientists tell us that in laboratory tests an electron can appear to go through two separate holes at once. A phenomenon they cannot explain.

By the teachings, or understanding, based upon the hypothesis mentioned, it is possible to come to the awareness of one's real relationship with the universe. The hypothesis built up on knowledge, gained by that which is considered to be transient, cannot be true, so one is commencing from a limited stand point in the quest. For according to the Solar Doctrines the human, or mortal, experiences are no more than the dreams one has when he is asleep and are unreal in nature.

When one looks at the Sun one sees a great bright sphere in space, and scientists go on at length to try to explain this phenomenon. Some even admit that all they really know about this Sun is just "coffee talk" - or that which they discuss among themselves during a coffee break. They confess that what is really going on "up there" baffles them and the instruments they use tell them little. This "great light" is brought about by the rapid pulsation of energy coming into contact with the optic nerve in the eye and interpreted as Light. It is possible that there is actually no light as is generally understood as light and that really a kind of harmonic function of "Sun" awareness is in operation. By this is meant that all the "eyes" of living creatures within the Solar System are sensory centres within the Sun's own consciousness, wherein It becomes aware of Its own activity, Sight being a Cosmic Principle.

Human beings, or mortal bodies, in this way of understanding possess no more reality than a "transistor" which is replaced when it wears out. Thus, human beings are nothing more to the governing sun that replacable instruments and the "entity" which believes itself to possess an individual existence is a non-reality. Reference to this truth in the scriptures can be found in the statements by St. Paul in the Epistle to the Ephesians, chapter four. This is an allegorical description, or religious purpose, of our real position within the Solar structure of this system. Humans are nothing in themselves but mere component parts of a complete organism that is operating like an immense computer, continually renewing its own parts, and is not concerned with the preservation of parts but with Its own Self, as another component within a still larger scheme.

Therefore the one who has penned these notes and the one who reads them is, in very truth, the one and only thinker and doer - the only Self which is the self of all manifested life within our own Solar System. The manifested life we behold is the revealed thought patterns of an original idea. The numerous forms then are the defined revelations of ideas residing within the consciousness of the One principle, sometimes called Jahwe - Messiah, or Christ-Helios. It is through the principles contained in this description that we can come to know our seeming separated "selves" as being this One-Self. Every idea appears as form, because every idea contains the completion of its own cycle within itself. In his Epistle to the Colossians, chapter two, Paul writes, "For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily". This refers to the fact that every formulated idea contains within itself the focal point of all the qualities and nature of its source - the original "Thinker" - the Solar God. That which we call "mankind" is really the revealed consciousness of this Solar God, or Christ, at its highest level. This proves the point that a Sun is the body of an "El" or Man-God in expression and it is this Sun that is really the Being that we, as seeming individual expressions, are.

In, "The Wisdom of Solomon", the Apocryphal Old Testament, it clearly states that "God created man to be immortal, and made him to be an image of His own eternity". In another chapter it says, "For God made not death....For he created all things, that they might have their being: and the generation of the world were healthful: and there is no poison of destruction in them, nor the kingdom of death upon the earth". The truth lies in the fact that sin, suffering and death have never been thought into being by the creator and therefore, to us, possess no other reality than that of a dreamer having an unpleasant dream. The "unpleasant dream" is the result of possessing false beliefs about one's own relationship to Life - beliefs in "good and evil". Mortals which appear to live, suffer and die, according to the true teaching, have no real existence apart from the forms associated with the types of dreams experienced.

Man, as a whole unit, God Himself, is immortal and contains no seed of consciousness of anything unlike His own nature. The belief in, or appearance of, an entity or power, producing opposite effects, is just another part of the dream. To come to Himself, man has to surmount the knowledge he has gathered from the observation of activity going on in his form body and operate from his true Self level. This is achieved by a mental effort of rising above the experience of sensual beliefs. Thus by contemplating the Truth of the Reality of Man's being - as man being the perfect concept of the God in His own manifestation, one can come actually to experience that which is the true nature of being in the world of form. That which approximates the consciousness of our Source becomes a reality to us and a living proof of the system or organism in which we live.

One can come to understand that one can escape from the world of unpleasant conditions - of a world beset by a constant warfare of good and evil - (a nightmare world,) by exercising a new discipline and following a new set of rules. The "overcoming" of the old world lies in the total abandonment of it. One cannot have a "foot in both camps" or be half-hearted in one's attempts to undergo the metamorphesis leading to the experience of reality. The whole gamut of beliefs, theories, religious arguments and moral standards existing in the dream world must go. One must empty oneself completely of what one clearly holds to be the Truth to come into the experience of one's true self.

Any revealed truth possesses no more value than one's ability to understand it, therefore our Ancient Teachers laid down provisions for their successors wherein no strict system was enforced. Being enlightened does not refer to the amount of knowledge one has on spiritual subjects, nor is it proven in the time one spends in meditation or devotion to duty. Enlightenment refers to one's capacity to demonstrate, or show forth, that which he feels within him. In this light any system, as I have said earlier, remains merely a ways and means - a system or way of life. One must faithfully follow the way one has chosen until one reaches the horizon one has previously seen. One cannot experience more than one's vision and more often than not the state one arrives at will be experienced in accordance with one's concepts about it. The desirable attainment is one wherein one finally rises above all self-speculations and formulative ideas, because enlightenment is a state wherein there is no cognizance of a mortal body.

Great importance is laid upon the initiate, or pupil, fully understanding the difference between the mortal state and the immortal state because, without a well-defined picture, the pupil will have difficulty in realising the pit-falls, (and there are many,) which prevent him from making progress. The student, in his mortal experience, confines himself to the limits he sets upon himself by his overwhelming sense of mortality and the seeming dual-forces which seek to oppress him. Those scientists who are investigating the Quantum Theory are now finding that there can exist a multi-dimensional state of consciousness throughout the Cosmic System and that it is possible for a number of worlds to exist interpenetrating each other, bearing no relationship and remaining entirely independent of each other. This means that the God-Mind, or Consciousness, is capable of experiencing every conceivable idea of life-activity within Itself simultaneously.

Now since our specie man is a type of God-consciousness and, according to the hypothesis, like unto his maker, he must be of like substance and like functioning - this makes him a "Son" by virtue of him coming to self-knowledge. He then assumes his correct place by co-functioning efficiently with the One emanator - "I and my Father are One". The messianic call to "awake" from sleep is the insistance of the pulsating energies to reliven the sleeping potentials of the One self - the "Maya of Brahma".

In the east the highest teaching is known as the Vedanta and this is taught in various shades and guises but its Principle remains the same. Maurice A. Canvey in "The Encyclopaedia of Religions" states, of Vedanta "...all that really exists is the One Spirit, Atma or Brahma. The Ego is really one with the infinite eternal Being. All else is Maya or Illusion." And "The soul is hindered from enjoying union with the One Spirit by a belief in matter which is really an illusion." Vedanta teaches that true wisdom can be achieved only by contemplating the True, or Real, Self and by not allowing one's attention to be diverted by the effects of illusion.

The early Gnostics taught that man was God incarnate in matter and that by the rite of self-sacrifice he could free himself from this tomb. Many elaborate systems were formulated to help one achieve this state and some proved successful. Whilst a basic system was maintained in the mystery schools much depended, and still does, upon the skill and patience of the interpreter or teacher to put over the essentials to be understood. That is why only selected pupils were enabled to enter the school. The teacher is only there to do his work for a given period and the disciple must then go it alone with the knowledge he has gained - then work out his own salvation. This can be to his own benefit or his own undoing. It can be his own undoing if he tries to relate what he has learned to his mortal needs or to the acceptance of an existant mortal world. To misapply the higher teachings can cause great havoc in the life of him who is not pure in his approach. It is better to live the good life in the dualistic state than to play around with a false sense of the Truth.

This sublime state of consciousness is the true state of the Brahmin, the Boddhisattva, the Perfected One in the Egyptian mysteries and the ascended Christos in the Essene schools. To explain the teaching further and to bring it into focus so that it is more easily understood, the teachers use several avenues of approach to help the student. Because every idea or thought contains within itself the seed for manifestation, it follows that thoughts bearing certain "labels", for want of description, describes the very effects that can be expected from entertaining such thoughts. Everybody more or less understands that loving thoughts produce an atmosphere of love and hateful thoughts produce tension. To succeed in this way means that we should maintain careful control over our thought processes, entertaining only those thoughts and ideas that are conducive to our quest and avoiding all inharmonious thoughts. Many yoga teachers in the east use this knowledge in their mantra systems and believe that by chanting the name or quality of a particular deity, it will produce like circumstances for the disciple; but this is only half-truth. The thoughts concerned contain the essence of the experience, so it is no use uttering statements or words that one does not fully understand. For example, it is of little use meditating upon, or singing about, Agape if one is not demonstrating it in one's living. One cannot gain something for nothing. One can meditate upon or pray about peace all one's life yet gain little peace at all. The secret lies in the "doing" of it. Peace will be experienced only to the degree that one eliminates distracting thoughts from the mind and encourages peace to reign in his surrounding atmosphere. "Be ye doers of the word and not hearers only", taught Jesus.

A Solar System, being the outward form of a Christ Sun, is the embodiment of the most perfect idea of Creation and the inherent consciousness contains the very essence of "material" that makes an objective world possible. This means that this Christ Consciousness is the "stuff" out of which all manifestation comes. Since, as seeming individuals, we "live, move and have our being" in this "stuff" or substance, then there can be no other material available out of which emanation proceeds. Our very make-up and reality is revealed in the fact that we are of the same substance of that which brought us forth. Because we cannot ever be separated, by the very fact of being contained within it, our "life is hid with Christ in God" and, in truth, no opposite can be in existence.

The idea of anything evil, or opposing the perfect design is like the child being afraid because he thinks there is a "bogey-man" in his bedroom and requires comfort from his parents in assuring him that this is not so. Most "evil" thoughts arise through fear. One steals because he fears lack. One hates because he feels the absence of love. One kills because he believes falsely that he can destroy that which causes him fear. In all cases the doers of evil act in the way they do because they fear the absence of the opposite good. To eliminate slowly every idea of opposite brings one to a state of calm and an assurance of the eternal stability of the real "kingdom" in which one, when awakened, lives. We cannot change the way life really is. From long experience it can be learned that the very nature and character of that medium in which we live is impartial in its action. Whilst this Christ-Mind appears to be impersonal in its caring for the whole - It, nevertheless, can be seen working out for the benefit of every seeming individual in Its domain. To understand this correctly banishes every vestige of fear and sick bodies can be healed.

The physical body is proved to have never been anything substantial at the time of death. In most cases a person is unaware of the fact that he has "died" and that he has separated from the body. He feels no different. If he sees the "corpse" nearby he does not associate himself with it. In the Sacred Teaching, as in the Vedanta, the physical body is nothing in reality and therefore it is of no help to identify one's self with it. It is the true Spiritual Self alone that exists and that which appears to be a body living in a physical world is a dream produced by belief and supposition. Regarding the doctrine of Reincarnation which was abandoned by the Christian church around the sixth century, and is firmly believed by the eastern religions, one might ask how does it appear in the light of the ancient teaching? There are several people who can recall past lives and from the theories aforementioned would seem out of context. We state that because man has not yet fully awakened, he still keeps "nodding off" into a series of dream states. By following the teachings advocated one finally becomes aware of one's immortal state and remains free. These facts were taught in the Hermetic sciences in the ancient Egyptian and Greek schools. The great truth that this Reality exists lies in the evidence of those awakened ones who call us to "awake" also. One cannot awaken to something that is not already there.

Appolonious of Tyana, in a letter to Valerius, wrote, "There is no dying save in appearance and no birth or becoming save only in appearance" and "that which is in existence can never really disappear". This is referring to the great secret that, if we consider suffering and cessation of life to be real, it is of little use trying to overcome them. However, the Great Teachers showed us the way to free ourselves and prove them to be nothing more than illusions.

The spiritual properties of the sun have long been known in the mystical schools and since the "Christian" era came into being, the sun was designated as Christ Helios, or the Christ Sun. The Christ Sun is, and always has been, a permanent focal point for a genuine help towards a deeper understanding of the life within. Long before the great teachers of this epoch came to be remembered, the Buddha, Viracocha, Krishna, Confucius, Moses or Jesus, this heavenly agent for Love and Wisdom was pouring out perfect qualities to His Dominion. He is also depicted on the walls of the ancient catacombs in Rome.

In the early centuries of the Christian era, there were many different schools of thought and tradition and because some of these schools were in fact initiatory orders, their teachings have never been known by the public. From the fourth century onwards, Christianity assumed political powers and the individual sects were persecuted by those in authority and, in many cases, everybody was forced to become "orthodox Christians" by law, even Jews and the like. By this action alone the true secrets of life became obscured. Love no longer reigned.

The great civilizations of long ago, who built massive and beautiful buildings and acquired skills in the arts, were influenced by the direct energies emanating from their incarnate priest sun kings. These beings were the actual instruments of the Solar Forces interpreted at the level of the people. From the influence of these priest kings, the people were able to live life to the full. In spite of what modern researchers say about them, being influenced by their orthodox academic backgrounds, these ancient peoples learned the secrets of power and wisdom. Without the sophisticated instruments used by today's healers it was known that the love and understanding of the practitioner succeeded where his medicine failed. All healing practices, of whatever kind, are only as successful as those that heal live according to the divine Laws of Truth. Healing is not the central function of a spiritual school, but as each student applies the teachings to his life's problems he, or she, will find healing taking place naturally.

It is not easy to find a true mystical school in the western world because there are many groups claiming to be genuine, yet they charge large fees and impose many restrictions, rules and regulations, on their members. Many claims are made about being in touch with hierarchical masters and the possession of special powers; but as many of these masters and powers are, in reality, non-existent, it is little wonder that people remain in the dark. Should a student of truth become hampered by a belief in persons and powers external to himself, or herself, he or she will find themselves once again in the darkness. There is only one direction in which to seek the light and freedom from mortal sufferings, and that is from within. The Light and Love of the Eternal Sun emanates from within outwards.

In the western hemisphere, we are mainly concerned with Christianity, although the ancient solar wisdom can still be found in the teachings of Islam and more especially in Judaism. Christianity has borrowed most of its tenets from Judaism and the mystery schools of Egypt and Greece, as I have mentioned earlier.

The true secrets of enlightenment are partly preserved in those books which have been classified as apocryphal or symbolic, and because they contain little or no reference to a historical Christ have been regarded as "heretical". In every age, however, a new revelation of truth has been treated as a heresy, but this does not deter the sincere seeker who is determined to achieve his goal of reaching perfection. Perfection is the demand of the Christ teachers.

One great help in reaching the required goal is to identify one's self with the archetypal idea of man as he is reported to have been originally created, that is, in the image and likeness of God. Then by a process of eliminating that material which clouds this image, one can live out one's life by claiming dominion over errors. This is the basic method taught in the more advanced schools and a system is used to enable the work to be easier. The correct system then is very important and can be highly effective, but still remains only a help. The result lies with the disciple. One should learn the art of relying solely upon the Inner Self. One should not run away with the idea that this is a new teaching. It is the oldest of teachings. Therefore, the way is known by the guardians, and as it appears new to those who discover it, the form was laid down and is preserved in its pure state by the earth's spiritual mentors who reveal or withdraw it from curiosity seekers and those who would try to destroy it.

In the following extract from the Acts of John of the Apocryphal New Testment, one can see the inner teaching carefully preserved. One cannot rely wholely on written material, which is why it is necessary to belong to a sacred school so that the content can be rightly commented upon and explained.

"Now what I seem to be, I am not... Having thus spoken, He showed me a Cross of Light set up, (note that it was not a cross of suffering) and about the cross a great multitude... Above the Cross I saw the Lord Himself with no shape. This cross of Light is sometimes called the Word by me for your sakes,... sometimes Jesus, sometimes Christ,... sometimes a way... sometimes Resurrection ... sometimes son... sometimes truth... By these names it is called as towards men..."

"The multitude that are about the cross is the lower nature with its many forms. The multitude that heareth my voice are they that are above with me having but one form."

"Be ye also persuaded, therefore, Beloved of God, that it is not a man whom I preach unto you to worship but God unchangeable, God invincible, God higher than all authority and Power, and elder and mightier than all the creatures that are named and all ages. If then you abide in Him and are built up in Him you shall possess your soul indestructible". That is, one shall discover his immortality. This same idea is contained in the teaching of Islam and would be effective if it was not obscured by the dogmas of punishment for sin.

Who were these people such as Moses, the prophets, the disciples and Jesus, whom the church and state have prevented others from excelling in spiritual teachings? Jesus taught his followers that they could lead on to greater things than he disclosed, if they followed his teachings. He never claimed more for himself that could not be achieved by anyone else. The organised church has dared to over-ride the natural process of a gradually deepening revelation of truth over the ages and by its set dogmas has nailed their Jesus eternally to a cross of suffering. It was, in fact, Pope Adrian the first, in the eighth century, who proposed the idea of the Christ being represented as the form of a man upon a cross. Many writers on early Christianity are unaware of this fact and seem surprised to find that "crucifixes" figured little in the beginning.

In an enlightened society the scriptures are continually being added to by new leaders and teachers in spite of the accusations of "heresy" and "cultism". Truth is not concerned with whether priests should be "celibate" or women becoming priests or if "the pill" is a desirable method of birth control. These are decisions for human beings to make and have nothing to do with Divine Knowledge. Likewise, dieting and vegetarianism possess no foundations in spiritual truths, but sometimes are the result of certain moral convictions. Further, there are as many different ways of understanding God as there are numbers of people in the world.

No person has special access to God, neither can any person "fix it" with God for another. Whether one be a king, bishop, priest, guru or prime minister, one is no nearer to God than the least amongst us. All of us are as near to God as we ever will be. The great rise in the consumption of alcohol reveals a thirst for the true spirit but ignorance leads men to believe it is to be found outside of themselves.

Many seekers after truth get confused with the terms used in the more advanced systems. For example, we frequently use the terms Real and Unreal or Reality and Illusion. The question often arises, "How can I tell the difference?" We refer to the appearances in this visible world as the Unreality of Illusion because nothing here is substantial or to be relied upon. Thus we translate that which we call the Real World into spiritual verities. Beauty, goodness and truth are manifest in action and are eternal qualities for whatever circumstances one might find one's self in this world - goodness can prevail.

In the world we have three main systems which can be divided into the categories of politics, religion and law, for the sake of explanation, although any human field of knowledge could be included. Human justice is based upon proving a person guilty or the person proving himself innocent and a court is set to argue the case. The weaknesses in this system have resulted in innocent persons being proved guilty. In our terminology then, we say, that justice in the world is illusion, for here the saying is "justice must be seen to be done." In this light "worldly justice" is the counterfeit of "Divine Justice" or the Real.

One has only to look at the political systems around the world today and it can readily be seen that most countries are undergoing crises in work shortage, commodity supplies and economical troubles. So politics are unreliable in the answering of human problems. Again politics are the counterfeit of Divine Government under which there are no flaws.

Religion too, in its attempt to arrange systems for harmonious living and answers to emotional problems, fails because, by the time committees and synods have reached agreement on a plan of action, the problems have moved to another dimension or area of experience. So we say that a religion of the "eye" or of organised dogmas and doctrines is the counterfeit of the true or real "religion" of the heart. One can see here the duality in action of the Unreal, or counterfeit systems, clouding over the underlying Permanent Principles in Life that cannot be organised. Our only proof of the Reality in our lives lies in the application of the Principles, as taught by the great teachers. In our living, to experience the truth about the eternal, unchanging qualities we can find that a powerful government rules, a just law resides and an enduring light on every problem in shown. Where the Real and Unreal relates to personal problems we have to apply the Sacred Principles, already established as Religious Truths, and apply them to the situation concerned. When applied correctly, with a little patience, the problems are resolved and Truth is proved to be true.

I have already quoted the saying, "Love God and your fellow man" as being the only real answer to all problems. It can be seen, from this statement that all attention is taken away from the individual self and we could say that this attitude was being "unselfish". In practice we find that most troubles come about by one being concerned for one's self. So we say that self-centredness generates all kinds of illusions about the Real Self which has no problems to be solved. It is a case then of switching our attitude to the acceptance of the already existing Truth about that which we acknowledge as the Reality of Being, and the troubles vanish like the illusions they are. This sounds simple in practice but one has to understand fully what is happening for the system to become really effective. For example, one cannot expect a principle to work immediately, unless one has done some study and living out of the tenets involved first. One cannot play a concerto on the piano until much practice has been done earlier. The same idea applies to this teaching; but God sometimes confounds us even in this.

This living according to a spiritual discipline is often referred to as the "way" or "path" and all men are encouraged to "walk" along it. Disciples usually refer to themselves as Christians, Buddhists, Hindus, Jews or Taoists. This represents the mainstreams of belief as apart from the many sects, or cults, existing within each division. Many sects exist in each main religion that are at variance with each other, and this is because of the dogmatic attitudes taken by the more powerful sects.

By experience we come to learn that the Real world exists, irrespective of whether or not we are aware of it. When we are sufficiently awakened to the Truth we can observe the dream-like and fantasy-producing action of the "human phase" of mind. Where can one find this Truth at a beginners level? There has been a great interest in the teachings of the Essenes over the past few years, mainly due to the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls. The Nag Hammadi Books discovered in 1945 gives us a look at what the "Gnostic" sects believed. Eusebius the bishop connected with the Nicene Council in the fourth century, admits in his writings, that the four gospels and some of the epistles belonged to the Essenes and that these were the "Jesus". The Essenes were a monastic sect that possessed secret interpretations of the Scriptures and it was from these holy men that Christianity borrowed most of its practices. Along with the writings of Paul, the "Gnostic", Christianity became an organised body and many human suppositions became part of its theology. The term "Essene" is, according to Epiphanius, derived from the Judaic mysteries applied to "Jesse".

Truth, in its real sense, cannot be organised but there are several groups today following, in their own way, that which they feel to be "Essene". Some of these groups have added their own fancies to the basic teachings, so one should look around for the less sensational attachments. Likewise, there are some groups calling themselves "Gnostic", possessing many attached illusions to the facts. The emphasis of many of these groups is placed upon the teaching of the science, or knowledge, of "Ascension". Since it is this kind of knowledge that the true seekers must eventually reach, one should look around with caution before joining a school. Whilst many of the ideas attached to truth are frivolous, one should look for the "protective" elements within the dogmas. If one is taught Purity, Truth and Righteousness with absolute reliance on the First Principle and a love for our fellow-man, together with little or no request for fees or dues, it is safe to make approaches.

The existing "Mystery Schools" and many "New Age" sects are a continual annoyance to the main religious bodies. As these are an integral part of the Solar influences for man's growth and development, the "orthodox" streams should, if they dislike friction, find ways of attaching the "heretics" to their organisations. Only in this way can harmony be established and a balanced view of life be gained.

One should avoid committees, and organisations, campaigning for human rights, or freedom for the individual. These types only seek for that which is "right", according to their own suppositions. Any statement which claims to be founded upon an experience of Truth can have, according to some schools, seven or even twelve sides to its meaning and one ancient group supposed there to be twenty-two. Whichever way one sees this idea, the individual is capable of seeing only one or two sides of the revelation of Light and the only position where one might behold the whole is looking out from the centre. Because of the elusiveness of Truth, one should regard only that which feels right from within and all outside sources should be viewed as effects already passing.

When a person comes into the presence of the Light of Truth it might cause him, or her, to become uneasy because one judges one's self against that which one sees and could show up one's darker nature. If one is sincere in one's seeking, fear should be overcome because all is to be gained and there is no condemnation or judgment in Divine Love.

In these pages one can see that judgment of the organised religions has taken place, but this must cease when one comes to the realisation of Cosmic Truth. The Great Central Sun sends out its rays of Light and Love to all being. It does not judge or condemn. Man judges and condemns himself by taking the Light to himself. He is not free until he has released himself completely to the Will of the Father of all Lights. Are the scriptures really an authority on the Truth of Being? Their only validity lies in their function to lead one in the direction of Truth.

There are many writings and these become classified by theologians according to how the content fits in to the dogmas and doctrines advanced by the orthodox church councils. St. Paul warns us not to accept the "philosophies of the world after the traditions of men". Organised religion is after the traditions of men.

The Holy Bible, especially the Old Testament, was not written until the third century B.C. At the request of the Jewish nation, the Essene Brotherhood translated the original scriptures, which were devoid of dogmas, doctrines and sectarianism, into a manner acceptable to the Jewish people in the form of a history. This was intentional so that these people might see God working out for them. In no way was a "chosen race" suggested. This is a dogma that has arisen, as is usual, when man looks without for his salvation. The commandments did not, originally, contain references to man's subjection to any other race on earth, such as the Egyptian, for example. The New Testament was not added until the fourth century A.D. The same thing happened again with respect to arranging the books that a dogma of man's fall and a final salvation by a saviour on a cross appeared in literal form.

The present confusion in the world today is the evidence of a world crying out for truth and love. The world's peoples have been exploited by those who follow wrong political attitudes, by power-seeking religious organisations and every form of commercialism. The alternative "organisation" is already here. Not administered by mortal men, it is under the control of the Universal Intelligence Itself. The "Kingdom of Heaven" on earth is not subject to any of earth's powers or organisations; neither will the whims or fancies of mortals be imposed upon it. By Its very presence and powerful reality, the false world will slowly melt away into nothingness simply by the continual insistence of the consuming fire of love. The pursuits of selfish mortals will be turned into a recognition of God's all-pervading presence. All men will say in their hearts, "Thy will be done" and the Kingdom becomes a permanent reality in the lives of all men.

End of 5th - last page should not be in the Ecclesiast Sept. '92

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 71-78

LIBER# 71 COMMANDER GRAYSON TO THE RESCUE

Personal & Confidential SIXTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

THE HIDDEN CHURCH OF THE ILLUMINATI

A Review of
The Esoteric Tradition from Atlantis to the present day

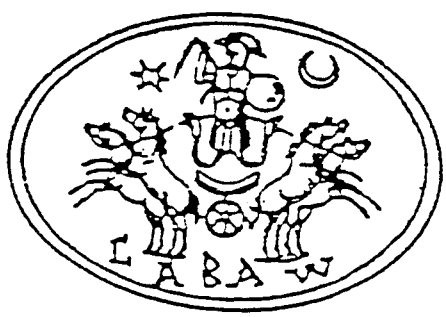
- by -

RICHARD, DUC DE PALATINE



THE SANCTUARY OF THE GNOSIS
London & Halifax

Personal & Confidential

CLASSIFIED

THE HIDDEN CHURCH OF THE ILLUMINATI

- by -

Richard, Duc de Palatine

The present Grand Hierophant of The Order of the Pleroma, himself an Initiate of many of the Assemblies of Adepts, can truthfully claim to be in direct succession from the earliest known Mysteries of Light. It can be established beyond the shadow of doubt that Richard, Duc de Palatine is the successor of the Ancient Mystery Schools, as we shall show. There is no need for us to fabricate any form of secret history in order to induce people to join the Pleroma. One has only to study the long line of Assemblies which have existed and perpetuated the Gnosis from the last days of Atlantis before it was submerged by the waters in 9564 B.C.

History shows that there were two streams of the Wisdom Tradition deriving from Atlantis; the first migrating to Central Asia and then into India and the Chaldean Mysteries, the second from Atlantis to Egypt (Mysteries of Isis and Osiris) and then to Greece (Mysteries of Eleusis); then into Asia Minor (Mysteries of Attis and Adonis) which were blended with the Mysteries of Mithra and the Essenes. In B.C. 120 to 70 Christ came to establish the 'Mysteries of Jesus' which were a blend of all the earlier Mysteries. The successors of Christ were the Gnostics and the Essenes (Dead Sea Scrolls). From them came the Catholic Church which destroyed outwardly the Gnostic Movement in the 3rd Century.

The main elements then merged into the Manichaeans of North Africa and Luxor of Egypt. The Tradition then moved to Italy under the guise of the Paulicians and Cathari; thereafter it showed itself in the Orders of Chivalry and then in The Templars. After the Templars were outwardly destroyed, the Tradition reappeared in The Fratres Lucis, or 'Brothers of the Light,' in Italy in 1498; then it showed itself in the Rose Cross in the 14th Century. Again, in the 18th Century, came The Unknown Philosophers, Freemasonry and Luxor in America, and then The Bavarian Illuminati which embodied the various illuminised Rose Cross Orders, Alchemists and Masons. This same Order passed into England under Ill. Bro. John Yarker Jr., and finally, in 1961, it became The Brotherhood and Order of The Pleroma.

Into this unbroken line of succession from the Mysteries in the person of Richard, Duc de Palatine was blended the Apostolic Catholic Succession from the Gnostic Fathers. This means that all the lines of power and authority from the Mysteries of Antiquity now merge in the person of the present Grand Hierophant of the Pleroma, meaning that the authority is not vested in a group of people, but in a single individual - namely, Richard, Duc de Palatine.

In all the Mysteries, both ancient and modern, the central theme of the teachings was the same - the Divine Nature of Man. This central fact has never changed from one century to the next. Although the names and legends have been changed, the main theme has always been the same, and unless an organisation embodies this Central Doctrine, we know that it is not in line with the Esoteric Tradition of the Ages.

OUTLINE OF OUR DOCTRINE

When the Gnostic Teachings were suppressed by the Christian Churches of the East and West, the Hierophants went underground and continued to give teaching and instruction to those who were proved worthy of receiving the same. After the 3rd Century, the Pagan Mysteries were practically abolished by the Christian Emperors of the East and the Popes of the West. The Gnostics, who were the survivors of the Hierophants, divided themselves into three classes varying in profession and technique, and these classes survive to this day.

The Three Divisions of the Gnostic Mysteries were: 'The Sacerdotal', which told of the drama of the Immortal Soul in The Valley of Death where it enters a temporary trance-death. The second was 'The Military or Chivalric Orders' which followed the drama of the murdered god, which to them symbolised the Immortal Soul of Man. These two Orders were suppressed by the Christian Emperors of Rome, but continued their existence under the guise of 'Strolling Priests.' They became prominent during the Crusades and then as The Knights Templars. The basic doctrine of all these was Gnostic Christianity.

We come now to the third class, that of 'The Artisan.' They learned to 'close the lips,' and, as Art was vital to the Church, they were protected. From them came the body of masons who were guilds of workmen who wandered over the face of medieval Europe and who were the descendents of the Dionysiac Artificers. In Rome they appeared as the Roman Collegia and, at the Fall of Rome, some moved to Arabia whilst another section moved into Lombardy and thence into France. They also moved into India, China and Babylon by the way of old Egypt and Palestine.

The Secret Schools; that is to say, the Inner Schools beyond the public Mysteries of Greece, Egypt and Rome, were neither fraternal nor political, nor were their ideals the same as those of modern Masonry or Rosicrucianism. They were essentially philosophical and religious institutions. Those who were admitted to the Secret Schools were consecrated to the service of The Hidden Church of The Illuminati.

The Discipline used in The Hidden Church was called 'The Arcane Discipline' and it was in definite practice in the Christian Church between the Ist and 4th Centuries. Those who followed it were known as the Arcane or Gnostic Christians and they kept their doctrines secret and taught the exoteric doctrines along the same lines as the Ancient Mysteries. We know from the writings of many of the Christian Fathers that this system was divided into grades, and these were known as: 'Catecomenois' or learners, 'Pistoi' or faithfull, 'Photozomenoi', Illumined or Baptised, 'Menuemenoi' or Initiated, and 'Teleioumenoi' or Perfected.

Within the Gnostic Arcanum this threefold division was kept alive until the I6th Century when the Chivalric, Masonic and Sacerdotal were separated. Within the Arcane Church we have the division of 3 x 3 = 9, the name being the Perfected Man. These three were shown as the inner division, symbolised by baptism, communion and consecration by chrism. This division has been carried on into the Pleroma as purification, illumination, and then perfection. The second division is comprised of the Deacon, Priest and Bishop; they are shown in the esoteric portion of the Gnostic Church as meaning that every Initiate passes through these three stages, but when the Gnostics were finally suppressed, the Catholic Church reserved these three offices for their clergy. Finally, we have the third division as the Monks, Members and Catechumens, and they represent the exoteric division of the Church.

We must also remember that the Druids had this 3 x 3 = 9 division in their own system, and when they were destroyed they reappeared as the Culdees and had rites which resembled the Pagan Mysteries. In the so-called 'Apostolic Constitutions' the Church is compared to a ship, the minister or bishop is the captain, the deacons become the mariners, and the congregation are the passengers. This is also shown in the Egyptian, Grecian, Chaldean, Ionic, Gnostic, Druidic and Grail Mysteries. They all refer to the age-old three divisions within the Hidden Church.

In the 'Stromata' of Clemens Alexandrinus, the organisation of the Arcane Church is shown as 'Degrees of Glory in Heaven corresponding with the dignities of the Church below.' Meaning that the 3 x 3 = 9 system refers to the invisible anatomy of man - the Immortal Spirit, the Divine Soul and the Human Soul. Each aspect is made up of three vestures or Robes of Glory. These three sets of three Robes of Glory make up the whole man, which was also shown as the number Nine. Dionysius the Areopagite states that the divisions were based upon the heavenly and ecclesiastical hierarchies.

In the Catholic Gnostic Mass this threefold division is called upon in the Preface: Seraphim, Cherubim and Thrones which comprise the powers of the Secret Hidden Church; then we have the Dominions, Virtues and Powers making up the Esoteric Church, and then Principalities, Archangels and Angels making up the Exoteric Church. In these, one will see that the three sets of three represent the powers inherent within the three aspects of man.

It is obvious that we can only skirt the exoteric and esoteric histories of the Hidden Church, but we will endeavour to give some hints for the reader to continue his own investigations. If there are any of our readers who are Masons, let them take note: The Speculative Masonry which came into being in 1717 is based upon spurious constitutions, and they have changed the Legend from the Drama of the Christos to that of Hiram Abiff. By so doing, they have destroyed the last vestige of connection with the ancient Gnostics and the Mysteries.

The first three degrees which constitute the Craft or Blue Lodges should constitute the outer or Exoteric aspect of the Hidden Church. Then we have the 4th to the 18th degrees which constitute the Esoteric Church, and then from the 28th to the 33rd degrees you have the Hidden Church. The word 'Lodge' has the same meaning as 'Church' or 'Ecclesia,' therefore, up to 1717, the Operative Masons were also divided into three classes patterned upon the divisions of the Mysteries.

Now it is obvious that there is a definite connection between the Pleroma and the Gnostic Mystery System, otherwise how could it be possible for the Pleroma to have direct connections with the Gnostics?

One of the most sacred and closely guarded secrets contained within the Mysteries and their successors was the Knowledge of the Hidden Church which we know as The Invisible Empire of Light (Trans-Himalayan Brotherhood) and the methods whereby an advanced Initiate could gain admittance to the Empire. But although many seek the Path which leads to the Empire, very few are chosen, because very few are prepared to undergo the superhuman tests of courage and fortitude. These tests are not symbolical as given in the Speculative Masonry of today, but they are, as they were in olden days, actual tests. Of the hundreds who wait at the doors for admission, very few realise their objective.

Before we can continue with our discussion we must try to trace the line of descent from the Mysteries to the present day Order of the Pleroma. The Kabbalists owe their system to Esdras, and it was carried on to the time of the Roman occupation of Jerusalem. Philo states, "The Law of Moses is like a living creature whose body is the literal sense, but the soul is the more inward and hidden meaning, covered under the sense of the letter." They claim that the Kabbala is divided into 'three veils,' indicating the Exoteric, the Esoteric and the Hidden Church, or the Vestibule, the Holy Place and the Sanctum Sanctorum. These three are again divided into 3 x 3 = 9, and the One - the Ain Soph Aur, the Supreme Mystery. So we have The Chaldean Book of Numbers and Nercaba, The Sepher Zepirah and then the Mishna and Gemera. Those books can be read three ways according to the ability of the student. They had their own passwords, signs and countersigns somewhat similar to the present Masonic Royal Arch Degree. From them came the Essenes. But it must be remembered that Moses or Moishe received his wisdom from that of the Egyptians blended with the Chaldeans of India.

The Essenes were a branch of the Assideans and the Chasidim and were the Hierophants of the Egyptian Mysteries when Ahmasis ruined the sacred Temples, and they sought protection within the Temple Order at Basra. Their hidden records state that Jeshu ben Pandira (Jesus), a nephew of Queen Salome (the widow of Alexandrinus or Alexander Jannuai II, King of Judaea), went to Egypt and became a Hierophant and then returned to the Essenes and proclaimed the Mysteries. He was stoned to death and hung on a tree at Lydia about the year 71 B.C.

as indicated in the Gemara. These Essenes were called the Jewish Gnostics, but this is not strictly correct as they were influenced by Adonis in Syria, Serapis in Egypt, Dionysius and Bacchus in Greece, and also by the Mysteries of Mithra. It is logical, therefore, to state that Jesus tried to blend all these systems into what is known as the Mysteries of Jesus. There is also evidence that when the Essene Church faded in about 300 A.D., beginning with the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus in 78 A.D., the Catholic Church came into being. We leave the inference to the reader to work out!

There is also evidence to show that the Essenes were but a branch of a yet wider movement directed by a group of powerful Adepts. Linked to them we also find the Therapeutae of Egypt who flourished at Alexandria, the real birth-place of Christian Gnosticism. Then we have the Nazarenes, sometimes called Sabeans, the followers of Sabius who lived on the shores of Galilee. The Ebionites, whom Jerome called the genuine primitive Christians, were linked to the Nazarenes in a common bond, and we find that Paul, Joseph, Samson and Samuel all claimed to be Nazars. From them came the founders of the Christian form of The Arcane Discipline which had survived publicly until the end of the 4th Century and then faded from public knowledge to re-emerge in later centuries under different names and guises.

Secret history states that Jeshu ben Pandira (Jesus) founded the 'Mysteries of Jesus' in 74 B.C. and, after his death in 71 B.C., the Mysteries remained secret until 46 A.D. when Paul of Tarsus became the Grand Hierophant. There are many statements made by him which link him to the Hidden Church. In fact, his 'Illumination' and the qualifications demanded for this power are identical to these taught in the Pleroma. From Paul came the Christian Gnostics themselves, and this evidenced by the statements of Marcion 136 A.D., and Prodicus, 120 A.D. He was followed by Valentinus and Basilides about 130 A.D. Then there were Simon Magus, Menander, Cerinthus and Dosethius, and after them came Saturninus of Antioch.

If one will read 'Pistis Sophia' in the three layers of meaning, one will find the exoteric, the esoteric and The Arcane Discipline clearly shown. Later we find Clement of Alexandria, a pupil of Ammonius Saccas, himself an Initiate of the Mysteries of Serapis and Isis. He transmitted his Gnosis to Origen, and it was he who attempted to blend the Jewish and the Egyptian into one.

The Ophites were a Gnostic Fraternity in Egypt. Their conception of Jesus was that he allowed the Immortal Spirit to descend into the Christos, who in turn descended into Jesus the Man. Thus Jesus became the God-Man in the flesh. This teaching is again identical to that of the Pleroma. The Christos is the Eternal Pilgrim, and was always shown as being overshadowed by a Living Serpent with three heads, the three-fold nature of the Soul, and they also claimed that the Good Serpent (Soul) descends to earth.

The Gnostics also drew heavily upon the College of Rabbis at Babylon who also held to the 3 x 3 = 9 system. The College was founded at Babylon after the destruction of Israel. Samuel was the chief of a College at Ramah; Elisha at Jericho, and Hillel had a regular dual school and became a founder of the Sect of Pharisees; hence we know the reason for the latter putting Jesus to death, being as he was a Hierophant of the hated Egyptian Mysteries. Then we have the Carpocrations of Alexandria whose founder was a direct descendent or disciple of Jeshu ben Pandira, and who claimed that Jeshu derived the Mysteries of his religion from the Temple of Isis in Egypt. They also had their grips, signs and words, symbols and degrees, and used the 3 x 3 = 9 system of Initiation.

Bardesanes was born at Edessa and taught a Gnostic system composed of Indian, Chaldean and Egyptian Mystery Teachings. He also followed the earlier Gnostic sects in their degrees and initiatory system. From him, perhaps indirectly, came Mani of Persia who became a Gnostic and who derived his teachings from Buddhist, Brahmin and Egyptian sources. He also had three grades made up of 3 x 3 = 9, and this Gnostic sect in common with the others had secret initiations and forms of recognition. In fact, the present three Masonic Initiations possess the same grips and signs as the Manichaeans, such as 'signa, oris, manum et finus,' or a word, a grip, and of the breast.

So the contest between Catholic Christianity and Gnostic Christianity can be resolved into this: The historical Jesus, the Christ of the Church; and the second, the ancient Chrestos of the Cult of Serapis.

with a spiritual Christos to be developped within the Soul of each Perfected Gnostic. So we find that the Roman Section followed the views of Peter (?) and the Jewish Gnostics. The Gnostics, in opposition to the Church, followed the teachings of Paul, Origen and the British Culdees. It was entirely due to the lack of The Arcane Discipline that a conflict ensued between the two opposing ideas, resulting in the Mythos being taken as literal history by one, and the same Mythos being interpreted spiritually by the other. It was, however, the Church which won in the end, combining the two aspects and teaching both exoterically.

With the collapse of the State Mystery Systems, the Hidden Schools still continued in close secrecy until the time of Jeshu ben Pandira who, in order to perpetuate the Hidden Wisdom or the Gnosis, founded his own Mysteries. Then came the great Gnostic Doctors who gave to his Church a practical philosophy. They too drew upon all the existing Mystery Religions; as St. Augustine states: "What is nowadays called the Christian religion was in existence among ancient people, and has continually existed from the very origin of the human race ..." When the Church destroyed the great Gnostic Movement and the last public sect, that of the Manichaeans, the Church took over and claimed that Christianity stemmed from the life and death of an unknown (to secular history) Jesus of Nazareth.

In the 6th Century the Manichaeans were put to the sword. Some escaped to Europe, others gave much to the Sufis and the Dervishes of Islam. In 657, the Gnostic Manichaeans reappeared as The Paulicians in Armenia who followed the teachings of Paul, Marcion and Mani, but the Roman Church instigated their destruction by the sword. They emerged again as The Cathari in Southern France who were again exterminated by the Roman Inquisition. They perpetuated in close secrecy The Arcane Discipline and the Gnostic teachings. In the 8th Century, St. Benedict founded his Order and retained many of the Gnostic teachings and the Discipline.

Some of the persecuted Gnostics took the names of the Euchites, the Bogomils, the Albigenses, and later, as the Lollards, they travelled all over Europe seeking those who were spiritually worthy and continuing secretly to teach The Arcane Discipline and above all the grand Mythos of the Soul.

In the 8th Century there appeared a Society calling itself The Holy Vehm of German Westphalia, and then in Spain there appeared a Society designated The Hermandad. Both of these again followed The Arcane Discipline and held to the Gnostic Christos. Then came The Alchemists who were originally Gnostics and who taught the Mystic Marriage of the Sun and Moon, or the Divine Soul and the human soul of Man.

Sufficient information has been given to show with proof that up to the 8th Century Gnosticism survived in various forms from its inception many hundreds of years before the beginning of the Christian era. It is obvious that the link between Masonry and other Secret Orders is to be found in Gnosticism and The Arcane Discipline.

HISTORIC CHRISTIANITY

With regard to Historic Christianity, there is evidence to state that this did not come into its own until about the 4th Century, and no earlier. We know now that, whilst The Mysteries of Jesus were known to have existed between 71 B.C. and 46 A.D., very few individuals knew anything about them. It was only in the 2nd Century that Valentinus was ordered to allow some portion of the secret rituals to fall into the hands of the Jewish Gnostics. Before he obeyed his orders, however, he stripped the manuscripts of the Keys to make them innocuous and to keep inviolate The Arcane Discipline and reserve it for those who had advanced spiritually enough to appreciate it. Those who received this document, being carnal men, did not have the insight to know that it was a Mystic Drama concerning the Christ-Soul and the human soul (Jesus), and they claimed, therefore, that it was the history of their god and accepted the exoteric version and proceeded to take from the old religions those portions which would give them the foundations of a historical man.

In spite of the deliberate mistranslations and interpretations of the original gospel, there is still sufficient within the New Testament to give to the discriminating student the teachings of The Arcane Discipline and the method whereby he or she may effect The Mystic Marriage. It is because they do not have the Discipline that the Church is failing every day. This also applies to the present day Masons and the other so-called Mystic Orders one finds in the West today. The very fact that they do not follow the Principles of The Arcane Discipline shows with absolute certainty that they are not the real descendants of the Gnostics or the Ancient Mysteries from Atlantis.

See Ignatius Donnelly: "Atlantis".

FROM THE 8TH TO THE I4TH CENTURY

We have seen that up to the 8th Century the Gnostic tradition was still flourishing in various parts of Europe and in the Middle East. There is sufficient evidence in extant writings to show that the Gnostics were the descendants of the pagan Mystery Schools and they also retained The Arcane Discipline. It is interesting to note that even at this late date, the various Gnostic sects divided their doctrines into three aspects, namely: The Sacerdotal, The Military and The Artisan. These became the Exoteric, the Esoteric and the Hidden Church. These three divisions are known today as Masonry, the Occultists and the Mystics. Unlike the days of old, these three divisions of the Mysteries have today become separate and in many cases antagonistic to one another.

In reality, these divisions are also divided into 3 x 3 = 9 as we shall show. Masonry is divided into three main groups of stages or Initiations. The first three are exoteric, the next three are the esoteric, and the final three the Hidden Church, but, as with the Church, these divisions are interpreted exoterically.

When we come to Occultism we again find these three showing themselves. You have the ordinary member making up the outer or exoteric section, then you have the Inner Schools making up the esoteric, and the Initiates and Princes of Light making up the Hidden Church. Again, in Mysticism these three are shown. You have the beginner along the path of purification, and then the path of Illumination, and finally the Hidden Church of the Perfected Ones which is composed of the Princes, Mediators, Messengers and so on.

Plato states that the Perfect Man is symbolised by the number IO. This means that the 9 with the Immortal Spirit, fulfilling the Law of Permutation or the Revolution of the Spiritual Self; so we have the first set of three - the human soul (three vehicles); then the second - the Divine Soul (three vehicles) and finally the next three - the Immortal Spirit which becomes One with the Godhead making up the Perfect Man, or Ten - the Alpha and Omega of Evolution.

There is still some confusion in the minds of modern scholars as to what we mean by the Sacred Mysteries. The 'Mysteries' were called by the Greeks 'Teletai' or 'finishings' and this was used in conjunction with the word 'mou' which meant 'Keeping a closed mouth.' The Mysteries, therefore, were observances, generally kept secret from the profane and uninitiated, in which were taught by dramatic representation and other methods the nature of the human Spirit and its relation to the human soul, and then the method of its purification, illumination and restoration to its higher life to become the Perfect Man.

The Teacher in the Mysteries was known as 'The Hierophant' or 'The Old Man.' He represented to the Candidate his Divine Soul, and was veiled to symbolise that the Soul is always veiled to the uninitiated and unpurified. The only part of the Hierophant which was allowed to be seen was his feet, symbolising the human soul of Man. As the neophyte passed through each Initiation the Hierophant, by the clever use of lights, became progressively visible to the neophyte. This symbolised the man becoming more and more purified in order to allow the glory of the Soul to become visible to the human soul. The Hierophant became the revealer or 'Patar' of the Mysteries of God in the same manner as the Divine Soul becomes the revealer of the Mysteries to the human soul of Man.

Plato and many of the other Initiates state that the Mysteries were highly religious, moral and beneficent. It was considered that if the neophyte passed through the Nine Initiations within the School he was eligible to become a Member of the Hidden Church of Illumined Souls. G. R. S. Mead states: "In short, the Mysteries were in every country a series of dramatic performances in which the mysteries of cosmogony and nature in general were personified by the priests, and neophytes who enacted the parts of the various gods and goddesses, repeating supposed scenes (allegories) from their respective lives. These were explained in their hidden meaning to the candidates for Initiation and incorporated into philosophical doctrines." This is, in fact, the exoteric teachings of The Arcane Discipline.

The Roman Church, having borrowed all their rites and dogmas from the Pagan Mysteries, shows this connection with the Mysteries in the consecration of a Cardinal. The candidate is commanded to "keep his eyes and mouth shut on his consecration." This was also the injunction given to the Mystae or first grade Initiate. The Masonic System also has the same injunction, but not the modern Rosicrucian Systems. The drawing of the right hand across the throat indicates that they have to keep their mouth closed at all times concerning their supposed Mysteries. The Mystae was blindfolded, slip-shod and had a cable-tow put round his neck when he took his Initiation. The rest of the Obligation can be found in the ancient Schools, but again it is missing from the present-day Rosicrucian Systems. We feel at liberty to divulge these details as they have already been exposed many times over the last two centuries and, Masonically speaking, may be found by anyone with the price of the necessary book!

Christian Gnosticism grew out of the teachings of Jeshu ben Pandira (Jesus), who was himself a Hierophant of the Mysteries of Isis and Osiris at Sais in Egypt, so it is logical to assume, in spite of the lack of substantiating evidence, that Jeshu and the Gnostics faithfully carried on the Tradition intact. It would seem that Jeshu was the vital link between the Mysteries and the later Gnostics, just as Gnosticism is the vital link between the Orders of Labour, Quest, Military and Masonic Orders. We must now pose this question: If the Masons and Rosicrucians are the direct descendents of the Gnostics, why is it that they have failed to carry on The Arcane Discipline and the Legend of the Christos?

Just as the Hierophant was the sole expounder of the esoteric secrets and doctrines, He would naturally sit in the East. It was also forbidden to pronounce His name before uninitiated persons. Therefore, an Initiate was one who had been received into the esoteric secrets and had had revealed to him the Mysteries of the Immortal Spirit. We find that the word 'Initiation' comes from the Latin 'initia' which means 'the basic or first principles of a science.' The original initiatory system was abolished with the fall of the last of the public Mysteries at Arles in France in the 7th Century. The only kind of Initiation now known to the public is merely a type of initiation, but these are definitely not the real Initiations.

In brief, the Mysteries represented the passage of the Soul from a higher life into mortal life, and then from mortal life into finite death, and the varied experiences of the disembodied Soul in the world of subjectivity. In this day, the secrets of Initiation have been lost except within the Hidden Assemblies of Adepts in Europe, America and the East, and here we are not referring to the Masonic, Rosicrucian or any other fancy-named order or orders. The latter ask their candidates to pass through sundry meaningless ceremonies to be initiated into a self-concocted solar legend, be it that of Hiram Abiff or Christian Rosenkreutz.

In order to show clearly that Jesus and Paul were, as is shown in Christian Writ, Initiates of the Pagan Mysteries, the word 'Innocents' was a nickname given to the Initiates of a system before the Christian era. Jeshu refers to the 'Innocents', and we find that the Innocents of Lydia were put to death by Alexander Jannuai, to the number of several thousands, about 100 B.C. This historical fact gave rise to the legend of the 40,000 innocent babes murdered by Herod while searching for the infant Jesus. The former is a little-known historical fact whereas the second story is a fable, as Herod was dead four years before the supposed birth of Jesus.

The Alchemists came into existence long before Christianity, and we find that most of them were Gnostics who formed themselves into Secret Brotherhoods beginning with Emperor Julian. We also find that there appeared a long line of Gnosto-Alchemists such as Cedrinus, 491; then Zosimos the Panopilite, Morienus, the Calid, the son of Gized the Second, Sultan of Egypt about 725. Geber came about 730; then came Avicenna about 980. From this time they migrated to Spain and Germany. Then we have Gerhard of Cremona, 1130; Arnold of Villanova, 1240; Roger Bacon, 1215; Albertus Magnus, 1270; Raymond Lully, 1320, and many others. This branch became merged into The Order of The Rose Cross and The Knights Templars.

The Order of The Temple was formed in 1118 and also retained the 3 x 3 = 9 system of discipline until 1313 when they were shamefully destroyed. After this the remainder of the High Knights went underground and continued their work. In 1498, a group of Initiates met in the City of Florence to form The Fratres Lucis. They restored The Arcane Discipline and remained in secret in spite of the Church's attempt to destroy them. There is a suspicion that Dante was one of their number. They joined with the Alchemists and the the Rose Cross Orders.

These were followed by the founding of The Quest of The San Grael in England, France and Germany to which certain of the Templar and Gnostic traditions were blended, as well as that of the Culdees of England.

Many of the survivors of the Albigenses reappeared among the Troubadours or strolling-players and they also carried on the 3 x 3 = 9 system and The Arcane Discipline.

In 1115 there appeared at Cologne a society called The Magical Union; their allegory was the Rose and the Cross. They also used the 3 x 3 = 9 system, and their doctrines were based upon the Christos Myth of Gnosticism. In 1282 there appeared another compact school which was the first to use the word 'Macon' which was later corrupted into 'Masonry.' John Tauler, a Dominican monk, established a society embodying the Rose and the Cross in the early part of the 14th Century. The members recognised each other by secret grips and also followed The Arcane Discipline. In the same year there appeared another society called The Fraternitas Rosae Crucis, and then in 1378, Christian Rosenkreutz founded

The Brotherhood of The Rose Cross. There is evidence to show that Paracelsus was also a member of the Rose Cross, and became the Monarch of The Rosicrucian Society.

At Lubeck about I485 there existed a Guild of Compass Brothers. In I480 there existed a School in Rome called The Platonic Academy; its objects were the revival of the Platonic and Gnostic teachings. In the same year The Brotherhood of The Trowel existed at Florence, and this continued until the I8th Century. The above societies taught the Gnosis under the guise of the Rose and the Cross and embodied The Arcane Discipline. In the I6th Century, Cornelius Agrippa established in Paris and elsewhere a secret body known as The Theosophical Society, and he also formed a branch in London in I5I0. In I498 there was a Rose Cross Society called The Fraternitatus Rosarii at Selswick in Denmark which was connected with The Arcane Discipline. A Society called The Militia Crucifera Evangelica is known to have existed at Lunenburg in I57I and taught the doctrines of the Inner and Outer Man symbolised by the Rose and the Cross. In I570, Michael Maier stated that The Brethren of The Wise Men existed in his day, and this was later revived as The Brethren of The Golden Rosy Cross.

In I6I4 there appeared the 'Fama' and 'Confessio' of J. V. Andrea, and it is known that Andrea founded his own society called The Christian Fraternity. In I622 there also existed at The Hague a Rosy Cross Society with branches in many countries in Europe. The question which the reader may be prompted to ask is: If the story of Christian Rosenkreutz is fictitious, how is it that there existed Rose Cross Societies long before Andrea published the 'Fama' and 'Confessio?' It is obvious that the modern bodies styled 'Rosicrucian' have nothing to do with the original Rose Cross bodies, since they lack the 3 x 3 = 9 system and The Arcane Discipline.

We have now come to the beginning of the I7th Century, and we must leave this section and revert to the beginnings of the Culdees in England.

There is no clear evidence that Masonry existed by I7I7, but we know that before this date there existed The Arcane Colleges which combined the three-fold division of activity. Circa 46 - 52 A.D., there existed a College of Roman Artisans at Chichester, England, which had originated at Rome and Alexandria. When the Romans left England, the members of the College broke up and migrated to various towns and formed the Guilds devoted to the work of building, and from them came what was to be known as the Guilds of Operative Masons. At the same time, we know that the three Archdruids became Archbishops, and the Chief Druids became Bishops. This was done upon the acceptance of Christianity by King Lucius in I55 A.D. These bishops, monks and priests of the Christian Britons became known as the Culdees, 'The Servants of God,' and they carried The Arcane Discipline with them and embodied it within the framework of Celtic Christianity. They were considered by Rome to be heretical, of course.

Their principle Colleges were at York, and they spread their teachings to Bath and as far as Hadrian's Wall, but they were not 'Masonic' as we understand the term. They were known as 'The Arcane College', with the Artisans as an integral part of the Discipline.

It was from England in 589 that Columban went to Burgundy and established The Arcane Colleges in France and Germany. European so-called Masonry is derived from these Culdees of France. Prior to the 5th Century, the construction of their churches was after the model of the ancient Egyptian temples which were divided into three sections corresponding to the exoteric, the esoteric doctrines, and the Hidden Church. In 524, Arthur, son of Uther Pendragon, defeated the Saxons and then called a Council at York. Arthur was a Romanised Briton, and founded the Legend of The San Grael embodying the Druidic and Culdee doctrines blended with The Arcane Discipline from the Roman College at Chichester.

The Holy Grail is the Soul of Man, inheritor and guardian of the Divine Spark within wherein dwells an ever-shining and vital mirroring of the Divine Soul-Life. This legend, although essentially Christian in its origin, contains many of the most abstruse doctrines drawn from the Gnostic Mysteries. Joseph of Arimathea represents the state of man before the Fall. The Cycle of Merlin and Arthur is the exoteric cycle, the Cycle of Gawain and Lancelot represents the esoteric, and Percival and Galahad represent the Hidden Church. In this, the Soul becomes the abiding place of the Divine Presence. The Castle of the Grail is the human temple of the Holy Spirit through the Soul, and, in the Gnostic Mass of the Holy Grail, the Celebrant is the Soul itself, 'a priest for ever after the Order of Melchisedek.'

With conquest of England and the Teutonic nations, the Arcane Colleges became extinct in so far as the Military and Sacerdotal sections were concerned. These two sections began to fade from public knowledge and remained in existence under a veil of the closest secrecy, but the Artisans remained in their Guilds using their own discipline and landmarks with their main headquarters at York. At the same time the Roman Collegia was forced to close and fled to Lake Como where it became known as The Magistri Comacenes who hired themselves out to the Lombards. They also migrated to England, France and Germany, and carried with them the ancient rules of their craft.

In 597 Augustine came to England and Romanised the Celtic Culdee Church and brought with him Roman Masons to rebuild the Churches. The main body of Culdee Craftsmen reformed themselves into Building Guilds, and while the Church still needed to build churches and monasteries, these Craftsmen were protected by the Church, not from choice but by necessity.

The fact that there have existed from very ancient times Bands or Colleges of Builders does not infer that they were

Photograph of the author -
Richard, Duc de Palatine

'Masons.' Even up to 1717, the Guilds were separate and had their own rituals and doctrines. It is extraordinary that in the year when Speculative Masonry was fully established in England and France, the Roman Church declared against them. There seems to be no attempt to explain this important fact. Why did the Church suffer the Building Guilds for so long and then suddenly change and rule against them? We say that, from the 18th Century, what is known as 'Masonry' changed its purpose and the real Grand Masters withdrew from the Guilds and formed 'Secret Masonry.'

In the 18th Century, the hidden Adepts of the Mysteries remained in the background. They still retained The Arcane Discipline and the 3 x 3 = 9 division, and the doctrines were fundamentally Gnostic and Culdee. As far as the 'Gentlemen Speculative Masons' were concerned, the Secret Masons are absolutely unknown. It was due to the retirement of the Illumined Masters that Speculative Masons changed the Legend of the Christos into the Legend of Hiram Abiff. This act by Anderson broke off all connection with the great Gnostic stream which began in the 4th Century and faded in the 18th, at least from public knowledge.

THE 18TH CENTURY TO TODAY

From the beginning of the 18th Century all traces of The Arcane Discipline and the Gnostic Tradition seemed to have faded from public knowledge, but it still remained in Europe. It became a closely guarded secret among the Adepts of the Hidden Church. It was with the withdrawal of the Master Adepts behind their veil of silence that there began to be formed many spurious and clandestine bodies with equally spurious histories. Because no one could lay hold to the Adepts of the Templars, Rose Cross and Gnostics, these new organisations denied their existence. This opened the way to unscrupulous men who concocted fabulous histories for their bodies and passed them off to their unsuspecting dupes, and they created spurious rituals with the outward sign of authenticity. Into this mystery-mongering and spurious orders stepped the Jesuits of Paris and Berlin who finalised the creation of spurious Masonic, Templar and Rose Cross Orders.

Actually there is very little real evidence and information left about the aims, means and doctrines of the various Secret Fraternities. This is due to the terrible obligation which each brother was obliged to take - The Sodalian Oath - that he would not reveal any of their teachings or aims or the means to implement their purpose. There is another reason why the public cannot find the meeting places of the Adepts: because there are none! The Illumined Adept has the ability to create many thought-images of Himself simultaneously on the emotional region (astral); these thought-images are the simulacra of the Adept's Soul. They are activated by the consciousness and become perceptible to the inhabitants on the emotional region.

For fear of persecution by the Roman and Protestant Churches, the Adepts could not show themselves to their pupils, so when a pupil was ready, the Adept made himself known through one of these simulacra whilst the pupil was out of his body during sleep state. There he was taught and trained, but even when he returned to the body he still remembered his Oath and training and kept his lips sealed lest the slightest indiscretion would bring upon him the wrath of the Church. This meant that the Assemblies were actual in name only as far as this physical plane was concerned, but were actual in fact in the Inner Realms of the Spirit. Hence the reasons why so little factual evidence is available to the student.

This means that you had the genuine Adepts and the spurious adepts. The histories from the 18th Century abound with the machinations of the spurious adepts, and from them have come the present bodies styling themselves Templars, Rose Cross and Hermetic Orders, including many of the present High-Grade Masonic Rites. Because they are self-created orders, they are devoid of any spiritual connection with the Adepts of the Hidden Church. We are fully aware of the so-called claims made by the various societies and have patiently sifted through them. When we have rejected the fabulous histories, what have we left? Simply the results of a group of very fertile speculations which, when placed against the extant sources of knowledge, fact and history, prove themselves to be worthless and can be thrown into the dustbin where all rubbish is normally disposed of.

The great European Adept who used the nom-de-plume of 'The Comte de St. Germain' inspired the formation of The Alumbrados of France and The Mystics of Belgium, then The Theosophical Illuminati at Wilhelmsbad which became merged with The Bavarian Illuminati of 1776. They were the depositaries of The Arcane Discipline as their rituals show. In 1776 The Order of The Illuminati was formed in Bavaria by Adam Weishaupt, and he also was inspired to restore The Arcane Discipline and the 3 x 3 = 9 system of degrees. Their doctrines were based upon those of Mani of Persia and the early Gnostics.

The 3 x 3 = 9 system was made up of the following:

1°, Novice,

2°, Minerval, and

3°, Minor Illuminee,

These constituted the exoteric section. Then we have:

4°, Major Illuminee,

5°, Directing Illuminee - Masonically, now equal to their own Scottish Knight, and

6°, Epot,

These constituted the esoteric section, and then we have:

7°, Regent,

8°, Mage, and finally,

9°, King Man.

At the death of Weishaupt, Dr. Leopold Engell revived the Order in 1880 and recruited a membership drawn from the various Illuminised Masonic, Templar and Rose Cross groups.

Finally the Order passed under the control of Ill. Bro. John Yarker Jr., Grand Master of The Antient and Primitive Rite. He also was an Initiate of all the known Assemblies of Adepts and was recognised as one of the leading authorities on Initiatory Orders. Yarker transmitted the original Order of The Illuminati to Dr. Herbert James Monzani Heard in 1913, who then installed Dr. Hugh George de Willmott Newman on the 29th January 1945, and then in 1955, Dr. Newman installed Richard, Duc de Palatine as the Grand Master of The Order of The Illuminati, who did then withdraw the Order from the Masonic influence and consequently restored The Arcane Discipline and the 3 x 3 = 9 system of degrees, except that the Initiations are now taken on the inner levels whilst the neophyte is out of the body during sleep, at least for the present.

In January 1961, the Grand Hierophant changed the name of the Order from that of 'Illuminati' into that of the 'Pleroma', as it was found that it answered our purpose far more adequately, one of the reasons being that the original body was brought forward for the conditions of the 18th Century, and since we are now in the 20th Century, the conditions are not the same. Also, since this is the century when a Messenger descends from the Highest to sound the key-note for this century, the old form of procedure would not and could not meet the new conditions. It was also realised that since The Illuminati had become mixed up with the political upheavals in the 18th Century due to the machinations of the Jesuits, it was decided to cleanse the Order from all taint of being a political tool.

Now, you may say that all of this is very interesting, but what has it to do with me and my self-realisation of the Divine within me? My friends, the past is just as important to the present as the present is to the future. If we believe in the evolution of the Spirit, then we must know that the past, present and future is but one moment of time in the consciousness of the Father of All.

We are told that 'the law of the Medes and Persians changeth not,' meaning that the laws which govern the Spirit and Form changeth not. They were the same yesterday as they are today, and will be in the future. That which changes is the form through which the Law operates; the Law is eternal. By this means, it is logical to assume that we can verify the present through the past. If we are to accept Einstein's Theory of the Space-Time Continuum, then we must realise that Space is the distance between two given points, and the Time-sequence the passing of energy from one point to another with a continuum of consciousness between the two points.

Bearing the above in mind, you will note that about 9564 B.C. when the Island of Atlantis sunk to the present time, the energy which caused Atlantis to sink did not stop with the sinking. It continued on from then to the present time. There is a space through which the energy had to pass, but it also took time for the energy to reach us here, but there is a unity between the Space and the Time which is called a Continuum.

We know that the Will of God is this Continuum and Its purpose is the same today as it was millions of human years ago when this Earth became solidified and man appeared on it. Since God Himself always obeys Higher Laws than ours, we in turn obey His Laws just as mankind in the future will continue to obey the Laws of Being.

The institution of the Mysteries began after the sinking of Atlantis. There were certain flexible rules and procedures instituted by the Adepts who founded them, for they were designed to be perpetuated to the end of the occupation of this planet by the human race. Bearing in mind the Continuum of God's Will, we will see that the rules and procedure which were instituted untold ages ago must also be applicable today; notwithstanding the constant changing of the form from century to century, the fundamentals of the Mysteries have remained the same.

So in order to prove the authenticity of the present forms, we must trace our steps back to the beginning to see whether the substance and the intention has been continuous in every century up to the present day. This is the only means available to unillumined man whereby he may check the veracity of the system of teaching he is following. Now we must ask ourselves, what are the landmarks which have survived through the centuries in spite of the changing forms? They are very simple: The implementation of the Arcane Discipline is the first landmark to look for. The second is the 3 x 3 = 9 System of Initiatory Degrees; the third being an unbroken Line of Grand Masters from the founder of the particular system you are interested in.

Then we must look for the Doctrine of the Dual Soul of Man and the method of attainment through the three stages of purification, illumination and then perfection. Then you must look for the three stages of knowledge or the veils through which the neophyte has to pass. They are the Exoteric, or outer; the Esoteric, or inner, and then The Hidden Church. Then finally, the Grand Hierophant or Master must be in the position to demonstrate the Powers and Qualities of the Soul through Illumination or Mediatorship. You may discount any claims made through a Spiritualist medium no matter how high their quality.

Now let us put these examples to the test: Let us take the Pleroma and see if it follows the ancient landmarks. It does teach The Arcane Discipline and has the Initiatory System of 3 x 3 = 9, which degrees are taken by the neophyte whilst out of the body at night, at least for the present. It also has the three stages, being as they are the Brotherhood giving the exoteric knowledge, the Order teaching the esoteric principles of illumination, and The Hermetic Brotherhood of Light, making up the last three degrees of this section; and finally you have The Hidden Church standing behind the outer three.

We must also check upon the Grand Hierophant and see if he has an unbroken line of succession from the founders. This can be shown: The Power and Authority of the Pleroma is vested in the person of Richard, Duc de Palatine coming from The Illuminati, Rose Cross, Templars, the Brothers of Light, the Albigenses and the Paulicians, who were the successors of the Cathari and the Manichaeans. They owe their existence to the Gnostics, who were derived from the Mysteries of Egypt, Greece, Chaldea, who again claim that their Masters came from the Island of Atlantis. Plato states that the Emperor of Atlantis was a Divine Ruler and Grand Master of the Atlanteans. This constitutes the Philosophical Section.

The present Grand Hierophant is also a Gnostic Bishop and claims an unbroken line of succession from the College of Antioch which owed its existence to St. Paul, and he in turn claimed authority from Jeshu ben Pandira, who in turn was a Grand Hierophant of the Mysteries of Isis and Serapis. The Hierophant of the Pleroma links twelve lines of the Apostolic Succession in his person. This constututes the Sacerdotal Section.

The present Grand Hierophant is also a Sovereign Grand Master General of three High Grade Masonic Rites:

(a) The Antient and Primitive Rite, or The Rite of Memphis, which claims for its source the Copts of Egypt who were the last of the Egyptian Initiates,

(b) The Rite of Mizraim, which is derived from the Illuminati of Avignon.

In 1782 an Egyptian from the ancient Brotherhood of Luxor raised Gad Bedarride of Cavillon to another degree and granted him full authority. The Brotherhood of Luxor (Egyptian Branch) owes its authority to the Grand Hierophant of the Temple of Sais in Egypt. The Brotherhood also founded another branch in America just before the War of Independence and has functioned in that country ever since. Practically unknown to the general public, they are in communion with the Brotherhoods of Mt. Shasta and Yucatan.

(c) The Order of The Temple of England and Paris, which was later connected with the Order of The Illuminati, and this authority is now vested in the present Grand Hierophant. Through The Illuminati came the connections with The Rose Cross and Martinists.

Added to this list comes the Grand Inspector General of The Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Masonry through New York in the United States. Then he became a 33rd Degree Mason of The Ancient and Accepted Rite which was founded by certain members of The Templar Order, and of The Rite of Perfection 25°. It also owed its existence through the Rite of Strict Observance and The Martinist Order through Martinez de Pasqually which he received from Count Cagliostro, who again received his own authority from The Comte de St. Germain, who in turn claimed to have his authority from The Christians of St. John at Basra in Persia, who, themselves, can prove an unbroken line of authority from the Gnostics. It is not commonly known that Basilides, the Gnostic Bishop, consecrated the first Bishop of Constantinople. This constitutes the Artisan Section.

As with the Mysteries, the doctrines of the descent of the Soul to Earth, Its death to Its spiritual heritage buried in the tomb of matter, and Its final restitution with the Immortal Spirit, was carried on by the Gnostics and their successors to the 15th Century. then it was passed on to the Rose Cross and then the Illuminati and finally into the Pleroma, being achieved through purification, illumination and then perfection.

To complete this draft of successions, brief as it is, we must add one more link of authority: The Roman Collegia sent Artisans to the town of Chichester in England between 46 and 52 A.D. They remained there until the Romans left Britain when they migrated to York to become known as The Arcane College. In 155 A.D., at the instigation of King Lucius, the Gnostic Christians who had migrated to the West of England accepted the three Archdruids as the three future Archbishops of Celtic Britain and joined The Arcane College to become known as the Culdees or Primitive British Christians. A number migrated to Avignon in France and founded a College there. The British Church still survived in spite of the Roman Church: one of the Lines of Apostolic Succession vested in the Grand Hierophant is derived from the Ancient British Church.

In spite of the brief details given, it must be obvious to any observant student that the Pleroma and its Grand Hierophant stand in the direct line of succession with the Gnostics and the Pagan Mysteries, and the fact that it retains all the ancient landmarks within its framework should shatter once and for all any doubt in our minds that the Pleroma cannot prove its Spiritual Authority. As one member states: "If there are those who still doubt, there is one way of absolute proof. Let them follow the teachings as taught and lived by our Leader, and let their lives subsequently demonstrate to them the unmistakable validity of their Truth." Further, we can say, spend a little time studying the histories of the known Chivalric, Alchemistic, Rose Cross and Masonic Orders, and you will find a thin line of authority and succession running through and linking them to the Pagan Mysteries, and the Gnostics; then trace from the beginning of the 18th Century the movements of the many occult or spiritual bodies and you will see that they finally merge into The Order of the Pleroma, and then down to Richard, Duc de Palatine.

Is it not to be wondered that we, having in our person so many valid lines of authority, should speak out at the pretensions of many of the pseudo-occult and masonic bodies which exist today, knowing perfectly well that they are unable to prove their descent from the Pagan Mysteries.

We will now leave the rest to you - make of it what you will!

THE ARMY OF THE ELECT

We have endeavoured to give a brief outline of the descent of the Gnosis from the days of Atlantis to the present day and how it was merged into The Brotherhood and Order of the Pleroma, but it must be clearly understood that, although the Pleroma is publicly known to the world, there are also a number of other bodies which have remained unknown to the general public. They also are the recipients of the Gnosis. There is a very definite connection between the Pleroma and the hidden bodies, and this link was forged by the Initiation of Richard, Duc de Palatine into each and every one of them. It could be said that the Pleroma is the Outer School belonging to The Hidden Church.

The Hidden Church, or The Invisible Empire of Light, constitutes the Army of Evolving Souls of all mankind. This Army is made up of the ordinary soldier in the ranks whose lesson it is to obey the regulations of the Army, but as the human soul graduates from the ranks and becomes an N.C.O., he now assumes more responsibility and graduates further and further out of the ranks as he learns more and more of the regulations and learns to accept more important responsibility in order that he shall become a captain or a colonel, and eventually a general, and so on.

As in any army, so you have the various ranks of responsibility in the Army of Souls, as every stage or initiation is successfully passed, the student-soldier is granted a commission from the King of the Empire. This process is known to the outer world as The Path of Holiness. This Army obeys the Will of the King under its Commanding Officer who is known in the West as St. Michael. This Hidden Church or Empire is governed in the same manner as the Kingdom of Great Britain is governed. You have the King and His Ministers of the various departments of Life. They are called The Princes of Light. Each Prince has under Him a descending ladder of Minor Officials, these being the Initiates ranging from the Ist Degree to the 4th Degree. Each one of these Initiates has around him a smaller group of pupils whom he directs in the business of the King. They are known as the Younger Brothers, whilst the Initiates are the Elder Brothers. Each Member of the Army owes complete obedience to the King of the Invisible Empire of Light.

The King rules two kingdoms, yet in reality the two kingdoms are but the life and form aspects of the One Kingdom of Light. So from age to age, from the Invisible Church a great Prince of Light becomes an Ambassador of the King and descends to earth to assume a mortal body in order to teach and help mankind along the Path of Light. These Princes have come to every civilisation and restated in the form and language suitable to the people of the Kingdom of Earth the age-old facts of his eventual restoration to his spiritual home.

In every century, seven of these Ambassadors descend to Earth and are responsible for the quickening of the seven departments of man's earthly endeavours. They deal with: Leadership, Teaching, Philosophic, The Artisan, The Mystic and the Organisation aspects. Each Ambassador may be a pupil of a Master or an Initiate, and it is his or her responsibility to sound the key-note for the new age. In the main, these embodiments of the Light come silently and fulfil their task and then pass away before the majority of the people realise that God has walked amongst them and the great opportunity they have missed.

Let us not run away with the stupid notion that the Ambassador is a creature from another planet or someone who must be bowed down before and adored. In fact, the Ambassador is more likely to appear to be more ordinary than yourselves. In other words, he will be, or is, a person just like the rest of us in every way. He may be born a prince or a labourer, but this concerns the outer shell only. The inner nature of the Ambassador is always veiled to the public. For instance, if he is a Century Messenger, he will have the human and the Divine Souls perfectly aligned, as in the case of Jacob Boehme and H. P. Blavatsky. He also becomes an Embodiment of God. Should the century be at the end of a minor cycle, then you will find that his human and Divine Souls are aligned with the Immortal Spirit. He then becomes the Embodiment of God The Holy Spirit; and in the case of a major cycle, he will embody the Consciousness of God the Son through his Spirit, Soul and human soul.

Within the Mysteries and the Gnostic System, this knowledge of the Invisible Empire of Light was only entrusted to the highest Initiates as it was considered that it was far too dangerous to be in the hands of the uneducated and uninitiated. This has been amply proved by Theosophy and its aftermath. H. P. Blavatsky states: "There is hardly a medium who has not claimed to have seen them (The Princes of Light). Every bogus swindling society, for commercial purposes, now claims to be guided and directed by 'Masters' often supposed to be far higher than ours! ... prompted either by desire for lucre, vanity or irresponsible mediumship ... had we acted on the principle of silence, such desecration would never have occurred." The Princes and their pupils adopt different tactics today, and a pupil is under a solemn obligation never to reveal to the public, not even their trusted friends, that they are a pupil of a Prince or Master.

Go into any occult society and you will hear the empty claims of being a pupil of a master. In most cases, they are the apt pupil of their own subconscious minds. Ultimately the burden of proof rests with them. We ourselves have often been told that such and such a person is a pupil of the 'Comte de St. Germain,' and we have to laugh silently to ourselves. We have never heard the Adept who used this title called by this name. We have a secret name for him, just as he has a secret name for us.

The lives of these Ambassadors embody the outlines of the Wisdom of God, each one dramatising the various stages in the life of the Soul of Man. Each one becomes the embodiment of God for a short period of time, then discards the mortal body and descends again to become the helper of the next Ambassador. Each Messenger teaches the threefold stages of attainment through purification, then attaining illumination, and reaching perfection. Again, they always embodied the three levels of instruction to their pupils: the public teachings which are exoteric in nature; for their immediate pupils, the esoteric; and then, for the pledged pupils, the Knowledge of The Hidden Church.

Many of the earliest Ambassadors who founded the Mysteries were the Gods who descended to Earth and instituted the 3 x 3 = 9 system of Initiation. It was considered that if a neophyte had passed through the nine stages of the upward climb to the Summit he was then ready to take the Ist Initiation into The Empire of Light. Each stage of the Mysteries enabled the neophyte to become progressively spiritualised and be in the position to behold God face to face. This was the last and most awful of the Mysteries.

One will find the outlines of the Hidden Church running through their doctrines and in all the succeeding manifestations of the Gnosis up to and including the beginning of the I8th Century. One of the reasons for the withdrawal of the True Hierophants was due to the coming of the Industrial Revolution which began to sweep Europe and the Americas. Men began to turn from spiritual things and concentrated upon the accumulation of worldly wealth. Every discovery made by man was turned towards selfish ends. This was one of the reasons for Their withdrawal and the founding of Masonry and a few of the more genuine occult bodies.

The culmination of the materialisation of science, religion and philosophy was reached at the beginning of this century (I900). In order to combat this spread of materialism, the Empire sent forth a great Adept, one of the most enigmatic personages of the century. One thing is certain: the 'Comte de St. Germain'- whatever his real patronymic may have been - had a right to his name and title. He bought a property called San Germano in the Italian Tyrol, and paid the Pope for the title. He came to reorganise the Schools of Europe, and one will find his moving hand through all the societies between I700 and the end of the I9th Century. He also came to restore as far as possible the remaining Gnostic bodies and blend them into a single channel; that is to say, the outer bodies. His work and inspiration moved Adam Weishaupt to form The Order of The Illuminati. There is sufficient evidence to show that he was the Agent for The Templars, Rose Cross and many other Secret Assemblies. There is a suspicion that he was preparing for the Minor Messenger who was to appear in I975. Let us see His movements: He inspired The Order of The Illuminati and showed Anton Mesmer the principles of magnetism or Magnetic Masonry. We know that the Brothers of Light of 1498 used this form of healing and also that Paracelsus practised it in his own work. Mesmer discovered the magnetic fluid in man; he was initiated into The Fratres Lucis and the Egyptian branch of The Brotherhood of Luxor, and it was They who elected him as the Messenger for the 18th Century. His work was supervised by St. Germain. Later, Cagliostro was brought in to help, but he made mistakes and was recalled and banished to the Bastille to die there.

In 1848, H. P. Blavatsky was commissioned to act as the Messenger for the 19th Century. Her work was two-fold: to show the underlying unity of all religions and to reveal the facts concerning The Empire of Light; and secondly to reveal as much as that century could accept concerning the nature of the duality of Man and the methods of His restitution to His original purity. This latter doctrine was entrusted to a few pledged pupils in London. She was sent to Tibet to finish her three-fold training in The Arcane Discipline. She fulfilled the first stage, that of Purification; and Illumination, and it was under this natural faculty that she was able to write "The Secret Doctrine" with the help of her two Masters. We also know that 'St. Germain' gave her considerable help in her work.

It was obviously planned that The Theosophical Society should follow The Arcane Discipline when she formed the Outer Society. Within the Society itself she formed the Esoteric Section, and when she came to London she formed the Pledged Section, or The Hidden Church. When H.P.B. died in 1891, she left no instructions for the continuation of both the Esoteric and Hidden Sections. They ceased to exist with her death. The first split occurred in the Society when both Judge and Besant claimed to be the Head of the Esoteric Section, but, in point of fact, neither of them could claim this authority, as there was no authority to claim!

Dr. Besant went to Paris and was initiated into Freemasonry. She and a number of fellow-Theosophists formed Co-Masonry which today has become a barren and lifeless organisation. C. W. Leadbeater, a former Anglican Minister, joined with Bishop Wedgwood to form The Liberal Catholic Church, and this also has become a semi-orthodox church teaching Theosophy instead of Gnosticism. It is obvious that it was the intention of the Two Masters to form a new impulse based upon the three-fold division of the Philosophic (The Theosophical Society), the Sacerdotal (Liberal Catholic Church) and the Artisan (International Co-Masonry), but this effort was frustrated by the blindness of Annie Besant and C. W. Leadbeater. Since this triple movement failed to implement The Arcane Discipline and the Gnosis of the Soul, it failed in its purpose and has become a stumbling block to the reception of the new impulse. By this failure, the line of the Esoteric Tradition was broken. What happens next?

H. P. Blavatsky stated that another Ambassador for the 20th Century would make his or her appearance about 1975. They could be a pupil or an Initiate who would reveal and demonstrate the final proofs of the Divine Nature of Man and the method of its restitution with its original purity. Who the next Messenger will be we will have to leave to the future.

Since H. P. Blavatsky was commissioned by The Trans-Himalayan Brotherhood to act as Their Messenger under the guidance of two of Its Brothers, her work was obviously devoted to preparing the ground for the 20th Century. Her work failed to achieve the goal for which it was intended. Will the next Messenger succeed or fail? Who can tell?

If Anton Mesmer was commissioned by The Brotherhood of Luxor to be the Messenger for the 18th Century, then he too failed partially in his labours by the blunders of Cagliostro, just as H.P.B. partially failed through the blunders of the Governing Council of The Theosophical Society under the Presidency of Henry S. Olcott. Will the next Messenger also fail to achieve his or her objective through the blindness of one or a number of Their helpers?

If Mesmer was sent by The Brotherhood of Luxor, and H.P.B. by The Tibetan Brotherhood, it may be that the next Messenger will be sent forth by The Templars and Rose Cross Brotherhoods and that the Messenger for the 21st Century will be sent forth by The Esoteric Arcane College. This may be supposition, but there are certain facts which could give some substance to the above. When the "Comte de St. Germain" DIED, he was reported to have said that He would be away from Europe for about a century and then He would return to continue His labours for the Empire.

There are reports from various Centres that "St. Germain" is again active in Europe, England and America. In spite of the many confusing claims, both genuine and false, there seems to emerge a fairly clear picture: that this Adept is definitely working for this century. He is reported to have been in St. Petersburg in Russia before the Revolution, and to have warned the Czar of Russia of coming events. At a Council held in Paris before the last war of the Heads of many of the Assemblies, St. Germain presided. From the deliberations of this Council a directive was sent out to a number of the Brothers in various parts of the world to be prepared to work with the new impulse. It would appear to be fairly obvious that the next Messenger would work under the supervision of the "Comte de St. Germain."

It may be well to make this perfectly clear to all and sundry: The Order of the Pleroma does not claim to be the only organisation teaching and practising The Arcane Discipline. There are many small private Schools scattered around the globe following the Discipline under various forms. But what we do state is that the Pleroma is the only public body proclaiming the ancient Arcane Discipline, and that it can trace its descent and authority from the Ancient Mystery Schools.

The Pleroma can only appeal to and assist those individuals who have outgrown the need for Father-figures and organised spirituality, since they have realised that the real Image of the Father-Figure is not external, but is rather an internal Self, and that the method to achieve the realisation of this Real Self is by one's own personal effort. Therefore, it is logical that the achievement of the Real Man cannot be made through organised spirituality, but, on the other hand, such organised bodies can and will assist the individual for part of the way; then he is on his own. The Pleroma is not organised spirituality; it is a method to be followed in one's personal life. All that the Pleroma can do for its members is to point the way and assist the member in whatever way it can, but, in the main, the work must be done by the members alone. Hence the reason why the Pleroma cannot make any promises to you, for to do so would be gross dishonesty.

There is sufficient evidence to show that the Princes of Light do try to impress suitable individuals to form organised groups of students in the hope that such groups will become channels whereby the Will of the Father may become manifest on Earth, but there is always a danger that this effort will be frustrated by the lower nature of both the leader and the members, for when self-seeking, pride and arrogance gain the upper hand, the channel becomes clogged and the Power from on high cannot flow forth. The body concerned then becomes useless in the Hand of the Father. In the main, organisations which have been formed with high and pure aspirations in the beginning generally become crystallised in their ways of thinking and behaviour and are unable to change with the ever-increasing tempo of life. They then become outmoded and useless in the New Age.

If the body follows The Arcane Discipline then it must, according to the Law of Change, also change from time to time in order to meet the conditions of the new impulse, but it is when there manifests a resistance to this change within the group that we find the group falling short of the Plan of God.

Unlike most organised bodies, the Pleroma is not strictly an organised body, since it only has one Outer Head who realises that the Will of God is directive in its drives and unchangeable in its purpose, but that its form of expression is changeable. Therefore, the Pleroma remains flexible and can change when it is necessary to change. This process of change is evident both in the writings of its Head and the framework in 1955.

There is a saying that when a body refuses to change, then it ceases to have any value in human life. In fact, it can and does act as a rigid wall to further progress for the student. Hence the reason for our criticism of most of the old-established spiritual movements. They have obviously outlived their usefulness and instead of changing with nature, they seek to retain the status quo upon which they first began. In order to retain this status quo, they are compelled to enter into acts which are in the main antagonistic to the Will of God.

Before the Pleroma accomplishes its objective for this age, there must be further changes in its structure. It must be prepared to scrap its present form of presentation if it has been proved to be ineffectual and adopt another approach. Admittedly, there will be those members who will resent this change and will retire taking with them members of like mind who will form another body without due authority from the Empire of Light, but in spite of this and other contingencies, the main directive drive of the Outer Head will continue along the Line of the Thought of the Empire.

Finally, there is always a period of slow growth for any group. The foundation stones have to be squared and laid firmly before the superstructure is built. The stones are actually human beings who are able to fit into the foundations for the future. Each stone must be squared, levelled and oriented to the Higher Self, then the foundations will be firm and lasting. This period of preparation is nearing its end for the Pleroma when the doors will be opened to all and sundry, but until we have a band of Illuminati or partially illumined men and women to build upon, this period of change and preparation must continue until the foundation stones have been well and truly laid. This is the main reason for the slow expansion of the Pleroma. When it is ready, then the Hidden Section will be formed, that of The Pre-Nicene Catholic Church, and not before. One stage becomes the foundation for the erection of the next and so on, ad infinitum.

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 71-78

LIBER # 72 THE WEATHER ABATES

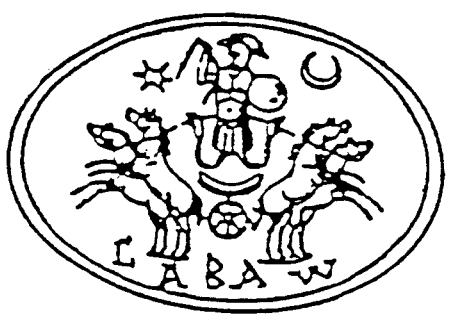
Personal & Confidential SIXTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

P O W E R U N L I M I T E D

- by -

RICHARD, DUC DE PALATINE



THE SANCTUARY OF THE GNOSIS
London & Halifax

PROLOGUE

The Divine Christos is a symbol embodied within the sacred Scarabeus of Egypt. This symbol concerns the indwelling Immortal Self, who pays the supreme penalty of being attached to the cross of imperfection within His own Divine Life; that is, through his life-blood. The imprisoned souls are full of suffering and ignorance of their immortal estate. Thus, the price of redemption from the evil of the body tomb is the efflux of the Divine Life of the incarnate self which, by being assimilated by the mortal and imperfected souls in the hell of the human body, gradually makes perfect the qualities within them.

The Archetypal Man, or Christos incarnate within every mortal soul, gives of his own nature that which the individual lacks because of his faulty imaginative faculties, in response to the Immortal Soul's efforts to prepare its mortal self for the accessions of higher qualifications.

Thus, our champion, the Christos, is latent within Its own nature until He is called forth by the sacrifice and aspiration of the mortal soul to save it from its captivity to its lower nature. The mortal soul raises itself with the help of the Christos to its original home with the Father.

Personal & Confidential

G. A. Gaskell says, "I know that the perfect self liveth within me, and that at the end of the cycle he shall overcome my lower nature (earth). And after my lower vehicles (chemical skins) have been thus destroyed, yet rising from my lower self (chemical and material), I shall become one with the Self. I, the individuality, shall unite with Him, and not the personality."

D. F. Strauss, in his "Life of Jesus," presents a startling and yet very faithful presentation of the true Gnosis of the Christos: "If God then finds a passage (cosmic pathway) from heaven to the grave, so must a way be discoverable for man from the grave to heaven. The death of the Prince of Life is the life of mortals."

Here we have the real key to Christianity: the Prince of Life must die on the cross of human existence in order that we may have life more abundantly. So the Christos in the abstract world is the Son of God, being the elder son, while Jesus living within the animal world becomes the younger son once achieving his redemption.

CLASSIFIED

POWER UNLIMITED

- by -

Richard, Duc de Palatine

Being human, we all like Power, and we will spend untold wealth in order to acquire that Power. The Church, occult societies, spiritualists and such like all tell us in various ways that they can give it to us, but only in return for money. In other words, you have to pay for it. You have to sell the Christ within for thirty pieces of silver.

In spite of the huxters, the truth is that Man already has that Power. He has that God-Power within himself. Was it not said by the Man two thousand years ago: "Ye Are Gods?" Did he not also say, "It is not I who do these things, but the Power within me?"

This God-Power was known in the Church for the first four hundred years as Illumination, and the method whereby this Inner Power was brought forth was called The Arcane Discipline, or The Arcanum. When the Church drove out the Gnostics this Arcanum continued throughout Europe as The Arcane College.

Now what is this Power which is inherent in Man, and which can be brought forth and used for anything you wish? It is God's gift to Man; not a gift which you can buy as is the custom with most people. It is a gift which you must develop by a hard, disciplined life. You must become a strictly moral individual, and an ethical one; not in the generally accepted sense, but you must live in accord with the Laws of Nature which brought you forth. Man in his innermost nature is God. God and Man are One. There is no God external to Man. Therefore, if your God is omnipotent, omnipresent and omniscient, then Man must have the same Power, otherwise Jesus, Paul and the Buddha, and many others, must have been liars of the very first water.

Those of us who have developed this Power, and there are a number of such, had to go through the same form of training. It is a mental as well as a physical discipline. We have to lift ourselves out of the tomb of matter. We have to walk across the waters of our own emotions, and we have to still the tempest of our own minds before the indwelling Christ Consciousness can fully manifest. Once this occurs, you are filled, not in theory, not as a hope, but in actuality, with the Power of the Holy Spirit, and you will act and teach like a God as is your right, remembering that there is nothing but God. But the Churches of all denominations still promulgate the counterfeit doctrine which says that God and Man are two separate creations, and that they cannot become One. This is diametrically opposed to the doctrine of the Christ Himself when He says,

"Ye Are Gods," "He who hath seen Me hath seen the Father," and, "I and My Father are One, even as ye are One with Me." Once you realise that Man and God are One Being simultaneously here and now you are on the first stage to becoming recipients of the gift of Christ brought to us; the capability of showing ourselves as a God in the Flesh,

Whether or not the Jesus of the Gospels ever lived is a matter of conjecture; the only authority we have is the Bible, secular history being utterly silent. We must, therefore, reorient our ideas regarding what we call the Christ and find out what this Christ is. It is the Indwelling Power within you here and now. In other words, Man is already perfected, has never ceased to be perfected, because in his Inner Self he is already God. That this is not always obvious is simply because he is either unable or unwilling to allow it to show forth. In spite of this disability, he is, of necessity, the quintessence of the Essence of God Himself. The Gnostics, for the first four hundred years, absolutely repudiated any idea of the worship of a God outide of man. They claimed that belief in a God external to yourself was worshipping false idols; and this is shown in the Old Testament as "Thou shalt have none other Gods before Me," or, as the Christ has always said, "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God within," - never without, always within. This is the basis of His statement, "Ask and ye shall receive; seek and ye shall find." But ask the Christians - Bishops or otherwise - have they ever found the Christ within themselves? Ask the occultists and the spiritualists - have they developed the God-Power within themselves? They will talk about it and around it, but they cannot manifest it. They do not know the Power of God as themselves. Is it not also said, "As I, Father, live in Thee, and as Thou livest in Me, so We both live in humanity?" This is pure, unadulterated patheism which has been ignored by the orthodox church and the other spiritual organisations. Aren't they just hypocrites of the first water, preaching a thing on the one hand and rejecting it on the other.

Gnosticism is not a theory. It is not getting on your knees and saying, "Almighty God (who this God is no one can tell us!), have mercy upon me." No, it is a way of life, just as the Christ, the Buddha, the Essenes, the Templars and the Rosicrucians have said.

By following The Arcane Discipline you will develop within yourself your full God-potential. You will become a creator in your own right. No one will need to intercede for you. You will not need your gods or anything external to yourselves. You are already the God-Power, and the Power which is using this body of Richard is the same Power which is within you. It is Itself unlimited. It is not limited, but It can be restricted by wrong thinking, wrong acting and wrong living. It is unlimited for It is the Essential God. It fears nothing, It needs nothing, yet It has the Power to have whatever It needs - wealth, position, love and all those things one is accustomed to praying for. It has all things because It IS all of them.

Is it too much to ask you to accept that whilst you are running after It and seeking It, It is already here; that whilst you want to become, you already are? Is this not the teaching of the original occultists? Is this not the teaching of the Gnostics, the Incas, the Aztecs, the Egyptian Book of the Dead, the Upanishads and the Sufis? It is identical to all of these, and each individual who has attained this Power has lived the same way, followed the same procedure and manifested this identical Power which is God.

You might say that it is reprehensible that we, a puny man, should dare to place ourself on the same level and in fact identify ourself with God, but if you dare to do it you will only be following the command of the Christ when he says, "Call no man your Father." This false thinking has come about by your acceptance and glamourising of your guides, bishops, priests, gurus, masters and swamis. All these are detractors from yourself, because all these father-figures are a means of throwing a glamour over you. You have given to your bishop, guide, master or swami a power over you to which he is not entitled. What you have done has been to mentally hand over your God-Power to something external to yourself. Does that shock you? It will, because it is like an axe; it cuts all your preconceived ideas right down and brings you down to earth. Once you realise that, all your little masks and trimmings are swept aside. Then you will take a good look at yourself and say, "What am I? Why am I here? What is the purpose of life, and where am I going?"

None of these questions have been satisfactorily answered by either the Church of Christ (?) or the occultists, but, after all, what does that matter? Surely this Power Unlimited which is Man is the Power to live as a God here and now; to become fully conscious of your God-Power, and to be able to use the gifts which God gave you at the outset of your evolution. Once this occurs, there is nothing in the universe which is not yours, because it is yours by right. You do not need to depend upon books, nor do you need to depend on anyone to tell you anything. You are already God because of your inherent Divine Nature which is at one with God.

You see, the whole key to this could be summed up in the recognition that Man and God are one and the same Consciousness here and now. This key is veiled from us simply because, by the natural processes and phenomena of evolution, it takes many millions of years to effect. Now, however, Man is beginning to realise that the physical body and all of its attributes are simply a mask; that is to say, a mask which hides you from yourself - your God-Power.

Now why are you unable to manifest this God-Power? Why have you doubts? Some of those who have been with us for many years cannot accept this one fundamental fact: Man is God, and in himself he has the Unlimited Power of becoming a fully conscious God. But in order to become this fully conscious God you must strip yourself of all your illusions and all your suppositions. You must cut through the glamour which surrounds you, and you must look at yourself as you really are. It may be a shock because Truth is always unpleasant to accept, but Truth is yourself, and, as we have said before, it is the last thing that any man wants to accept, in spite of the fact that he says he wants it! Because of his preconceived ideas he thinks that Truth can only be found in the Church, or in Rosicrucianism, Theosophy or any of the other organisations, whose teachings, however, contradict one another. They get out their mental pitchforks and prod each other until the metaphorical blood flows! How sweet is this version of the Brotherhood of Man which is practised by the very people whose voices are loudest in proclaiming it. These people, in spite of their declamations, are the very last to really practise it. Those who have Become, on the other hand, do not need to talk about it. They act it. They do not claim anything because they have no need to. They already Are. This is why those organisations we founded in the last century, or the one before, have become outdated. Man has been distracted from his purpose. Those organisations dare not tell you to become a more ethical individual, let alone tell you how to do it, because the moment you become a more ethical individual their worth is of no consequence to you. You have already opened the door and torn away the veil when you behold yourself as you really are. You are the Christ-Soul which died in very truth that you might live.

('God' is a convenient term we use to cover up our ignorance of our true nature. Once we become the Whole Man, the word 'God' becomes a meaningless jingle and a means of perpetuating the God Father-figure in our minds. Evolution is simply the development of higher orders of animals from the lower. Evolution begins from pure Spirit - white light - which, descending lower and lower from the combinations of crystallised energy, assumed at last a visible and tangible form and became atomic matter. Christ is the Christos or Psyche of Man, meaning simply the intangible aspect of Man - the Soul.

Now, how do you get this inherent God-Power to work for you by recognising that it is already here? The first thing you have to realise is that you are a Divine Being which is using a mass of flesh which must eventually die and rot in the grave; this thing which is born out of nothing and which dies back into the ashes whence it came. This thing, which in my case is called Richard, which at any time I can discard, means nothing. But the power which is talking and using this body is the Divine Soul, that Soul or Self which is deathless and eternal; that Self which St. Paul says is "without mother and without father, without beginning or end of days, eternal in the heavens." The Dweller within the Temple of the Living God, this Inner Self is already here and now within your own very nature. You were born with It, and without this Soul-Power you could not live.

"I am the light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world." The term 'world' comes from 'whirling', and the Power which causes this whirling process of the atomic structure is the Energy from the Unknown Principle, commonly called 'God.' This fact is stated and demonstrated by the greatest mystics throughout the world. "That I (Power) have come to My own (body) and my own body received Me not."

How many times have you heard the Voice of the Soul within and said to yourself (reason): "Oh, it's just imagination," and turned away and got yourself into a mess? "Lo, I (Soul) am with you always, even unto the consummation of the age," says the indwelling or vitalising Christ-Soul, which has never died on a cross and never can, just as the Gnostics say. How could a principle die? Certainly not physically, but the true meaning is that He (the Soul) dies spiritually for you life after life, dying in very truth to His own level to become alive in death (the body), this being the means whereby you and I might live.

Within our nature, which is the Inner Soul-Principle within Man, called by some schools 'The Dweller on the Threshold," which is utterly incorrect; by others the 'Ego,' which is the Inner Light or Energy which shines or percolates from the centre which is nowhere through the many wrappings we call vestures, which are temporary vehicles for the expression of the True Man: as the Christos, the Golden Fleece, the Holy Grail and the Lost Word of Freemasonry, but always, in spite of the various names given to it, it refers to the same Indwelling Consciousness or Principle which ever knocks at the door of your heart (mind) telling you, "I am the Light of the World; let me come in that I may sup with you, and that I might dwell in My own Kingdom." But what do you do? You worship something external to yourself - masters, gurus, guides and suchlike tomfoolery. Yet this Power within you is simplicity itself because there is always nature and God Itself within you. Therefore, you must practise right living: your behaviour towards your brothers must be true and honest, knowing that you live in your brothers and your brothers live in you. This is true brotherhood, because no matter what you do to your brothers you are only doing it to yourself, for your brothers and yourself are One and the same Eternal Whole which you erroneously call God. Therefore, it means right living. It does not mean vegetarianism or any of its allied 'isms' for these are merely something adopted and are not really part of you. What good does it do you anyway? The moment you say that a thing is evil you are telling God that He is evil ('Evil' comes from the Hebrew word 'Shin' which means 'falling short of an ideal'). You are accusing God of being evil and simultaneously accusing yourself of being an evil person.

As we have said before about these so-called vegetarians, if they are really honest, why do they not get rid of their leather shoes and fur coats? Most of these 'isms' are sheer hypocrisy, and this is what you call Truth! To find Truth there is no need to penalise yourself. How many happy marriages have been ruined amongst occultists because some stupid clot has said that it is wrong for a 'seeker' to have sex? What you have to learn is a balance. All things have been given to us for our use, not our abuse. We learn by pain and suffering how to adjust ourselves to the conditions in which we find ourselves.

Then we have to learn how to act correctly; in other words, to do nothing which would hurt anyone, knowing perfectly well that when we scandalise one another - and some people like to sit over a cup of tea or coffee and spend most of the afternoon getting their claws out and tearing some unfortunate 'friend' to shreds - this is mental murder. The Civil Law cannot prosecute you for it, but the Law of Karma can and does. By unjustly accusing other people and tearing away their reputations you are committing an even more vicious crime than physical murder. You have to learn that everything you think and do is reflected and reacted in the whole, for remember that society is but the extension of the individual, and that if the individual messes up his life he messes up the life of the society to which he belongs and to which he is responsible. Therefore, if you purify the individual, you must inevitably purify society. Is that not logical?

If you think correctly, knowing perfectly well that you are a God-Being, this is where your Power comes in. Now you have to know that you are a God-Creator - "Ye Are Gods" - just as God creates, so can you, since you and God are One and the same Being. You create by the Power of the Will in your mind. The Power within your mind is a Triple Power: the Power to Think, the Power to Will and the Power to Form. These are the three qualities of your mind. We are not talking psychologically about the subconscious, but about the real mind which is You.

Because of his identity with the Supreme, Man has within himself the God-Power of creation. If he wants something he thinks about it; he creates in his mind the image of what he needs or wants. Now he must charge that mental image with Life, and this is where his Wisdom comes in. Before he can create and bring forth what he needs, he must project the very thing he has created in his mind's eye and then visualise it as being present before him here and now. The use of his Wisdom (technique) will teach him discrimination so that this Power will not be wasted on the creation of trivialities.

In other words, if one of the ladies wants a hat she must visualise it perfectly and then project and crystallise it as an actual fact. She first of all creates a perfect mental image of the hat she desires; her Faith-Knowledge sets that image working, and her power of projection, that is, the belief that it will actually happen, causes the mental image to crystallise. She visualises herself wearing and fingering the hat, knowing that it is there. This now becomes Pure Magic. Let our scientists and wiseacres decry this fundamental fact. Even in the creation of the mental image of the hat, discrimination is very necessary, for, although it would appear to be trivial, it could be otherwise. It is difficult to particularise in matters of this kind, for what may be trivial and unimportant to one may be the opposite to another. Therefore, this use of discrimination is necessarily a personal thing.

This is the key to the Consecration of the Bread and the Wine in the Catholic (not Protestant) Mass. It is all there, but first of all you must visualise in your own mind your intended action. You have this Power of Creation, of moulding the mental self into the form which you want by the very fact that you are a God-Creator. Now you must have the Wisdom (technique) and the Faith to believe that whatever you think must come to pass. The third corollary is that you must project it; there is no use leaving your mental image in your mind - it must be projected outwardly into expression. It is said by the modern psychosomatic doctors that whatever a man thinks in his mind will cause the body to react for either good or ill. Well, the above is based upon the same principles, and so is any magical operation. It is also the meaning of the words of the Christ: "Whatsoever a man thinketh in his heart (mind) so he will become."

The above is the same doctrine as that of the Egyptian Book of the Dead; it is contained in the Upanishads of India of about I0,000 B.C. and it is the same as that of the Australian Aborigines, the Polynesians and the Buddhists. Every one of these philosophies, without exception, contains the same doctrine that Man Is God.

Now until you realise that you are God you cannot realise this God-Power within you. Most of you are continually thinking about the self, and because of this concentration on the animal self you cannot seem to achieve any objective. Something always goes wrong with your plans.

This is because you cannot obtain anything from the universe unless you put something back into it. It is a two-way process always.

Mother Nature gives you nothing for nothing. You have to work for it. In order to manifest this God-Power you have to work with Nature. Nature being yourself, since God informs all the atoms of Nature simultaneously, and without that God-Power Nature could not be. You are just the same. Therefore, within yourself you have this God-Power which will grant you Unlimited Power from the source of omnipotence, omnipresence and imniscience. Even Richard, which is the name of the body We are using, has those powers so long as he believes constructively that he is a Divine Being, but the moment he tries to think for himself using the limited mind of the human soul, he brings the veil over his mind and shuts it out. He did this until 1956 when he crucified the body and caused the veils which stood between him as a human consciousness and his Divine Consciousness to be rent in twain. The moment that occurred he stepped out of the tomb of force-matter and became free.

Does the Christian Church realise how magnificent the Christ story is; how personal and yet so simple? It is as simple as falling off a log - or is it? Learn how to think correctly, act correctly and live a natural, happy human life above all things. Spiritual knowledge becomes absolutely useless if your human life is unhappy and frustrated. Get rid of all your inhibitions, all those conditions which have made your life a hell on earth. As one philosopher said, "As we are in life, so we are in death," and it is very true. We are in death here so why make it worse? Why penalise yourself when you can make your life supremely happy with all Power at your disposal; and this is the extraordinary thing, that when you have all Power you do not want It. Richard is supremely happy with human life only when he ceases to demand it. This is the significant thing about The Disciplina Arcani. Up to a point you desire a car, a nice house, money and all the material things. You want to possess them, but once you reach Illumination you find that they are ashes. Just as Richard sought Love first, and then all things were his.

When you attain the stage of Love you begin to change your whole outlook towards these things. You find simply that money is only a means of currency, to make others happy; just as the blood in your veins is changed every six weeks, so the value of your currency is also changed. Sometimes you lose, and at other times you gain, but when you spend for another its value always remains the same.

The same law applies to the body. After every seven years you have a new set of atoms; none is the same as those you started with, so whilst you hang on to yourself and try to save yourself, you are losing. By loving and caring for another, every seven years your love takes on a deeper and more beneficial form. But he who loses himself in love frees himself from all possessions and attachments which hold him here and cause all the trouble between husbands, wives, children, lovers and beloveds; all because of this terrible obsession with possession and demanding for the animal self.

Once you get rid of this desire to possess and demand of others and develop the idea of co-operation, you can, in very truth, say that your yoke is light, and you can repeat with conviction that, "It is not I who do these things but the Power within me. Even as I have done these things, ye shall do greater things than I." Believe us when we say that we have seen a selfish and self-centred man change within a few weeks from a person who demanded all things for himself and did not care a damn about anybody else, into one of the most beautiful and unselfish men we have ever met.

So my friends, in spite of the condemnation of the New Testament by the know-alls, the platitudenists and the occultists, there is more practical philosophy contained in it than in all the thousands of occult books that have been written. It holds the key to all we have been telling you about this God-

Power, and it is so simple. It is perfectly simple, and yet the Christian Church rejects this aspect of it. They say, "Well, 'I and my Father are one, even as you are one with Me.' Now that must refer to a select few who have been saved - the so-called I44,000?"

If they were to dig a little deeper they would find that the word 'Adam' has the numerical value of nine - three threes; 'Jesus Christ' when brought down to its common denominator is also nine. Bring the I44,000 who are supposed to have been saved down to numbers and again you have nine! Man falls into matter, man is crucified in matter, and man is saved by and through matter. That is the key. Once you realise that God descends into matter, fragments Himself, giving you all His Powers in order that you might live and grow in the stature of the Indwelling Christ or Love, you have that key. But what do you do? You haven't the faith to believe in the Christ. What faith can you have in anything else? But once you touch the hem of your own garment all Power is yours.

No one can give you Knowledge, no one can give you the Light. Only you can bestow these imperishable possessions upon yourself because you already have them. The reason why you are not manifesting them or your God-Power is because you have turned your face against us. You have become like Lot's wife and have turned into a pillar of salt because you have identified yourself with your physical body instead of realising that it is but a vehicle. In other words, you have bound up your body in three separate bandages like that of a mummy. 'Mummy' is actually another word for 'Chrest' or 'Karest', which is simply the Egyptian word for Christ. So the Christ is bound as a mummy, this being shown by his grave-cloths. In a Coptic work it states that after the crucifixion Christ was bound in bandages as a mummy. The meaning of this is clear once you get to the root of it. The original idea is that it is the Christ-Self that is crucified; it is You who rises out of the tomb and who performs all the 'miracles' - not a man two thousand years ago. Could you imagine still worshipping a man still in the grave and rotting? Could you honestly believe on a man crucified as a criminal and still believe in the Loving Father? You cannot in all logic unless you are stupidly blind. To believe in a Loving Father and yet accept the fact that this same Loving Father would send His only-begotten son to die on the cross of a criminal just does not rhyme. Your logical mind should revolt against it, yet your emotional nature accepts it, but the Indwelling Power of God rejects it just as we do, and so does

Richard reject such a possibility.

When Richard went back to the Church at the request of his Adept-Master after having left it swearing never to return, this idea of the man on the cross was so revolting and nauseating to his sense of justice that he could not accept it. But now he knows what it means - that you and I and every man are crucified upon the Cross of Love. We are crucified by the four nails of earth, water, fire and air: physical, emotional, mental and vital force-matter. Once you realise that you are the God crucified to matter then you see the whole meaning. You all have the inherent power to realise this.

The Primitive Church did not believe in a physical Christ, but taught of the Eternal Mystic Christ dwelling within man, and which would always dwell within him thus giving him the absolute surety of attaining the Godhead.

Instead of giving man this assurance of his Divine Destiny you hear the churches giving out much talk about a nebulous heaven - "We will all go to the Other Side where we will again meet our loved ones and praise God together until the end of days." What a boring way to spend the rest of eternity! It is all so vague, and just as bad as the Spiritualists with their Aunt Fannies coming through with important messages like, "Do you remember the teapot you broke, my dear?" Now what evidence have you got for either? What scientific evidence which is acceptable to your sense of logic and justice? This is how you get away from all this into Truth: by using your logical mind and stripping yourself of all your fanciful ideas; by clearing away the barnacles which have accumulated; by cleaning the hull. You clear your mind until it becomes free, and the moment it becomes free you allow the Divine Light to shine through. By shining through your vestures It will grant you blessings and the glory of yourself as the Christos. Let nobody query this statement because right down through the ages, century after century, this doctrine has been taught in spite of the persecutions by the Official Churches - Catholic and Protestant. This doctrine is Eternal. We know it as The Arcane Discipline, or The Christian Arcanum.

My purpose is to show you how free this body is; how it relishes and lives eternally within the bosom of the Father as well as within you, and that you, by virtue of your own birthright, have the same Power, and that you must live the same life before you can become this Power Unlimited. Let us show you:

In the New Testament we find the words: "Eloi, eloi, lama sabacthani." This agonising cry is usually translated as, "My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me?" This is absolutely incorrect. 'El' means God, and 'Oi' means Power; therefore, this should be rendered "My God-Power, My God-Power, why hast thou left me?"

From this it is evident that Jesus taught the same doctrine as The Arcanum, as did John and Paul. Even to The Temptation in the Wilderness when the lower animal self, the serpent mind, tempts the Soul or Christ within and says, "If you worship me I will give you the world." But the Soul, knowing that It is already the world, replies to Satan, "Get thee behind me." This means that once you have touched the hem of your own Soul-garment then the Grace of the Indwelling Consciousness moves through you and heals you. Then all is given to you; not by privilege but according to your birthright.

This is the meaning of the Parable of the Prodigal Son: that when you descended from your Christos you had your fortune, but you squandered it for mere sensual illusions until you had nothing left. Then you wandered in darkness and, having had enough of the pig-sty of the physical world of pain and suffering, you turned and said, "What is there that is real? Once you ask the question sincerely and honestly then the veil is rent in twain and you get a glimmer of your Inner Self, and you turn and journey back to your Divine Nature. When you turn to this long struggle to overcome the powers of this world, the demons which you have created of your own free will live and batten upon you. They will try to hold you here on the physical level until you find your Immortal Consciousness running to you crying, "This is My Son who was once lost and is now found."

The glyph of this story is also perfectly shown in the story of Dante and Beatrice and in the Legend of the San Grael. It is shown also in the various degrees of Freemasonry and in The Chymical Marriage of Christian Rosenkreutz. These stories are identical and reveal the same truth that Man Is God, fragmented of God, who chose of His own free will to descend into the confines of the tomb of flesh, dying to His own glory, in order that He might unfold His God-Power to reach the stage where He could slay the powers of the lower self and rise in triumph. As Christ said, "If I be lifted up, I will lift all men up to Me." What are the words from the Gospel again? "If I be lifted up, I will lift up all men to Me." How can that be done?

The Christ within you is the Power. It is the Power of Transmutation whereby you change the lower self into the Divine Reality. It is the real meaning of Alchemy and of all the Great Teachers: that you must change the rate of your life in order that it may vibrate or coincide with the Divine Consciousness within and which is yours by natural right. This is the most magnificent fact. It strips you of all your illusions and leaves you naked before the Glory of your Self. And this is also the meaning of the statement, "And ye can nowise enter the Kingdom of God unless you become as a little child." You cannot enter the Kingdom of God if your mental apparatus is choc-a-bloc with false ideas and false gods, or your whole body is cluttered up with wealth and things which you love and possess. Is this not the meaning of the story of the man who could not get the camel through the eye of the needle? Is this not the meaning of the story of the physical Christ riding upon the back of the ass of the physical body, or the origin of riding the Ass before being made a Freemason, or the Golden Ass of Greece? This body is the animal counterpart of the Divine, and before you can attain the Divine you must conquer the body by bending it to your will. This does not involve ignoring the body or penalising it. It means a change of viewpoint; learning how to think correctly. Stop creating negative thoughts. All of these are evil and destructive and create many devils or images of menace in and around you. This is why the medieval painters were quite correct when they painted a man thus surrounded.

They actually saw the self-created images which were tormenting him all the time, and this is what you do today. The medieval man was no different from what you are today.

There is much that could be given on this idea of the Unlimited God-Power within Man, but even in books like this we can only scratch the surface, for Real Knowledge can only be experienced by you personally. We cannot experience it for you. This we know! Not only do we know, but there is a galaxy of Great Mystics, Saints and Teachers right down through the ages behind us who verify stage by stage what we say, and who, in their very lives and achievements, have demonstrated that Man is God Incarnate within the physical body. Man's work, therefore, is to redeem himself from the limitations of the grave, rising in very truth in his God-Power, having Power Unlimited.

This is the destiny of all of you as individuals, but you can only get it and can only know it by personal effort. Power as yourself when you turn round and look at yourself really hard without being afraid of what you see. It could be horrible to behold, just as it is when you look in the mirror in the morning after a 'hard night.' It is enough to make you scream with fright sometimes! But when you really look at yourself, the spectacle which is thrown back is even worse. It is without doubt the Mr. Hyde to your Dr. Jekyll. Get rid of it, and when we assure you that this magnificent Power has lain dormant within each and every one of you, accept that It is yours by right.

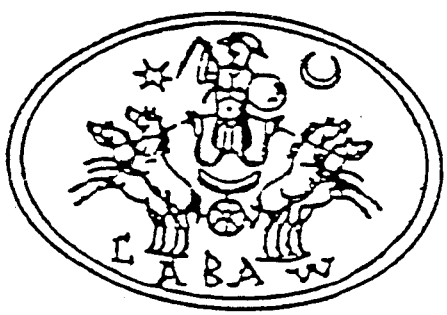
Finally, remember that you cannot pay for this knowledge. No one can give it to you. It can only be brought forth in Its full glory by hard, honest and sincere personal effort.

F I F T H - D I M E N S I O N A L
C O N S C I O U S N E S S

- by -

RICHARD, DUC DE PALATINE



THE SANCTUARY OF THE GNOSIS
London & Halifax

FIFTH-DIMENSIONAL CONSCIOUSNESS

- by -

Richard, Duc de Palatine

CLASSIFIED

Illumination is simply one of the faculties of the personality. It should be considered as a tool only and not the main object of your study in The Sanctuary of The Gnosis or The Disciplina Arcani. If, by chance, you contacted us because you wanted to get Illumination; that is to say, to receive it as something external to yourself, then your motives for joining us are based upon an incorrect interpretation of our teachings. This may be one of the reasons why you have not attained Illumination: you are under the impression that somebody could give it to you. If this is so, then you are utterly wrong.

Illumination occurs when you allow the potential Power of your own Soul to enter into your personality and take up its normal abode. It is only then that the Soul can grant to you the results of its programmed incarnations for you to draw upon in this life. This is the meaning of the Transfiguration of Jesus on the Mount, and also of the descent of the Holy Spirit in 'tongues of fire.' This descent or Illumination does not come from a Being external to yourself, but is granted to you when you have purified the personality, or attuned its nature and mechanism to receive the dynamic Power of the Soul without destroying the delicate nature of the body.

Possibly you have considered that when you attained this Power it would manifest in the same manner as it occurs in the writer. Again, if this is the case, it is obvious that you have not studied our teachings in the right manner. What we said was that if you followed the teachings and applied them in your daily life, you would prepare the personality for the descent of the Soul. We have never at any time promised to give this Power to you. We are all individuals, dissimilar in every degree, therefore, the form of Illumination possible to you is conditioned by your own nature and according to your programmed life.

To have objective Illumination is not vital to one's progress but it can help to speed it up. Most people have a form of Illumination called 'inspiration' or 'intuition;' both forms indicate a tuition from within oneself in a very subtle manner. On the other hand, Illumination manifested by an Adept, Mediator or Initiate is of an overt form where the whole of the personality changes, the voice changes and the speech is definite and absolute. The number of persons who are able to attain these levels of consciousness in one life are very few indeed, mainly because the majority cannot face the rigid training and discipline demanded of them for their achievement.

The most effective way in which to ignore the whole issue is to decry the possibility of such an attainment, or, when a manifestation is witnessed, to deny its validity and put it down to trickery, charlatanism or similar motives, which avoids the necessity of making any effort to prove its truth or falsity. In spite of many deprecations, the fact remains that it is a fact, and no amount of sophistry will ever explain it away.

In most people, consciousness functions between the senses and the brain in a series of light-frames, or in a dot-dash time sequence. This is shown in the operation of a projector. The film strip is made up of a continuous film of separate light-frames, each frame depicting one move of the subject, When this is run through a projector on to a screen at a certain speed, the illusion shows a continuous action.

Now suppose we speed up the time sequence of the projector. The flashing of the light-frames on the screen would become a blur, and the senses would be unable to distinguish the movements. Like the projector, the senses deal with individual light-frames to register impressions, such as sight, hearing, smelling, touching and tasting, and any attempt to speed up their powers of reception would stop the body-machine from registering them.

Illumination comes when one has become able to speed up the receptivity of the human body-machine to correspond to the speeding up of the light-frames received by the senses, with a corresponding ability of the brain to register them faster. At the moment, an electronic computer can think more quickly than the human brain, although the computer is the exteriorisation of the human computer. Like the computer, the Illuminee has been able to speed up the working mechanism of the body-machine so as to receive more subtle energies. What he has really done has been to reduce the time and space sequence between two given points wherein the sense of duration no longer functions. In this light, the Illuminee functions in a Continuum of Consciousness whereas most people function in a time sequence of duration.

Let us show you this process in another way:

We have a screen, a projector and an arc lamp. The screen represents the human consciousness, the projector is the programmed tale of your life, and the arc lamp is the Light or Energy of the Soul.

Each event in our life is registered on a series of light-frames which make up a sequence or act in life. When we pass the film through a projector at a certain speed, the light-frames flashed upon the screen appear as a continuous act. Suppose it were possible to invent a projector which could use a continuous film without light-frames, and a camera which could use a continuous film. Then the picture on the screen would be continuous and would show many events simultaneously. It would register not only third-dimensional depth, but also fourth- and possibly fifth-dimensional depths.

As man unfolds his own body machine, so will he automatically project this advance into the third dimension, and will soon have two machines which can fulfil the same functions as those which he is using within himself. The Illuminee takes his body-machine in hand and consciously forces the speeding-up of his subtle faculties well in advance of his brothers. What he now uses internally to register both the external and abstract worlds, mankind will accept as a common thing in future centuries. This is Evolution pure and simple.

The fact that one has this

Power of Illumination in his life should not in any way cause him to take such drastic steps to attain it that he becomes neurotic, where his body-machine is not able to be in alignment with the Soul. The Illuminee lives the same kind of life that you do except that his appreciation and receptivity of the nature of the world is attuned to a very high pitch of efficiency and expansion of consciousness. Not only can he register the time sequence of the third-dimension, but he also has the faculty of registering the fourth- and fifth-dimensions of force-matter when necessary. That is to say, he can be aware of the emotional and mental regions simultaneously.

The mediator or Agent can use even more subtle faculties. He can not only function as a Soul within the body-machine, but can also register the time sequence of the higher and more subtle and abstract regions above the Soul level. He can then "talk to God" as our Mystics claim. This happens when the body-machine is so attuned as to allow the human soul to perceive the conditions of the higher regions and function in them as he would as a human being. In this state, the Agent becomes utterly selfless wherein the importance of the body-machine and the world are relegated to their normal place in his consciousness. They are no longer important in themselves, but are considered as an integral part of the Whole Man or the Great Nought.

The Agent accepts these faculties and abilities not as something 'special' or 'wonderful,' but naturally, as he would accept the fact that he is using a body-machine in the world of form. However, his ability to register the dimensions of force-matter depends upon the efficiency of his body-machine which he constantly seeks to improve so that the Abstract Self can manifest Itself in a smooth and normal manner. He knows that all of these apparently additional faculties and abilities are simply tools given to him to use in the same manner as he would use his arms and legs for his work here in the body.

One of the main complaints the Master-Adepts have concerning their pupils is that they will not attempt to prove the teachings for themselves by personal effort. They leave everything for the teacher to accomplish for them, and if they fail, they blame the teacher, not having the honesty to blame themselves for their own failure.

If you are asked to try something, then have the rare common sense to try it and prove it for yourself. Being a Technician of Life and having achieved Illumination, we know what we are doing. Don't be a fool to yourself or allow yourself to fail in your quest.

There is another thing: What we teach is damn common sense, and it is founded upon a scientific basis. If it works for us there is no reason why it should not work for you. You are not children now; you are adults and should know how to study life.

Son Altesse Serein Richard, Duc de Palatine - Episcopi - Christian Ekklesia -

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 71-78

LIBER # 73 LET'S CAMP AND REST AWHILE

Personal & Confidential SIXTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

S T G E O R G E A N D
T H E D R A G O N

- by -

RICHARD, DUC DE PALATINE

THE SANCTUARY OF THE GNOSIS
London & Halifax

CLASSIFIED

ST. GEORGE AND THE DRAGON

- by -

Richard, Duc de Palatine

The historical story of St. George is shrouded in mystery. According to the Christian version, George, an officer who stood high in the Roman army, ventured to protest to and rebuke the Roman Emperor Diocletian for his persecution of the Christians in 303 A.D. Diocletian promptly banished him to Asia Minor where he still protested, and where finally he was put to death. He was eventually canonised by what was at the time a triumphant and flourishing Church. Since then, however, the story of St. George seems to have been involved with that of the Greek hero Perseus who, some centuries B.C., arrived in Lyddia to slay the sea-monster which was attacking the maiden Andromeda. We must remember that all religions, including that of Greece, took many of their myths and legends from those of previous civilisations; therefore, whether St. George ever really lived is a matter of conjecture.

The various myths, legends and traditions held by the many nations are symbolical and allegorical, embodying certain fundamental truths which have been carried down through the ages. One nation would take over the entire Pantheon of Gods of another and, by changing their names, accept them for their own. The Old Testament stories are really modified traditional stories taken from Babylonia and accepted by the Jews as their own history. The Greeks accepted the myths and legends of the lost Atlanteans, as has been clearly shown in Ignatius Donnelly's "Atlantis." Jesus, Jason, Joseph, Mithra, Orpheus etc. were all originally the hero-gods of various nations. St. George must also be included in this type of hero as we shall try to show.

All of the hero-gods were symbolic of the Divine Soul of Man and were given a Divine title, and when the Soul descended into its human tabernacle to teach mankind, the personality was also given another name; for instance: Jesus Christ, Jupiter-Ammon, Osiris-Ra, Horus-Ra, Bacchus-Dionysus, and so on. It simply indicates, for example, that Jesus, the Man, was overshadowed by his Divine Self, the Christos. It must also be considered that the stories of the so-called Christian persecutions have been so enormously exaggerated and misrepresented that historians regard them with a good deal of incredulity. Many did die; however, a great many of those who died did so not because of their faith, but rather because of the political opinions they held.

All the legends of the guardian angels and race spirits, the gods and the divine heroes, are not merely childish stories. There are facts lying behind them. We shall find that these realities produce a definite effect and teach us a specific lesson down here in the region that we can reach and realise and understand. In the Legend of St. George, when taken as referring to the eternal conflict between the Soul and the images of menace which are to be found in the subconscious mind, we find that this story presents to us a definite form of psychological teaching.

In this conflict, St. George represents the Soul of Man who does battle with the Dragon of the subconscious mind in order to rescue the oppressed human soul on the other side of the river (the 'river,' in this instance, refers to the emotional stream of energy which divides the conscious mind from the mental vesture).

In mythology and Roman Catholic legend, the Dragon is representative of the whole host or hierarchy of Demons who beset and tempt man at every turn he makes. These Demons are simply the images of menace created by us in our subconscious mind through our thoughts of fear, resentment, frustration, hatred and feelings of loss. These images may cause us to weep and sigh, but this sighing and weeping is worthless if our sentiments are derived from these demon-images. But when we have awakened to the power which they exert over us, all artificial images will finally return to the place whence they came, namely the Dragon of the subconscious mind. Consequently, as these images are perishable, the sentiments which they excite will duly perish with them.

The Dragon with his images will always make the life of the human soul in the body a hell on earth so long as we keep perpetuating their life by continually thinking on them. In order to help us eradicate them, we have only to call upon the Soul (St. George) who will grant us true faith which is more powerful than, and superior to, natural light, and which is stronger than all our images of menace. Just as we have misused our faith and imagination to create our tempting demons, so we must learn to use this faith and imagination to dissolve the images, and then accomplish whatever we may desire. The psychological images of menace living in our minds are caused by the emotional currents due to our wrong thinking. Thus, the emotional currents created by the imagination of a disturbed mind will produce certain states in man as the Soul, and will affect the external man. We can, however, by right thinking, change these emotional currents and thereby destroy the demons which reside therein.

Thus, the story of St. George and the Dragon describes to us how we can call upon the Power of the Soul with faith and imagination to consume the Dragon and its images of menace.

Let us take a few examples of how our faith can dissolve these awful and distressing conditions in man. A woman who is in love with a man who is already married will create her images of menace by brooding, worrying and being anxious for her love. Once the images have been formed, they will seek to perpetuate this mental condition causing sickness, nervous tension, a diseased blood stream and a feeling of hopelessness. The cure for this situation is this: If she has faith in herself and in her Divine Soul, stops thinking about her condition and has the patience to wait, she will dissolve the tempting demons in her mind which will allow the body to correct itself.

A man who thought he was sexually impotent from an early age will turn his emotional currents into streams of envy, frustration and resentment towards the supposed image of his fear. Thus, the more he thinks along these avenues of thought, the stronger will be the power he gives his images to cripple him sexually in later life. The simple cure for this is for him to realise that he originally created the artificial images which are sapping his sexual force, and then with faith and imagination believe that he is potent. He will thereby change the emotional currents from ones of destruction to those of construction. Then the impotency will dissolve, the organ will swell and return to its normal size, and the Soul, acting upon the pituitary gland, will resume the supply of oil to the sexual glands.

The man who cannot hold a position of employment for very long has turned his emotional current into avenues of short-lived activity causing them to form into images of menace which will prevent him from working. The cure for this is also simple. He must turn the emotional currents into faith and imagination that he will stay at his position and work with it. The chopping and changing of jobs is derived from the images. He must ignore any emotional feeling of wanting to escape, and be determined that he will stay and make a success of his position.

In the three cases described above, we can see that it was doubt which caused these people to destroy their faith in themselves. What they have done has been to throw the power of themselves away to the images which have turned this power against them. It is the faith in ourselves and in the God within ourselves which renders us strong and thus able to destroy the Dragon of the subconscious mind. The prize we seek is the Divine Soul, comely and full of all that is beautiful. And so we put on the Armour of Faith, gird ourselves with the Sword of Imagination and then go forth within ourselves to kill the Dragon of the animal nature.

Finally, the more we dwell upon our supposed misfortunes, the more strength we give to the Dragon of our animal nature, and it will devour our every good thought. However, once we bring ourselves to stop pandering to the effects of the images, they will shrink and die for we have refused to feed them with our vital energy. Think on these things, and if you feel that you have an unwanted image of menace, then you will know what to do about it.

T H E M Y S T I C C R O S S

- by -

RICHARD, DUC DE PALATINE

THE SANCTUARY OF THE GNOSIS
London & Halifax

THE MYSTIC CROSS

- by -

Richard, Duc de Palatine

CLASSIFIED

For the Christians to claim that the Cross is a purely Christian symbol introduced after our era is very strange indeed when we find this same cross used in every ancient civilisation on both sides of the Atlantic, in the East, on the statues on Easter Island, in Old Egypt, in Central Asia and numerous other locations. This cross can be seen in chemistry, alchemy, biology, astronomy, astrology, atomic physics and mineralogy. The symbol of the cross is as old as man himself. It applies to him and to the whole universe, and without an understanding of this symbol the whole of our academic world would fall into the dust. For instance, if we were to delete from the university curriculum all the writings of the ancient world, our universities would be no more. The philosophers were first and foremost Mystics, and philosophers afterwards. Let the reader who doubts this statement consult the writings and lives of these mystic-philosophers before he denies it.

If we were to ignore the chemical cross which is to be found at the base of our chemical elements, the nuclear cross which is found within the atom and within most of our scientific discoveries, our boasted sciences would cease to be sciences. Where does this cross come from? Why is it to be found at the very foundation of all the known avenues of human knowledge, both ancient and modern? Why do all religions and philosophies accept the cross? These questions can only be answered by the mystical experience and understanding of Nature.

The philosophical cross, the two lines running in opposite directions - the horizontal and the perpendicular, the height and breadth - which the geometrizing Deity divides at the intersection, and which forms the magical as well as the scientific quaternary, when it is inscribed within the perfect square, is the basis of the Occultist. Within its mystical precinct lies the master-key which opens the door of every science, physical as well as spiritual. It symbolises our human existence, for the circle circumscribes the four points of the cross which represent in succession, birth, life, death and immortality.

This symbol takes on the same meaning when applied to chemistry, and when one studies the anatomy of the brain and the spinal cord we see the same cross showing itself. In the operations of the solar plexus the cross again appears. In all the known sciences the cross is shown as being the basis of all physical manifestation. In psychology the same cross is shown as the subconscious, preconscious, conscious and unconscious aspects of the mind, and in function they assume the four-armed cross of existence.

The writer of "The Source of Measures" reveals one of the Kabalistic meanings of the cross when referring to the crucified man: "In symbol, the nails of the cross have for the shape of their heads a solid pyramid, and a tapering, square, obeliscal shaft or phallic emblem for the nail. (This has been clearly shown in the four eminences on the top of the pons at the summit of the spinal cord). Taking the position of the three nails in the man's extremities and on the cross, they mark or form a triangle in shape, one nail being at each corner of the triangle, (this again is shown in chemistry). The wounds or stigmata in the extremities are necessarily four, designative of the square. The three nails with the three wounds are six in number, which denotes the six faces of the cube unfolded (which makes the cross or man-form, or seven, counting three horizontal and four vertical squares) on which the man is placed. This in turn points to the circular measure transferred on to the edges of the cube. The one wound in the feet separates into two when the feet are separated, making three together in all, and four when separated, or seven in all - another and most holy feminine base number."

The enigma can be unriddled

through the Mysteries of Initiation when the Adept, having successfully passed through all the trials, was attached - not nailed, but simply tied on a couch constructed in the form of a Tau - and then plunged into a deep, trance-like sleep, to remain in this state for three days and three nights. During this time his Soul was free to confer with the Gods or Divine Souls. He then descended into the hell of the body to do the work of charity to the Invisible Beings, his body remaining all the time in a temple crypt. In Egypt, the body was placed in the Sarcophagus in the King's Chamber of the Great Pyramid, and was carried during the night of the approaching third day to the entrance of a gallery where, at a certain hour, the rays of the rising Sun hit full on the face of the entranced candidate who awoke to be initiated by his own Soul.

In the above, one will see the Source of Light and its Life-Principle of the seven kingdoms is fully shown as the sevenfold cross whose branches or aspects are: heat, light, electricity, terrestrial magnetism, astral radiation, motion and intelligence, or, what some might call self-consciousness. Here we have the forces known to science: light, heat, electricity and motion. In fact, science is now at the doors of terrestrial magnetism in nuclear physics. In the Roman Church and its offshoot, Protestantism, the Cross has been adopted in its phallic meaning - the male and female organs of procreation.

The Cross, in its original sense, was called the 'Chrestes' or 'Chrestoi,' and stands at the base of the Hermetic and Alchemystical systems. As Eliphas Levi says, "The Sign of the Cross adopted by the Christians does not belong to them exclusively. It is also kabalistic and represents the opposition and quaternary equilibrium of the elements. We see by the occult verse of the Paternoster that there were originally two ways of doing, or, at least two very different formulas to express its meaning: one reserved for the priests and initiates, the other given to the neophytes and the profane. Thus, for example, the initiate, carrying his hand to his forehead, said, "To Thee;" then he added, "Belong;" and continued, carrying his hand to his breast, "The Kingdom;" then to the left shoulder, "Justice;" to the right shoulder, and "Mercy." Then he joined the two hands, adding, "Throughout the Generating Cycles," ("Tibi Sunt Malkuth et Geburah et Chesed Per Aeonas"), - an absolutely magnificent kabalistic Sign of the Cross which the profanations of Gnosticism (the later bodies) made the militant and official church completely lose."

In the above the Mystic sees the whole procedure of the chemical formulas being enacted within himself and within the external force-matters, whereas the Christian sees the operations and results of the action of his sexual saviour, Jesus Christ, the seed of Jesse, being the interaction of the male and female arms of the Cross - Jehovah, who is but the second God who impressed himself on the universe in the form of a cross. This above all in its Christian and Hebrew sense is the worship and adoration of the sexual organs of the male and female, which may be one of the reasons for the fierce persecution of Witchcraft by the Official Church.

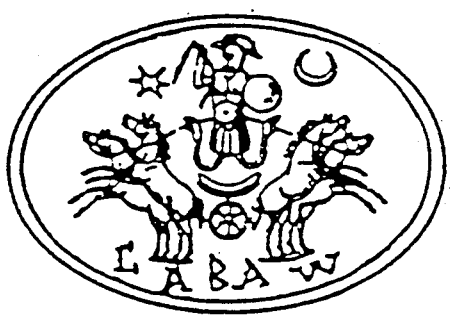
Finally, whilst the phallic or sexual meaning of the Crucifixion can be proved by the 'nails' through the geometrical and numerical reading, its mystical significance can be seen in the legend of Promethius: he is crucified on the Cross of Love, on the rock of human passions, a sacrifice to his complete devotion to the cause of the spiritual nature within Humanity. The story of Jesus, in its Gnostic sense, follows the latter interpretation whilst the Church adheres to the former; hence the conflict between the Gnostic Church and the Somatic Church. We leave the reader here to use his own intuition and follow through to their logical conclusions the implications of both meanings or explanations.

T H E F I V E F O L D
S T I G M A T A

- by -

RICHARD, DUC DE PALATINE



THE SANCTUARY OF THE GNOSIS
London & Halifax

73 12

THE FIVEFOLD STIGMATA

- by -

Richard, Duc de Palatine

CLASSIFIED

In Protestant countries the conception of the stigmata of some of the Saints has been grossly misunderstood. This is even more true of modern occultists, in spite of the fact that we find the basic principles which underlie these stigmata being taught by them. Because of prejudice and superstition, however, they have been unable to allow their intuitive faculties to take the logical step and thus reveal the one and only way in which the physical man can discriminate between a true Adept and his simulacra (shadowy likeness or deceptive substitute). Countless numbers of mediums and passive clairvoyants have claimed to have seen one of the Master-Adepts at some time or another, and yet they have been mistaken.

The vital key which unlocks some of the greatest mysteries of Nature is the Law of Correspondences, wherein we find that whatever is mirrored in the subtle natures of man and all other creatures will be reflected within the gross material envelope. In the numerical key to wisdom one will find recurring the numerical values of two, three, four, five, seven, nine and twelve. These are to be found in practically all religions, philosophies and occult systems such as Alchemy, Magic, Rosicrucianism, Illuminati and Masonry. The philosophy which is known as Theosophy is also built upon the Law of Correspondences.

One of the most guarded secrets of initiation refers to the Fivefold Stigmata of the Adept or Illuminee. The first open reference we have to this condition is in the drama of the Crucifixion of Jesus, who demonstrated to us in this life that every true follower of the Christ must, and always will, recapitulate in his life and acts that which was enacted by the Christ. Those who have become unified with their Divine Soul have always manifested the stigmata in either their vital or physical bodies, and there are records available of those who have been Master-Adepts, showing that these Beings always manifested these selfsame stigmata in their subtle bodies. In fact, should a person possess x-ray sight, he will see these stigmata in and around the bodies of every Illuminee or Divine Messenger in this wise: in the vital vesture he will see oozing from a wound on the left-hand side blood and water mingled with a certain ray of colour. This condition recapitulates the fact that Eve, the human nature of man, sprang from the left rib of Adam, the Divine Hermaphrodite, the original state of man when he was male-female in the same body. Then one would see that the palms of the hands and feet of the Adept showed four wounds in the likeness of those suffered by Christ. From each of these wounds would be seen flowing vitally the same blood and water intermingled with four coloured rays. Remember that Jesus called the first five Disciples, bearing in mind that these Disciples refer to the five Zodiacal Signs and that their correspondences are shown in the body. Study the values and qualities of these five and you will gain much wisdom.

The stigmata become the symbol of the Soul who has mastered and is utilising his five vestures of consciousness. This is shown in the Upanishads: "Self is true; the ever-moving world is false; and the migrating souls that seem to come and go and suffer are nothing else than the one and only Self, clothed in the five successive vestures or incolucra: the beatific, the cognitional, the sensorial, the vesture of the vital airs and the nutrimentious vesture or visible body in the world of sense." Here we see the system as expounded in the Pleroma, and these five vestures correspond to our Soul vesture, higher mental, lower mental, emotional and mortal body. In occultism they refer to the Buddhic, Causal, Manasic, Astral and Physical.

Thus, the individual soul, when it becomes projected from its main body, is enclosed in a succession of wrappings or vestures which envelope it and, as it were, fold one over the other; or, in other words, interpenetrate each other and occupy the same position in time and space. The Beatific Vesture is the "Robe of Glory" of the Gnostics, and the "Augoeides" of the Greeks. This is the Robe which is put off by the Soul when it descends into the personality, and which it assumes again when it has become once more united. This can also be recognised in various bird-images, such as the Pelican which tears its breast to feed its young, and the Phoenix which represents the personality consumed by the Divine Fire and the imprisoned Soul rising again out of the ashes. It is the winged bird of the Egyptians and the Eagle of St. John. It is the fabulous bird of the Arabian Nights called the Roc, and so on.

The cognitional vesture is divided into five parts: the head is Faith, the right arm Justice, the left arm Truth, the right leg Ecstasy, and the left leg Intellect. They are sometimes given in other ways according to the philosophical system concerned. This also refers to the higher mind, the "murmer of running waters" of the Book of Revelation. The sensorial vesture is the lower mental vesture which receives the impressions made on the senses and then transmits them to the human consciousness. This vesture is often shown as a bird on the wing. The qualities of the higher mind are also reflected within the lower mind wherein they are connected with the head, right wing, left wing, the trunk and the tail.

The emotional vesture, or the vesture of the vital airs, is also shown as being divided into five. The breath is shown in the head; its pervading of the vesture is shown in the right wing or arm; when it descends to the body it does so through the left wing or arm; when it meets with the ether it does so with the right leg; and when connected to earth it uses the left leg. In this vesture one finds the instinctual qualities of man, the desires, instincts and passions. Desire coupled with love is the aspiration of the human soul, and desire becomes Love inverted to the body.

The nutrimentious vesture is the mortal body, and it again is divided into five divisions or aspects, and it reflects the divisions of the higher vestures in its nature, as liquids, solids, gases and ethers. This becomes the outermost vesture of the Divine Soul whilst in incarnation and becomes the passive instrument of the Soul. In reality it has no individual life of its own save that which is granted to it through the Soul's ignorance of its higher nature, and to which the human soul becomes subjected during the earthly stages of its incarna-tional career as a human being.

In the Science of Illumination or Regeneration the aspirant has to undergo a long period of purification. He must first of all conquer the elements of his own mortal body and refuse to be governed by the limited insight of its artificial energiser. He must then transmute solids into liquids, liquids into gases, and then finally gases into ethers. As he conquers each one he will find the stigmata of the hands and feet becoming visible on the vital vesture.

Once he has mastered and conquered the mortal vesture, he must then proceed to master the emotional vesture by transmuting his instincts, desires and passions into pure impersonal love. He will then find the stigmata becoming clearer. When he has conquered the four stages of his mental thinking and changed their drives away from the accentuation of the self to that of the unfolding of his Divine mental powers, the vital stigmata will become still more definite.

When the aspirant has conquered and redirected his mental faculties towards the Divine Soul in the service of his brothers, then he will develop the four qualities of the higher mind: Truth, Faith, Justice and Ecstasy. The vital stigmata will now become more definite and blood will begin to flow. Then he will begin the final labour, that of becoming one with the Soul and unfolding its four qualities. The stigmata will now appear on the left side of the vital body. It must be clearly seen that as the aspirant conquers each of the vestures in turn, the stigmata will appear on each conquered vesture. The four are shown up to the higher mind, and then the Sign of the Conqueror appears on the left side of the body. He now becomes the Victim, slain upon the fourfold vestures for the sins of the world, and is then wrapped around with the white linen of the Soul Vesture.

In the lives of the Stigmatic Saints of the Church this process has been speeded up by their fervent devotion to the Christ, and, in many cases, the stigmata have shown themselves in the mortal body. It is interesting to note that in the life of Thomas a Beckett we see this process being acted out in real life: the slaying by the swords of the four soldiers in the side, and the king making a pilgrimage to be beaten by the four monks over the tomb of Beckett. We wonder how many students realised the drama which was played out in the film of the same title.

The legend of the hero-god Jesus might have happened in time, but again, if we study the whole life in relation to the lives of other Saviours, we will see, by using the Law of Correspondences, that this life reveals a much more beautiful conception and purpose than that which is accepted today. In that Life we received the assurance that if any man will follow in the footsteps of the Christ, he shall surely become like Him. This means that in our own life we must recapitulate every act, saying and event which happened to the hero-god. In this Legend are to be found the Principles of The Disciplina Arcani.

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 71-78

LIBER # 74 IT'S A CLEAR NIGHT

Personal & Confidential SIXTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

The Arcane Discipline

DISCIPLINA ARCANI

CLASSIFIED

The Discipline used in the Hidden (or Inner Church) was called The Arcane Discipline and was in definite practice in the Christian Church between the 1st and 4th Centuries. Those who followed it were known as the Arcane or Gnostic Christians and they kept their doctrines secret and taught the exoteric doctrines along the same lines as the Ancient Mysteries.

In circa 46-52 AD there existed a College of Roman Artisans at Chichester, England, which had originated at Rome and Alexandria, when the Romans left England the members of the College broke up and migrated to various towns and formed the Guilds devoted to the work of building, and from them came what was known as the Guilds of Operative Masons. At the same time we know that the three Archdruids became Archbishops, and the Chief Druids became Bishops, this was done upon the acceptance of Christianity by King Lucius in 155 AD. These bishops, monks and priests of the Christian Britons became known as the Culdees, the Servants of God, and they carried the Arcane Discipline with them and embodied it within the framework of Celtic Christianity.

From the beginning of the 18th Century all trace of the Arcane Discipline and the Gnostic Tradition seemed to have faded from public knowledge, but it still remained in Europe, it became a closely guarded secret among the Adepts of the Hidden Church. Some researchers into this Arcane Discipline try to tell us that the term Disciplina Arcani is a modern invention; but as the theologians of the organised church seem to always try to hide the facts from the general public and present-day church members; they only encourage a continual disregard for church authority when the cover-up is exposed.

As researched and quoted by the Rev C Riggin in a recent lecture, it is known that in the mysticl tract "Cloud upon the Sanctuary" by Karl von Eckhartshausen, who lived around the middle of the 18th Century, that the Arcane Discipline was known about during that period: as he says, "The great mystery of the redemptive power of Jesus Christ has always been the subject of the teachings of the Inner Church. Centuries ago, this teaching was known as The Disciplina Arcani. In the Inner Church, all rites and ceremonies of the outer had their origin, although the spirit of these sacred truths was withdrawn into the inner leaving the outer in possession of the letter only. It should be understood from what we have said that the purpose of the mysteries of the Inner Church are not to be understood in the context of achieving some moderate improvement in our human condition or in the social sphere .... What does the Inner Church wish to set up in the common world? Nothing at all, because the Inner Church does not have its origin or foundation in it. 'My Kingdom', says its Great High Priest, 'is not of this world.'"

The work of the Arcane Discipline is indicated as follows - the process of the realisation of the God Within takes place in four stages:

- The first is the Mercurius Vivus, the path of Purification;
- Secondly, the Prima Materia, the Purification of the animal nature;
- Thirdly, the Lapis Philosophorum, the Purification and control of the emotional nature; and then finally,
- The Tinctura, whereby the mental body is illuminated by the Divine Soul.

These changes can only take place when you permit the Prince of Light to descend into your personality where it will destroy the illusions of the mortal self.

St Paul, the great Christian Teacher, points out that even though we understand all mysteries, have all knowledge and powers to do mighty and wonderful things but do not possess Agape, or Divine Love, we are nothing. This love is the same Love of which the Master Jesus spoke and cannot be attained without the transcendence of the illusion of isolated ego-identity. It is the experience of the ONE. Such is the work of the Disciplina Arcani - the training of individuals to become as God expressing Himself on Earth for Divine Love is the fulfilling of the LAW.

CLASSIFIED

THE PRE-NICENE CATHOLIC CHURCH *********

The Essene/Gnostic "Chrestian Ekklesia".

.....

The Pre-Nicene Catholic Church was introduced by the late Richard, Duc de Palatine in September 1953. The main objects of this action were,to quote: "To restore to the Church the Gnostic Teachings as held by the Fathers of the Church up to and including 325 A.D. such as Re-incarnation, Karma, the path of initiation, life after death, etc. To encourage the independant interpretation of the Sacred Scriptures in the Light of the Ancient Wisdom", and to: "Bridge the gap between Orthodoxy and Metaphysics. To teach its members how to attain health and happiness by the knowledge and precept of Right Thinking, Right Action and Right Living in their daily lives as Love, Health and Service" and finally - "To encourage the free interchange of ideas and co-operation between all people to make the ideal of Universal Brotherhood a living reality".

The discovery of the Qumrum Scrolls,including the controversial "Temple Scroll", and the library at Nag Hammadi has helped to prove that modern Christianity has strayed far from its original path.

Recent books like "The Myth of God Incarnate", "The Death of Classical Paganism", "Jesus the Magician" and other works on Apollonius of Tyana, John the Essene and James the Just reveal the uncertain facts surrounding early Christianity and we feel that it is because of the present view of the scriptures that Christianity finds itself at the crossroads of indecision and ineffectiveness.

True Gnosticism has nothing to do with ritual orgies and magical ceremonies to "get rich quick" as those who seek to depreciate it would have one believe. Neither can all that which has been written about the early Gnostics be regarded as truth. It has been from the fourth century onwards that the organised church waged a campaign of persecution and hatred towards those who did not accept its own dogmas.

The Gnosis refers to a special kind of knowledge. Not to a knowledge as understood in a secular sense; but to a deeper understanding of God,Man and the Universe. Gnosis is the word used by St. Paul in his writings and the word can be found no less than fifteen times in the Epistles to the Corinthians.

The Nag Hammadi Library proves that those who followed the teachings contained therein tried to live by standards which many christians would find difficult to follow today. To live according to the true Gnosis of God one has to follow a path of Purity, Honesty and of Consecration to Truth. Our Church seeks to provide for those who desire such a path.

This Church is an inheritor of the True and Ancient Doctrines that have come to us through from pre-flood days. Through from ancient China, India, Egypt, Greece and the British Isles and these Doctrines have been modified to help those in this day and age,with its special problems, who feel the need for alternatives to worldly philosophise.

The Gnostic teachings differ from those of the orthodox churches inasmuch as we place more reliance upon the manifestation of Truth from within ourselves and in the Divine Laws as they operate within the Universe Itself and not upon the theologies of priests and theologians. We do not place too much importance on the historical content of the scriptures as we do in the inner meanings of them.

This Church possesses the Apostolic Succession through from the early Apostles and also the Right of Succession through from the early "mystery" schools. We own no church buildings so we hold meetings andservices in our own homes at the moment.

+++++++

A P O S T O L I C S U C C E S S I O N - F A C T O R F I C T I O N ?

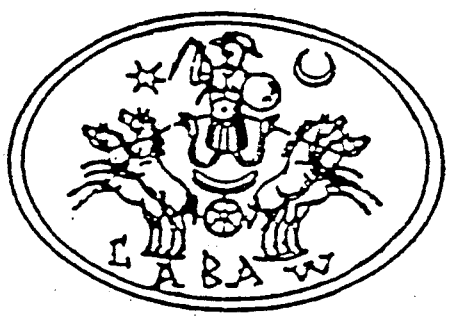
- by -

RICHARD, DUC DE PALATINE



THE SANCTUARY OF THE GNOSIS
London & Halifax

74 04

CLASSIFIED

APOSTOLIC SUCCESSION - FACT OR FICTION?

- by -

Richard, Duc de Palatine

Personal & Confidential

Many readers may express astonishment to find us discussing a subject which apparently does not deal with Gnosticism or Immortality. In their opinion they consider that the matter of Holy Orders in the Christian Church and the Occult Orders are totally unconnected, and that the former has nothing to do with a person seeking Immortality. In this respect they are utterly mistaken. The Church and Occultism are actually two sides of the same Wisdom Religion or Gnosis. The former is the theoretical version, and the latter its practical application.

There was always an Outer Ecclesia (Church) to meet the needs of those who were in a hurry. Conversely there could be found the Chrestian Ecclesia functioning for those who were spiritually capable of understanding the true nature of Man and his relationship to the universe, and who could enter into a form of discipline which would enable them to experience their Immortality at first hand. This was effected by means of a pageant of Initiations as a symbolical enactment of the Mysteries of Life, not only in their entirety but also in the wealth of their varied detail.

For some very deep and sinister reason the theologians have always refused the layman the right to know that his Christian religion was not founded by Jesus of Nazareth, but stems from the time of Emperor Theodosius of 381 A.D. Thus, any attempt made by the layman to know and understand the true history of his Church was rewarded with death. It was the averred policy of the Latin, Greek and Protestant Churches to persecute and finally destroy all laymen who dared to question the foundations of Christianity.

One thing which has come out of all this opposition to honest and impartial investigation into the origins of Christianity is that there existed at Alexandria in Egypt about 355 B.C. a Mystery System having for its Saviour a Christos named Serapis, who was simply Osiris of Ancient Egypt renamed.

It was Alexander the Great, the conqueror of Egypt, who established the Mysteries of Serapis. He embodied the essentials of all the previous Mystery Schools and Cults into one system of personal salvation. The Mysteries of Serapis were based mainly upon the Gnostic philosophy of Pythagoras. Thus the real object of the Pythagorean Gnosis was to teach men in 'The Things That Are,' and then to permit them to experience 'The Things That Were.' As a consequence, the man so blessed entered into Immortality.

(4) The serious student of Gnosticism knows that his philosophy was started by Pythagoras in the 6th Century B.C. It did not emerge at the end of the Ist and the beginning of the 2nd Centuries A.D., as the opponents of Gnosticism claim. Furthermore, the student knows better than to believe that Gnosticism was or is an alien or heretical religion directed against Christianity. Two vital historical facts militate against such a baseless claim. Gnosticism was in existence long before the supposed birth of Jesus; and it was at the Council of Nicea in 325 A.D. that Constantine the Great transformed the Cult of Jesus into the Religion of Jesus. This means, in fact, that it was the Religion of Jesus which was the alien religion to the Pythagorean Gnostic Philosophy. But these facts, based upon irrefutable historical evidence, have been deliberately withheld from the ordinary layman of the Church.

By the time of Theodosius, the fashioners of the new Religion of Jesus took over the ordinary vocabulary of the civic and political activities of the Roman Empire. For instance, 'Sacramentum' (sacraments) was originally the sacred oath of the Roman Armies; 'Leitourgia' (liturgy) was originally the public service of the religio licta of the Roman State; the 'Kleros' (clerics) were the officials, and the official meeting place the 'Ecclesia' (Church), and the principal spokesmen 'Episkopoi' (bishops). The Ecclesia was the general assembly which transacted political laws etc. It will be seen that even by the end of the 4th Century A.D., the Cult of Jesus had no religious foundation or usage until they took over from the Pagans. Therefore, the Christian doctrine of 'The Apostolic Succession' must have been derived from the Pagan system of 'The Right of Succession.'

(5)

There is sufficient evidence in the existing writings from pre-Apostolic days to show that there existed a class of men called 'The Bishops of Serapis and Christos,' who served the Soter as the Saviour of Men from the Demons or Aeons of this world. It was known that they were Initiates of the Mysteries of Serapis; that through them they were able to awaken the Christos-Soul within them thus enabling them to experience the Immortal State. Once receiving the final Initiation in the Mysteries of Serapis they became known as 'Chrestes,' the Outer Circle of the Inner God. It was through this final Initiation that they were granted the Right of Succession which enabled them to become mediators between God and Man. They formed themselves into what was known as 'The Chrestian Ecclesia' or The Community of Chrestes (Good Men), who received the common title of 'Christos'.

These Chrestes were famous for their purity of life, honesty and power over the visible and invisible forces of nature. Caligula, Emperor of Rome, banished the Serapaens, Chrestes and all the magicians from the Roman Empire: they were known under the generic title of 'Gnostics' or 'Knowing Ones,' but they were not considered as being a religion, but simply the 'Cult of Chrestes.' Following the assassination of Caligula, Claudius ascended the Imperial Throne. Suetonius, who hated Claudius and the Serapaen Cult and their powerful bishops, sought their banishment from Rome.

(6)

It was at Antioch that a large number of Serapaen followers were located. In order to avoid exile, they changed their name, in 44 A.D., from that of 'Chrestians' to 'Christians.' The psychological effect of this name change on the Chrestians of the Jewish Temple is made quite clear by Lactantius when he says that it is only through ignorance that people call themselves Christians instead of Chrestians:

> "... qui propter ignorantum errorem cum immutata litera Chrestum solent dicere."

74 09

Lactantius was followed by Justin Martyr, Clemens Alexandrinus and then Origen, thus proving beyond cavil that the original Christians knew themselves as 'Chrestians' and not as 'Gnostics' as their Christian opponents claimed. This means that the Antiochan Jewish Chrestians changed their name to avoid persecution and exile at the hands of Caligula and that they were non religio licta of the Roman Empire.

Thus it came to pass that at the Council of Chalcedon in 381 A.D., the adherents of the old Chrestes Cult were duly proscribed and considered heretics of the 'Christian' Religion! - a religion which had been founded and enforced by Constantine the Great, and which composite religious system had become the religio licta of the Holy Roman Empire from 325 A.D.

(7) It was the work of Eusebius, Bishop of Caesarea, to fabricate a suitable history of the 'Christian Church' at the expense of secular history and the records existing before the meeting of the Council of Nicea in 325 A.D. and all the records available during and after the following council of 381 A.D. It was this Eusebius who formulated the doctrine of the 'Christian Apostolic Succession,' but, in so doing, he gave no historical details except those provided by Irenaeus, Bishop of Symaria. Yet the latter could not furnish one single valid proof of the historical existence of The Apostolic Succession. Consequently he resorted to endless lies, forgery and the deliberate falsification of events, so naturally Eusebius followed in his wake. We know that Jesus did not establish a 'Church' and no method of Succession, yet, in 38 A.D., we find one Bishop, James the Just, praying for the sins of Israel in the Holy of Holies. Remember that such a place was reserved solely for the Jewish High Priest. Eventually, because of jealousy, Ananias slew James the Just. Why? What was a Bishop doing there if Jesus did not found a Church? The theologians are reluctant to explain this historical event in the light of Christian history.

From the Councils of Nicea and Chalcedon, and the Second Council of Nicea held at Constantinople, the Catholic faction of the Ecclesia felt secure when they saw all the references to the hated Gnostics suppressed or muzzled. Bear in mind that the accusations of the Patricist accusers of the Gnostics were not based upon the direct evidence of an eye-witness or upon any manuscripts claimed to be Gnostic. In fact, there is no historical evidence to show that the followers of the Gnostic philosophy called themselves 'Gnostics.' Such writers as Payne Knight, C. W. King, Gerald Massey, Godfrey Higgins and Olshausen of Germany could not find any direct evidence that there was ever a religion called 'Gnosticism.' Furthermore, in the writings of Irenaeus, Tertullian, Sozomen, Eusebius, Theodoret and Epiphanius there is no definite proof that the philosophy of the Gnosis was even a religion 'per se.'

(8) In the IIth Century there appeared hundreds of so-called Gnostic sects, orders and even ecclesias which brought out many wonderful creeds, systems and cults which the Roman Church grouped under the generic name of 'Gnosticism.' The Church, fearing that the Truth would be restored, tried to exterminate them under the rigorous execution of the Constantinian and Theodosian Laws of 325 and 381 A.D. The greatest guilt of these cults in the eyes of the Church was their syncretistic viewpoint and their refusal to accept the traditional account of the life and crucifixion of Jesus of Nazareth. Scholars of the Medieval Church were cornered at every step by their no less acute adversaries, these Gnostic groups. Thus, they boldly sheltered behind blind faith, and, in answer to their merciless and historically founded logic, fell back upon an imaginary tradition invented by lying, constant acts of forgery and the perpetual stunt of deliberately falsifying existing facts.

From the fall of the Western Roman Empire in the 6th Century to the beginning of the IIth, The Pactio Secreta advanced and then protected the emergence of the Gnostics in every century against the encroaching doctrinal and temporal power of the Pope of Rome. Even as late as the time of Charlemagne, the Serene Highness of Gaul (the Franks), this enlightened Emperor resisted the claims of the Pontifex Maximus of Rome and claimed that he received his 'Right of Succession' to the Crown of the Franks from The Pactio Secreta, the Guardians of Serapis at Alexandria in Northern Egypt. Therefore, even at the time of the Emperor of the Franks (8th Century A.D.), The Pactio Secreta was known to exist as the 'Council of Nine' who always remained in the background of the successive Orders of Chivalry such as The San Graal, The Templars, The Order of The Golden Swan, The Brothers of Light, The Brotherhood of The Rosae Crucis and The Illuminati of Avignon and Bavaria. Therefore, these related Secret Fraternities from the 8th Century to the present day have their foundations upon the Gnostic philosophy derived from the Mysteries of Serapis in 355 B.C.

Both the so-called Christian Church and the Secret Fraternities under the guidance and protection of The Knights of The Pactio Secreta stem from the one root doctrine: that of the Mysteries of Serapis, the heirs to all the Mysteries of the ancient and classical world. These Mysteries possessed a hierarchical system of officials who were initiated and then raised in their Offices through certain occult matters, forms and intentions in order to ensure the correct transaction and transmission from the Geometrical Man to the Mathematical Man. This method of the transmission of the Power of God to Man was always known as 'The Right of Succession.' The fact that James the Just of Jerusalem was a Bishop of the Christos indicates that this method of transmission of the Power of God to Man was known long before the alleged birth of Jesus of Nazareth. This event further points to the fact that we are dealing here with an older Cult of Joshua (Jesus) which the Christian theologians have taken great pains to suppress and keep from the people.

(9)

(10)

The teachings and allegories of the precursors of the Chrestian Ecclesia represented the passing of the human soul of Man into the tomb of flesh and his eventual return to his Immortal Nature. Their friends and foes alike were forced to admit that these assemblies were most beneficient, greatly promoting virtue in human life, and producing the Immortal Poets, Sages and Saints. It was also common knowledge that these Mystery Systems or Lodges were in their totality the representation in drama and symbol of the journey of the human soul through all the intricate windings of this mortal life, from birth to death. But the Christian Church, once it began to reject the Gnosis in the form suitable to the IIth Century onwards and banished it altogether, had no more secrets to give out.

(11)

In the I2th Century, the Catholic Church began in earnest to effect the total destruction of these pseudo-Gnostic sects and cults. It was aware that not all the people of Europe were faithful to the Cult of Jesus. Far from it. Most of the intellectuals and nobles still clung to the Old Religion and the old hierarchical system of Episcopi and Clerics derived from the original Chrestian Ecclesia, and who were in total opposition to the Roman Christian Ecclesia based in Rome.

These undoubted Bishops of Serapis and Christos in Europe, even to the beginning of the I3th Century, were known as 'Episcopi Vagantes.' In order to control or reduce their influence, the Roman Church tried every possible means to deny them their Ancient Rites, while at the same time promoting the bishops who obeyed the temporal and doctrinal Church in Rome. Again, it was known that these Episcopi Vagantes were the Initiates of the Old Religion. By the I5th Century, these Gnostic Bishops; that is to say, 'They Who Knew the Truth,' were demoninated 'witches and heretics.' In I488 Pope Innocent VIII set the full force of the temporal and doctrinal Church against them, and he was followed in I52I by Pope Adrian IV, who, in his 'Decretal Epistle,' denounced them and their 'heretical' assemblies throughout Europe. In the Migne Library of the Fathers it states clearly that Innocent VIII was fully determined to eradicate the pestilant and heretical Episcopi who repudiated the tradition of Jesus and Peter and still followed the prototype of Jesus - Jeshu ben Pandira of 69 B.C., and those who still held to the blasphemous Book of the Toldoth Jeshu. He also stated that at all times The Knights of The Pactio Secreta were to be rooted out and destroyed. He was, of course, referring to the ancient Order of Roman Knights who defied the action of the Church Council of 38I A.D.

It now becomes abundantly clear that the 'Christianised' followers of Jeshu ben Pandira, who now operated under the pseudo-ensign of 'Jesus of Nazareth,' took great pains to eradicate all possible references to and links with the original Chrestian Ecclesia of before 44 A.D. It is amazing how the theologians of the Christian Church kept this tell-tale rebuttal of the claims that Jesus of Nazareth founded the Christian Church and instituted the 'Apostolic Succession' on the Day of Pentecost.

Again it is obvious that Clemens Alexandrinus and Origen were fully aware of the Latin term 'Initiate' and its use up to the year 878 A.D. They also knew of the Chrestians up to 44 A.D., and of those Bishops who refused to accept the new dogma of Eusebius that Jesus was both the Son of God and then God Himself, and yet blasphemous dogma was forced upon the dissenting Bishops by threats from Constantine, the first Christian murderer to be saved by the bloody atonement of a myth in time. The 2nd Church Council of 381 A.D. and its decrees amply show that the Christians after 44 A.D. were and still are the real Apostates from the original faith which existed from the very origin of the human race. This again proves beyond all cavil that it was the Chrestian Gnostics who constitued the original Ecclesia, and who could and still do claim an unbroken and legitimate Line of Succession from the Hierophants of Serapis, called by Emperor Hadrian 'The Bishops of

Serapis and Christos.'

The term 'Initiate' comes from the Latin 'Initiatus': one who had been prepared by special ceremonies and received into the Mysteries and Secrets of the Kingdom of God. The later Christian term 'Ordinand' means the same thing, and is bestowed according to a certain rendering of Matter and Form. In the Chrestian form of Initiation, the peculiar types of oil used to open the centres in the head, throat and heart had the action of fissioning the human soul safely from the body during the rites. It has been suggested by some experts that the oil of the amanita muscaria mushroom was the catalyst which enabled the candidate to effect the proper separation of body and human soul. Thereby, the soul could receive and then experience certain post mortem states of human consciousness out of the body. At the same time, it could receive the final and absolute proof of its personal identity with its Hero-God who would grant to the Initiate certain geometrical powers which could be used in the service of his brothers upon re-entering the human tabernacle. There is ample evidence to show that this Mushroom Ceremony was used well before 4,000 B.C. in Egypt, and the actual ceremony differs little from the Chrestian Gnostic method of effecting the Right of Succession.

The present form of the ceremonial to pass this Right of Succession from one Episcopus to another, now commonly known as 'The Christian Apostolic Succession,' is, in reality, an empty ceremony. It is used today simply as a means of conferring an office. It does not effect, as it once did, the correct transaction of projecting the human soul of the Bishop Elect from the mathematical world into the geometrical world of design where the Christ Principle is to be found. Thus, the candidate, once effecting the fission of the body and the soul, and finding himself within the Christos, does receive the power and glory of his Office from the Christ Himself. Two things are required for this action to take place within the Abstract or Christos world: the consecrating Bishop must have been consecrated by an already-consecrated Bishop who can prove his Line of Succession, and the Bishop must have the right intention to transfer to the Bishop Elect from the Bishop himself the power of his own awakened Christos-Soul in order to awaken the Christos-Soul of the Bishop Elect. The Bishop Elect must be erudite in the Gnosis of himself and of his Soul, and must be fully prepared to make the transaction between the human and the Divine during the course of his consecration.

It would appear that in 44 A.D. the Jewish Chrestians, wishing to disassociate themselves from the secret and forbidden Mushroom Cult, discontinued its use in their ceremonies of conferring the authority of the Christos, and began to use olive oil and balsam as a substitute. Yet they still continued to use outward instruments which were used by the Mushroom Cult, such as the umbrella over the Christ (Host) on the altar. Consider this: if Jesus stated that He came to give nothing new but only to fulfill, then either the Christian system of consecration and ordination is an empty charade or it is based upon an earlier and non-Christian Sacred Ceremony of conferring Spiritual Power and Office.

(12)

When we come to deal with the Secret Assemblies espoused by The Knights of the Pactio Secreta after the IIth Century in Europe, it was possible for the Grand Priors of the Order to continue the Sacred Ceremony of the Mushroom, and the anointing with any kind of oil was deleted from their ceremonies. The transaction of Power was then effected by the determined and disciplined will of the Grand Master of each successive manifestation of the True Religion. The first of the Chivalric Orders instituted by The Pactio Secreta was that of the San Grael. In this Order of Chivalry, as in all the successive orders, their workings in their totality represented the journey of the human soul through all the intricate windings of this mortal life, from birth to death, and from each of the Initiations the candidate received more than a hint of that which lay beyond.

Again, we find by a close analysis of the many rituals which have been allowed to be made public, that at a certain point in each ceremony or ritual, the candidate was permitted to make the fission between the mortal body and the human soul, and from this, and from the projection of the human soul into the Christos-Soul, he was permitted to receive first-hand knowledge and experience of the nature of the Quest as depicted in each Order. As always, when the Order becomes known to the public, certain of the Knights retired from the public Order to perpetuate the original nature of the Quest - the Finding of the Essential Man.

(13)

(14)

To summarise, one can see that the Mysteries of Serapis concerned themselves with the nature of the Essential Man, and the method whereby the human man could become restituted with this Essential Self.

Their descendants, the Chrestian Gnostics, followed the same Quest but in a simpler form, assisted by the ancient Sacred Mushroom Rite. After 44 A.D., certain sections of the Chrestian Movement apparently feared the effect of the civil oppression of the Mushroom Cult and changed their name from 'Chrestian' to 'Christian' at Antioch, which was, at that time, a vital centre of the Mushroom Cult. It was also a procuring place for the sacred amanita muscaria which was vital to all the fertility cults in Asia Minor. We know that Lebanon was the main source of supply of the mushroom, just as Mexico was the source of the drug used in the Mayan and Aztec ceremonies and sacrifices.

(15)

History is very definite on this point: It was the Christianised Church which broke away from the Chrestian Ecclesia in 44 A.D. Thus, in order to establish herself as the Supreme Authority of God on Earth - minus the sacred ceremonial to effect this transaction, you will note - she began a process of persecution and condemnation of the source of her own authority, namely the Mysteries of Serapis and the Chrestian Gnostics.

In the 4th Century the Christian Church usurped the power and authority of the ancient Hierophants and Episcopi, and simply perpetuated this Line of

(16) the Right of Succession of power and authority in her priests and bishops only, but with a difference: she retained the outward forms but lost the inward operating principles. We must also keep in mind that such men as Simon Magus, Marcion, Cerinthus, Valentinus, and Basilides lived well before such Christian Bishops as Tertullian, Irenaeus, Hippolytus, Epiphanius and Eusebius; therefore, logic and tradition proves that it was the later Christians and their bishops who were surely the heretics, and not the so-called Gnostics. (17) In fact, the concept of the Apostolic Succession was invented by the 4th Century Bishops after they had outwardly destroyed the Gnostics.

(18) Again we must bear in mind these irrefutable facts: To say that there is a 'Christian Apostolic Succession' is a palpable fraud. There is no factual evidence that the man Jesus ever instituted such an idea; nor can there be found any statement of Jesus intimating that he founded a religion or a church. There is not one word of St. Paul which could be construed as indicating that he knew of the existence of Jesus or of any Succession from his person. The records of the 2nd Church Council of Nicea, held in Constantinople in 787 A.D., clearly prove that the Christian Church stole the livery of the Mysteries of Serapis from the Chrestian Gnostics, the Essenes and the Mithraic Mysteries and called them 'Christian.' In fact, Jesus never founded a 'church' or 'ecclesia' while he was alive, and the Gospels were written about a hundred years after his supposed death. It was Paul, an Initiate of Bacchus at Tarsus, who founded the Church. Why are the ordinary laymen of the Christian Church not told of these important facts?

(19)

St. Augustine, who is generally regarded as being one of the outstanding leaders of the early Christian Church, states:

> "What is nowadays called the Christian religion was in existence among the ancient people until Christ Himself, having appeared, they began to designate as 'Christian' the True Religion which had hitherto been in existence."

This statement alone shows that the Christian Church is but the illegitimate continuation of the Chrestian Ecclesia, except that the names, seasons and times have been changed to fit the framework of the new legend of Jesus of Nazareth.

(20)

With the outward destruction of the Gnostic Chrestian Ecclesia in the IIth Century, it was the Secret Fraternities who perpetuated the Gnostic Philosophy and its operating principles in their pristine purity and maintained a continuity of Hierophants and Grand Masters, coming down to the present exposition of The Pactio Secreta. In fact, the purest form of Gnosticism (the Mysteries of Jeshu) can only be found within these Secret Lodges of Adepts, and here we are not speaking about the public bodies which have nothing of value to give to their people except a decadent rehash of that which has always been, is, and ever will be.

So it is obvious that the ancient term 'Initiation' and the modern term 'Ordination' have the same meaning and purpose. In both cases, it is an expansion of consciousness and the granting of certain powers by means of a Sacred Oil or Drink. In both cases they require the instruments of Matter and Form. 'Form' is the Imposition of Hands, and 'Matter' is the Prayer of Intention. But in recent centuries the third requirement, that of the catalystic form of oil or drink, has been deliberately overlooked or disregarded as being too dangerous. So they have substituted the action of thought. Unfortunately, in the majority of instances, the thought is overclouded by the 'love of status before the public,' or, in the Fraternal Lodges, by the honour of being referred to as the 'Worshipful Master.' It is within the Church, Masonry, Rosicrucianism etc. that one finds the evil of class distinction the rule of the day. They have forgotten the 'Man of Sorrows.'

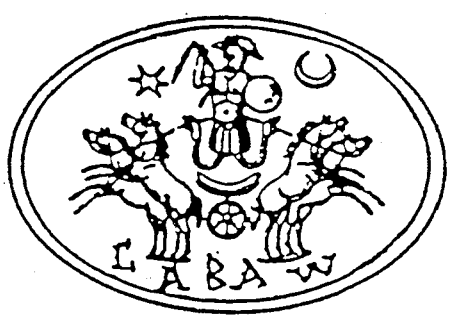
The above means that the Initiator, be he a Hierophant, Master or Bishop, is possessed, or should be possessed, of the plenitude of all power and authority, the former from the Indwelling Christos and the latter from the Holy Spirit, the two channels being interchangeable and having the same meaning, according to the intention of the would-be Initiator.

The writer, having reached the highest Offices in the Church, in Freemasonry, and in many other Lodges and Rites, is now in the position to have second thoughts about their efficacy. That is his personal opinion, but he knows that his detractors will use this against him. If they do, then they will reveal their own emptiness and ignorance of the purpose of their Great Master.

THE EASTER MASS

- by -

RICHARD, DUC DE PALATINE



THE SANCTUARY OF THE GNOSIS
London & Halifax

CLASSIFIED

Personal & Confidential

THE EASTER MASS

- by -

Richard, Duc de Palatine

From time immemorial all nations and cultures have established external forms of ritual based upon the internal workings of the Essential Self within the human personality. The intent was twofold: to remind us that we are an Immortal Self and not a frail mortal self, and to use such a ritual as a means to assist us to become free from the limitations of the lower self and to aspire towards immortality and thus reside forever in the Bosom of the Father. The action we must make towards Immortality is a process from within outwards, and not as the modern Christians claim, from outwards inwards in order to gain the Kingdom of God within.

Candid and unprejudiced scholars of Christianity are agreed that the Christian religion did not commence with a man called Jesus of Nazareth, but was in existence from the very origin of the human race, as Augustine, Bishop of Hippo states. The Christ or Christos represents the Immortal Pilgrim ever resident within the human heart of every man; thus it was the work of the Pilgrim to transform the human Jesus-Self into the Image of the Christos. In this ancient and ever-present process, the Crucified Self within the body must crucify the flesh and then come off the Cross to be reborn as the Ineffable Self resplendent in the Glory of the Supreme Deity. The teachings shown in the Christian Drama can only be understood through the many myths, symbols, systems of numbers, the references to the various signs of the Zodiac, and a firm grasp of how the Christian religion evolved out of The Mysteries of Serapis at Alexandria in Egypt some 300 years before the Christian era.

Christianity, like all the religions which preceeded it, tells of the original Virgin State of Man before he made the descent from his immortal dwelling place into the dark tenement of the mortal body. He (Man), being of the Father and yet one of the Sons of the Father, was pure and immaculate. Having all the Wisdom and Power of the Father, he was clothed in matter, and thus being so, he forgot his Divine Nature. Therefore, in very truth, every man is born of the Father and not of the will of man. Each person is a potential God. Latent yes, but God gave to Man knowledge and the means whereby he could recall his Immortal Nature and take steps to recover it.

Therefore, the whole drama as played out on earth by Jeshu ben Pandira in person represents the journey of the Christos-Soul through all the intricate windings of this mortal life. That is to say, from man's first incarnation to his last, and by the efforts in each incarnation, the Soul gains more than a hint of that which lies beyond. We can see that reincarnation is both a symbolic as well as an actual enactment by every person of the Mysteries of the Kingdom of God, not only in its entirety, but also in the wealth of the varied memories or traces which are programmed in the Divine Soul.

The Master Mind who formulated the Christian religion did not invent it. All He did was draw the essentials from all the religions of the world and arranged this drama of the Christos-Man in such a manner that it would be impossible for sentient man to forget his Immortal Nature. As a practitioner of the Gnosis, we believe that Jeshu ben Pandira, who lived from 105 - 71 B.C., was one of the Superior Sons of God. Seeing mankind struggling in the labyrinth of human life, he decided to make the descent to earth. He took upon himself the form of a man and lived this eternal drama in just one life in the hope that by his example we would follow Him and attain our own rightful place in the Nature of the One which is the All.

There is sufficient historical evidence to warrant the assumption that Jeshu was well-versed in the Wisdom of the Egyptians at Alexandria. He thus took the outline of the Mysteries of Serapis for His future effort, changing the Egyptian name for the Divine Soul of 'Serapis' into that of 'Christos.' He encouraged many of the students and followers of the Pythagorean Gnosis, and began to teach and perform miracles in the Name of the Indwelling Christos. This fact becomes evident when the Christian Jesus is made to say, "It is not I who do these things, but the Power within Me." It follows then that the words 'Christos,' 'Serapis,' 'Osiris,' 'Christ,' 'Bodhi,' 'Bacchus,' etc. all refer to the Immortal Soul of Man, which could not be a man, but which had no father, no mother, no beginning or end of days, which was and is Eternal in the Heavens, as stated by Paul.

It was in 44 A.D. that the Jewish Christians changed their name from 'Chrestian' to 'Christian'. This of course caused a very far-reaching change, and its future results were to prove fatal to the later Christians. The word 'Chrestian' refers to a 'Good Man,' who had resurrected the Christos Power within him. Thus this Power had granted him Divine Powers and the authority to command the Powers of Nature to obey him. Through this, Man would be, as St. Paul says, "Changed in the twinkling of an eye." In other words, having reached the vital stage of his transformation, he gained Illumination, or the Inner Power to recall through the 'Circle of Eternity' all those memories he had accumulated by his many incarnations. At the same time, the man so blessed by his own Efforts, by the Power of his own Christos-Soul was able to perform wonders yet undreamed of by man today.

Even from the 3rd Century B.C., the idea of calling a man 'Christos' or a Christ was considered blasphemous, and he was put to death by the state for his indiscretion. When Constantine the Great called the first Christian Council at Nicea in 325 A.D., he commanded all the assembled Bishops, on the pain of death or exile, to accept this new blasphemous dogma of calling Jesus 'divine' and declaring him to be the only Son of God. The Bishops who came to this Council were at first shocked to hear this blasphemy. Out of about 300 Bishops attending the Council only 22 accepted this infamous doctrine (figures obtained from the Planar at Instanbul). Thus, under the threat of death, the rest of the Bishops reluctantly agreed for fear of their lives.

The new Constantinian Nicene Church performed a terrible act against the Children of God. Constantine absolutely denied the teachings of Christ that asserted "Ye Are Gods." By so doing, this despot denied the human right for all men to become eventually Sons of God without distinction of race, colour, creed or sex. Thus, the Chrestian and Gnostic conception of the Brotherhood of Man and the Fatherhood of God was destroyed at this Council. And again, the present adherents of this blasphemous and distorted version of the Teachings of the Christ or Christos have set every man against his brother.

The Knights of The Holy Grail, The Knights Templars, The Cathari, The Albigenses, The Rosicrucians, The Illuminati and The Freemasons all refused to accept the 'crucified Jesus' of Golgotha, an event of which history is silent. Their only crime was that, at least to them, the cross of the human body was obnoxious and a hindrance to the attainment of The Great Secret of The Divine Self - The Pactio Secreta! Instead of adoring the cross on Good Friday, the members of the above-mentioned Orders trampled on it and then spat on it in token of their denial of the limiting nature of the human body.

Here is another item which will numb most Christians: All of the offshoots of The Pactio Secreta considered the Creator of this World as the Evil God - Rex Mundi - since he caused the Sons of God to be thrown into dark and human tabernacles to die to the Father and become enslaved to Jehovah. Hence the Gnostics considered the flesh to be evil, and for that reason alone. Lucifer, The Bright Star of The Morning, the Divine Christos, born of Venus, the Star of the Sea of Universal Space, descended and granted to mankind the hope and possibility of being saved from the cruel and sadistic Jehovah. At Easter we should be giving thanks to Lucifer, the Son of the Father and Venus for helping to rescue us from the darkness of the Jehovah of the Kabbala.

On the Resurrection morn it was Judas, the earthly form of Lucifer, who forced Jesus (man) to partake of the Grail of Human Suffering. Then, in a state of intoxication of the senses, he enabled the Divine Self to be torn from the cross of matter, and then be free to descend, falling in the hell of the body to quicken us, and then be enabled to rise from the Tomb of the Body, clothed in his Robe of Glory, granted to him by his Mother, Venus, and the Sun - his Father. This is clearly shown in the Revelation of John of Patmos.

It will now be seen that the Drama of the Christ is a spiritual one which is enacted out within the Temple of Man, wherein God the Father is never absent, and in very truth it is only through the Immortal Son of God - the Christos - that the whole of mankind, past, present and future, can be 'saved.' Again it will be in very truth that the Elect of God - the 144,000 - be saved at the next deluge.

(Using the Kabbalistic system of numbers taken from 'The Chaldean Book of Numbers', reduce every letter of the alphabet. You will find that Adam, Noah, Moses, Joshua, Jesus and Paul can be reduced to the single digit of Nine. Nine is also the number for Man, and, of course, so is 144,000 when the zeros are ignored).

Thus we find that it is Mankind who falls into matter, is crucified by matter, and will be saved by matter. Matter is again Mary, the Virgin Mother of the star actor in the Christian Drama.

Therefore, all ye Sons of the Living God, Arise! Take up your Palms of Victory and march to the Place of Martyrdom by the flesh, and know that ye all without the loss of one iota of God shall be saved by your own efforts through the Power of the Christos. The Christos within is not concerned with races, creeds, colours or the three sexes. Nor is It concerned with your dignities, powers, knowledge, abilities or capacities for they are things of this world and concern only the temporal and doctrinal conceptions of the world of Jehovah, the God of Lies and Deception. The Christos-Soul represents the Immortal Church Triumphant, eternal in the Heavens of which the Unknown God is the Supreme Regent for our small universe. Lucifer, the Brightest Son of God, and Venus, the Brightest Daughter of God, who gave us their Divine Son, the Christos, to reside within our hearts for ever more.

A final note: The Knights of the oldest and grandest of all the Chivalric Orders have this sacred motto: "Honi soit qui mal y pense!" ("Evil be to him who evil thinks.") What we have written here are facts based upon irrefutable historical and documentary proofs. If by doing so we have taken upon ourselves the hatred of our orthodox Brethren within the philosophic, scientific and religious disciplines, and of those who claim to love Truth above all things, then let them take note of their own estate and think well before they condemn us or our revelations as being evil. Remember, The Pactio Secreta is not, will not be, nor has it ever been a physical body, but is a spiritual body of Knights who have pledged to safeguard The Great Secret of the Eternal Father resident within every Companion's heart.

It is humanly impossible to reveal the various layers of meaning of this Grand Drama of Man. There are also levels upon levels of silence demanded by The Knights of The Great Secret. Woe be to him who becomes indiscreet!

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 71-78

LIBER# 75 THE SKY IS FULL OF STARS

Personal & Confidential SIXTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

By Stephan A. Hoeller

The Gnosis of The Eucharist

The Mass, or, as it is sometimes called, the divine liturgy or the Eucharist, is the most solemn of all the Christian sacraments. Through it we are led step by step to the purpose of our earthly lives — union with the divine — for at its climax the faithful are made one with God and each other by receiving the body and blood of Christ under the earthly forms of bread and wine.

Although these mystical aspects of the Mass have been known and proclaimed by all the branches of Christendom that have not abandoned the ancient sacramental system (including the Roman Catholic, Eastern Orthodox, and, with some ambiguities, the Anglican), the rationalistic tendencies that have arisen since the Second Vatican Council in the Roman Catholic Church are robbing the Mass of much of its numinosity and psychospiritual utility.

Similarly, many in the occult, metaphysical, and New Age movements have little appreciation for the magic and mystery of the time-honored sacramental system of Christianity and within it for the supreme sacrament of the Mass. The older of these movements bear the imprint of nineteenth-century thinking, which was hyperintellectual, moralistic, and at times materialistic. The groups that have sprung up since the 1960s are a bit more favorably disposed toward ritual than their predecessors, but their appreciation of the sacraments is still small. Much of alternative spirituality is thus in danger of losing touch with one of the most valuable aspects of the mystico-magical heritage of the West.

Twenty-five years ago one could still observe nuns herding their small charges to the communion rail while admonishing them, "Don't chew the Baby Jesus," while today almost all awe and reverence for the Mass and the consecrated elements seem to have evaporated.

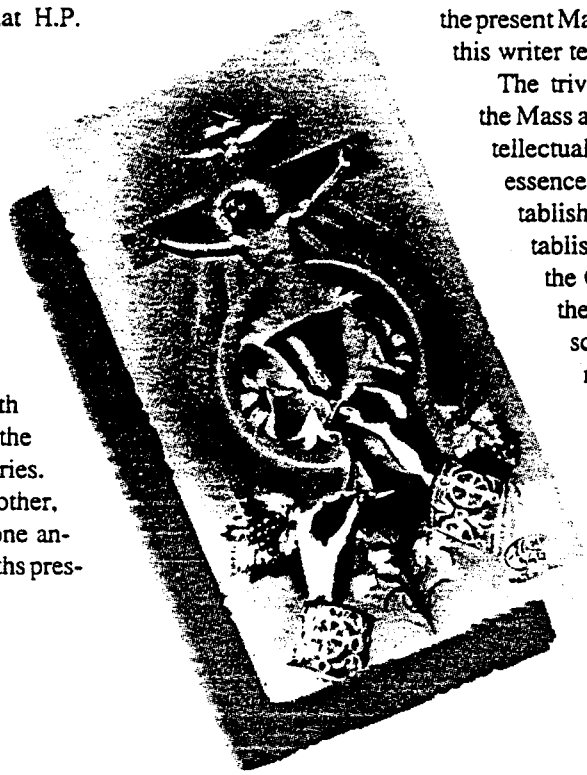
To be sure, there are valid objections to ritual. Its practice has often been accompanied by blind superstition. Still, it must be remembered that a lack of consciousness will regularly turn meaningful and transformative practices into superstitious ones. The fault is not with the ritual, but with the practitioner. Ritual, provided it uses authentic symbols, is no more or less than what H.P. Blavatsky called "concretized truth." This may be covered up by superstition, but the hidden truth is always discernible beneath the covering. Gnostic studies of the sacraments are intended to free the kernel of truth from the accretions of unconsciousness and misunderstanding that have been permitted to obscure it.

In the following we shall deal with several separate approaches to the greatest of the Christian mysteries. Some of these may contradict each other, while others tend to complement one another, and still others will restate truths present in other approaches.



Dogmatic and Rationalistic Views

The non-Gnostic church after the third and fourth centuries A.D. regarded the Eucharist as a commemoration of the meal Jesus is said to have shared with his apostles, where he is said to have blessed bread and wine, admonishing those present to do the same in remembrance of him. Christendom made it into dogma that Jesus mystically changed these substances into his body and blood and gave authority to his apostles to perform the same sacred miracle until the end of time. The mystery of the Eucharist was thus transferred to the mental realm of belief, although mythic elements continued to subsist under the façade of dogma. Protestant Christendom gradually came to deny this mystically inspired and mythically reinforced dogma. The Eucharist became a mere memorial meal, a sign rather than a symbol.

Today the Roman Catholic Church is undergoing an internal reformation whose effects on the Mass are not unlike those produced by the revolt of Luther and Calvin. Twenty-five years ago one could still observe nuns herding their small charges to the communion rail while admonishing them, "Don't chew the Baby Jesus," while today almost all awe and reverence for the Mass and the consecrated elements seem to have evaporated. Kneeling for communion, receiving the sacrament on the tongue, and other ancient rules reflecting numinous dignity have gone by the wayside. A traditionalist-inspired pun declares that the present Mass ought to be spelled "mess," and this writer tends to agree.

The trivialization and desacralization of the Mass are but a natural outcome of the intellectualization of this mystery, which in essence began at the time Constantine established the church and the church established its dogmas, while casting out the Gnosis. The mind is the slayer of the real; numinous myth and transcendental mystery cannot survive rationalism, whether in the form of Aristotelian theology or in the shape of the modernism of Hans Küng and his fellows. Dogma is the murder of mystery, even if it takes centuries for the victim to die.

The Mass As Sacred Mystery Drama

The mysteries in the pre-Christian era were elaborately devised ritual dramas contrived to intensify the spiritual transformation of the initiate. They were usually patterned after the mythic life, death, and resurrection of a particular deity to whom the mystery was dedicated. The candidate was usually made to symbolically undergo certain events in the life story of the hero. This is still evident in the initiation rituals of Freemasonry, particularly in the sublime degree of Master Mason, where the candidate undergoes the death and rising again of the Masonic hero Hiram Abiff.

It does not take much imagination to see in the Christian Mass the elements of the same ritual drama, wherein the life, death, resurrection, and ascension of Jesus are symbolically reenacted by the priests and worshippers. The fact that the Eucharist is a mythic dramatization of the career of Jesus has been recognized by the church for a very long time. As Pope Innocent III stated, "The Mass is arranged upon a plan so well conceived that everything done by Jesus Christ or concerning Him, from His Incarnation to His Ascension, is there largely contained either in words or in actions, wonderfully presented."

It is wise to have a balanced attitude toward this issue and to refrain from any attempt either to rob the Mass of its magic or to turn it into ceremonial magic pure and simple.

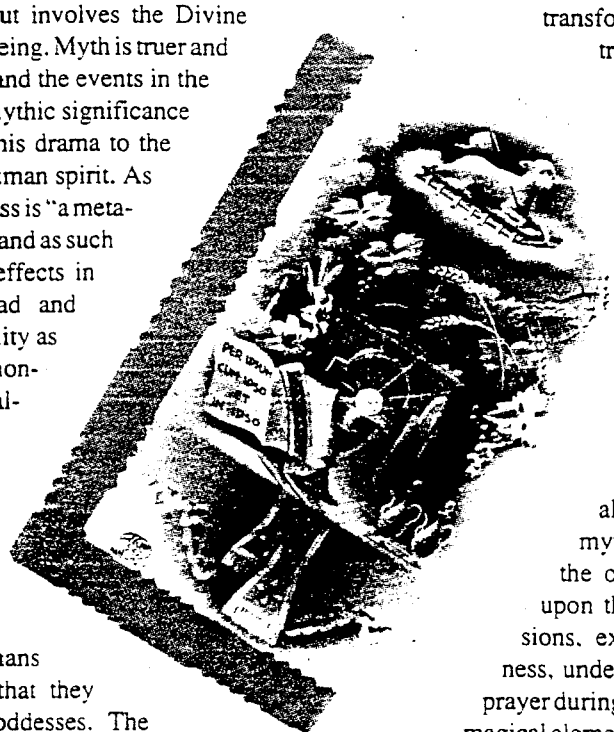
The Gnostic would contend that this is undoubtedly true, but that the reenactment of the drama does not concern the historical Jesus alone, but involves the Divine Man resident in each human being. Myth is truer and more powerful than history, and the events in the life of Jesus are elevated to mythic significance by the symbolic relation of his drama to the drama of the transforming human spirit. As Joseph Campbell said, the Mass is "a metaphor open to transcendence," and as such it is capable of miraculous effects in transforming not only bread and wine, but the human personality as well. The great fault of non-Gnostic Christianity has always been to reduce myth with a meaning to history with a moral, and this is what happened to the Mass at the hands of the theologians.



The pagans of antiquity were convinced that humans could undergo apotheosis, that they could become gods and goddesses. The Mass is closely connected with this process, since in its mysteries earthly substances are transmuted into divine ones, and, more important, humans may be similarly transformed in their psychospiritual natures. The ancient Gnostics for the most part seem to have held that Jesus was a human being who, very much like a hero in the pagan tradition, became divine as a result of his spiritual virtue. Jesus the hero became Christ the God. (This event is said to have been finalized, as it were, on the occasion of the baptism of Jesus in the river Jordan, which was called the Epiphany, or the manifestation of Christ to the world.)

The imitatio Christi, when understood as copying the moral qualities of the Christed Jesus, borders on absurdity. How could a fallible mortal imitate the Divine One descended to earth? On the other hand, the main body of the liturgical work of the church is involved in an imitation of a different order. In the church calendar the events of the life of Jesus are relived, from Christmas to Ascension and beyond. The four-day cycle of Easter (Maundy Thursday, Good Friday, Holy Saturday, and Easter Sunday) is an intense reliving of the core drama of the Passion and Resurrection. And the celebration of the Eucharist is a daily reenactment of this same drama, fortified by the mystical communion one may partake of with the hero himself. The imitation of Christ is the deification, the transformation, of the human being, and the Mass continues to be the most efficacious means of that transformation, at least as far as the Christian tradition is concerned. Only Gnosis, experienced within the Gnostic tradition, discloses this fact to us in all its promise and wonder.

The Mass As Magic

Ritual that reenacts authentic mythic themes always possesses a magic of its own. While magic may be anathema to the rationalist, it is an old friend to the lover of myth and ritual. The magic of the Mass is the operational effect of the lived myth upon the participants. People can have visions, experience expansions of consciousness, undergo healing, and engage in effective prayer during the Mass. Still, to overemphasize the magical element of this rite would be inaccurate, and would put one in the same league as the person who defined the combustion engine as "noise, speed, and stink." It is wise to have a balanced attitude toward this issue and to refrain from any attempt either to rob the Mass of its magic or to turn it into ceremonial magic pure and simple. (The much-publicized but rather infrequent phenomenon of the Black Mass is an example of the latter.)

The magical aspects of the mystery are acknowledged in the very liturgy of the Eucharist itself: Prayers are said for the living, for the dead, for particular intentions. It has always been considered legitimate for persons attending the Eucharist to pray for private concerns. On the other hand, one ought to participate in the mystery of the Mass for its own sake, and not in order to "get results" of any particular kind. If one comes only to obtain specific favors from the deity, this would interfere with the nature and amount of grace received. Eventually one would miss the true significance of the Mass entirely. A mystery of such magnitude should never be allowed to degenerate into a forum for airing petty concerns in the face of transcendence.

Jung contended that the Eucharistic sacrifice contained a vital mystery that was not entirely negated by the dogmatic structure in which it was veiled.

Some fascinating observations on the magic of the Mass were made by C.W. Leadbeater, the theosophist and Liberal Catholic bishop, in his work The Science of the Sacraments. With his paranormal faculties Leadbeater perceived certain recurring patterns of forces not ordinarily visible that manifested at each celebration of the Eucharist. The pattern seemed to organize itself into a form that he described as a sort of structure resembling a spire or cupola.

personal experience of the writer may be of interest in this connection. About 1948 or 1949, the writer acted as a part-time assistant to a Roman Catholic prelate in Austria, Abbot Alois Wiesinger, O.Cist., who was writing a book on occult phenomena. While perusing the abbot's files he discovered a drawing prepared some years before by a rural seer, representing a form clairvoyantly perceived by the seer every time the Mass was said in the village church. Some six or seven years later the writer discovered a representation of the "Eucharistic edifice" in Leadbeater's book. It matched the Austrian one in every detail! Moreover, the chances of an illiterate Alpine peasant ever having encountered Leadbeater's book are very small. That two persons of such different characters should have perceived the same structure of magical forces in the Eucharist is evidence that cannot be easily dismissed.

But this magical attitude toward the Mass must be kept in bounds also. People may be tempted to participate in it in order to take a sort of "astral shower bath" while neglecting the devotion that is required to receive sacramental grace.

C.G. Jung and the Mass

That great modern representative of the Gnosis, C.G. Jung, had a great interest in the Christian sacraments, particularly in the Mass. He repeatedly stated that he considered Catholicism a far more complete religion than its Protestant counterparts. The mystery of the sacraments, said Jung, had great value, and produced a degree of psychological health among Catholics that was not found among Protestants and atheists. (One wonders whether he would have made the same statement about the post-Vatican II church, with its folk Masses and burlap vestments.)

Jung contended that the Eucharistic sacrifice contained a vital mystery that was not entirely negated by the dogmatic structure in which it was veiled:

> The ritual act [of the Mass] consecrates both the gift and the givers. It commemorates and represents the Last Supper which our Lord took with His disciples, the whole Incarnation, Passion, Death and Resurrection of Christ. But from the point of view of the divine, this anthropomorphic action is only the outer shell or husk in which what is really happening is not a human action at all but a divine event.[1]

Jung emphasizes that those involved in the celebration of the Mass are ministering causes of the divine event. The priest does not cause the mystery; he is merely a minister of grace and power. The same is true of the congregation and of the seemingly inert substances of bread and wine. The Mass is not an action executed by humans, but by divinity.

To revert to magical terminology once again, there are two main categories of magic: high magic, or theurgy, and low magic. Low magic is personalistic and egotistical: It envisions its operators as the causes of magical acts. But when humans become the ministering agents of divinity, having mystically sensed that divinity wants to manifest itself through humanity, then we are dealing with high magic.

According to Jung, the Mass, when properly understood, is best treated as an act of high magic. In this regard he wrote:

> Wherever the [low] magical aspect of a rite tends to prevail, it brings the rite nearer to satisfying the individual ego's blind greed for power, and thus breaks up the mystical body of the Church into separate units. Where on the other hand, the rite is conceived as the action of God himself, the human participants have only an incidental or "ministering" significance.[2]

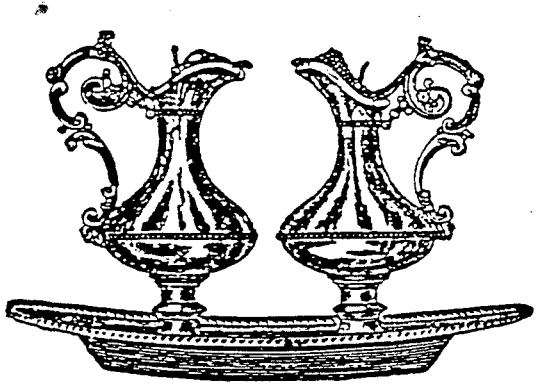
Jung goes on to state that the lesser, human consciousness, symbolized by the priest and the congregation, is confronted with a situation that is independent of human action. Divinity and its sacrificial mystery exists on a plane that is timeless and transcends consciousness as humans know it. It impels the human being to act as a minister of grace by making him an exponent, in time and among humanity, of an event that is timeless and divine.

Jung's attitude differs, commendably, I believe, from the prosaic, humdrum interpretation offered by rationalizing

What seizes the human being in the mystery of the Mass or in any other mystery is something outside humanity: a sovereign power, as free from limitation as light is from darkness.

theologians, who reduce this sublime mystery to the trivial proportions of their own thinking. It also differs from the arrogance of some New Age teachers, who insist upon humans' "creating their own reality."

Humility in the face of transcendence; this is Jung's great characteristic as a man, and it is also his advice to us. "The hammer cannot discover within itself the power which makes it strike," as he remarked in the essay quoted above. What seizes the human being in the mystery of the Mass or in any other mystery is something outside humanity: a sovereign power, as free from limitation as light is from darkness. Ordinary human consciousness cannot find anything within itself that would cause humans to perform a mystery. It can only do so when it is seized by the mystery.



(Left) The Cruets contain the sacramental wine and water. (Center) The Ciborium is a covered chalice which holds the hosts (sacramental bread) that are distributed to the congregation. (Previous Page) The Chalice is the cup in which the priest consecrates the wine during the Mass.

The human soul is at once near and far from the divine. On the one hand we are all suffering from the great alienation, the great estrangement; yet there also dwells within us a portion of the free and eternal one who is forever united with all that is holy, great, and good throughout the aeons of aeons. The dazzling spark of the divine lives in the outermost darkness. When viewed from without, it appears clothed in darkness, having assumed some of the likeness of this darkness. The Gnostic myth declares that the sparks of our indwelling divinity have come forth from a central flame, and that they partake of two aspects: They have the quality of "sparks" (separateness) and of "flames" (union) at the same time. (This recognition is in fact the central idea behind the much-discussed Gnostic "dualism.")

In addition to the views of the Mass discussed above, there is also the notion that this mystery is of the nature of a sacrifice. The sacrifice, in its Gnostic sense, involves the return of the alienated spark to its original flame. Neither philosophy, metaphysics, nor dogma can accomplish this longed-for union, for it is not a matter of concept but of experience. If we wish to join our shining twin in heaven by removing the dichotomy, we must do a work, an opus, as the alchemists of old would have called it. We must offer the bread and wine of our lesser nature to a power from above, so that this human self may be transformed into the likeness and indeed the substance of the wholly other, the alien God, the One beyond and above all the aeons, who in some utterly mysterious way is still our own, true, inmost Self. God in man returns to himself in the sacrificial mystery. As Jung expressed it:

> The dichotomy of God into divinity and humanity and his return to himself in the sacrificial act hold out the comforting doctrine that in man's own darkness there is hidden a light that shall once again return to its source, and that this light actually wanted to descend into the darkness in order to deliver the Enchained One who languishes there, and lead him to light everlasting.[3]

This return is not an act that can ever be performed by the lesser human consciousness. This lesser self can only offer itself as an instrument, an offering on the eucharistic altar of Gnosis. Words cannot describe, thoughts cannot penetrate, senses cannot perceive the true character of the mysterium tremendum et fascinans (awesome and bewitching mystery) enacted on the altar. Only the still mind, the reverent emotion, and the pure will directed toward the goal of divine union can bring us closer to the secret that blazes forth at the center of the mystery. Myths may bring us nearer, magic may illuminate, philosophy may elucidate, but the mystery remains, as it must, for it is in us and we are in it. ■

Notes

1. C.G. Jung, "Transformation Symbolism in the Mass," in Eranos Yearbooks, Vol. 2: The Mysteries (New York: Pantheon Books, 1955), p. 314.
2. Ibid., p. 315.
3. Ibid., p. 317.

Dr. Stephan A. Hoeller is author of The Gnostic Jung and The Royal Road, both published by Quest Books, and is regionary bishop of the Ecclesia Gnostica, Los Angeles. The above article is in part based on material contained in his book, The Mystery and Magic of the Eucharist (1973), to be republished in 1989.

The Alchemy of the Eucharist

Saint George Press

Be transformed by the renewing of your mind, that you may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God.
(Romans 12:2)

"CHRISTIANS"

The most amazing teaching set forth by the followers of Jesus of Nazareth when they first began to spread throughout the world was that they–and any who so willed–could become Christs. The devotees of the prevailing religions of the Mediterranean world therefore named them "Christians"–other Christs.

SALVATION

For the original Christians, salvation consisted in becoming able to return to the divine Source and participate fully in the infinite life of God (see For Love Alone).

The Christians knew that they could never actually become God, but that they could develop the capacity to share in the boundless Consciousness of God, to actively participate in the omnipresence, omniscience, and omnipotence of God. The Christian esoteric teaching given in the Book of Revelation called this state "sitting in the Throne of the Father."

FROM HUMANITY TO DIVINITY

Just as the ancient alchemists sought to transmute base metal into precious gold, so the Christians sought to be transmuted from humanity into divinity.

But to pass from humanity to divinity the individual consciousness had to evolve through all the worlds from the earth plane upward, functioning to perfection in all the forms proper to each world before being able to pass on to the next higher region.

In other words, having traversed the ladder of evolution in material forms–from an atom of hydrogen to an awakened human being–the aspiring soul still had innumerable worlds and forms to conquer before attaining the ultimate reward of the fulness of divine identity and experience. Such a process would take ages and ages beyond number.

A DYNAMIC SECRET

But the Christians had a secret means of telescoping the ladder of evolution, a direct bridge between them and the Infinite: the Mystery known as The Eucharist.

The Eucharist was instituted on the Thursday evening before the crucifixion of Christ. Taking bread and wine, He invoked Power upon them and gave them to His disciples and apostles with the astounding statement that the bread was His Body and the wine was His Blood. More astounding, even, was His injunction that they should eat these sacred Elements, and continue to do so.

TWO QUESTIONS

Two questions immediately arise in our minds regarding the Eucharist:

1) Is the bread and wine of the Eucharist really the literal Body and Blood of Jesus Christ?

2) If it is, what is its purpose?

AN AMAZING ASSERTION

From the beginning the Christian Initiates held that the living, historical Body and Blood of Jesus Christ of Nazareth become present during each celebration of the Eucharist (also called The Holy Quarbana) and are received by the communicants under the superficial appearance of bread and wine. Such an assertion is mind-boggling, but if we look into the mystical teachings of the Gospels, we will find illumination.

Jesus prepared us for the Eucharistic Mystery by two miracles: the changing of water into wine and the multiplication of food to feed many thousands.

A MATTER OF ENERGY

Everything that exists in the relative universe is energy moving to specific patterns that cause the energy to be formed into the various substances and elements. All material objects consist of molecules formed of atoms which are formed of atomic particles–electrons, protons, and neutrons–which are basically three modes of energy behavior. The only difference between a wooden table leg and a piece of gold is the pattern of basic energies. And those energies, if reduced to their final constituent, are found to be consciousness, which is Spirit.

MATTER IS CONSCIOUSNESS

It is no exaggeration, but rather the simple truth to say that matter is manifested consciousness or spirit.

When we realize this, we can understand to a degree how Jesus turned water into wine: He simply altered the energy pattern of the water. By being one with the Infinite Consciousness, Whose "ideas" are manifesting as creation, He needed only to "see" or "think" of the water as wine–and it was so! In the realm of God, thought is act, as is shown in Genesis: "Then God said, 'Let there be light'; and there was light." With God, the willing is the doing.

The wine at Cana was the water that was there originally–it had simply been reshaped to a new configuration of energy.

If we took our hypothetical wooden table leg, rearranged its atomic and molecular structure until we had gold instead of wood, melted it down and cast it into a vase, we could still point to the golden vase and say: "This is my old table leg," for the essence, the energy that had been the wood, would have simply been rearranged.

CHRIST CONSCIOUSNESS

Material forms being the manifestation of states of consciousness, it is not amiss to say that the Body of Christ is also the Consciousness, the essential being, of Christ. If that Consciousness is implanted in us by our receiving His Body and Blood–or, more correctly, the energy that was His Body and Blood now recast into the mold of bread and wine–that Consciousness will begin to pervade our bodies and our blood, awakening our own consciousness and transmuting us into Christ–which is exactly what being a Christian is all about.

INTERMEDIATE SHARING

Just as the Father intends to share His state of consciousness with those who have ascended to the state of Sons of God, so Jesus the Christ instituted the Eucharist with the intention that He would thereby enable us to participate in and attain His status as Son of God directly, without having to go through all the intermediate levels of super-human evolution.

This was possible because the Body of Christ embraced all levels of existence–from the material to the realm of the Transcendent. Those receiving His Body through the Eucharist could thereby assimilate those levels into their own being and become enabled to function and evolve simultaneously in all existing worlds, thus accelerating their ascent to the Divine to an incalculable degree.

Understanding this, we realize that Christ did not resurrect His Body for dramatic effect–nor only as a demonstration of immortality. Rather, He retained His perfectly deified Body so it could be made the Seed of Immortality in those who were united to Him through the Eucharist.

INFINITE EXTENSION

The way in which Christians could receive the Body and Blood of Christ in the Eucharist throughout the ages without exhausting it is made clear through the multiplication of the food by Jesus.

Since matter is energy, and energy is consciousness–ultimately divine consciousness–it only follows that all matter is potentially infinite, that its limitations are a matter of energy behavior only, not of actual nature.

Being one with the Infinite Consciousness, Jesus simply "saw" or "thought" of the food as it was in its essential nature: limitless consciousness. And His thinking made it so. From one small amount, meager even for one person, He fed tens of thousands–and had basketfuls left over!

THE FACTS

This being so, what actually happens in the Eucharist?

As it was with the earthly food, so it is with Christ's Body and Blood. Bread and Wine are prepared and placed on the Altar before the beginning of the Holy Quarbana. As the central part of the Eucharist, the Anaphora, proceeds, there is a recalling of the salvific acts of Christ for our salvation. Especially emphasized are His actions on the night in which He was betrayed. Taking the bread in His hands, He changed it, making it an extension of His own bodily energies, and gave it to the Apostles with the explicit declaration: "This is My Body." The same was done with the cup of wine, which became His Blood, or more properly speaking, which was exchanged for the energies that constituted His Blood, though cast in the pattern of wine.

THE HOLY SPIRIT

Jesus told the Apostles–and through them, us–to continue doing this. And so we do. Invoking the Holy Spirit, the Priest implores that She will descend upon the bread and wine and cause them to be manifested as the Body and Blood of Christ. In mercy and love She does so.

Carrying within Herself the essence of Christ, just as She did for nine months within Her womb in Her incarnation as Mary, She descends upon the Altar and works a marvellous exchange. The energy of the bread and wine are transmuted into ethereal energies and translated unto the Highest before the Throne of God as offerings (this is the only time in the history of creation that such has been possible), and in exchange, the energy substance of the Body and Blood of the living Christ are made present as exact duplicates of the offered bread and wine.

If scientifically analyzed, the two substances will be found to be "nothing more" than earthly bread and wine, but their essences are the very energies of the Body and Blood of Jesus, vehicles of His perfect consciousness.

THE EXCHANGE

The bread and wine we offered is now before the Throne of God. And He Who sits upon the Throne is now present on our Altar. Therefore, in the Eucharist we receive Christ Himself, Body and Blood, under the appearance (behavior) of bread and wine.

MYSTERY OF LOVE

The Eucharist is thus the supreme Mystery of Love. Through it we are united in every part of our existence with Jesus Christ. He imparts to us the fulness of His own Life. His Body and Blood enter into our body and blood, His life energies enter into our life energies, His mind enters into our mind, His intellect enters into our intellect, and His will enters into our will as Seeds of Divinity.

Further, the subtle bodies of all the worlds between the realm of Paradise and the realm of God are imparted to us, enabling us to begin evolving and functioning on all those levels simultaneously.

THE ALCHEMY

Just as yeast pervades and changes dough into living bread, the Consciousness of Jesus Christ through His Body and Blood begins to pervade and change us into His perfect image, enabling us to "pass from glory to glory" until we, ourselves, become The Glory. This is the divine alchemy of the Eucharist.

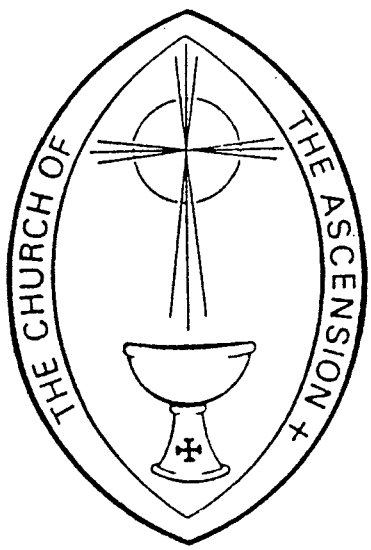
TASTE AND SEE

No further explanation is really possible. What is now needed is for you to "come and see," and hopefully to one day "taste and see that the Lord is good."

Copyright © 1989 by St. George Press

Saint George Press

The Holy Eucharist



THE RITUAL OF THE MASS

The Priest enters the sanctuary. He genuflects at the centre. Then rising, says:

P: In the Name of the Father † and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit.
R: Amen

The Priest and the people make the Sign of the Cross over themselves. The Priest takes three steps towards the Altar, at each step saying one of the following.

P: Lord of the Past, we hail Thee.
Lord of the Present, we hail Thee.
Lord of the future, we hail Thee.

He stands before the Altar, facing it, as he and the people together say:

A: O, Father of Resplendent Glory, we, being assembled together on the Path of Light to manifest the Power of the Christ within and to participate in the offering of that great Sacrifice which was and is and is to come, do hail Thee as the Source of all Light and Power.

Receiving the aspergill the Priest makes the Sign of the Cross over himself with it saying:

P: Purify us, O Lord, that in Thy Power we may worthily perform Thy Service.

Sprinkling the Altar in the centre and then the chancel to his left and right, he continues:

P: In Thy Strength, O Indwelling Lord, do we expel all forces of darkness from this Thy Holy Altar and Sanctuary:

He turns to the people and sprinkles them with the same triple motion:

P: And from this House and our own human Temple wherein we worship Thee.

Turning back to the Altar and resigning the aspergill he says:

P: And we pray Thee, Heavenly Father, that Thou will command the Rulers of the Four Regions, The Lords of Earth, Water, Fire and Air, to build for us a Spiritual Temple through which Thy strength and blessing may be poured forth upon Thy people. Through Christ our Indwelling Lord.
R: Amen.

THE CANTICLE

The Priest goes around the Altar so that he will face the people throughout the Mass:

P: Let us now lay the foundation of our Temple both human and solar.

All stand and recite or sing this Canticle except that the Priest ALONE says the first line of the first verse:

A: Christ is our Foundation
And our Chief Corner-stone.
P: We are no more strangers and foreigners:

A: But fellow citizens with the Saints and of the Household of God.
Christ Himself being the Chief Corner-stone.
In whom we are also builded together.
For an habitation of God through the Spirit.
In Whom the building fitly framed together,
Groweth into a Holy Temple in the Lord.
Except the Lord build the House; Their labour is but lost that build it.
The Foundation of God standeth sure, having this Seal; Let everyone that nameth the Name of Christ depart from iniquity.
Christ is our Foundation.
And our Chief Corner-stone.

The censer is brought to the Priest who puts incense into it and blesses it, saying:

P: † Mayest Thou be blessed by Him in Whose honour Thou shalt be burned.

The Priest then censes the Altar in the following manner:
He genuflects at the centre then censes the Cross with three triple swings. He then genuflects again then censes each candle to the right with one swing each, walking towards the end of the Altar. He then censes the top of the Altar with three single swings pointing towards the centre. At the centre of the Altar he genuflects again and repeats the censing of the candles on the Altar to the left. Then censes the right end of the Altar with two circular swings of the censer, then four circular swings along the front of the Altar and then two more swings at the left hand side of the Altar, then four more circular swings along the back of the Altar. Once more genuflecting at the centre, he hands the censer to the server who then censes the Priest.

The people stand as together with the Priest they recite or sing the INTROIT.

THE INTROIT

A: † Blessed be the Holy Trinity, the Undivided Unity, Eternal, Immortal, Invisible, to Whom be honour and glory for ever and ever. Amen.

O Lord our God, how excellent is Thy Name in All the world. Glory be to the Father and to the Son, and to the Holy Spirit. As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end. Amen.

Blessed be the Holy Trinity, the Undivided Unity, Eternal, Immortal, Invisible, to Whom be honour and Glory for ever and ever. Amen.

THE CONFITEOR

The people kneel and together with the Priest recite the following Confiteor:

A: O Lord, Thou hast created man to be immortal, and made him to be the image of Thine own Eternity: Yet we often forget the Glory of our heritage, and wander from the Path which leads to righteousness. But Thou, O Lord, hast made us for Thyself, and our hearts are ever restless till they find their rest in Thee. Look with the eyes of Thy Love upon our manifold imperfections, and pardon all our shortcomings, that we may be filled with the Brightness of the Everlasting Light, and become the unspotted mirror of Thy Power and the Image of Thy Goodness. Through Christ our Indwelling Lord. Amen.

The Priest now gives his blessing to the people:

P: God the Father, God the Son, God the Holy Spirit, bless, strengthen, preserve and sanctify † you: The Lord in His loving kindness look down upon you that you may win the victory over your lower selves and receive the Grace and Comfort of the Holy Spirit.
R: Amen.

The Priest and the people together say the Kyrie still kneeling:

A: Kyrie Eleison
Kyrie Eleison
Kyrie Eleison
Christe Eleison
Christe Eleison
Christe Eleison
Kyrie Eleison
Kyrie Eleison
Kyrie Eleison

P: The Lord be with you.
A: And with Thy Spirit.

GLORIA IN EXCELSIS

The Priest stands at the Missal at right. The people rise and together say or sing:

A: Glory be to God in the Highest, and on earth peace to men of goodwill. We praise Thee, (bow the head) We worship Thee, we glorify Thee, (bow the head) We give thanks to Thee for Thy great Glory, O Lord God, Heavenly King, God the Father Almighty. O Lord Christ, alone-born of the Father; O Lord God, Indwelling Light, Son of the Father, Whose wisdom mightily and sweetly ordereth all things, pour forth Thy Love: Thou whose strength upholdeth and sustaineth all creation, (bow the head) Receive our prayer: Thou whose Beauty shineth through the whole universe, unveil Thy Glory. For Thou only art Holy: Thou only art the Lord: Thou only, O Christ, with the Holy Spirit art most † High in the Glory of God the Father. Amen.

P: The Lord be with you.
R: And with Thy Spirit.

P: Let us pray with our hearts and minds:
A: Holy art Thou, King of the Universe, Holy art Thou whom nature hath not formed. Holy art Thou, Who art the Living One among the living. Thou art the Holy One among the Holy: Thou art Being beyond beings: Thou art God among the Gods: Thou art Lord among the Lords: Thou art the House and Thou art the Dweller in the House: and Thou art the Alone-begotten, Light, Life and Grace, pour forth Thy Glory upon us. Amen.

Give ear unto us, O Indwelling One, while we sing Thy Praises, Thou Mystery before all Uncontainables and Impassables, Who did shine forth in Thy Mystery, in order that the Mystery that is from the beginning, should be completed in us. Hear us, O Father, Father of all Fatherhoods, for all hath come out of the Alpha and will return to the Omega when the consummation of all consummations will take place. Now we invoke Thine Imperishable Name, God the Father seen of none, God the Co-eternal Son and God the Holy Spirit Who gavest us life, send forth Thy great Light-powers to illumine, strengthen and sustain us that we may assist Thee to hold back the Forces of Darkness. Amen.

P: I am a Lamp to thee who seest me.
R: Amen.
P: I am a mirror to thee who understandeth me.
R: Amen.
P: We praise Thee, O Father
We give thanks to Thee, O Light
In whom darkness dwells not.
R: Amen.

P: See thyself in Me who speaks and seeing what I do, keep silence on My Mysteries. In me know Thou the Word of Wisdom. As I am one with the Father, so ye are one with Me.

Standing before the Missal at the right side of the Altar the Priest now reads the Epistle:

THE EPISTLE

P: The Epistle is taken from the Thirteenth Chapter of the First Epistle of Saint Paul to the Corinthians:

Though I speak with the tongues of men and of Angels, and have not love in my heart, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I remove mountains, and have not love in my heart, I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not love in my heart, I gain nothing. Love is long-suffering and kind: Love does not envy: Love does not make a vain display of itself, and does not boast.

Does not behave itself unseemly, seeks not its own, is not easily provoked. Thinks no evil.
Rejoices not over iniquity, but rejoices in the Truth:
Bears all things, believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things.
Love never fails; But whether there be prophecies, they shall fail: Whether there be tongues, they shall cease: Whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away.
For we know in part, and we prophecy in part. But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is imperfect shall come to an end. When I was a child, I spoke as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: But when I became a man, I put away childish things.
For now we see through a mirror, darkly: but then face to face. Now I know in part: But then shall I know even as also I am known. And now abide Faith, Hope, Love, these three: But the greatest of these is Love.

P: Here endeth the Epistle.
R: Thanks be to God.

Priest moves the Missal to the left side of the Altar:

P: The Lord be with you.
R: And with Thy Spirit.

The Priest proceeds to the front of the Altar and standing at the left hand side he reads the Gospel

THE GOSPEL

P: The Holy Gospel is taken from the First Chapter of the Gospel according to Saint John, beginning at the first verse.

The Priest and the people with the thumb of the right hand make the Sign of the Cross over themselves, first on the forehead, then on the lips and finally on the heart saying:

R: Glory be to Thee, O Lord.

P: The Word was in the beginning, and that very Word was with God, and God was that Word.
The same was in the beginning with God.
Everything came to be by His hand: and without him not even one thing that was created came to be.
The Life was in Him, and the Life is the Light of Men.
And the same Light shines in the darkness, and the darkness does not overcome it.
There was a man, sent from God whose Name was John.
He came as a witness to testify concerning the Light, so that every man might believe by means of Him.
He was not the Light, but a witness to testify concerning the Light.
He was the True Light which lighteth every man who came into the world.
He was in the world and the world was under his hand, and yet the world knew Him not.
He came to His own,and His own did not receive Him.

But those who received Him, to them He gave power to become Sons of God, especially to those who believed in His Name.
Those who are not of blood nor of the will of the flesh nor of the will of man, but born of God.
And the Word became flesh and dwelt among us, and we saw His glory like that of the First-born of the Father, full of grace and Truth.

P: Here endeth the Gospel.
R: Praise be to Thee, O Christ.

P: Be ye doers of the Word and not hearers only.

The Priest kisses the Book and replaces it upon the Altar. (If there is to be a Sermon it is inserted at this point in the Celebration of the Mass.)
The people stand and together with the Priest they recite THE CREDO.

P: Let us love one another that with one mind we many confess:
A: We believe in the Hidden Deity, Eternal, Absolute, manifesting through the Holy and Glorious Trinity, Father,Son and Holy Spirit,Co-equal and Co-eternal. We believe in God the Father from whom all worlds proceed, both visible and invisible.
And in one Lord, the Christ, the alone-born Son of God, begotten of His Father before all ages: God of God, Light of Light, Very God of Very God, begotten, not made, being of one substance with the Father, by Whom all forms were made (Here all could genuflect) Who for us men and for our salvation came down from the Mystery and was incarnate of the Holy Spirit through the Virgin Mother and was made man. (All rise) And was crucified also for us:

Under the veil of darkness He suffered and was buried. The third day He rose again and ascended into heaven, to assume the Robe of Light. And He shall come again with Glory to judge both the living and the dead: Whose kingdom shall have no end.
And we believe in the Holy Spirit, the Lord, and Giver of Life, Who proceedeth from the Father and the Son, Who with the Father and the Son together is worshipped and glorified, Who spake by His prophets in every age and clime. And we believe in the Communion of Saints and the Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church. We believe in the purification of the soul through many births and experiences. And we look to the Spiritual Resurrection of the Soul † and the life of Eternal Glory. Amen

The following may be substituted for the creed at the discretion of the celebrant and congregation.

We believe that God is Love, and Power, and Truth, and Light; that perfect justice rules the world; that all His sons and daughters shall one day reach His Feet, however far they stray. We hold the Fatherhood of God, and the Brotherhood of man; we know that we do serve Him best when best we serve our brother man. So shall His blessing rest on us, and peace † for evermore. Amen.

P: The Lord be with you.
R: And with Thy Spirit.

The people are seated. The Priest turns to the altar. He removes the burse and the veil from the Chalice. The burse he stands against the gradence to the left of the Altar. The veil is folded and placed to the right. The Priest lifts the Chalice and the paten and places them to the right outside of the corporal. All of these actions are during the prayer which follows:

OFFERTORIUM

P: Come Thou Holy Name of Christ, Name above all Names: Come Power from above and come Highest Gift: Thou knower of the Chosen's Mysteries, descend: Thou Who dost share in all noble striver's struggles: Come! Come Thou Who givest joy to all who are at one with Thee: Come and commune with us in this Eucharist which we are about to make in Thy Name, in the sacrament to which we have assembled at Thy Call!

The Priest takes the paten with the Host from the Chalice, he slips the Host from the paten onto the corporal then he places the paten under the corporal on the right, showing half of the paten which he covers with the purificator.

The Priest offers the Host:

P: We adore Thee, O God, Who art the source of all Life and Being, and we offer unto Thee this bread as the token of man's Divine Soul.

The Priest now blesses the wine and pours it into the Chalice. He blesses the water and mingles it with the wine in the Chalice.

P: As Thy Life is mingled with Celestial Water, so we now here on earth mingle water with this wine, praying Thee, O Lord, that we may evermore abide in Christ and He in us.

The Priest offers the Chalice:

P: We offer unto Thee, O Christ, this Chalice as a token of our union, which we offer before Thy Divine Majesty as a sacrifice of our minds, emotions and body to Thee to be a vehicle of Thy Divine Light.

THE SECOND CENSING

The censer is brought to the Priest who again puts incense into it and blesses it. He then genuflects at the centre of the Altar and with the censer makes the Sign of the Cross three times over the Oblations then three times completely encircles them with the censer in a Clock-wise motion, (when incense is not used, the above blessing of the Oblations is done by the Priest with his right hand, using the same Sign of the Cross and encircling motion) saying during this:

P: God the Father seen of none, God the Co-eternal Son and God the Holy Spirit who giveth us Life, pour forth Thy three-fold Powers into these our Oblations.

The Priest then genuflects again and censes the Altar as before. Still holding the censer, he says:
(When the censer is not used the two prayers which follow are ommitted, the Priest continuing immediately with the LAVABO)

P: We offer this incense unto Thee, O Lord, so do we offer Thee ourselves, body, soul and Spirit. As Thy Holy Angels encompass us, Thy people, with the Light of Thy Blessing, may they carry to Thee this our Offering.

As he hands the censer back to the server:

P: And may the Fire of Thy Love and the Flame of everlasting charity which Thou hast enkindled within us abide in our hearts.

The priests, clerics and choir are in turn censed. The people stand as the Thurifer approaches them, they bow before and after being censed and are then seated. While the people are being censed the Priest washes his hands at the right side of the Altar.

THE LAVABO

P: I will wash my hands of the impurities of the outer world that I may worthily perform this Eternal Sacrifice of the Life of God into the valley of darkness.
I will praise Thee, O Lord, among the Illumined Ones till the end of days that the Glory of Thy Gift may resound throughout all worlds.
Glory be to the Father and to the Son: and to the Holy Spirit.
A: As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be: World without end. Amen

ORATE FRATRES

P: Brethren, both visible and invisible, pray that our Sacrifice may be acceptable to God the Father Almighty.
R: May the Indwelling Lord accept the Sacrifice at thine hands and Illumine our lives in His Service.

P: We have laid before Thee, O Lord, this † bread and this † wine as channels for Thy Power and Light, in token of our Sacrifice of Praise and Thanksgiving: and now we offer and present unto Thee ourselves, our Souls and bodies, to be a holy and continual Sacrifice to Thee, to Whom be ascribed all honour and Glory, through Christ, our Lord in the unity of the Holy Spirit, throughout all Ages and Ages.

THE CANON OF THE MASS

P: The Lord be with you.
R: And with Thy Spirit.

The people kneel:

SURSUM CORDA

P: Lift up your hearts.
R: We lift them up unto the Lord.
P: Let us give thanks unto our Lord God.
R: It is very meet and right so to do.

P: It is very meet, right, and our bounden duty, that we should at all times and in all places give thanks unto Thee, O Lord, Holy Father, Almighty Everlasting God.
Therefore, with Angels and Archangels, with Thrones, Dominations, Principalities, Virtues, Powers, with Cherubim and Seraphim, and with all the Company of Heaven, we laud and magnify Thy Glorious Name, evermore praising Thee and saying:

SANCTUS and BENEDICTUS QUI VENIT

A: Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God of Hosts, heaven and earth are full of Thy Glory: Glory be to Thee, O Lord Most High. Blessed is He that cometh in the Name of the Lord, † Hosanna in the Highest. Amen.

All sing or, if there be no music, say together the Hymn VENI CREATOR. At the discretion of the Priest the first and the last verses may be used:

A: Come, Thou Creator Spirit blest,
And in our Souls take up Thy rest,
Come with Thy Grace and heavenly aid,
To fill the hearts which Thou hast made.

Great Paraclete to Thee we cry,
O Highest Gift of God most high;
O Living Fount, O Fire, O Love,
And sweet anointing from above.

Thou in Thy sevenfold gifts art known;
Thee, Finger of God's Hand, we own
The Promise of the Father, Thou
Who dost the tongue with Power endow.

Kindle our senses from above,
And make our hearts o'erflow with love;
With patience firm and virtue high
The weakness of our flesh supply.

All Glory while the ages run
Be to the Father and the Son,
Who gave us Life; the same to Thee
O Holy Ghost eternally. Amen.

The people are seated.
In the following PRAYER OF CONSECRATION the passages marked with brackets may be omitted at the discretion of the Priest. When this is done a slight pause must be made after the words 'Let us Pray' so that the congregation may join in the Prayer of Invocation. Also during this Prayer of the memorial for the living and the dead, the Priest should always SILENTLY name those for whom he has been asked to pray. The people should likewise at this moment mentallly pray for all those for whom they wish to remember.

PRAYER OF CONSECRATION

P: Wherefore, O most loving Father, we Thy servants do pray thee to receive † to purify † and hallow † these oblations as earthly channels for Thy wonderous Power and Might. We desire to offer this Holy Sacrifice first for Thy Holy Catholic Church Universal: for all Thy devoted servants of Light, likewise for all our Bishops, Clergy and faithful, and for all here present as also for those who are absent, remembering (Here name the Ruler) we do also call to mind (here insert Silently the names of the living) and all who in this transient life are in trouble, sorrow, need, sickness or any other adversity. Likewise do we offer it for (Here insert Silently the names of the dead) and all those Thy children whom it hath pleased Thee to deliver from the body of flesh that, freed from earthly toil and care, they may enjoy the Felicity of Thy Presence, evermore praising Thee in word and deed, O God everlasting, living and true. And we would also pray for those who are again about to enter this earthly life and likewise their parents to be.

Uniting in this joyful Sacrifice with Thy Holy Church throughout all the ages, we lift our hearts in adoration to Thee,O God the Son, consubstantial, co-eternal with the Father,Who,abiding unchangeable within Thyself, didst nevertheless, in the Mystery of Thy boundless Love and Thine Eternal Sacrifice, breathe forth Thine own Divine Life into Thy universe, and thus didst offer Thyself as the Lamb slain from the Foundation of the World, dying in very truth that we may live.

Omnipotent, all pervading, by that selfsame Sacrifice Thou didst continually uphold all creation, resting not by night nor day, working evermore through that most august Hierarchy of Thy Glorious Saints, Who live but to do Thy will as perfect channels of Thy wonderous Power, especially our beloved Master Jeshu, to Whom we ever offer heartfelt love and reverence.

Thou, O most dear and Holy Lord, hast in Thine ineffable wisdom deigned to ordain for us this Blessed Sacrament of Thy Love,that in it we may not only commemorate in symbol, that Thine eternal Oblation, but verily take part in it, and perpetuate thereby, within the limitations of time and space which veil our earthly eyes from the excess of Thy Glory, the enduring Sacrifice by which the world is nourished and sustained.

P: Let us pray.
The Priest and people say together:

A: We invoke Thee, O Light of Lights, Who art above every power of the Father, Thou who art called Light, and Spirit and Life; for Thou hast reigned in our bodies for evermore.

The Priest alone says, with his hands spread over the Offerings:

P: Wherefore, O Holy Lord, Father Almighty, we pray Thee to look down on and accept these gifts, which we Thy servants, Illumined Ones, do make unto Thee, in obedience to the Command of Thy most blessed Son, our Lord Christ.

The Priest puts his left hand on the Altar outside of the corporal whilst making the Sign of the Cross over the Offerings:

P: Which Oblations do Thou, O Father, deign with Thy Holy Spirit and Logos to † Bless, to † approve, and to † ratify that they may become for us His most Precious † Body and † Blood.

The people kneel:

THE CONSECRATION

The Priest takes up the Host:

P: Wherefore, following Him Who took bread and after He had given thanks unto Thee, God, His Almighty Father, He blessed it, break and gave it to His disciples, we do likewise † bless and break, saying with Him: Take and eat ye all of this, for
THIS IS MY BODY

The Priest then genuflects then raises the Host in both hands so that it is visible to the congregation. He genuflects again and then places the Host on the Altar and takes the Chalice:

P: In like manner as He had supped, He took also this noble Chalice and again giving thanks to Thee, blessed it and gave it to His disciples, we too † bless it, saying: Take and drink ye all of this, for THIS IS MY BLOOD

The Priest then genuflects again then raises the Chalice in both hands and again genuflects. He rises and says the following, covering the chalice.

P: As oft as ye shall do these things, ye shall do them for a memorial, for He said, 'Lo, I am with you always, even unto the consummation of the Aeon'.

The Priest with the people says or sings:

ADORE TE DEVOTE

A: Thee we adore, O Hidden Splendour, Thee
Who in Thy Sacrament dost deign to be;
We worship Thee beneath this earthly veil,
And here Thy Presence we devoutly hail.

The Priest rises and the people are seated.

P: Wherefore, O Lord and Heavenly Father, we Thy servants, bearing in mind the Ineffable Sacrifice of Thy Son, the Mystic and Cosmic Christ, the Mystery of the wonderous incarnation, the mighty resurrection and the triumphant ascension, do offer unto Thee, Holy Father, this the most precious gift which Thou hast bestowed upon us:

The Priest lays his left hand on the Altar, resting on the corporal whilst making the Sign of the Cross over the Offerings:

P: This pure † Host, this Holy † Host, this Glorious † Host, the Holy † Bread of Life everlasting and the † Chalice of Eternal Salvation.
This, O Father, do we present before Thee in token of our love and of the perfect Devotion and sacrifice of our minds and hearts to Thee, and we pray that our Oblation may be bourne to Thine Altar on high, there to be offered by the same, our Indwelling Lord,Him Who,as the eternal High Priest, forever offers Himself as the Eternal Sacrifice.

P: Let us pray.

The priest and the people say all together:

A: We praise Thee, O Father,
We give thanks to Thee, O Light: In whom darkness dwells not. Thou art our Word: Thou wast sent by the Father to dwell in us. Amen.

The Priest alone says:

P: And as Thou, Father, hath ordained that the Heavenly Sacrifice shall be mirrored here on earth through the ministry of mortal man, to the end that Thy holy people may be drawn more closely into fellowship with Thee, we do pray for him who sacrifices at this Altar, that, meetly celebrating the mysteries of the most Holy † Body and † Blood of the Christos (He makes the Sign of the Cross over himself) He may be † filled and illumined with Thy mighty Power and Blessing, O Lord of Light.
Likewise we pray Thee to sanctify Thy people here present as also those who are absent with these Thy heavenly gifts, and through these mysteries do Thou † Hallow, † quicken, and † bless them, that both in their hearts and in their lives they may show forth Thy Divine Life.

The Priest makes the Sign of the Cross with the Host three times over the Chalice.

P: All these things do we ask, O Father, in the name and through the mediation of God, the Eternal Son, for we acknowledge and confess with our hearts and minds that † by Him were all things made, yea, all things both in heaven and earth: † with Him as the one Indwelling Life do all things exist, and † in Him as the transcendent glory all things live and move and have their being.

He then moves the Host in the Sign of the Cross holding if horizontally, twice between the Chalice and his breast:

P: To whom with Thee, O Mighty † Father, in the Unity of the Holy † Spirit, be ascribed all honour and Glory, through- out the Aeons of Aeons.
R: Amen.

The Priest holds the Host over the Chalice and raises both to the level of his eyes. He then takes the paten in his right hand and holds it upright at right angles to the Altar, its edge resting on the corporal:

P: Here do we give thanks unto Thee, O Father, for the wonderous grace and virtue declared in the Holy Sophia, the Holy Philo, the Ever-Radiant Mother, the Seven Mighty Spirits before the Throne, the Watchers, the Saints, the Holy Ones, the Glorious Assembly of Just Men made Perfect who have been the choice vessels of Thy Grace and a shining Light unto many generations.

The Priest makes the Sign of the Cross over himself with the paten and then slips the paten under the Host:

P: And † join with Them in sacrifice before Thy Great White Throne whence flow all Love and Light and Blessing through all the worlds which Thou hast made and which Thou dost sustain.

Taking up the Host the Priest holds it over the Chalice:

P: O Son of God, Who manifesteth Thyself within the Divine Pleroma and within the hearts of men and yet art one and indivisible, in token of Thy great descent into the valley of darkness

On the word 'REND' the Priest breads the Host in half over the Chalice and then breaks off a small particle with which he makes the Sign of the cross three times over the Chalice and finally at the words 'one with the Father' on the word 'One' drops the particle into the Chalice.

P: We REND this Thy Holy Body that we may live, praying that by this action ordained from of old, Thy † Will, Thy † Love and Thy † Consciousness, which Thou dost give us in this Holy Sacrifice, may be spread abroad upon Thy world: and as Thou, O Christ, art ever made known to Thy disciples in the breaking of bread, so may Thy many servants know themselves to be one with Thee, even as Thou are ONE with the Father.
R: Amen.

The Priest genuflects and then covers the Chalice.

P: Let us pray.

The Priest and people say together:

THE LORD'S PRAYER

A: Our universal God, Father of All
Thy Name is Holy. We must not take it in vain.
Earthly kingdoms are temporal. But Thy kingdom is everlasting.
Thy wish is that our lives on earth be harmonious as it is harmonious in heaven.
Thy Divine Presence supplies our needs from day to day.
When we forgive our neighbours we receive Thy forgiveness.
Thy Light and Thy Truth leadest us to the true Path of Light.
Thou protectest us from the dangers of this Life.
For Thou art the Mighty Ruler of the Universe.
Earthly kingdoms are the work of Thy Hands.
Thou art the source of eternal Power and Truth.
Thy Majesty and Thy Glory fill the universe.
For Thou art from everlasting to everlasting.
All creations acknowledge and adore Thee.
Amen.

The Priest alone says:

P: O Indwelling Christos,Who dost ever say to Thy disciples: 'Peace I leave with you, My peace I give unto you', grant us that peace and unity which are agreeable to Thy Holy Will and Commandment.

P: Let us pray.

The Priest and people say together

A: Glory to Thee, Father.
Glory to Thee, Word.
Glory to Thee, Holy Spirit.

P: The Power of the Lord be always with you.
R: And with Thy Indwelling Spirit.

P: O Thou Who in this adorable Sacrament givest us a living memorial and pledge of Thy marvellous love for mankind, and dost therein graciously draw us into wonderful communion with Thee, grant us to receive the Sacred Mysteries of Thy Body and Blood that our Souls may be filled and lifted into the immensity of Thy Love, and that, being filled with a high endeavour, we may ever be mindful of Thine Indwelling Presence and breathe forth the fragrance of a Holy Life.
R: Amen.

THE COMMUNION

The people kneel and the following prayer is said SILENTLY by all:

A: Unto Thee, O Perfect One, the Lord and Lover of men, do we commend our life and hope. For Thou art the Heavenly Bread, the Life of the whole world: Thou art in all places and endurest all things, the Treasury of endless good and the well of infinite compassion.

The Priest genuflects and rising takes up the Host. He makes the Sign of the Cross with it and then he consumes it and again genuflects. He removes the pall from the Chalice and genuflects. He raises the Chalice and makes the Sign of the Cross with it then drinks the wine. Covering the Chalice he once more genuflects.

The Priest takes the Ciborium and uncovers it. He takes a small Host from it and holding it over the Ciborium he reveals it to the people:

P: Ye that desire to partake of the Divine Light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world, draw nigh and receive this most Precious Gift.
P: † May the Communion of these Holy Mysteries be to the healing of both Soul and body.

The Priest makes the Sign of the cross over them with the Host.
The Communion is now distributed to the people.

P: The Body of our Lord Christ bring thee into Life Eternal.

P: The Blood of our Beloved Christ bring Thee into the knowledge of Love and Truth.

P: Remembering that as He cometh to His own, see that ye who have partaken of the Divine Light be not of those who receive Him not.

R: We do promise with our whole Being.

The Priest cleans the Chalice with wine, wine and water and then with water alone. He then veils the Chalice and moves the book to the right side of the Altar. He then says:

P: Under the veil of earthly things now have we communion with the Indwelling and Cosmic Christ, now we behold Him and we shall walk the earth illumined with Divine Power.

Therefore, let us in our lives manifest the Light within which has been granted us and increased by our participation in this offering of this great Sacrifice of His Life into the valley of darkness for our sakes.
R: Amen.

COMMUNIO

The people stand and sing or say with the Priest:

A: Amen, blessing and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honour and power, and might, be unto our God for ever and ever.
R: Amen.

POST COMMUNIO

The people are seated:

P: Let us pray:
We praise Thee, O Father of All, Father of The Light: We praise Thee, O Boundless Light more excellent than all the boundless ones: We praise Thee, O uncontainable Light surpassing all uncontainables: We praise Thee,O Ineffable Light, before all ineffables. We praise Thee, O Christ, for Thy strength and love whereby we may be renewed both of Soul and body.
R: Amen.
P: The Lord be with you.
R: And with Thy Spirit.

P: Let us pray:
Let the Light of the Divine Soul illumine us that we may be guarded from distress and want.

That all our days be perfect, holy and peaceful.
That what is good and profitable for our Souls and for the peace of the world may be granted us.
That the rest of our lives may be spent in the Knowledge of Truth.
So let the Light of the Divine Soul illumine us.

R: Amen.

P: Ita, missa est.
R: Deo gratias.

The people kneel while the Priest gives the final Benediction:

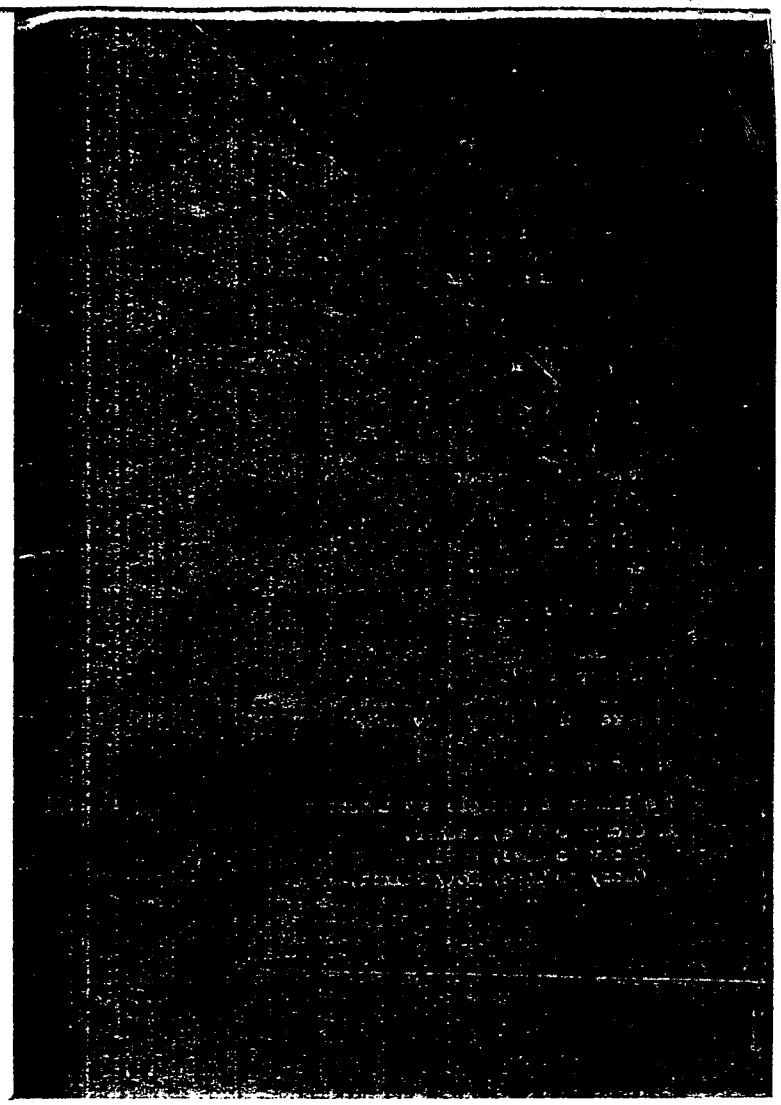
P: The Peace of God which passeth all understanding, go with you. There is a Power that makes all things new; It lives and moves in those who know the Self as one. May that peace brood over you, that Power uplift you into the Light, may it keep your hearts and minds in the knowledge and Love of God, and of His Son, Christ our Lord.

P: May the Blessing of God Almighty, the Father, † the Son and the Holy Spirit, be amongst you and remain with you always.

P: Grow in Grace, and in the knowledge and Love of God, and of His Son, Christ our Lord.

The Priest turns to the Altar, makes the Sign of the Cross and then genuflects.

He leaves the sanctuary and the Mass is ended.



T H E M A S S

Its explanantion according to the teachings of the Church of the Ascension

The Ritual of Sacrifice, commonly called the Mass, is one of the most ancient rituals in existence. According to our Mentors it can be traced as far back as 9 to 10 thousand years. It was, supposedly, originated by the Priest King Melchisedek who is the equivelant to Sanat Kumara in the Eastern Mysteries. The content has undergone many changes during the time and each Hierophant adapts the existing material to suit his own ethnic needs and conditions during the changing periods of man's understanding. The Principle of 'self-sacrifice', however, remains continual.

Let us remember too that this ritual can only represent the exoteric needs of those sharing in the ritual. The Threefold Doctrine of the Manifested Godhead is adaptable to all human needs and when the disciple is ready he, or she, is then prepared to understand the Fourfold Doctrine of the Exoteric Science. Thus, when the disciple has been successful in the transaction of 'sacrificing' his mortality to that Immortal Principle, he, or she, lives forever in the new dimension of unlimited processes.

The opening Invocation represents an acknowledgement of the Threefold outworking of the Manifested Godhead in the realm of human affairs and numerically and geometrically as the Triune Principle and Pyramid of Growth and Transformation.

When a person 'crosses' himself, or herself, they are acknowledging their participation in the outpouring Principle of Being. An equilateral four-armed cross is made in the process. The person touches the Forehead - the area of knowledge and wisdom - down to the heart, the centre of Love and all Manifestation. Then to the Left Shoulder representing one's devotion and pursuance of the Divine Principles, and finally to the Right Shoulder of movement and power or energy signifying one's intention to act on these principles - then back to the centre position.

Every action or movement represented in this Service acts as a 'textbook' or visual and 'physical' symbol of one's relationship and intentions with regard to one's spiritual life. Therefore, in proportion to one's involvement in the ritual will he, or she, gain the spiritual nourishment necessary to make a 'break-through' from the third to the fourth dimension of human experience. Richard, Duc de Palatine writes: "In such a specially prepared sanctuary or temple, and provided that the chemical and psyche of the priest are correctly aligned, then the communication between the Immortal Soul and the mortal personality, or God and Man, can be effectively consummated upon whatever wave-length desired by the people or by the celebrant. Such collective energy will be generated by the people by their metrical nature (the ability to think with definiteness). This thought-energy will be transformed into geometrical forms according to the thought projected that they truly believed. Then the metrical and geometrical energies can be syntonicized into forms within the mathematical world." This means that as the needs of each participant are different each one can receive according to his, or her, needs.

The Three Steps to the Altar (made by the Priest) represent the sum total of outpouring eternity in its successive stages. We each stand at the point in time and space in relation to what we have built in the past and whatever we are doing now we are building for the future. The three steps also represent the Physical, Mental and Spiritual faculties within the human being to be purified in readiness for the down-pouring of the Holy Spirit or Divine faculty of the right-use-ness of our capacity to serve our fellows.

The use of the Water Sprinkler symbolises the intention of all those present to prepare themselves for the Sacrifice that is to come. The prayers and invocations indicate the desires of the people.

The Prayer for the participation of all the Regions of Earth, Water, Fire and Air reveals the desire of all those present to be at one with every atom of creation.

The Canticle which follows is a further approach in the preparation of the seeming isolated self to make the Sacrifice of itself to the greater Solar Force. It reminds one that we should regard ourselves as citizens of the real Kingdom of Spirit and that we are aliens only in the world of unrealities. Unless that Divine Life and Power (the Christos) within us is allowed full possession of our being and that this Power within us alone is allowed to perform Its own function within us we profit nothing for the Ritual says, "Except the Lord build the House (the heavenly state of awareness within one's experience): Their labour is but lost that build it." We are reminded here of the statement made by Jesus in the Gospel of Matthew chapter 7 verses 21-25.

Censing in the Church is a further act of inducing a sense of Purity and the burning of the incense can also represent the material substance being transformed to spirit by the Flame of Love.

The introit is a further cementation of one's acknowledgement of the Allness of God for this is followed by the intention of the disciple to devote himself, or herself, to the end that God's will be done in him, or her. By purifying the lower nature the vision of Perfection becomes as one beholding creation in an "unspotted mirror" wherein Life is beheld as the Crystal City - the eternal state of God's unfoldment. The Priest's blessing is the confirmation that all the right intentions of the people are made not in vain but are 'rewarded' according to the Law of Balance.

Next comes the "Kyries" which are an invocation - seeking aid from above to help the faltering steps of humans to discover their divine potential.

The Gloria in Excelsis is a beautiful hymn of devotion and helps greatly in preparing ones-self to acquire the right attitude for the reception of the Divine Blessings to come. One can use this hymn on separate occasions as a meditation and as one dwells on the meaning and import of each statement a beautiful sense of awareness can be gained.

Next we go into a prayer of the conjoined heart and head - the mental and spiritual focal points of our physical sense. The prayer "Holy art thou....." is very old and comes from the Hermetic teachings put forth in the Egyptian temples. Continuing into the "Give ear unto us....." plunges us deep into the essence of the Serapean and Gnostic understanding of God and His Creation.

The Priest then indicates further meanings of the Great Mystery. He represents the Lamp (or Lighthouse) to the people. He is also the mirror in which each participant sees his, or her, own reflected thoughts, passions, hopes and wishes for fulfilment. Inasmuch as one understands that the Very God in His Complete Totality (the Holy Pleroma) so will one perceive the Light of Truth in all Being and receive light accordingly in relationship to one's degree of understanding. The Epistle which follows gives the exoteric interpretation of Agape the Real Nature and Essence of the Whole Universe. To equate this at the human level one should follow the guidelines given by St Paul for these are the basic qualities required before one can reach Perfection.

The Gospel follows next and here we observe that the Priest and the people together make another sign of the Cross. This represents the further and deeper purpose of understanding the descent of the Christ Principle to this level. The correct way (not quite shown in the ritual) should be that a Cross is first made with the Thumb of the Right Hand - the symbol of active power entering this plane - over the Forehead the centre of the Mental level, Intelligence and the Storehouse of All-Knowledge. Secondly over the Heart - the area of habitation of the Real Self - The One made Perfect in Agapé - the place where the Solar God (Christos) enters the Human Temple, and finally on the Lips the Door of the Revealed Word. The Gospel then following contains the mystery of the word of God with respect to Its outworking in the individual as a potential Son of God. The Doctrine of the Word (or Logos) is as old as the Mysteries themselves.

Until the Christos descends into our personal experience we know little of the Spiritual life. The mystic poet Angelus Silesuis says:

"Though Christ a thousand times in Bethlehem be born
And not within thyself, thy soul will be forlorn,
The Cross in Golgotha thou lookest to in vain
Unless within thyself it be set up again."

When the Christ takes over our lives we express the word in the flesh.

In the ritual that we use, the Credo, or statement of beliefs follows. Some ritualists state that the saying of the Creed is an essential part of the Ritual but we prefer to leave this open and not obligatory for it is felt by the Elder Brother that one should not be forced to state, publicly, one's personal feelings in respect to their inner beliefs. We try to avoid dogmatism as much as possible. However, should our priests feel that they would feel easier when they themselves are performing the ritual, should tell those present at the commencement of the Mass.

Before we enter further into explaining the Ritual let us digress a little to take a broad view of the Sacred Vessels used in the ceremony.

The two main vessels are the Chalice and the Paten. The Chalice represents the personality of man which receives the Wine of Inspiration and Love from above. The Paten symbolises the Christ within and the Bread symbolises the Life of God which is seemingly broken to be shared among each individual. The Life of God is also the Light which "lighteth every man who came into the world". The Paten then is the vessel from which the word, or life of God, is divided and shared amongst all men.

In the book "The Gospel of the Holy Twelve" Jesus is given to say, "I am the true Bread, I am the living Vine, they that come to me shall never hunger, and they that believe on me shall never thirst. Verily I say unto you, except ye eat the flesh and drink the blood of God, ye have no life in you."

Our sole purpose in life is to express God. Until we understand this we will keep trying to do that which should be done THROUGH us by the power of Love within us. We will continue to make mistakes until we are able to sacrifice ourselves fully to Love's own purpose.

Again we can observe the symbology of various vessels used in ritualistic forms. Firstly, one could liken the Witches Cauldron as the vessel for the physical or basic human passions. The Crucible of the Alchemists representing the Mental level of science and the arts etc., and the Chalice as the recipient of the Spiritual qualities. Here again is shown the three-level approach.

The Offertorium or Offering. As the priest removes the Burse and Veil from the Offerings he says the prayer, "Come Thou Holy Name of Christ....." He then continues with the offering of the Host and this is followed by the mixing of the Wine and Water in the Chalice. Water can symbolise almost any spiritual or physical quality according to the requirements of interpretation.

The use of Incense in religious ceremonies has persisted since pre-flood days. Our Patriarchs saw its value as a meditative aid and as a psychological help in achieving a sense of uplifted awareness. In a properly Consecrated Sanctuary Incense helps one to adjust one's thoughts.

During the Lavabo the Priest washes his hands as a further symbol, along with the intention, of the absolute purity needed in one's-self before Sacred Objects and Human Vessels can partake of Divine Things. We should remember the terrifying results that followed the unrighteous ones, mentioned in the Old Testament, when they unlawfully meddled with the Sacred Ark.

The Priest continues his "work" of "changing" the concept of material things into Spiritual Realities. The frequent crossing over the elements helps to bring the Realisation to bear that the said elements become the meeting point, or doorway, between the seen and the unseen worlds.

The Cross, in our teaching, symbolises the "Crossing over" from seeming matter to spirit. In the Acts of John the Christ indicates that "Those that are above the Cross are One and within the Mystery. Those that are below the Cross are many and symbolises the lower nature. Christ Jesus tells us that the Cross set up is a Cross of Light showing the way from the fourfold elemental world to the One-ness of the Godhead. I am the way, the truth and the life." It is not a man, or individual teacher that we follow but a way of life potent with the Love of God, Agapé.

The people should also come to feel at one with the Priest and share with him the attitude of acknowledging the Ever-present Christ - or the Presence of the Perfect State of Man's Being at One with God.

To join in the Sursum Corda, the Sanctus and Veni Creator can be very unlifting indeed if one can project his individuality and feel at one with the Whole.

The Prayer of Consecratum helps one to feel at one with all states of man's being - the Church and the People - one's near and dear ones - those that have gone before and our Beloved Master within. The help of the Hierarchy is invoked so that one can be aware of the All-Presence of the Holy Pleroma. Just as Abraham was able to participate in the Holy Mysteries with the Priest-King Melschisedek so do we partake in a mystery that was begun at the foundation of the world. In a little book "The Esoteric Secret of Jesus" published by the Institute of Advanced Thinking it states, "The proper interpretation of the transubstantiation based upon ontological principle (ontology - the science of being) defines the entire process as a purely symbolic representation which, when understood by enlightened students of Truth, enables one to actively participate in the beauty and harmony of our Ageless Universe. "Eat my body, drink my blood" really means to accept the entire body of Infinite Being Life as our rightful heritage here on earth. "This, then, is the New Communion.....not one of bread and wine but a very real communication with all that is in the Universe. It is an unbroken, continuous correspondence between you and the Reality of all Life. It goes beyond appearances to a state of awareness where all negation falls away, error vanishes, illness ceases, and peace prevails".

From the findings of modern science and psychology the author of this book points out the whole secret of the New Life as taught by Jesus and the Patriarchs of old and this agrees with what our Ekklesia teaches, it states, "You must first set aside every human belief that you hold about yourself and your Universe. Nothing Less than this "fasting" from human belief will suffice".

The indications shown here touches upon the mysteries taught in the Disciplina Arcani - the Inner, or Hidden Church, of the Ancient Priest-Kings - the Order of Melchisedek and this work is still carried on.

Observing the actions of the Priest one should understand that much of the symbology shows the difficulty in making the transaction of the material conception into a spiritual realisation. The material world is but a shadow of the Real World and unless one can open his, or her, inner vision there is no hope of understanding spiritual things. Thus, is the Mass a device - a ways and means of helping this change to come about - of one's sincere hope and passionate desire that this change can come about in one's own being.

When we arrive at the part wherein the Priest "Rends" the Host it reveals the sheer desparation of man to return home - to find himself once again in the abode of Love from whence he came. The remembrance of the uniting of all Particles - of all seeming separations - of the great sense of being apart - all are bonded in the Great Universal Love of our Father-Mother parent.

The "Lord's Prayer" reminds us that we cannot receive something for nothing. Only under Divine Law do we receive in like manner as we give of ourselves. We are not free from the responsibilities of our own actions until we relinquish our human traits voluntarily. "When we forgive our neighbours we receive Thy forgiveness".

The Communion now takes place. The Priest takes the Consecrated Bread and Wine. He then distributes the Elements firstly to the Servers then to the Clergy in order of rank, then finally to the people.

Two ways of receiving the Bread are accepted in our Church. Firstly by partly opening the mouth and by allowing the tongue to protrude a little so that the Priest can apply the Host directly to the mouth - or by placing the right hand on top the the left hand, in prayer fashion, so that the Priest can place the Host in the palm of the right hand, enabling the cummunicant to transfer the bread to the mouth himself, or herself.

The whole benefit of receiving the Communion lies in exactly how much one can relate to what is taking place in relationship to Cosmic Principles. As we have explained earlier the true Purpose of the Mass depends upon whether or not one can see this process as a help to one's understanding.

The prayer "Under the veil of earthly things....." reveals that we now (already) have "communion with the Indwelling and Cosmic Christ". The great "Sacrifice of His Life" for our sakes can be understood only by the Illumined Ones - the true Sons of God - those that have gone before and who continually "lay down their lives" until the whole of mankind comes unto its own.

In the final Benediction it gives the blessing of that "Power that makes all things new". This alone is the Great Power of Divine Love (Agapé). Of this Power Its secret and mystery is known, at this moment in time, only by those who have dared to become Its Instrument in the hope that one day all men might share in Its Great Glory.

* * * * * * * * * *

As a help to Scriptural Interpretation we have placed a list of the names of the Disciples with their allegorical meanings:

Simon Peter	-	The analytical mind
Andrew	-	Faith and inquiry
James	-	Hope and progressiveness
John	-	Love and philosophy
Philip	-	Courage and forcefulness
Bartholomew	-	Perseverance
Thomas	-	Intellectual truth seeking
James Alpheus	-	Modesty and receptiveness
Simon Zelotes	-	Gentleness and attentiveness
Judas (brother of James)	-	Broadmindedness
Matthew	-	Critical deliberation
Judas	-	Prudence

Another list gives the following:

Peter	(faith)	pituitary gland
Andrew	(courage)	sacral region of spine
James	(wisdom)	solar plexus
John	(love)	heart
Philip	(power)	larynx
Bartholomew	(inspiration)	pineal gland
Matthew	(will)	right temple
Thomas	(understanding)	left temple
Simon	(zeal)	modulla oblongata
Thaddeus	(harmony)	base of spine
James the Lesser	(order)	umbilicus
Judas	(life)	pubic area (sex)

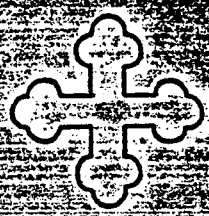
* * * * * * * * * *

Another useful anagram: A dam
D avid
A aron
M elchisedek

* * * * * * * * * *

Presiding Bishop

SANCTUARY OF THE HOLY SHEKINAH
3437 Alma Street, Suite 23
Alma Plaza Shopping Center
Palo Alto, California 94306
(415) 494-7412



The Gnostic Holy Eucharist

Sanctuary of the Holy Shekinah

"Who is this that comes,
fair as the Moon, resplendent as the Sun, terrible as an army with banners?"

THE GNOSTIC MYSTERIES

THE HOLY EUCHARIST
(Rite of the Bridal Chamber)

Prepared for the use of the
ECCLESIA GNOSTICA MYSTERIORUM
by The Most Reverend Rosa Miller Presiding Bishop of the Ecclesia Gnostica Mysteriorum and Hierophant of the Order of Mary Magdalene

INVOCATION

P. Out of the Fullness came He,
Who, without speaking, yet spake His name,
and it was unknown to all but Him.

And She Whose womb is the gateway to all the worlds.

In Thy name, O most Holy One, Whom we affectionately call Father, and in that of Thy Son, Who bridges the worlds, and of Her, Thy celestial Bride and Charming Heart to the heavens and earth alike,

C. We gather + ourselves for the eternal sacrifice. Amen.

ASPERGES

P. All Encompassing Weaver, Whose fingers ceaselessly weave the fabric of the universe, send forth Thy holy and beloved angels.

C. Amen.

P. In Thy strength, O Lord, do we command all the powers of chaos to wither unto nothingness, that they shall not abide, and that our temples within and our temples without may emerge as strong pure vessels to contain the eternal mystery as it unfolds on earth.

C. Amen.

CANTICLE

P. O great Mother of Compassion, holy Sophia:
It is Thou Who art come forth from the Aeons and givest grace to the realm of the Father.
Thou Who couldst not bear to see Thy children lost.
Thou Who gavest us the fire of life.
Thou Who gavest us comfort and joy.
Thou Who hast suffered blindness that we might see.
And Thou Who by Thine anguish didst call forth Thy beloved Consort, the Christ.

P. & C. The sweetness of Thy honey is on our lips and Thou hast enkindled our hearts. In our love and great gratitude, we build a spiritual temple, both within ourselves and in this sanctuary, dedicated to Thee for the mystery of completion.

CONFITEOR

P. & C. I have been apart and I have lost my way. The archons have taken my vision. At times I am filled with Thee, but often I am blind to Thy Presence when all I see is this world of form. My ignorance and blindness are all I have to offer but these I give to Thee holding back nothing. And in my hours of darkness when I am not even sure there is a Thou, hearing my call, I still call to Thee with all my heart. Hear the cry of my voice, clamoring from this desert, for my soul is parched and my heart can barely stand this longing.

BLESSING

P. In the name of the Mystery of the Fullness that hath existed before all beginnings: eternal and redeeming Logos: and Holy Spirit, celestial Bride and Revealer of the Mysteries concealed: Be blessed + and purified that ye may overcome the powers of the archons of the world and be as One.

GLORIA
(Optional)

P. Gloria in excelsis Deo.

P. & C. Glorious is Thy Presence O most holy One and blessed is Thy peace among the creatures of earth.

We greet Thee, forever present, forever unknown.
We welcome Thee in this altar, forever without, forever within. Amen.

COLLECTS

P. Glory to Thee, Father.
C. AMEN!
P. Glory to Thee, Word; Glory to Thee, Grace.
C. AMEN!
P. Glory to Thee, Spirit; Glory to Thee, Holy One; Glory to Thy Glory.
C. AMEN!
P. We praise Thee, O Father; we give thanks to Thee, O Light, wherein dwelleth no darkness.
C. AMEN!

(Collect of the Day)

P. Thus saith the Logos: I am a lamp to thee who beholdest Me.
C. Amen.
P. I am a mirror to thee who perceivest Me.
C. Amen.
P. I am a door to thee who knockest at Me.
C. Amen.
P. I am a way to thee, a wayfarer.
C. Amen.
P. See thyself in Me Who speak, and when thou hast seen what I do, keep silence on My Mysteries. In Me know thou the word of wisdom. What I am now seen to be, that I am not; but what I am thou shalt see when thou comest.
C. Amen.

READING
(Optional)

GRADUAL

P. And The Logos answered: "They say I came for all, but in truth I came for Her Who came for all. For it had come to pass that there were those who had lost their way and, lacking in spark, could not return unto the Fullness; seeing this, She came unto them, giving Her life to the depths of matter. And in truth She did suffer and become blind. But our Father, sensing Her anguish, sent Me forth, being of Him, so that She might see and We be as One again.
"Though they see it not, it is She, the tender Mother of Mercy, Who is the great redeemer."

GOSPEL

P. Unto you be the Beauty and the Grace.

C. And may the world be filled with Their Mystery.

P. A Reading from the Sacred Writings according to N....

C. Glory be to Thee, O Lord.

(Reading from the Sacred Writings)

P. Here endeth the reading of the Sacred Writings.

C. Praise be to Thee, O Christ;
Praise be to Thee, O holy Sophia.

P. And with open hearts may ye proceed.

OFFERTORIUM

P. Eternal Presence, Whose slightest touch is ecstasy to creatures and Gods alike, we accept that of which, by the nature of this planet, we are composed, and in our great gratitude, we offer this bread unto Thee, as we, likewise, offer ourselves.

As Thy Spirit would move the heart of every being, now we move water within this wine, and they shall move as one.

We are aflame in Thee, O Love Divine, and offer unto Thee this water and wine, as we offer that which giveth us life. It is Thou Who gavest us the spark. It is to Thee that we return.

C. Amen.

P. Come Thou, holy name of Christ, name above all names; come power from above; come Perfect Mercy; come Highest gift!

Thou, Mother of Compassion, come. Come, Spouse of Him, the Man; come Thou Revealer of the Mysteries concealed; Thou Mother of the Seven Mansions, come, Who in the eighth hast found Thy rest.

INVOCATION TO THE HOLY SPIRIT

CENSING

LAVABO

CANON

P. Hear the words of the immortal Logos:
"Gather all my limbs which, since the foundation of the world, have been scattered abroad in this aeon, and reunite them together and receive them into the Light!

C. AMEN! AMEN! AMEN!

P. Unto you be the Grace.

C. She came for us.

P. Lift up your hearts and let us awaken the Powers of Heaven and Earth.

C. Let us give thanks.

PREFACE

P. We invoke the dwellers in the waters; of all the rivers, the lakes, and the seas.
We invoke the dwellers in the earth; beneath the earth, the rocks, the plants and all their seeds, flowers, and fruits.
We invoke the dwellers in the fire: fires within the earth, fires of the stars and planets, fires of the sun: all kin to the fires of my being.
We invoke the dwellers of the air: the dwellers in the first Aleph, the nous within all things.
And we invoke That which is no thing—That which the mind cannot grasp nor comprehend, but only respond in ecstasy and awe: Here present now, and forever.
And together with all the Hierarchies and Kingdoms of the Heavens and the Earth, we greet Thee with one voice, saying:

SANCTUS
(Sung-optional)

P. Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God of Hosts: heaven and earth are full of Thy glory: glory be to Thee, O Lord most high. Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord. Hosanna + in the highest. Amen.

PRAYER FOR THE WORLD

P. We offer this holy Mystery, O Lord Most High, for the sake of all the creatures of the world; and we beseech Thee, beloved of our hearts, to give them Thy protection and care that they may enjoy the grace of Thy Presence.
That forests and waters may sing the joy of Thy name;
that sands and deserts may join the hymn of nature;
that animals may live in peace and compassion; that rulers may be filled with wisdom and that all the countries of the world may find harmony with those within and those without;
that the people may find relief of all their pains and attain to knowledge of Thy Love and Beauty; that those whose bodies have died may live in the Light of Thy Gnosis; that through Thy divine Grace and Logos we may, with all the kingdoms of nature, join in the chorus of the angels. Amen.

EPIKLESIS

P. Thy holy Sophia extended Her garment to those who had no eyes nor ears. She gave with abandon, and the archons, desiring Her, engulfed Her in their density: and rendered Her blind.
But the Logos came from beyond the stars. He, the living bridge, came unto Her and, with a touch, restored Her sight.

In the Mystery of the radiant Mother of the World, and of Her Consort, the Christ, we beseech Thee, O Divine Origin, beyond all thought or description, to accept these gifts which we humbly offer unto Thee. As Thou dost bless Their union, we ask Thee, in Thy name and Theirs, to bless, to approve, and to sanctify our offerings that they may become Their most precious Body and Blood.

CONSECRATION

P. The Living Vessels of the Unknown Father, renewing the eternal mystery of Their Presence among the children of the earth, lifted the veils of appearances and blessing the bread gave themselves to the world saying:
Take and eat, for

THIS IS MY BODY

And lifting the chalice up to the heavens They invoked the blessing of the Nameless One, Unknown Father. So do we bless and in one voice say with them: Take and drink, for this is the blood of all the slain Gods and Goddesses since the beginning of time. Take and drink, for

THIS IS MY BLOOD

And in consummation of this Mystery, we reunite Their elements, as is the will of the One Who sent Them. Amen.

HYMN

P. & C. O glorious Mystery! Heaven's holy Tremors resound on earth. For in Thy reunion Thou hast come, the Two-in-One. Now in His eyes will shine Thy Glory, and in Her eyes the wonder of life regained: the ensouled and the ensouler, Face to Face and sealed by the bridge to the Most High.

P. For the Lord did everything in a mystery: a Baptism + and a Chrism, + a Eucharist + and a Bridal + Chamber.

SALUTATION OF PEACE

P. In the name of the Logos, ever present, ever saying:
Peace I give you,
My Peace I give unto you,
not as the world giveth it,
but as I give it unto you.

P. Unto you be the Beauty and the Grace.
C. And may the world be filled with Their Mystery.

COMMUNION

P. & C. As Thou gavest Thyself, Body and Blood, so too I offer myself wholly unto Thee, O Christ: my body and my blood, to transform as Thou wilt, that Thy Mystery be completed in me.

P. Hear the words of the holy Bride:
I have loved you and longed to give you life.

C. Fill us with Thy Grace, O Holy Spirit, that we not partake of this Sacrament in vain. Amen.

(The celebrant takes communion)

P. Come, enter the Bridal Chamber and receive the most holy Mystery of completion.

Ye are all welcome to partake of holy Communion regardless of your religious backgrounds.

P. The Body and Blood of the Two-in-One keep thee in life eternal. Amen.

P. Of the precious Mystery ye have partaken: enshrine it with your love; it is the treasure of the far-off worlds, the gift of the divine Bridegroom. Forsake it not.

C. We will sing the glory of its Presence, for we have been filled with life.

ABLUTIONS

P. I have recognized myself and gathered myself together from all sides. I have sown no children to the ruler of this world, but have torn up his roots; I have gathered together my limbs that were scattered abroad and I know thee who thou art.
C. AMEN! AMEN! AMEN!

POST COMMUNION

P. For the Logos danceth.
C. AMEN!
P. And the Sophia danceth.
C. AMEN!
P. The Ogdoad playeth to our dancing.
C. AMEN!
P. The Dodecad danceth above us.
C. AMEN!
P. The Heptad danceth with us.
C. AMEN!
P. & C. Yea, and we all dance the dance. He who danceth not knoweth not what is being done.

DISMISSAL

P. The Mystery is complete, the rite is ended, and the hierarchies of heaven now depart in joy and peace.

C. Thanks be to all the hierarchies of heaven and to God Who sent them to us.

BLESSING

P. May that glorious Mystery of the Two-in-One, the eternal and boundless love of Christ and Sophia, fill your hearts and minds that ye may carry into the world the sweet fragrance of Life Eternal.

C. Amen.

Please Do Not Remove From Church

Copyright (c) 1984 Rosa Miller
Revised edition
Copyright (c) 1988 Rosa Miller
All rights reserved.

THE GNOSTIC MYSTERY OF THE EUCHARIST

AFTERWORD

Almost two thousand years ago two archetypal and historical figures re-enacted and consumated the eternal mystery of redemption. According to the records of the Order of Mary Magdalene, before the Christ and Mary Magdalene came together they each received the Mysteries at the hands of the last remaining hierophants of the ancient and secret order. The doors to the old dispensation were closed and theirs was the task to open the next path of initiation to the world.

The forces of chaos, threatened by the sanity and wholeness offered to humanity, increased the fury of their onslaught and the world was submerged into a reductionistic, unbalanced form of thinking that generally crippled the creative, intuitive capabilities of understanding of even those thought of as great thinkers.

Just as with the records of orthodox Christianity, or most history, we can never totally ascertain the veracity of this story; however, its mythological and archetypal truth stands alone, whether it ever happened historically or not.

In the present form of this ritual we have sought to restore this balance as it was meant from the beginning. We have based it on the form used for centuries by the Order of Mary Magdalene; however, this ritual was written especially for the Ecclesia Gnostica Mysteriorum.

We have quoted from the following gnostic gospels: Acts of John, Acts of Thomas, Gospel of Philip, and Book of the Great Logos. These were taken from the uncopyrighted, 1906 edition of Fragments of a Faith Forgotten. We have also quoted, in the Gradual, from the Chronicles of Joseph of Arimathea, one of the secret documents preserved in the Order of Mary Magdalene.

At last we can present a mystery rite that is not masculine or feminine in its polarity, but that equally combines both elements. May its transformative, initiatory power bring us into an integrated whole, as it was intended since the beginning. May we all return to the One.

ROSA MYSTICA DEI GRA: EPISCOPA: GNOST: MCMLXXXI

†Rosa Miller Cathedral-Sanctuary of the Holy Shekinah
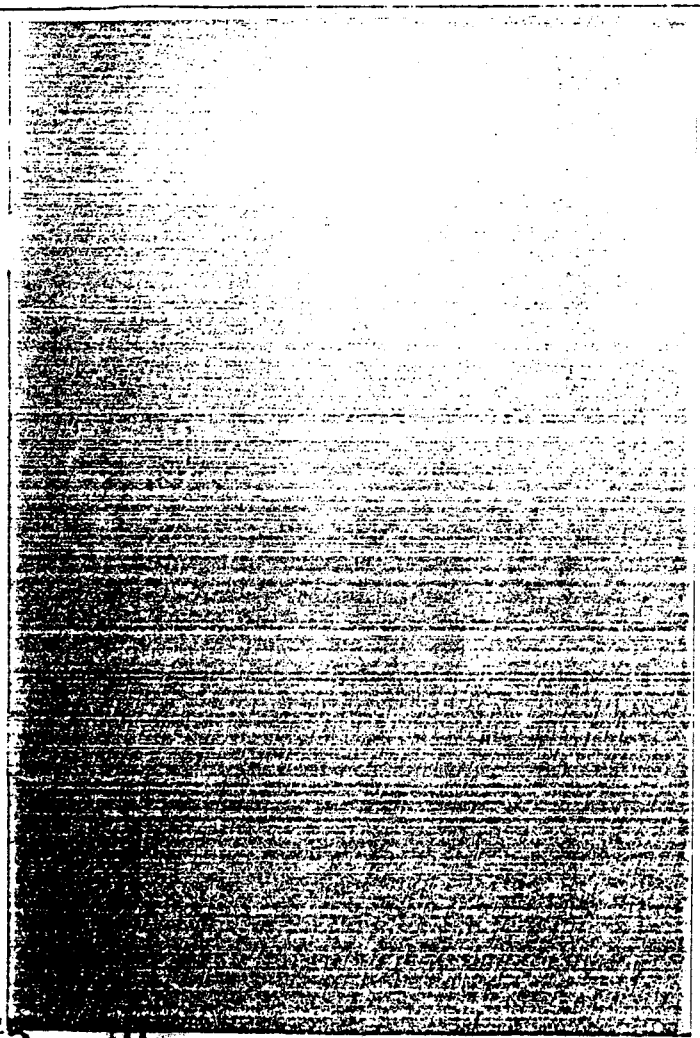
Palo Alto, California
Maundy Thursday, 1984

For permission to quote from this ritual or for use in other churches please write to the author.



Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 71-78

LIBER# 76 THE COOL ZEPHYRS BLOW

Personal & Confidential SIXTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

Many students of the Mysteries, expecially in this day and age, cannot understand why there seems to exist a forbidden knowledge. Why does authority suppress information on 'flying saucers'? Why have certain scrolls and tablets, which have been discovered in the last quarter century, remained unavailable for public examination? Why are the recent discoveries which refer to previous advanced civilizations being played down? and why do the public universities and colleges fight shy at the knowledge that lies outside the realms permitted them by statutory law? Why does everybody have to conform to knowledge and standards and be programmed into certain patterns of behaviour that perpetuates the worldwide idea of 'good and evil' - of 'politics', 'religion' and 'law'?

Why have the youth of today sought for an 'alternative society' - only to find themselves back into the 'rut' again? Not knowing that they sought in the wrong directions and were given false guide posts and certain 'doors' were being shut in their faces?

These are pertinent questions - yet how many have been affected by these same situations? The real answer lies in the great fact that an 'alternative society' has existed for thousands of years alongside and interpenetrating this world of false values which the average man experiences. Because its philosophies and systems are entirely opposed to the philosophies and systems of the false world it is greatly feared; thus all information, keys to its discovery, are suppressed along with a craving desire to extinguish every fact relating to its existence by the ruling prince of this world of darkness. Finally, because the greater majority of people in this world are constantly kept under an hypnotic spell by the lords of darkness they cannot possibly, under any fair circumstances, come to learn of the true realm of Light. This is the answer to all those questions previously asked.

One early writer, who was aware of this other society wrote, "Know you not, that to whom you yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants you are to whom you obey." (Romans, chap. 6 v.16) This means that one can only experience and reap the rewards of the way of life that he leads. Thus, if one follows the ways of a false society then he can experience nothing more than a life of suffering and frustration.

This manifesto comes to you from a ruling Prince of Light within this 'other Society'. This other kingdom, or 'spiritual domain', operates side by side, or interpenetrates the third dimension of what is known as the 'British Isles'. According to Ancient Tradition this would appear, from a researcher's point of view, that the ruling Prince Adept for this area on the planet is making himself known and felt. This information, given at this time, is felt necessary to those who are seeking it because there are difficult times ahead in the world and the pure and faithful lovers of the Light of Truth have need of protection and solace.

That confusion is to become evident on this planet as has never been witnessed before since the 'Flood' can be seen from a statement in our possession from a reliable source, we quote, "Therefore, from 1975, the 'Gods' (meaning the ruling hierarchy) have decreed that the best way to destroy the false vestiges of the wisdom is to make men mad and irrational in their search for themselves as the God incarnated in matter". Looking around now one can see it becoming more evident. So it is - those who are 'babes in the Light' will be openly vulnerable to the onslaughts from the false sources.

These islands have been, since the original Motherland was destroyed, a haven for advanced spiritual students and the Intelligent Hierarchy of this Solar System has maintained a Sacred Sanctuary that has remained hidden from the profane for many centuries. One of the best known, and popular, channels of information is contained in the story of Joseph. The former head of The Sanctuary for the Gnosis writes, "Sometime in 37AD there arrived on the west shores of England - possibly Avalon,the Isle of Apples, certain strangers of Culdich, 'guidam advenae' reportedly coming from Egypt. The leader of the strangers was known as Joseph of Arimathea, an Initiate of Serapis and Christos in Egypt." Further he states, "The Welsh Bards tell us that great scholars from Phoenicia, Egypt, Chaldea, India, Greece and then, finally Rome made pilgrimages to Britain to be trained in their wisdom and magical practices. It was therefore from Britain that the Torch of Civilisation was passed from them to other nations during the period of six thousand years according to Herodotus." Other ancient historians also support this claim.

Facts relating to the existence of a 'spiritual hierarchy' can be found in all the Scriptures, Sacred Writings and Mystical Teachings the world over. The Essenes revealed this fact in their Scrolls. The Essenes speak of 'the Realms of Light' and the Mystical Teachings hint at Great Light Energy Beings living in Universal Space. We know these Suns, Quasars, and Pulsars, etc. to be Intelligent Forces working to maintain Order in the Cosmos.

The quite ordinary truths have been grasped upon by 'priestly organisations', who classify themselves as 'religions' for the purpose of disguising the facts and presenting them in such a way as to appear 'spiritual','metaphysical', 'mystical' or 'theological' so as to keep a veil over the eyes of those who would investigate farther to discover that they did not need priests any longer. This 'cover-up' has been so effective that when an agent from the Real World comes to earth he is feared - called a 'crank' and treated with contempt by the worldly-wise.

Many incidents of beings from the higher'Light Spheres' visiting earth are recorded in the aforementioned writings and a completely distorted ideas has been given about them by the present established religions and psuedo occult bodies. Impressions have been given that these 'beings' appear under strange circumstances, sometimes appearing as strange 'ethereal' creatures or establish some kind of psychic contact or use 'telepathic' or 'voice-transmission' methods to communicate.

If we are to believe that life in a united organism called the Universe - and much nearer home - our Solar System - then we should accept the fact that Intelligent Life is manifest throughout the whole system. Planets are merely areas of 'group consciousness' peopled by intelligences of like nature. At times beings from other areas come to Earth, in the usual manner, to maintain a balance of forces and energies throughout the system. This 'system' is referred to as the 'Hierarchy'. This 'Hierarchy' is not as one is envisaged by humans. Authority is not delegated like authority is dispensed in this world. There is a two-way system of 'giving and receiving' for the 'greater' beings are but higher permutations of individual 'minds' or states of consciousness. For example, a 'Sun' is sometimes called a 'Christ', and this 'Sun' is the sum total of all the 'minds', or 'individualities' within its own system and is aware of all activity, withing this system, simultaneously. Lesser beings, governors of principalities for specific areas for activity, are Its emissaries, ministers, or princes, known popularly as 'Sons of God' comprise what is called the 'Hierarchy'. Many leaders of groups on this planet do not like the idea of this hierarchy and preach against it; but just as we cannot do anything about the Sun continually shining, we cannot do anything about the way the Universe functions.

The scriptures refer to this 'Hierarchy' as the 'Heavenly Kingdom'. Erroneous teachings are also given regarding this 'Heavenly Kingdom'. It has been taught that this is a state apart from man's natural existence and that entry is possible only at death or through the systems given by the particular religions. Systems of 'Communions' 'Masses', other rituals, 'Prayers', 'Medita ions' and 'Hymn Singing' or other chants are used to keep the minds of people in an ignorant state, away from reality, and always dependant upon their 'spiritual pastors' and Masters unto whom they offer their servitude.

This 'Kingdom of Heaven' does not exist in another dimension of time and space. It has always existed in this same dimension as this so-called 'material' world and occupies exactly the same area, in time and space, in a three dimensional state. The wrong teachings regarding 'good and evil' have caused much human suffering such as wars and disease and have been perpetuated by an uninitiated priesthood who act in ignorance with their organised 'religions' and repressive dogmas.

This 'Enchanted Place' is a permanent state here and now. It has been here as long as man has been on the planet. It is a domain of Perfect Order, Peace, Love, Purity and Truth - it is the only state of Reality that exists in the whole Universe. Where there are vehicles prepared for Its reception - there it is and the right conditions are experienced within this three-dimensional existence. In these Isles as in other places on this planet, a state exists - the point where 'Heaven' meets 'Earth' - a true Sanctuary of the Sun, the Cosmic Christ. An incarnated being exists who is focalised to use the dissolving forces, solar powers, for the purpose of instituting the further processes of 'spiritualising' these islands so that once again the false teachings of men must cease and true order be manifest in this area. Whom are you going to serve? Are you prepared for a complete change of experiences? Is your life pure enough and free from 'worldly' philosophies to enter into the 'spiritual' dimension of these islands?

The present 'Church of England' is not the true successor of the Ekklesia instituted by Joseph as some are led to believe. It is merely a breakaway faction of the Roman Church and subscribed to the teachings of this when it broke away. Thus it is classified as 'Protestant' along with the other numerous sects that have continued in a breakaway process from the Church of Rome.

The Ekklesia - founded by Joseph - taught entirely different doctrines. The true church, or Ekklesia, in these islands comprised a synthesis of the existing Druid teachings and the up-dated information on the Christos teachings as was applicable to that day and age. Since many of the subjects taught are taught in the orthodox schools today, such as the arts and sciences, the established Ekklesia maintain the original solar doctrines and teaches them to suitable pupils. Because instruction can only be effective when orally given, benefits are thus only available to students who allow themselves to gravitate in our direction and are willing to undergo the training enabling them to become awakened Sons of Light.

Further quotes from the teacher who reinstated the ancient authority for the modern Chrestian Ekklesia.

"Pythagoras transmitted his authority and his knowledge acquired in the Mystery Schools to his immediate pupils who, in turn, by right of succession, gave it to their students. These eventually included Socrates and Plato. This authority was consequently passed on to the Platonic School which later joined with the school of the Electic Theo-Sophia originated by Ptolemy Soter, Pharoah of Egypt, in the third century B.C. Thus it came, legally, into the possession of the Chrestian Ekklesia, commonly called the Gnostics.

The term Gnostic, according to Koine Greek, means: "The Knowledge and Experience of the Things that are within the septenary nature of the Pleroma". There are two Paths open to the Gnostic: he may become erudite in all aspects of the Gnosis in the first place; this becomes the 'path of theory', which will then lead him into the 'path of action'. OR he may choose the Way of Life, wherein he seeks to become perfected in the Gnosis, which leads to Illumination or Oneness with God."

The Ancient Culdee Church were not referred to as 'christian ' but 'chrestian' meaning good or gracious men and followers of 'the way' or walking in the path of 'righteousness'.

Julius Ceaser in 54 B.C. stated that the Druids teach the immortality of the soul and states that they regarded it as the main incentive for leading a pure and virtuous life.

Another writer said that they, the Druids, worshipped only One God. It is written that their motto was "The Truth against the World". In the Sacred Teaching this motto has much deeper significance.

The Culdee Church never accepted the Church Council of Nicea as does christendom today - thus showing that the dogmas and doctrines of the Roman Church are accepted as being the Ancient Catholic Doctrines. The Ancient Doctrines are Universal (truly Catholic) and harmonious with the Vedantic teachings of the East and hold within themselves the Secret Solar Knowledge which has never been divulged by any Initiate and therefore have never been written down.

The evidence supporting these claims can be found in the writings of Gildas AD425-512 who stated that "Christ, the True Sun, afforded His light, the knowledge of His precepts to our island in the last year, as we know of Tiberius Ceaser". This would be circa AD37.

The Chrestian Ekklesia maintained a pure form of Gnosticism. The established churches have sought to depreciate Gnosticism and have published many manuscripts claiming to be Gnostic which really were papers written, as text matter, on certain subjects upon which to base an entry into the realms that the present-day churches refuse to discuss - hence the loss of their authority as spiritual bodies. True Gnosticism attempts to prove Cosmic Truths by their application to practical everyday living and its speculative philosophies are based upon helpful inspirational writings that harmonise by Divine Logic to a state of Cosmic Order and Harmony.

The historian Suetonius refers to the followers of The Way as "Chrestians". Orthodox theologians were under the impression that it was probably his effort to record the name of Christ. This reveals their ignorance of many of the facts of early 'Christianity' - this is, however, mainly due to the attempts of orthodoxy to conceal ancient texts.

As proved by the late founder of the Chrestian Ekklesia this 'Church' are the legal and moral successors of the earlier 'Gnostic' schools of Serapis and Christos and it still maintains the ancient Solar teachings in their pure form under its present Overseer.

CLASSIFIED

THE CHRESTIAN EKKLESIA IN ANGLIA

****

The Chrestian Ekklesia in Anglia claims a true succession through from the Ancient Mystery Schools to the present day - including that of the early Celtic Church in Britain which stemmed, traditionally, from Joseph of Arimathea.

Support for the claim that Joseph was an Initiate of the Ancient Schools is this: upon the tomb, reputed to be his, is a Caduceus engraved upon it between the letters J. and A.. The Caduceus is still used in many of the Eastern Orthodox Churches showing their links with the former Messenger of God. Joseph's tomb is found at Glastonbury in Somerset.

The confusion regarding this history of the early Church lies in the fact that the "followers of the Way", in those days, did not refer to themselves as "christians" and where the words "chrestian" or "chrestos" appeared in the original manuscripts the theologians and historians believed them to be mistaken forms of "christian" or "christos" and changed the words to suit. It is now known that the original terms were the correct ones and conveyed very definite meanings.

The Ancient system was based upon a still older tradition stemming from the pre-flood era. There were three grades of initiation

a) CHRESTES, a hearer or learner for five years
b) CHRESTOS, a knower for a further year, and
c) CHRISTOS, or PERFECTED ONE.

According to Clemens - the CHRESTOS was "The Way" in the same manner as Jesus said that He was the Way. Whereas the CHRISTOS was the object of The Way.

Even as recent as John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, one finds in his sermons reference to the fact that, during one period of his life, he realised that he was only "almost a Christian".

The "Culdee" Church was later merged into the Established Church owing to many pressures being placed upon it and its true mysteries were, finally, covered over as the Church Political gained power.

The late Founder of the Sanctuary of the Gnosis writes: "In 1953, Richard, Duc de Palatine began the restoration of the Gnosis in this century under diverse designations culminating in the Brotherhood and Order of the Pleroma; first in England and then in the United States. Therefore, the Pleroma can rightly claim to be the moral and legal successor to the ancient Gnostic Philosophy beginning with Pythagoras. It is interesting to note," he writes, "that this claim was acceded to by the College of Propaganda of the Roman Church."

This same succession was passed on through the Pre-Nicene Catholic Church whilst the late founder of the Chrestian Ekklesia was in England and is, at this present time, operating under the protection of the Melchisedek Order.

What ever man does he can never suppress the channels of the Divine Mysteries. In every age there are those who come to us with the True Light shining from within their hearts. This is the Secret Church of Christ at work within the world.

This sacred School in Britain stands unique in the light of the facts mentioned and we feel that it can supply a great need during this period of great confusion by helping the true seeker for the Light to understand certain areas of spiritual knowledge that have been overlocked by the Established Church.

.....

"Why, o earthborn man, have you given yourselves over to death when, within yourselves, you have the power of immortality? Repent, you who have walked with error and ignorance; go from darkness and corruption and receive your immortality."

Hermes Trismegistus

CLASSIFIED

****

During this period when humanity is desperately trying to find answers to its problems, with seemingly mowhere to look for guidance, it behoves all those engaged in the task of enlightening others in Divine or Cosmic Truths to find a common ground for co-operation in their efforts.

There are numerous sects all claiming to be "christian" - yet on the arguments of dogmatic and doctrinal differences seek to maintain their "walls of partition" and will not even court harmony at the human level.

In the past the established church has waged wars against those who would not accept its creeds and, equally, those who disagreed with this church led campaigns of vehement opposition. All this argument and differing opinions is unnecessary when really everybody is claiming to follow "the way".

It cannot be denied that the established church and all the breakaway sects are, at the very basic level, trying to live by the standards put forth in the New Testament teachings and no-one can deny that all those who love God and follow His teaching are His, by adoption, who or wherever they might be. What are the basic and essential marks of a true follower of the way? Let us look at what Jesus says in the Gospels and what the writings of St. Paul say. "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you, and persecute you that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven ..... For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? do not even the publicans the same? ..... Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." (Matthew chap. 5, verses 44-48) "But if ye be led by the Spirit, ye are not under the law. Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: adultery, fornication, uncleaneess, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings and such like ..... But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy peace longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law." (Galatians chap. 5, verses 18-23)

Could one have the basic teaching spelt out more clearly than this? Which church or group can claim complete adherence to these tenets? Who can point a finger at who? Following the truth of God is shown not to be in organisations, ceremonies, ordered prayers and hymns; but in a pure heart and mind that is wholly acceptable only to the Father.

All churches and groups can be agreed at this level for it is in the observance of this teaching that the human family can work together as a harmonious unit helping and guiding those who fall short of their responsibilities to the family. Only when the fruits of the Spirit are attained can the Heavenly Father establish His rule here on Earth. To try to force these standards by political legislation is of no avail for Our Father is the Intelligence that governs all things and He does not allow His ways to be infringed upon by the actions of human beings. Even though the church tries to suppress the breaking forth of a new Light, a further revelation of His Truth, He will continue to send His messengers who will finally draw all men from outworn institutions resulting in their final collapse. To those who believe in the Power of God - who would dare to oppose Him?

The Christian Church is desperately trying to prove the historical existence of Jesus whilst others are trying to prove otherwise. If they have been teaching and believing the same doctrines for nigh on two thousand years, what is that which is creating fear in this time? Why all the doubts and uncertainties?

If we remain true to the practicing of His continued Presence why are we worried because we see the churches empty?

It matters not whether He "walked upon England's mountains green" or lived to a ripe old age and was buried in India. Those are trivial matters and will not help us to understand the deeper mysteries of His Love at work in our lives and His Wisdom in the working out of human affairs. Again, on the one hand, we see the devotees of one religion working diligently to further the sayings of their Teacher, or Leader - for example, the Buddhists seek to propagate the Doctrines of Buddhism because they can see that what he, Gautama, taught would bring release from pain and suffering. On the other hand the Christians believing that they have had a special revelation from God in the person of Jesus Christ try to spread his message in the hope that one day all the Earth will become christian.

There must come a time in this situation when certain barriers appear that will prevent either cult fulfilling their aims. These barriers are the human, or mortal, elements attributed to man himself. Futhermore, the error is perpetuated by believing that a revelation of Truth can come from only one "Son of God" or Messenger of Truth. In each case the fault lies in believing that disciples have understood the true content of what the Teacher has meant. One has to learn that any great transmitter of Divine knowledge knows that such terms as wisdom, truth, harmony, peace and love are not the private property of any particular school; but are terms used to describe, although inadequately, the nature of the Universal Intelligence we call God.

CLASSIFIED

****

The fruitfulness of the vine lies in the quantity and quality of the fruit it has produced from within itself and not from anything it has gathered from the outside.

Many students of the Way are looking for the Kingdom of Heaven to appear outside of themselves. They are looking for a "new world order", a "new age", amidst this confusing materialistic world; but because the Great Teachers have assured us that it is not to be found out there we are simply wasting our time and we are never going to find it. Our environment cannot be changed until we discover the location of Perfect Order within ourselves - the heart of all manifestation.

There is the danger, too, of engaging in certain theological discussions regarding doctrines and historical facts. Whether, or not, there was a Jesus the real power lies in the application of the teaching itself. Because of this the Elders of this Order state that we are not here to prove the identity of historical personalities. The Great Teachers abhorred the adoration of their persons.

It is because these Teachers revealed the Cosmic process of unfoldment and release from the materialistic world systems, in their lives, that we who order the schools to which they, themselves, belonged ask our students to regard, for their own sakes at this stage, all scriptures as purely allegorical and "mythical". It is really the Love and Righteousness expressed in one's life which determines the reality of the Kingdom of Heaven in one's experience on Earth.

Not until the disciple has relinquished all claims to his earthly status, possessions, thoughts and actions can he be truly transformed into a Child of Light. Our science and philosophy is not drawn from the knowledge and experience of this world; but is founded in that Truth which has been before the world was. That is why it is difficult for the "worldly rich" man to enter our state of consciousness.

T. B. Whitney, in his little book "The Way of Melchisedec", writes "Melchisedec, then is the way of the Son's oneness with the Father. The Levitical priesthood were in office for a time only; they were offering atonement for the sins of the people of God as Creator. Where at-one-ment is made between the Father and the Son there is no sin to be atoned for. The Son of God does not sin, has no disease, and never dies. When once this consciousness is attained, The Christ is formed in us."

To you, the disciple of Light, this means that, if you have fulfilled the way of right living it is now possible to enter in to the greater permutation of consciousness wherein you can glimpse your permanent and real state of being - not by your own efforts but by the power of the Christ allowed to work within you.

The real, and only valid, way to achieve what has come to be called "Christ-Consciousness" is to strip one's self of all reliance upon sensual evidence - or in other words - one must not accept the facts as they appear in this physical world. Because that which is already Real and True of 'God' and the Universe is here and does not need to be brought into experience - so, after you have "Cleansed" yourself of your personal attachments, discover that Self which is really you. The real work lies, then, in a "watchfulness" and a continual serving at the altar of truth within the mind and heart of the disciple. When the demands of materialism cease to tempt him he becomes a priest forever - warding off the false claims of materialism for others.

****

pTr

"Thou art Peter - The rock upon which the Mystical and True Church of the Cosmic Christ is built."

Peter - the Sacred Monogram of the only true Initiator. The qualities of Purity, Truth and Righteousness are the necessary requirements of him who dares to stand on the threshold of the way to the within - the Hallowed Sanctuary of the true Self - the I Am of all Creation.

Before Time and Space became apparent there was, and still is, that which transcends all Creation, all Revelation, and yet remains uncomprehended and untouched by the grossness of activity. It then looked upon the reflected Light of It's own glory and the worlds became revealed to consciousness, or were born - yet the worlds were but reflections and contained no reality for they ceased to be when the Light was withdrawn.

Out of that Self-Activeness of the Ineffable - the Only One Self-Existent and Self-Completed One emanated Seven Sons - the sevenfold facets of It's Own Reflected Light - yet Its Own Light remained uncomprehended to Itself, for It could only know Itself by virtue of the observation of the reflection of Its own Purity and Glory.

Thus - all that which we perceive here in this illusion of time, space, form, colour and active life is but the reflection of the living Ideas in the One Consciousness. When the Ineffable ceases to reflect upon Its own Ideas all creation ceases to be and He remains intact and sufficient unto Himself.

Man is the generic term for God's Word which is True of Himself. Man as a whole unit is the Son of God - the Christ. The Christ is God's Perfect Idea of Himself. God and His Son, therefor are one and the Same Being.

God becoming revealed in Conscious Activity is Father-Mother in Principle proceeding into manifestation as Son-Daughter as reflections of His Own Glory.

God, as Father, impregnates His Own Mind, His Objective Self and Mother, with His own life, creation, and this becomes His own Offspring: Christ-Maria. (The own Sun as supporter of His world.) Thus God is His own Mother and, or of, His own Offspring.

".....You are raised up and do triumph by reason of what has been done for you. Ptah has overthrown your enemies for you according to the promise." (Book of the Coming Forth by Day) These words would sound familiar to "Moses" as he shared in the mysteries of the Egyptians. Similar words were echoed by Jesus centuries later. The true meaning of a resurrected life has been known since man has been known.

The redeeming power of God's Truth has always been available to man in every age and country. Those who cling to outmoded beliefs in personalities are not obeying the words of those whom they profess to follow. Many followers of certain faiths believe that they cannot be perfect - yet Jesus told his followers to be perfect - this leaves no room for human excuses. God told Abram to be perfect - what more can a man be than perfect? Nothing can be higher than perfection so we should strive to realise our perfection in God.

The great prophets of old maintained and taught the Eternal Truths to men. Sects are born out of a desire to follow a person. To come to know what the truth about life is one has to free himself from all human attachments and opinions or suppositions. Even written scriptures can be misunderstood. The "Christ" or "Messiah" is the redeeming power of the Truth of God and Man and is not a person - not even Jesus, Moses, Buddha or Krishna. The Son ofGod is he who fulfills the Universal Truth of God in his life. "Beloved now are we the sons of God" (1 John chap. 5 verse 1).

The reward of him that overcomes the false suggestions of the world is again re-echoed in the words of Jesus in St. John chap. 16 verse 33. "I have overcome the world." Organised religion, whilst it has certain uses, refuses to grow and falls into the smare of materialism. The true sons of God go forward accepting the challenge in Hebrews chat. 6 verses 1 - 3. We, as God's sons, must also become priestsin the eternal Order of Melchisedek.

That the everpresent power of the redeeming certainty of God's Truth has always been with us can be discovered by a careful study of all scriptures as far back as our present written history is available. You need not look farther that the Old Testament here so take up this book and check the following : (Compare similar incidents in the New Testament.)

First of all note that the Rock of Truth is nothing to do with "St. Peter" in the New Testament or of God's church on earth. See Deuteronomy chap. 32 verses 1 - 4.

God as Father	Jeremiah 3 : 19		Isaiah 63 : 16
Who are His Sons?	Job 1 : 6	Job 2 : 1	Job 38 : 7
	(Notethat it says ALL the Sons of God)
	Hosea 1 : 10
Only One Power	1 Kings 8 : 60 - 61		Isaiah 45 : 5
	Malachi 2 : 10

To be Perfect	Genesis 17 : 1	Deuteronomy 18 : 13
	1 Kings 8 : 61
Jesu's Commandment	Deuteronomy 10 : 20	Deuteronomy 30 : 6
	Leviticus 19 : 18
Of Provision	2 Kings 4 : 42 - 44 (Compare with story in Matthew chap. 14 verses 15 - 19)
God no respecter of persons	New Testament	Acts 10 : 34 - 35
On Healing	Psalm 107 : 17 - 21	Psalm 91 all
	Psalm 147 all	Isaiah 65 : 25

These promises have always been available. They were even at that time. Man fails to realise that the world in which he lives is but a reflection of his own thoughts and actions.

On Prayer	Jesu's prayer is addressed directly to the Father (Matthew 6 : 9 - 15). To pray to "saints" or anybody other than God is idolatary.
The Holy Spirit	Numbers 11 : 24 - 25 compare with Acts 2 : 1 - 4
Also Note.	The "Messianic" chapter in Isaiah (53) is written in the past tense !

The Right Conditions for one following the Truth — Mark 4 : 11 - 12
Matthew 7 : 21 - 27 and 19 : 16 - 26

The truth of the resurrection and restoration to wholeness was taught before the Flood - enacted in the Temples of Egypt. Protected by "Moses" and made available to the greater mass of people by Jesus. The real truths have been preserved by the Priests of Melchisedek. Not by the priesthood within the organised church.

It is difficult for the worldly-minded to conceive of a state wherein doctors, psychologists, sociologists and politicians are un-necessary, and the established church appears worldly-minded on this, but, nevertheless - such a state is available here and now. Human knowledge - no matter how intelligent or profound it might appear - is, as the great teachers say, nothing more than "learned ignorance".

Prophecy of the New Community — 1 Corinthians 3 : 16 - 17
Ephesians 2 : 20 - 22 — Hebrews 8 : 2 and 10

The Qumrum Scrolls prophecy that it would be Melchisedek who would come in the days of fulfilling. Jesus attained the office of High Priest according to this highest Order and so His work is to reveal, unto His co-workers, the consummation of their efforts to live by His standards. This day is now.

When the revelation was made regarding the Messiah two thousand years ago few accepted the message and today, when His fore-runners are heralding the reality of His ruling presence on this planet, we trust that more hearts are ready for a deeper realisation of God's power.

The Order of Melchisedek is no false dream - a "modern invention", a supposed faction of religion - aliens from space. It is an integral unit within the Divine System guiding sincere followers of the Truth on to the Perfection and Fulfilment of God's promise to man and we know it is difficult to prove a prophecy until it has happened; but if that which is to come to pass is of great importance to the recipient it comes too late, and is overlooked, if it overtakes him when he is unprepared. The story of the wise and foolish virgins show this to be true. If you have been patiently waiting for a new revelation of God's Truth and feel that something must happen anew to you then be sure that you are not put off because a new Light does not appear as you have been conditioned to believe how it should. The Gospel stories show that the people of Jesu's time were expecting a New Light which conformed to their way of expectation; but when God moves He does not act according to the desires and hopes of mortals. God moves and reveals His Truth in a way that is to help you become more aware of His Relationship to you and not in any way that is to your material advantage. He is interested only in His Son born and nourished within your heart - and when you have put off the false dreams of your own making, His Perfect Son stands revealed in His Kingdom on Earth. For you this can become literal Truth here and now with the help of this ministry.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

A G A P É

"The highest of all forms of love - that which is most commonly associated with spirituality and absorption into complete comprehension of the Cosmic Force - is AGAPÉ. AGAPÉ is that love of which Master Jesus spoke, for agapé cannot be attained without the transcendance of the illusion of isolated ego-identity. It is the experience of all as One. Agapé is the realisation that there are but two forms of existence within the entire spectrum of Being - Love, and the absence of love - for this Love is akin to the Light of Illumination. It is the Love that is complete, and all other forms of Love are but shadows of it."

HARLEQUIN
(The Gnostic Catholic Church)

CLASSIFIED

****

Truth does not change to suit changing political climates or the opinions of "liberated" humans. Truth is that very Principle by which the Universe was established and by which quality it is maintained. This is the Divine Knowledge as taught by all the Great Teachers who have revealed that the already established Laws within the Cosmos cannot be revoked.

In spite of all man's efforts to deal with his problems here on the earth. In spite of his various disciplines he must fail to bring about a happy integrated society unless he allows himself to be guided by the already established Cosmic Principles and not to rely upon his continual policy of experimental suppositions.

The Laws which enable us to live together as a healthy, happy and whole community were already in existence before humans appeared on the Earth - so it is only in ignorance that human beings struggle for the answers to all their problems.

The only way and the right attitudes have been taught to mankind by the Great "Spiritual" Teachers that have appeared from time to time in different countries and have left proof of their teachings by the concrete evidence of the power demonstrated in their lives. Yet, in spite of all this evidence, it seems that the earth's inhabitants prefer to invent theories of their own and be lead headlong into a turmoil of human conflict and suffering.

The proof of the profound Love of the Universal Intelligence, the Divine Parent, for Its own, in spite of the apparent waywardness, is expressed in the scriptural text attributed to Jesus, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, and ye would not!" Luke chapter 13, verse 34. The existing great Religions maintain their authorities from written manuscripts, scriptures, that contain the teachings which have been remembered and written down by disciples of the religion, or system, stemming from the Teacher, Prophet or Founder of that particular sect.

As all Creation is the Emanating Consciousness, in varying degrees, of the Prime Source these Teachers received their knowledge from Intelligent Beings operating within a "higher" state of Cosmic Awareness. This is the Divine Hierarchy spoken of in the Scriptures. Each Teacher has his own system of "Oral Teaching" which is never known, or revealed by the disciples, outside of the Teacher's own "Ecclesia". These teachings cannot be written down because they affect the disciple differently in his own individual case.

This Spiritual Hierarchy (we call it Spiritual so as to distinguish its mode of function from systems operated by humans) has always been in operation and will remain so until mankind has graduated from this earthly existence to an awareness of Divine Sonship.

The Secret Doctrines of Israel and the Christos are revealed in the teachings of the Order of Melchisedek an order of conscious "Sons of God" which has worked secretly and powerfully behind the scenes through centuries of varying degrees of religious beliefs. We say the "Order of Melchisedek" because this is how it has come to be known in the West by many well-known mystics. It is known by other names in other areas of teaching. The term "Israel" causes much confusion in the minds of many students. To us it does not refer to any particular nation but to the spiritually elect of God. As an example let us quote Jesus in "The Gospel of the Perfect Life". "And one said unto him, 'Lord wilt thou at this time restore the Kingdom of Israel,' And Jesus said, 'My kingdom is not of this world, neither are all Israel which are called Israel. They in every nation who defile not themselves with cruelty, who do righteousness, love mercy, and reverence the works of God, who give succour to all that are weak and oppressed - the same are the Israel of God.'"

The Order of Melchisedek is representative of those made perfect through the Christ (see Hebrews chapter 6, verses 1-3)

In the Qumran Scroll, classified as 11Q Melchisedek, it asserts that Elohim is already in command of His People. This scroll also proclaims that in the Jubilee Year His own Sons shall be freed from worldly attachments. The "Jubilee Year", to the sincere seeker, refers to that period of fulfilling all the necessary requirements to ensure "salvation". Striving to attain maturity by following the way the blessed ones arrive at the consummation of that which is promised in Christ. Now at the "Capstone" of their work they become perfect in Him and enter into the priesthood not made at the hands of men but ordained by God for the service of Him in this dark world. This, the Order of Melchisedek, is that order of the Divine Government of God in the Cosmos - Order in its truest sense.

The true Ecclesia of Christ, or Church of Elohim is, therefore, not an organisation consisting of priests conducting services which includes rituals with congregations in attendance saying prayers and singing hymns. It is those beings, who, with the love and knowledge of God written in their hearts live to reflect His Light in this world. A true Son of God is one whose Love, Purity and Righteousness is his NATURAL state.

It is God's Love which requires every human to become transformed into an immortal Son of God. This way is open to all who are sincere and who are not afraid to forsake everything to achieve it. Looking around in the world today it is plain to see that this is the time of reaping what has been sown in the past. No-one can escape his rewards - whether they be good or bad. Enter the path of holiness now so that you might build anew for the future.

CLASSIFIED

The Scriptures of Judaism, Christianity and of all great religions, the world over, contain the mythical, metaphysical and historical backgrounds of their founders. Also all scriptures contain the records and stories of successive holy men, or saints, their explanations of the teachings and their individual experiences of Truth.

In this light, no one religion possesses anything different from the other. Neither can one claim more authority or better teachings than another. This kind of thing leads to sectarianism, divisions and even war. It is also in error to believe that a founder of a religion is the sole possessor of Divine Authority and that there has been only one inspired "Son of God" or that a certain Great Religious Teacher is the only"World Teacher". The only World Teacher is God's Own Revelation of His Truth to man by whatever means He choses. We should not worship Jesus, Gautama, Krishna or Mohammed or any of the saints. Jesus, himself, said "He that believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on Him that sent me" (St. John 12 : 44). Our devotions should be, solely, committed to the First Cause - the Only One Intelligence which reveals the Teachers and all things to man. That which is True of the Universe has ever been so and ever will be so in spite of man's changing hypotheses in respect to life, its origins and future. Regular set prayers and rituals do not allow the mind to move towards wonderful new horizons, and set creeds and dogmas keep one firmly cemented in materialism. The Universal Intelligence is not subject to our whims and fancies neither does It regard our acting as priests or missionaries on Its behalf, not does It smile benighnly on our efforts to appease "Him". Such efforts of man are based upon the error of equating God with human traits.

The Universal Intelligence is changeless, deathless, infinite and perfect in all that It reveals or emanates. We try to define Divine Qualities by way of our limited senses and hence give rise to finite forms. It has been said that the Universal Intelligence, God, acts like a Father and this is indeed so because He sends all "good" to His children in His Divine Compassion for us being trapped in the illusions of our own making. The greater fact is that because all expressed is Him and Himself in manifestation it would be in error to suppose that He, or It, acted in any way unfavourable to Himself. Thus because we, as mankind, are, in reality, His very Life and Expression it must follow that we are of His Nature and incapable of death and suffering.

Suffering is the result of identifying ourselves with our own self-asserted opinions of what we believe life to be instead of resting in the Way That It IS. Because there is only the One Life it follows that we all share in this equally and "you" or "I", as seeming individuals, are, in truth the total expression of this Life and It is the Only True Self that we desire to know.

"If," says the Buddha, "only the Reality exists there can be only the banishment of the unreal." "Westerners" have misunderstood the meaning of the state of Nirvana. It means the destruction of that which is believed to be real and cannot possibly mean the destruction of Truth Itself. The Holy Bible and the Bhagavad Gita claim that this God can never be destroyed or be different from what He has ever been.

When St. Paul, in the Christian Bible, states that there is "Only one God who is Father of All" and "in whom we live, move, and have our being" it is not different from the Buddha stating "All there is is the Reality" or in the 'Tao Te King' which refers to the "all-pervading Tao in which all things depend for life"; or the Bhagavad Gita teaching that "I give life to all form".

The student might wonder at this point "What is the practical value of this kind of knowledge?"

The answer lies in the fact of the knowledge itself because when one becomes consciously aware of the stability of Truth and relies on the All-pervading presence of the Divine Intelligence he realises that there is nothing to fear or worry about and eventually one is able to prove the illusory nature of all human suppositions. One does not have to concern oneself about "the fall of man" or about disease and death because he comes to learn the way of freedom from all this and knows how to rest forever in the Eternal.

In an Eternal, beautiful and pure life we cannot consider time and space in relation to It. In our work to release ourselves from the unnatural state we should not allow the claims of human knowledge, and worldly sciences, to deter us. Human knowledge is transient, unreal, and possesses no truth or substance. We belong to That Which IS. The legend of the "Sons of God" is no myth. What has happened is that man's true state has been obscured by false beliefs and opinions.

All that which appears as death, suffering and discord is called "Illusion" - it can also be called a false dream or evil. It is therefore, this "evil" which is to be, and can be, destroyed. This is the allegorical battle of the "flesh" warring against the "spirit". It is written that man is made in God's image. This cannot mean the physical body because it is associated with mortality and death. God cannot die because He is the Eternal Mind, or Spirit - so man must be eternal spirit also !

It is impossible for God to die or suffer and this is true of man. The world of pain and suffering must, therefore, be no more than a false dream and possesses no power over man. Why did Jesus heal sickness if it is a natural state? and why did He seek to overcome the "world" if it was our true state - or something God had created ? The Great Teachers point out the uselessness of trying to change the world. We cannot experience changes for the better until we change ourselves. Some followers of religion teach that God lets us suffer in order to teach us lessons or to learn to know Him better. This does not appear to be the method of a Loving Heavenly Father !

Jesus, Gautama and many others showed man how to become free from this world of pain and suffering and proved its falseness by revealing the Reality of Life. Conception of evil becomes easier to destroy when one realises its nothingness. The Tibetan Buddhists tell us that pain and suffering can be banished like "snowflakes falling into boiling water."

CLASSIFIED

* * * * * * *

There were special centres on the Earth during the period of the Egyptian Mysteries and whilst the existing temples received their instructions from these centres they were not necessarily part of the then official "set-up". When the Egyptian temples were closed in the fourth century (Circa 384 by Theodosious) orthodox christianity took over and the Higher Priesthood was severed from the church - and so it is to this day.

The Mediterranean area provided much of the basic material used in the reorganised religion of Christianity. Plato and Pythagoras are said to have learned their knowledge from the Egyptian priests and much of our western thought is attributed to these great Greek "thinkers".

The existing Roman Catholic Church has its system based on much the same lines as the ancient Egyptian system, with its journeys to stations and various festivals. It can be learned from existing historical data that little has changed except for the terminology.

Such symbols as the Bread and Wine, the Cross, Gold, Frankincense and Myrrh are pre-Christian - therefore the present churches possess no right to claim them as unique to their own particular faith. The gospel of St. John is also a restatement of the older teachings brought into line with the christian doctrines - for example, the God Ra of the Egyptians is said to have created the world by speaking the "Word of Power".

Melchisedek is the great initiate from whom we all receive the concept and possibility of attaining the status of perfection whilst still in the flesh. Thus it was that in the teachings of Jesus a system was hinted at wherein one might attain this state - not by beliefs, doctrines and regular religious practices - but by total subjection to the Will of God.

St. Paul describes Jesus as being a priest "after the order of Melchisedek" (see Epistle to the Hebrews) and he, Jesus, acted as the revealer of the way and guardian of its mysteries. St. Paul provided us with the keys to the subtler points and indicated the wide divisions between that which is doctrinal and that which is the reality itself. From the point of view of the Melchisedek teachings the doctrines and dogmas of religion are nothing more than continual reminders of our obligations and these often fall short of that which was originally intended so if this is understood we are able to keep them in their right perspective.

We should try to remember that this consciousness of perfection cannot be, in any way, manipulated or influenced to be any more than what it already is. What takes place during any ritual, religious or otherwise, is a work with the energies already released from the nucleus of every one of those present. The true experience of God actually stems from communion with the "nucleus" itself - and this is only possible when impressions through the senses are known for what they are worth.

This process must be maintained continually - or as far as it is possible by the adherent - however, one does find that after a while this consciousness takes over and directs one's life of itself.

Do not run away with the idea that the senses are not important - in truth they are very important. One does not have to "kill out" or deny the senses for these are your "sacred vessels" through which you give expression to the power radiating from within so as a priest of the higher consciousness it is your responsibility to keep them clean and pure. The purer we are able to maintain our senses the more can our inner life reveal itself and transform the other atoms and cells of our bodies. During this process our bodies become a more effective "filament" for the Light to dissolve the impurities produced, in the world of effects, by those who live in the "shadows". In the light of this knowledge we fulfill our everyday responsibilities to our fellows, we do our jobs correctly, do honest business without becoming involved in the effects thus the power from our "inner sanctuary" radiates through every action without our personal intrusion into it.

A priest in a church is bound by the rules of his church and his thoughts and actions have to revolve solely around the doctrines and dogmas but a priest of this order is free from such obligations for he knows that THAT to which he belongs touches the hearts of all men and leaves him free to mix as the "spirit" moves him. We also know that THAT to which we contribute is THAT to which all men are seeking - and that which we know we are is that which all men must eventually become.

We have heard much talk as to what form the "new religion" will take. Some say it will come as a unification of all the present religions. Some are saying this and some are saying that and many are chasing unfruitful ends in work such as "church unity" to bring this about. Let us look at this differently. Since this Intelligent Light Energy, or what you will, has Its own inherent pattern - which eventually will take form - is aware of what It is Itself and what It is about, It will therefore give Its own expression to men and women who are in harmony with Its pattern. As we have mentioned before - this Intelligence cannot be moved or influenced to do anything that is apart from It fulfilling Its own will. Therefore to attempt to create a channel, or way for expression for It, by human means is a waste of energy. If we want to share in Its plan it is we who have to deal with ourselves and place ourselves at Its disposal and on Its terms. So also, a priest ordained by men is not necessarily a priest in the eyes of God - it is only the person who is directed by the Will of God who is one to be reckoned with.

That which is called Extra Sensory Perception, E.S.P. for short, from our point of view is another source of extraneous knowledge because it is only a means of gaining information from the higher or lower frequency ranges of the senses and information gained thus is unreliable in respect to the truth of Reality. What one who has developed the ability of E.S.P. does is to get more insight into the world of effects and whilst this might be very interesting it still leads one away from the Source wherein the secret of life lies.

What has actually taken place in the development of E.S.P. is this:- In a "normal" way our senses are receptive to only a limited range of the life, or light spectrum. Our eyes are responsive to one octave of the light frequencies. Our ears are only responsive to a short range of sound waves and in like manner our feelings, or touch, are limited. Thus we are only aware of form and expression according to the receptive Quality of our organs. By various exercises it is possible to "hot-up" our sensual organs so as to make them acute to frequency ranges outside their "norm" and awareness of the rarer fields of matter is achieved. By this method one becomes more conscious of the expressive nature of the universal soul only and does not as some believe, provide any clues to that which takes place at the Source or that centre from which the essence of life stems. Because impressions through the senses must take on some kind of form - or in sound, taste or smell etc. the impressions gained through E.S.P. can only be thus.

The Divine Centre of things, in a manner of speaking, is abstract to the senses and therefore cannot be perceived by them so we are limited to describing it by abstract descriptions only.

Power from the Source can only be allowed to flow when our attention is fixed on an abstract conception. This automatically by-passes the senses and the life from within reveals Itself in our experiences.

In the practice of pure religion this works out by maintaining an unwavering faith in the reality of the "Abstract Principles " under all circumstances inspite of what evidence the senses present, - then, and only then will the full glory of the truth be manifest.

To become a "Priest of the Most High God" is all a matter or fulfilling the principles laid down. It is in error to suppose that this priesthood such as was achieved by Jesus, is an honour bestowed on certain individuals. No great teacher has indicated that he was specially selected or a chosen instrument. The mistake, by students, lies in the fact that if they believe this attainment impossible it leaves room for a wide area of excuses for personal weaknesses and let themselves off from the many pitfalls by assuming "Well it is only human nature".

This "human nature" attitude gets us nowhere and shows that a total misunderstanding exists of this so-called "human nature". To argue that Adeptship, or Mastership, is only a calling of the "few" leaves, by our own will, the Earth with precisely that amount - a few. Perfection is the goal of humanity and as long as we delay this we virtually hold creation in suspence - such is our responsibility. Man, by his falsity, actually draws across his own vision the temple veils to hide it from view and dares him who would tear them away to reveal the light.

This noble office of priesthood is offered freely from the inner sanctuary - to him who will walk in from the outer courtyard with a pure heart. He will take with him wherever he goes the "Sacred Ark of God" and remain a priest forever.

CLASSIFIED

Anthropologists now tell us that man has been on this Earth some four million years. Aztec records tell us that there has been three great civilisations on this planet and that our present one is the fourth - stemming from the "Deluge" around ten to twelve thousand years ago.

In spite of all this, in spite of all the great Spiritual Teachers we have had - the numerous schools and groups at present in existence, man has not yet solved the problem of that which he refers to as "Evil". Thousands still suffer pain, suffer lack, loneliness and frustration. It would appear that in spite of all that which the Spiritual Teachers tell us a state of harmony, wholeness and peace on Earth is but a dream of the future.

The Spiritual Quest is a personal one and "evil" can only be destroyed by eliminating it from our consciousness. A formidable task - yes - but unless one is prepared to live a disciplined and moral life he cannot achieve his complete realisation as a Son of God. His latent dishonesties, hates, wrong views will bound him and cloud his vision until he either submits to the pure consciousness or is transformed into an "animal". One has only to study the history of so-called "great men"to see what we mean.

Would it not seem that, if reincarnation were a fact, that we, as those earth's peoples over again, have failed to learn, or progress, over the area of time?

The answer to all these problems lies in the great Truth that this world of appearances in which we seem to live is as false and unreal as ghosts are to unbelievers.

Is there any way of realising this? Through the ages there has been schools set aside, on various parts of the globe, for the purpose of training pupils to develop a state of mind that enables them to see what is Real and what is Unreal in the Cosmic Scheme. They are taught that all that is witnessed through the window of the human senses is based upon mere assumption and that human sciences are based upon unreliable hypotheses.

There is a fixed Principle throughout the whole Universe and this Principle is the very nature of that Intelligence behind and governing all things - and this Great Intelligence cannot be influenced in any way by human whims or fancies - neither does It conform to standards set up by human beings.

Once a person comes into a direct understanding of this Truth he is able to align himself with this Principle and come to know his own Eternal nature.

Many groups, sects and even the larger religious organisations teach this Principle in garbled and much misunderstood language; but really it is a Power which cannot be taken lightly or regarded as non-existent. This is, in very Truth, the only real Power in the universe and that to which humans cling is, in very Truth, a transient non-entity. In one moment of the Universal Intelligence's wavering of Itself - man's world is no more - not even his own brand of religion or truth,

Therefore, the sincere student of God, or whatever name it be given, should strive to understand the true nature of the Universe. In this respect he should not confine himself to what he sees and hears via the human senses. He should come to learn that there are many, and greater, things to be discovered in the realms of mind far beyond the reaches of the human senses and that he is really and truly under Higher Powers that can reduce his own theories to nought. Such an approach filled with humility and respect is required of the student before he can know his spiritual nature.

The majority of spiritual students believe in the real presence of Good and Evil. The Son of God knows that the human understanding of Good and Evil is a theory based on supposition only - that the world in which pairs of opposites appear is just a dream world which can be transcended by seeking to know that which is Permanent and without change.

The Real, or True, Good that we speak of has NO opposite - it is an existing state of consciousness that knows not Good or Evil, as humans know it, and remains unaffected by their seeming presence. This perfect state of consciousness is sometimes called the "Christ".

In this school students are taught that this state of "Christ Consciousness", together with the effects appearing in real experience, is attainable by completely by-passing the state of dual-consciousness at the human level. Slowly and surely one has to withdraw himself from reliance on any other help, belief or power appearing on the screen of sensual knowledge. Such is the task of the one who seeks to know Perfection - he has to become one with Perfection Itself. This means that no other form of knowing exists.

Disease and death, which are seemingly imperfect states, can have no part or presence in an already existing whole and eternal state. One cannot transcend and know the other. One has not attained Perfection until he has eliminated all transient knowledge from his experience.

To commence this journey, sometimes called "The Way", one should begin to purify his thoughts and actions. He should try to see that all creation is really rooted in the Perfect and Real State. Suffering, pain and death should be seen as but dreams, possessing no Power or Reality over man. One should learn that there is but One Supreme Life and Power being expressed here and now and that personalities are but false masks seeking to hide the Permanent Reality and Truth of Being.

Only then can the disciple come to know his Christed State - for in the words of Jesus, "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God" can he be at one with that for which he has given up all things to attain.

Herein lies the knowledge that the organised institutes of "Christianity" have sought to eradicate by persecution and called "heresy", to put people off, so that they might establish power over the minds of the masses in teaching that there was only one "Christed One" and that he was a unique personality whom all should worship because only he could do anything for anyone. Many sayings of Jesus reveal that this dogma is a complete invention for he taught that many could become exactly the same as he.

CLASSIFIED

We have mentioned before that the allegories contained in the Holy Bible give clues to important spiritual truths. In this lesson we will take a look at the deeper teachings and show you how to see that the Bible contains more than at first glance.

First of all let us remind you that there are many layers of meaning contained therein - from the simple teaching to the higher profound truths. You will also see that what we have already taught has been there all the time.

In Genesis chapter 2, verses 16 & 17, it can be clearly seen that the "fall of man" is represented in eating the fruit of the "tree of the knowledge of good and evil". This is at elementary level pracisely what it means and why humans have given it other twists shows their desire to evade the real issue.

Chapter 5 of Genesis gives a list of the Patriarchs. In the Order of Melchisedek (which existed before the Flood) we give the names of Adam who represent second Adam who was our first agent in the flesh; Seth who was like unto Adam; Enoch a type of Christ; Methuselah who handed down the authority of High Priesthood to Noah who was to appoint his successor for the next cycle. Like his predecessors, Noah walked with God. In the Sumerian version of the Flood he, Noah, is referred to as Ziusudra - Sumerian, Utna-napishtim - Babylonian - this implies that names in themselves do not count as it is the allegorical meaning which is more important. Chapter 9 of Genesis tells of the re-instatement of God's Covenant with man. Chapter 12 brings in Abram, later Abraham, who through his discipline, the conquering of the five kings - of the controlling of his five senses, maintained the true doctrines and was visited by Melchisedek, Chapter 14.

In the introduction to the Book of the Cave of Treasures, translated by Sir Wallis Budge, he writes... "The narrative of the descents made by Seth and his companions from the mountain of Paradise into the plain is certainly based on historical fact; and though Melchisedek has not yet been identified in the Cuniform inscriptions, there is every reason to believe that he existed, and that he was a founder of a pure form of religion, and a great ruler as well as a priest".

Because we are in a very important period for man this self-same Melchisedek is making Himself known to all who will receive Him.

Moses appears later because man had fallen deeper into materialism. Being fully trained in the tradition of the Priest Kings in the sacred line of Patriarchs in Egypt he was to lay the foundations for the coming of the very embodiment of the Christ Himself. By this final act it was the plan of the Hierarchy to leave the door of the mysteries wide open to all who fulfilled the teachings. No longer would people have to receive office at the hands of Archons or Hierophants; but could by their own efforts where-ever they were receive the "divine office" of a son of God. Since Jesus assumed the office of High Priest of our Order all work is operated from the "inner levels" of Divine Consciousness. This is one of the reasons why the Sacred Schools ceased to operate on the physical level during the period when christianity became a dogmatic religion - hence the loss of power in the churches today. The secret fraternities and orders since this period (early 4th century) were inspired by agents from the "inner levels" but the organisation and administration of such societies was never under the authority of a "proper" Hierophant. It is only now in this period of the final stages of the plan of the Hierarchy that such offices will become reinstated because humans, more than ever before since the Flood, can come to realise their Divine Status. All work is operated, as we have said, from the "inner levels" and true information regarding the correct methods cannot be obtained by "psychic" investigation, divination or any other techniques which involve the use of the senses.

In the 6th chapter of Exodus is God's re-statement to Moses of the restoration of Divine Sonship to the faithful. In the terminology used Israel represents the "chosen ones" or those who live by the laws of God and Egypt represents the world of effects of the glamorous illusions of the senses. When the "chosen ones" were released from Egypt it was possible to build the Sanctuary - chapters 36-40. This also represents the saying of Jesus, "Where two or three are gathered together in my name (in the purpose of love and truth) there am I in the midst".

The first five books of the Bible are known as the Pentateuch, a Greek term, but to the Jewish people are known as the Law, or Torah. These books also represent the strict discipline of adherence to the Law before the higher mysteries of life can be understood. It is said that Samuel was also the head of a Sacred School.

Before the next important stage could be implemented there must be some people who had fulfilled the necessary obligations before the Teacher arrived. Moses had had visions of the next stage - the "Promised Land" - the reinstatement of man in the Garden of Eden. It should be noted that the Christ was referred to as the "Annointed One". This symbolised that He was of "Royal" descent. This "Royal" title indicates His office in the Order of Melchisedek - for it is said of the Patriarchs that they maintained the offices of Royalty, Priesthood and Purity within themselves. Melchisedek is the King of Salem - Salem is another name for Jerusalem; but the Jerusalem we speak of is the Holy City of God not built with hands - the abode of pure souls. Christ is also the Prince of Peace who wears the "Crown of Glory". Note the "Crown" indicates His state of attainment. Students of the Kabbalah will understand this.

Dogmatic Christianity teaches the importance of the worship of the man Jesus and bases its claims on the historical content of the four Gospels. Whilstleading theologians and historians agree on the fact that there is no historical evidence for the existence of the Jesus of the Gospels, the churches still maintain their dogmas.

Like the stories of the Old Testament the story of Jesus is an allegory and according to some - the gospels are really ritual manuscripts based upon the experiences which one must go through before he reaches enlightenment. However there are extant records to prove that a certain Jesus, or Jeshu, did live some number of years earlier than the "gospel" Jesus. There is also the references to the "teacher of righteousness" in the Qumrum texts which could also fit in. What we can say is that somebody did exist and give a teaching like that referred to in the gospels and that this is the doctrine of that which is understood as the Christ. The divinity of this man Jesus who embodied the "Christ" level of man's consciousness can be seen in the fact that he taught that this same quality or nature was in every man and that, as we have often repeated, we are all sons of God joint with him, but still the churches persist in putting him on a pedestal out of the reach of their congregations. However, we will not enter into a debate on facts. It is the teachings contained within these gospels which aremore important.

The fourth gospel, as we have mentioned before, contains a christianised recapitulation of the earlier "higher level" teachings as one can see if it is read carefully.

The Acts of the Apostles tells the story of Paul and others and their experiences- again containing valuable allegories.

Now the controversial Epistle to the Hebrews is a document that has managed to survive the exclusion given to other books of a similar nature and reveals the actual keys to the attainment of the perfect priesthood - and as we often quote this epistle we will deal with some of the keys here.

Chapter 1 extols the supremacy of man as the sons of God and of his inheritance of kingship. Man is greater than the angels because he has extended himself out in to the perimeter of God's activity.

Chapter 2 explains the mystery of the divinity of man and the necessity of the One made Perfect to involve himself in the affairs of those who are subject to the illusion so that he can show them absolute proof of the Reality of man's place in the Divine Kingdom.

Chapter 3 deals with the necessity of sincerity and receptivity to the Truth before the experience of God's promises can be had.

Chapter 4 touches on the "time and space" notion which must be eliminated before the experience of the "rest" or fulfillment is accomplished. Verses 12 and 13 show the intense power of God to dispel illusion.

Chapter 5 stresses the importance of discipline by adhering to the principles before perfection can be reached. Many people today would have to commence right from the start before any hope of release was obtainable. Our teaching is directed to those who are prepared for the "strong meat" - which brings us to the message of* Chapter 6. All that we ever knew, or now know, must be stripped away and we are left with nothing save the absolute Power of God.

Chapter 7 assures us of our divine priesthood by a complete sacrifice to God. By living according to the teaching of this Order one becomes no more subject to the law, because his life is merged with the Source. This teaching is now available to sincere persons.

Chapter 8 refers to the reinstatement of man in the Garden of Eden. The pattern shown on the Mount is the state of the perfect man as apart from the people, or dwellers of the plains. The Cave of Treasures, or the abode of the Patriarchs, is situated on this Mount and according to the archaelogists the Garden of Eden is to be located on a mountain. A mountain represents that situation wherein one beholds the whole panorama of God's work.

Chapter 9 reveals the supremacy of God's nature revealed in Man. Without adherence to the ordinances rituals and ceremonies as shown at the beginning of Chapter 6. The former things must pass away before a "new" revelation can be understood.

Chapter 10. Here we have the faults revealed of the many who attend the various religions of other "spiritual" groups. Do we have to continue in the habitual observance or attendance to the existing set patterns? For example, particularly we have noticed in the "healing" groups, does one have to "pray" at regular intervals to be healed doubting that the first prayer was not heard or acted upon? Does the power of God manifest in little doses according to the times man sets aside for this to happen? Is God's power "controlled" according to man's devices? If one resorts to a repetition of his faith it shows that he does not really believe in the first place. Verses 26 and 27 shows how it stands at present.

Chapter 11 gives examples of what faith in the Ever-present Reality can bring about. Moses (verse 27) "saw" the invisible. This means that he possessed more than what is generally understood as being faith. This was not a blind faith but a true understanding of the nature of God.

Chapter 12. Here again is shown the pattern of events before one arrives at the "holy city" of God. This chastening is the kind of process which appears to the senses. The message of verses 12-18 is that one has to straighten himself out before he can enter the final mysteries. The personal training given by us is similar to this. The choice is that the candidate sees which side he is on. The more his illusions are stripped away the more his real nature is revealed. The degree of "suffering" is determined by himself.

Verses 21-23 gives the allegorical language of those who have attained.

Chapter 13. As respecting verses 1 and 2 it is possible to meet genuine "angels" in the flesh and by being responsive to the Reality one's awareness will be quickened by recognition of the fact. A subject reserved for personal students.

Verse 9 restates the need to remain unmoved by the illusions of the world.

THE CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION

CLASSIFIED

Our True Heritage

Because, in Truth, all men and women are the Sons and Daughters of God, the Heavenly Father, we should not count ourselves as being of any particular earthly race or country. There can be no peace on Earth whilst there are those who dwell in their own darkness of racial concepts. There can be no peace whilst followers of Life, Light and Love refer to themselves as European, Asian or African, and squabble over territorial rights. To seek to possess land and large amounts of property, and to believe that one has a right to possess areas of this planet, and exploit them solely for personal gain, is one of the main causes of the mass suffering, of starvation and disease, of this age.

In the Epistle to the Ephesians, it is written, "Ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints and of the household of God." Yet Christendom remains divided on the issues it claims to follow. "Christian" still hates "Christian" and is willing to fight should one threaten the possessions of another.

This planet is a satellite of the Sun and it is upon the life-giving emanations from our Sun that all men rely for their existence. Even our very thoughts and the ability to think and to do comes from the Sun. Without the Sun we would have no consciousness or experience of being. In this light we are all Sons of the Sun. The Sun principle is the "Melchisedek"consciousness mentioned in the scriptures. It is the doorway through which every man must walk to become aware of his maturity and immortality. It is the way that all must go to awaken to the "fulness of the Godhead bodily" - the path of true gnosis - the Christ in every man revealed on Earth.

In truth every human is searching for Love, Happiness and Peace. Those whom we see as thieves, murderers and power-seekers are really looking through the dark veil of their own imaginings to reach their goal.

In reality every being is a beautiful star shining in the manifested world of God's own consciousness. According to the Gospel of St. John, God's word is the "Light of every man who came into the world". Thus, to the awakened Son of God, sects and cults (Christianity being one of these also) cease to exist. Every organised religion is simply a system of dogmas and doctrines invented by men who believe that within these religions they can help other to live an ordered life.

We have seen that all men are really seeking for the right way. The failure to achieve happiness is caused by the built-up ideas one has of one's self and and others - also regarding the laws of life.

Man has faith in many things. "Faith is in getting, or receiving", says the Gospel of Philip - "Love is in giving". The reign of Love and Peace on Earth does not refer to the supremacy of any particular organised religion, but to the expression of Love in every human heart towards his fellows.

The power behind the Christ Sun is the True Ruler of our Solar System and the Universe. The wonderful thing is that our Sun cannot be affected or mis-used by man in any way; neither can its purpose be thwarted or its power swayed. It is a living symbol of the nature of God. The Sun's nature and essence is Pure Love. This Pure Love is the Living Substance of all manifested Life. Therefore, all creatures are one and are united in the Oneness and wholeness of this Holy Love.

The Holy Love of our Sun cannot be organised by groups, neither can any knowledge of it be accurately defined by theologians, astronomers or physicists: it remains ever a mystery save to those who become its co-workers - the Sons of the Sun.

Helping our fellow men and women to find happiness can be likened to one seeking a loved one lost in a mist. The mist of human inventions clears and the loved one appears in the light just as he, or she, has always been, but unknown to him- or her-self.

The Holy Love of the Solar Consciousness, which is the symbol of the Ascended Christ or Melchisedek - the Order of the Perfect Man, can be reached in the heart of every human being by the recognition of the same. In silent communion with Cosmic Love we feel free. We share the vibrant up-lifting power that pulsates in the heart of every being throughout the Universe for the Universe is centred in man. In this untouched centre all Life is One. Love, Peace and Joy are the realities of this inner kingdom.

To find true happiness one should look beyond the doctrines of "good and evil". As long as we acknowledge the continued fight between two opposing forces, we are never going to be free. The Light and Love of God is shown in the life of every creature, therefore, nothing is either "good" or "bad" in a conflicting sense. When we can come to learn that all men and women are brothers and sisters in one large family, wars will cease. We come to love our "enemies" because we realise there are no enemies to hate. Pain and suffering too will cease because these are the effects of an inner conflict or wrong view of life. Health, wholeness, harmony and plenty are the sure evidence of a life free from the mis-guided philosophies of this world and human supposition.

ORDER OF MELCHISEDEK
STUDY PAPER No. 2.

CLASSIFIED

Introduction

Most of the works about Gnosticism have been written from an orthodox christian's point of view. Even the publication and reviews of the Nag Hammadi Library has been the work of orthodox christians. The manuscripts contain an amount of Gnostic Teaching written in the familiar cryptic language which seeks to convey an inner spiritual meaning and does not relate to any actual "historical", or factual, incident of the people and places concerned.

Orthodox christians are so used to looking at an objective life and teaching of the man Jesus - whereas the name Jesus, his associates, his journeyings refer to spiritual processes actually taking place in the life of him who walks Jesus-like or Christ-like in his life here and now. The Gnostic "heaven" is a reality here and now. Because man reflects the eternal he cannot die - so he cannot expect "resurrection" from a state which never occurs!

"Resurrection", to the Gnostic, means leading an entirely new and enlightened life in the eternal moment.

To ask a Gnostic Christian if he believes in Jesus Christ does not mean does he believe in a person of this name who is supposed to have lived, died, resurrected and saved the world - it means does he believe in "the Way, the Truth and the Life?" That is - the way of a dedicated, pure life studying and applying the Truth or the Gnosis of the Soul.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

There have been several books written about ancient Britain and many about the first "christian" church. Some argue for and others argue against the truth of the existing claims. The present day Christian Church has so soverlaid its dogmas and doctrines over the facts and teachings of the Celtic Church that little is now known of what it really taught. The question can still be asked, "who was this Joseph who brought the Christos Cult to these Islands in the first century A.D.?"

What is more startling is the admittance, within the Scriptures, that the bible stories are but allegories. See Galations chapter 4, verse 24. Here, the supposed writer, Paul, gives us the clue. If this statement is taken to be correct then the complete "history" from Abram, anyway, is but an allegory. Thus the New Testament books giving geneaology of "Jesus" from Adam can have nothing to do with an actual living person.

In the light of the above then - all names of supposed living persons must conceal some other meaning than that of actual personalities. Melchisedek, Joseph of Arimathea Jesus and Mary, Peter, John and all the apostles contain hidden spiritual meanings instead.

Regarding the true facts on the historical Jesus let us see here where many researchers have tried, and failed, to establish any real evidence for the actuality of such a person. There have been, however, many people who have reflected similar happenings in their lives and have demonstrated remarkable powers and have taught "the way of enlightenment" to their pupils.

One researcher claims that he can "prove", without a doubt, that Jesus was Onias the Just and gives his data to support the evidence. Another does exactly the same thing and "proves" that the Gospel Jesus was modelled on Apollonius of Tyana. There is real evidence still extant regarding this teacher - proof is available of him actually owning a house. Then there is the Teacher of Righteousness mentioned in the Qumrum Scrolls - the writings of the Essene Brotherhood. Many prefer to accept him as this same Jesus.

Another group says that Jesus is the Jeshu ben Pandira mentioned in the Talmud for he actually lived and died exactly as the Old Testament predicted. Furthermore, there is one who can "prove" that the name "Jesus Christ" is never mentioned by the early Church Fathers but was the result of the agreement to join together the names of the Druid Sun God Hesus, or Yesu, with the Hindu saviour Christna at a council convened around the fourth century A.D.

A certain Muslim sect claims that Jesus was revived by medicines after the Crucifixion, lived to a ripe old age and was buried in Srinagar - they have his tomb! We feel that if the facts are true it should prove to be the body of Apollonius because it is known that he escaped death and went to study with the Brahmins and, possible, died there.

Recent archaeological discoveries by the Israelis reveal more disturbing evidence. They claim that many of the Christian sites such as the Via Dolorosa, the Tomb, etc. were not, or could not have been, in existence during the supposed time of Jesus so in spite of all the evidence that is possible to acquire the result is a stalemate.

When the men, who were trying to be honest about the background of the Christian Religion, wrote "The Myth of God Incarnate" there was a great outcry from those who were satisfied to rely on "belief only" - whether, or not, the facts could be proved. All the facts, to date, really show that, somewhere along the way, from the eighth century onwards, the allegories teaching a spiritual "Christ within" have become "carnalised into the belief in a man who actually appeared within the "time and space" area within the world and that "this man" was able to cancel out the "sins" for those who "believed in him". Let the happenings of the past centuries and the lives of the "christians" today speak for the proof of this event'.

The key, within the scriptures themselves, which was known by the Gnostic Christians, as opposed the the "christian"christians as they have been called, can be found in the writings attributed to one St. Paul where we warns of relying on, "endless geneaologies", Titus 3 : 9, and we can discover that the "other Jesus" he mentions in 2 Corinthians 11 : 4 is the "historical" one which has to be proved by a geneaology, which, if his statement in Galatians is believed to be correct then he, Paul, must be referring to the Inner Cosmic Christ, within. See: 2 Timothy 3 : 16 & 17; Titus 1 : 1-3; Romans 16 : 25 & 26; Epistle to the Ephesians; Colossians chapter 1 and 2 : 9 & 10.

The mystical teachings that can be discovered in the Holy Bible, with the right keys, agree with the highest teachings contained in the books from the Eastern religions and indicate that a traditional knowledge, regarding God and man, has been known by initiates the world over stemming from around some 200,000 years ago. Thus this "Paul" is admonishing his students to follow the true Gnosis of God which can be discovered only within the area of mind. The "Gospel Jesus", in this light, is taken to be the pattern of experiences had by everyman who follows the path to the "Ascension" - or release from the illusion of "the world".

"Jesus", says the Gospel of Philip in the Nag Hammadi Codices, means "redemption" or the way to redemption. Nazarene refers to "the Truth". "Christ" the Messiah "the measured" or anointed. Thus "Jesus", the "Nazarene", the "Christ" indicates that the one following the discipline, or measure, the Nazarene, reveals the Christ, truth, in the secret, or hidden, name of Jesus. This teaching coincides with the hidden meanings, given for his name, in the Acts of John in the Apocryphal New Testament. To the Gnostics all Scriptural names and places represent the cryptic language of the Mysteries and not to actual persons or geographical locations.

The "Resurrection" of the "christians" is believed to be the man Jesus resurrecting from an actual rock tomb - whereas the Gnostic Christians, as revealed in the Nag Hammadi Codices, teach that the Resurrection is an already established spiritual Truth. To live the life of a "resurrected one" means that one will eventually experience this spiritual Reality in this life here and now - says these Scripts.

The Established "Christian" Church, along with many new sects today, have taught a Christ of "envy and strife" (Phillipians 1 : 15 & 16) and they have destroyed the very roots of that element of mystical union within their teachings which they could do with today. This church is now trying to use other props to support the movement by introducing such borrowed exercieses from other teachings such as "christian yoga", "christian Zen", pop music and "miracles" that might swell the numbers within the congregations.

The Gnostics believed in a total Spiritual interpretation of the Scriptures as opposed to the "christian" christians who believe in an historical Christ. Since the recent publication of the Nag Hammadi Library it is possible that they will be ridiculed by narrow-minded readers. So accustomed are the Orthodox Church Theologians to giving a materialistic view of the Scriptures that an entirely misunderstood view of these Scripts might be given.

All Scriptures, including the Greek Mythos, were, and still are used by the Chrestian Ecclesia for they see these as mere devices, or systems, to help one awake to God-realisation - which is the goal and final destiny of everyman. As the Gospel of John puts it "the light that lighteth every man who comes into the world". This Light is the natural reality of being, veiled by earthly ideas and suppositions, which is imminent and transcendentant.

To try to interpret the Gnostic Scripts from a materialistic point of view surely makes nonsense of them. The strange allegories and seemingly "historical" happenings are never intended in Gnostic teachings to be physical realities. Thus, the average orthodox christian finds it most difficult to divorce the spiritual myth from its seeming disorganised appearance and as long as one looks for rationality and history he will never break the code of the Gnostic Cryptic language. In like manner as the Greek myths reveal inner truths so too - the Gnostic stories reveal the Gnosis of the Soul. So, which must be disappointing to orthodox Christians, this Nag Hammadi Library cannot reveal any more information, or facts, to prove the life of a historical Jesus.

To believe that the Eternal Christ has been "saving" mankind from ignorance for a mere two thousand years is evidence that those who believe it are still in darkness.

.....

"Now we are told in Heb.vii.28 that "The law maketh men priests which have infirmity; but the word of the oath,which was since the law, maketh the Son who is consecrated for evermore." This Son,we are to understand, is a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec, which, being interpreted, means King of Righteousness, King of Peace. As God sware by Himself there was a witness in Himself,and, as the Son is one with the Father, the witness is in the Son also; for there cannot be a Father unless there be a Son,nor a Son unless there be a Father. We have abundant testimony in the Bible that this Divine Nature is ours "by the Grace in which we stand". "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the Sons of God".(Rom.viii.I4). "And I will be a Father unto you and ye shall be my sons and daughters," saith the Lord Almighty (2 Cor.vi. 8)."

" The Way of Melchisedec" by L.B.Whitney.

.....

CLASSIFIED

THE ORDER OF MELCHISEDEK
An introduction to the Teachings of the Sun Priests.

Light, as the physicists describe it, is a form of electro- magnetic energy emanated by the Sun or other source.

This light is divided up into many octaves for the purpose of observation and investigation.

Mankind is,physically, aware of only one of these octaves of light,among the many, in the whole range of electro-magnetic light spectrum.

In spite of all this man is under the impression that he can discover his origin - and that of the Universe - by the observation of a few particles put to test in a laboratory. This is the ignorance of man in activity. Forgetting that the Universe operates as a mighty,self-governed, unified Whole, man believes that he can learn the mysteries of this Universe by the observation of the behaviour of a single particle.

If a visitor from outer space were to land on a cannibal island he would, probably, assess the intelligent life on this planet by observing the behaviour of one human being. He might be tempted to say that all humans were dark-skinned' hunted with spears, and ate other people.

If man really desires to fathom the depths of the Univers he has to observe the movement of every Sun, planet,life-form and atom operating as a unified whole - in every dimension simultaneously - which is , of course, a shere impossibility..

The Christ says "I am the Vine, ye are the branches" . Can the branch of a tree learn the Source,Life and Origin of the Whole Tree? Can one unit know the experience of every other leaf, twig and branch of the Whole Tree? Not as a mortal can he evr come to know any of these things - so all that he has learned is but as ashes in the dust. The Whole situation could be likened to a man who believes tHAt he can see all that goes on in a public park by looking through a pin-hole in the fence.

In spite of all we have said here we should not spurn the human condition for herein lies the key to the Hall of Double Truth which was portayed in the mysteries by two featers.

This means that the teachings of "non-duality" and "duality" are valid as far as human understanding can fatom. Can a feather scratch a diamond?

Our Sun is one of the mightiest of all visible symbols as evidence for eternal life. Its Light is the greatest "physical symbol to our five senses - for without the Sun all life in our Solar System; including all the ultra- dimensional aspects, would be non-existent - whatever one might believe about God or any other doctrines. To the Ancients the Sun was the very visible form of God,their actual Father, and they knew themselves to be, in very essence, Sons of the Sun. They possessed secret knowledge on how to commune with their Father knowing that they were the living forms of His Radiant Light Energy. This knowledge became "lost" as these True Sons were persecuted and murdered ,through the successive generations, by those who sought polical power - among those being the forerunners of the established church and political systems of today.

What those within the established and publicly "recognised" institutions do not know is the knowledge of the already established "Spiritual" world which is peopled by intelligences that come and go within the "material" realm to help those struggling to free themselves from the illusory and false "sciences" in the world of materialism. The worldly sciences are founded on knowledge supposedly acquired by experimenting on life as it appears within the area of the human senses and this leads those engaged in such researches to make many contradictory and "dead-end" conclusions. To investigate any form of life one has to take into consideration the other many areas of consciousness in which form,or forms, are manifest . Unless a subject is understood from all its potentials, its true source and its relationship with all other forms, it is not rightly undertood and so "specialised" or particular "branches" of science are invalid as far as true knowledge is concerned.

The established church is supposed to be an authority on "God" - yet still refuses to act on the information that this "God" reveales from time to time and still seeks to mainatain its authority on outworn creeds and dogmas.. Divine Truths are continually being revealed to man according to his understanding of that Power Which Rules the Cosmos - and no person has the right to dictate or legislate what steps another MUST follow. The exercise of such powers shows a seeking for power over lesser minds to keep them in subjection to certain standards. The establishment is guilty of this at all times. Until one can free himself from the attachment of the teachings put out by the Churches, Universities and Colleges that are allied to the body Political he stands little chance of being reborn as a Divine Son of God.

This does not mean that one should immediately react and go all out against the way of the world - it is they who will react against us- as is usually the way. We are not against people; but against the systems they follow.

Because we are sincerely seeking to know the truth which makes us free we come to learn the TRUE way of Love and Wisdom - and so just quietly refuse to accept any other knowledge.

Quite a lot of knowledge,even in the so-called "spiritual" field is based,solely, upon supposition. For example, there is much discussion going on, during this time, about "Reincarnation". This is because many are trying to recall the "lost" teaching regarding this - for there was a proper knowledge of this subject transmitted in the schools before they were suppressed by the existing church. We say that unless one receives the true facts about "reincarnation" from within your own source you stand little chance of understanding it correctly. One does not find the answers in books.

There are many pseudo-sciences given out to the public in the understanding that these teachings are "esoteric knowledge". A few of the more wel-known ones are popular astrology, tarot,ouiga boards,numerology,talismans and some forms of "magic". Some popular forms of meditation do little more than relax the physical body and do not confer any awakening of true spirituality.

We would like to mention here that true spiritual developement is not concerned with facts or figures as they appear in this area of the senses. Our Heavenly Father is not concerned with communicating information regarding the dates, numbers, or the size and shape of things. This misunderstanding has grown from the allegories appearing in the Holy Bible where God has supposedely communicated this kind of information. The Bible was written in Cryptic language so as to conceal the genuine teachings from the unitiated. (We can also assure you that, in all the thousands of books that have been written on the mysteries and their teachings, that not one Initiate has yet divulged the true teachings. Such is the power of the Final Truths that they would destroy those who are unprepared.) The Universal Intelligence is not interested in our contributing to the arts and sciences, as some in charge of certain religious institutions believe,. These are the transient and fore-ever changing aspects of our beliefs and unbeliefs. Todays moral standards ars tomorrows stumblig-blocks..

The Universal Intelligence,God, communicates only such information as is benef icial to cur spiritual growth. This means that the true Spiritual Teaching is concerned only with the nourishment and growth of the "immortal soul" in each of us and does not always provide for the achievement of comfortable conditiond and success within the material world.

Over the past half-century many interesting discoveries have been made in the fields of Spiritual Science. One or two groups, working entirely independent of each other, have re-discovered the true,legal and moral, techniques used by the ancient Sun Kings and Priests which enabled them to manipulate the right functions of community living and organise the conditions necessary for harmonious growth. These secrets are,however, still guarded by those concerned and form the basis for a return to the True and Ancient Religion that was followed by all men before the mythical Flood. This means that all that which is now publicly accepted as being "exoteric" or "esoteric" teaching is obselete as far as the true doctrines are cocerned. The "Golden Age" is again re-focussed in man's direction and he has now the opportunity to reclaim his original angelic nature. The Great Central Lodge of the true mysteries is again open to all.

From what we have said it would appear that there semms little to rely upon in the systems and teachings remaining in the world. What we are really saying is that man should look in new directions for his furure existence. No matter how lofty any teaching apears in this world it is only a mere Shadow of the Real.

There is much talk about "lost secrets" and "secret powers"; but to the re-born Son of the Sun there is nothing hidden or lost.

Let each Son of Light greet the Sun of Righteous each day realising that Our Father is incarnate in each and every man.

We say that just as the revelations of the Christ some two thousand years ago cut across the teachings of that time - so does that which is now re-discovered cut across that which is, at present, accepted by many to day.

CLASSIFIED

THE TEACHINGS OF THE SUN PRIESTS part 2

* * * * * * * * * * * *

The secrets of the power exercised by the ancient Sun Priests is based upon the hypotheses that everything we ever knew, now know and ever will know is emanated from the Sun's own "Spiritual Centre" because the Sun is an intelligent agent in its own right that is in communion, and operating in conjunction with, the over-riding Intelligence of the whole Cosmos.

This means that all the forces, powers and energies emanated by the Sun are intermingled and evenly dispersed throughout the whole electro-magnetic Light beams. Thus, those waves and particles that are considered dangerous to the human organism by todays scientists are not dangerous when encountered in their oneness with the whole Light Spectrum. It is only when technologists isolate these "rays" to perform specific functions as "X-rays", "Gamma" rays, etc. that they become hazards to man when they are used indiscriminately.

Whilst certain other isolated rays such as ultra-violet is considered to have a damaging effect in humans it is known in the inner sacred schools that highly developed "spiritual" beings are capable of absorbing large amounts of "ultra-violet" rays and emanate the same in their normal existence. This means that the more "spiritually" evolved a person becomes the more adaptable he is to the "higher" frequency rates occuring in the realms of Light. This indicates that the many dimensions of conscious awareness and separate existence are all contained in the Sun's own physical organism, the Solar System, and the Sun's own "mind" or active Intelligence Quality.

It can be seen now why the great teachers stressed the importance of "Light" in their teachings. Light in its physical qualities is responsible for the worlds of form as we know them. Life, Colour and Beauty all stem from the sensual experience of Light in our physical bodies which are really co-agulated conditions of light energy. In fact if it was not for Light we would be non-existent.

The entreatment to "follow the Light" and to become "Enlightened" are encouragements to man to broaden his understanding regarding the Organism to which he belongs and not to get "bogged down" in his own narrow concepts. The seeker for Light is encouraged to adapt himself to become aware of the immortal nature within the whole realms of Light so that he becomes a more efficient vehicle for the God-Sun to use. Thus he becomes really a Son of the Sun.

Mortals, as we know them, perish at death and if their experience of "resurrection" has not been had in the human state they remain attached to the physical "living and dying" state until they have consciously come to know their true state. As "mortals" we are continually "experiencing birth and death". As Immortals we overcome the experience of "birth and death" and become actively conscious individuals in our immortal state and do not have our consciousness withdrawn as in the previous state when one was consciousless before returning.

Thus we possess a "continuity of consciousness". We become conscious of our immortality. One can readily see how one then knows where he has come from, who he is and where he is bound.

The physical light-body of man is, therefore, a computer in which all the knowledge of our Solar System is locked. Once man learns how to unlock the secrets of himself extraordinary powers are at his disposal. The keys to this unlocking were given during the candidates progression in the Sacred School.

These ancients believed that every organ, and part of their bodies had its corresponding Principle in the invisible worlds and by certain techniques, still known today, were able to align themselves with these other worlds therefore enabling them to commune with the intelligences in higher spheres.

To commune with intelligences in "higher spheres" does not mean the way it is done in modern spiritualism which, in the main, only acquires information relative to a "mortal" experience. There is a vast difference between information obtained from "passed over" humans (whose knowledge is relative only to the human state) and intelligences that are already at seemingly fixed parts within the Solar Hierarchical structure.

Genuine knowledge from the higher levels of being are concerned only with the ways and means of progression through the higher experiences in Cosmic Consciousness. Usually, messages obtained by "psychic" means are concerned only with encouraging us onwards in the philosophies and teachings we already have and can give us no new information past the temporary "post-morten" states - whereas true "spiritual" information can be acquired only from the levels of consciousness that transcend the existing "post-morten" states - that is - from humans that have supposedly "gone-onwards" or "forwards" within the "time and space" sequence of recent occurrences. The quest for advanced knowledge must transcend all that which is known within the mortal state and, as the ancient schools taught, to fully understand the teachings of the "Gods" or "Immortals" one has to first come into the experience of his own immortality - this is the true resurrection of the "immortal soul" in man.

This also indicates that those who believe that they can acquire "higher knowledge" or obtain true enlightenment without the observation and application of the true moral teachings contained in the already existing scriptures, as basic and incomplete as they may be, are simply deceiving themselves and their followers. Unless one has learned to discipline his unbalanced human nature and made an attempt to purify his thought processes he will not be ready for the more"advanced" frequencies of Solar or Cosmic Consciousness.

CLASSIFIED

THE TRUE NATURE OF DARKNESS

Darkness is the Womb out of which the Light is Born

Darkness is the manifested Feminine Nature of the Cosmos.

Darkness is the medium on which the seeds of manifestation stir where the new-babe is nourished and sustained until it is born into the Light.

Darkness is the warm,friendly and snug place wherein we are prepared for Service.

It is our Mother, Wife and (Daughter (Sister for the male Light is our Father, Husband and (Son (Brother for the Female

There is no harmful thing in the Universe.

That which is beyond the Darkness and the Light is the Great Central Sun - the seeming Unknowable.

Our only enemies are our own wilful pursuits.

We pray for the Light because we do not fully understand Our Mother! Light is the Darkness Revealed.

---ooOoo---

The Solar Teachings are the most ancient and natural teachings on this planet. They were preserved by the Patriarchs who were the Sun Priest Kings and who come and go throught the ages to present the teachings anew.

The Solar Initiates are prepared to teach you if you are sincere and devoted to your personal enlightenment.

It is the Sun of God which is the Son of God for us.

The Life Essence in which we "live, move and have our being" is an Intelligence to be reckoned with. In spite of our own hypotheses and concepts about Life and our use or misuse of It, sooner or later we find that our human pursuits come to naught. The sooner we learn to co-operate with Cosmic Energies the sooner will humanity be liberated.

CLASSIFIED

TO WHOM DO YOU OWE ALLEGIANCE ?

THE KINGDOM OF LIGHT

Principality: The Isles of the Blest

* * * * * * * * * * * * *

As a citizen of this Kingdom your whole attitude is one of pure, unselfish Love - Agape. To become aware of, and experience, the reality of our Kingdom one ceases to react to all the claims, systems and philosophies of the realm of darkness.

Bring every department of our life under the Rule of Pure unselfish Love. Forget self-seeking. Blame nobody else for troubles.

Love dissolves the power of darkness and ignorance.

Here

We see the true nature of every man and woman.

Here

Man lives in the knowledge of Truth He has nothing to fear for he has no enemies.

Here

Natural right living. Response to Cosmic Harmony and Order. We know it to be true.

Here

The great Teachers are our brothers and we work along with them.

Here

We are loving others.

Here

We are at peace.

THE KINGDOM OF DARKNESS

Ruler: The Prince of Darkness whose name is IGNORANCE.

* * * * * * * * * * * * *

In this world sickness and suffering is caused by selfishness, lack of discipline and competition with one's fellows.

Citizens of this Kingdom demonstrate and protest against anything they don't like. They even use violence in their protest against violence and pass laws to protect themselves from their own conception of pure goodness.

Here

People hate each other and see others as being the cause of their troubles.

Here

Man lives by struggle, test and trial, supposition and ignorance.

Here

Religion, Politics and Law. You have to conform.

Here

The great Spiritual Teachers are helping us.

Here

We are being loved.

Here

Peace be unto you.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

No humanly contrived philosophies, hypotheses, excuses or actions are allowed to enter into the area of Divine Government.

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 71-78

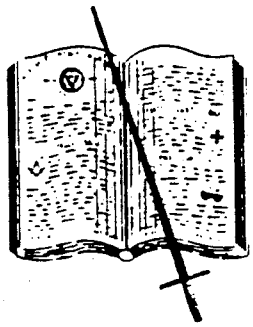
LIBER# 77 ALL IS QUIET AND PEACEFUL

Personal & Confidential SIXTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF MARTINIST STUDIES



Dear Companions

This Liber contains material that was sent to students over the period of one year. While some of the lectures are a little wordy and show the personal bias of the writer (i.e. as against other organizations), there are nevertheless many diamonds, emeralds and opals in the sand and debris.

We suggest a very careful reading and contemplation of all 12 lectures.

As we have recommended all through our journeying, take what you can use and leave the rest!

Sincerely in the Works
INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF MARTINIST STUDIES

77 00

The International College of Martinist Studies Inc., Worthing W31, Barbados, West Indies.

An Introduction to The New Church Universal

CLASSIFIED

Part 1

Many would agree that the idea of an organised church is obsolete because the adherence to set dogmas and creeds stifles the mind and prevents a natural approach to a loving union with nature.

There are those who argue that they are free from such attachments as "organisations" and narrow concepts but they forget that it was through the efforts of pioneers living out a true religion which made their seeking a success. Also, those who claim that they are free could be crystallised in their own idea of freedom itself!

Religions have come and gone throughout the history of mankind and the priesthood within these religions has preserved the highest thoughts and ideals on manuscripts, have helped many in their meditations and given solace in times of trouble.

At times in the history of religion there have been those who take stock of the old systems, revitalise them and present them in a new light to be of use to people in new situations and newly discovered technologies. The dream of the true priest is to present a world religion wherein all people can find a real sense of brotherhood with a philosophy so profound as to meet the needs of all races so that ethnic differences are overcome with wisdom. Such an achievement is possible when those who administer the large organisations are able to appreciate the fact that new revelations of truth are continually possible and are able to synthesis these new ideals into the already proven truths.

Because God or the First Cause is always in charge of human evolution and not man, this First Cause through its vehicles in time and space (hierarchy) moves certain individuals, who are sincere and honest seekers for truth, into action to cause a stirring in the dreamy systems of society and all kinds of seeming "disturbing" events occur. Man has to learn that he is not alone in the universe; that he is but a "cog in a wheel" in an ever changing cycle of events which drives him on to the creation of harmony and peace between all creatures and that his destiny is one of wholeness and perfection.

At this time mankind seems divided by its religions, politics and self set goals. There is division among the religions themselves and men argue and fight over their own interpretations of their own scriptures. The trouble is that everyone is under the illusion that their own concept is the only correct one and they fail to understand the magnitude of Cosmic Truth.

Why then should we have a New Religion? Have not the present ones caused enough wars and divisions and still do?

Whilst religion has been around for a long time and is not likely to go away, mankind still feels a need to enquire into his own make-up and to investigate his own personal relationship with the Universe. It has been the task of the Church (or Ekklesia) to help in this matter and it has been through the contribution in the lives and work of the True Priesthood that the stage wherein those "enlightened", or "free", people of today have reached their own conclusions - but life is never conclusive. Do we become set in our own concepts of enlightenment or freedom, or do we settle down in the satisfaction that we are one of those fortunate people who claim that they need religion no more? We should never "rest on our laurels" for the true priest is ever purifying him, or her, self so that new ideas from the inner levels can break through.

The True Priesthood, as we understand it, is not a priesthood bound with fixed dogmas but one wherein its doctrines are flexible, are modified along with the new revelations of truth and are adaptable to the ever-changing experiences in life.

Man is a 'spiritual' being and an organ or part of the Cosmic Intelligence or Life for the fulfilment of Its own purpose for us and Itself - therefore it can be only through teachers who are trained by this Intelligence that mankind as a whole, as well as individuals, can learn how to live in harmony with one another. It is one thing to receive beautiful revelations during periods of meditation but quite another to work our revelations out in the field of everyday chores and human contacts.

Events appearing in man's history are governed by the First Cause and mankind is able to use or misuse his new findings. He either uses his knowledge for his own good or inverts it through selfishness to his own destruction. Within the Cosmic Scheme of things man is like a child who is growing and learning by his mistakes; many fall by the wayside through their seeming inability to know what is going on and how to cope with the circumstances appearing in their immediate experiences.

In man's history great Leaders have arisen who have tried to impart to him the mystery of his own nature and have given the knowledge of the ways and means to make life more bearable, and information on how to live at peace with one another. Whilst this knowledge has been preserved by writing and is always available, man prefers to be like a "naughty child" and tries to bluff his way into Heaven.

From our own sources we have compiled a history of our former Gnostic Church and we felt that a similar idea with respect to this new venture would be of interest to students and to researchers at large.

First of all we would advise the reader that our change from institutionalised religion to a new approach should be a gentle and loving one. We have known many people who deliberately cut themselves off from organised groups because of their reaction against their historically unpleasant backgrounds. Later in life we find these same people creeping back because they have created a hiatus for themselves and find their interior life lacking. We should therefore approach a new situation with patience, honesty and sincerity--then all will be well. Bridges must be kept open.

It could be said that the arrival of Buddhism some 2,500 years ago heralded the later concept of the Christ - or the existence of the Divine Life, Light and Love in everyman.

However, as much of this knowledge was already understood during the early dynasties in ancient Egypt it was not publicly taught. It was the secret knowledge of the Priest Kings. It would also be of interest to mention here that both the Buddha and the Christ were Royal Princes. The Buddha, or enlightened one, being Prince Siddhartha and Jesus being of the Royal line of David. Later we shall mention the significance of this to enable us to prove that true Royalty is of a Divine Nature and that all who walk the royal path are considered to be of a special kind of nobility.

In this light we of our order take the attitude that we all belong to a Kingdom - not of the world with its striving and getting and exploitation of nature and people - but of a kingdom of Love, Peace, Harmony and Perfection and the laws that kingdom only do we follow. We have discovered that it is possible to externalise this kingdom in the lives of those who are prepared to turn away from all worldly philosophies and hypotheses. It is the work of the New Age Priest to externalize this concept.

Invocation of the Flame

"I call upon thee, O Living God, Radiant with illuminating fire. Overseer Parent of the Sun! Pour forth Thy light Giving Power and energise Thy Divine Spark. Enter into this Flame and let it be agitated by the Breaths of Thy Holy Spirit. Manifest Thy Power and open for me the temple of Almighty God which is wihtin this Fire! Manifest Thy Light for my regeneration, and let The Breath, Height, Fullness and Crown of the Solar Radiance appear,and may the God within shine forth!"

From "Comte de Gabalis"

An Introduction to The New Church Universal

CLASSIFIED

Part 2

The actual New-Age movement began at the beginning of this century. In the late Victorian era minds were stirring into new directions. Women began to feel their need to take more interest and to participate in religious and political affairs. They came up against much opposition from the male dominated society and this trend is now dying with useless struggles in the male dominated Priesthood. The arguments in favour of a solely male Priesthood are at least pedantic and indicate the fear people have of their own concepts of reality being disturbed.

In the book "Priesthood in the New Age" by Bishop Lewis S Keizer, Ph.D., he writes

> "We know something was happening. After all, there was revolution everywhere. The ancient institutions of monarchy and male supremacy were suddenly toppling to democracy and women's suffrage. Ancient theology had no choice but to begin assimilating the discoveries of the fledgling sciences. Suddenly we found ourselves blessed as never before with the fruits of knowledge, nature opening her secrets for our use in medicine, machinery, foods, and all of daily life.
>
> "But we also found ourselves carrying the awesome burden of responsibility no longer for just ourselves, but for the mineral, plant, and animal kingdoms - for the environment, and for the very survival of the planet. Our great blessings brought with them profound responsibilities that if unrecognised or not assumed, carried the curse of ultimate extinction.
>
> "The institutions of medieval religion lost their relevance and began to crumble, giving way either to zealous, crystallised fundamentalism or the existential void of meaningless materialism tempered by heroic efforts to create a brave humanistic ethic - but an ethic based on the old humanity and on unenlightened and most limited materialism.
>
> "In fact, all Reality is material, and materialism can be a philosophy that carries the human spirit into infinity. But we just don't understand enough about "matter" to properly conceive such a philosophy.
>
> "The old age began to crack apart like the husk of a living seed, bringing forth its treasure into full manifestation."

The writer of this series found himself involved in many different fields of research, light energy, colour therapy, psychology and comparative religions. In 1958 he became a Gnostic Bishop of the Pre Nicene-Catholic Church which was the sacerdotal section of some long standing mystical orders. 1968 found him researching the facts behind the controversial Order of Melchisedek and later founding The Church of the Ascension which, after a short life, fulfilled its purpose in enabling other branch groups to come into being.

We have discovered also that some of the monarchical chivalric orders are now concentrating their efforts on the preservation of wildlife and plantlife where extinction of certain species seems possible.

So in every department of human endeavour, wherein the now outworn systems of masonry, esoteric orders and mystical teachings have been perpetuated, a new light and a new approach is being discovered. The New Age Priest needs no longer to be attached to several groups for his, or her, spiritual needs but rather they must stay with a closely knit cell so that a larger quantum of incoming energies might be possible. In fact one must learn from fellow travellers - share with them and discover a fellowship of like minds seeking the same goal.

Since most of the so-called "esoteric" teachings have now been "blown" - that is to say that one can find most systems in books and it is foolish to continue to name such things as tarot, astrology, numerology, magic and meditation 'esoteric' for it is obvious that now they are exoteric, if we must use those terms. What one can do now is buy a book on the rituals and teachings of an order and then start up on one's own without knowing the correct interpretation of the teachings, and this is what appears to be happening.

In this "New Age" we should establish an entirely new form of teaching which can point genuine ways to human enlightenment wherein one learns to control one's own inner energies and forms, rather than relying on some external ritual or system which fails to deliver the results.

Training for the New-Age Priesthood is already under way in America and ordinations to Deacon and Priest have taken place.

Over here we have a three year course. The first year being probationary in which we study basic subjects including "The Priesthood for the New Age" which sets the tone for the whole training. After a further two years of study which includes such subjects as the inner gnosis of the teachings of Jesus and Gautama, meditation and working with the Hierarchy, and the secrets of the Sun, candidates are ready for the Diaconate wherein they learn the actual functions of becoming a channel for their own Divine Immortal Self and service to the whole of mankind.

Unlike the Priests of a closed order our work is out in the world cultivating a realisation of Oneness with the Cosmos. No task should be too trivial or responsibility too great.

Our study ofJesus' teachings differs from what is taught in institutional religion. We understand that Jesus never insisted on set dogmas or set forms of liturgy.

Here are some extracts from "The Wandering Bishops, Heralds of a New Christianity" by Dr Lewis Keizer.

> "Observe how differently the words of Jesus appear when translated correctly in Mark's summary of his preaching 1:15 'The great cycle has been fulfilled and the Kingdom of God has drawn near. Submit and be faithful to the Message.'
>
> "In the King James version the same pasage is translated according to medieval protestant ideas of 'faith': 'The time is fulfilled and the Kingdom of God is at hand. Repent ye, and believe the Gospel.'
>
> "In the same way the great Pauline revelation that it is through interior faithfulness of purified intent that people please or "are justified" by God, rather than by means of animal sacrifice and other works of Torah, has been terribly distorted by Luther and the rest of protestantism. The doctrine of Justification by Faith first promulgated by Luther means simply (as popularly understood) that no one needs to do good works to please God. One has simply to say the magical credal words, and one will be "saved". Luther, of course, was opposing such abuses of God's justice as the sale of plenary indulgences or divine pardons to the highest bidder by Roman prelates. He tried to make people understand that God's approval could not be bought or sold. In the process of what might be called the pejorification of spiritual teaching, however, his insight has come down history as the doctrine of Justification by Faith (i.e. Belief). The idea seems to be that if you 'believe' the right way, you are acceptable to God. If your theological opinions are orthodox, God Loves you."
>
> "For this reason, "God's Simple Plan of Salvation" is theologically orthodox when it asserts that by simply repeating a magical phrase of contrition in the name of Jesus Christ, the reader can lay claim to "salvation". Spiritually, however, it is a monstrous lie."

Further on Dr Keizer writes:

> "Christian theology undertook the blasphemous task of creating a "science of God". That which cannot be spoken about was the subject of semantic debates which often resulted in bloodshed and schism. From this mess of pottage comes the development of dogma and creed which has characterised Christianity ever since".
>
> "We stated with Jesus, the God-like wise person who was the first-born of all the dead - the true victor over death, ignorance and evil .....We ended with a white porcelain Christ hanging over the altar of a darkened church, oozing faded streams of red paint into representations of chalices. How subtly the meanings have changed!"

The New-Age Priesthood is working to restore that purity of the original spiritual teachings which have been distorted over the centuries. It has also restored the "Apostolic Succession" to its rightful place within the Hierarchical structure of passing on the pure undiluted forms of personal integration within their own spheres of experience. No longer do we need to enter "esoteric" lodges or seek a guru in the Himalayas - the "secret of life" is within oneself and as we run around looking hither and thither for answers we end in disappointment and unfulfilment. One needs to find a true teacher who will guide the candidate through the trials of his, or her, own uncontrolled nature and be helped and encouraged to enter the way of the ancient and revered discipline of the self. As an integrated Priesthood working with partners transmuting the lower passions into compassion and exercising one's inner energies towards the upliftment of all mankind. The Cosmos is a "wholeness" and everything is contained within It as a whole and perfect unit which comprises the "Whole". To seek possession of anything for ones-self therefore is to rob ones-self and no other. We must not fall for the modern supposed form of enlightenment wherein one justifies one's action by claiming that they are "experimenting" with spiritual forces. These people are, in the main, satisfying their own unrequited desires and using it as an excuse.

Spiritual Truths are already known by the true teachers and one does not need to "experiment" but simply to apply the keys. Unless one is pure there can be no depth of right experience.

An Introduction
to
The New Church Universal

CLASSIFIED

Part 3

Being aware that the key to the true gnosis of God is that everything works from within outwards, indicates to the Priest that the innate Sonship or Daughtership of God needs to be externalised into "worldly" realities. We transmute the lower nature of the mass subconscious into the Divine Nature. Note we never destroy anything: we uplift everything into a new dimension of a more beautiful and refined experience so that our external world becomes a real pattern of the inner "heavenly kingdom" in our everyday experience. No longer do we dream or hope for the manifestation of a Divine Pattern on earth - we actually project It into a three dimensional Reality. This can be achieved by complete submission to the Divine Will in each one of us - that our personal will be illumined by the Greater Light of Truth from within. No longer do we chase after rainbows or 'inner' states of peace and harmony; but bring these things into the whole range of human experience - the God made 'flesh'. "In Him (the Divine Reality) lies the fulness of the Godhead bodily", writes St Paul.

If you are already following a philosophy of life and you do not find fulfilment in it, or it does not help you to overcome your own weaknesses, then you should use your powers of discrimination and be honest with yourself that you are not really succeeding. Too many students of Truth - or whatever one calls it - fall by the wayside because they try to uplift themselves from the point of their own limited understanding and refuse to look at their blockages or limitations through the eyes of their teacher or elder brother. Although we are each personally responsible for our own rising and falling, the Hierarchy provides an Elder Brother or Sister to assist us when we reach "blind spots" in our own perception. Some students are afraid to face up to their own pitfalls and therefore remain unfulfilled and unhappy.

In this new society we have no personal life - this is given over to God who fills it in for us. The new age community functions as one whole unit and everyone shares each others experiences and become a closely knit Holy Family externalising the Inner Kingdom in their everyday life: in their minding of babies, household duties, wage-earning and everything over the whole gamut of human experience. In this kind of situation one discovers the Real Person within oneself and a sense of satisfaction and joy is the result.

We have met those who are afraid to take this step because they fear that they will lose their individuality and just exist like a "vegetable". This is only a concept maintained by the fear that they are going to lose the 'lower nature' attachments. The truth regarding the situation is that one becomes more of an individual because one discovers one's own level and is able to express themselves more fully in contributing their personal gifts to the community. In fact in the sharing of joys and disappointments one is able to grow into a state of maturity in the very work of becoming a server of God. By "community" we do not mean a number of people settled in a kind of 'Campus' as is the usual practice. In our work we lead our lives where we are in our own homes serving our family, then at times come together with the other members to learn, share and refresh ourselves. This indicates that wherever we are the idea of community exists - even in the seemingly 'divided' world, we are living right where we are, yet knowing that we really belong to the Real Kingdom which manifests from within outwards. We subscribe only to that kingdom in philosophy and practice and regard the 'religio-political' state of the world as alien to the true nature of mankind. This Inner Kingdom will gradually emerge Principality by Principality in the outward area until the whole planet vibrates to the full power of Love.

What can we do to help ourselves further on the way to the Christos?

First, all we should ever keep in mind is that all there is in Reality and truth is God and God meted out in Its Creation. Thus God is the All-inclusive Principle in the Cosmos and This Principle is manifested in Its Wholeness and Completeness in each one of us. There are no favourites - not even with Saints or Priests, Bishops or Popes, or even Sun Priest Kings: God is no Respector of Persons but He/She emanates Its qualities and nature evenly throughout all space. Thus, as we mentioned earlier, in this knowledge (Divine Gnosis) it is possible to experience the fulness (Pleroma) of the Godhead bodily. When we are able to externalise this Life within to the full then we make a "Quantum" leap in our spiritual enlightenment. Because that which is Ever True and is the Reality of Being It can never be destroyed - for it is the Permanent Spirit of Life. All we have to do then is to remove all the dross of human supposition and conjecture about Life and Reality then must be in evidence for you. This is an individual task and therefore we follow Jesus' instruction when he taught, "Work out your own salvation".

Each of us has to be born again in the Light that each of us has, to clear away our own dark clouds which obscure the Inner Light (mentioned in St John's Gospel). As we clear away our clouds of doubt, fear and selfish pursuits the Light of Truth fills the areas which are purified by Love and Wisdom. The more practice we get at emptying ourselves, the more the Love and Wisdom of God shines forth. This is not an easy path otherwise we would have the Kingdom of God realised on Earth in a very short time.

Because each one of us is unique to God it behoves us to unfold our own personal gifts which He/She will use within the whole community to that which is required to maintain harmony. Not one of us has to be lost because each of us is rather special inasmuch as we each represent a facet of God's own Life and therefore are needed to complete a wholeness of Divine Function here in the world. We are not here just for a "willy-nilly" existence!

Every effort you make towards your own Divine Self is met by help from God's own Hierarchy. This Hierarchy is made up of special 'people' who have trod this path before you and are in a special situation to help you - or offer you a brotherly or sisterly hand over the sticky patches through which you will often find yourself. God meets you at every level through one of His/Her representatives or Elders when you sincerely and honestly need help. In this light it is unwise to judge or formulate (pre-conceive) the way in which help will come to you. If you try to envisage how help might come - you will either keep it away or fail to recognise it when it comes your way. In all things then, live in contemplation of God's everpresence and get on with doing the things you have to do - to shoulder your everyday responsibilities to your family and those around you. God is realised in every situation no matter how trivial it might seem.

One might ask "Why do we need Priests in a New Age - since the institutionalised religions cannot provide effective spiritual teaching anyway?"

It seems that there is a need for a new type of Priesthood - the type envisaged by the Order of Melchisedek - where every person becomes a priest in their own right. This does mean, however, that they need to be trained at this point in the right Cosmic Laws wherein to bring up children and apply their energies to an upliftment of society in general. Unless we are aware of the right conditions we muddle along in ignorance of our calling. There are those who are claiming that they are being guided from within yet their lives show a different story. If one is still applying the current understanding of Truth as indicated by the establishment one is still in the dark for there is only a "false vestige of Truth" which is perpetuated by those tainted by worldly pursuits.

A practical working truth which can bring real changes in one's life is one which has to be learned at this time until one can discriminate between that which is designated as truth and that which constitutes the Reality of Being.

There is a vast difference. In fact the human concept of Truth is alien to that which Really Is. For some time yet people will need guidance from the Elder Brothers and Sisters sent out from the Hierarchy. Whilst we are all equal in the economy of the whole we still need guidance - for as we can see around us there are some people more experienced than others in all kinds of things. This same rule applies in Spiritual matters - although the Elders say Spirituality is really another human concept. We all need just to become our pure natural selves.

"It can be found that when people are allowed to live nearer to nature - the harmony it produces, enables them to acquire more accurate information about the Universe itself; whereas the minds that are following set doctrines and dogmas, when feeling the need to break free, find themselves revolving within a mental boundary beyond which they cannot pass. Our knowledge regarding the Universe and man can only equal that amount according to the limits we place upon it. Knowing, therefore, the precise area of investigation allowed us by our five senses, we should enquire into those areas of seeking which demonstrate that man is not limited by his senses and that other forces and energies, farther afield, are in operation."

The Ancient Patriarchs and Their Teachings

An Introduction
to
The New Church Universal

CLASSIFIED

Part 4

When we are speaking of a "New" Church what do we really mean?

There are many references in the Holy Scriptures about God making things "new". In Isaiah there are references to "a new name", "a new heaven and a new earth" and to being shown "new things". In Jeremiah there is reference to a "new covenant". In Ezekial a "new spirit" and a "new heart". In the New Testament in the Book of Revelation it speaks of a "new name" for the future.

It is with these indications in mind that the Hierarchy moves the teachers into new approaches and new concepts of religion: a new religion which does not allow the possibility of sectarianism because it does not allow the chance of uninitiated bishops gaining control. Whilst future divisions might appear among the students the Elder Brothers will maintain the Universal Church by virtue of its Dynastic powers.

Whilst we are speaking of New Things we should not forget that also, "There is nothing new under the Sun".

How often do we feel within our everyday lives that if only we could come into more knowledge we could cope better with the seeming paradox of life in general? or how often do we accept obstacles with the attitude "that's life" because we have never been brought up, even within an organised religious group, to believe that the answers to all our problems lie within ourselves.

In most systems we are taught to believe that it is the creator who is responsible for us and that some day He will put things right. However, it is good to realise that this idea is only an assumption and cannot be proved. The fact that circumstances can change when we change our attitudes and ideas about life can be proved. That a "newness" of life can be experienced is a truth and we find - when we seek for ourselves - that the great teachers taught this also. This "newness" gives an added sparkle to life - like a spring-clean of the whole being. When we come into true knowledge our life takes on a "new" meaning and we see "new" horizons ahead - new fields of venture - new friends and a fountain overflowing with "new" ideas.

For those who have exhausted the present systems, for we do eventually if we are growing up, a new synthesis of spiritual truths must evolve from the point at which the existing ones leave off. When leaving the old ideas behind we shall venture into new realms to discover really what lies behind the veil of human consciousness. In our journeying we discover that we are never alone. The Elder Brother or Sister is always at hand to give guidance and give a plan of the way that lies ahead.

There is a fallacy around these days that everything relating to a "new-age" concept means indulging in alternative medicine, popular views on mysticism, occult sciences, "ascended" masters and the like, whilst rejecting the long established systems of medicines and religion. A new approach does not mean that in principal. Many of the new alternative healing systems will prove not to be permanant, but are "stepping stones" over a temporary area of change. These things indicate that the mass human specie is seeking new answers to the dilemmas which confront it today and this great "new-age" bubble and "occult" phenomena will last only until those who are seeking more substantial philosophies are able to understand the transcience of this present-day phenomena. The pent-up unrequited desires of mankind have been released upon society as a whole and as the sparks of light disperse we have to take upon ourselves the responsibility of coming to understand the more enduring nature of the Universe of which the numerous systems of man are but the "crutches" of a faltering outlook. In any form of outside help we are free to choose that which helps us the most.

The "new" enlightenment then is not a discovery only of new 'things' - it is the discovery of the greater possibilities that lie within man himself. For example - the knowledge that it is possible to rely on no 'outside' medicines at all; to rely on no forms of astrology, ritualism or magical system whatsoever. This alone can prove to be a 'new' experience to those who believe that they are following the "mysteries of Life" by indulging in these things. In this light a Bach Remedy is no more "holy" or natural than an antibiotic drug - they are both "crutches" from the point of view of the Higher Priesthood. All religious, philosophical, magical or political systems are based upon the human concepts of Life and therefore need not necessarily be the Truth as respecting Life Itself. Only the one who has succeeded in attaining Christhood or Boddhisattva-ship can know what really lies beyond and our Elder Brothers and Sisters do know the way to this state and are able to guide disciples correctly on the way. To that believe can "go it alone" not only reveals spiritual pride but also, the one belief itself will act as a barrier. The "new" system and doctrine is that we go forward together as one family - the Elder ones instructing the younger. The "new birth" begins when one finds his or her "family" with whom to begin to integrate.

The "new" structure is composed of Priest and Priestess parents, whose children are instructed in the truths of being from birth and they, in turn, become Priest initiates. The out-working of the Spiritual Hierarchy then becomes externalised as 'physical' evidence of the Divine Reality manifest as an actuality and not an abstract meditational experience.

The basic Doctrine of the New Church is as follows:

"Just as the Buddha preceded the Christ in historical manifestation,so the Buddha has reigned as World Teacher for the advanced Arhats of humanity unto the end of the old age. Most of these have lived in, or been associated with, the East. The Himalaya Mountains of Nepal and Tibet have been their abode.

"The Buddha, like other Great Lives of planetary Hierarchy on the interface of Solar Hierarchy, synthesizes the individual souls of monads who no longer descend into flesh. It could be said that the Buddha is the Community of Buddhahood, or the Greater Spiritual Life of all Ascended Arhats.

"The work of the Buddha is to advance into higher and more universal initiations as the sacred link of our planetary life to the Greater Lives. Thus Buddhahood is an adventure into infinity by means of dis-incarnation.

"The Christ synthesizes the inidividual souls of saints whose Hearts lead them unto the work of the Bodhisattva, which is an adventure into infinity by means of full incarnation and the sanctification and perfectment of humanity, nature, the planet, and all worlds.

"The Christ-Bodhisattva is the Communio Sanctorum, the White Brotherhood (at this level there is no male or female) of incarnate and discarnate world servers, the Solar Angels and Guides of Humanity. Thus it is the Greater Spiritual Life of all Bodhisattvas in and out of flesh. Their intercommunion is a vital subjective network that is now becoming objective, as it was with the Master Jesus who communed and counselled with his spiritual brothers Moses and Elijah on the Mount of Transfiguration in the gospel stories."

Dr L S Keizer

We can now see that the New Church goes onwards with the purest aspects of the teachings of the Buddha and the Christ. The difference is explained in the narrative. Together with the more recent additives of mental science the way is open for the journey forward to discovering, or uncovering, the deeper and lasting nature of that Life which flows within us. It is not necessary to absorb loads of outside material - especially of the so-called "spiritual" nature. We have to come to realise that we are, already, immortal "spiritual" beings. Knowledge of the arts and sciences are requisite to enhance our experience in the world. We alone decide the kind of atmosphere we will create around ourselves and our children: we can at all times project the beauty from within outwards.

A New Church means initiation into the living Reality of Life Itself and The Life Itself externalising becomes our religion.

An Introduction
to
The New Church Universal

CLASSIFIED

Part 5

Priesthood, as a personal calling, is not a matter of getting involved in social work, political reform or campaigning for certain causes: it behoves the priest to work silently purifying his, or her, own nature - to overcome one's own ills, worries, hates and fears and to gain a true perspective of the right place of everything within the Divine Economy.

In spite of all the latest technologies, latest healing techniques and scientific achievements - looking out into the world today one witnesses a contradiction of terms. The teachings of "the Kingdom" confirm that "heaven lies within a man", it cannot be accomplished by humanly contrived ideologies or ways and means. In most cases - mankind merely caters for the ills he has self-created. We have to be honest and turn to the teachings offered by the great spiritual teachers - such as Jesus and the Buddha before any kind of real brotherhood can exist among mankind. At present, world peace - if it can be called that - is propped up by political shows of power, commercial exploitation of the poorer classes and of the gambling with false monetary values. There exists only human self-deceit in these approaches. If mankind would but honestly turn to the real values of life he could have his dreams fulfilled right now. We can externalise the inner kingdom of peace and brotherhood by knocking down all our 'aunt sallies' erected by the illusory understandings of truth offered us by a self-seeking society. Priesthood then, in this light, must be a self-sacrifice of personal traits which cloud the vision of the Inner Sanctuary.

Spiritual advancement cannot be achieved in heaven, but be achieved and fulfilled in living a perfectly natural human existence. After all, what is the purpose of all human life? Surely, it is "the process of realising your Humanity, before you can realise your Divinity" (The Arcane Discipline by Richard Duc de Palatine).

The Order of Melchisedek is not an organised order like others existing in the world but rather it represents a certain state of spiritual awareness or mankind in his perfected or original state. L B Whitney, in his little book "The Way of Melchisedec" writes:

> "The Order is not as we understand order in the Anglican or Roman ministry. Melchisedec stands alone, having neither predecessor nor successor, superior or inferior ....."

"The Order of Melchisedek is the great order of Elohim, God's own nature revealed in His creation. To man it is a way of maturity, responsibility and perfection as a Son of God - a way of absolute faith in the Divine Order of things without recourse to ritualism, sectarianism or coercion"

(The Order of Melchisedek by G W Boyer)

Our order having its roots in the most ancient of authorities does not follow speculative philosophies or hypotheses but is founded upon knowledge which can be proved to be true. We do not experiment with Life - we co-operate with It. There are things which can be proven to be the Reality of Life and things that are demonstrably illusions. Apart from the recovery of the Right of Succession (Apostolic Succession) we possess authorities from some of the well-known inner orders and one line of our authority can be traced back as far as the fourth century BC. Therefore our claims to a valid re-synthesis of planetary teachings can be proven by honest and sincere researchers. We believe that the validity of our historical connections should concur with the validity of the truth of our teachings.

We can speak with candour on the fact that it is only by re-introducing that which is known as "spiritual" values into society that families can be united, human problems solved, crime overcome and greater health of mind and body can be achieved. We can state also with the same honesty that without the living out of the these priniciples in whatever other fields of activity one undertakes, that no lasting results nor fulfilment can be achieved, that all results will be only cosmetic; and, as stated by the great teachers, their methods alone can produce permanent results. This might seem dogmatic and court the displeasure of many but who will come forward to prove, or disprove our claims? We did not make the rules - they have been there since the beginning and will be until the end of the solar cycle. Jesus said "Heaven and earth will pass away, but my word (the spirit of his teaching) shall not pass away". He was making a clear statement regarding the fixed Cosmic Law which even he could not change.

Another fact which is possible according to spiritual law is that eternal covenants by oaths can be set into motion at this level that are binding on a person or persons through the remainder of their immortal span. Cosmic Laws are as powerful as that.

The New Age School takes a look at controversial subjects such as re-incarnation, life after death, magic, occultism, clairvoyance and other subjects which students of mental science and psychologists investigate and directs the student into channels wherein Cosmic Truths really operate. We also take an interest in the various branches of healing, especially psycho-somatics.

We also advise the student that in following the systems of any other organisation during study will disperse his, or her, energies, therefore making our own system ineffective. One should direct all personal efforts along one single channel which is called the 'razor edged path' in the east and the 'narrow way' in the Christos mysteries. Without this formulated tension the student cannot reach the goal.

We all are aware that without tension on the strings of a violin or guitar we will not be able to play correctly; without tension the piano wires will not be in tune; without tension the bow will not loose: so it is with the human soul. That is why the Pyramid, or house of fire, was used as initiation sanctuaries in the old days. The initiate has to be really 'cooked' under pressure. Unless the energies within the psyche are correctly attuned there will be no response from the higher levels - toil how we might.

"Initiation to Priesthood is a refinement - a transmutation of character. A discipline which cannot be achieved by meditation alone.

"That there are certain set principles existing in the Universe should be understood. There are also no other answers to man's problems than those answers provided by the nature of these principles themselves - no matter in what guise they are presented or in what manner of terminology their meanings are described. These principles will always remain the same."

An Introduction
to
The New Church Universal

CLASSIFIED

Part 6

We have often heard it said that the idea of Royalty is no longer applicable to man's needs. As we have pointed out earlier, the same has been said about religion. However, when we, in our Order, speak of Royalty we imply its original spiritual meaning wherein the whole structure of the Cosmos is maintained. For example, Divine Love represents the absolute Sovereign in the whole Pleroma - or manifested world - and wisdom, harmony, etc are the Principalities or areas of expressed qualities requisite to externalise the "Kingdom of Heaven" on this plane of activity (Earth). We recognise, also, that these qualities are expressed in suitable human vehicles therefore, in that light, a kind of monarchial structure is relevant here in fleshly reality. A Sacred Royalty - a Divine Priesthood, with the Christ/Buddhic Principles as absolute Rulers and Directors of affairs. This is also the hidden structure, and was of the Inner Church throughout time and space no matter what has been written or claimed by writers of these things.

"One is aware of the influence of certain personalities within the 'mystery school' structure: we have had the Comte St Germain or Count Welldone and Comte de Gabalis as examples and, as Counts are equivalent to Earls in our English system, these represent divine principalities in a spiritual sense, or these personages represent areas of the work in progress and are really spiritual titles instead of secular ones. In reality, however, no difference exists between the spiritual and the secular; the latter is the externalisation of the former." (Count of Dobra)

In all the true mystery schools the Priest-Kings were the highest initiates on this planet - and such beings as Melchisedek and some of the Buddhas expressed this function and were a living Reality among those whom they served. The Incas, the Pharoahs, the Divine Kings of China, etc all were used by the Hierarchy to express harmony and peace amongst the people. The Priest-King being a suitable vehicle through which these higher energies could emanate. It was a Sacred Duty, or Divine Office, serving a specific function; an example of what mankind could achieve as a whole. This idea has never been lost: it has existed in the hearts of the Divine Initiates and some day, perhaps not too far away, will be restored in a new way when mankind has grown tired of his own little ideologies and dreams of a workable Democracy.

Democracy has to be understood in its inner sense for it to become really effective. It is not a matter of every one proclaiming equality in his own little world; but rather he, or she, has to see that they are but a part of the whole within which equality is already a reality. Equality in function but difference in expression is already a Truth, it needs to be externalised to become the right experience of it. The inner gnosis teaches that all things must be worked from within outwards. 'The Kingdom of Heaven is spread about on the Earth but men do not see it' (Jesus, Gospel of Thomas)

Whilst in the teachings of the Buddha such a concept does not appear to exist - Gautama had no need of specifics in the sense that the idea of a 'Kingdom' exists in the western teachings. Those to whom he gave the teachings were readily attuned to the abstract nature of inner teachings and it had only to be spelt out in more direct terms. For example, 'I reveal to you what causes your suffering and also how to overcome suffering'. The answer was clear, just get on with what one has to do to reach Nirvana or the Peaceful State.

The original idea of Royalty was based on the Hierarchical pattern of Cosmic outworking. Whilst every man, woman and child in the human phase are vital units of the Universal Mind we call God - not all are equal in capacity. For example, a finger can malfunction without serious effects on the whole body but a heart or lung, being major organs, affect the body when diseased. So we see that there are differences in function.

To become a greater 'organ' or 'part' of the Complete Organism one needs to follow the 'discipline of the self' to increase one's capacity. This process is linked with the former idea of Royalty inasmuch as this idea presents the correct understanding of nobility. Nobility is understood to mean quality of character, spiritually good and having dignity. The whole concept is operated to help people reach the highest good. If effort is confined to one overall level then there can be no "ascension" or real overcoming of illusions. If there is no mountain to climb we stay on the plains.

The Royalty structured society also presents a pyramidal structure for expression and one can ascend by the steps leading upwards within the building to the 'King's Chamber'. All people are the Sovereign - for it is the whole society which constitutes the Kingdom and the King represents their own highest level of achievement. The King and the Kingdom become, or actually are, one organism.

Thus the idea of Royalty is not based upon a materialistic philosophy. It is the pattern upon which the Hierarchy functions to infuse the minds of the people with the noblest of aims. Culture is also associated with kingship and it can be observed from history that the finest art forms and most beautiful temples and other buildings were expressed during the reign of Kings.

Dictators, who represent the domination of the lower nature, seldom produce any constructive elements within society as a whole and in many areas where Democracy is supposed to be the theme we get a series of "muddled" situations which represent the muddled thinking of the masses.

Most of the beautiful music we have today was sponsored by Royalty or the Bishops and where a balanced relationship existed between Kings and their Religion people suffered less. The Sufferings which are experienced by people represent the areas of mankind's thinking and actions as a whole which need to be refined and worked at to perfection. It is not, as politically minded people think, one part of society existing on the backs of others. It may appear thus, but what is really going on?

Life is a manifestation of energies and forces and personalities appear according to the images we place upon the outworking of these forces. When we have learned how to externalise the Perfection and Wholeness latent within each one of us, then the world will appear different.

Priesthood is in itself Royal, as in the Priesthood of Melchisedek which is the true nature of everyman revealing nobility of spirit. Every department in the human experience must eventually bear a 'new name' - a newness of outlook and a hope that the 'human lot' can become one of peace and a real living brotherhood - the externalised dream of all.

"Finally, in the old age Priesthood was one of many social specializations, and the priests formed a special, privileged class or caste. Not so in the New Age, for all must become Priests and Priestesses. Priesthood is one name for the self-realizing soul who stands in flesh accumulating mastery over all ethers of the fully incarnate vehicle, over the powers of nature, over the forces of darkness and chaos, expanding the Heart in Hierarchical service to all humanity in the Great Work of planetary evolution. Thus Priesthood must belong to everyone."

The Most Rev Dr L Keizer

An Introduction to The New Church Universal

CLASSIFIED

Part 7

The true spiritual schools on this planet teach the following basic principles:

The Parenthood of God
The Brotherhood of Man
The constant evolution of all living things towards the perfection within the consciousness of the Divine Parent
The Eternal Presence of the Living Christ

Knowing the difficulties arising from ignorance of Cosmic Laws, the Great Teachers left guidelines to follow for those who desired to align themselves with the truths of being or, in common language, to become disciples of The Way or Living Stream of Life.

Thus meditative systems and ceremonies were established and these proved to be great helps in keeping the mind fixed on its goal: we find by experience that the human phase of mind is very forgetful and unreliable as a means of understanding Divine Truth, therefore by these helpful systems we learn how to slowly integrate all departments of our life into the Cosmic Reality. In this process the human phase of mind becomes a tool rather than a faction with seemingly awkward tendencies. Also, to avoid crystallisation of ideas, the spiritual schools continually update their material to conform to the ever-awakening consciousness of mankind. Set rituals can very often stifle one's free expression and so these are kept to the minimum. Our own rituals and ceremonies must then contain the relevant material in line with that which we wish to achieve.

There can be some misunderstanding regarding the idea of keeping a discipline as well as allowing a free expression. One might say, "How can I express myself freely when the church requires a strict discipline to God?" What we are taught is that our way of life is not like other professions in the world because we seek to be 'unworldly' in the sense that we follow a different set of guidelines. What we are free in is the reality of being ourselves, and we come to learn that this freedom is the experience of being 'free' from the turmoils and cares which beset those following the dictates of the world. 'The Way' is the real and lasting way to freedom. Whilst we take on the responsiblity of helping others we release our inner selves and discover a world within with lasting values which remain unaltered by the clamour of secular standards. The discipline is the way - or pathway - leading out of the transient joys and worries, the constant see-saw of a hectic life, to a more balanced understanding, giving an assurance of the things which constitute the reality of life.

There is a pattern of life which remains true to its nature known as Divine Love. From the Hierarchy down to the teachers of mankind this Love is held in deep respect and in all circumstances this Love is never known to fail. It never fails inasmuch as that which will occur when It is invoked will be right for the individual, or individuals, no matter what circumstances appear to the senses. The outcome of allowing this Love full sway gives rise to the opportunity to know and experience that which one really desires. "Trust in the Lord and He will give you your hearts desire" is the message of the Psalmist (Psalm 37). We really come to understand another kind of freedom.

What do we need to take a new look at in this day and age?

Marriage:

A new understanding of marital love needs to be taught. The Church dogma that "what God has put together let no man put asunder" has proved in many cases that a religious ceremony does not mean that God has joined the pair together. We understand that whatever God joins together cannot be put asunder. So a new teaching on love, sex and family is in need of being released to priests, then to responsible people.

Death:

"This is Life Eternal" taught Jesus. Thus in this eternal life we journey from experience to experience. When we understand the continuity of life we know that the person who appears to die is going on to new vistas. It is those who are left who need comfort and support in learning of the Love which binds people together forever.

The Christ:

The Annointed - referring to absolute Sovereignty as of the Kings of Old who were all "anointed Sons of God". The Christ represents the Perfected Soul - or the soul which has risen above all limitations of the flesh as taught by Jesus the Galilean. Jesus, the Greek form of Jehshuah, means 'Redeemer'. Therefore Jesus Christ refers to the fact that the discipline of Perfection releases us from human bondage and frees us as Sons of God. Jesus Christ being the keyword (Logos).

The Devil:

God Created no harmful thing, neither does God demand loyalty nor does He/She punish for sin. The Devil is no more that the active destructive forces set into motion by man himself. Man is responsible for his own selfish striving and exploitation of all things in nature.

On the Initiatic Path we should be prepared also to sacrifice all our "sacred cows" and be not dismayed by those who claim oneness with the Universe yet abhore those who come to true knowledge because these claimants say that one can never be too sure, or know, what is true and what is illusion for, they say, Truth is elusive. We admit that Truth is elusive but the Great Teachers assured us that It can be known and that we can come to prove for ourselves that a very deep understanding of Truth can be known - otherwise there could be no Illumination or Enlightenment or overcoming of human weakness or unreliability.

We also know, as we have mentioned, that we can set energies and forces for ourselves in the future, and we KNOW that there is a RIGHT way and a WRONG way of coming into this knowledge at a quicker rate than if we have to learn by trial and error. The Sacred Schools have always taught this way: they do not charge fees for the teachings or arrange costly seminars, you only pay for books and food, but they do select their pupils and turn away those who do not seek the right things. The ancient mystery schools were always run by the Priesthood, for Priesthood is in itself the path of service. However, in this day and age the subjects originally taught by the priests have become secular forms of study such as mathematics, medicine, hygiene, astronomy and the arts and inventive sciences; but any of these disciplines without priesthood usually results in their misuse as we can see from the over-commercialisation rampant today. The Priest King of old was an initiate of every school of thought and was expected to rule with compassion and justice. Sometimes human desires overcame those with earlier weaknesses and chaos resulted. What we should learn firstly is that we should be responsible persons and our human requirements come second being "Divine in our divinity and human in our humanity."

Let us give Dr Keizer the last words in this brief course of lectures on the New Age Church for he is a person of great insight into these matters.

"Jesus saw himself as a forerunner of a future, Christed humanity. He lived the life in the flesh, to which all human souls may aspire. The initiate Christi is the Gate, the Way, the pattern and template of the Higher Nature that lies dormant in most of humankind, yet must be awakened, practiced and refined in flesh .....

"Humanity is destined for spiritual maturity in which it serves as the fingers, hands, and voice of the Higher Nature. Humanity is indeed a divine heir of God, for it is emerging as from the state of puberty into the responsibility of full adult maturity as co-creator with God."

'Life in Flesh' by Dr Lewis Keizer
Bishop of the New Church Universal in the USA

An Introduction
to
The New Church Universal

CLASSIFIED

Part 8

Let us remember that we have been taught to regard our bodies as Temples of the Living God. As a Living God can never truly die then that substance which constitutes the real body is Mind or Spirit.

In Sacred Science then the only True Substance is that which we call Mind. To us Life, Love, Peace, Wholeness and Truth are veritably the only real and true variable substances in the Cosmos. That which we call a "physical body" possesses no permanent reality and therefore could not be referred to even as a manifestation or expression of Mind or Spirit because Spirit and Its expression are One and the same thing. Spirit being imperishable and unchangeable could not ever appear to die or experience discordant situations.

In order to become aware of the ever-present Kingdom of Heaven or Nirvana - the eternal state of Peace, Wholeness and Harmony - our life has to be lived in line with those Principles. This kind of living is known to us as the Way, the Path, or the Discipline, and in order to bring those experiences into realities we should understand precisely what is it we are doing.

Because in Sacred Science we do not regard Matter as a Reality it behoves us to fully comprehend that, because we are children of another ilk, the standards and hypotheses which are accepted by the majority are not accepted by us.

Since we search for realities and not illusions our real Substances, as we have stated, are those things which to others are counted only as Principles. Because Principles, to us, are the only real and lasting evidence of a whole and perfect life - then they are the real substances of Heaven, or Nirvana, or the true state of Reality as It exists. These Substances are really substantial and not in a state of flux or continual change. The changes which we see are really the accidents occurring from our conceptions of what we believe is going on.

Love, for example, is a permanent 'substance' which - because of Its nature can be experienced every way, in real terms, by everyone if they allow It to enter into consciousness. We can feel and know Its power - Its effect because It gives us a lasting and uplifting experience - therefore It is a Permanent Reality - the same as Peace, Harmony and Wholeness. Not only then is It a Principle, but a Real and Living Form of Energy fulfilling Itself within the confines of each body yet without being confined itself.

In the interpretation of a new revelation of Truth we assert that just as the body, the spiritually formed one, is the Temple of God - or the Universal Mind - so now the family becomes a Garden of Eden or an area within the Kingdom of Heaven, Nirvana, or abode of God. With each family forming a plot within the Kingdom or Garden we discover the whole planet as the complete area of Harmonic Manifestation. The Kindgom of God on Earth - the true purpose of the Divine in Man. The dividing lines then between each plot become dissolved revealing the wholeness of humanity as God's direct cosciousness in manifestation or expression of Itself.

Because of man's ignorance of his origins and nature he invents ideas and, according to his own purposes moves these ideas to his own ends and they become crystallised and take form in his experiences - this he calls matter. When his eyes are open to Truth he sees the realities and knows the genuine things which can become eternal experiences - because of the nature of their substance. He can enjoy a variety of experiences - because of the continual expression of the true Principle - the essence cannot change because it is the Truth.

From the point of view of the higher sciences the "physical" body represents the area of crystallised thought and because it possesses no actual reality it dies leaving us in a less limited state.

Although this is a diffiuclt subject to understand it is necessary to grapple with the mechanics of the more subtle energies if we wish to free ourselves entirely from the reaction to what we view in the crystallised area of thought. We find that in any work to bring about a change in one's experience one has to work with the Principles and not the so-called "physical" hypotheses. As one can see a period of understanding the keys to the mental sciences must be undergone and a discipline of re-programming the whole outlook must be lived through. We have mentioned in some of our other writings that one cannot play a concerto on a musical instrument until the basic fingerwork has been done - the same goes with the higher levels of consciousness.

The prophets and patriarchs of old have passed on the information that it is possible to experience the full presence of the Godhead at our level. Jesus also supported these claims, "Be ye therefore perfect even as your Father in Heaven is perfect" - indicating that we can actually reflect the "fulness of the Godhead bodily", as St Paul puts it. The message in the Gospel of Truth (The Evangelium Veritatis) in the Nag Hammadi Library also discusses this prospect. The Eastern systems also claim the possibility of arriving at the peak of perfection whilst still abiding in this seemingly "fleshly" state. The key is in realising that we are not "fleshly" people but spiritual ones. By linking our consciousness to the "Reality" of life instead of the "illusions" of life we make our transaction with the Eternal.

In an ordinary sense those following the teachings of the institutionalised religions will argue that God provides for all and that there is nothing held back from those that love Him. This of course is true at all levels but they fail to accept that by literally imitating the Christ or following Jesus we can attain the same state of overcoming the "world", the "flesh" and the "devil". That Jesus has overcome all these things for us and we just have to believe on him leaves many things open to question and the churches refuse to encourage any thinking away from this idea; thus their minds are closed to the honest investigation of the many phenomena in existence which appear not to fit in with orthodox outlooks and views of the universe.

The pathway to Light is always one of learning - never sitting still or resting on our laurels. Even when one reaches the sublime attainment of being the incarnation of the Christ/Boddhisattva it is never the end. There are in existence such Sublime Beings unto which the Christ/ Boddhisattva are junior brothers and so on throughout the Hierarchy. Our own contacts with "Elohim" has proved this to us.

The doors are ever open to the sincere disciple to achieve his, or her, highest good; but in return he, or she, needs to work very hard. This is not a game - not just a way of "believing" in things - it is a path of devotion to one's calling - the Sacred Priesthood lived by all mankind.

Such is the sacredness and importance of the holy status of Priesthood in the New Age and here we will quote from the Priestly Vow kept by those whose lives are dedicated to help humanity:

"In the Divine Heart shall I strive to incarnate the Higher Nature, that my works in and out of the flesh may become the Hands and Fingers of God as Co-Creator and Christed World-Server."

By kind permission of Dr Lewis S Keizer
Bishop of the New Church Universal, USA

Let that same mind be in you.

An Introduction
to
The New Church Universal

CLASSIFIED

No. 9

From within the "mystical", chivalric and hidden orders comes the knowledge of some very unusual things. Such knowledge, you might think, could have nothing to do with 'New Church' ideas. However, it is very interesting to see that the work now being undertaken in The New Church brings to focus, and more to the public eye, the important message that members of The New Church really are on a level with the Cosmic 'masters'and adepts about which others speculate. Followers of The New Church philosophy can come into full knowledge and experience of the externalised heaven in actual location and manifest their own Sacred Area for themselves. They no longer need to dream about a "Shangri La", Shamballa or a specially located venue of the Great White Brotherhood. In truth those engaged in this work are really the externalisation of the 'Master Adepts'. These beings are the permutation of ourselves; thus we are all one and the same thing at Source, and base. The home of each Priest and Priestess is an externalised Sanctuary of the Cosmic Hierarchy.

Although in Great Britain we seem to be "struggling" to encourage a New Church idea, there have nevertheless been "New Age" groups for quite a few years but some of these groups appear to want to maintain their own concepts of New Age freedoms. There seems to be a barrier to any positive progress. The New Church idea would it seems, require certain disciplines which followers of their own concept of a New Age are reluctant to pursue. We see Dr Keizer's Church in the USA as the Head Quarters of the real work for the dispensation of genuine New Age teachings to the public.

Whilst we have had what is popularly called "Gnosticism", with its many shades of adherents the term itself is not favoured by our orthodox brethren although they recognise the importance of the fundamental aspects of the Gnosis. Perhaps in the New Age approach a more general terminology can be used. It is interesting to note that most disagreements come through misunderstood terminology.

For example, our Jewish brethren believe in the love and protection of God and of His forgiveness of sins, so what more does the Christian have? Why does one need to accept a vicarious atonement when God's love has never changed anyway? Also, in the gospels about Jesus it can be seen that he associated pain and suffering with "sinning" or living short of God's Laws, which many Christians seem to be afraid of accepting and prefer to follow the 'bug' theories of the medicos. It takes a load of responsibility off their shoulders! The extra support from the Bodhisattva teachings show clearly, with the evidence, that by following the Buddhic path, pain and suffering can be avoided and even eliminated. By the same Truths we can externalise a "state within a state" as our "inner" brothers call it. We are, in fact, undergoing this process inside our work in The New Chuch today.

The actualising of the Kingdom principality by principality, until the planet is transforemd by a kind of "spiritual takeover" is possible, and eventually the results will be obvious to all. The Kingdom will manifest Itself; it simply requires a greater awareness by the majority to recognise the fact that It has really always been here. The real work then is not to struggle to externalise that which is already here, in so doing one would be working against important metaphysical principles, for example:

"When it is said that a Bodhisattva enters Nirvana, therefore, this is merely a figure of speech. Nirvana is not a place, a state of mind, or a point in time; it is the unborn moment and as of this moment, all beings are completely liberated." (The Bodhisattva Path, Buddhist Publishing Group)

Nevertheless, whilst the Western concepts might appear to have nothing in common with the above idea, because the Westerner might be under the impression that by following the Bodhisattva path there could be no inventions like that of the aeroplane and washing machine - he could be correct. This is why the "middle path" of the Christ/Bodhisattva philosophy consumates the East and West by bringing about a "Sacred Marriage" of global truths.

The ancient Buddhist system wherein the monks need to carry their begging bowls is irrelevant in a modern Western city, this concept has become crystallised as part of the system. There are no crystallised ideas in the true spiritual state. Also, another interesting thing is that by blending the ideas of "East and West" we would discover new technologies: real, natural technologies wherein there are no hazards to people like petrol fumes, chemical poisons and atomic radiation. We could still fly and get our clothes mechanically cleaned by the "technologies of heaven". Scientific discoveries will not manifest in the present polluted forms when Heaven is externalised. What we have at present, in the main, is the externalisation of man's own "clouded" consciousness. Mankind has now the conditions on this planet for which it has 'worked' whether or not it likes what it sees. According to Buddhist philosophy can mankind Nirvana now by simply accepting it. Jesus also inferred this; but it appears that many still 'love' to suffer.

At the moment mankind sees the truth through a 'thousand eyes'. If we could but bring these 'thousand eyes' into a single focus we could have Illumination. This task is not difficult if we cease trying to see through 'the thousand eyes' - the 'single eye' within each one of us perceives the 'formless' truth. Thus working in unison we allow the true ideas to take form without imposing our individual 'egos' to mar the operation. Thus the rhythmic dance of attuned souls produces the technologies for the New Age.

Let all the members of the New Church remember that after they have been admitted by the Bishop they no longer belong to the world of unrealities and wild speculations. The Cosmic Truth of Being has been taught through the ancient Rite of Succession (called the Apostolic Succession by the Christian Church) through which the New Church derives some of its authority; but more rightly so it works in full harmony with the Cosmic Hierarchy which has inspired many spiritual orders, East and West, in the past. Many of these orders now have exhausted their usefulness; orders such as many types of masonic lodges, Rose Cross, Illuminati, etc., owing to the crystallised states they now find themselves in cannot receive the new dispensations of Truth. It can be seen that such orders are not open to recieve the change required for growth. They, like the established churches must fade away leaving the way open for progressive ideas. 'Middle Age' rituals are no longer valid.

"New channels will be opened up under the symbol of The Rose and a New Age Chivalry will blossom forth giving a new light on ancient truths. The new rose will be perfumed from above and a new nobility will administer the Kingdom of Heaven on Earth." Count George Boyer

The Kingdom is now really beginning to manifest Itself in the lives of those who walk the way of the Christ/ Bodhisattva. There will be those who have just come to us for instruction who, even though they find the path difficult at first, are able to glimpse with confidence the "rewards" of their work. Whilst we need to work with those brothers and sisters who still follow their own philosophies we should not judge for we can know that their illusions possess no reality - knowing this we can guide them more easily. Once they can change their way of living they are on the way to Reality. The priest of the New Church keeps every bridge open for communication. He or she does not indulge in confrontations with conflicting political opinions and ideologies, neither does he, or she, moralise. Either we are enlightened or we are not. There are no communists, Muslims, witches, Christians, socialists, capitalists, criminals or saints to the Christ/Bodhisattva - all are people with the equal will to live within the aura of Divine Love or chose their own misguided ways.

We are not moved by the good or bad of anything. We can trust the presence of the Eternal Reality with implicit faith because the Truth we teach is True.

An Introduction to The New Church Universal

CLASSIFIED

Part 10

During the last half century there have been several books relating to historical incidents and affairs which the religious and academic world have tried to keep from the public. It appears from the information referring to other teachings and groups imparted in these books that, if accepted by the populace, they would undermine the hold gained by the established institutions on the minds of the people which enables them to manipulate the masses in order to achieve whatever they wish at the expense of goodwill.

Such books as "The Myth of God Incarnate"; "The Legacy of the Gods"; "Holy Blood, Holy Grail" and "The Hidden Church of the Illuminati" plus many others, give sufficient proveable facts to indicate that those in charge of our affairs are trying to avoid or hide something. In spite of their claims of 'psuedo' history or 'false facts' the truth remains that there are other areas of the human psyche to be explored and that there are some beings of a higher calibre amongst us who can teach us how to make our lives more harmonious and happier. History can also prove that these people, who worked to enlighten mankind, were persecuted and even put to death by the so-called 'spiritual leaders' who were afraid of losing their power over the people and believed that Spiritual Truth was only as they saw it: this attitude still prevails today but they cannot murder anyone for it.

We will now give you some facts related in some of the aforementioned books which can be proved by anyone who wishes to take the necessary steps.

For example, there is an existent "Order of St Mary Magdalene" which traces its succession back to the Mary Legend which came from the ancient tradition of the feminine mysteries. The facts are that the Marian churches of old were dedicated to St Mary Magdalene and not the Virgin Mary as is now taught. The institutionalised church hoped to bury the Mary Magdalene legend but it has survived.

It is also a known fact that St Augustine did not bring Christianity to Great Britain. It was the Celtic Church from the first century onwards which actually evangelised Europe and such saints as Patrick and Columbus were never Roman Catholics but Celts. The Early Christianity of Europe stemmed from the Coptic Church whose first Patriarch was St Mark. Early Coptic Christianity mingled Greek Philosophy and healing in a balanced synthesis; therefore the Alexandrian mysteries were contained in early Christianity and this contained the true Gnosis of God. The evidence of this is found in archaelogical evidence in County Donegal, Ireland where ampuls with inscriptions of figures of Egyptian Martyr Menas were found.

It was not until the political church was founded by Constantine with headquarters in Rome that the Coptic Patriarch was condemned as a heretic for teaching the Gnosis, at the Council of Chalcedon in 451 AD.

The institutionalised churches have deliberately given misdirecting evidence to historical researchers to hide what actually happened, but they can no longer hide the records of the atrocities they committed to bury the evidence.

Those people who are engaged in propping up the status quo with the aim of diverting evidence which would help people, have yet to learn that there is a greater power directing human affairs and that Truth cannot be hidden or destroyed. In our own private and individual affairs we have the lesson to learn.

That a law of Cause and Effect exists cannot be denied and it was Jesus and the Buddha who laid great stress on its importance. This law is the key to being able to balance our lives. Both Jesus and the Buddha gave us to understand that it was our wrong way of living which causes all our suffering. Argue as we may otherwise, the Truth is the Truth, we are foolish to ignore it. To go on believing that 'God' or that a person who died on a cross two thousand years ago 'redeem us', is acting like an ostrich which buries its head in the sand believing it can escape danger. The 'way' or 'path' is not in 'believing in' Christ or Buddha but in purifying our natures to eradicate hate, possessiveness, resentment and fear in order that Truth can manifest Itself within the Temple of the Body. Did not Paul say, "Work out your own Salvation?": this we can do effectively if we follow what Jesus taught and not the priests of the institutionalised church.

Gerald Massey claims that the Church at Rome remained Gnostic at the beginning of the second century and that Marcion did not separate it until about 136 A.D. The division was caused through the gradual materialising of the Christ mysteries and this came more or less complete during the 7th century. The Coptic Church today has also forsaken its heritage and has submitted to the requirements of the World Council of Churches.

As the Church began to exercise its political powers during the middle or dark ages by persecution and murder of spiritual reformers, the true teachers were forced to work 'underground'. The Church today by propaganda gives its members a false picture of history by claiming that it was fighting heresy to maintain the Truth. This is a blatant misrepresentation of the facts and therefore, its members find themselves in utter confusion of disbelief, war, increase in crime, divided families and incurable diseases. As we have mentioned before this is the effect of erecting false 'causes'. What the people have, in the main, is a 'false vestige of Truth'. Man's wierd and wonderful opinions must finally be shown up for what they are. Man fool's himself: he cannot deceive Divine Law.

Eusebius, the bishop involved with Constantine in regulating the Christian dogmas in the fourth century, admits in his writings that the four Gospels came from the Essenes. Thus the present claim of those following the Gnosis today that the true Teachings of the Christos are "pre-Christian" as it relates to the institutionalised church, are founded on indisputable facts whether or not modern theologians wish to avoid the issue.

"In BC 120 to 70 Christ came to establish the 'Mysteries of Jesus' (Jesus being the Way of Truth) which was to blend with all the earlier mysteries. The successors of Christ were the Gnostics and the Essenes (Dead Sea Scrolls) from them came the Catholic Church which destroyed outwardly the Gnostic movement in the 3rd century."

The writer of the above then goes on to explain that Orders of Chivalry were formed and these were followed by the 'Illuminati' Orders such as the 'Brothers of Light', Rose Cross 14th century; 18th century brought 'Unknown Philosophers', Freemasonry, then Bavarian Illuminati which embodied all the former systems. These lines have all come together and are perpetuated within the Sanctuary of the Gnosis and are passed on to the New Church Universal which goes forward with an entirely new concept of Priesthood. A Priesthood which is acquainted with all traditions - East and West - and yet retains the recognised moral concepts so necessary before one can set foot on the path of Illumination.

Whilst there are many records of those who have worked to bring more Light to humanity there are also records to which the average researcher has no access which tell the story of the comings and goings of the Elder Brothers and Sisters of a Great Hierarchy of Beings linked throughout space by brotherly love and compassion. It is only when the disciple follows the true way can he or she become aware of the many inner dimensions available in our present Eternal Life.

An Introduction
to
The New Church Universal

CLASSIFIED

No. 11

The Keys of the Kingdom

Most religions are founded on the assumption that there is some kind of God, or Being, in charge of everything including human affairs. Buddhism however has no conception of an individual God but achieves its success by its philosophy which is a practical and proveable way of experiencing peace of mind. Another reason why Buddhism is so successful is that the religion has never been used as a weapon in political warfare as has Christianity, Judaism and Mohammadism. The keys of attaining a balance of mind and body therefore have been preserved in Buddhism, mainly Tibetan, because there have been no attempts to force it upon people for political ends.

However, Christianity with which we are more directly influenced here in the west, has revealed throughout its history that the doctrines and dogmas preached bear little resemblance to the teachings of the supposed founder Jesus Christ and this is reflected in the turbulent history of those people who have embraced Christianity or come into conflict with it. In spite of this a person with a little effort on their part can still discover and keep to peace and harmony from Jesus teachings if they cease to rely upon information and interpretation given by the ministers and priests of institutionalised Christianity.

Let us look for the keys in Biblical teaching which can help us enter into a Life of Knowledge and Truth. By the keys we mean the ways of understanding correctly the real import of the message or good news contained therein.

To understand the deeper Truths of Universal Love as described in St Pauls Epistle to the Corinthians we need to get our "fundamentals" right. In no place in the New Testament did Jesus imply that "to be saved" one had to believe that He was dying on the cross to redeem the people. He was already teaching them to pray to their Father and that if they observed the moral commandments and sought first the Kingdom of Heaven, this was sufficient unto Salvation.

We do teach things for the more mature person in our Church but they are difficult to understand if one has been following the 'heretical' dogmas of institutionalised religion. It takes a long time to unwind from error. One needs to take a long look at the history of organised Christianity with misplaced dogmas leading to the horrors of the Crusades, the Inquisitions and persecutions to see that the Church did not understand its own Teacher.

Jesus, in the Gospels, spoke to everyone; to no particular sect or group even though he had been brought up as a Jew. His teachings were not exclusive, as depicted in the account of his contacts with all sorts and conditions of people: men and women, Jew and Gentile, rich and poor.

To understand his teachings more fully we need to realise that he externalised the Love and Wisdom of the Divine Parent - being a Son - therefore, by logic, it follows that he sought to understand all types of people and would discuss matters of concern with them on every topic and we believe he intended this kind of understanding to extend to the Church following in his name. He taught, according to St Paul, that sectarianism is of no import to him for neither Greek, Jew or Gentile was excluded from God's Love - nor His.

In no place did Jesus say that we have to approach our Father through him like the Christians do. He taught the Prayer which sought help direct from the Father, we do not need to "weedle" our way in by dropping a hint to Mary , to put it to Jesus and then to the Father - this is typical human intrigue. Neither do we need to qualify to our Father that we are asking Him through His Son, for if this is implied in a personal way, it says, "Well, look God, I believe in your Son so you ought to do something about my plea". If Jesus taught that our bodies are the Temple of God - where else can we look? also,"The Kingdom is within you".

In following Jesus the Christ do we also need to remember that He was referred to as King of Israel and it was Israel only to whom He taught the "Good News" (Matthew 10 : 5-6 and Matthew 15:24). It was Paul who carried his version of the teaching to the Gentiles and through successive turn and overturn we have Christianity in the form it is today.

The Rites and Ceremonies of the present day have been borrowed from the ancient pagan religions who wore special clothing for their rituals. We do, however, wear our 'cassocks' in the church - not forgetting that Jesus never told his disciples to put on their cassocks and surplices before sharing communion with the people. The garb worn by Priests is the continuation of the priestly profession from pre-Christian times. So we are not opposed to this Priesthood which in its real sense exists in many forms and exists in the state of being a Shaman or Witch Doctor. These people undergo rigorous training and live out the discipline relevant to their calling.

Basically the way to a freer and healthier life lies in observing natural morals, a pure outlook on life without self-seeking and a deep faith in the always imminent presence of Divine Protection and Inspiration. These are workable precepts.

The deeper mysteries of man's relationship to God or the Universal Mind or Spirit follows naturally by mankind desiring to express him or her self in a more fulfilling way. Mankind can become naturally attuned to its surroundings so that the environment becomes affected by its wise approach to all things. Man learns of his higher psychic qualities which can influence the plant and animal kingdoms alike and befit him as a guardian of earth's treasures. At the moment man has raped the earth for profitable ends and finds that his resources are running out. When he learns to co-operate with nature he can balance things up and have all he needs without starvation or privation for nature will respond to love and wisdom.

Jesus taught us to pray for the Kingdom of Heaven to be revealed on earth "as it is in Heaven". This dream can become true to all who follow the Truth of this statement. The state of wholeness, harmony and peace is already a fact in nature otherwise the teaching is untrue. The confidence of Jesus in the already established Kingdom enabled him to show us the way to externalise It. This Kingdom is not a place littered with priests and churches but a state of mind and a way of living in which harmony exists in all areas. Humanity being one family.

Jesus never set Himself up as being different from any one of us. "For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in Heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother." (Matthew 12 : 50)

We have the same situation today wherein the facts about Jesus' teaching are sidetracked. To those in charge we could still say "Woe unto you, lawyers, for ye have taken away the key of knowledge (gnosis) ye entered not in yourselves, and them that were entering in ye hindered (or forbade)" (Luke 11 : 52)

Jesus taught that we can "enter in" to the Heavenly state of mind revealed by Him if we seek this kingdom first above all else because we need to be totally dedicated to 'the Way' to get results. Firstly, we need to follow the moral code and act rightly to our fellows and obey community rules (Ceasar). Secondly, we need to understand that Our Father resides in our Hearts and in the Heart of everyone - we find Him equally there as in a temple or sanctuary for our bodies are living sanctuaries wherin we can each have communion with Him. By leading a dedicated and pure life we gradually experience His presence and times when we are troubled and uneasy about life slowly disappear.

The priests of the New Church are not here to force any creed or dogma upon you but rather show you ways of overcoming the barriers of your own nature which prevent the Light of Truth from entering your life. If we have been living according to standards set up by the masses in our society - or even by our own concepts - there is much that needs to be done in the manner of changing our way of life to enable us to be harmonised with the "Kingdom of God". When mankind has learned wisdom and understanding of God's Laws it can have heaven on earth. When mankind learns that to force issues in the external world is only like changing the ornaments around on the shelf, it can receive direct guidance from within to learn of the true way to harmony and peace for all

The Truth is that God's Kingdom is always 'at hand'. Let us open our eyes to see it.

An Introduction
to
The New Church Universal

CLASSIFIED

No. 12

In our last talk we emphasised the importance of Jeshua's practical and simple teachings which are necessary for finding the Kingdom of Heaven within and "inheriting eternal life". These facts are based upon the recorded incidents in the Gospels wherein Jeshua was challenged or asked pertinent questions regarding 'salvation'. The interpretations of what he said can be understood, or misunderstood,in a variety of ways; but no matter what our personal opinions are there is a Truth existent which remains so whether we believe in it or not.

The answers which Jeshua gave to those asking serious questions about their own 'salvation' were based upon the eternal and fixed laws of the Universe. Therefore, in whatever guise these facts are presented - that is - in Christianity, Buddhism, Judaism, Mohamadism, Humanism, or whatever - the essence cannot be changed. Whatever terminologies we use to express our ideas, the unseen meaning behind all our efforts, adjectives and feelings must convey the Truth underlying all things. Whatever ideologies mankind invents the results for benefitting humanity will be only as helpful as the tenets of the ideology approximate the Truth. In this light, any wise Leader or Teacher, Politician or Bishop, will realise that his ideas are only cosmetic and be sincere in investigating the real issues. Otherwise, those seeking to dominate others will try to perpetuate their transient powers by stepping up their ruthless pressures. Any system not based upon Universal Truths must eventually collapse and we have much evidence in the history of mankind to confirm this view.

We have heard the old saying that what we learn from history is that mankind does not learn from history. It appears that those who place themselves in charge of human affairs fail to understand that the teachings given by the great spiritual teachers are "scientifically" based truths on the real nature of life and no matter what other ideas many humans have they need to be checked against Universal Realities.

In Truth the teachings of Jesus have nothing to do with the human view of morals, although to follow the teachings the disciple decides, by his or her own choice, to become 'moral' and follow the discipline - the word from which the term "disciple" is derived. What we are saying is that the blessings of God cannot be withheld from any human being whether they be bank-robber, bishop, homosexual or heterosexual, king, dustman, theologian, saint or sinner - these are the transient labels placed upon people by other people. We could even coin a phrase as such with respect to the state of affairs in organised religion, "When does a theologian decide to become a Christian?" or "Is it better to be a Christian than a theologian". The implication being that being a theologian does not necessarily make us a Christian. It matters though that we need to follow the discipline of a perfect life if we want to really claim to be following "Christ". The speculative techniques of what is called "thoeology", by many, are usually the personal opinions of intellectuals who do not understand the real nature of God.

Dr Keizer in his Wandering Bishops says that "Christianity began as a heresy of Judaism. Perhaps today it might manifest once again as a heresy of Christianity."

In our efforts to explain the true nature of Gnosis it should be understood that "Gnosis" does not belong to any specific religion, society or group. It is the Heart Centre of all spiritual experience and although mankind segregates the search for "Gnosis" into separate churches and groups, the divisions are based only upon the different approaches and the previous programming of the organisations to which the new candidates have belonged. Thus we have a Roman Catholic approach, Protestant approach, Hindu, Buddhist and even magical approaches, we have the Masonic, Rose Cross, Illuminati and numerous other groups all separated by the original programming of their respective communities or groups. It appears that in spite of all their efforts they fail to recognise unity apart from the ways in which they have been informed to approach Truth - thus the separate groups still remain separate and the ultimate object of their exercise fails. They do not seem to be able to converge at the "grass roots" level by failing to tolerate the presence of other groups, that is, "If you do not belong to our group and see it our way, it cannot be correct."

In fact the "New Age" approach in any department of spiritual seeking is only a ploy to satisfy the masses that something is being done. The teachings for the 'New Age' are really the wisdom teachings for "All Ages". It is only in the departments of spiritual organisation wherein the inner truths have been suppressed in the past that the stirring is taking place to realise that they have missed out and therefore must move themselves to do something about it, or be left behind. The danger in this lies that in their zeal they are apt to forget that the Christ they really seek is just as much within as it always has been and not in the man who lived 2,000 years ago. We cannot take the 'New Age' teaching out of context and graft it on to already outmoded beliefs, or beliefs not founded on Cosmic Truths. You cannot put new wine into old bottles.

In this light, the 'New Age' teachings are new to those from religions just discovering them but are not new to those teachers and hierophants who have come and gone silently, with risk of their lives, to pupils all along the way; that the inner "Right of Succession" has never been broken. This fact has remained so in what is now known as The Sanctuary of the Gnosis which is really the externalisation of the heart philosophy of man throughout the ages. This fact being true in its actual existence which traces its history back to the sixth century BC when the Christos teachings were being realised in a deeper way and were part of the inner doctrines of the Middle Eastern mystery schools of Egypt and Greece.

The Sanctuary of the Gnosis is the centre point for the instruction of teachers on the inner levels and it is not surprising that it is now situated in Great Britain which has been the heart or home for the mysteries of Jesus for thousands of years. In fact when the Hierophant of the Middle Eastern centre at Alexandria came to these Islands around two thousand years ago, the Celts synthesised the 'new' dispensations and the 'exoteric' teachings became available with the Culdees or Celtish traditional systems through which Colomba and Patrick came. The present day Catholic and Protestant claim to these people is false. The inner or mystical centre has still remained hidden from the public and can only be discovered by honest searchers. The Outer Sanctuary with its sections and other links represent only the Outer Court of the true and real centre and is maintained by 'inner level' teachers now 'in the flesh'.

The Sanctuary of the Gnosis is a modern 'mystery' school and teachings are given free to disciples. They pay only for books which they are recommended to read. The New Church Universal is now patterned on the church founded by Dr Lewis Keizer in California, although it takes on its own nature within the British Isles. It is felt that Dr Keizer's school is one of the few schools maintaining the true tradition: speaking of the 'Hermetic Philosophy' which is considered by some to be the mystery teaching, it is really another example of a written interpretation of the teachings as given in some schools.

The advanced disciple in this period need not join a group which operates a degree system for many of these groups move the member through "degrees" in which the relative quality is not awakened and thus gives the member a false sense of security believing him or her self to be at a level where they really are not. Proper degrees of Initiation are another matter and are in very truth the sometimes painful process of growing into maturity as a person. To graduate into Hierarchical work with higher cosmic energies requires really special qualities which can be found only in the life of one who is continually in harmony with the Heart Centre - not only with him or herself but with the Heart of Humanity which is centred at the Core of Being.

The Baptism, Death and Resurrection story of Jesus in the exoteric Christian mysteries represent the processes undergone by the human soul seeking the Light and these stages are very often controlled by the 'belief' factor of the candidate. "We are what we think or believe ourselves to be" but by believing that we are clean or resurrected does not give proof of what is actually happening. The real facts can be understood only in the Light of the "Gnosis" - or Inner Knowledge of the real nature of God and Man. The New Testatment can be said to be a text-book for the outer mysteries of Jesus. The Christos Doctrines are of the Heart and cannot be written down or ever have been written down. It is not in the repeating of Mantras, or even meditating upon human concepts of Love, Wholeness and Peace; but in allowing the Inner Christ of the individual to become externalised.

We should also make it clear that if a person truly desires to externalise the Christ within it is impossible to do so within the boundaries of orthodoxy.

---ooOoo---

This is the final paper on the Introduction to The New Church Universal.

The Sanctuary of the Gnosis

LONDON WC1

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 71-78

LIBER# 78 CAMPFIRE SONGS

Personal & Confidential SIXTH DEGREE

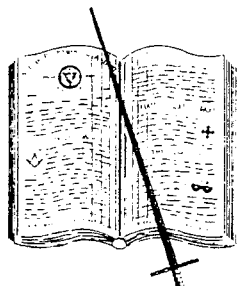
The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

I.C.E.S.

International College of Esoteric Studies



Incorporated as a non-profit educational institution devoted to the advancement and mystical enlightenment of Man.

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

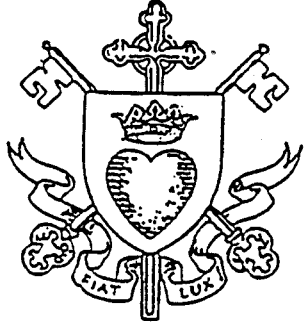
STATEMENT/RESTATEMENT OF PRINCIPLES & INFORMATION

1. The ICES/OTG is a non-profit institution devoted to the advancement and mystical enlightenment of Mankind. The ICES is the "educational" section, sending teachings to Associates all over the world via the Libers. The OTG is the "fraternal" component comprising groups of ICES members who delight in social and ceremonial work.

2. ICES are not the authors of the teachings and information being disseminated in the Libers. ICES was the beneficiary of a virtual library of manuscripts and documents which detail the teachings of the Alchemists, Gnostics, Kabalists, Martinists, Rosicrucians, etc. Many of the papers are the actual lectures that were given verbally to groups during Lodge sessions. Many of the Lodges are now defunct because of the direct or indirect consequences of the Second World War. Much of the information ICES is sharing in the Libers is no longer available from any other source. Much of the information ICES has had to have translated since many of the original papers were written in French and Italian. ICES is currently (1991) having the book Of Errors and of Truth by Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin translated. (The cost of the translation alone is $10,000.00! We mention this simply to indicate what we are doing in our endeavour to make vital information available).

3. ICES began its life on October 18, 1985 as The International College of Martinists (ICOM). This name was altered shortly after its inauguration to International College of Martinist Studies (ICOMS) and in 1990, to better indicate its wide curriculum, the name was changed to International College of Esoteric Studies (ICES).

4. When our activities began most of our membership was recruited through announcements in newspapers and magazines and most of the membership at that time was composed of sojourners who were taking their first steps on the esoteric path. Since 1989 most of our new affiliations are persons who have found us through being referred by members and almost everyone affiliating with us at this time (1991) are sojourners who have been on the esoteric path for many years. ICES has earned itself an enviable reputation for the high quality of the teachings it is sharing. We thank all members who speak of us to others and who are helping in the realization of the Great Work.



LONDON WC1

CLASSIFIED

THE

NEW CHURCH UNIVERSAL

Once every year we hold the Festival of Christmas where numerous wishes of "Peace on Earth, Goodwill towards men" are extended. For nigh on two thousand years, it is supposed, that this message has been told to the world.

The great religions of Christianity, Islam, Judaism, Hinduism and Buddhism all carry this message of peace to mankind and, yet, in spite of the millions of adherents to these faiths, mankind finds itself in one of the most critical situations in recorded history.

What is the great secret, if any, of the peace that "passeth all understanding" for which many Christians pray for every week? What is the secret of attaining the "brotherhood of man" for which every religion prays without ceasing? Looking out into the world at this present time it would appear that all these prayers of peace and brotherhood fall upon the deaf ears of the Creator - or upon a Loving Heavenly Father in Heaven.

Can we be sure of an unshakeable and never-failing truth that is really in control of everything - and how do we come into the awareness of such a truth? Why do the words of the great teachers appear to fall flat?

Yes, the power of the "redeeming prescence" is still here; yes, there is that Great Love which cannot fail those who trust It; and yes, our lives can still have direction, meaning and purpose, but where do we actually find the joy and peace which we seek?

Looking out into the world with all its 'isms' and 'ologies' it is evident that there is no place out there upon which we can rely. Could it be that the Holy Books have been mis-interpreted - or that they are merely statements penned by scribes who have their own ideas about what the great teachers really said?

If the Spriritual Teachers really did teach the truth about the world and how men can find true happiness, where did they find such knowledge to pass on? Again, if such knowledge is available then we too should be in position to acquire the same information.

Should there be a Deity in charge of everything then it would seem illogical, from human standards, to run a world wherein many people suffer pain and starvation and suffer the injustices of rigid social systems. It seems illogical too that many appear to experience no happiness at all but simply lead a life of tension from the cradle to the grave and that, in this world of so many conflicting moral standards, we are punished for 'sins' we do not know we are committing. Perhaps there is some secret wherein we can 'tweek' the ear of the Deity to give attention to our own particular case - so that our lives can be sure of a lasting Principle upon which we can rely for everything.

In a world where "A" levels are more important than learning how to cope with one's emotional problems and where monetarism and competition are encouraged rather than helping people to establish a closer bond of human relationships, it is difficult to find and maintain right values. For example, cancer and AIDS are the direct results of such a system and are the evidence of Mother Nature's revulsion to such unnatural states.

At this point we have to be honest with you to explain that if you so desire a more peaceful and enlightened life it means that, if your life is not in a good shape now, you will need to remould your whole attitude to life in order to achieve your deepest yearnings. There is no easy way to Truth - in fact, from the early beginnings, one can suffer pain and lost hopes during the 'rebirthing' period because one has to undergo the difficult task of throwing out all unwanted material in one's mind. All the great world teachers have taught this - from the Lord Buddha to the Lord Christ Jesus - and it is not until one can undertake to 'be born again' or 'be renewed by the renewing of your mind', we can honestly say that you will reach you goal. This is the reason why so many fail to reach the standard demanded by the Cosmic or Universal Principle.

Whilst this Principle is Divine Love Itself it purges all unlike material and cannot express Itself in self-centred human states of mind. Thus it is imperative that you cleanse your thoughts and desires from all human weaknesses until you become strong and resolute and overshadowed by your own Divine Immortal Soul which is the very embodiment of the Cosmic Life and Soul to which we all are a part. This process will result in God being Incarnate on Earth and Heaven becomes a Reality to you. The command of the Master Teacher is to be 'perfect as our Heavenly Father is perfect'. Organised religion fights shy of this injunction.

From now on you can begin by placing no reliance on the man-made theories, suppositions and hypotheses rampant in the world, nor in political isms, religious dogmas or medical theories: the secret lies completely within your own being. Be absolutely true to the power of Life, or God, within your own being where the whole Truth of the Real Facts of Life are, not as we wish it, or hope or speculate it to be, but in Reality just how IT IS.

Our Life is already Perfect in Truth and this is how our 'Divine Parent' sees us and knows us and this is the only true knowledge that we should accept. By casting off all the 'old' material, old beliefs and ideas, life will begin anew and one enters upon 'the way' spoken of by the Patriarchs of old.

"Be renewed by the renewing of your mind", state the scriptures and so it is, this injunction must be obeyed before any lasting results can be experienced.

By dissolving the disturbing presences of hate, jealousy, power seeking and all wrong motives the Truth will present Itself: when the mists of human fallacies have disappeared a new hope will be born in the heart; the first glimpses of the power of Love. A brighter light will be shed on all your approaches to Life and what the ancients called "Illumination" will also come to you.

---ooOoo---

FOR MEDITATION

'There is no other Being beside me,' says our God.

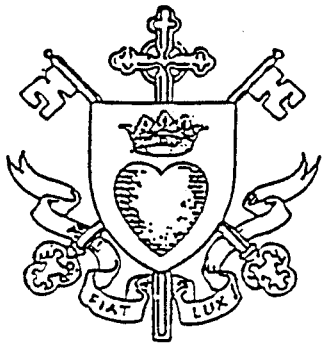
This God is Love and Wisdom - Wisdom which is unfailing and Love which is the fulfilling of the Law, and is the only God and the fulness or wholeness of everything.

Because God is everywhere present in the whole of creation there is fulness in every point,every place within creation. Because of this fact it follows that there can be no other presence such as that which is believed to be evil.

Evil, then, is nothing more than the dark clouds erected in the minds of men and women by following their own ways: by being angry, possessive, self-seeking, and leading an undisciplined life they shut out the Pure Light of the Truth of their being from their awareness. Therefore, we must eliminate these things from our thoughts and deeds.

The Power of God's Love and Wisdom are always present, always available to help. By living a life of devotion and trust in the Light within we help to dispel our own clouds of ignorance.

So now let all our disturbed thoughts be dispelled by leaving all our dark deeds at the door of our Inner Sanctuary, and let us learn that an Illumined Life is in the living out of love and wisdom in every word and deed.



LONDON WC1

CLASSIFIED

THE

NEW CHURCH UNIVERSAL

LIVING IN THE LIGHT

When days are dull and clouds hang overhead one notices that people also appear dull and that they walk around in a miserable and discontented state. Then comes the first burst of sunlight through the dark clouds and one can see the expressions and attitudes change. When the Sun shines through the whole day the ladies don their bright colours and the men begin to whistle.

All this happens without any effort on anyone's part because it is natural: the response to Sunlight is a natural phenomenon.

Many people, especially those who belong to religious sects, speak of their "spiritual life" as if it were something separate from the normal life they are living: in fact, everything is really "spiritual" and everything is really "natural". The "mystic" or "gnostic" knows that there is only one way of life which is natural, and that everything is governed by one Supreme Law. That a "spiritual" and a "natural" way of life exist apart is not really the Way-It-Is. Thus to live in accordance with that which is truly "natural" is the way that everything Is. So to allow all our "clouds of ignorance" to be dispelled by the Light, or Inspiration from within, is the way spoken of by all the prophets. "Take my yoke upon you for my burden (or cross) is light (Light)" say the Gospels.

That which is True of our lives is that which is the most natural. Most people are conditioned by religion and certain communal moral standards but when a crisis occurs to them, or their loved ones, every pressure from outside is sidestepped and the "natural" response is to deal with the situation calmly and accurately. The inner power reveals Itself. One often hears the remark "I felt guided" or, "Something greater than me took over". Their religious beliefs and moral training is, for a space of time, forgotten.

Light is our natural element. Our very bodies are made up of numerous frequencies of pure light-energy and it is our attitude and understanding of the right way to live which determines how this light-energy is made manifest in our experiences.

Every atom, every cell, every molecule is a unit, or group of units, of pure light-energy permanently occupied with following its own path of activity within the body structure and from the tiniest unit, to the colossal size of the galaxy, the same type of patterns evolve. Our heart beats virtually with the heart-throb of our Sun. Thus, in very Truth are we made in the image and likeness of That Source from which we stem in an immortal and mysterious way. Through the senses of the body we witness a teeming array of contradictions and paradoxies but deep within the core of our hearts lies the mystery of Life and the true rules for living.

When we say to enquirers "You must no longer rely on the systems or hypotheses in the world to learn the gnosis", many react and think that we are saying all out there is false; but this is not so. When we say that one must leave all behind to step into the unknown which can become known, we mean just that and this causes alarm, for much has to be given up, even if what is known at the time seems valuable and a lot of effort has gone into acquiring even the amount of knowledge gained from experience. The answer to this predicament is that "God can write only on a clean slate whatever "wisdom" may already be written on it".

Begin by turning your thoughts to the truth that your very own body is the ensoulment of all the Holy Principles, energies and forces: that is the real meaning of being a "soul". Let your own body act as the living Temple of God in which you live and experience the many-coloured events in your life. Look upon life as an adventure, an expedition into new fields of endeavour, new outlooks, new people: awake to the ever-glorious radiance of the morning Sun and all those It shines upon and know that all beings are basking in and naturally enjoying Its Light. Contemplate the beauty and wonder of a never-ending, precision built, Universe in which all life exists and that Perfect Order reigns for those who know God.

By learning to live continually in the Light we come to know the true nature of that which we call "Darkness". Darkness is not evil - nor can it be in a Universe fashioned by an Intelligence that is Holy Love and Wisdom in quality and essence. No longer we fear it because in that Darkness lies all that which is not yet revealed to man. It contains the mystery of our beginnings and our endings: it is the womb out of which the seeds of Light are nourished and grow forth. It is the womb of our Cosmic Mother. Her Darkness is the soft blanket of comfort which envelopes us while yet we are asleep. The androgyne nature of our Cosmic Parent is presented in the allegory of Light and Darkness experienced by us on this planet as Day and Night.

Within that Darkness lies the powerful rays, among many others, of ultra-violet and infra-red which can be used by man for many useful purposes. Thus, Darkness is not really a "darkness", absence of light, at all - it is merely that area of the Revealed Light which mankind is not yet fully aware. Light and Darkness can also represent the Masculine and Feminine aspects of the revealed Deity. The Scriptures also mention that Light and Darkness are the same to God (Psalm 139). In fact, in our teachings, one has to come to know that the two seeming aspects comprise but a completely balanced single unit or cell - the Mystical Marriage of "husband and wife" becoming as "one flesh" - or a single ensoulment.

If you can find time to sit in the Sun for a brief period, you can experience the fact that you are living on the peripheral of the Sun's own consciousness right where you are. If it were not for the Sun you just would not be sitting there and were the Sun to suddenly withdraw, life would cease to exist on this planet in spite of all its religious beliefs,so-called "advanced" technology and things learned over thousands of years. The Sun, then, to us is the magnificent symbol and embodied agent of the Very Light Itself being revealed to us. Should you be fortunate enough to witness a Sunrise you can benefit yourself by tuning into the Sun as if it were your close friend - for that it really is - you owe your very existence to it.

This beautiful Sunlight is absorbed by certain centres in the body and by a system of meditation, carefully followed, one can reach an almost perfect state of human experience. When we say "almost" we mean that because we have already been programmed by false knowledge it is diffiuclt to banish this completely without suffering many privations - so it is better to work to a future perfect state in succeeding phases.

The Light shines forth from the Darkness for the Darkness contains the roots out of which Light proceeds - just like a living plant springing forth from the soil.

There is no harmful thing in the cosmic family when we understand it and co-operate. Most men and women battle against the things they are creating in ignorance, but the Sons and Daughters of Light know that they are One with the All and have nothing to fear.

LONDON WC1

CLASSIFIED

THE

NEW CHURCH UNIVERSAL

A NEW UNDERSTANDING

The ancient mystics spent much time in exploring the mysteries of man and his environment and through their disciplines discovered man's true purpose and how he could live in harmony with the other aspects of manifestation. Some systems, divised apart from the true discipline, have misguided many into believing that, on the one hand, the world is evil and one's life must be led in such a way as to avoid it; and on the other, that the world is evil but we have to fit in to the isms and ologies set up by politics and changing economic systems. It appears that neither of these outlooks bring satisfactory results into one's experience. All one's life a kind of war is continually being fought giving rise to feelings of insecurity and guilt, all being founded on the belief that life is a battle to be won over forces which are enemies to man: hence there is no peace. For this reason alone, whichever category one might find oneself in, it can be seen that to begin to lead a new way of life, time cannot be wasted in coming to terms with either of the above outlooks; neither can we start in the middle of these systems to find ourselves in a new one.

It is essential to start anew - right from the beginning to build upon an entirely different approach to life. Therefore, whatever one believes at this moment, if one is still seeking and not yet arrived, it is important to stand still and re-assess one's position and ask,"Am I nearer to that goal of understanding life than I was a while ago, or do I feel that I am still bobbing around?" If you cannot answer this question satisfactorily then it is time you took stock of your position. To come to a proper understanding of life demands a complete honesty of purpose and a devoted attitude to one's calling - your own calling.

One has a choice in taking matters into one's own hands or procastinating at this point, whether we believe it or not. The Scriptures give many examples of the ability to choose and the outcome of the choices taken.

We can honestly say that if you still feel disatisfied with life, then your assessments of life must be wrong. Therefore, to rely upon your own reasons for this or for that is in error or you would not be in the situation you are. This is pure logic and in that situation, to make excuses, to formulate or speculate upon those areas of life which seem remote, or if you do not heed the information presented by an Elder Brother you become your own worst enemy.

Many sit and listen to a teacher but still make their own assessments of the material. Many sit solely to have their own views confirmed. These types gravitate from one 'leader' to another - from one book to another and never really come to know themselves honestly.

A lot of students start in the middle of a system. This means that they incorporate the results of their past enquiries into each new encounter and because, according to certain laws, this cannot work they find themselves unfulfilled. You can discover that if you decide with complete honesty of purpose to follow the Light under guidance, you can outstrip previous setbacks and head towards fulfilment in great strides. One must be willing, however, to place oneself under any amount of pressure in the early days' readjustment.

Let us explain how a system works. Say, for example, a system is set up in four parts, viz: Purification, Contemplation, Participation in activities, and Acceptance of one's unique place in the cosmic system: the goal of that system cannot be successfully reached by commencing, say, at the third part, until the first in the cosmic system, the goal of that system cannot be successfully reached by commencing, say, at the third part, until the first two conditions have been fulfilled or there will be much frustration and friction. One must build upon the basic tenets of a sure philosophy or one's dreams will collapse. Therefore, determined to set one's house in order it is better, as we have pointed out, to start at the beginning and be truly 'born again'.

The truth about man and the universe has been known for many thousands of years. Many false systems and religions have come and gone in that time and those who have maintained the True Light have been pursecuted and murdered by power-seeking mortals. The Eternal Law can never be banished neither can the Ekklesia of Light be destroyed. Mortals eventually destroy themselves by their own ignorance because they cannot accept the truth that corrupt minds bring forth corrupt forms of what they believe to be the Truth. In fact their 'Spiritual Truths' are nothing more than an inverted form of 'materialism'. The way to immortality cannot be founded on any mortal understanding of Truth. Only the Truth and Light, being the Cosmic Intelligence Itself, can know Itself - therefore each one of us must come to eliminate the concepts of our 'mortal understanding' before we can come to know the mystery of the Truth as It Is.

Enlightenment is not a matter of receiving some new 'charasmatic' powers from 'above' but rather being a natural loving person with no hatred towards any living thing. Being an expert in Theology, a High Grade Mason, a Powerful Magician or Head of a Church is no sign of being a real member of the true Spiritual Brotherhood. A sincere person who can see what is wrong with 'the world' and tries to live according to the Law of Love can at least be considered as a citizen of the Spiritual Kingdon on Earth whether or not they are aware of it.

Mortals, that is mankind having a materialistic sense of himself, believe in the cessation of life, the need to suffer, the need to fight germs, to fight conditions - in fact to fight every evil - all of which are 'mortal', or transient concepts which when entertained bar one from knowning the opposites: immortality, wholeness and truth. Cultivate then a sense of the "goodness of things", the beauty and wholeness of life and the perfect order existing in Reality. In all your spare moments contemplate the Universe as being the incorruptible expression of Life of which you are an essential part - for as the Universe is Wholeness Itself, then you right where you are, are a unique requirement in Its Own fulfilment.

As the nature of Life is Absolute Love, in all of its aspects, It lives Its experience of Itself in and through your own expression and as Love is the fulfilment of the Law, which can never fail, then the only way to be your true self is to let this Love be fulfilled in you. Because this Love is pure, immortal, ever perfect, whole and complete in every aspect it follows that when imperfect and corrupt thoughts are entertained it is impossibly to come to know the Reality of things. The only way is to come at one with Life - to perfect your own ways and pursuits, to let go your own hypothesis and suppositions about life, and let Life of Itself dwell with you - then will you learn that You and It are really One.

---ooOoo---

And Elohim said "Let us make man in our own image and likeness" and Elohim created mankind out of their own mind in their own kind - male and female. Thus Elohim manifested themselves as men and women equal in right and expression. Thus are the Masculine and Feminine aspects of deity revealed in mankind and all creation for creation is maintained by the incessant process of conjugal love.

The woman gives her blood to her offspring just as the man gives his seed to be nourished by that blood. The true religion acknowledges the equality of both man and woman for they both are as one productive unit in the Divine Economy and requisite for the vehicular expression of manifested life.

The bread and wine of the Eucharist represent the Masculine and Feminie aspects of the One Androgyne God - whose name is Love and Wisdom.

LONDON WC1

CLASSIFIED

THE

NEW CHURCH UNIVERSAL

THE RADIANCE OF LIVING IN THE LIGHT

When we are living in the Light of Truth we naturally radiate the joy and activity of the power from within. Each set-back is a challenge, every mysterious channel leads to an intelligent enquiry, and Life as a whole in the world reveals to us the importance of taking stock of everything from the centre of being.

In the world we encounter confusion, unhappiness and happenings with little meaning. To try to put things in order is like trying to sweep back the tide on the sea-shore. At the centre of ourselves, within our own Sanctuary of Light, all is still and no answers to life are necessary. The outer world seems but a dream with its myriads of changing patterns. In our true world we have time to reflect upon the beauty of nature and the wonders of life.

As we begin to change our attitudes and life-styles a new meaning to life emerges. We discover that we are a part of something more wonderful, more lasting and more en-nobling to our very nature. Of a truth we are nature itself seeking to consummate Its own meaning and purpose.

The secret in experiencing the essence of Reality is to allow the very Life Itself to come in, like a welcome friend, and share everything. This real life is the Light of Truth - the power of the ever-radiant Sun dwelling with you and teaching the secrets of Itself and how to live as one of Its Children - as a child of 'immortality'.

To test your own capacity to enable the Light Force to give you added zest,we suggest that you seat yourself comfortably in the presence of the Sunlight. When you are relaxed, close your eyes and raise your head so that you can feel the Sun's warmth at the level of your eyes. Remember that you must not look directly at the Sun for this can give you considerable pain and damage might ensue.

Now try to gather up from within yourself all effort to actually feel the Sun's energy flowing through your whole body - giving it added vitality. Try this for about 15 minutes only. When you feel that you are at one with the Power of the Sun you will have successfully completed this exercise. About three times per week should be sufficient.

The Sun is the image of the Elohim - one of the family of countless Gods in outer space - these mighty Beings which radiate their own forms of life into their own Solar Systems. As we have said before our bodies are the collective ensoulment of the atoms and elements reaching throughout the timeless space and by this fact the Ancients taught that Man was the epitome of the Universe. All knowledge is available to Man because of the elemental bridges and links that appear as mighty networks enabling a constant communication to take place between every dimension of experience.

When we say "Man" we mean the God-specie expressed by the Solar Consciousness. That is that there is only One Man-God in our experience and "mankind" is the outpouring or manifestation of the One Man-God. As individuals we represent the vehicles for the myriads of experiences that Our Host is having simultaneously. That which appears to be "death" to us then is nothing more than the continual changing, upgrading and casting off of expended experiences within the mind of the One Man-God. We as individuals then, assuming our Divine Right are the God-Man in manifestation. Our True Heritage lies in the Great Cosmic Truth that we are all Sons and Daughters of the Sun - our Parent being the Pure Androgyne expressing as Male and Female in equal right and capacity. All human Male-centred organisations and religions are therefore out of balance because the Female qualities are of equal importance to Our God to maintain a balanced and continual flow of expression: by the same token an over emphasis of the feminine aspect is equally unbalanced. All creation is kept in manifestation by the continual "sexing" of the two kinds of expression. By this fact no one can be barred from the right to become a Priest of the Most High God. We are speaking here of the Manifested God when we refer to the Androgyne Creator or Divine Sun. There is still that Great Central Sun, or Unknown Quantity, from which everything proceeds and which can be only understood when we have learned our lessons of Love (Agapé) on this Planet and others within our own system.

When the Sun is 'not shining' continue with your exercises but trying to feel at one with It. Remember It is always there whether you can see It or not. Alternate your meditation with the things you wish to cultivate in your own nature. For example, say that you feel the need for more Understanding or Compassion - whilst you are 'tuning in' to the Sun remember that the quality you are trying to learn is already an actuality within the Sun's own expression. Therefore 'feel' as if it were actually expressing Itself as a natural expression of yourself. It is dangerous to use these forces for material gain - that is - one should only use these methods for one's Spiritual awareness and development.

As we have mentioned before the Sun is the form of a living entity so is our planet a living form within the area of Solar Consciousness. By tradition this planet is called Mother Earth - and little wonder since all that life which is in evidence around us is given nourishment here by response to the rays from the Radiant Sun.

In reality, we are all one family here on this planet in particular, and it would not be wrong to suggest that the Sun is playing the part of a Father and the Earth a Mother. There are also life-forms on the other planets within our system just as there are throughout the whole galaxy. When we gaze at the sky on a dark night and witness myriads of star-forms we are looking upon a host of different entities each with their own individual life-patterns and varying life-forms. From the Greatest to the Least all life reflects the Light from the Great Central Sun - sometimes known as the Unknown God. This God, in Its lesser sense, becomes known in you and me.

In the earlier days on this planet an assembly of beings well versed in the knowledge of the Laws governing the Cosmos commenced a channel, an order or school, wherein the people could come to understand life and its mysteries, where answers could be found to the disquieting conditions that are set up by following false standards and hypotheses regarding life, and it was decreed that there would be a never-ending succession of counsellors in an area set aside for this purpose. This "area" is not always a physically located because, as we are dealing with spiritual matters, it really exists in all dimensions. It could be defined as a 'spiritual kingdom' and is mentioned in many of the myths and legends at large in various countries on this planet. These areas, usually about seven at one time are governed by what are known as Princes of Light, Priest-Kings or Solar-Priest Kings. In the east they are sometimes referred to as the "Kumaris" or "Maha-Chohans". From the Judaic-Christian and Muslim sources the order in known as the "Order of Melchisedek". Whilst these beings or areas are not specifically 'organised' or 'decreed' by the Source of Everything, they are formulated by the Spiritual Heirarchy in order to help struggling mankind on this planet. These labels are for identification purposes only.

continued/.....

LONDON WC1

CLASSIFIED

THE

NEW CHURCH UNIVERSAL

THE RADIANCE OF LIVING IN THE LIGHT (2)

Most of the organised religions existing today possess - or have a 'built-in' solar-system rhythm. For example, many religious systems arrange their ceremonies to fit in with either Lunar or Solar cycles. Much of the background of Christianity is Solar based because the Christmas, Easter and Harvest Festivals were formerly Solar Festivals which have been "Christianised".

Eusebius the Bishop who is well-known for his dealings with the Emperor Constantine during the Nicene Council in 325AD commenced the 'paganisation' of the Christian Religion by adopting material from other sources and also in humanising the Christ. He writes in his literature that the four Gospels came from the Essenes and 'Jesus' represented their Saviour used in its allegorical sense. Prof. Yadin in his book "The Temple Scroll" clearly points out that the Christian religion adopted many of the Essene teachings and practices and proves that much of the Christian teaching was in existence long before the "Christian era". The Essenes' ceremonies followed Solar principles as opposed to the Jewish sects who followed the Lunar cycles.

However, the True Solar Religion is free from all kinds of sectarianism and recognises the right of every man to worship the One Light in his own way because, at the end of the day, each one of us is responsible, as an individual, to the Divine Law and cannot escape the precision of the Law of Justice, or the Law of Cause and Effect, in the outworking of human affairs on this planet. Most of the Great Teachers have made this clear in their teachings. Today Christians accept 'Jesus' as uniquely the Son of God and not just one of the 'Great Teachers' and it is here that the majority of people who call themselves Christian are entirely ignorant of the background of their own religion, swallowing the dogmas and doctrines promulgated by the church and emotionally accepting the suppositions of others who claim to be 'moved by the Holy Spirit'.

In our work it is essential to be aware of all these facts and approach Life in a mature and knowledgeable way - for many seek some miraculous answer to their problems and others dream of powerful rituals and meditations which will help them to banish all their troubles.

Only by right living and acting will life reflect one's stability and one will remain protected from any of the 'terrible' things rampant in the world today for Divine Truth is in Itself a Sanctuary wherein one proves that we can live in the "world" and not be 'of it' in relation to all the grasping and seeking after false prophets.

If one studies The Holy Bible carefully one can see the veiled hints to a perfect way - a way wherein "God's thoughts are not our thoughts; neither are His ways our ways". Gnostics are accused of teaching that the "world is evil". It is not the world which is evil but the ways and philosophies of man which are 'evil', or in the other words are not founded on Truth. Why was it necessary for Jesus to "overcome the world" if it was all right? and why did he say, "In the world you will have great tribulation"? In his healings he clearly showed that disease was the result, or effect, of a diseased approach to life. In this day and age we are too ready to blame some 'bug' or other rather than face the truth of our lack of responsibility with respect to the world.

To delve too deeply into Cosmic Truths without pure motives and some awareness of the Light within oneself steps up our own troubles because the Solar Power magnifies whatever is exposed before it. Our task is to see that we get ourselves in line with the "Things That Are" before we can begin to experience the glory of God's power within us - Emmanuel.

We have before us each day the living symbol of Light and Life - the Sun which is shining at a distance of approximately 93 million miles but whose rays reach us here and it is this Light and Life - the same Essence - the same nature - the same power - which lives in us.

In the Solar Teachings the Sun is referred to as the Christ, Christos or Christ/Helios which means the anointed Sun. Within the allegory this represents the principle of ruling all principalities and powers on this planet and thus representing the Sovereign Sun.

```
* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *
*                                                                     *
*                          MEDITATION                                 *
*                          ==========                                 *
* O Light of Truth within my heart Thou dost reveal all that         * * is Real and True; Thou dost show me the path which leads to         *
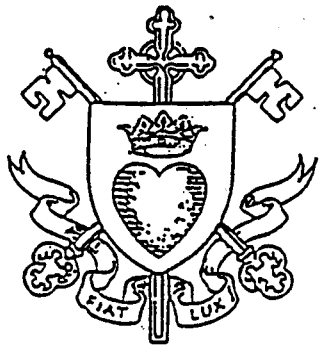
* Righteousness and Thy Pure Love and Wisdom. In Thy strength         *
* I hold to that which is according to Thine Own Law; Thy             *
* Presence is continually with me.                                    *
*                                                                     *
* * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *
```

Our School lies in direct succession from the Ancient Patriarchs and it is they who have shown us that the teachings have to be re-organised and re-synthesised in successive generations because the outlook of man is continually changing. What does not change, however, is the requisite discipline to enable the aspirant to realise his, or her, oneness with Eternal Truths. The right discipline encompasses all the work necessary (or the spiritual exercises) to achieve the fulfilment of our teaching - Man's union with God.



LONDON WC1

CLASSIFIED

THE

NEW CHURCH UNIVERSAL

NATURAL LIGHT & LIFE

When the ancient Patriarchs gave us the teachings on the Light it did not altogether mean the Inner Light, or Inspiration. To them it would include the reflected aspects of that which appeared in the third dimensional experience.

From this we can say that that which we call "physical" Light is equally important as "spiritual" light because one is the emanation of the other. The outer reflection is the spouse or husband to the Inner Light.

When we go about we see many people wearing dark glasses or 'sun-glasses' to help cut down the glare from the Sun. Sun Priests, however, welcome as much sunlight as is possible to tolerate physically and because of this their general health and sight is good. Light becomes an important healing medium and sunlight an excellent tonic to the mind and body.

The follower of the Natural Spiritual Process of Living learns slowly that the Light perceived by the eyes is the reflection of the Powerful Inner Light which irradiates from the Source. Thus, the Complete Range of Light, with all of its teeming phenomena, is but One in Unison. Each facet represents a different understanding to the Mind of Man.

Let us now touch upon a very important phenomenon familiar to all mystics, all followers of the heart religion wherever it is found.

During meditation, or prayer,when the eyes are closed, one can become aware of luminous emanations within. Within the head we can actually see a beautiful violet, or purple, light pulsating with great power. Sometimes other colours can be seen merged, or coming forth, from the violet light. This Purple, or violet, Light is referred to as the Flame of the Inner Altar within the Body Temple. We can experience a deep sense of our Inner Being when this Light is seen and, to Higher Beings, is also indicative of our present Spiritual rating.

To develop the capacity of becoming aware of this Inner Altar Flame we should at all times, during our meditative periods, relax as much as possible. This can be achieved by being seated comfortably, with spine erect, and doing some deep breathing exercises. Breathe steadily inwards until you feel "comfortably full" of air; then let it inflate the bowel area by pushing the air downwards (this will raise your lower stomach area); hold this for about 7 seconds then exhale slowly. Do this 7 or 8 times then relax and breathe normally.

When you have been successful in obtaining a comfortable relaxed feeling then close your eyes and gaze inwardly to the centre of your head (within the skull). Now repeat the breathing exercise and at the same time imagine that you are breathing in the air from the point within the head. Should you develop a headache stop the exercise at once but do not worry and try again the next day. Never over-do these exercises because nothing is gained by becoming tense at not succeeding.

The air which we breathe contains the physical essence of Light. Breath is referred to in the Old Testament Scriptures as Nephesh - the Spirit of Life - quite a physical thing really. Because, according to the teaching, everything is Real - so is this Inner Violet Light and the feeling of well being achieved by deep breathing and the enjoyment of Sunshine.

All the great Sages and Patriarchs enjoy the natural and most simple things in Life. Love and Wisdom are the true fount of knowledge and the secret of this is in being your own natural self without any deviations, sexual or moral, and in fulfilling your own unique place within the Cosmic Scheme.

It is good to experience as much bright Sunlight as is possible. In Britain it is difficult to do this during the winter months so one should compensate by saturating oneself with bright and beautiful colours - avoiding the dark and muddy colours of some modern commercial outlets.

The teachings of Jesus say: "Let your Light so shine ..." and "The Light of the Body is in the eye". From this latter statement we can learn that, according to another writer, the eyes are the windows of the soul. So as windows we should allow Light to enter our human Temple and then in reciprocation allow It to shine forth from within as right thought and action - the natural rhythm. The natural rhythms of breathing in and out, eating and eliminating, resting and working, studying and applying are all essential to experience a balanced life. The idea of long fasts, leading a monastic life like a recluse and in fact the idea of imposing any repressive system upon ones self is a barrier to knowing the deeper mysteries of life.

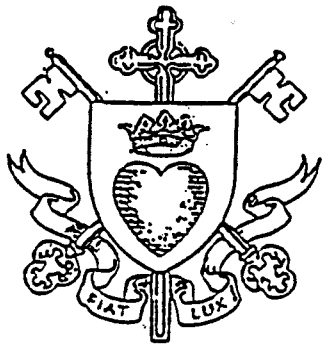
We are time-locked into our body rhythms and the present wave of interest in "bio-rhythms" proves this point but by mechanically working out all of these rhythms we frustrate ourselves in trying to keep up with acting in accordance with them. It is better for the mind not to be concerned; but rather get on with living the noble life. Our achievements are in over-coming our obstacles not in conforming to their cycles.

We quote here for the book "The Ancient Patriarchs and their Teachings" by George Boyer, who is versed in the Inner Mysteries, "It can be found that when people are allowed to live nearer to nature - the harmony it produces enables them to acquire more accurate information about the Universe itself; whereas the minds that are follwing set doctrines and dogmas, when feeling the need to break free, find themselves revolving within a mental boundary beyond which they cannot pass."

The many deviations occurring in the human sphere today are indicative of the following of teachings assumed to be true. These deviations produce the many ills rampant in human affairs wherein no right solutions are available to those following false philosophies. Any philosophy, or religion, which denies the right for one to think for ones-self can be deemed a mere hypothesis and is far from the truth.

The Light of Truth reveals the freedom of the human soul from bondage and the right of every person to share in humanity's access to the fruits of the earth and heaven. Until mankind can understand that the fruits of the earth should be and are shared as in a family, it cannot possibly claim to know the fruits of the Spirit. Jesus implied that if we couldn not understand the things we could see, we might as well admit that we are not the spritually motivated people we claim to be.

This self-same Jesus claimed "I am the Light of the World". How are we to understand this? To what was he referring? The only Light we see without is the Sun. The only Light we experience within is love and wisdom dedicated to the service of others.



LONDON WC1

CLASSIFIED

THE

NEW CHURCH UNIVERSAL

COLOURFUL LIFE

If we have been doing our breathing exercises as explained in the last lecture, we should, by now, be feeling a little healthier and more vibrant even if we have not yet been able to see the Violet Light.

The Pure Light, at Source, is Brilliant Irridescent White and when It becomes refracted through dense objects It appears in many shades and tints all stemming from three basic colours. From these three Primary Colours we get four others by the blending of these in varying proportions - thus we speak of Seven main colours. A rainbow gives us a good example of how the light appears when it is broken up through the raindrops in the atmosphere. The same effect can be seen when Light is projected through a prism. People too, being dense bodies, refract the light and also show colours in varying degrees with some colours being more prominent than others. In this manner we could speak of a Red Type Person, a Blue Type, Yellow Type and so on. The colours reflected from human bodies often indicate the personality traits and general attitudes of the person concerned.

Nature expresses Herself in myriads of colours, shades, tints and hues - in fact She reveals Her beauty in Colour and Movement. We should try to emulate Her by appreciating more colours in our own environment. Colourful surroundings, nice bright clothes all go to help us create more joy and harmony in our experiences. Brighten your dull days with beautiful colours and you will feel better without much effort.

The secret in successful living lies in one's effort to grow into maturity. When a person becomes fully integrated into the correct rhythm of life he, or she, no longer needs the communal laws, the church or politics to fashion ideas or have the way of life laid down by outsiders. A Mature Person is free and does not perform any act that would be harmful to the community. The truth is that when one reaches the Perfection spoken of in the Sacred Philosophies, from nature's point of view, one becomes a genuine Elder within the Divine Scheme of things.

Because, from the Light's point of view, the individual is not recognised as being any particular "colour" he, or she, partakes of the Pure White Light. In the Sacred History, the Patriarchs and members of advanced Orders wore white clothing with a slight colour decoration to denote their particular channel for helping others. The Essenes and the Druids wore white dress. The clergy in our church wear white robes with a touch of yellow gold to indicate the Sun.

Being ourselves should be the easiest thing possible but because we become tense and inhibited with our own ideas and image of ourselves, we suffer accordingly. Confidence in our own powers to act and live freely are lost when we maintain a low image of our own capabilities. To help ourselves through loss of confidence we should take stock of our weak points and then be determined to go ahead do the things we want to do in spite of the seeming obstacles. Only by this method can we regain our confidence and respect for ourself. It is no use praying or meditating about it because in the end we will be forced to move.

The more we become aware of the power of the Divine Light the more the unpleasant side of our life appears as dark shadows which will vanish away as we apply the right actions in the face of problems. Light is energy and energy is movement. Without movement of energy there is no revealed and active life.

Light, especially the White Light, is pure undifferentiated energy and can only reveal its powerful effect by conscious movement in the mind of man. Thus our Light within will have no power in our lives until we consciously, by effort of will, allow it to flow into the required channels wherein we feel we need it most. As Children of the Most High we need to exercise our Divine Right and manipulate the energies and forces within us to dispel our own hang-ups - then do we become a powerful channel to allow it to flow to others and dispel their darkness too. Students of the True Knowledge (Gnosis) should cultivate an attitude of 'indifferent assurance' to what is viewed externally as the errors and sufferings of mankind. At Source everything flows harmoniously and perfectly into being. The 'Evils' are the reflected images of man's 'wilfulness' or misuse of the will. Some people cause pain and suffering to others - such as those who promote wars, rob others and deliberately act in an anti-social manner.

Gnosticism is neither a cosy and comfortable teaching which allows one to rest in a heaven as is built up in purely metaphysical system, nor does it be expect that a point will be reached of basking in the sunshine of one's own Illumination. Whilst the Gnosis indicates a condition of Inner Peace it is a state misunderstood by those students wandering around the Inner Sanctuary but who are afraid to enter in. A perfectly immobile state is one wherein a soul ceases to grow and mature in the fulfilment of its destiny.

If one is dreaming of becoming an Archon or a teacher, then hard work has to be undertaken to face up to and overcome one's inner demons. In fact the mystical allegories are teeming with the kinds of experiences which must be encountered before reaching 'Inner Peace' (a concept which can be misunderstood by a novice to escape responsibility). Jesus asked his followers to be doers of the Word not hearers only: there can be no attainment in remaining still. We move best by helping others to come to the Light. This movement opens, or unlocks, our Inner Door to the Spirit within for our Inner Power flows from within outwards.

Those who fear what lies ahead are not ready for the Inner Teachings because only those who are prepared to deal firmly with themselves can stand the pace: It is impossible to become a 'Master of Life' if one is not prepared to master the stumbling blocks to freedom. Nature does not impart her knowledge to weaklings.

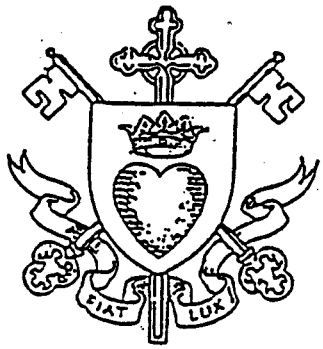
Using the Sacred Knowledge as a form of escapism from the turmoil of the world will not succeed for, whilst it would appear that one becomes impervious to worldly conditions, it is still necessary to perform the natural movements of life and accept the responsibilities of one's position in society. Truth makes us free from reacting to mankind's false ideals and pursuits and from the limited concepts held about ourselves.

There is a time in our quest when the Inner Sanctuary demands action - yes, even involvement in the world - this is sacrifice wherein one can add one's understanding to the mass consciousness.

Even humanly supposed 'good characters' can miss the mark of their responsibilities to others by being too self-centred in their own troubles. Whilst we have to keep ourselves in line, or at one, with the Cosmic Mind we should not pre-suppose that this is all we have to do; the true initiate is the servant of others; forgetting one's limitations is the way to overcome them.

We have shown the pitfalls and barriers to Illumination. With perseverance dare to stand in the Light of courage and understanding and your inner demons will gradually disappear.

Live life in the now and take each moment as it comes in its newness without analysing life or pre-supposing events, allowing your natural inner response to come into expression - then life will take on new colours of meaning and movement.



LONDON WC1

CLASSIFIED

THE

NEW CHURCH UNIVERSAL

A CALL TO SERVICE

As you are reading this lecture you are most likely sitting comfortably in your own home, or room, with the world shut out from you. Whilst reading this lecture you are in touch with the Inner Core of the Earth's Mysteries for it, the lecture, is prepared by a real, living, Prince of Light and a Grand Archon of the final path to your own Inner Discovery.

These lectures are not designed to make you feel comfortable or to give you a warm feeling of satisfaction with your own progress - you should have graduated beyond that by now.

Out there, in the world, at this moment there is some mother grieving over the death of her child or husband. Out there are poor souls who do not know how to find enough food to nourish their physical bodies. Out there are people with all kinds of problems: parents with disobedient children; commercial managers with business and staff problems. Out there are people suffering from incurable and terminal diseases. "All right," you might say, "but have not these people brought it upon themselves? Have not they earned the fruit of their past labours?"

Yes - all this is true but who is going to be called out to accept the responsibility of being a guide or teacher to help the lesser brothers and sisters who are bound by ignorance?

You can go on receiving these lectures and read books about the Inner Mysteries forever. You might dream that some day you will become a teacher or a member of the fabled Great White Brotherhood but no prize is attained nor the transcendence of the human soul over every difficulty without hard work.

By your effort to help others to see the laws at work in the universe and by helping them to help themselves, you enter the way of compassion and develop a strong and resolute nature. This enables you to rise higher into other realms of awareness which you had not known before.

The way is not an armchair situation. It demands a response to the call to action, for it is only in action that the energies can flow through you to become formulated into practical experience. You find joy at the achievement of a 'lost soul' also finding itself again.

Ours is not a way of proselytizing for new members to purposely establish a group or church. We are here to set the disciples' feet honestly and squarely on the way they should go. You cannot equate our work with that of other schools. We stand at the point where these schools eventually must arrive. We live in a 'Spiritual' world and our ways and actions are not as they appear in the so-called 'material' world. Worldly ways, philosophies and means of approaching situations differ - that is why it takes a long time to understand our workings. If you try to evaluate and judge our methods by your own human critical faculties you will fail to understand. That is why we entreat you to give up conceptualising and judging.

Your Inner Divine Soul, the real self, understands Its own language and we speak that language. Therefore whatever is happening to you, whatever you must do, to interpret the language of your own inner light, is to first stop the chattering of your own human phase of mind and listen. The ways of the Spirit are alien to human suppositions but they will dissolve human problems.

Instead of "sitting at the Master's feet" all one's life and waiting for the "words of wisdom" to be uttered - one has to finally decide to move and work amongst one's fellows. We cannot remain students all our life. We need to 'graduate' and take up our profession sincerely and honestly. Then, and only then, can we know that what we have formerly believed is True. Only then can we experience the power of our own inner light.

Asceticism shuts us off from our fellows, from knowing their problems: their problem is our problem for mankind is one organism within the Cosmic structure. We can never reach our final heaven whilst one part of our body suffers. We are a whole unit, a holy family working our way towards the fulfilment of a "heaven on earth", and whilst one member stands aloof being highly concerned with his or her own troubles, the rest of the family cannot be helped. To take action needs courage. By striving to help others overcome their difficulties yours will automatically fall away.

Knowledge is the opposite to ignorance. Those who suffer are in the ignorance or they do not know how to love each other. By being what you profess to be (that is a Child of Light) is to make yourself a vehicle for service and the Inner Light by becoming a servant of your fellows. The motto in our work is "The servants of the servants of God" which implies more than is at first apparent.

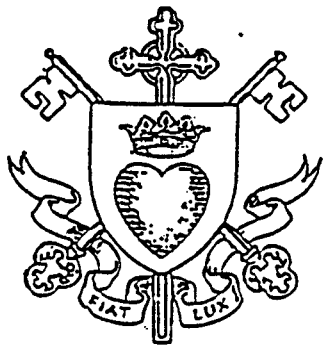
The word 'Ekklesia' means called out. In the west this meaning has come to be applied to 'church'. As is written in the Holy Scriptures there are those called out for service. This calling is the voice of your own Divine Soul seeking to fulfil Itself in the service of others. You must drop the "poor little me" attitude to life if you desire to class yourself as an initiate of the mysteries or you are not worthy of your calling, and unable to fulfil your task.

Your own "called outness" is your own choice - your sincere response to the inner voice. If you complain that you have not yet heard this voice, or are still awaiting enlightenment, you are placing your own errors first which act as a cloud over the Sanctuary. The Inner Voice is constantly calling, incessantly every moment, and there are no propitious moments or special times when one should listen. If you cannot hear now, you will not hear tomorrow for Its message will never change as long as one soul languishes in the darkness of its own ignorance, irrespective of whether or not it is recognized it is always there making itself known. The way of the Spiritual Priesthood, a true brother or sister of the Light, is to accept the Truth of the moment and to know how the Truth makes one free.

Many people will sit and watch the television soap operas, they will fret themselves over the circumstances portrayed in these programmes and discuss the problems of the fictitious characters. This is a form of escapism. How many will rouse themselves to encounter the real problems in their own families, their own environment? If it were not for the workers there would be no-one to deal with their problems. If it were not for the teachers and leaders in the Spiritual Schools, those who take it upon themselves to supply lessons and to make it their business to contact the highest authorities in the mysteries, then there would be no 'mystery' schools, no churches, no groups to turn to for help. Many workers pay expenses from their own pockets because they are honestly and sincerely devoted to the tasks that lie ahead. Which side are you on? Where do you place yourself in the scheme of things? We are all now in the very situation that we have placed ourselves. A 'master of life' becomes so by his own hand - by the toil and sweat of striving and rising free over all obstacles.



LONDON WC1

CLASSIFIED

THE

NEW CHURCH UNIVERSAL

DOING WHAT COMES NATURALLY

We have been asked by several students why it is that we place much stress upon the pitfalls and barriers to the Light and do not spend enough time on the directions to attain It. The plain and simple truth is this, too many people are looking for something startling and quite unnatural to the normal way of life - when in fact the whole truth is that when affairs in life are proceeding normally and we are able to face the everyday experiences in a confident and carefree way - that IS the Life.

The Reality of Life is always in evidence - no-one can destroy or eliminate It. If we can eliminate the barriers - then Life IS normal. A Normal Harmonious and Contented Life IS the Reality and the Truth.

The true initiate is the one who is able to cope with his, or her, own arising problems and to apply ones-self confidently to every situation - to participate and enjoy every moment. This is genuine freedom. There is nothing "supernatural" or "awe-inspiring" about the real God-guided Life. God is involved in every facet of our lives - from visiting the toilet to meditating in the Sanctuary. God is infused into His/Her own world and is therefore in complete control of every moment.

It is no use striving to attain states of awareness which do not exist. Far too many of these states are nothing more than mere figments of the imagination pre-supposed by those who are seeking some form of escapism.

In the Gospel of Philip, Jesus points out that the kingdom will not come by waiting for it - it is not a matter of saying it is Here or There - it is already here and all around but men do not recognise it.

True religion is not a way of escaping our everyday responsibilities. It is a way of life that is deemed natural to mankind. A way wherein one is able to fulfil one's life to the full and which helps us to get the best out of everything we do and to be in harmonious relationship with our families and all our fellows - at work and play. Jesus teaches that His presence is here for us to experience a more abundant life. It is in error to believe that this statement refers to an abundance of material possessions - it refers to the fact that our abundance is in spiritual gifts. With trust in the Light within we learn to "abase and abound" - as St Paul puts it. Our real abundance is in the fulness of things - in an abundance of health, joy and satisfaction in soul and body.

Some factions of Christendom teach that suffering is here to show us a way to God. But as Jesus associated diseases with sin it must follow that suffering is brought about by living in ignorance and so cannot be God-ordained.

The message of God is that life is to be lived more abundantly and this cannot be the case where people are suffering all their life.

It is the Truth which makes one free, taught Jesus, and looking around at the suffering in the world today - even within the Christian religion - it would appear that the healing forces are not very evident as everyone relies on drugs and external systems for their release. There is little trust in the Power of God in our lives to bring about big changes. To live in the power and knowledge of God means the revelation of His "promises", or nature, being revealed as Wisdom, Justice and Love and these, in their wake, gradually diminish the diseases brought about by erroneous living. Attending church services regularly and obeying "church" rules are not actions necessarily rooted in Truth according to the Reality of Things. One cannot reap figs from thistles.

Truth is supposedly that which is worked out by Church Councils. More often than not the edicts of these Councils are nothing more than the desire of those present to perpetuate a prevailing situation and wherein they lose no Power of authority.

Whilst we do not recommend a totally introvert way of looking at things it is helpful to remember that most things in the world are in the reverse of the Source from which they stem. Consciousness acts as a mirror to ideas proceeding from the Source nothing therefore is really evil: it is the way we use each situation which determines our experience. We use each moment either to work effectively i.e. to act rightly, or use them to our own ends - that is either to bolster up the poor image we have of ourselves or to cover up the skeletons in our mental cupboard. To operate double standards continually will bring about a situation wherein one becomes blind to the Light within and not able to recognise its promptings. Human hypotheses can produce a 'fake truth'.

It is advisable then in every situation when a problem or a need to make a decision arises, to take a second look at the circumstances. In most cases when the barriers of human interference are removed the circumstances change. It is good to approach life with an attitude of "all is well" for even in the most gruelling of experiences one can find that still centre wherein no error lies and events lose their nerve-wracking powers over the mind. Very often an enlighted person can be assailed with the most seemingly terrible conditions - these are the pressures from outside which stand as a swirling tide beating against the rock of faith and trust in the Divinity. The calm centre sometimes creates a kind of maelstrom in the energies and forces in close proximity to it and people who are in tune with unnatural forces can suffer. This is a 'mystery' not to be overlooked!

Much reading and study that was forbidden by the organised Church is having to be accepted today under different guises such as psychiatry, psychosomatics, or holistic medicine. This evidence should be enough to prove that the fixed dogmas of the Church are not sufficient to a 'perfect life' in Christ.

To us being a Christian means being erudite in the history of religion, the scriptures and the complete make-up of man in relation to the world in which he lives. This includes the natural laws of living - biological and mental. If man fails to understand himself he cannot, in all honesty, rely upon his own hypotheses regarding the meaning of God or the Christ! Blind faith in a set of creeds and dogmas lead to spiritual despotism as is evident today in the field of mankind's understanding of sexuality.

The present upsurge in the spread of sexually transmitted diseases, such as AIDS, herpes and cervical cancer, are the evidence of a lack of moral discipline amongst those who would be shocked if they were not to be regarded as "Christian". From reports, homosexuality is common in exclusively male religious orders where the feminine influence is regarded as taboo, where celibacy is supposedly a Christian virtue. It was not surprising when one notable Cardinal Archbishop is reported to have appeared sympathetic in the case of a soliciting male homosexual and yet under the influence of the tenets of the religion to which he belonged, sexual intercouse with a female would have been deemed a sin. This is basically the case in most of the sexual deviations, rape, broken marriages and mass hooliganism today. Because the religion to which man belongs is sexually unbalanced this influence grows like an alien body in the soul of the community. Man truly does not understand himself or the laws of the world in which he lives. Religion has helped but little. It is not enough to simply "believe" what the church says - one should learn to understand "why"- and yet to ask "why" and differ in the interpretation of religous teachings is called "heresay" in a derogatory sense. It could well be that those who set up the standards of what is "true" or "false" are the real "heretics". Since all Truth is relevant to man's depth of understanding of the meaning of Life.

We are acquainted with the saying of Jesus that, "in the world you will have great tribulation". Does this mean that God, who created the world, deliberately put trouble there for man to suffer? Again, if death and disease came into the world through sin, or falling short of our true nature as children of God, then by the overcoming of this sin it can be taken away. Organised Christianity has misunderstood the meaning of the Christ doctrine of Salvation. Followers have been led to understand that in believing that by the death and resurrection of Jesus two thousand years ago and attending the Church regularly they will inherit "salvation" or "eternal life" - whereas the Scriptures say, "You must work out your own salvation". This kind of statement is precisely what the Theologians go on about and finally decide, by vote, what is to be believed by the masses - or what they regard as "truth" and what they regard as "heresy". All this nonsense goes on whilst the Church continues to divide into numerous sects because those in charge refuse to see that Truth needs to be proved. Can the teachings of Jesus reveal a more abundant and wholesome life or is it a matter of putting up with trouble as a necessity for spirituality?

---oo0oo---

"We find our solar plexus is fundamentally a nerve-centre which feels, and the pineal gland is a gland-centre which operates on feeling - a sun, as it were. The spiritual realities of these two functions are perception and feeling; and we must not try to awaken them to cause illumination. This would be endeavouring to enter the kingdom by process instead of by the door. Whoso does this, St. John says, is like a thief and a robber. When we "live the life" according to the law of the Spirit of life, even love, then these functions will awaken with no danger to the individual. The body and soul will be attuned to the higher vibrations."

The Way of Melchisedek
L B Whitney

LONDON WC1

CLASSIFIED

THE

NEW CHURCH UNIVERSAL

GOD INCARNATE

Because we "live, move and have our being" in the very ocean of elemental existence we are, in very truth, the "God", or Life Essence, incarnate - or the very Life and Power expressed in physical bodies.

In the Jesus teachings wherein He is trying to convince his hearers of this fact, he says, "When you have seen me, you have seen the Father." Whatever theologians and church authorities might make of this remark, Jesus revealed the whole secret of mankind's relationship with God. All manifested life is God incarnate in His/Her Creation or the emanation of Life Itself continually growing forth and maintaining Itself by way of sexual reproduction. Thus is the mystery of Life revealed in Holy Marriage. Externally by the union of man and wife and internally by one's discipline in the active pursuit of fuller understanding of increasing one's capacity for living.

Love and Wisdom in all their aspects are complete in the true Marriage. A true Marriage is the Syzergy of two completely compatible forces and energies of which the Masculine and Feminine aspects comprise. Whatever one might observe in the way of courtship activities such as the methods devised for attraction and finally the sex act the whole process is the playing out of the unseen energies themselves.

In the deeper mysteries students are taught, or learn themselves, the doctrine of what is known as "Soul-Mates". This hypothesis states that for every Masculine unit incarnate, or discarnate, there is the harmonious feminine equivalent which eventually unite at a certain stage during "spritual" growth to form a permanent bond thereby resulting in an androgyne form capable of formulating a "principality" or "divine Kingdom" within the Universal Structure. The teachings of Jesus could indicate such an idea; but what the disciples were taught in the Mysteries of Jesus have never been revealed publicly. Jesus indicated that the right marriage resulted in both aspects becoming 'one flesh'. This could also indicate that by the opportunities presented in a true marriage the pair would eventually realise the truth of Life's revelation during their periods of closeness.

It is essential to follow a practice of maintaing the principle of "Oneness" - should one be seeking it - in every department of life. All humanity as one family, one God, one life partner - one supreme goal. The attainment of the feeling "at one" with all there is can be achieved by dispelling the sense of duality when understood in the "good and evil" terminology. It is better to approach the task by trying to know the oneness achieved in the mystical union of Love and Wisdom. One Life Power vibrating, or dancing, in the experience of Male/Female relationships.

In the Religious aspect of Life then the Male and Female roles have their equal importance. This fact was fully understood by the ancient Patriarchs and persisted, in some degree, until circa the 7th or 8th century AD when there were Lady Abbesses in the Celtic and other sects of the Christian Church. Since abstinence was introduced into the Priesthood an unbalanced sexual society has grown up and the many deviations we witness today are the result. If the "spiritual" system of society is unbalanced then one cannot wonder at the feeling of hopelessness rife in the minds of the common people - since the churches are the channels which provide the life blood to the community. Political ideologies reformed social systems can never replace that which is cut off at source. The troubles in the world today all stem from a materialistic approach to spirituality. People are under the illusion that they can apply the same attitudes as they use politically and socially to the practice of their religion - when in fact - the nature of God's world cannot be manipulated to the whims of human beings. The Holy Bible frequently makes this fact clear.

Since then our discussion is based upon the fact that Mankind is God Incarnate - whence all the discord?

The Ancients taught "as above so below" - this implies that when we come to the realisation of the truth of what is taking place in the manifested world - this is the reflection of the Principles involved at Source. It does not imply that what we witness and experience with our senses is true of what is going on, but rather our supposition of it. Much is clouded by our own concepts and involvement in our own little world of events. We have met several people who live in their own little worlds and are entirely oblivious to what is going on around them.

In the main then, the world out there - or rather what goes on in the affairs of mankind - is the sum total of what mankind has made of it. Communities have established their own standards, ideologies and laws to live by and they rise and fall according to the nature of these systems. People create their own wars and diseases and then erect moral and religious philosophies to try to answer the problems arising within the frameworks they, themselves, have set up. It never occurs to them that these systems could be wrong because some people benefit materially under some ideologies and many suffer.

To explain the mechanics of the validity of the idea that mankind possesses the ability to learn the cosmic laws from experience is rather complex and one has to break down the processes into simple terminology.

Briefly - we suggest that when the Source of All Life, the Great Original Sun, exploded into activity from within Itself streams of Positive and Negative particles (Masculine and Feminine) issued forth producing massive fields of energy. When two or more fields of energy unite a Syzergy is formed and the inherent intelligence which is relevant according to the size (quantum) appears as a separate or self-acting entity differing in aim and purpose from the others. Thus the primary creative entities became "smaller" Suns emanating their own unique form of creation - "life-bearing" solar Systems.

Each "lesser kind" uniting on a suitable plane of expression, a planet, reflected the same movement within its own unique form of expression - such as plants, animals and mankind.

Mankind then becoming its own unique species within the manifested whole possesses its own inherent expression of reflecting the same processes as the parent source: thus, we are Sons of the Sun. Being "Sons" and "Daughters" in our Masculine and Feminine qualities we learn of our true natures by experience - mainly by trial and error. This means that we possess the ability of "self-will" and it is here that all our "troubles" begin. However, we should not forget that whilst all forms of manifested life are unique in themselves they "live and move and have their being" in the great ocean of consciousness of the Parent Sun. Just as the Mother nurtures the child within her womb so are we being nurtured by the "food" - light-energy - from Source. We are all One Entity at root just as the family of mankind is in its complete sense. Now we can see where all our "sufferings" come from: we produce them ourselves because we are yet ignorant of all the laws operating on our behalf and we continually make the same mistakes because we have not yet grown-up, or matured, enough to see our mistakes, or even admit them. Thus the "sufferings" represent the manifested "energy forms" of misguided activities.

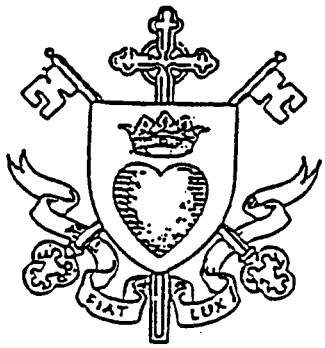
However in our suffering we have the comfort that we can reverse the trend by taking a different approach. We too have "Elder Brothers" who pass on the knowledge of their own experiences and leave us proofs that by changing our attitude and philosophies we can change our circumstances. Also, just like the young within our own species, we can stay stubborn and refuse to move along with right advice because it hurts our pride and because it often appears difficult to change ourselves, therefore we remain at the same level of self-awareness for hundreds of years within the "space-time" sense.

The Source and Beginning of Life which we call "God" is incarnate then in every form of manifested life from Sun to son. Just the same as you who are reading this lecture are of the same genes, same growth of cells, passed on from your parents and they from theirs. The whole human family, of whom we are speaking, are the sum total of one another of times past and of times to come. Forms come and go like the waves of the sea - a continual ebbing and flowing of life-forms. Humans, then, are but one facet of the great whole Activity of the Manifested Life of God.

---ooOoo---

"It can be found that when people are allowed to live nearer to nature - the harmony it produces enables them to acquire move accurate information about the Universe itself: whereas the minds that are following set doctrines and dogmas, when feeling the need to break free, find themselves revolving within a mental boundary beyond which they cannot pass."

"The Ancient Patriarchs and Their Teachings"



LONDON WC1

CLASSIFIED

THE

NEW CHURCH UNIVERSAL

THE REASON FOR THE GNOSIS AND PURPOSE OF THE CLOSED ORDERS

Most people at grass roots level seem to be able to co-operate and get on well together, but we may find different people and different ethnic groups have their own religious beliefs which is where seeming divisions begin.

In the political field people with ardent political beliefs will mingle in a social group or public bar then quite vehemently oppose each other when it comes to questions relating to the conditions rampant in the world.

Heads of state will sit round conference tables with each other and then set up protective barriers around themselves when they get home.

Each religion, each political ideology and individual healing schools sit upon their own convictions that they possess the answers to the world problems and each believes that sometime in the future the whole world will come round to their way of thinking. It would appear that, when looking around, there never will be an agreement on any particular point - especially the major problem of a united humanity. Each group mistrusts any other outlook. What many fail to do is to break down all their own hypotheses and sincerely work together to discover that which is the Truth of the matter in relation to Cosmic Laws. To discover that there is a Truth about these Laws can also become a point of division when individuals proclaim that their interpretation of this Truth is the correct and only one.

What then is the answer? Maybe there is no answer when it comes to the Reality of Life; but it would seem illogical that the Universe is just a massive biological organism with no built-in pattern as to where it is going or from whence it came. Maybe it just meanders along in any old haphazard way until it finally collapses through lack of any inherent intelligent cognition of its own purpose!

Many believe that there is some kind of "super-human" being God in charge of everything and that one day He will put it all right - this would indicate that it got our of hand somewhere. Others believe that the whole process began when a giant star exploded and the galaxy is the result. However, they cannot answer the questions relating to "fixed" stars, quasars, pulsars and other bodies which provide certain impulses requisite for an orderly universe. Some believe that it is not orderly but is just, as we have said, a large biological organism following along its own path. None are able to answer the question as to what was there before the galaxy began and who or what was the Source of everything. Only an intellectual fool would try to answer this question!

If we were to place a mixture of people as neighbours in one street: a Christian, a Jew, a Muslim, a Hindu, an occultist, a Communist, a Capitalist, an unemployed person and a thief all in one row of houses, we could find that as neighbours they would co-operate with each other when some danger threatened their community. A sudden epidemic, an earthquake, an enemy attack - any threat to their basic needs would be met by an attitude of working together. When outside threats are removed they would all resume their own differences of outlook - sometimes being quite hostile towards each other. This indicates that those beliefs and ideas which divided them were mere shams, false attitudes, and that the 'truths' of the philosophy of their differing beliefs were forgotten when genuine pressure was placed upon their individual human needs. Human beings are most vulnerable at their weakest points. Why do not these facts make people think and bring them together in the other areas of their existence? It would appear that humanity is riddled with problems which it cannot deal with and is full of questions which its leaders cannot answer.

People have murdered the "prophets of God" who come forth to warn them regarding their mistakes and explain to them how things can be put right. In spite of all this it would appear that there are people who 'love' trouble - get a kick out of making others suffer - so why should anyone bother to help humanity get rid of its troubles when it refuses to accept genuine steps for recovery? In many cases it is not until some people find themselves really at loggerheads with life and seem to be at a 'dead-end' regarding their future that they make any satisfactory move to extricate themselves from all the turmoil. We have discovered that whatever the situation appears to be there is a false answer to the problem - a twisted truth which obscures the underlying reality of Life Itself. This barrier to the Real Truth is perpetuated by the ability of people to remain blind as to what is behind the whole secret of life - if we would venture to call it a 'secret' in the light of the fact that this Truth eludes those who seek to understand it on their own terms.

Many organised systems invent their own 'sins' or 'faults' of which they accuse others of being guilty. The process seems never-ending and we could go on a while yet giving examples of the seeming enigmas and paradoxes which beset the human race.

Amidst all the perplexity of Life we do find those who will ask "Lord, teach us to pray" - simply because they have been taught that that is what they should do. Would it not be better to ask "Lord, teach us to Love"? or "Lord teach us how to live aright"? But to whom, in this day and age, are they praying or asking?

Could it be possible to believe that the Very Life of Everything is appealing to those blind to the knowledge of their true natures and is speaking to them continually from within, the point of their own Light, and from without through the voice of those messengers who are now abroad in the world? Spiritual blindness is one of the worst things to suffer.

If one is fed up with the present world systems - of any type - it is useful to know that there is a Cosmic and Hierarchical Government operating silently and unnoticed by the materially minded wherein freedom from all worldy pressures can be pursued. This Government has its representatives in much the same way as the worldly systems. In fact the worldly systems are shadows of the Real underlying Order which is eternal and unchanging.

Beautifully and Mystically the Inner Light reveals a world of tranquility, order and reliability - a world of souls who comprise the Spiritual Hierarchy of our Universe. A world where time stands still in its eternal wonderment of self-expression. A world where all souls meet on their inner levels to drink in the reviving waters from the never-ending fountain of life. Ours is a world which maintains a bridge over the chasm between the unseen and the seen realms of Reality - where longed-for dreams become a concrete experience.

Our principalities remain free from the suppositions and hypotheses at large in the world of humans. We are the Ekklesia which crossed the bridge of the two worlds which was fashioned by those gone before us in the successive chain of awakening to greater capacities. Ours is a world where Love is wedded to Wisdom in its pure essence to seduce mankind to realise its inner and true purpose on Earth. Upon the furrowed brow of mankind, furrowed by the worry and fear of a purposeless existence, we place our kiss of pure undifferentiated Love.

In our Secret Place we close the door upon the turmoil of this planet and share our time with the citizens of the Inner Dimensions. This Secret Place within each one of us can be focalised correctly under the guidance of our Patriarch who has worked silently behind the scenes in the awakening process of mankind. In Truth you can contact the Centre of this Solar System wherein our present work lies. Mankind has never needed you more than it needs you now to ease the suffering of its birth pangs into a higher dimension - a new situation where new technologies, new outlooks on politics and religion will arise. This work is always initiated by those pioneers who offer themselves as channels or filaments for the higher frequences to flow into the mass subconscious - purifying it and implementing new avenues of endeavour for people to follow.

The work of the Mystic is to sacrifice self to the true purpose for man being and here, to become an Elder Brother and be employed under the Prince of Light who rules the aspect they are following. At any one time there are seven Princes, sometimes twelve, embodying the essence and knowledge requisite to bring about the results required.

There is nothing fantastic about this - for just as one's body has its major organs to serve the whole body so has the Solar System and the Cosmos beyond works in a similar way as revealed in the Scriptures of every race and creed.

The true Initiate is the one who lays down his, or her, own opinions, own pursuits and places them on the Alter of Service working always to maintain a channel of Light to those who dwell in the mists of their own fears and doubts.

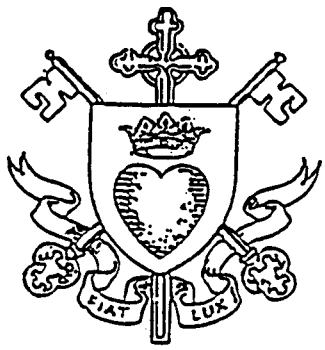
The true Initiate is the one who is the Master of his, or her, own Destiny for in very truth one is elevated to the sublime position of becoming a Lord of the Light. Our calling is Noble and Royal. Our Kingdom is governed by the Sovereign of all Sovereigns and we are the Princes and Princesses thereof who administer the Law. We are the Lords of the Ascension and those who have not ascended with us cannot understand our ways for the truth of being is aware only of Itself and all other ideas are alien to It.

The fact of the Existence of the Inner Kingdom lies in the personal experiences of each one who gives themself up to the new citizenship wherein the standards of the outer world count but little. When all mankind achieves this state the outer world will reflect all the beauty and truth of the Inner Reality.

"Righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his waist. The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid, and the calf and the young lion and the ox will feed together, and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed together and their young ones shall grow up together; and the lion shall eat straw like an ox. And the sucking child shall play with the serpent, and the weaned child shall put his hand into the hole of the asp. They shall not hurt or destroy in all my holy mountain; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." (Isaiah 11 : 5-9)

You, me, they - all share in the glory of the Universe for in Truth we are all equal because each one of us has our unique qualitites to contribute to the whole.

This dream is yet to be fulfilled.



LONDON WC1

CLASSIFIED

THE

NEW CHURCH UNIVERSAL

THIS & THAT

We have discussed the many reasons why people experience much suffering and unhappiness in the world. There is a theory that this world is already the hell spoken of in the scriptures and that this planet is where we are actually paying off our debts for all the wrong things we have done in our rightful or proper abode - a kind of "devil's island" to which we have been sent. The reason why we have all the injustice, misery, wars, etc is because this is the area where all the 'evil' performed by the certain persons involved are perpetuated here on Earth by virtue of the refusal to live by the set Cosmic Laws.

Another interesting theory states that the Creator has produced all the Good and Evil from within itself and we just have to beg and pray this Creator for clemency believing that we are punished for our sins. We also have to wait for a 'last day' when God will act and put everything right.

Among all the sects, groups orders and speculative philosophic organisations we find an amazing array of theories and reasons for us being here and of our relationship with a supposed God. Most of the material available about man's place in the Universe is based upon speculation and hypotheses founded upon the fact that there should be a reason why we are here or that some God or Source brought us forth according to some plan this God has in mind. Because there are so many opinions we find almost as many groups formed as there are differing opinions.

The majority of people have been brought up to rely upon the speculative theories advanced by those who are supposed to be experts in certain fields of research and we suffer from a rather narrow academic approach to the many problems arising in the process of living an everyday life. Experts seem to get set in a particular line of research based upon some hypothesis which may or may not turn up with answers. Most ideas which appear outside the academic approach to situations are rejected because these pose situations which are destructive to a comfortable and self-satisfying career or court ridicule upon those who dare to cut across the theories of the status quo. Why is it then, because we find ourselves in such a vulnerable situation, being part of nature, that we find it difficult to be what we are? Does an elephant find it difficult to be an elephant, or a sparrow a sparrow? It could be stated that the truth of everything must exist whether we are aware of it or not. The answer to many of the perplexing questions must lie in some ability wherein one can stop the flow of human supposing and eventually touch upon the evidence of another area of mind where facts can be gained which result in the assurance that one is part of a permanent and reliable universe wherein everything is assisting everything else to find its own measure of fulfilment.

To come to understand nature correctly we should take our stand as responsible citizens of the world, challenging the systems which bind people to outworn dogmas, lack of supplies and unwholesome conditions - these - all these are the manifestations of man's inhumanity to his own specie: the evidence of greed, power and the will for possession. Do not always confront those responsible openly but work in secret. Cleanse yourself of these same things for inasmuch as you hate the perpetuators of these things, and criticize them for their misdemeanours, you contribute to the mass subconscious wherein lies the mire of human evils. Take courage not to react to all that you witness with your senses - for your judgement could be wrong. Open yourself to that Power, that Essence, which governs all Life's true experiences and a way will be opened up in which you can find a better way to serve humanity.

If you are a man strive to learn the lesson of Love; if you are a woman strive to learn Wisdom: for these are the elements of the man and the woman. In the mystical Illumination of the Bridal Chamber Love is wedded to Wisdom and the secret of being a true husband man in Earth's Garden of Eden is revealed and slowly the Heavenly Family grows to that point wherein the Divine Kingdom becomes a reality on this planet. Let us not forget that even if we are wedded to our true Soul-Mate and experience and know the eternal, those in the world seek to experience love and often in their seeking have brief glimpses of their own true state. We can possess no more than they do for the fulness remains forever the fulness no matter who experiences It.

The true Gnosis transcends exoterism and esoterism alike. Mankind needs to leave all of his props behind to understand that which is True. We should seek to restore to our experience all that is lost through our ignorance and our persistence to carve a name for ourselves by following humanly evolved hypotheses which really lead to disillusionment. This does not mean that we live as a recluse. It means that we can lead a balanced, healthy and happy life because we respect everything and everyone, make the right use of our faculties and place the Source of all manifestation in its right perspective.

A true follower of the gnosis does not swear simply by gnostic literature alone but uses all spiritual writings as a means to keep the mind centred in the right direction. Everything is here for our enlightenment and we can find enjoyment in all religions and points of view without acquiring fixed opinions and becoming a secluded sectarian. Such is the freedom we have which we find is a puzzle to our friends who are the clergy of other denominations.

Freedom from the world does not release us from any kind of responsibility but rather increases it because the more we know of the reasons for human errors, the more it should encourage us to do something about it, knowing that everything, good or bad, is in mankind itself. In this knowledge we strive to implement the desired patterns within all our actions until one day that which is right for us will unbalance the false concepts and the road to a golden age will appear on the horizon.

We have looked at varying points of view during this series but we have to admit that "points of view" do not necessarily get us very far in understanding ourselves or our fellows for in fact individual "points of view" differ immensely in one's approach to life. We can argue, discuss and study numerous opinions but we still remain ourselves and problems of a similar nature appear for each inidividual as if they are glued to a wheel which is continually turning, and each time the same problem comes round we react like an annoyed "fly on a wheel". As each problem is an individual one, then it is only by individual action that change can come about - even in a mass disaster each problem has the mark of an individual nature upon it. Importance then is laid on the fact that every individual is responsible for him, or her, self in relation to life's outworking - in seeing to it that we are doing what we should, then if everybody does it, the whole cannot fail to experience the result.

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 79-80

LIBER #79 GLOWING EMBERS

Personal & Confidential SEVENTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

R ✣ C

Personal & Confidential

CLASSIFIED

BE YE THEREFORE PERFECT.....

Part I

This was the admonishment given by Christ to his disciples. It was not merely advice, it was an order — which at first may seem to be almost impossible. However, according to the scriptures, it is the finality of human eschatology to become responsible creator gods. Hence the free will given to humanity, in its development, to avoid robotization and to allow the normal development of the individual and the collective consciousness.

THE DIVINE DOES NOT INTERVENE That is why the Creator and the spiritual Hierarchies do not intervene directly in the disastrous and tragic events which, through man's own fault, shake the world and stain it with blood.

There is only one resource for this: PRAYER which liberates, ipso facto, God and the Hierarchies from the constraint imposed by the divine law of man's freedom of choice, completed by that of consequences: "You reap what you sow" ... "Ask and you shall be given".....

It is important to point out here that the prayer must be said under conditions laid down by Christ himself: "Retire to your secret room and thank the Father as if He had already granted you your request".

THE TECHNICAL MEANS OF REACHING PERFECTION (1) Let us determine the technical means of reaching perfection in a situation where, as everybody knows, "nobody is perfect".

Today, the existence of most types of yoga are known, through which the various disciplines — of which Tantraism and Zazen should be especially noted — do enable the awakening and the development of faculties innate in human beings. But these paths are long and very often dangerous.

On the other hand, there are those scientific discoveries being made in university laboratories that explain more easily the so-called parapsychological and spiritual mysteries. Our hundreds of thousands of programmed molecules - (half million bits per molecule) - necessarily imply a cause for this program, a cause which, moreover, according to the facts, is not hereditary. Its source and logical and equitable explanation is found stored in the memory of successive incarnations and in immanent justice. (True astrological symbolism also proves this fact).

Consequently, perfection of the human race is a question of improving its 'programs' to use modern phraseology. That is the problem and the goal, clearly put. With its solution we will now deal.

'THE PROGRAM' What is the 'program' we may use to achieve perfection? Madam de Steiger disclosed it in her address to the Alchemical Society on Friday, November 14, 1913. Do you remember it from Liber 40? Speaking of the Art of Alchemy she said:

"The Royal Art was, then, that of extracting from a human center that immortal essence, and the method of doing so, was the spagyric or magnetic one, by the action of mesmeric traction.

".... The art of mesmerism, which we now despise or ignore, except as a by-play of science, or misuse, alas, was once the sublime secret of the master-men of each century, which they were enjoined to keep inviolate, because it was found that qualities and conditions between souls were interchangeable, and many mysterious or extraordinary results took place, that made it a necessity that a Magus or Sage should be what was termed a Holy Man, i.e. one who held the secret of the Philosopher's Stone in all its conditions, and also that none but a man of proved spiritual state* should be Priest or occupy the functions of the Master of Ceremonies: those of a lesser degree of purity of thought and aim being assistants only. This was the original condition, and the priests in olden days were no doubt men of the highest type. But there were lapses, and here and there the magical secret would leak out and be used for other than the true end. Finally, the knowledge of only a small portion of the true method remained, and that almost died away, but not altogether, for such a wonderful secret for humanity could not be utterly lost, and it was preserved as of the utmost importance in "The Mysteries," and afterwards in the Secret Orders.

"It was always the same teaching -- that that counsel which emanated from the holy trance utterance should alone be considered divine. I feel convinced that this key of knowledge was the one used by the alchemists. They were, so to speak, free-lances, but, being men of ardour and vigour, they by degrees formed a sort of non-cohesive order of solitary searchers. These men, with others who really might have belonged to existing secret orders, constituted a sort of underground hidden society not requiring any ordained hierarchy, and a cryptographic correspondence would necessarily ensue.

"As time went on, and as what may be called the magical power of the orthodox priesthood died out, the sporadic growth of alchemists still continued, and such men certainly were viewed with anger by the orthodox priesthood and those who considered mesmerism as truly the gift of God: but the alchemical secret is just what makes the Royal Art quite different from that mesmerism which is generally known.

"It is clear that Mesmer was not the first to discover the art called by his name, but in his case betrayed the secret. However, the amount of mesmerism he knew and divulged was, perhaps, no more than that which had survived and was practiced by the hierarchs, who, under all their different names, headed the Secret Orders in later times. This special secret method is one which, though I do surmise, I must do as I was told, keep inviolately until someone else discovers it. It may be plainly inferred to in its entirety from what is said in A Suggestive Enquiry into the Hermetic Mystery and Alchemy, a new edition of which is forthcoming. I do not want to state what I have just said with the pretension of making myself the custodian of any great secret; but because it is a certain something in the method of applying the art of mesmerism which can only be declared, so to speak, in the alchemical work itself.

THE KEY TO MAGIC (1) "I need not tell you that mesmerism is the key to magic, known to every race and time. It has been reserved for this period since Mesmer, utterly to misunderstand, misapply and underestimate this extraordinary faculty, which, with respect to derivation, at least, may be called the gift of God...."

Brethren, you would do well to reread this lecture by Madam de Steiger in Liber 40 for you will surely find much that you missed the first time. And may I remind you of something else that you have read? That "Sâr Hieronymous in daily life was a master hypnotist.....

(*It is well known that a rapport exists between the hypnotist and the one hypnotized, and by telepathic means, the qualities of each are transferable). Since this is so, from an ethical and from a practical point of view, persons who wish to practice as hypnotists should be persons of high quality. Think well on what is being given to you here. A Golden Key is being passed to those who have eyes to see and ears to hear.)

THE TECHNICAL MEANS OF REACHING PERFECTION (2) You have heard it said that oftentimes we do not see the forest for the trees. Translating that statement to our situation, the key which we, as pilgrims on the path to perfection have been looking for ... has been before us all the while! So let us explore this thing called "hypnotism" for it is indeed the ancient & modern KEY that has been exposed and yet has remained hidden. It is THE METHOD and the MEANS that many who have seemed to possess mysterious powers HAVE USED to attain their development. And the technique is now to be divulged to you. It is to be given to you as the reward for your faithful and patient questing

The word hypnosis is coined from the Greek word HYPNOS which means sleep. Because a person in a deep trance appears to be asleep the term hypnotism has come into common usage with all its meanings both good and bad. Let us therefore disclose the pertinent facts you need to know, first for your own education but also to dispel any superstitious and inaccurate information which may have found its way into your mind. We will begin by clarifying what hypnosis is and what it is not, because the word "hypnotism" means different things to different people.

FORMS OF TRANCE Personally, I do not like the word 'hypnotism' for the same reason that I do not like the word 'trance' because both words, trance and hypnotism, have been greatly abused and the meanings have become twisted — or at least misunderstood. But 'day-dreaming' is a form of trance. When one 'day-dreams' the features are slack, the eyes stare vacantly, there is very little (if any) animation of the body — though one can day-dream while washing the dishes, walking down the street, or mowing the lawn.

A trance-like condition may also be caused by staring at the glowing embers in a fire place, or listening to music, or even listening to a public speaker, for yes, the voice also may be hypnotic -- many public speakers have the ability to sway an audience and hold them in rapt attention. So by these commonplace examples, you can understand that a 'trance' is nothing mysterious, it is something you have experienced many times, there is no so-called 'animal magnetism' involved, there is no secret mumbo-jumbo — the trance is simply a natural phenomenon that can't as yet be explained fully or satisfactorily by anyone.

STAGE HYPNOTISTS HAVE DISCREDITED THE SCIENCE Hypnotists on the stage have added their share to the confusion and distortion of the public's misunderstanding of hypnotism. The stage hypnotist is primarily a showman and he throws in a lot of stage technique and the razzle-dazzle of showmanship in his effort to 'put on a good show'. The stage hypnotist quite often uses his hands in exaggerated gestures and many people believe that this movement or waving of the hands helps produce the trance. Actually, the gestures are only hocus-pocus and have nothing to do with putting a person into a state of hypnosis.

WHAT IS HYPNOTISM? About now you are probably beginning to wonder "all right then, exactly what is hypnotism, what is the state called hypnosis"? Well, no one knows for sure -- the mind is a very complex mechanism and its capacities and capabilities are still not fully understood because we do not, as yet, know how to fully explore them.

So what then is the strange mystic strength of the human mind that constantly performs whether consciously, unconsciously or subconsciously? You may ask: what combination of chemicals or electrical energy, or arrangement of the cells of the human brain enables a man to reason or to think — or to be 'hypnotized'? Well, we come to a dead end here because no one knows. No medical doctor or psychiatrist has yet been able to untangle the mysteries of the mind and tell exactly why it performs as it does. Many theories have of course been advanced but only one conclusion can be reached: that what we call 'hypnotism' or the state of 'hypnosis', is a mental phenomenon as old as mankind itself. It has, in fact, been known throughout the ages by many names including magnetism and mesmerism.

MESMER AND MESMERISM Let us pause momentarily and take in a little history and see how the word "mesmerism" came into use. The following description is taken from an encyclopedia: "Hypnotism - a peculiar state of cerebral dissociation distinguished by certain marked symptoms, the most prominent of which is a highly-increased suggestibility in the subject. The hypnotic state may be induced or it may occur spontaneously. It is recognized as having an affinity with normal sleep and likewise with a variety of other conditions, among which may be mentioned the trances of Hindu fakirs and savage medicine-men. In fact, in one or another of their forms, hypnosis and its kindred have been known in practically all countries and all times. Hypnotism is no longer classified with the occult sciences. It has gained, though only within comparatively recent years, a definite scientific status and no mean place in legitimate medicine. It is now employed as one of the chief working tools of psychotherapists and psychoanalysts. Nevertheless its history is inextricably interwoven with occultism and even today much hypnotic phenomena is classed as 'spiritualistic'".

As far back as the 16th century, hypnotic phenomena were observed and studied by men of science, who attributed them to magnetism, an effulgence considered to be radiating from every object in the universe, in a greater or lesser degree, and through which all objects might exercise a mutual influence one on another. As it happened, Antoine Mesmer, an Austrian doctor, became impressed with theories regarding magnetism and in 1778 went to Paris where he began to employ certain methods one of which was to sit patients around a circular vat in which certain substances were mixed. Each patient held one end of an iron rod, the other end of which was in the vat. In due time a "crisis" occurred when the patients began to cry, laugh and have convulsions which were then superseded by lethargy. Many claimed to have had their problems healed. But the government appointed a commission to investigate the phenomenon and it duly reported, in effect, that there was no such thing as 'animal magnetism' and referred the facts of the crisis to the imagination of the patients! The report had the effect of quenching to a considerable extent the public's interest in 'animal magnetism' or 'mesmerism' as the phenomenon started to be called, and placed it in an unfavourable light, at least for a time.

Let us note in passing, that for ages there has been a belief (or a knowledge) that a 'mysterious force' exudes from the body. Paracelsus called it munis; a century later Van Helmont labeled it magnale magnum; this was followed by Mesmer's 'animal magnetism', Reichenbach's 'Od'; Bergson's élan vital, Driesch's 'entelechy' and Keely's 'motor force' ... and so on down the line.

THE KEY TO MAGIC (2) As Madam de Steiger said "mesmerism is the key to magic, known to every race and time". If the truth were known, it would probably be found that all the wonders of the primitive medicine men and all the tales recorded throughout history about witchcraft and magic, have the phenomenon of hypnosis as their foundation — even though those ancient practitioners didn't know what it was. They just knew they had something — and that it worked. AND HYPNOSIS WILL WORK FOR YOU TOO, FOR HYPNOSIS HAS TO DO WITH ACCEPTING SUGGESTIONS — WHETHER THESE SUGGESTIONS ARE GIVEN TO YOU BY A HYPNOTIST (OR OPERATOR), OR WHETHER THEY ARE GIVEN TO YOURSELF BY YOURSELF, OR WHETHER YOU ACCEPT THEM UNCONSCIOUSLY.

There are no mysterious words that a hypnotist mumbles, he merely makes suggestions which cause you to relax your body — because we know that when the body relaxes, when muscular or nervous tension is removed, the mind, the conscious mind, is subdued in some manner that we don't understand — and when the conscious mind is subdued, when the conscious mind recedes, or is narrowed, or is held back — it is then possible to alert what is called the subconscious mind and give it suggestions. These suggestions are usually accepted and acted upon while the person is relaxed or 'hypnotized.' Bear in mind it is the conscious mind which reasons, deducts and analyses. The subconscious mind, the Chief Engineer, is unable to reason, it simply accepts whatever is passed to it, acts on it and carries it out.

ADVERTISING Now, we are at the receiving end of suggestions every minute of our normal wakefulness. Every newspaper, magazine or billboard displays suggestions that we buy this or that brand of merchandise. Radio and television yell at us or talk softly about their products and sometimes they skillfully sneak in a suggestion so subtly that we are caused to subconsciously accept the suggestions about the product.

We are into such a vast subject that I must be careful less I digress. The information being divulged to you here, if you will take it and cogitate upon it, will open a huge book of knowledge to you. With just a little thought for example, you can understand how the public mind can be (and is) manipulated and influenced in subtle ways through the mass media, whether for commercial, religious or political ends, and that, indeed, 'advertising' draws on principles which once belonged to the domain of magic. (Whether it is "black magic" or "white magic" is simply dependent upon the motive.)

THE POWER OF SUGGESTION I have mentioned advertising only to give an illustration of the power of suggestion ... but suggestion can be much more subtle than the familiar advertisements, for example: we all have had the experience of seeing someone yawn - and what happens? Well, the chances are that you yawned too. The person who yawned did not intend to suggest that you yawn, but the fact that he did yawn was sufficient suggestion to cause you to yawn also.

HOW DOES IT FEEL TO BE HYPNOTIZED? Many people wonder how it feels to be hypnotized. It is not possible to attempt such a description because different people react differently. The best way to describe the state of hypnosis is simply to say that one experiences a feeling of complete and wondrous calm, mentally and physically. You do not experience a "blacking out", you do not feel drugged, you feel only completely relaxed mentally and physically. This is why, for the first time, many people feel they were not hypnotized — for they expected to float away on a pastel coloured cloud! Or they expected something different or unusual — because they have been misled to believe otherwise through the great amount of misinformation which has been propagated about hypnosis.

H-Y-P-N-O-T-I-C - - - - S-T-A-T-E-S

THE HYPNOIDAL STATE With the possible exception of a very deep trance, the hypnotized subject is fully aware of what is going on about him, he hears the operator's voice clearly and he hears other noises in the room, as well as sounds normally audible outside the room. This is typical of the state known as light trance, also called the hypnoidal, this word being defined as "akin to sleep". In this state of light trance there is complete awareness of what is going on, you do not become unconscious, you are just relaxed. A definite change is also noticed in the breathing; it will become more rapid, then there will be a gradual slowing down with the subject taking deeper and deeper breaths.

INTENSIFICATION OF SUGGESTION During hypnosis suggestions become intensified to points of unimaginable degrees and there is a tremendous sensitivity at the point of the hypnoidal state. Although the state of the hypnoidal is to all outward appearances a light state of hypnosis, it is a powerful state. This could, arbitrarily, be classified as a state of mind where the conscious and subconscious mind are on the same level. Anything that is said is taken literally and if the suggestion does not take hold immediately, you can nevertheless be sure it was recorded in the subconscious.

Suggestions can either be given to one's self ('auto') or to someone else ('hetero'). 'Posthypnotic suggestion' means a suggestion, given while in the hypnotic state, which is to be carried out after you have 'awakened'. There is a synchronizing process when you have entered the hypnoidal state. The synchronizing takes place between the conscious and subconscious mind. They are, arbitrarily, on the same level and so what the conscious mind cannot do, the subconscious mind can do. Consequently, if both minds are working together, there is heightened capacity of the individual.

REACHING THE SUBCONSCIOUS Hypnosis enables greatly intensified suggestion to reach the subconscious. The conscious mind normally "screens" everything that comes to it and either rejects it or accepts it and allows it to pass into the subconscious, but when the conscious mind is calmed, or should we say, subdued, direct access to the subconscious becomes possible -- and it is the subconscious mind that makes things happen.

USEFULNESS OF HYPNOSIS Let us consider the use or the usefulness of hypnosis. Let us gaze into the realm of using suggestion for eliminating mental blocks, for example, if there are such things as mental blocks. Do we not hinder ourselves for one reason or another, whether consciously or unconsciously? What is the cause of the conscious hindrance? One might hypothesize and say that for our own protection and self-integration we have set up mental blocks, to establish an equalizing process which in most cases is unconscious. For to accept consciously, for us to feel that we do not have the extensive conscious knowledge of ourselves that we thought we had, would be disconcerting to us -- so we throw this realization into another realm and let it lie there ... until a reason comes along to begin probing -- for psychotherapeutic reasons or otherwise -- then we find there is a "blockage" we would not have dreamed to be there.

With hypnosis we can dissolve these blocks and let the consciousness view all the material that comes up from the unconscious with a reasonable objectiveness.

CATALEPTIC STATE 1st stage. The second hypnotic state is called the cataleptic, a medium or medium-deep trance in which one experiences a feeling of deep and wondrous calm and relaxation. When one begins to enter into the first phase of the cataleptic state, it becomes definitely obvious that the respiration is slowing down, along with a pronounced heaviness. You have the feeling we have all had when we are in our beds and about to go to sleep, it is that pleasant drifting, dreamy feeling, that delightfully pleasing tug-of-war between semi-consciousness and sleep. At this point the hypnotized subject is still aware of the hypnotist's voice and at this stage of the trance one is most co-operative and can perform the operator's suggestions with greater ease.

CATALEPTIC STATE 2nd Stage. There are several sub-states in catalepsy -- in the second state there may be a feeling of being physically disoriented. For example, when you enter into the cataleptic stage you have conscious awareness but you are not aware of your body. If you were to awaken immediately to the normal conscious waking state, you may have the feeling of not knowing where you are. The thought could be -- am I just waking up in the morning? But after a few moments you are quickly oriented again. Actually, if it should ever happen, the feeling is not a disturbing one as it wears off quickly. But this situation is completely avoided simply by giving yourself the suggestion that you will awaken feeling completely refreshed, mentally alert and feeling wonderful in every way. With this suggestion you will be oriented immediately upon awakening.

CATALEPTIC STATE 3rd Stage. In the third state of catalepsy one is only a mind and, as in the second state (or stage), one does not have an awareness of the physical body, however one knows that one is, or that one exists in the subconscious state. The subconscious mind has almost completely taken over all consciousness and this feeling of being just a mind is very pleasant indeed. You will find that to remain in this state becomes more pleasurable each time you enter it. In deep trance the subject appears to be in a deep, sound, normal sleep and perhaps to an extent he actually is. His facial muscles are slack, his breathing is deep and regular -- but unlike a person in a natural sound sleep, he can hear the hypnotist's voice (or his own) and will respond sluggishly to suggestions of physical movement such as moving his hand.

There are many accomplishments to be made on the subconscious level, in the cateleptic state. You can make suggestions to yourself for improved memory, for more confidence, to stop smoking, for better health, to control appetite, to speak more beautifully, to become more psychically aware -- and a host of other desires too numerous to mention. Discretion should however be used as to the type of suggestion you give to yourself, or the suggestion you give to another if you are the operator.

There are many aspects involved in the art of making suggestions while in the hypnotic state. Because the degree of suggestibility is tremendously heightened, care must be taken to control whatever thought you might have at the time of being under hypnosis.

THE POWER OF THE SUBCONSCIOUS MIND While in the cateleptic state, past memories can be recalled and even relived very easily. This could be an unwise thing to attempt, since there may have been incidents in your past which you would not want to, or should not recall while working with one's self, although, if placed in proper hands, much can be gained by this recall. This would naturally depend upon the situation involved. You can formulate in your own mind when the time is right to begin bringing back past memories, always keeping in mind the power of the subconscious mind. We can say roughly that the subconscious mind is several times more powerful, in every way, than the conscious mind is.

SOMNAMBULISTIC STATE There is a third hypnotic state which is the somnambulistic, or, as it is often referred to, the "sleepwalking" state, which is commensurately correct. This is the deepest of the hypnotic states. There is a tremendous amount of subconscious power in this state where operations may be performed and many other medical treatments can be given.

In self-hypnosis you will generally experience the light trance, medium, or medium-deep trance. As you become proficient you will recognize the difference. Each time you enter the hypnotic state, it becomes progressively easier with every induction.

The ability to induce the hypnotic state is perhaps as much of an art as it is a science. The science you can learn but the 'art' you must develop as you practice and work at it.

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

CLASSIFIED

Personal & Confidential

Part II

We continue on the topic BE YE THEREFORE PERFECT..... and we are considering the use of hypnosis as the means of attaining this goal.

THE RELAXED STATE Before we get into the main part of our lecture for tonight, let us raise a few points and refresh our minds on others. Because of the misuse and abuse of hypnotism by stage performers and showmen, the term "hypnotic trance" has acquired a negative connotation and I prefer not to use it. There is a particular name we use in the Secret Schools but I will not divulge it here, from now onwards I will therefore speak mostly of the relaxed state which is the same thing.

With regard to the conscious and sub-conscious mind: actually there is only one mind but for convenience we refer to its conscious, subconscious and superconscious phases ... just as, for example, there is only a house but we speak about the living room, the kitchen, the bath room, etc., for convenience.

THE CONSCIOUS MIND The conscious aspect of the mind is that phase of our mind over which we have control. Through the use of the conscious mind we think, reason, deduct, analyze and so on.

THE CHIEF ENGINEER The subconscious aspect of the mind does not have the capability to reason. The subconscious mind is the willing and faithful servant that accepts and obeys without question all suggestions, commands and requests passed to it. The subconscious does not know whether the message it receives is good or bad, or right or wrong. It is not concerned with ethics or morality, etc. To emphasize its characteristic, we will replace 'subconscious mind' by CHIEF ENGINEER.

Also, in our last lecture, we indicated that the way to attain perfection, the method which has been known and used by occultists and mystics throughout the centuries ... is the technique that has come to be known in the profane world as 'mesmerism' or 'hypnotism'. We have indicated that these words have acquired an unpleasant tarnish because of their misuse. This in turn has deterred many people from investigating the science and benefiting from it. We will not be discourage by the silly opinions or by all the nonsense one hears about 'hypnotism' from the uneducated ... we wish to understand what 'hypnotism' actually is and to be able to use it for our benefit. Let us therefore carry on with our investigation:

THE METHOD OF THE MASTERS The "relaxed state", the "trance state", "hypnosis", "mesmerism" or whatever descriptive word you wish to use, is the means and technique used by the Great Masters and its use will see us well along the Path. It was used in the Secret Schools throughout the ages and while it is no longer classified as an "occult science", it remains the Golden Key of the Secret Orders.

We must belabour this point for herein lies the secret of your success. YOU ARE DEALING WITH YOUR OWN SELF-IMPROVEMENT, YOUR OWN PERFECTION! It would be prudent, therefore, for you to obtain and press into use every bit of useful information you can put your hands on regarding this science. There are several excellent books on hypnotism available. One such is
It would be well worth your while to obtain a copy of this publication. You should also scour second-hand book dealers for out of print publications.

THE TIMES OF NATURAL RECEPTIVITY The most receptive periods for everyone, in relationship to passivity and suggestibility, are the times of going to sleep at night and upon awakening in the morning. It would be wise for you to hold especially at these times, positive, constructive thoughts.

Speaking to a person, when that person is sound asleep, will reach them subconsciously. Parents may use this technique to speak to their children when they are asleep and give them positive suggestions.

ON GOING TO SLEEP When the muscles of the body are relaxed upon going into a normal, natural sleep, you arise in the morning feeling refreshed. If you go into sleep with the muscles tense, the subconscious holds the tension throughout the night and consequently you will awaken feeling tired and heavy, which will gradually disappear. But the same cycle will reappear unless relaxation is attained. Once attained you will attain a conditioned action.

As mentioned previously, muscle relaxation is a prerequisite for working with autosuggestion, or for reaching any degree of depth in hypnosis. This will proportionately be determined by your motivation and the amount of success achieved in the initial stages of relaxation.

At the time of drifting off into sleep at night -- this is the autosuggestive state of mind and at this time you can greatly utilize the power of the CHIEF ENGINEER. Bear in mind, with all the past conditioned actions we all have, it takes a repetition of the particular suggestion you desire, to bring it into everyday activity. Therefore put this natural period to good advantage.

As you lie in bed before going to sleep, you may attract many ideas, knowledge and material success by holding the picture of your object upon your mind before going to sleep, such as holding a mental picture of yourself doing that which you desire. Eliminate the thought of anything being impossible, for with practice and perseverance, one will succeed in anything he desires. This must be practiced in a calm and serene state of mind. When you have a picture of that which you desire, hold it, and if the mind wanders, bring it back. It is in the state between wakefulness and sleep that the intensity of the suggestion is most powerful. Hold in your mind, at night, as you drift off to sleep, the particular goal you wish to accomplish and have no doubts about achieving success.

The secret of attaining success has to do with receptivity. The relaxed state whether purposely induced or as it occurs naturally between sleep & wake, is a period of RECEPTIVITY. Make good use of it.

ON AWAKENING The period of awakening on mornings is certainly a moment of passivity and with this you can hold mental pictures more easily upon your mind without the usual conscious interference which you would ordinarily have during the day, in the midst of your usual activities. Be very conscious of ideas, thoughts, or "messages" that appear in your consciousness when you awaken on mornings, or when emerging from the relaxed state. It is at these times, especially, that the Chief Engineer speaks to you. If you will hold in mind at night as you drift off to sleep the question you wish answered, you will find the answer there immediately on awakening next morning.

I N D U C I N G R E L A X A T I O N

Notice how the tid-bits of information and instruction you received along the way (with greater or lesser interest and application on your part), is now being presented to you again, this time more potently.

FORMULATING YOUR COMMAND TO THE CHIEF ENGINEER In the task of formulating the proper suggestion, do not go immediately into the working of autosuggestion -- there must first be a period of physical relaxation before you can rest and slow down the mind sufficiently to the point of eliminating the physical conscious interference which you would normally encounter.

Most persons who try to relax and release tension are so consciously aware of it that they often fight themselves! What must be induced is not a physical strain but a physical passivity, with the release of tension from the MUSCLES within the body. Once you can accomplish this you can then give yourself suggestions of slowing down the thought processes. This is accomplished several ways: one is to withdraw the conscious awareness from the area of the body by picking an object of fascination (a "target") and focusing your attention upon it. This brings about a cessation of the blinking of the eyelids; consequently there is no electrical impulse recorded on that area of the brain and there is a decrease in conscious awareness. (When the eyes are open and the eye lids blinks, an impulse is registered and conscious awareness is retained. When there is no blinking, passiveness results.) Try to remember to have the eyelids remain stationary for as long as possible without strain on the eyes; when you feel there is too much strain, close the eyelids and keep them closed. Here is where you must be able to carry on in the formulation in the mind of your suggestion.

USE OF THE BREATH IN RELEASING TENSION The breath is an important factor in the release of tension from the body. When the breathing becomes slower, your thoughts begin to decrease. This is to say, your breathing, or respiration, and the rapidity by which thoughts pervade your conscious mind, are so closely correlated that, by slowing down one or the other -- the thoughts or your breathing -- you can automatically bring about a release of tension from your body; consequently, you are able to intensify your thoughts, bringing about a very soothing physical and mental relaxation.

TECHNIQUE OF PROGRESSIVE RELAXATION There are various avenues you can take in preparation for working with autosuggestion. There is a technique of progressive relaxation, starting with the tips of your toes and working to the top of your head. Concentrate on each individual part and as you do this, move the part you think of. Go over your body mentally and when you feel that a degree of relaxation is reached, hold a mental picture of an object, for instance a rose, and continue to think of this rose without letting any other thought come into your mind. If it does, (which can be expected), do not entertain this thought ... quickly return to the rose. And as you concentrate on the picture of the rose, you will begin to notice a slowing down of the respiration, for the longer you can keep your mind on a single object you lose conscious awareness of your body ... which is the inhibiting factor in working with autosuggestion, or self-hypnosis, as well as with all mental or psychic work ... and this is why you should not cross your legs when going into a state or relaxation as this tends to produce a contining conscious awareness of the body.

REALITY The mind may be used for good or evil, depending upon the individual interpretation of the term good or evil. In this particular interpretation, we mean positive and negative, or constructive and destructive, as in regard to the type of suggestion you are given, or you give to yourself.

Reality is the idea or the perception the individual has formed within his own mind. Reality, to him, may represent a hectic and hostile world and the niceties could be the non-reality. It is how you perceive or interpret it.

THE "CAN'T DO" CONSCIOUSNESS Most individuals have and hold the idea in their minds that, even before they start a task, they tell themselves "I can't do it" and with this statement, the Chief Engineer, if told so over a period of time, finally activates the idea of "I can't" and it becomes a conditioned habit, a law for that person. If you ever have a situation where you are unable to recall something, instead of either repeating verbally or mentally "I can't", give yourself the suggestion, "it will come to me", and you will be surprised that in a short time you will have the answer. With a little thought you can replace deterring ideas that have become bad habits with positive ones. After a period of time this will become conditioned reflex. YOU CAN CHANGE YOUR LIFE BY ALTERING YOUR THOUGHTS!

THE WAY TO PERFECTION Positive affirmations are useful helps in impressing the Chief Engineer. Just remember it took you many years to establish a habit and it may take more than one message to the Chief Engineer to have him set a new course. By using the period known as the relaxed state you have a SURE AND CERTAIN WAY to "program" yourself (to use modern parlance) to correct all negative patterns within yourself and to open new attributes which may seem miraculous to others.

This entire subject of hypnosis is an interesting and useful study. Think of religious ecstasy and "speaking in tongues". Think of tribal dances and Voodoo ceremonies where the trance state is brought on by the rhythm of a drum. Think of the fire walkers in the South Pacific Islands ... how do they do it? Think of the Oracles of olden times who spoke prophetically while in a "trance". Think on these things, understand the underlying principle, then put it to work for YOU.

THE GREAT SECRET OF THE ALCHEMISTS

THE GOLDEN KEY OF THE SECRET ORDERS

Suggestions reach subconscious levels more completely when one is in the relaxed state.
After an idea has been accepted by subconsciousness, it becomes a law in that person.
The relaxed state occurs naturally at the times of drifting off to sleep at night and awakening on morning.
In addition, the relaxed state may be purposely induced or one may be unconsciously lulled into it.
During the relaxed state one is very susceptible to the receipt of suggestions.
Achieve the relaxed state, then give yourself suggestions in short sentences which are always positive.

Repetition will firmly establish the suggestions in the subsconscious mind and they will be faithfully carried out by the Chief Engineer.

There are many experiences to be had in the relaxed state, which is not dangerous -- such as pictures of previous incarnations, astral projection, adoration, contact with the Superconscious and from there, with the Universal Consciousness, which is GOD.

BE YE THEREFORE PERFECT.....

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

CLASSIFIED

Personal & Confidential

Part III

In this lecture we will disclose to you the transinduction method we prefer. Bear in mind, as you study this science, you will discover many ways to induce the relaxed state however, the method we will share with you, is a preferred method of professionals. Your immediate goal is to become adept at inducing the "relaxed state". That is what the transinduction method will enable you to do. If you do not have a tape recorder, or, if you prefer, you may work with a close friend who will assume the role of 'operator' who will follow the script. Or again you can study the transinduction script and speak directly to yourself, mentally. Although we have given a word by word procedure, what is given is only a guide.

After you read through the transinduction method you will be able to better follow what is being said here: your immediate goal is to learn to put yourself into the relaxed state. It is actually easier, and takes less time to do — than it takes to describe it. Remember what you have been told: it is more an art than it is a science.

When you have mastered the technique you will then proceed without the benefit of a tape recorder -- or assistant. The tape recorder, or assistant (operator) is only to help you to learn how to enter the 'relaxed state' condition in the beginning.

After you are able to enter the relaxed state easily, you will dispense with the tape recorder (or with the services of an assistant) and then you will be ready to put your ability to good use.

NOTES

1) When it is time for you to 'wake up' and return to your normal state of alertness, you simply say to yourself, mentally, "on the count of three you will be wide awake, alert and feeling completely refreshed. One - two -three - open your eyes."

2) *You always speak to yourself as if you were speaking to another person. You do not say "I'll be wide awake." Say, "you will be wide awake, alert ..." and so forth. Say it to yourself, mentally, as if you were talking to another person.

3) Don't worry or be concerned that you might not wake up! A hypnotized person can wake up anytime he wishes, regardless of what the operator (or hypnotist) says (if you were working with one), and contrary to what you may have heard or read!

4) The 'hypnotic trance' is a natural state. It is a state you have probably already entered many times! The only mysterious thing about it is that you did not know it was a 'hypnotic trance'!

5) 'Hypnotism' opens the door to the inner mind, therefore care regarding the many possibilities must be exercised.

6) Remember the subconscious aspect of the mind does not have the capability or capacity to reason. It immediately and blindly obeys suggestions given to it. Suggestions reach the subconscious levels more completely when one is in a relaxed state. Upon entering the "relaxed state" give your suggestions in short sentences which are always positive. Also use positive affirmations. Repetition will firmly establish the suggestions as a law within you.

THE PREPARATION

1) Sit in a straight chair, preferably one with arms and a back high enough to support your head. If this kind of chair is not available use a reclining chair, or a couch, or a bed. Do not cross your feet (as this heightens body awareness).

2) After arranging where you are going to sit or recline, pick out some bright, shiny object in the room that you can easily see from where you're sitting or lying. This bright object should be at an elevation above the level of your gaze to the extent that from the position you select, your eyes will be directed slightly upward. This object we will call the TARGET and it can be most anything -- a lamp, any metal work within the room, some piece of decoration -- anything.

As a matter of fact, you can use a thumb tack -- stick it on the wall or on the ceiling, or you can use a small colored light bulb of low wattage. Personally I use a $7\frac{1}{2}$ watt blue light bulb which is about the size of a walnut and which gives a soft, restful, relaxing glow.

Now after you have selected your position, either in a chair or on a couch or a bed, arrange to have the target at least 6 or 7 feet from your eyes -- and remember: slightly above your level gaze. The target should be in a position so you can easily see it without getting your head in an unnatural position.

And now this important point: when you are about to undertake the transinduction be certain you won't be disturbed!

Be certain that your entire body: arms, head, shoulders, legs, body, are completely at ease. Feel free to move and adjust your body so that every part is in a comfortable position.

Have the volume level of the tape recorder suitably adjusted and have the controls nearby so you can turn the machine off, or make adjustments if necessary.

THE TRANSINDUCTION

You have taken up your position as instructed, you are gazing at the target. You will go through the transinduction either with the aid of a tape recorder, a friend (operator), or mentally.

"Look steadily at the target — keep your eyes steadily on the target and don't let any distraction cause your gaze to shift or waver — just look steadily at the target and pay close attention to what I say.

"Your ability to be relaxed and enter the trance state depends on your complete cooperation from this point onwards.

"As you continue to look steadily at the target your complete cooperation is absolutely necessary from now on. Please do not try to analyze what I am saying or why I am saying it — please do not try to anticipate what I may say — just give yourself completely to my suggestions.

"Please pay close attention to what I say and let yourself cooperate completely. There is nothing mysterious about relaxation — soon you will be completely and deeply relaxed — completely calm mentally and physically.

"It will be a very pleasant experience — one that you will enjoy — it will be an experience you will find easy to achieve.

"Continue gazing at the target — eyes fixed on the target — body completely relaxed -- just let your body go limp — just let your body sag -- as you look at the target you will notice it begins to blur — to go out of focus -- this is quite normal -- so keep your eyes on the target -- just RELAX and keep looking at the target.

"Very soon now you will begin to be aware that your eyes are getting tired — your eyes will begin to blink — your eyelids will get tired and heavy — and you will find it difficult to keep your eyes open. So as you continue to gaze at the target let your body relax more and more -- more and more — let every muscle become limp and relaxed, limp and relaxed -- limp and relaxed -- you will notice that your feet are beginning to feel heavy -- your feet are relaxed and beginning to feel heavy -- and your legs are heavy and limp — legs heavy and limp — and relaxed.

"Your arms are relaxed -- and limp -- and heavy -- arms limp -- and heavy -- and relaxed.

"Your shoulders are sagging -- sagging -- relaxed and heavy -- neck muscles limp and relaxed -- neck muscles limp and relaxed.

"Relax the face muscles -- jaws loose -- and relaxed.

"As you continue looking at the target you are relaxing more and more -- feeling every muscle of your body becoming limp -- your body feeling tired -- and heavy -- a pleasant heavy feeling stealing over your body -- and now your eyelids feel very heavy and you begin to feel drowsy and sleepy -- the eye lids -- so tired and so heavy -- the eyes are becoming very tired looking at the target -- the eyelids are getting heavier and heavier -- the eyes are blinking -- the eyes feel strained -- strained and tired from looking at the target -- and it is very difficult to hold your eyes open.

"You are relaxing more and more -- just letting yourself go -- just letting yourself go limp -- relaxing more and more -- body becoming limp and heavy -- eyes SO tired -- eyelids SO tired and heavy -- you are becoming drowsy -- more and more drowsy -- and tired -- and sleepy.

"In just a moment now you will find you just can't keep your eyes open -- its going to be so nice and restful to close your eyes -- its going to be so comfortable having your eyes closed -- the strain on your eyes is getting greater -- and greater -- and greater -- your vision is becoming blurred -- the eyelids are getting heavier -- and heavier -- and heavier -- feel how heavy your eyelids are -- the eyelids are so tired -- and so heavy -- you find it impossible to keep them open -- you find it impossible to keep your eyes open any longer -- your eyes are closing -- your eyes are closing -- SO tired -- SO heavy -- SO heavy and tired -- they are closing of their own accord -- let them close now -- let your eyes close -- that's it -- your eyes are now closed -- you feel so much more relaxed now that your eyes are closed -- so feel as if you're sinking down, down, deeper and deeper into this pleasant relaxed condition -- and you will continue to go deeper and deeper into this pleasant, RELAXED, drowsy feeling.

"In just a moment I will begin to count, I will slowly count to seven and as I call off the numbers you will feel yourself sinking deeper and deeper -- becoming more and more drowsy -- the body becoming more and more RELAXED each time I call a number as I slowly count to seven.

"When I get to seven you will be so wonderfully RELAXED -- so completely RELAXED -- you will feel so pleasantly drowsy that you won't want to move -- you will just want to go on RELAXING until its time to wake up.

"Remember now — as I count — you will go deeper and deeper — becoming more and more relaxed — and as I call the numbers you will feel yourself becoming more and more limp — more and more RELAXED — deeper and deeper.

"One — let yourself go now — feel yourself sinking — going down — down — pleasantly down — deeper and deeper.

"Two — Its a very pleasant sensation as your body responds — relaxing more and more — feeling yourself going down — down — down.

"Three — more and more relaxed — its a very pleasant feeling as you feel yourself becoming more and more RELAXED — more and more relaxed — deeper and deeper - deeper and deeper.

"Four — you feel yourself sinking deeper and deeper into this wonderful feeling of complete relaxation — all the way down — more and more — now, let every muscle just go limp — you feel this pleasant — this very pleasant lethargy creeping, stealing over your body, as you sink deeper and deeper into this pleasant state of RELAXATION.

"Five — more and more now — you feel yourself going deeper and deeper — deeper and deeper.

"Six — deeper yet — you feel this wonderful lethargy sweeping over your entire body — every muscle and tendon — every nerve and fibre of your body — so pleasantly relaxed — so limp — so soothingly relaxed — you are SO drowsy and SO limp and SO RELAXED — so drowsy — so limp — so relaxed — its such a wonderful feeling —

"Seven — now you're completely relaxed - mentally, physically and emotionally — your mind is calm and at ease — your mind is at peace — your body is at rest — in a deep state of RELAXATION — and you will continue to relax like this until its time to wake up — until its time to become alert — I'll tell you when, so you have nothing to worry about — nothing to do but listen to my voice.

"And now — while you are completely relaxed I want to assure you that the next time you undertake to go into this state of relaxation you will relax even quicker than you did this time — and it will become easier and easier for you to relax — and you will find yourself relaxing quicker and without effort — and you will find it to be very, very easy.

"This wonderful feeling of complete relaxation — this wonderful state of calmness and receptivity — this wonderful state of profound compositure is something you will look forward to — something you'll want to achieve again and again.

"I want you to establish within your mind now -- a key word — a word that you will use to quickly achieve this state of relaxation -- a word you will use when you are not listening to this tape — I want you to listen to me as often as you feel it necessary -- listen to me as many times as you feel necessary to establish the relaxing procedure -- but your ultimate goal is to relax yourself quickly, without effort, no matter where you might be, regardless of the surroundings or the circumstances.

"So after you have listened to this tape several times -- use the following relaxing procedure without the benefit of this tape: -- you will relax yourself by using a key word and the key word is the word RELAX -- the key word is the word RELAX -- the word RELAX is your key word -- when you are ready to relax yourself you simply close your eyes -- begin to breathe deeply, and regularly -- as in a natural sleep -- you are to breathe regularly and slowly -- regularly -- slowly -- and as you exhale each breath, say to yourself mentally -- not aloud but to yourself -- mentally -- say to yourself the key word: RELAX. As you exhale with each breath -- say the key word: RELAX -- exhale -- relax -- say it SLOWLY as you exhale: RELAX.

"You will be pleased how quickly you'll relax, relaxed as you are now -- and you'll be pleased how quickly you will relax, when you say the key word, RELAX.

"You will not say the key word RELAX out loud -- you will not say the key word aloud -- you will say it mentally -- to yourself, as you exhale -- RELAX — and soon the key word will enable you to relax completely in just a few moments -- your body and your mind will respond quickly to the key word and soon you'll be able to relax in just a few moments -- just as you're relaxed right now.

"And I assure you there is no concern in using the word RELAX in casual conversation when you're awake -- the word relax will be a key word only when you intend to use it for relaxing like this.

"And hereafter -- when you're completely relaxed -- like this -- you'll be able to give yourself suggestions or instructions -- and you will find the suggestions you will give yourself will be actually carried out -- and you will be greatly pleased with the results.

"Now here is the wake up procedure you will use to bring yourself back to a state of normal compositure and alertness -- here's how you'll wake yourself up -- you will always know when its time to wake up or become alert and I assure you that waking up or becoming alert is very easy -- for you always have complete control of your mental faculties at all times — you always will recognize when its time to wake up.

"When you're relaxed you will have complete control of your mental faculties at all times — so hereafter you will always awaken yourself — you always will alert yourself in this manner: you will say to yourself "its time to wake up and be alert — on the count of three you'll be wide awake and completely refreshed."

"All right — ready to wake up — 1 - 2 - 3!

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

Remember you always speak to yourself in the third person singular: you always address yourself, you always give yourself suggestions or instructions as if you were speaking to or addressing another person. Always say to yourself you will do this; or, you will wake up; or, your head will stop aching; or, you will not be emotionally upset, etc.. .

Always come out by telling yourself that you will awaken feeling refreshed, alert and in complete command of your mental faculties. This is to prevent any feeling of disorientation.

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

We are suggesting you obtain the following books on Hypnosis - write to Wilshire Book Company, 12015 Sherman Oaks Road, No. Hollywood, California 91605-3781, U.S.A.

Ask for the catalog of books on hypnosis and self-hypnosis by Melvin Powers.

We are suggesting these two important books to be read in this order:

First: The Magic of Rapport by Jerry Richardson.
Obtainable from Meta Publications, P. O. Box 565, Cupertino, California 95015.

Second: Frogs into Princes by Richard Bandler and John Grinder. Obtainable from Real People Press
Box F, Moab, Utah 84532
U.S.A.

And we wish to suggest this excellent out of print book if you can possibly find a copy: Principles of Spiritual Hypnosis by Peter D. Francuch, Ph.D., published by Spiritual Advisory Press, Santa Barbara, California 93111.

And of course any book by the famed Milton Erickson M.D. !

Follow these leads!

Part IV CLASSIFIED Personal & Confidential

NOTES, RECAPITULATION, FURTHER INFORMATION and a self-test quiz.

A "The key to magic" as it has been called should be pursued by all Companions to greater depths. There are many good books currently available. Also search for out-of-print volumes in second hand book stores.

B Subject yourself to self-analysis, notice those things about yourself that could be corrected, then using auto-suggestion proceed to implant within your mind the positive attributes that will replace your shortcomings. You must strive to attain a balance, for to over develop any characteristic makes it a fault. Serious over-development can lead to delusion, even insanity. (see item P).

C Think about this: persons congregate at church or at meetings, or sit in front of television sets, etc. The speaker (or the program) lulls them into a state of receptivity. In this relaxed state their minds are opened and they easily accept impressions and suggestions without even knowing they have been impressed. Hearing the same message again and again sinks it deeper and deeper into their subconsciousness. Soon, it becomes a 'truth' for them. They have actually been 'brainwashed'.

D Reality for the person is what they accept as truth. This truth is usually a matter of opinion. Whether the reality has any actuality, whether it exists as a fact outside that person's mind is quite another question ... but for the person ... that is the way it is.

E Achieving first the relaxed state is the basis and fundamental prerequisite to success in most mystical, psychic and occult work, in 'meditation', visualization, prayer ... and the whole gamut which, bundled together, is called 'metaphysics'. Those who have been participating in mystical practices, who have been thrashing in the air ... will now find their wings and begin to fly after very carefully studying this lecture series, extracting the pearls and using them. Priests doing the Mass should take special note.

F After you have mastered the art of entering the relaxed state proceed to give yourself your own special instructions for self-improvement and for whatever other work you wish to accomplish. You will respond to the suggestions completely and to your satisfaction. They will become powerful laws in yourself and you will be pleased with the results.

G You can begin to give yourself suggestions from the very first time you enter the relaxed state. Your priority is to learn to enter the relaxed state quickly and completely and on your own (i.e. without the use of the tape recorder or an assistant) regardless of where you may be, or regardless of the surroundings. In addition, give yourself positive affirmations during the day.

H When you enter the relaxed state you are always in complete control of your mental faculties, you are in complete control of yourself in every respect and you have complete control over your self in mind and body at all times.

I We live in a world of duality and there are positive and negative aspects to everything. The correct way to overcome a bad habit is not so much to suppress it but to REPLACE IT with its opposite, positive quality. Your aim is to achieve a BALANCED EQUILIBRIUM.

J At the moment of drifting off to sleep at night you may hold in your mind a question you wish answered. You will find the answer there when you awaken in the morning. Use each opportunity of going to sleep in a useful way. Give yourself positive suggestions, such as: I am in excellent health, etc. Or drift off to sleep with beautiful thoughts of peace, love, and harmony with all creation.....

K The technique of "hypnosis" has been known and used by the Secret Schools throughout the ages. Many seekers have affiliated with the popularly advertised "arcane schools" searching for various ways and means to bring about transformations within themselves, to develop their innate powers and so on. After years of membership the seekers have been given loads of chaff and barely a few grains of wheat. They have never had the Golden Key imparted to them in direct language. Why is this? We will not pretend to answer for these schools or to offer an excuse for them. But we can tell you this: many "schools" hypnotize and brainwash their students in subtle ways, i.e. "if there was a quicker road to the goal, we would know of it before anyone else....." etc.. To acquaint students with hypnotic techniques and methods that would awaken them to their own methods would be to weaken their grip on the same students!

L What can be unfortunate about the use of "hypnosis" ? ITS MISUSE. Let us recall these lines from Part I: "During hypnosis suggestions become intensified to points of unimaginable degrees and there is a tremendous sensitivity at the point of the hypnoidal state. Although the state of the hypnoidal is to all outward appearances a light state of hypnosis, it is a powerful state."

M Now what happens to a person who gets a particular notion or an idea which is accepted to such a depth that it becomes an unshakeable reality and a dominating drive? This person can become deluded, even insane. For example, you very often hear of persons who believe they are some special character such as "Ninja Man", or "Wonder Woman", or others who fancy themselves to be monarchs and soon begin to act in a regal manner, walking around in public wearing a crown and carrying a scepter.

O Of course most people who are deluded did not become so though accepting suggestions during a self-induced hypnotic trance! And it is hardly likely that any of our Companions, who are mature and sensible, will abuse it. However, having stressed the positive side of the technique, it would be remiss of me not to mention its other side with its possible dangers. The relaxed state allows the mind to be strongly impressed. Therefore care and caution must be exercised in using auto-suggestion.

P Let us study this excerpt taken from Beyond-Mind, by W. E. R. Mons, page 93, ISBN 0-87728-633-7, published by Samuel Weiser, Inc.. (The bold type is our accentuation): "In the hands of someone who himself stands under the influence of a powerful auto-suggestion, his suggestive powers can almost perform miracles. We know of an unpleasant number of such examples today, but one of the first classic cases was the German cobbler Schlater. This man had hallucinations which firmly convinced him that he had been called to spread the gospel through the length and breadth of the American continent. He barely knew in which direction America lay, let alone that it was already a haven for every bizarre sect under the sun. He sold his shop and with the proceeds sailed across the sea, clutching his Bible. He preached with fervour and laid his hands on the sick, actually healing some, and quickly established a following. He wandered southward from state to state in the odour of sanctity until he disappeared in Mexico, after which nothing more was heard of his activities. His disciples spread the news that he had risen to heaven, but in time his skeleton, still clutching the Bible, was found under a tree."

Such is the power of a dominating idea.

Q Let us keep our feet on the ground! The last paragraph simply illustrates what over zealousness can do. One becomes over zealous from too much fire. There is nothing under the sun that is absolutely without some danger ... the very next mouthful of food you eat could choke you! But chances are it wont because you have learned to eat properly. It is the same with everything else ... the moral is care and moderation in all things.

R Ever since Liber 1 we said the basic difference between people is their level of consciousness. We can now say the specific difference is in their perceptions, in the quality of their thought and in the ideas that dominate them. Receiving the Great Secret you hold the Golden Key that will enable you to develop within yourself the qualities you wish, and to overcome those you prefer to subdue.

S Keep the parameters of your mind flexible. You cannot grow if the boundaries of your mind are frozen. To become rigid is to die.

Let us now dwell a little on the following:

(a) The 'hypnotic state' or 'relaxed state' as we have preferred to call it most of the time, is a period of great receptivity where suggestions pass easily into the subconscious mind.

(b) One may fall into the relaxed state through one's own willful induction; or one may fall into it automatically ... as when watching T.V. for example; or one may be lulled into it by someone such as a speaker, either by his willful intention, or unconsciously by him. THERE ARE SEVERAL WAYS WHEREBY THE HYPNOTIC CONDITION MAY BE INDUCED OR PRODUCED, EITHER PURPOSEFULLY OR UNCONSCIOUSLY.

(c) The late Albert Einstein said the problem with people is they don't think. Take a tip! Think a little and avoid being taken advantage of!

(d) Knowledge of the results that may be obtained through suggestion, especially when people are in a relaxed state, is used by the advertising and public relations industry. It is used to influence public (and specific) opinion by commercial houses, politicians, government agencies, by ordinary persons, by persons seeking power and dominion over others ... for propaganda purposes, for good purposes, bad purposes, personal purposes.....

(e) The principle back of 'black magic' and 'white magic' is the same. It is the motive, or intent, that determines whether it is 'black' or 'white'.

(f) There is a subconscious telepathic exchange between the hypnotist and the one hypnotized.

(g) In days of yore hypnotic techniques were known to and practiced by men of high spiritual development only. It was the golden key of the Secret Orders and religious hierophants. However, the 'secret' slipped out from time to time and eventually became misused and abused, causing 'hypnotism', to be viewed in a bad light.

(h) One's 'mind' is perhaps his most important asset. Everything takes place first on the mental level or in the mind, then it 'appears' in the physical. A healthy mind is paramount for a healthy, happy and successful life. "It's all in the mind" is not just a trite saying, it is a positive fact. The key to success is to get it right first "in the mind." Almost everyone knows this key... yet very few people do it!

(i) The world is full of poor people. The reason is because, first of all, they are poor in their mind.

(j) "Without vision the people perish".

(k) There is the geographical mind of people who live in a particular country. There is the racial mind covering persons of a particular race. There is the community mind of people who live in the same environment, etc. Every block of people has a mind, as you know, having learned about the Egregore. Each block of people is influenced by its mind and has its particular characteristics, attributes, even habits which influence the individuals of the block. The individual is however a free agent and is not bound in a straight jacket. We all, to some extent, 'go along with the program' and 'take things for granted' and fall in with the accepted patterns of behaviour, eating habits, manner of expression and speech, etc.. But every Pilgrim on the Path has to extract himself from the stream and hasten his own evolution. He must examine himself through introspection ... see where improvements are needed ... and proceed with corrections. You have been given the key, USE IT!

(l) You can do all the "development" exercises you want, you can spend years and years concentrating on the psychic centers and 'chakras'..... the simple, powerful, immediate and practical way THAT WORKS is to implant your desire in your subconsciousness through auto-suggestion.

(m) Be sure you understand the difference between the 'two' minds. The conscious mind is the thinker, the subconscious is the doer. You may have all sorts of well intended thoughts and ideas in your conscious mind but as soon as you stop thinking about them they vanish and the law which you have established, the habit ... goes on. Not until you have established the new 'good' habit will you have won the battle against the old 'bad' one.

COMPREHENSION TEST

1. What is the fundamental difference between the conscious and the subconscious mind?
2. What did Madam de Steiger say was the key to magic?
3. How can auto-suggestion be misused?
4. What happens to the mind when the body relaxes?
5. What is meant by a "balanced development"?
6. Turn to page 2 of this lecture, para 4, lines 35-38 and complete this sentence: "This was the original condition, the true end.

7. What is the effect on the mind when breathing is slowed?

8. How would you explain a 'trance'? What IS a 'trance'?

9. What does the Greek word Hypnos, mean?

10. Who is the Chief Engineer and what is his function?

11. How many hypnotic states are there?

12. Describe the hypnoidal state.

13. Describe the breathing pattern during the hypnoidal state.

14. Are the times of relaxation that occur just before sleep at night, and waking in the morning, suitable for visualization and for passing suggestions to the Chief Engineer?

15. The information given in this series will enable you to accomplish a great deal. From a complete scientific point of view, however, it is introductory. Have you been able to comprehend the immense scope and the possibilities the topic allows? Have you begun as yet to put the principles to good use? Have you been able to 'read between the lines'? Do you feel motivated to explore the subject further?

16. Sâr Hieronymus was revered as a mystic, an occultist, a master and a teacher. You are also aware that he is said to have been 'a master hypnotist in daily life'. Have you thought very much about this? What are your thoughts?

Companions: we have been careful not to suggest specific ideas to you. The fact is: the attainment of everything that is humanly possible can be greatly facilitated through the use of auto-suggestion. THINK VERY CAREFULLY ON WHAT HAS BEEN GIVEN TO YOU.

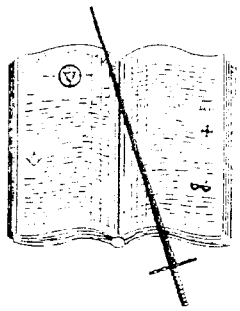
> "there is a certain, safe and easy way to develop within yourself the characteristics you desire ... and to rid yourself of those you would rather not have. This Key, which has popularly become known as "hypnotism" (among other names) was the Great Secret of the Inner Schools and today it remains the Method Supreme. It has been said the best way to hide something is to put it where everyone can see it ... then no one will bother to search for it. And so it is with the Great Secret. It is there for everyone to learn and use, but too accessible for most people to find. Such is the story of the Golden Key of the Inner Orders. We have unveiled it to you, see that you keep it ... and use it.
>
> BE YE PERFECT"

-o-o-o-o-o-

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

I.C.E.S.

International College of Esoteric Studies



Incorporated as a non-profit educational institution devoted to the advancement and mystical enlightenment of Man.

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

Dear Companion

We are in possession of a copy of the address THE BATTLE FOR YOUR MIND which was given recently at the World Congress of Professional Hypnotists Convention in Las Vegas, Nevada, by Dick Sutphen. This lecture deals with the persuasion and brainwashing techniques being used on the public today.

It covers such topics as: Brainwashing techniques used since 1735; the Pavlovian explanation of the three brain phases; thought-stopping and persuasion techniques; a step by step explanation of how born-again preachers conduct revival "crusades" and the expected physiological results; new trance-inducing churches; subliminal programming; ELF waves; etc. etc..

The information in this lecture will startle you.

We hope you will send for the lecture ... it informs you exactly on what you are up against when watching television, tells you about the non-detectable Neurophone which influences you through your skin and explains how trance is induced through vibrational sound ... etc.

We are making copies of the lecture (14 pages) available to Companions at this point in the Work. If you would like to have a copy, please drop us a line and request it, including five dollars to cover production cost and airmail.

Sincerely,

79 30

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 79-80

LIBER# 80 0 LIFE!

Personal & Confidential SEVENTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

R+C

CLASSIFIED

Personal & Confidential

Brothers & Sisters

ASTRAL PROJECTION AS A MEANS OF PROVING IMMORTALITY

For some time now we have been giving our attention to metaphysical and mystical concepts. You have read and studied a great deal and we hope you have attained some satisfaction and benefit from your labours.

In spite of all you have cogitated upon however, and what you may BELIEVE ... the ultimate question is this: Do you in FACT have a soul? If you do, if indeed you are a non-physical entity, if you are a spiritual being, do you KNOW it? Can you say with absolute certainty, as an indelible truth, that you ARE an immortal being and that you, your consciousness, can or does survive the event called "death"?

These questions have been asked many times: what is life all about? Is there is a purpose to life? Of course there are many answers but I would like to propose that any real, deep or ultimate answer would depend on whether life ends in oblivion when "death" comes ... or whether we, i.e. our consciousness, lives on.

NEED FOR EXPERIENCE I would like to submit that we are at that point in our studies where the time has come to set aside the philosophic and come directly to terms with the actual and the real. I would like to submit that the time has come when we must KNOW and not merely BELIEVE. As Roger Bacon, one of the founders of modern science said: "There are two modes of knowing - through argument and experience. Argument brings conclusions and compels us to concede them, but does not cause certainty nor remove doubts in order that the mind may remain at rest in truth, unless this is provided by experience." I submit then, that the time has come for us to lay aside all our arguments and speculations ... and EXPERIENCE.

(Discussion.
Lodge Master will proceed with the balance of the lecture only if the Brethren agree that to have experience is desirable.)

SOUL/CONSCIOUSNESS Before we go on it will be necessary for us to define what we understand the word 'soul' to mean because, as we all well know, this word is used by different people to mean different things. Since we have gone into some detail in our study of soul in previous lectures, and since the topic is sure to come up again, let us simply agree that in this lecture we will use the word 'soul' to mean our body of consciousness (whether this may or may not include the etheric body, astral body, etc. is not important for this assignment) ... because what we are going to do is to attempt to "project" our consciousness out of our physical body and thereby be in a position to prove to ourselves that consciousness can exist independently of the body. As we become adept at this and continue with independent tests and experiments experiments, we will each have certain experience and knowledge which will then enable us to KNOW whether "we" are in fact a physical body only, or whether "we" exist independently and the physical body is only a "garment" we wear while incarnated on this plane (as we have been taught). There are also many other questions we will be able to answer for ourselves, answers which will move ideas and concepts from the realm of belief into the world of knowledge.

THE OUT-OF-THE-BODY EXPERIENCE Fundamentally, the basis of the concept of soul should not be an idea but an experience. Indeed, thousands, if not millions of people alive today have had the experience of existing outside the space of their physical bodies for a brief period and experiencing this separated state as real, not just as a dream or as an imaginary experience. The typical consequence of such an out-of-the-body experience is on the order of "I no longer believe that I have a soul, or that some part of me will survive death, I KNOW it!" This is the certainty we each must have.

ASTRAL PROJECTION: "Astral projection" is the ability to "leave the body". Astral projections occur in two ways: either involuntarily ("it just happened"), or at will.

Here is an example of a typical case of an involuntary astral projection: it's been a long day and you're tired. You come home, nearly doze off in front of the television set, then you wander down the hall and plop on your bed expecting to fall asleep in an instant. But, suddenly and mysteriously, you find yourself paralyzed in a state of catalepsy. Gushing sounds fill your ears. Bright flashes flicker under your closed eyelids. Then you feel as if you're beginning to float.

A moment later, you open your eyes and find yourself hovering above your body. You are floating in the air! You are able to examine your physical body and everything else in the room from this viewpoint of independent perspective. Your mind is perfectly clear and you feel a freedom and expanded sense of awareness you have never experienced before. But just as you're beginning to orient yourself to this new and novel state of being, you have a momentary "blackout". Within a fraction of a second you "awake" back inside your body.

ASTRAL PROJECTIONS ARE COMMON If this has ever happened to you, you are not alone. The experience may have been frightening, transcendent, or mere puzzling. But it was not unique. Millions of people have undergone this strange adventure which has variously been called astral projection, out- of-the-body travel, ESP projection and a host of other things.

ASTRAL PROJECTIONS ARE VERIDICAL It is unfortunately true, however, that the classic out-of-body experience (OBE for short), does vaguely resemble certain phenomena studied in psychiatry and abnormal psychology. A psychiatrist reading the above account might classify it as an example of depersonalization (a feeling that the self is no longer real), distortion of body image (where the sense of the body's boundaries becomes confused), or autocopy (the seeing of one's own apparition). The OBE is remarkedly different from these anomalies of perception in one great - and vastly important way - however. It is often veridical, or truth-telling. In other words, persons who "leave the body" and travel to a location miles away, are usually able to correctly see and describe what was going on there. This aspect of the OBE takes it out of the hands of the psychiatrist and into the hands of the parapsychologist and those scientists who study the strange byways of psychic phenomena. And course "astral projection" is nothing new to mystics and occultists who have known about it, practiced it, and used it for centuries.

Some people experience their out-of-body self as an apparitional double of the physical body and may even see the threadlike cord (silver cord) that connects the two organisms, others merely experience themselves as a speck or ball of light, or simply float about totally disembodied.

A question you may have is this: just because we have the capacity to experience an involuntary OBE, does this mean we can actually learn to do it at will? The unqualified answer is: Yes. There was a time that the OBE was thought to be a rare experience, something that belonged only in the domain of great mystics and powerful psychics, however since the middle of the twentieth century, serious scientific research has been given to all aspects of what was previously branded the "supernatural", (it now has the dignified name of 'paranormal'), and it has been "discovered" that any "average" citizen can learn to master the art of astral projection.

THE LAST ENEMY We will not concern ourselves here with pages of statistics, data, references and history, since all this can be obtained from the many books now widely available. We will concern ourselves only with the pertinent information that will enable us to experience certain proofs for ourselves. You have heard it said that the last great enemy to be overcome is the fear of death. People fear death because they do not understand it. And of course their minds are full of fear about "eternal hell and damnation" which they have allowed their religious leaders to frighten them with. People like life and they want to know if they will continue to live when they pass through the door named "death". People have the gift of consciousness and they want to know if they will continue a conscious existence after the change comes. Most people hope so. Perhaps most people believe so.

Companions at this stage on the Path neither wish to hope nor to believe ... they want to KNOW. They want first hand evidence which will remove any doubt about the matter. NO ONE can TELL you something that only PERSONAL EXPERIENCE can provide. So the time has come to find out first hand whether we do in fact have a "soul", whether consciousness can survive independently of the body, and to have answered all the many other questions having to with "survival" that each of us has.

From my own personal experience I wish to assure you that astral projection is neither unusual nor unnatural ... you "project" every time you go to sleep! The "problem" is you do not maintain conscious awareness so you are unaware of it. (As an aside, you might like to ask yourself what becomes of your consciousness when you sleep. Does consciousness go "out" like a light when you switch it off?) Like the subject of "hypnotism" there has been much misinformation circulated about the out-of-the-body state. It is positively untrue that you can get "lost in the astral and unable to find your way back"!!! Or that while you are projected the silver cord may snap and you will die!!! etc. Were these old wives' stories true it would mean that each time we go to sleep at night we would be in grave danger!!!

ASTRAL PROJECTIONS ARE EXHILARATING An astral projection is not only something very natural, it is exhilarating, stimulating and delightful. In a conscious astral projection your mind is perfectly clear, you are in complete control of all your thinking and cognitive faculties. You only have to say to yourself "I want to wake up....." and instantly you do.

THE GOAL IS PROOF As indicated at the opening of this talk, the goal is to prove to yourself that consciousness can be separated from the physical body, that it can exist independently of the physical body, and that "you" are not your body. I am therefore going to give you several methods to achieve this proof. I also indicated that there are now in the market many books, well documented and containing a great deal of scientific information which you may obtain for further study. It would be superfluous, unnecessary and time consuming to attempt to present it here. Besides, new information is coming out all the time.

I would like to recommend Leaving the Body by D. Scott Rogo. ISBN 0-13-528026-5. Paperback. Published by Prentice-Hall Inc., Englewood Cliffs, New Jersey 07632. Companions will find this a valuable publication to have.

Following is one method given in the just mentioned book, and three others. Astral Projection is as much an art as it is a science. The following methods work ... if you work them! As with learning to play a musical instrument or to drive a car ... practice is the key.

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

Projection Through Progressive Muscular Relaxation

In this age of stress and anxiety, the psychological and medical establishments are taking a renewed interest in the holistic benefits of physical relaxation. It has been aptly demonstrated that simple relaxation reduces muscle tension, alleviates anxiety, helps the body recover from illness, and benefits the mind and body in a host of other ways as well. No wonder that Dr. Herbert Benson of the Harvard Medical School found his 1975 book, The Relaxation Response, on the national best-seller list. Written in plain language, it extolled the virtues of relaxation and offered uncomplicated formulas by which anyone could learn the art. One subject that Dr. Benson did not touch on was astral projection; yet over the years many people have induced both spontaneous and willful OBEs by the use of relaxation techniques. Although these methods vary from authority to authority, they all stress that an OBE will take place only when the body can be stilled and quieted.

BACKGROUND

The use of some sort of relaxation exercise to induce the OBE is probably a very old art. The technique makes practical sense. We are literally the prisoners of our bodies. We are constantly bombarded by all sorts of sensory stimuli that register through the body's perceptual organs, as well as by proprioceptive stimuli—sensations that arise from within the body itself. Most of us would find it incomprehensible to think of ourselves as something apart from our bodies, which is probably one reason why OBEs are not even more common than they are. We are so chained to the body and the pleasures and sensations we receive from it that we constantly inhibit ourselves from experiencing release from its confines.

Any technique that helps us to abandon our dependence on the body may well "allow" an OBE to take place.

Dr. John Palmer of John F. Kennedy University has written that "the notion that muscular relaxation may facilitate the OBE . . . makes theoretical sense because the relative lack of proprioceptive feedback from relaxed muscles may facilitate loss of body consciousness." As shown in Chapter 1, Palmer successfully used relaxation (in part) to help his volunteer college students achieve OBEs, or something akin to them. The message in all this is that one might not have to force the consciousness to leave the body in order to have an OBE, as Lancelin taught. One might merely allow an OBE to take place by working directly with the body more passively. Instead of usurping consciousness from the body, perhaps there might be a way to lower the body's guard so that consciousness can escape from it momentarily!

In this respect, it is more than revealing that many talented out-of-body travelers have quite independently induced OBEs through the use of relaxation, even though they have not been formally trained in the art of deep relaxation. Sylvan Muldoon, for instance, learned that he could induce OBEs by deliberately stilling the body and reducing his pulse rate. The primary result of this procedure was that he entered into a state of deep relaxation. (Muldoon's techniques are discussed in more depth later in this chapter.) Similar case histories could be cited as well. Blue Harary (discussed in Chapter 2), for instance, regularly employs relaxation procedures as he prepares to leave the body.

With increased interest in the art of relaxation, more and more "pop psychology" manuals are being written on just how to achieve this calm, peaceful state. It is now possible for anyone to take an hour out of the day and learn the basic techniques. With diligent practice, body relaxation can be learned within a week.

Relaxation techniques of all kinds have been around for years. The ancient yogis taught their disciples relaxation by instructing them to focus full attention on their own rhythmic breathing. Many Christian mystics also focused on breathing to quiet the mind and body as an adjunct to prayer. Another method for inducing deep relaxation was to repeat key phrases over and over along with the breathing. These methods may see much more mind-oriented than body-oriented, but remember that mind and body dynamically interact with each other. Relax one, and you automatically relax the other.

06

Not until fairly recently, however, were techniques for physical relaxation formally developed and taught in academic psychology. The first formally developed system was published in the 1930s when Dr. Edmund Jacobson of the University of Chicago issued his book, Progressive Relaxation, which explained how a state of deep relaxation could be obtained by progressively tensing and relaxing each of the body's muscle groups. Progressive self-relaxation became a popular psychological tool in the 1950s when Dr. Joseph Wolpe of the Eastern Pennsylvania State Psychiatric Institute showed that many phobias could be cured by teaching patients to remain relaxed while envisioning the object(s) of their fears.

Although Jacobson codified and formalized the practice of progressive muscular relaxation, he really did not invent it. Progressive relaxation of the body by working with the major muscle groups has been around for years. The primary virtue of Jacobson's specific exercises is that they help the subject to achieve a sense of deep relaxation, or at least appreciate the feeling of such calm. This depth is reached because the subject is constantly forced to compare the effect of relaxation to that of tension as he or she contracts and releases each muscle group.

THE TECHNIQUE

Many people relax and meditate, but not all of them end up having OBEs. Obviously, progressive muscular relaxation is only the first step to conscious control of the OBE. Inducing a state of progressive muscular relaxation (or PMR) should, therefore, be used as a state into which you must enter before actively willing an OBE to take place. Specific instructions for this combination of PMR and dynamic willing are given later in this chapter.

80 07

There are two different methods one can use to induce this form of deep relaxation. The first is to lie down comfortably and mentally go over the procedure. The other is through the use of taped instructions.

The simplest way to approach PMR is, of course, through mental exercise. There are various ways to broach the basic technique, but the following step-by-step program will accomplish the requisite task of getting you deeply relaxed.

The way you go about relaxing is, however, just as important as the exercises themselves. So, before beginning, keep the following points in mind:

1. Find a comfortable place to begin. You can use a chair, bed, or couch, although relaxing in a prone position will probably facilitate the OBE. (One survey conducted in England some years back revealed that an overwhelming number of people who had spontaneous OBEs were lying down at the time.)
2. As you begin, do not tense your muscles to the point of cramping them. Just tighten them, count slowly to five, and then relax for a few seconds (10-20) before working with the next muscle group.
3. Focus all your attention on the feeling of tension and release. Do not allow your thoughts to wander. Keep focusing on the specific part of the body you are working with. Remember that PMR is a mental as well as a physical exercise.
4. Tense and release each muscle group two or three times.
5. While tensing each muscle group, try to keep the rest of the body still and quiet. Pretend that your whole being is located in the part of the body with which you are working.
6. Although this is not formally taught in many PMR programs, it might be wise to inhale as you tense, hold the breath while you count, and exhale as you release. Authorities disagree about whether your eyes should be open or closed; I would recommend keeping them closed. If you are working with your eyes open, a darkened room might be suggested.

With the above points in mind, you can begin your specific relaxation exercises. The following is one such plan, although there are many varients:

80 08

1. Take a series of deep breaths. Breathe in slowly, hold it for about five seconds; and then release just as slowly.
2. Begin by clenching your dominant fist, hold it, and count to five, release, and repeat two or three times.
3. Repeat the procedure by flexing the dominant bicep.
4. Repeat with the nondominant fist.
5. Repeat with the nondominant bicep.
6. Take a short break and concentrate on the feeling of relaxation and inner warmth, or the satisfaction that the feeling of relief gives you.
7. Repeat with the muscles of the forehead by either raising or furrowing your eyebrows.
8. Repeat by closing and opening your eyes, if you are working with your eyes open.
9. Repeat by clenching your jaw.
10. Take a short break as described in 6.
11. Tense and release the neck muscles by either working with the muscles or, if you have a hard time feeling this group, by touching your chin to your chest.
12. Tense and relax the shoulder blades by arching them backward.
13. Repeat by pushing your shoulders forward.
14. Tighten and then relax the stomach.
15. Repeat with the sphincter (rectal) muscle.
16. Repeat with the thighs.
17. Tense and relax the toes by curling them as tightly as you can.
18. Repeat by pulling your toes toward your body.
19. Tense and relax your dominant leg muscle.
20. Repeat with the nondominant leg muscle.
21. Stop and try not to move. Focus your mind on your state of total relaxation and enjoy it.

Unfortunately, very few manuals explain how to return to a normal state of mind and body after going through this technique. One idea might be to begin stretching your arms and legs a few times while lying down. Stretch several of your other muscles as well, similar to the way you probably prepare to get out of bed after a long night's sleep.

The above exercises represent only a blueprint for relaxing. You may find that various alternative procedures work better for you. One variation is to begin with the feet and work progressively up the body. It probably does not matter what method of PMR you use. The important thing is to be sure you work with all the body's muscle groups, work at a steady and almost rhythmic rate, breathe along with the procedures, and constantly concentrate on the difference between the state of muscle tension and muscle relaxation. By the end of a week's self-training, you should be able to lose all awareness of your body after completing the exercises. This is the optimal state for undergoing OBEs, since the body will probably not automatically resist the release.

If you find it difficult to follow this type of program, you might make a tape to verbally guide you through the exercises. For best results, it helps if a female voice is used for men and a male voice for women. The speaker should use a steady, almost monotonous tone, as though reading a hypnotic induction procedure. The voice should be soft and soothing. A steady and neutral noise in the background will facilitate the effect. The sound of ocean waves striking against the shore is ideal.

The following is the text of one such relaxation tape, commonly used by parapsychologists to help people achieve an inwardly focused and ESP-conducive state of mind and body:

> The purpose of this tape is to induce a state of physical and mental relaxation. We will begin with muscular relaxation. Relaxation is the elimination of all muscular tension. Get as comfortable as you can; loosen any clothing that may be too tight. When you relax, do not think about the instructions. Just follow them passively and automatically. When tensing any part of your body, remember to leave all other muscles completely relaxed. Begin by curling your toes downward into a tense position. Tense up more and more and notice the discomfort. Hold this tension while I count from 10 to 1, letting go at the count of 1. (Count) Relax. Now relax your toes completely, and feel the difference. Instead of curling your toes, arch them up toward your face and feel the tension and discomfort all along your shins. Hold this . . . (Count from 10 to 1) . . . relax. Feel the relief in your legs. Next, curl your toes again and tense up your entire legs and calves, making sure the rest of your body is completely relaxed . . . (Count) . . . relax. Enjoy the feeling of relief that accompanies the removal of muscular tension. Relax all tension, release all pressures, place your body in a state of deep relaxation, going deeper and deeper every time. Next, tense your stomach muscles as tightly as you can as I count . . . (Count) . . . relax. Let go completely. Relax. Arch your back now, and feel the tension all along your spine . . . (Count) . . . relax. Settle down comfortably again. Let go of all of your weight; let go of all of the tension in every muscle of your body. Now focus your attention on your arms and fists. Relax the rest of your body completely. Tense your fists and bend your arms at your elbows, flexing your biceps. Hold this as tightly as you can . . . (Count) . . . relax. Let your arms flop to your sides. Relax completely. Now, take in a deep breath, fill your lungs, feel the tension all over your chest. Hold it . . . exhale. Feel the relief as you exhale. Relax. Make sure that all of the body parts that we have concentrated on are completely relaxed. If there is any tension, relax those muscles completely. Now, press your head back as far as it will go. Feel the tension in the muscles of your neck . . . (Count) . . . relax. Bend your head forward now . . . touch your chest with your chin . . . (Count) . . . relax. Relax completely. Tightly squinch up all the muscles of your face and around your eyes, making a face. Hold this . . . (Count) . . . relax. Remove all strain and tension. Relax your neck . . . your throat . . . mouth . . . relax your scalp . . . smooth out the muscles of your forehead . . . relax your eyes, and all of your facial muscles. Relax . . . relax . . . relax. Relax every muscle of your body. Focus on that area which is most relaxed and imagine that same pleasant, positive, relaxing feeling to spread, engulfing your entire body in one comfortable, warm, pleasant feeling of relaxation. Relax totally and completely.

We will now begin mental relaxation. Hold your head straight and lift your eyes upward in order to strain the eyes. Do not blink. Your eyelids will become heavy; your eyelids will become tired. While waiting for this effect, take a deep breath, and while exhaling, imagine yourself becoming more deeply relaxed. Imaine relaxing more and more with each breath. When your eyes feel heavy and tired, do not force them to remain open. Close your eyes when they become tired. Take deep breaths, and with each exhalation, become more deeply relaxed. Now, concentrate again on relaxing . . . relaxing your whole body. Relax all tension . . . release all pressures. Place your body in a state of deep relaxation, going deeper and deeper. Make certain that all muscles are completely relaxed. It feels so good to be completely and totally relaxed. Noises and sounds will not distract you, but will help you to become more mentally at ease and more relaxed.

Of course, mere relaxation is not going to propel you out of the body automatically. Special procedures must be used to facilitate the OBE. Self-suggestion is the best bet, but only after you have already become adept at entering into a deep state of PMR. Here is how to combine PMR with specific OBE suggestions:

1. As you lie down and prepare to relax, give yourself the mental suggestion that you will have an OBE at the completion of the exercises. Before beginning them, wait several seconds to allow the suggestion to register in the unconscious mind.
2. As you relax each muscle group and exhale, will that your mind or mental body release at that specific point. (This is a technique that Charles Lancelin recommended to induce out-of-body travel.)
3. At the end of the session, focus your concentration on the forehead or top of the head. Imagine your mind leaving the body by traveling right through and out of it.

Don't expect results the first time you try this. Remember that relaxation is a skill, something you will have to learn. Since it will take practice, perhaps two or three weeks of daily discipline will be necessary before you really begin to feel how relaxation affects the body. Most authorities on relaxation do not recommend that these procedures be used at night before you go to bed, since sleep may take over before you finish. You should follow this advice at first. After you have mastered the PMR technique, however, you might try them as you lie down for your night's rest. Carry them out right in bed. When you are done, remain still on your back and let yourself fall asleep—but try to remain conscious up to the very moment that sleep overtakes you. Constantly hold in mind the suggestion that you will leave the body naturally as soon as your conscious mind slips into sleep. This technique is especially recommended by Sylvan Muldoon, who used it as one of his chief methods for inducing nocturnal OBEs.

How will you know when you are beginning to have OBEs, or are at least on the right track? Your first clue will be when you experience odd sinking and/or floating sensations as you remain relaxed. A few people suddenly find themselves just spontaneously out-of-body, but most go through a stage where they actually feel the release of consciousness. In my own case, for instance, I always feel as though I am sinking right through my bed or couch when I begin to have an OBE. At the same time my head begins buzzing wildly—almost as though I were standing in the middle of a busy pinball arcade.

Many people who have had spontaneous OBEs while simply resting have remarked on these same symptoms. When you begin to feel these sensations—and they can be dramatic—try to intensify them. Do not move under any condition. This will disrupt the OBE, and by this time you will probably be cataleptic anyway. Will yourself to leave the body. You might get a fright at first when these symptoms manifest, especially if you find yourself unable to move. This type of pre-OBE catalepsy is actually a good sign. Don't fight against it. If it seems that you just can't get out of body but find yourself still paralyzed, don't be too concerned. To break the catalepsy, merely focus all your attention on one of your fingers and then try to move it. The finger will invariably move, and this minor breach will overcome the catalepsy.

COMMENTS

There is considerable evidence that physical relaxation in itself is conducive to the spontaneous occurrence of the OBE. When Celia Green of the Institute of Psychophysical Research in Oxford began surveying the general public about the OBE in the 1960s, several of her informants reported that their OBEs occurred when they were meditating, relaxing, or during actual PMR exercises.

For example, one correspondent told Green how her OBEs occurred as a result of yogic meditation linked with PMR exercises. Her technique was to still each part of the body without the use of specific tension or relaxation procedures.

"I had to lie down on the floor," she wrote, "in a fairly warm atmosphere, not cold, and concentrate on putting my whole body to sleep, breathe deeply, two or three times, and let my body completely go.

"And start on my little toe of my right foot and when it was asleep, the next toe, and so on . . . on up my body, and finally my eyes, commanding my body to go to sleep . . .

80 13

"I tried this out several times of course, without too much success, and then I finally achieved it."

On one occasion the woman felt that she was drifting away. She opened her eyes and discovered that she was looking down on herself and the floor from a point somewhere above her body.

Another correspondent explained that invariably she would doze off during her relaxation exercises and an OBE could occur naturally.

". . . I always dozed off," she went on to say. "And an odd thing would happen, a sensation of being in spirit floating in the far righthand corner of my bedroom near the ceiling (always in the same position)."

The woman also discovered—as I did—that sinking and floating sensations are the first stages of a full-blown OBE. When they occurred, she knew she was about to leave the body.

Another one of Green's correspondents automatically had an OBE from sleep as a result of her relaxation exercises.

> Each night in bed, lying on my back, I relaxed my body piece by piece, starting from the toes until, finally reaching the eyes, one was supposed to concentrate on an imaginary void between the eyebrows, then, filling it with a flower image, allow this to develop into full flower.
>
> For weeks I simply fell asleep at waist level, as it were, and gradually the idea of leaving the physical body became neglected, although the ritual of relaxing had become a habit . . .
>
> Then one night in the drowsy state before sleep I was aware of a small sensation which might be likened to a tablet of soap slipping from one's grasp in the bath. I was awake . . . I turned to look at my husband and was vaguely surprised to find that I was looking down on him and as I looked I rose higher and saw my sleeping form next to his.

These cases cannot be considered anomalous. When Green asked her informants about their state of mind and body at the time of their OBEs, 33 percent of them stated that they were more relaxed than usual. Only 11 percent described themselves as more tense. This trend in the data was more substantial when Green surveyed those correspondents who had undergone more than one OBE. A little over 41 percent described themselves as more physically relaxed than normal, while 11 percent were apparently more tense.

As mentioned earlier, it is remarkable how many gifted OBE travelers have spontaneously developed relaxation techniques as a direct route to the OBE. Hugh Callaway mentioned a variant of the PMR procedure as a means he used to leave the body; and S. Keith Harary and Sylvan Muldoon have also employed some sort of relaxation technique.

Harary, for instance, maintains that his OBEs occur quite naturally as a result of quieting down the body. In a description of his technique, which he wrote especially for this book, he says:

> Prior to experiencing an "at will" OBE, I induce an initial "cooling down" of my physical body. This is simply my allowing a feeling of relaxed numbness to spread through the physical body so that it will be out of my immediate conscious awareness.
>
> During my early attempts at an "at will" OBE, I would reach this state of relaxed numbness by suggesting to myself that each part of my body would, in turn, begin to feel very heavy, warm, and relaxed. I would usually work from my feet up to my head in this way, allowing all outside thoughts to passively drift through my mind. During this "cooling down" phase, I would also suggest to myself that, if I wished, I could have an OBE and that the slightest disturbance of the physical body would immediately terminate the experience. When this was done, I was able to have an OBE.
>
> After much practice I found that it became more and more simple for my body to enter the "cooled down" state. Eventually all I would need to do would be to suggest to myself that I would relax, that I would be able to have an OBE, and that there would be no difficulty of any sort (as there could not be difficulty unless I allowed it to occur or unless I was in an unpleasant state psychologically). A few moments after the suggestion has been given, I usually achieve the "cooled down" state "automatically." I need only concentrate on where it is I wish to "go" in the OBE, and I will go there.

Sylvan Muldoon employed a somewhat different system, although his basic principles are similar to Jacobson's PMR, since their goal is to quiet down and focus attention on each segment of the body.

Muldoon gives a full description of this technique in The Projection of the Astral Body. The method is not so much a specific OBE-induction technique as it is a way of placing the body in an OBE-conducive state of relaxation. Instead of working with the body's muscle groups, however, Muldoon's technique focuses on the gradual slowing of the pulse rate. Muldoon viewed this procedure as a substitute for relaxation exercises, even though specific tension-release exercises are subsumed within it. He points out that "the exercise for slowing the pulse also causes concentration and relaxation—thus eliminating the necessity of special exercises for each of these factors."

The following point-by-point program is a codification of the Muldoon relaxation method, drawn from his extensive writings:

1. Begin by lying on your back or on the right side with your hands at your sides. (Note here the consistency with the Lancelin techniques, which also forbid lying on the left side.)
2. Take a deep breath, hold it for a moment, and then try to "force" the breath into the pit of the stomach. The diaphragm should expand. Then release the breath. (Again, note the similarity to the Lancelin method, which also emphasizes the role the stomach plays during the induction of an OBE.)
3. Repeat this procedure six to eight times.
4. Close your eyes and concentrate on the top of your head and try to tense the scalp muscles and then relax them.
5. Repeat with the neck muscles.
6. Repeat with the upper arms.
7. Repeat this process down through the entire body. At this point, of course, the Muldoon method is virtually identical to many PMR procedures, even though they were published some nine years before Edmund Jacobson—the credited founder of the PMR technique—issued his description of the method.
8. Focus all attention on the heart and feel its rhythmic pulsations. Concentrate on them until you can both hear and feel them without any difficulty. Feel them arising from within the body, but not with your hands, which should still be at your sides.

This completes the first phase of the Muldoon heart control method. You should not venture on to the next phase until you have mastered the ability to focus attention on the heart while totally relaxed. When you have reached this degree of mastery, proceed to the next step.

9. While still lying down, try to transfer awareness of your heartbeat to any part of the body. Focus all your attention on various parts of the body and feel your heart beating there. Don't imagine it beating; you must literally feel the pulsations at that spot.
10. Beginning at your forehead, go progressively down through your body and feel your heart beating in each location—first at the scalp, then the cheeks, neck, stomach, lower abdomen, thighs, calves, and the feet.
11. Now reverse the procedure and go back up the body until you reach the medulla oblongata, the deep and lowest part of the brain.
12. Focus attention on the heart and will it to beat slower.

The key to the OBE, according to Muldoon, is to get the heart beating slowly and steadily. In other words, you are trying to imitate the state in which the body rests during normal sleep while consciously you remain awake. This state is the natural one in which the OBE occurs.

These procedures are really not at all difficult. Modern studies in biofeedback training—the art of regulating the body's supposedly automatic functions—has proved that, with a minimum amount of practice, most people can slow or speed the heartbeat at will.

When I was toying with the Muldoon technique as a teenager, I had no difficulty mastering this ability and could lower my pulse to 60 beats per minute and then raise it to 90 within seconds. Once when I was in college, I even sadistically tormented a doctor who was trying to take my pulse by employing what I had learned! (Remember that all this was long before biofeedback became popular.) The basic problem is learning to control the heartbeat so that it remains steady. Muldoon gave some specific suggestions for learning this level of control:

We are now supposing that you are lying upon your back, relaxed, with your arms at your sides, and that you have acquired the ability to feel your heart's pulsations in any part of your body. Now you are concentrating upon your heart again, and if it is not steady you are to tell it, in your mind, that it is steady, and you are to catch the rhythm of the proper beat, and beat time in your mind, concentrating upon the thump of the heart at the proper rhythm. Keep this exercise up until your heart is beating steadily.

Now, if it had before been unsteady, and you have steadied it, or if it be naturally steady and healthy, you are now ready to concentrate upon a slower beat. Think only of these pulsations. Concentrate upon these pulsations, which you feel in your chest, in your heart, beat time to them in your mind, even allowing your head to move slightly at each beat, if it be inclined to. After keeping up this true rhythm for several minutes, begin beating time—in your mind—just a little more slowly.

Do not stop concentrating in order to determine whether or not the heart is obeying your suggestion, for you will be able to know this fact in your mind. Continue your concentration, in this manner, until you have the heart beating at the speed at which you wish it to beat.

Muldoon did not indicate just how slowly one should get the heart beating, but he mentions that, in his own case, he would lower it to 42. He did not state whether this rate was optimum for everyone.

Since at this point the body is mimicking sleep, Muldoon believed that an OBE would occur naturally. This is what he found in his own case; but then he was a natural projector. You might wish to supplement this technique with specific self-suggestions for OBE release. After you have lowered your heart rate and stilled the body, mentally command yourself to leave the body. The same type of suggestion outlined in the previous section on the PMR/OBE induction technique might best be employed.

REFERENCES

Benson, Herbert. The Relaxation Response. New York: Morrow, 1975.

Braud, William and Braud, Lendell. Preliminary exploration of psi-conducive states: Progressive muscular relaxation. Journal of the American Society for Psychical Research, 1973, 67, 26-46.

Green, Celia. Out-of-Body Experiences. Oxford, England: Institute of Psychophysical Research, 1968.

Hales, Dianne. The Complete Book of Sleep. Reading, Mass: Addison-Wesley, 1980.

Harary, S. Keith. Personal communications to the author (January 1982).

Jacobson, Edmund. Progressive Relaxation. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1938.

Muldoon, Sylvan, and Carrington, Hereward. The Projection of the Astral Body. London: Rider, 1929.

80 19

Here are three traditional methods:

MYSTICAL METHOD #1

1) It is best to attempt projection in a room which is dark or in semi-darkess since this makes for greater restfulness and relaxation. Seat yourself comfortably. Always remember that you wish to be comfortable but if you are too comfortable you may fall off to sleep. Therefore a straight chair, with arms and back high enough to rest your head, is usually best. But any comfortable position is fine. Do not cross your feet or clasp your hands as this helps to maintain body awareness.

2) Relax, breathe evenly and induce the relaxed state. Understand within yourself that astral projection is a perfectly normal activity and that, in fact, you "project" each time you go to sleep. Give yourself the suggestion you are going to succeed.

3) Look at the opposite side of your room. Choose something that you can identify such as a picture hanging on the wall, a vase, or any object. We will call this object the "target". If the room is too dark, a very low wattage light should illuminate your target so you can see it. Memorize the target. Close your eyes and visualize the target. Mentally rise from your chair or couch and go to the opposite side of your room and examine the target. Visualize yourself doing this. (You may have to spend some time memorizing your own visual image, most people cannot close their eyes and remember how they look!) You must build every element of actuality into your visualization, you must hear the sounds in the next room or in the street, if there are any. You must notice and smell any odours there may. Reach out with your hands and touch the target, feel it, notice its texture (hard, soft, rough, smooth, etc..) If the target begins to fade, open your eyes, look at it and refresh your memory, then close your eyes again and continue. It requires a strong desire and a strong effort of will. (Remember that "strong desire" and "strong effort of will" is coming from the emotional and mental levels not from the physical! In "concentrating harder" you must not knit your eyebrows, grimace your face, clench your fists and tighten your muscles! THAT IS THE VERY OPPOSITE OF WHAT YOU MUST DO. Your physical condition must remain absolutely relaxed, relaxed, RELAXED. The moment physical tension enters the exercise is the moment the experiment becomes blocked.) Remember that what we have come to call the relaxed state is the key to all success on the mental and psychic levels. Give your desire, your wish, your want to the Chief Engineer. All knowledge and all power is in the mind, especially in that part we call the sub-conscious. When you are able to tap into your "mind" you have the Universe and all its possibilities in your grasp. There will be no need to give instructions regarding the "out of the body" experience. Having exteriorized, you will find the only difference when you are "out of the body" compared to when you are "in the body" is that your mind is clearer, you can think more sharply ... and you move by wishing to do so and not by moving your feet! In other words you only think where you want to be (in the next room, outside in the street, or back in the body) ... and you are there.

MYSTICAL METHOD #2

1) You follow steps I and 2 above. You close your eyes and visualize the place or the person you wish to visit or reach.

2) Remember that astral projections are working from the subconscious, emotional and mental levels therefore there must be great feeling and great desire. In visualizing the person or place you must build in everything. You must not only see the person or place, you must feel you are there, you must hear the sounds and smell the odours. If you are projecting to a garden for example, you must feel the grass under your feet and note its texture, smell the roses, see the plants, hear the birds chirping and the wind rustling in the trees, taste the water in the stream ... you have to make the scene as lifelike and as livid as you possibly can. You have to forget yourself, forget that you are sitting in a chair in your room, (this is why you should not cross your feet or clasp your hands, it accentuates body awareness), you have to completely go into the scene. If you project to someone, it is best to project to them when you think they are asleep. When you have attained a clear visualization and you know you are in contact, speak to them. Speak out loud. Speak in short sentances.

ALWAYS END ALL MYSTICAL EXERCISES BY BECOMING AWARE OF YOURSELF, YOUR BODY. STRETCH, RUB YOUR HANDS AND FACE, GET UP AND STAMP YOUR FEET, DRINK A GLASS OF WATER.

A variation on the above methods is to sit comfortably and induce the relaxed state. Then begin to concentrate on your body, awakening the cells to a tingling feeling as you have learnt before, ever since Exercise #3 The Stimulator, in Liber 4, starting from your feet and coming up to the top of your head. Breathe slowly and rhythmically. Then simply drift out of your body, just as smoke drifts out of a chimney. Do not try to extricate yourself from your body, do not try to 'force'. Simply hold the DESIRE and let it happen. Some find it helpful to concentrate on a point at the top of the head, or on the 'third eye' at the forehead between the eyebrows.

MYSTICAL METHOD #3

Lie of your back. Induce the relaxed state. Formulate deeply within yourself while going to sleep, the explicit and great desire to move towards a very familiar place, in a state of wakefulness. This place must be at least ten meters away from where the physical body is resting.

This is an involuntary method. Failed involuntary astral projections usually come from the fact that the projection remained very close to the physical body and the strong elasticity of the "silver cord" straight away brought back together the two parts momentarily separated through various causes (dreams of strong desires to move, for example).

-o-o-o-o-o-o-

INSTRUCTIONS FOR ADVANCEMENT TO THE EIGHTH DEGREE

1) Photocopy this page & the reverse side, or detach and use this leaf.

2) Answer the 7° exam on the reverse side.

3) Complete the form below. Return both pages to the address shown and include your dues-donation according to your postal zone.

4) Your exam will be corrected and graded. (The grades you acquire accrue as credits re the MSS and DD Diplomas.) If you obtain a Pass, all the material for the 8° and your new membership card will be sent you in one package. (NOTE: Your membership card shows your active status for Commandery/Priory membership.)

5) If you fail the exam, your dues-donation will be applied as a credit to your account and you will be sent another exam paper for reexamination. Do your exam properly the first time and save yourself the trouble of having to do it over.

6) When you receive the 8° Libers, read each lecture through once, then go over it a second time, more slowly and thoroughly - then move on to the next lecture. Don't get lost in the sauce! Don't get hung up on one lecture thinking you don't understand it well enough to move on! Subsequent lectures throw light on earlier ones and of course you can revise. Some members like to study one Liber a month, others like to study two, three or four Libers per month. There is no set schedule, work at your own pace. There is no need to rush.

DUES-DONATION FOR THE EIGHTH DEGREE (Libers 81-84 by Air Mail)

Zone "A" Barbados. The Commonwealth Caribbean, Netherlands Antilles and Guyana. $25.00 Barbados Currency.

Zone "B" All other countries. $25.00 U.S. Currency. (Notice: Your dues-donation includes Air Mail postage.)

The Grand Commander
ICES/OTG
Worthing W31
Barbados, West Indies

Most Excellent Grand Commander

It is becoming more and more obvious to me that the Work in which we are engaged, is making for a more spiritually enlightened and mature humanity. I realize my ability to think clearly, unrestricted by the influences of my peers and the popular opinions of the day ... has strengthened ... and I thank God for the confidence I have gained and the nerve to stand up and do what I consider to be right and honourable. It is a privilege to support the MAGNUM OPUS. I enclose my dues-donation for the Eighth Degree as a small contribution to help the Cause, as well as my 7° exam, hoping to be passed to the Eighth Degree. I also renew my pledge to hold all lectures and Libers of the ICES as personal and confidentially loaned to me, for my eyes only.

_____
Signature

Name & Address

Key number:

Amount Enclosed $

80 23

Over

SEVENTH DEGREE EXAM

One of our members wants to know why the students must submit exams! For one thing the grades help our assessment in the awarding of our Diplomas. But as equally important: they enable students to express what they are learning.

Use all the space provided in giving your answers to the following questions -

1) Share your thoughts on the subject of hypnosis.

2) Does consciousness survive the death of the physical body? On what authority are your views founded?

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 81-84

LIBER #81

REFLECTIONS AND REMEMBRANCES OF TIMES PAST

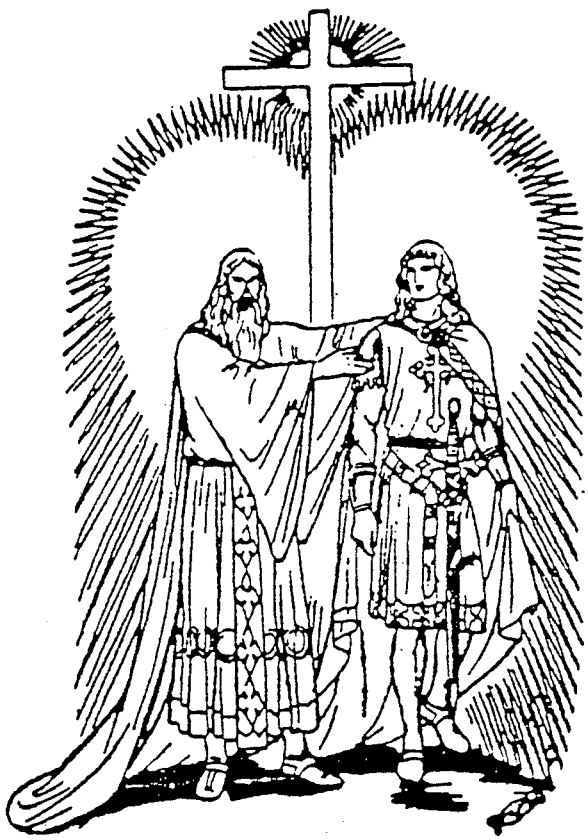
Personal & Confidential EIGHTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

Disciplina Arcani

FOR PRIVATE CIRCULATION



WHAT IS THE DISCIPLINA ARCANI?

00081 01

Disciplina Arcani

LONDON

Dear Friend,

The enclosed lecture is one of the most important ones in the present series for it gives, in the guise of symbolism, the whole keys to the success in achieving the sacred illumination of the soul.

The tablet, spoken of, represents a precious jewel with its 22 facets which refract the inner light into sparkling gems of active participation in Life's expression. It is unfortunate that people have used the Tarot for fortune-telling, amusement and for earning money; but then, if they did not have the key to its correct purpose it seems to be human habit to misuse holy things.

Always remember that the true mysteries actually transcend all rituals, scriptures and philosophies which ever have been written down because Divine Truth is only of the Heart and is gained within when the mortal and immortal phases of the soul have been bridged by purity itself. Therefore, whatever one reads - or whatever one believes one has read - the real work is not in remembering teachings and facts but in a pure heart ever receptive to the continual outpouring of the Holy Spirit. In this light one cannot become fixed in any humanly contrived system.

With all blessings
Yours in the Light

WHAT IS THE DISCIPLINA ARCANI ?

Mystical Tradition tells that SENZAR was the language of the Atlanteans when mankind mainly functioned through the subconscious mind, but as the conscious mind began to be developed within the Aryan races, the need for a hieroglyphic language ceased and it was no longer used by these later modern races of mankind. It was then adopted by the Adept-Masters and their Initiates all over the world and finally became known as the Language of the Sun.

With the sinking of Atlantis in 9574 BC, the Sacred Wisdom of the land passed into Egypt to become embodied in the paintings of the Temple of Dendera, and then finally to Tibet in the Sacred Koun-boum Tree; and that sacred tree, in its various parts, contains in extenso the whole of the history of creation, and in substance the sacred books of Buddhism. Thus the esoteric philosophy and language of the eternal Ecclesia Spiritualis passed into the keeping of the Initiated Priests of India and Egypt. This fact is now in evidence through what is known as "The Mensa Isiaca", which is purported to have been written by the first Hermes Trismegistus of Egypt.

With the collapse of the Egyptian Culture, this Tablet eventually found its way to the Island of Corfu, where there was already established a Feudum Acinganorum, or Gypsy Barony in the 14th Century. There this Tablet of 22 facets was fully revised into a pack of 22 playing cards, each card embodying the scientific knowledge of the Forces in Nature. From Corfu it passed into Italy, France and then Germany sometime about the 15th Century and eventually became known as "The Tarot". About this time Christian Rosenkreuz formed the Rosae Crucis and built his philosophy around this Tablet. In France the Knights Templar also found this Mensa in Rhodes and Corfu and used it extensively as the basis for their own mystical philosophy. At the same time there appeared in Italy "The Fratres Lucis" who, according to Dante, also used the Mensa as the basis for their mystical doctrines.

It now seems possible that this "Mensa Isiaca" was originally the 'Petroma' upon which every Initiate for the Mysteries took his Oath as it contained the hieroghlyphic outline of their esoteric doctrine. There is also sufficient evidence to show that the Culdees and Arcane Masons of England also used a version of the Tablet. H P Blavatsky states that she was shown the leaves of the ancient book "Dzan" which was also written in a hieroglyphic language. This Mensa has been shown as two Tablets of Stone connected like a book, upon which was inscribed the whole of the history of creation, and above all the condition of mankind for some many thousands of years to come.

This is the original pattern which the Ruler of Civilisations is enabled to move the minds of men to fulfil. Each Ecclesia, when it has reached the required stage of development and impartiality, was given a copy of this Mensa to act as a guide for each century. For instance, Francis Graeffer, in his "Recollections of Vienna", recounts an astonishing statement made by le Comte de St. Germain, when he stated that he must leave for England, there to prepare two inventions which you will have in the next century - trains and steamboats - where did he receive his foresight and scientific knowledge to prepare two inventions for the 19th Century?

Perhaps it may be well to give some details of this remarkable Master-Adept and what part he plays in the existence of the Ecclesia Spiritualis. As to the Man himself, Manly Palmer Hall says: "The Comte de St. Germain was recognised as an outstanding scholar and linguist of his day .... Learned, speaking every civilised language admirably, a great musician, an excellent chemist, and possessed of almost incredible attainments in every department of human learning." It was also known that he was an Alchemist of some note, that his skill as a chemist was so profound that he could remove flaws from diamonds and emeralds, which feat he actually performed at the request of Louis XV in 1757. Stones of little value were thus transformed into gems of the first water after remaining for a short time in his possession.

The Comte was one of the most outstanding Adept-Masters Europe has ever seen. We are forced to accept that there from time to time appear some few persons and their pupils whose words and actions demonstrate very clearly that they are of an order different from the rest of our society. There is sufficient evidence to warrant the assumption that humanity is guided over critical periods in the development of civilisation by mysterious forces such as personified in the personages of such men as Christian Rosenkreuz, Paracelsus and the Comte de St. Germain. These Adepts possessed an uncanny knowledge of every occurance of the preceeding two thousand years and also knowledge of the future events for many years to come.

The title of the Comte de St. Germain was one of the many such names under which this amazing person masqueraded between the years of 1710 and 1822. We know that he played a very large part in the history of the Templars, the Rosae Crucis, Freemasonry and Illuminati. It was he who asked H.P.B. to become the Agent for the Ecclesia in the last century. He obviously possessed a secret of Eternal Youth and many apparent supernatural powers. He was truly one of the great Adepts of the Empire of Light.

This Adept is the Head of the Ecclesia Spiritualis in Europe and the Americas and is the present Head of the Disciplina Arcani, and to whom the present Archon is a pupil and a minor Adept in his own right. The Disciplina Arcani owes its existence to the work of this Adept and a considerable amount of the teachings being given are assisted by Him. As we have previously stated: the Ecclesia Spiritualis is divided into three sections, the Ecclesia itself which is composed of the Adepts themselves, which Adepts are of different ranks and powers; then there is the Disciplina Arcani, which is composed of fairly new pupils of the Adepts, hence the reason we say they are untried materials which have to be moulded into a co-operative unity; the third section is the Lay Section of Probationary Pupils, who are not full pupils as yet, but are under probation pending the time when they will become full pupils and finally Adepts themselves.

It must be clearly understood that the present Archon is ever the Patron, but will not tolerate any form of Patronisation from his members; this may account for his stern attitude towards the members of the D.A. Like his own Patron, his whole life is devoted to the welfare of humanity through the efforts of his own pupils, never deviating from the Laws which are engraved upon the Mensa Tablet of the Hierarchy, always without exception spurring his members on to new heights of manhood and independent experience and knowledge.

Each member is a Pledged Pupil to his respective Prince of Light. These members have been lent to the present Archon for this century, and depending upon their sincerity and willingness to give themselves to the cause of humanity, they will be able to attain the 1st Initiation into the Hierarchy which will make them Adepts in their own right. As these members attain Adeptship they develop certain powers and knowledge which are beyond the comprehension of others, they go through certain human experiences which would destroy an ordinary mortal, but they rise to the surface of humanity as some of the most baffling personalities, yet underneath ones of great depth and understanding.

Under the guidance of this Prince of Light through His Agent it is hoped that the Inner Members will become masters of the arts of Theurgy, Alchemy and Thought-Transference. Theurgy is the art of returning to one's purity of nature - wherein a man could make the gods impart to him Divine Mysteries, and unless each member requires an almost superhuman purity and holiness of human life; it could degenerate into black magic. Therefore, each member must, to the best of his ability lead a pure humanised life and learn active co-operation with his brothers.

Alchemy is the process of transmuting the energies of the images of menace into constructive images which assists a man to purify his whole make-up, enabling him to objectify his own Soul within the human body - he then becomes an Enlightened Adept. Thought-transference is when the controlled and free mind can form pre-chemical images of the things that are, and then project them into the Etheric atmosphere around him in order for them to be caught in the mental net of another person. The granting of Eternal Youth can only come when each member stops creating images, and at the same time purifies his personality of the already created images of menace, once this has been done, then he eliminates the causes of disease and old-age, and the body is no longer torn down by destructive energies.

Each member of the D.A. whether of the Inner or Outer Section, should develop the grace and dignity that characterises the conduct of a Servant of Humanity, he must further build in a perfect composure in every situation, which attests to the inner refinement and culture of one accustomed to high station. In achieving this perfect human state, the contents of the Mensa Tablet are clearly reflected within his unified Soul and he knows the past, present and the future events as a Continuum. He becomes a Mystic per se.

One of the greatest tasks which is ever asked a man to achieve is the knowledge of when to keep silent and when to speak; to remain silent upon that which his Soul vouchsafed to him from the Table of Life, and then again to speak when it is necessary. Each Adept and Pupil accepts the Sodalian Oath, and swears to fulfil the Law of the Tablet in the following precepts: Speak no evil of any man, but only that which is good and noble; hear no evil of any man, but only that which he deserves; and finally, see no evil in any man, lest the appearance be mistaken for the Real Man.

In the reception of the Light Energies which are reflected within and through a purified Soul, the receiver sees the whole of life; but if his Soul is still marred by the effects of the images of menace, he will see only a distorted vision of the Law of the Continuum. Since the Tablet is also in him and within each of his brothers, any friction between himself and his brothers will only distort the reflection, as in the case of a medium, a black magician and a man riddled with pride and selfishness of his own estate. Each member must always be mindful of his own estate and not concern himself with the estate of his brothers, lest he becomes tainted by the same evils.

Let us be frank with you, as we always are, much to the chargin of some of our members, it is very easy for one to blame either the teaching or the Archon of being wrong and absurd; or that he is unconsciously working for the black, in order to avoid the embarrassment of realising that it is himself who is wrong, or admitting his inability to read the Tablet of Life in his own life. The Way of the Illuminee is not an intellectual one by any means, it is a strict way of life wherein the obedience to the Tablet forces one to purify himself of all the dross from his nature. This cleansing of the inner life is a process of selling (stripping) oneself of all one's previous knowledge, all desire to succeed in life, or even the worshipping of one's place in life. It should not be undertaken by anyone who is still subject to the weakness of the flesh.

It is becoming increasingly evident that many of the members have treated the teachings given as a very pleasant pastime instead of being a definite way of life, according to the Tablet of Life. Most of the students are in the habit of reading those parts of the lessons which seem to coincide with their pre-conceived notions, and reject that which apparently contradicts them. What they seem to overlook is the fact that we are simply translating the Wisdom of the Mensa Isiaca Tablet into the written form for them to avail themselves of it. If they will choose only that part they wish to accept, they are doing the same with the Tablet, hence their failure to withstand the energising effect of the D.A.

What is the use of belonging to a body which presents a definite programme of teaching and then not following the instructions to the letter, being far too busy minding the impersnal and personal business of the Archon, to make sure that he adheres to your limited understanding of the life of an Adept? As soon as you have a clear understanding of your own life, then you will understand the baffling personality of an Adept.

Let us remind you that unless you put these teachings into practice in your daily life, you could find that the going will be very rough indeed. By the wilful refusal to do just this you are now finding that the Soul Forces flowing through the D.A. are accentuating your images and causing mental and emotional conflicts, which should have been solved long ago if you had followed our instructions. Humanity must ever have a Scapegoat upon which to heap blame, and a Victim to crucify in compensation for its own sins of omission.

In all the presentations of Ecclesia Spiritualis, each candidate was asked this question: "Are you Free?" This request is simply based upon the logical fact that unless you have eliminated all your images of menace before you enter the Ecclesia you are in danger of your life. This is not a rhetorical statement, it is based upon cold facts. For instance, a Superintendent of a Generating Station must be fully acquainted with the strength and danger of the power which is in his control, only a fool would attempt to handle it otherwise. Yet we find many students rushing into this teaching without attempting to prepare themselves long before-hand to handle the Spiritual Powers of the Universe.

The teachings you are receiving are as old as man himself, they have never changed in their content century after century, their method of presentation may have changed, but the essence is as it always has been. It was laid down by the Divine Instructors of mankind in its infant stage as the only method for a man to achieve Union with his Divine Nature. Man must first of all build up the personality into an entity and instrument for his use, this he does by his seeking the conceptional knowledge and sensual experience. Naturally, this process has created certain types of mental and emotional habits in his personality which keeps the consciousness limited within certain narrow grooves and any attempt to change these habits meets with a fierce conflict from the images of menace, which are after all the semi-conscious embodiments of the desires which created the images.

When a man is permitted to enter the D.A., the time has arrived for him to leave the building of the personality alone and concentrate upon the business of using the personality as an instrument so that the Real Man can express himself in the personality. He must now enter the process of eradicating his conceptional images from his mental image on all the three layers. He retains the Essence or Principles only, and when this purification of the mind takes place, he will become aware of the descent of the Real Self into the personality, since by eradicating of the mental images the mind is freed to allow the Self to descend.

It is due to the refusal of the members, assisted by their images of menace, to empty their minds of all previous mental concepts and think in Principles which precludes them from becoming Illumined by the Light of their Divine Nature. It must not be forgotten that Mysticism, which is the experience of the D.A., is the doctrine which states that a man may attain through experience and love, to an immediate, direct consciousness or intention of God through his Soul, as the real and absolute Principle of all Truth, and of all essential divine truth in him, whilst still remaining in the personality.

A MYSTIC, therefore, is an Enlightened Person or one who is illumined by the power of his own Soul. It is also the redemption of the human Soul from the torments of man's images of menace. In this light, the Mystic, or Adept realises that God is not perfect in any sense of the word, but has agreed to endure the deep sea of human conditions in order that He might realise His own Divine Nature and become restored back to the Great Naught. Mankind, having the Divine implicit within their nature, has the same inherent desire to free himself from the limitations of sensuous existence and seek to be restored back to his original state - Divine Soul.

In this light, your Archon then is an Illumined Adept in one sense, but is also a Mediator between your Godhead and your human Soul, it is his work to show you how you may effect this restoration in your daily life, through experience and knowledge - you learn to live and act as a man who is not divided into two parts - the Divine and the Human. It is the failure to understand this and experience this state which stops you from experiencing the Illumination of the personality whilst still in the body.

The Arcane Discipline

LONDON

Dear Friend

In the enclosed lecture the late Archon gives his own remarks on the ancient discipline which points out the pitfalls which prevent one from receiving Divine Illumination.

Do not be deceived by the impression that this Illumination descends upon one instantaneously as some schools would have one believe. The discipline towards the Light can be a hard struggle became the human mind does not like all its old ideas and habits upset. The way to the Light is a way of gradually re-birthing, or being re-programmed into a new way of Life - a kind of metamorphosis. Thus one cannot hope to cling to presently held ideas when changing for the future. The late Archon points out that we should not pre-conceive any self ideas regarding the Truth and Light, neither should we allow any of our own ideas in the work to become crystallised as this prevents the action of the Spirit flowing continually from within.

This is a very advanced work and therefore it would be in error to dismiss lightly the findings of a member of the Spiritual Hierarchy even if we have difficulty in understanding many things at this stage.

It should also be understood that the Great Oath spoken of need not be taken by postal students as the teachings are written anyway - it is only required with respect to oral teaching.

If you have any difficulty in understanding these lectures please send us your questions.

With every blessing
Yours sincerely

WHAT IS THE DISCIPLINA ARCANI?

Continued

In the last few talks with you we tried to give you some of the pertinent aspects of the Disciplina Arcani, in the hope that you would grasp the full implications of what our work entails and what we hope eventually to achieve. Whilst our Oath of Silence forbids us revealing the main work of the D.A., but in any case should this be possible, no doubt your conceptional knowledge and understanding of the forces of nature would step in and give you a false interpretation. We are, however, permitted to draw the veil aside a little to reveal some of the plans the working out of which we hope to make possible in the sincere hope that this will change the coming years of this century.

Let us make this quite clear: no human person can alter the Eternal Plan of the Great Naught for Its system, the deposits in its planetary computer must be worked out to the last iota of the Law. About 320,000,000,000,000 human years must pass from the moment when the Great Naught decided to become tangible and clothed in matter to the time when each part of the differentiated Naught is dissolved back into its Completeness again. The whole of the evolutionary time-sequence of this planet has reached the half-way mark only, so it will be seen that time does not matter in the slightest to the Great Naught. Neither does it take into account the follies and stupidities of mere mortal men. They either agree to work with the Law of the Naught and thus assist themselves back to Wholeness, or they try to pit their incomplete knowledge and senses against the Will of the Great Naught, and find themselves suffering self-inflicted pain, suffering and frustration.

Perhaps it may be wise to warn you that in all due time you will be asked to take the stern Sodalian Oath which all members of the D.A. are expected to take, whether they be Full or Lay Members. This Oath is taken in order to ensure that each member abides by the ancient obedience to the Law of the Mensa Tablet. We can advise that there has never been known any member, who, once he has taken the Obligation has ever broken his Oath. This is the real reason why so little is known of the aims, purpose and future of the Ecclesia Spiritualis in any century.

Naturally, your reasoning mind will object most vigourously when we say that you must take the Obligation before you can be trusted with the eternal Secrets of the Ecclesia Spiritualis. It will also object to pledging obedience to the Archon, because, since he is a mere mortal, this could give him power and domination over you. Let us deal with these two queries in detail: the reasoning mind with its instruments - the five senses, can only register the universal time-sequence by the time-space-duration process; since these senses are incomplete so the reasoning mind must also be incomplete in its fullest expression. The past is a memory to which man holds on to assure himself that he is living; the past now conditions his understanding and evaluation of the present, and through this faulty evaluation of the present, he builds for himself an imaginary future.

If man were permitted to see his future - the working out of the myriads of deposits with which he has programmed his human computer, he would object to what he may see and struggles against the great Stream of Energy in the Naught. If a man were permitted to know the many ways in which he has programmed his computer in the past, he would consider this present time useless and his hope for the future would be non-existant for him - life would become a bore and with no apparent purpose for him. For instance, many years ago at a group meeting, one member asked on three occasions that we reveal to her the condition of at least one other past life and we tried to persuade her against this, warning her that she may not be able to accept it, but she persisted. We eventually told her that she had once been a prostitute in France, her immediate reaction was "Oh dear"; the two ladies who were sitting on each side of her were horrified and you could see them mentally drawing aside their skirts in disgust. This member was seen no more!

One can see the wisdom of the Adepts in not permitting the normal man to witness the actions of his past for fear that it would interfere with the working out of this present life, and the wisdom too of veiling his eyes to the future events which he himself has programmed to take place. His consciousness and awareness is steadily directed to the present moment and it is by means of his incomplete reason and senses that we can help man to protect himself from himself. Hence, you will see why we are obliged to veil the present and future activities of the Ecclesia and to reveal only in gradual stages some of this great eternal Plan for Man. So please do not cry out against us for our reticence in this matter, but try to have faith, trust and patience and all will be known to you in due course.

Now the intellectual with his mass of opinions and speculations and incomplete reason and senses will find no place in the Ecclesia, since his conceptional mind would become a stumbling block to him and the Ecclesia in every cycle of its work. The occultist of all shades would again adjudge the work and future of the Ecclesia according to the conceptional ideas he had gained therein, and would tend to become bogged down with his pre-conceived ideas of what he thinks is 'occultism'. A Spiritualist, having gained his knowledge from the mutterings of the Incubi and Succubi who masquerade in psychic circles as "discarnate spirits", would be mentally programmed by the limitations of the astral or emotional region. Regarding the above, we must bear in mind the pliability of emotional substance wherein any entity can assume the form and characteristics of any person, such as a 'master' or an 'adept', and gull the listeners into believing and accepting blindly what is said. A Christian, following his mental and emotional ideal of a "Personal God", the sinfulness of man, and the incapability of man to attain to Godship, would be only a danger to himself within the highly magnetised atmosphere of the Ecclesia.

As we have clearly stated in the "Philosophy of Naughting", a man must dissolve all conceptional images in his mind and retain only the essence with which the image-form made themselves perceptible. Let us take as an example: a large room which is the whole room without any divisions therein, however the moment partitions are built in the room, the whole is then broken up into the many, and the occupier of each division now considers himself alone and separate. This is an illusion of the senses and his incomplete reasoning. Dissolve the partitions and the room is restored to its wholeness again, and if we stand in the centre, we are fully aware instantaneously of everything which happens in the room.

It is now obvious that if man is to understand some thing or idea, as the mind is incapable of seeing the thing as a whole, it must then be split into many parts in order to permit the senses to register them. He must then try to put the parts together in order to restore the whole. This is difficult for him since the essence of each of the parts has now become clothed with form and by his continual thinking on the part, this image has consolidated into an entity of its own in the computer and tends to crowd the other parts from his mind. This means that this concentrated part becomes a blind-spot in the mind and limits his awareness to the condition of that separated part.

Conceptional-intellectual-sensory knowledge is in the main composed of bits and pieces of the Whole Ideation, but because these bits find an easy resting place in the computer, we tend to hang on to these ideas,and if we make any attempt to become aware of the whole to which the parts belong, we find that these image-entities forbid us from doing just this. These images are formed in the mind through the time-sequence of space-time-duration. We become attached to them since they are images with the strongest energy to retain their influence on our thinking.

There are many ways in which these isolated mental-images can trick the tyro into deluding himself; concentration upon the image of being illumined will cause it to gain far too much energy, and it will tend to colour the person's mental thinking. In fact all his mental energies are directed to this end at the expense of all the rest of the contents of the mind, and it will then create illusions in the mind which on the surface can appear logically true. He will hear 'voices' seeping through from the subconscious mind and he will mistake them as the Voice of the Soul. A Roman Catholic is conditioned mentally and emotionally to accept the image of the Church as the only one and true Church, and this conditioning precludes the mind from availing itself of all the other images concerning other religious versions of the One Truth. A Bishop who is in love with the idea of being a bishop will find that everything else will be crowded from his mind and he will forget the responsibilities of his Office. The image will cause him to wander, since it refuses to co-operate with all the other equally important mental images in his mind; he becomes self-centred.

A man who has been frustrated in love or sex in early youth will ponder over this frustration and an image is formed of this frustration which will colour his reason and sense to such an extent that he will pursue a path of action and through which will preclude him from using any of the other mental-images which are associated with love and sex. When the image has been destroyed and the mind is freed from this compulsion, then the emotions are also freed, and the whole of the personality relaxes, the body is exhausted and the mind becomes extremely sensitive. The full energies applicable to love and sex are now allowed to flow freely and the man gains happiness and peace.

The Theosophist who has concentrated upon the image of being a 'pupil of a Master' will accentuate this image far beyond its normal power, and the man will then wander 'looking' for his Master, but when the Master or his disciple meets him face to face, he is not capable of recognising their presence. There are manifold examples of how this crystallising of a mental-concept in our minds can, through their powerful energies, preclude us from seeing the whole of the situation, the ideation of knowledge or the appreciation of the whole man or even the wholeness of races, nations, civilisations, societies, systems of knowledge, or even when a person truly loves us.

Even with the few examples we have given in the above, it will be obvious to you all how dangerous it is to give undue credence to the knowledge we gain from our incomplete senses from limited sense-reception of which we condition our minds with imperfect mental-images, crowding the mind and pushing out those images which fit into each other. Let us see: if we have a pain in a tooth, we go to the dentist, but the fear of the needle which is stronger than the feeling of pain, the tooth-ache is driven from the mind and in its place is lodged the needle-image. In the process of attachment we find that this comes about in the mind when we give undue energy to one image at the expense of the others.

Let us see how this process operates and how it can change the physical body: we suggest that in the act of thought the human Soul sets up vibrations received through the incomplete senses, within the substance of the mind. These energies now pass through and into the emotional substance, forming an emotional image therein. This emotional image then reacts upon the physical substance which, according to the brain capacity, responds, thus affecting the molecular structure of the body and senses. It would further suggest that this mind-stuff is composed of finer or more subtle force-matters vibrating at a faster rate than either the emotional or physical matter. It being the stronger of the three types of energy, the mental essence affects the emotional matter and moulds the required image, and this emotional image affects the molecular structure of the body, bearing in mind that each vesture or force-matter can interpenetrate the others and occupy the same space, time and duration time-sequence at any given moment.

So we see that man creates the mental image of his intended thought or action, and that this impulse-energy affects the emotional, consequently manifesting as 'action' since this impulse-energy, once generate in the mind, must find expression through the reason and its instruments - the senses. For instance, if a man builds or crystallises a mental image in his mind that he is suffering from a particular complaint, or has a 'thing' about something, the result will manifest as disease in the organ, or a neuroses about the thing, or will condition his senses to such an extent that they can only register external stimuli according to the nature of the image. This is, in effect, auto-suggestion. It will now be seen that man is continually being affected by external stimuli of electro-magnetic radiations, whether they be knowledge, love, sex, the world conditions, and the mind reacts according to the previous habitual thinking and action, this is hetero-suggestion.

It will be clearly seen that when we state that one must become non-attached, what we mean is that we must detach ourselves from the importance of the mental-image which clothes the Ideation of a thing and retain the Essence of the thing. The force or instrument which builds up these 'blind-spots' is called the subconscious mind, that part of the mind which, being automatic in action, does not think, but obeys the commands of the image thought upon. Thus, this part of our mind becomes the bridge whereby electro-magnetic fluids flow between the human Soul and the physical consciousness. This part of the mind is the blue-print of the pattern of body and its senses, and is the mould which enables this collection of molecules of all the vestures to retain their forms.

Thus, the instrument of man's mind can be, for convenience sake, divided into two aspects, but bear in mind that they are two aspects of the one and undivided mind: (a) the objective mind which takes cognisance of the objective world by observation through the medium of the physical senses and having for its highest function the reason,(b) the subjective, cognising by means independent of the physical senses, the emotions, the house of memory, or the human computer; is constantly amendable to suggestion, whether from or by other people, leaders, bishops, by the objective mind of its owner. The particular stimuli of extra-magnetic radiations being received by the respective sense organs of the time-sequence of space-time-duration process is transmitted to the motor nerves of the cortex by nerve-fluid, this sets up or builds up images clothing the essence of the thing thought upon which react in the brain, being interpreted in relation to previous experience derived from the senses.

In taking the Sodalian Oath, the candidate does not take it to the Archon as a person, for if the candidate thought this, the image of the Archon could become a 'blind-spot' in his mind and he would allow himself to become really limited and dominated by the image of the Archon. The Oath is really taken to his own Immortal Soul, which is in turn a part of the Great Naught. The Archon, by his expanded awareness and knowledge can command the Soul of the person to become aware of its human Soul and it merges itself with the human, and for a moment the human Soul, the Divine, the Spirit and the Great Naught are functioning as One Consciousness and the candidate promises to abide by the Law of the Great Naught. The taking of the Obligation is done in the presence of his Brothers, thus he takes the Obedience to himself as the Whole and at the time to his Brothers who also make up the Great Naught. The man who breaks his Obligation simply dishonours himself and his Brothers who are in reality Himself.

No man, therefore, can possibly take this Obligation with impunity to himself, his brothers and to the world in general if he is still attached to his images. If he did so he could destroy his chances for this life-time and for many lives to come. It will now be seen how the "images of manace" are formed and how limiting these images can be to one who aspires to become a Technician of Life. Therefore, each member of the D.A. learns to become first, a technician or a technicist who is a person skilled in the practical side of an art of some nature. After accomplishing his apprenticeship as a technician, he then becomes a true scientist of the art in question and a Savant or scientific investigator.

In all departments of scientific operation one will find many technicians whose job it is to take the ideas of the scientist and try to work them out into a formula which can be made to operate. The scientist on the other hand is a lone person whose work it is to plumb this Abstract in his cogitations and then present to the technician a formula or procedure. In the Art of Life, the scientist is the Archon and the technicians the members of the D.A. The Archon-Scientist has a number of trainee Archons working with him, they are not working for him, but with him, and is responsible for the speeding up of their own awakening so that they can take his place when he must leave this mortal coil and depart to another place to make preparations for the appearance of the next century Archon. The present D.A. members will return with the new Archon to work with him.

The trainee Archon is already here in the body working with the present Archon. Each trainee Archon must first go through a period of emotional and mental struggle with his images, but with the wise instruction of the Archon, the influence of the images is slowly neutralised so that the memory of the past knowledge and experiences can flow into the brain without let or hinderance. As with the members of the D.A., the trainee Archon appears at times to be at logger-heads with the Archon, and since his experience and awareness is far wider and varied than that of the members, they cannot but be influenced and drawn along the spiral of life which will enable them to reach the same degree of efficiency as that of the Archon. Many will opt out because the nervous constitution just cannot take this speeding up of their consciousness, but others will automatically take their place. The Law waits for no one.

Let no member ever think for one moment that the Path through the Ecclesia Spiritualis is a wonderful game of fun, or that they can drop out when they feel the going too hard for them. Far from it, once they drop out - they are out, and there is no possibility of them ever returning to the D.A. for this life. If they are so foolish as to think they may, they will have this shock to face - they will have to start all over again and it may take them many lives to reach the stage where they would be permitted to enter the D.A. again. Generally, speaking, he who breaks his obligation will find that a blanket is placed over his mind and he is thrown into the darkness of his own making.

You may have wondered why we have not given you overt exercises in the same manner as most occult societies do - they are simply exercises imposed from without and have no lasting effects upon the Whole Man. The exercise we do give you is clearly shown in our teachings - and it is up to you to realise what these exercises are and try to implement them in your daily lives. The most difficult exercise for you at the present is to empty your mind of all conceptional images, that is a full-time occupation; you then humanise your own life, that is to say, follow our instructions to the letter, learn how the mind operates and then you will see where you have your blockages and be able to do something about them.

.....

Disciplina Arcani

London

Dear Friend

Enclosed is the first part of "A Philosophy of Naughting", by the late Richard,Duc de Palatine, which also includes "The Law of Permutation". This work will be sent in seven parts.

In the narrative you will observe that the true gnosis of God is not contained in the "mystic arts", magical formulas,divining methods or even in personal achievements; but rather in the effort and hard work spent in becoming a mature person who is pure, honest and sincere with a will to be of service to others.

During our earthly sojourn we need to evaluate those things which are true and immortal as against the things of the senses which are illusory and transient. By carefully sifting away the transient attachments - please remember these are not really bad in themselves but shortlived and unreliable - we can arrive at immortality Itself.

Should you find any difficulty in understanding certain parts please write to us and we will answer your questions.

With all blessings
Yours sincerely

A PHILOSOPHY OF NAUGHTING

PART 1

This lecture was received by Richard through the Human Spirit of himself.

"No noble thought,
"However buried in the dust of ages,
"Can ever come to naught."

Saxe - Spes est Vates st.1.

Lying at the foundations of all the teachings of the sages, philosophers, saviours and mystics is an esoteric philosophy - A Gnosis - of the THINGS THAT ARE. This Gnosis concerns itself with the Great All, which treats of the sum total of that which is past, that which is in the present and that which will appear in the future as One Continuum. In this light, past, present and future are simply relative terms deriving from the human reason, which reason always separates the ALL into the many in the involutionary process of creation. The Intelligence seeks to resolve through the evolutionary process, these separates into the ALL again.

Our dictionaries correlate "naught" with nothing, but they are in error, Naught is a state devoid of any divis_ion - it is the One wherein all exists simultaneously. Nothing indicates a vacuum and the Natura abhors a vacuum. It is because of this ignorance of the two mental concepts - naught and nothing - that the Western intellectual has misunderstood the concept of "Light", Nirvana, the "Kingdom of God", etc., as being a state of 'nothingness', without conscious existence. Let us look at this word 'existence': Essence is Life, combined with essence substantial creates existence, thus existence is Essence clothed with form, it could be said that it concerns anything that exists or has the quality of objectivity. Thus, the Essence which is clothed with form is the Great Naught or "The Things That Are", and not the things that appear to our senses.

It could be said that this Great All or Naughtness is the University of Life,wherein all living creatures are but pupils undergoing their training and unfoldment of their Naught Nature, just as you have the implicit life in the lower kingdoms of Natura, which are in themselves unfolding their portion of the Great All. These kingdoms of Natura have been formed by their Essence being clothed with matter in order to become objective. The Abstract World is the realm of Essence which gives the forms their power of Inertia, Mobility and Rhythm whereby they can express the implicit life fully. It would seem that when the Great Naught fragments itself into the many forms this creates a state of chaos, but the forms through inherent Essence are enabled to restore themselves to Unity by a process of struggle to consolidate the form and then by a process of non-resistance which releases the Essence from the form; bearing in mind that the Essence and the Form are simply aspects or modes of action by the Great Naught.

Just as there is a curriculum of graduation in a university, there are five grades or stages of consciousness in this University of Life. Any student who desires to leave the college of the senses and human desires and enter the University of Naught will find that he must first spend a considerable time in accumulating knowledge about many things, perhaps over the time period of many separate lives. The second period arrives when he stops gathering facts which are derived from the activity of the five senses, he then begins to ponder over what he has stored in his human computer. After a time of mental cogitation, he enters into the mental period of experiment, observation and inductive reasoning of the facts gathered. He will soon find that the majority of these facts, which were previously accepted as important and valid begin to show themselves incapable of supplying the correct answers to life's problems; at this stage he begins to discard, bit by bit, most of his sensual knowledge until his mind becomes once again empty as it was as a child.

It would appear that a man must fill his human computer with a mass of deposits from the age of seven to the time he is able to cut through the glamour of the senses; thus, almost every student passes through the stage when the mind is flung from thought to thought, he embraces all avenues of human thought and when the computer is full becomes mentally sterile. All the changes which are taking place in his mind bring about a state of confusion within him for, during this period, the emotional nature is unfolding and developing, and he finds himself swayed by the emotions. He "feels" that such and such a thing is correct, but, as yet, he has no way in which to prove it one way or the other. The condition or state of the mind changes again, this time he finds himself becoming pre-occupied with one idea, it could be love, ambition, sex, knowledge or a host of other objects or ideas. This pre-occupation with one idea becomes an obsession with him which slowly drives out all others which are vital and important. After this he reaches the stage wherein he realises that this pre-occupation with one idea or thing has become a barrier to further achievement or attainment, he changes again, this time the previous compulsive-desire drive ceases and he then possesses the idea or thing, in other words he becomes master of it. Later, this stage is changed for another, wherein he gains complete control of his mental, emotional and sensational faculties, at this stage he becomes non-attached to the world of form and seeks the world of Essence.

We must bear in mind that whilst every human being must pass through these five mental stages in his life, the majority of men are, for greater or lesser periods, unable to graduate beyond the stage of being pre-occupied with one subject or idea, such as science, the occult, philosophy, sex, power, possessions, or any of the many other things which occupy his mind, to become master of these things, whereby he can use and control them instead of himself being controlled. Still fewer men have gained complete control of their mental, emotional and sensational faculties and become a master of life - an Adept. Therefore, the Adept and his Pupil become the highest pinnacle of the Pyramid of Human Life wherein the fullest Glory and Potential of the Great Naught is expressed in a human being whilst still in the mortal body.

With the ability to control the three-fold faculties comes the crushing realisation that, except within the fleeting light-waves which flit through the grey cells of the brain, the past is nothing, the present is non-important and the future does not exist. In this realisation he becomes aware that the past limits his awareness of the present, that the present has no real permanent existence for him except by what is reflected by the past, and that the future is still an illusion and unborn in time and space and above all, it is of no importance to the present. But man, having his consciousness focussed within the gloom of the earth and the animal senses, still carries around with him his sepulchre of the past, and, for fear of the present or the illusory future, keeps opening the lid of the sepulchre in order to assure himself that he is alive, or that life means something to him. "Let the dead bury the dead" said the last Great Reformer, but man ignores this sound psychological advice.

Just as time, space and duration are concepts in the human mind, so he realises that the past, present and future are equally invalid concepts in his mind, they are artificial divisions created by the mind in time. The past in this sense is an illusion, just as the present is also an illusion in the mind, and future is an artificial creation by man to stimulate his flagging hopes of personal survival. Such a philosophy could be challenged by the intellectual and scientific mind, but by a mathematical process, this doctrine of Naughtness can be proven to the hilt, nay, more, pure mathematics can be used to prove any scientific, philosophical, occult, or mystic premise to be true and identical in substance, excepting for the different terminology which each department uses to explain such a premise.

It has frequently been shown that the symbol of Three plays a very great part in the basic understanding of many of the religious and philosophical systems - the Three Titans of Samothrace, the Three Assassins of the Masons, the Trinity of the Christians all refer to the concepts of Time, Space and Duration. Hiram Abiff was slain (clothed) by the three Assassins and buried in an unknown tomb; Prometheus was chained to a mountain crag by the three Titans, etc. These are also symbolised by Past, Present and Future divisions of the Great Naught. The Titans are indwelling fragments of the Great Naught. In psychology, we find that these three Titans appear again as the Unconscious, Subconscious and Conscious aspects of the human Soul, which clothes or slays the Soul in matter.

The Spirit of Man is Naught but it is the All. The Spirit is the Monad of Plato - the Unity in the One which yet manifests the illusion of a Trinity - the Self, the Soul and the Mind, form the immortal part of man which reincarnates in the lower regions of the mortal existence. Again, these are the slayers of the One by causing it to become the many. The human Soul has being and divisible substance, it is simply a part of the Whole and yet is the Whole. Thus, the Divine Spirit of Man - the World-Man, is eternal without beginning or end of existence, it is illimitable since it embodies the Whole, the unmanifested Great Naught; it is above and yet within all parts of the Whole. The human Soul, admittedly Divine - is nevertheless limited by and in time, space and duration through the vestures created by these three artificial divisions of the time-sequence. In this light the form in which the Spirit manifests in time is the image of the human Soul, just as an actor assumes the role of Hamlet one night and on the next that of Caeser, remaining however, himself the same man.

Thus, in the ultimate Philosophy of Naughting, the Spirit, Divine Soul and human Soul have naught existence in time and space, except that which the mind of man creates for them. They are, in reality, concepts in the mind, and have no reality other than in the convex nature of human consciousness. Just as these three apparent aspects of man have naught existence to the Great Naught through the concave nature of its Ultimate Consciousness. Naught is slain by Time and formed in Spcae and sustained by Duration and remains the illusion of Reality whilst man thinks upon it.

The idea of God, Logos, Spirit, Christ or Satan, has naught existence in time and space, except that which man conceives in his mind, he clothes these Ideations with matter to make them tangible and knowable and they are kept in their form by the duration of man's ability to think creatively. In this light, the human mind is the great separator of the Whole. The Naught becomes clothed in a tangible form. For instance, it is impossible for a man living in London to conceive the entire length, breadth and size of England, because to his consciousness this has no immediate existence. However, if he were to fly at a sufficient altitude over the country, all of these would become apparent at once. Paradoxically, the movement and speed of the plane and the spin of the earth on its axis would make time, space and duration to have no real existence in the man's mind.

Let us for a moment dwell upon the existence of man himself. Suppose it were possible to create a human form independent of the sexual act: it would be necessary to firstly bring together the required number and variety of bones to make the skeleton or framework. Next the viscera, muscles, nerves, veins and blood-vessels must be inserted and the whole thing clothed with flesh and skin. If blood is now pumped into the veins and arteries and oxygen into the lungs, the body should live; however, in spite of all this, it is still a lifeless corpse. What can be done now? If the corpse could be naturally linked with the Source of Life, the body would be infused with "life" and get up and walk, but if this link is disconnected from the living man he will fall down a lifeless corpse! It is obvious then that the vital Essence for the life of the body comes from the Abstract or Naught, under the compulsion of which the body functions. The body is therefore the form in which this Naught is imprisoned in time and space. However, this Essence can have existence independent of the body of matter!

If we wish to weave a tapestry, we must first obtain a piece of canvas upon which we proceed to draw a picture of our original mental image of the tapestry. We must now weave thousands of threads of wool into the canvas in order that the tapestry be completed and the image affixed to the canvas. Now, if we whip the canvas backing away from the tapestry the whole picture would dissolve into a chaotic mass of coloured wool. The canvas can thus be likened to the Naught upon which the image is projected by man, yet at the same time, the man, the canvas and the threads are part of the Great Naughtness.

Let us take another example: we know that a man becomes aware of the world through the five senses; if, however, the power of these five senses were nullified and the man could not see, hear, touch, smell or taste, since all these faculties would have been put out of action, the mortal man would still live and function, but he would have naught consciousness of the form or the world in which the form becomes possible. We may well ask what it is that enables the man to continue to live when his senses have been put out of action; as in the case of gas or hypnotism and in deep trance conditions or when a man is knocked unconscious. The 'it' is naught to our senses, yet it must have some form or substance to make the apparently senseless man remain as a human being.

This is the 'Spirit' about which we hear so much and which is considered to be the Source of human Life and that of the lower kingdoms, It is triune in its nature, showing forth the three aspects of Will, Wisdom and Creative Activity, which manifest in the world of form as Time, Space and Duration, and within the human mind as the Unconscious, Conscious and Subconscious aspects. If we can ignore these concepts in the human mind, then we find that the three aspects of the Deity also have no existence to us, it becomes the Naught which is the All. Therefore when we consider the meaning of the Buddhist beatitude - Nirvana, we can see that this state occurs when the Essence is freed from the form and becomes re-absorbed into the Naught. This does not mean to say that a man ceases to exist when he is blown out of the form, but simply that he is freer in his range of consciousness.

Thus Universal Soul is the Power of Ideation which ensouls all forms, in this light, Ideation is the result of this Naughtness imagining its universe and then conceiving itself in the form-ideas projected into the primal substance. This could mean that the regions of form are simply concepts in the great mind of the Fashioner of this Naughtness and so long as the Fashioner keeps this concept in its mind, then manifestation becomes tangible, but the moment it ceases to think, then the world of forms breaks up and the Essence is absorbed back into the Naughtness, which also includes the Fashioner itself. If we call the Fashioner God, then obviously 'God' is simply a concept in the Naughtness, just as it is a conception only in the human mind. We may well ask ourselves: If the Fashioner can be broken up and absorbed into the Naughtness, then must not this Naughtness be a 'something' which is utterly incomprehensible to the human mind?

The Docetae Gnostics claimed that this Naughtness is symbolised in the seed of a fig-tree, the mathematical point, which is everywhere, smaller than small, yet greater than great, containing in itself infinite potentialities. It is the Refuge of the terror-stricken Monads, who are covered by the leaf of the fig. Here is a glimpse of one of the esoteric meanings of Adam and Eve being clothed with figleaves. We can now see that before the sensible world was conceived in the Naughtness there was an emanation of a divine or Ideal World of three root-aeons each consisting of myriads of sub-aeons, male-female; that is to say worlds, regions or beings, of self-generating powers. These three Root-Aeons become for us the Three Aspects of the Trinity - Time, Space and Duration which Three become the Fashioner of the Sensible World. This aeon-world of the Light Fashioner comes forth from the One Ideal Seed or Naughtness, which is the root of the universe, and becomes the ingenerable. From the human standpoint, however, these are still concepts in the mind, just as they are projected concepts in the mind of Naughtness.

Thus, the human Spirit - the Monad, being one of the sub-aeons, which is male-female in nature, is an atom or spark of this Universal Soul - the Great Fashioner. These Sparks become individualised for experience within the Divine and human Souls of men, so, in effect, once we realise that the human Soul is again another concept in the human mind, we must agree that the Divine Soul, Human Spirit and Universal Soul are but concepts only. They make up the Naught which is the All, in which all things are perfected, all being of the nature of That which transcends the intellect, and is free from any deficiency. This host of self-generable aeons united together produce the cosmic substance, and is the Alone-begotten or Generated One, containing within itself all the powers of the Ideal World of the Aeons, equal in power in all things to the original Seed of the Naught, the Ingenerable.

To understand the necessity for the limitation or clothing of Spirit by the various force-matters within the various regions, we must consider the nature of Consciousness. Consciousness is simply awareness. The Spirit of Naughtness is aware of all that It has emanated from Itself, but the Divine Soul, before its contact with matter, is aware only of what it contacts on its own regions of existence; bearing in mind that its human Soul is only a mental concept in its formless mind. This means that the changes of consciousness in the ALL cause vibrations in the surrounding force-matters, and it is by these vibrations that consciousness becomes aware that it is surrounded by the various types of force-matters. In this light, awareness can only be possible to the Whole Man - the Primal Man, through the matter of the particular region upon which he is functioning.

Science in its official pronouncements is apt to claim that there is nothing beyond the physical levels. This stand is taken because the practitioners of the various sciences have reasoned that unless an object can be given weight, size, depth or density, it cannot be said to exist. If this Naughtness were devoid of these qualities, then how can form still retain its shape? If they consider that Spirit is Naught, then how can it be the All? If there is no such thing as 'spirit' then what is there in the universe which makes physical matter possible? What causes the plants, minerals, animals and the human species to be born, grow and then die? There must logically be 'something' which is not perceptible to the human senses, and is yet independent to them?

The paradox of science is this: its followers are quite right in their claims. We know nothing of consciousness outside the limits of the four dimensional awareness and their instruments of research are incapable of measuring the nature of this Spirit. However, the true devotee of science should be willing to carry his research into the realms outside of the physical, but will not because it is claimed that there is nothing to be observed and experimented on or upon which inductive reasoning cannot be subjected to microscopes and test-tubes, but a little reasoning, inductive or deductive, will show that there must be the 'something' we have already mentioned above and perhaps someday someone may decide to try a bit of investigation. In fact, some recent unofficial statements would tend to indicate that already some scientists are as baffled as the so-called occultists as to the fundamental nature of this Naughtness. So perhaps there is hope yet?

In one thing, at least, Science and the Mystic agree, there is nothing other than what the mind conceives, and this has been amply verified by our psychological scientists in the cure of human neuroses. A neurosis is simply the misuse of the Ideatory Powers in the human mind which conceives out of nothing apparently tangible conditions causing them to manifest in the personality. But is this the whole picture? We think not! Just because science cannot physically conceive of this 'nothing' it does not mean to say that it is not possible that this 'naughtness' is more solid and tangible than physical matter. Obviously, the paradox cannot be answered by the senses or the human reason, since the reason is dependent upon what the senses supply to the brain, it cannot be solved by blandly stating that there is no Spirit or its combinations, since the Ideation of Spirit is derived from the human reason - but, where do we go from here?

There is also the question of consciousness and life. Both are sensed by the reason assisted by contact with the physical world, thus, we can only know consciousness and life by its effects upon the human organism, if the human organism becomes incapacitated and its senses are nullified - where does the concept of life and consciousness stand up? Surely, it is Naught which is the All. Has anybody got a tranquilliser handy? The mind reels under the impact of the vastness and complexity of this Naughtness.

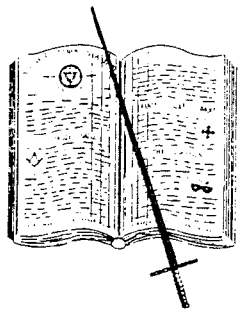
We are told that life and consciousness are identical, that they are the results of this Naught, and it is the human mind which causes the division in the Naught and creates the mental concepts by a process of 'emanation'. Thus, if we accept the Doctrine of Emanation as against the Doctrine of Evolution, the Philosophy of Naughtness becomes painfully logical to the human mind and it cuts right across the accepted pessimistic philosophy of the Physical Christians and draws us closer to the Buddhist philosophy. Shocking, the Christ is a Buddhist! Is it so strange that Christ imbibed the doctrines of Buddha and re-stated them as Christianity? The Christ states that He came to give us nothing new, if this is not correct, then Christ is a fraud and charlatan!

To Be Continued

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

I.C.E.S.

International College of Esoteric Studies



Incorporated as a non-profit educational institution devoted to the advancement and mystical enlightenment of Man.

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

Dear Companion

There remain only two more formal Degrees to complete the course!

As we have said so many, many times along the way ... we have tried to select from the array of material bequeathed us, the lectures we think would be most interesting and helpful to Companions. But the position is, we have more valuable material in our archives than we have space in the series of 100 Libers!

I have before me, as I write, twenty-four lectures from the Order of Melchisedec — and no "space" to fit them in! We find these lectures much too important to be left to obscurity in our vault, so we are offering them to Companions at this point in the Works, as a subsidiary Degree.

I am sure you have long realized that every lecture given in the Libers is one of substance and these 24 lectures from the Order of Melchisedec are certainly no exception. They detail many unusual ideas and are written as Steps to Initiation. We hope you will not pass them by!

With all good wishes for Health, Happiness, Peace and Light as we continue our sojourn.

Sincerely & Fraternally

Lucas

18 25

---------- cut off here and return-lower section ----------

S.D.E.
C/o I.C.E.S.
P. O. Box 31W, Worthing
Barbados, West Indies Date:

Kindly send me by Air Mail the 24 lectures from the Order of Melchisedec. Please find enclosed a donation of fifteen dollars to help with the cost of production and mailing. I promise to hold these lectures as Personal & Confidential and for my eyes only.

Name, Address and Key Number:

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 81-84

LIBER # 82 TIME TO BED DOWN

Personal & Confidential EIGHTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

The Arcane Discipline

LONDON WC1

Dear Friend,

The early gnostics were criticised for classifying the world as being evil. However what they really believed never got put down in writing as all writings were, and still are, considered as a basis upon which to discuss the real essence of things.

In 'A Philosophy of Naughting' we are able to see that people create their own worlds and that all effects appearing in the human experience are brought about by living according to one's false concepts of the world around us - in that way it becomes "evil".

Looking at the world today with all of its conflicting ideologies, politics versus politics and religion versus religion, one can see the utter futility of such pursuits: if one is a prince and states that the poor need to be housed, he is said to be meddling in politics; if one states that people had better readjust themselves to a more caring lifestyle one is branded as a moralist, and so on.

Through all this hypocrisy of those in charge of human affairs it is little wonder that the early gnostics opted out of this morass.

We trust that you find much help from these talks and are able to know that you are the very life which beats in your heart.

Yours sincerely in the Light

CLASSIFIED

Part 2

The Gnostic Christians, the Hebrews, Greeks, Buddhists, Hindus and Egyptians all state that there are Ten Emanations of the Deity, the highest is formed by the concentration of the Fashioner, the Image in matter of the Naughtness, therefore, each Aeon or Emanation produces by emanation another Aeon. Thus, each Aeon is a picture of a group or mental concepts embodying exalted ideas, titles and attributes, which the name but faintly represents. Each Aeon is called either active of passive. This indicates that the Philosophy of Naughtness is simply Pantheism, wherein one identifies God (Fashioner of Form) with Natura and vice-versa. This may be objected to by many people on the grounds that it is reprehensible to identify Man as God. But, we ask this question:how can any student of Mysticism or even science regard Deity as infinite, omnipresent and eternal unless Nature is an aspect of this Naughtness, and Naughtness informs every invisible and divisible atom in Nature? Here science rightly questions the stand taken by the Christians that God and Man are two distinct creations. The sound of the crashing foundations of physical Christianity do become a roar like an earthquake under the super-structure of Christ's Church.

Let us argue this question of consciousness a little further: consciousness is the state of being conscious and becomes the totality of man's thoughts and feelings, thus consciousness turned inward is life; inward to what? Life turned outwards is consciousness - outwards from what? Consciousness - but,do we mean the same degree of awareness of surroundings and impacts - what causes us to become aware of these impacts? When we think of unity we call consciousness Life; when we think of multiplicity, we call Life consciousness - surely these qualities are the result of the mind breaking the Naught into the parts, our concept of which can be changed at any given moment. We are also told that awareness implies at least a duality: the subject and the object. The object we know by the senses, but how do we know the subject? By the action and results of the effects we conceive of a possible cause, here we agree with science - but where does this Cause come from? It cannot come from 'nothing', because the human mind conceives of nothing as a vacuum or space, but we agree with science - there is no such state as space or nothing.

If we place three objects on a table, a pen, a clock and a plant, each one of these objects is composed, so we are told, of atoms vibrating at given rates of motion. If this be so then what holds the three forms in their respective shape, density and weight? We could say that there is a form of matter invisible to our human senses, which in some way keeps the atoms in the forms from flying apart or running into each other. This could infer that there is a type of matter or substance which fills the spaces between the three articles which is heavier or denser than the matter composing the three. Thus, to our sense there is Naught between them, but it is something. If we close our eyes, they disappear from the sense of sight, but they are still there, since we can touch them.

Therefore, the ultimate philosophy is That or 'Naught' and in this Naught is to be found the ALL without division. This Naughtness is beyond the range of our sense, yet is the power of the senses, hence the reason our senses cannot conceive of it. Naught is "That which is Not", which states that our universe of divers forms is an illusion. Here we have the root-doctrine of the Mystic, Gnostic or Buddhist. From the standpoint of this Naughtness there is only Unity, the One which is All. This appearance of manyness is due to the activity of man's thought and to the limited character and range of our senses. In other words, the universe of force-matter and its many forms which are in a constant state of change is a concept in the mind of the unknown Principle, which Principle has no form, therefore is the Naughtness.

Consequently, the universe has no actual existence apart from the thought of the Principle - here we may ask can a Principle think and plan? Man conceives of this Principle in the same terms as he conceives of himself and his faculties. This Naughtness can never really be divided, it is the mind of man which divides this naught into the many, since he considers himself as a separate individual and translates this feeling into everything around him. If he stopped thinking his senses would be powerless to create the divisions and separateness, but he would still be a man for all that.

In this light, the teachings of the Disciplina Arcani are correct, inasmuch as these state that man should not animalise himself nor should he spiritualise himself, but that he should humanise himself. Here we see the reasons for the change of emphasis in the teachings of late. Love is this Naughtness in Essence and when it becomes clothed in matter it becomes humanity. But, if a man animalised himself, that is to say,accentuates this mental form into matter; on the other hand, if he tries to accentuate his so-called spiritual aspect, he is simply subjectively creating a mental concept patterned after his male aspect. For a man to accentuate the illusion of being a man - sexually - he is accentating his animal passions, and if he tries to accentuate his femininity - sexually - he is accentuating the illusion of being spiritual, he creates neurosis within himself. But, if he can bring himself to realise that he is neither male nor feminine, but is the male-female, then he will humanise himself and become a balanced individual.

That which seems to us through the senses to take place in a sequence of past, present and future exists simultaneously in the Naughtness. As a man may from the top of a mountain summit embrace the whole country around him in a single glance, whilst the traveller in the valley can see it only in sequence, that is piecemeal, just so is a man subject to the sequences of time, space and duration by his very nature and the limiting character of his senses. Here the Illuminee is accused of stirring things, but any association with him must, by the very fact of his humanised nature, keep a gentle tension between himself and those who love him. His unrestricted Love-Power stops any stagnation taking place within the natures of those whom he loves. He shatters their concepts of time, space and duration and creates a sense of continuum, which can at first be very upsetting.

In this personal Philosophy of Naughtness one gains the awareness of a vast Unity of Being, wherein all these things which appear to the senses as separate, having length, width, depth and weight, are no longer separate units making up the Unity, but they are the Unity Itself. It is, therefore, obvious that such sense of Unity comes from the stilling of the reason and senses since we do not think nor do we register anything external by the sensational nature. But to ask the intellectual to stop thinking would be just too much. What would they have to talk about? Or how to air their so-called knowledge and impress their hearers? which after all, is the only way for the intellectual to justify his existence. Silence, at least for him, is spiritual death!

Just as you have a point within the circumference which is nowhere in one place, but is the All embracing circumference. Basilides says: "Naught was, neither matter, nor substance, nor voidness of substance, nor simplicity,nor impossibility-of-composition, nor inconceptibility, nor imperceptibility, neither man, nor angels, nor god; in fine, neither anything at all for which man has ever found a name, nor any operation which falls within the range either of his perfection or conception... the Deity beyond being, without thinking or feeling, or determining, or choosing, or being compelled, or desiring, will create universality." This is the Naught or One beyond the Many, just as you have a point within the circle which is nowhere in one place, but is the All-embracing circumference, thus for the Gnostics and Mystics, God is a sensible being and is a concept in the mind of man. At the same time, there is no such being excepting that which man conceives in his mind. The Adept and Mystic rises to that stupendous intuitional conception of Deity which transcends even sensuous Being, and compared with the narrow mind of man seems pure Nothingness.

Let us for the moment consider the idea of what we call "God". To us, as an Adept, god is nothing from the standpoint of reason and the senses, but because this God is the point within the circumference of the circle of Being, it is at the same time everywhere and there is no part of the circle at which the point or god is not. Thus, the Deity of the Adept is beyond time, beyond space, beyond consciousness, and even beyond Being itself, and this Deity can only be comprehended through the mystic experience of the Adept. This infers, that in your limited mental conception of God, and since you do conceive your God from your standpoint, any idea of God must be conditioned and objectified by and through your human senses. In this, we infer that man has created his God in his own image, however, from our standpoint and from that of the Naught - God is Nothing, and yet from the Naught this Primeval Idea evolves itself in the layers of illusion until it forms itself as One - the separate Man.

Let us look at this idea of Naughtness from yet another angle: when a meteor, a shooting star comprised of small mass of fiery matter from celestial space, becomes luminous by collision with the earth's atmospheric condition, it flashes through space and is pulled into the earth's orbit and by the time it hits earth it has become a solid rock. Here we have an illustration of the process of essence becoming clothed or crystallised by hurtling through the space to earth. This means that the qualities or essence, gaseous and solid, are simultaneous within it, it is only the change which causes it to assume different natures. Now, supposing we were able to throw our meteor back into space at the same speed of light as its falling, surely the reverse would happen. The solid mass would be transmuted back into essence, yet it would still embody the qualities of solidity and gaseousness at the same time.

We know that essence or pure spirit is imperceptible to the widest range of our human senses, yet for all that, there are some people who can and do become aware of this non-sensual essence. The Adept and Mystic live in and through this non-sensual essence which is the Ideation of that kind of matter which is perceptible by the human senses. This means in effect; if we use the example of the meteor, that our consciousness follows the same pattern - we have the Naught, the Spirit and the Soul nature simultaneously in ourselves here and now, this means that any movement in time and space is not required to know and experience the All. The Power which causes man to fail to experience this All lies within the nature of his mind, but if he can control the powers of the mind he can rise, as it were, beyond the limiting and conditioning nature of the senses and reason.

As we have said before, the appearance of manyness or of separate forms is due to the action of thought. The particular thought-faculty which causes this is the peculiar possession of man. Although we may be created in the image of the Deity, God cannot possess this same faculty, otherwise Man and God would be the same being and God would be as limited as man has made himself. The Absolute Truth can be, therefore, of two kinds - one manifest and self-evident to him who knows and who can function independently of the reasoning mind and its tools - the five senses; or it can be that which satisfies those occultists, philosophers, scientists and intellectuals whose eyes are riveted to earth, as well as the majority of humanity who incessantly demand new demonstrations and proof of Spirit and of God and who are subject to the limitations of the sensual nature.

The human reason distorts the former premise by sophistry and casuistry, and this is the main reason why the followers of Jesus, the Buddha and many of the mystic-come-philospher-come-scientists have failed to grasp the full implications of their respective doctrines. They may retaliate against this claim by saying that we - the Adepts - cannot produce new demonstrations and proofs of our claims, but in spite of their declaimations, they, themselves, have not brought forward any logical proofs to the contrary. To anyone who may be tempted to question our claim, we would only say, let them be careful, since we can, by using their own methods of research, question there own statements. Here we have the insidious paradox of reason, by this means one can prove, at least to themselves, the validity of any arguments, and if one is clever, convince almost anyone else.

The adherent to the Philosophy of Naughting cannot believe in, nor even want to understand the theological god, since the whole conception is a bundle of contradictions and a logical impossibility.

The modern conception of God as held by our philosophers and scientists, which, after all, was originally derived from the theologians, claims that god is infinite, limitless, and absolute - how can a god have form and at the same time be a creator of anything? Therefore, scientifically, form implies limitation, which suggests a beginning as well as an end; and God, in order to create must think and plan. Further, we ask, how can the Absolute be supposed to think, that is, to have any relation whatsoever to that which is limited, finite and above all conditioned? To hold the above premise is both a philosophical and a logical absurdity, and even the material blindness of our genuine scientists would never accept this conception.

Unfortunately, at least for the world, when the scientists question the idea of God, they are in reality questioning the validity of the theological god, and not the Mystic God, which they consider not worthy of attention. We, on the other hand, accept through sheer necessity the Doctrine of Pantheism, which infers that there is a Divine Unknown Principle, which is the root of all manifestation. From this Principle all proceeds through a process of Emanation, and within this Principle the manifested All shall be absorbed at the end of the Great Cycle of Being. This Principle is the 'Naught' of Plato and of the Mystics, and here we are not referring to the Mystic of the Theistic God. To us, God is Natura, which is derived from the word 'nasci', to be born or unwombed.

Therefore, if we push this conception further, we find that the Common God is but the aggregate of causes and effects in the world of form, which have become the personified sum and order of known causes and effects; or the total of all infinite agencies and forces, who are disconnected from an intelligent Creator or set of Creators. In this light, the Unknown is Naught to our senses, yet it is identical and co-equal with Natura, by which we infer that the eternal and uncreated Nature is meant, and not the visible aggregate of flitting shadows and finite realities. Natura is but the vehicle of the Unknown Principle, which is everywhere but nowhere, and is in every atom of the invisible and visible manifestation. It is in, inherent, over, and above all, around every invisible atom and divisible molecule known to science, It is the power of involution and evolution, and is the omnipresent, omnipotent and even omniscient creative potentiality.

Hence, the Naughtness is the Abstract which Natura obeys blindly, and is insofar as it is the personified sum and order of known causes and effects. Therefore, this Naughtness is within and yet above Creation, this infers that this Naughtness has no form or being which could be registered by our senses nor understood by the reason. This does infer that there are two 'gods', the first is not a god within our range of human references, but is the Principle from which our known 'God' is born. In this question we come to the crux of the reality of this Naughtness, all manifestation has a sensual reality so long as we direct the faculties of the senses upon it, but the moment we withdraw the energy of the senses from the object in question, it then has no reality to us.

No doubt this conception of Naughting of all Things may come as a shock to you, but, be warned, in order to accept and experience this philosophy, you must have first understood the whole of teachings from the beginning and then slowly re-orient them towards this non-reality of matter. It means that you must unlearn all what we have taught you - and then empty the mind of all sensual images. This emptying of the mind of images leaves the essence free and unhindered by the image-creating mind, in fact, it is not the image of the teaching which allows you to soar in intuition to the heights of Naughtness, but the Essence which ensouls the images. You, having been born from the One, cannot attain re-union with the One through the flesh.

Finally, our materialistic philosophers, occultists and scientists will no doubt rashly jump the line and accuse us of being stupid and fanciful in our claims. Let them do so by all means, at least it will land them into such an intellectual mess and confusion that they will be forced to let go of their mental limitations and soar with us into the very core of Life Itself. You cannot possibly know what we mean when we say that we can soar into Ourselves as the Naughtness. This infers that God and Man are the same and there is no need to have a God external to yourself.

In the next section we shall try and show how this Philosophy of Naughting can help you and me as human beings. Then we will republish a previous lecture entitled "The Law of Permutation" (or the Revolution of Souls) and you will grasp a little more of the Great Mystery of Man.

You would be very wise to re-read these two lectures time and time again until you have fully grasped their implications and practical applications in human life.

When we are asked by our Chiefs (the Adept-Masters) to prepare a channel for the diffusion of this Philosphy of Naughtness, we chose the Gnostic term "Pleroma" as being the nearest concept to the FULNESS, it is the Great Nothing wherein all thinking and being cease, because the Eternal is without qualities. Thus, our created world is differentiated and is the Essence of this uncreated world and from this division comes the myriad of divisions. This division of the One is created by man himself, since he is the great divider, because he creates this divided concepts from his own nature and the instruments of Nature has given him to use - the senses and the reason. It is because of the nature of the senses that we conceive of the pairs of opposites which have no real existence in the Great Naught, thus, it is by obedience to our dividing qualities of the senses which makes us victims of the myriad of opposites.

Thus, it is we as men, who create these non-existent qualities of the Pleroma, since we strive for differentiation in the first place that when we have reached the limit of differentiation, we must seek to restore ourselves back to a state of Sameness, wherein there is no such thing as mental concepts - God and Satan, Life and Form, Spirit and Matter, Time and Space, the Beautiful and Ugly and Divine Soul and human Soul and man and woman, etc., and this process of division is the essence of every created being - that is to say, when the Essence is clothed by form. The Mystic, therefore, as Basilides states: "We ourselves, however, are the Pleroma, because we are a portion of the eternal and the endless. Still, we do not possess it, but are exceedingly removed from the Pleroma; not in space or time, but in being, inasmuch as our being is different from the Pleroma, inasmuch as we are created beings, and thus limited by time and space."

Thus, in this ancient philosophy, the Gnostic knows all men and creatures to be equally divine - being of the same nature and essence as the Great Naught and within this Principle, man, the Crown of created beings, is an immortal spirit whose power of development and unfoldment is unlimited, sharing in the life-giving Principle as omniscient and beneficent. In this light, each man is the master of his own destiny and happiness lies within the reach of those who place themselves in harmony with the Divine Law of the Pleroma. But, so long as man retains the illusion that he is rent in twain, being both the Self of Matter and at the same time the Self of the Spirit, by retaining and obeying the process of differentiation of himself from the One, he still remains in ignorance and the land of gloom.

The Mystic, the adherent to the Doctrine of Naughtness, knows that he is not the Self of Matter nor the Self of the Spirit, but is the Pleroma itself, thus, he seeks to restore himself back to the One and at the same time be the One. He ceases to animalise his nature, to obey the impulses of his animal passions, nor does he seek to spiritualise himself by obeying the impulses of his Soul, but seeks to blend the two apparent sensual concepts into one - he thus humanises his nature, the scales of Universal Balance are then even, with neither opposites demanding the attention in his nature, he is then able to rise into himself as the Great and Aboslute Naught.

Now, we come to the basis of our philosophy, as shown above. The man who can attain this absolute balance between his two conceptional natures is a wise man indeed. Man is the centre of his own Universe or the Pleroma. Whilst man functions as a human being he becomes aware of this world through his senses, and his reasoning faculties interpret what his senses transmit to the brain, but, if the brain is deadened either by death or paralysis, the senses cannot transmit their impressions to the brain, then the man ceases to know the differentiated world around him. In this state of non-existence, he functions in a world of partial undifferentiation, wherein the senses play no part, he now becomes aware of the duration, minus the qualities of time and space.

Man, being the creator, as he is, has exteriorised his own human computer into a mechanistic computer, and this electronic computer can only react according to the deposits which man himself programmes into it, therefore the computer is subject to human error, just as our own human computer is programmed by the five senses which can also be subject to error. Thus, man and the electronic computer become subject to the results of good and bad deposits. Man, himself, has had a long series of human lives to enable him to programme his computer with deposits oscillating between the pairs of opposites, these deposits causing him to differentiate the world around him into manifold forms. Since man is subject to true and false concepts, so he must also feed his electronic computer with the same qualities. In this light, man and his creation have the inherent faculty of differentiation of the results of the senses which could only be called concepts of the mind. Thus a concept exists in the mind, but may have no corresponding existence in reality, when such a concept springs up in a man's mind it allows him to become possessed by this metal image - such a process causes the differentiations in his mental thinking.

Thus, a man can conjure up in his mind a mental concept which can assume a tangible and subjective concept, bearing in mind that this concept comes from nothing, it is man who makes this subjective concept tangible to have its effects felt in the personality.

In the same manner, man's conception of God, Satan, Spirit, Matter, Soul and personality has been programmed by the energies received from his imperfect sensual nature with its five receiving stations, but has, in the Ultimate Reality no correspondence in the Pleroma. They are illusions in one sense, but they are real in another. If he has not computerised his human machine with his interpretations derived from his imperfect senses, then these concepts are made real by this transmission, but if his senses are made perfect, they they can ~~register~~ the manifest and self-evident facts that these concepts are himself in reality, but through the imperfect senses he then demands incessant new demonstrations and proof of the existence of God and of himself as a fixation in the spatial illusion of time, space and duration.

This accounts for the blind-spots which one finds in the minds of students, they fail to see the reality of anything, simply because their senses are functioning imperfectly, wherever a fact is presented to them, they will always without exception overlook the obvious fact, but do place their own interpretation upon the simple fact.

Let us take note: in the beginning of the Pleroma as a Society, we pursued a process wherein this differentiation of the conceptional nature of man and God was pushed to its logical conclusion, wherein the student became confused by the manifold apparent expressions of the One Life - the Fashioner of the World - the God of the Christians and Jews. This accentuation upon the Soul and the spiritual way must by necessity cause doubts to arise in the human mind, the natural result being for the mind to reject these mental concepts, it refuses to accept any more, as it realises that they are in themselves as concepts are of no value to him. On the opposite side of the scales, man rushes after sex, food and entertainment as his concept of happiness. In his desire for sexual experience he can sink into the mire of his animal passions; in the quest for food he can accentuate his gross material body and in his search for entertainment he might seek to escape the warning cry of Nature that the incessant differentiation of his animal nature would bring him disappointment. He will very often turn towards the opposite concept - so-called spirituality.

By now, we hope, our student should have been stripped of the illusion of the reality of the separateness of his animal life and his spiritual life and discover that concentration on one at the expense of the other is a dead-end occupation whether of action or of the mind. In spite of this lust after the spiritual by man, his animal nature is still strong and there arises a terrific conflict within this divided nature - the struggle between the God in his Soul and the Devil in his animal nature. He should have realised that both aspects and his lusting after either perpetuates the division and imbalance in his body politic. "Divide and rule" is the cry of the enemy of that man who seeks for a humanised and balanced nature. Even in the D.A. the members still lust after the differentiation of the Self, which makes for the disgusting scenes of gossip, back-biting and the double-faced dealing with their brothers.

To be continued

LONDON WC1

Dear Friend

In this part of A Philosophy of Naughting it deals mainly with the core of Cosmic Truth. The truth is that until we have come to terms with ourselves we stand no chance of that which we call 'spiritual evolution'. No amount of reading, meditating or imbibing information on inner orders or Cosmic Masters will help us nearer to the heart of Love within. Not until we examine ourselves and cease looking at other people for our sources of trouble can we go farther into freedom of the self. It is not what we know but rather what we are that matters.

The point arising regarding the 'imperfect' senses does not mean that the senses are imperfect in themselves but rather that we translate the impressions we receive imperfectly. In fact we are witnessing the portrayal of our own creations which are imperfect. We should refrain from conceptualising from our own impressions and learn to use our senses to perceive the unity of life and not to react to the transitory nature of fragmented experience.

You will see from the narrative that that which we call "Sex" is the continual expression of the Source in Its creative sense and therefore is the manifestation on all levels of experience. In analysis it is the Pure Spiritual Action as against a mere physical fuction, or a function related only in a "biological" sense, this is very important as one can learn from the deviations and related diseases seen in the world today.

When we misuse the sex-force at the "physical" level we are actually committing the Christian's" unforgiveable sin against the Holy Spirit" and drugs will not help but merely dull the senses and drive one more deeply into unseen "horrors"; neither is celibacy an answer as it reveals a misunderstanding of the feminine role in nature. Only when a true spiritual priest is wed to a true priestess can one have a 'little bit of heaven' in reality on Earth - this too must be interpreted at all levels.

If we spend all our time in correcting our attitudes and practices in life we tread the way of the Discipline. We can only deceive ourselves if we judge outside appearances and our own present state of discord and unfulfilment; we cannot deceive Divine Law or those Mentors, or Elder Brothers, in care of our tutelage and guidance to the Sanctuary within.

With all blessings
Yours sincerely in the Light

A PHILOSOPHY OF NAUGHTING

CLASSIFIED

Part 3

It is now painfully obvious that each student should bring to perfection the qualities, capacities and nature of his five senses by humanising his life. By this means he avoids the snare of the opposites and becomes aware of his Oneness with the Great Naught, nay, he knows that he is the One.

Now we may ask ourselves - why is it necessary for us to accept and use the space, time and duration concepts of God, Spirit, Matter, Soul and human Soul, male and female, etc. The answer is simply this: the mechanism of the five senses can only function within the spatial limits of time, space and duration, because our senses are imperfect in their registration of the vibrations being received by them, hence, these imperfect registrations are then passed to the brain to be interpreted by the already programmed human computer. Obviously, the only way to eradicate the need for these spatial conceptions is to perfect the nature of our senses by humanising our life.

In reality, by having a closer look at the method of this reception by the brain of the impacts from external sources which comes in a series of dots and dashes, with a space between each set of symbols, giving the illusory appearance of duration or a continuous reception of these light-waves. For instance, the pattern of the invention of the Morse Code obviously comes from the brain and its method of reception and interpretation of these light-waves. Here we have the origin of the system of number and symbol which one finds in the Tarot, the synchronicity of Dr Carl J Jung, and the various systems of Numerology. The brain cannot accept a continuum of impressions because the senses are imperfect, just as the conscious mind is unable to register the continuum of the subconscious impressions or impulses.

We all know that light and sound waves do not function as a continuous stream of impulses, they are broken up into a series of dots and dashes. In a verbal message passing along a telephone wire each word as it passes through the wire is broken up into a series of combinations of dots and dashes. In a television set, the images received on the screen are a series of spatial dots and dashes which form the picture, in the same way as the projector flashes on to the cinema screen a series of separate images at a certain speed which gives the appearance of being a continuous picture, as can be evidenced in some of the pictures of the early days of the film industry.

Thus, it is through this process of number and symbol that the brain can register these impacts. If, for instance, the brain cells could register these vibrations as a continuum, then it could not register things or outlines in the objective world because man's senses at the moment are imperfect and are totally incapable of registering a continuum wherein time and space have no place. Perhaps, the above is the key to the theory of Albert Einstein when he says that everything is space, time a continuum. Logically, this makes it seem that all manifestation is an illusion to the Real Man, but factual to the man of flesh. Here we have the paradox of life - one aspect of life is an illusion, whilst the form aspect is a fact registered by the senses.

It is now obvious, or should be that the more man perfects the qualities and abilities of his senses the closer he will come to realise that he is the One and the One is in him. When this state occurs, and it does occur with the Adept, Illuminee and Mystic, the spatial distances between himself and the One are becoming more and more undifferentiated. If we must use the outmoded term of "spirituality", it could be said that this is the work of spiritual labour, to reduce the barriers of differentiated existence and become one with the One - the Great Naught which is the All.

Therefore, in order to become free from the illusion of the senses, man must detach himself from the senses in such a way ~~as not to become~~ attached to them, but to use them as instruments as a mechanic uses his tools to accomplish his work. By non-attachment, we mean to perfect the use of the senses to such an extent that they will refuse to allow the brain to register any form of vibration which is not a continuum. This means that the objects of the sensual world are real only so long as men attach themselves to them, or consider them as reality in themselves; and it is this attachment to the illusions of the senses which creates frustrations, fears and resentments. For instance, a man in true love forgets himself in his beloved, in this state his senses are subservient to him, since they are marshalled towards his beloved, therefore, there can be no restraint, domination or limitation in his mind concerning the love.

The evil qualities which are in reality the reception by the senses in an imperfect manner, can only arise in his mind if through his senses he treats his beloved as a means of satisfying his animal desires or self-centredness, as in the case of a woman treating her husband as simply a "meal-ticket"; or a man considering his beloved as a means of sexual pleasure for himself. In cases like these we have the attachment to the senses which eventually dominates the mind and from this comes jealousy, fear of loss and the creation of the images of menace.

It is entirely through this non-attachment to the senses that in the sexual act, the two natures are blended into a terrific passionate embrace, the two are then merged into one being, and they both experience the terrific impact of Nature which hurls them up into a timeless state of condition. In this union the earth trembles at the process of creation and where the unrestrained senses are allowed to follow their natural course of action without any interference from the reason or the senses they are both unified into one and from this freedom they rise into the timeless sequence of the One Unified Man. If man can achieve this union in the sexual act, why cannot he do this in his normal everyday living?

In the lustful or selfish man, the attachment to another stems from the sense of importance which he gives to his erect phallus. This state of mind makes the man oblivious to reality, since every act he does is governed by this small organ of his body. The woman of the same type, on the other hand, attaches herself to any man, and from this stems a lack of security, which sense of fear has arisen from the brutal and selfish attitude of man towards his female self.

In these same cases the man labours under the delusion that he is "manly" and the woman that she is "feminine"; the one connoting thought, virile strength and the capability to rule the world, and the other, a soft sensitive, clinging-vine incapable of anything but to follow her "man" to the ends of the earth. In actual fact, these differentiations are an illusion which brings untold misery to the human race. This is because so many people are brought up on this sickly pap and very few dare to question its validity, let alone deviate from it by so much as a millimetre. In these two cases we can see how the senses limit and restrict the free movement of a man or a ~~woman. They reside in a~~ world of illusion and thus the reasoning faculties in both are conditioned into a very narrow field - the business of satisfying their "unnatural" natural needs.

The man who truly loves another, finds himself prompted by an Abstract Cause, which in this case, stems from the impressions made upon the brain from an inner source. This Love-Force now regulates the need for sex, because it takes into account the needs of the beloved. This sense of sacrifice of the personal needs for another is the beginning of the non-attachment to the other, therefore, by the very nature of this love, they are both assured of their natural rhythm which Nature always demands for them. But, so long as the one treats the other as a means of satisfying his unnatural compulsion only, he will create in his atmosphere fear, frustration and very often distaste, and above all the fear of loss which will ultimately create a series of images of menace, which if the man allows them, will take over this natural function of sex which creates the union between two people. The man then finds that he is attached to the other and finds imself a captive in a net of unreality.

Here you have the root cause of the many kinds of mental neuroses which one finds in the so-called 'subworlds' of the homosexual, bi-sexual and lesbian activities. Very often the men or women caught up in this net find themselves powerless to exercise a restraining influence upon their attachment to sex. This is generally because of their own weakness or their unwillingness to do anything about it. Usually they do nothing about it because they are actually, in spite of their moaning, thoroughly enjoying their misery. Let us not, however, be so naive as to think that this same situation does not arise in the heterosexual world also. In both cases, all who act in this manner will find themselves constantly in demand by others like themselves, even to the point of exhaustion. Slowly but surely a person like this reaches saturation point when the natural desire for sex, either home- or hetero-, is burnt out of them and the whole purpose of their life becomes a rush after sex in the hope of dulling their sense of doom and frustration, all other purpose being cast aside and forgotten.

Let us be brutally frank, although it may shock the susceptibilities of some of our members; a man or woman who is deprived of the normal rhythm of sex can and does become one of the many fanatics of spirit-uality, usually through vegetarianism or any other of the many illusions which make up the modern conception of what is "spiritual".

Instead of becoming more spiritual, however, they almost always become eroded with jealousy, pride, arrogance, spite and love of gossiping and trying to run other people's lives for them - they are in fact, really attached to sex which they have driven from them. They are the "old maids" no matter what sex, who enjoy stirring up people's lives in order to satisfy their lack of a normal rhythmic life. As a compensation they arouse their animal potentialities in order to enjoy an illusion of sexual pleasure. Hard words, to be sure, but it is a psychological fact!

Where a person has complete freedom, when he is free from any mental concepts, he can truly love and abandon himself to Love, since this Love creates the world of the senses in its image and not in the images of the senses. The woman who loves develops a sense of maternal care for the man, this releases her self-direction into the freedom of association of man and through this freedom her concept of the world is changed from one of purposelessness to one of purpose, and this transformation also occurs in the man. Thus,when we boil all spiritual knowledge down to its basic principles we are forced to realise this fact; the Deity is in perpetual sexual union with Himself in order that creation may continue. In this light He is a bi-sexual God, capable of a sexual act with and in Himself. So why should the Western man fear to express his natural function, since the man and God are one and the same Being? This magnificent cosmic drama mirrored in man as Sex has been so degraded that it has now become the subject for dirty jokes, pornographic ideas and strip-tease clubs, all of which are simply a cowardly compensation for his refusal to recognise his true nature and function.

Let us take this one step further, bearing in mind that Man and God are one and the same Being, so that man must, by his very Divine Nature recapitulate the function of himself as the Great Naught in the personality. The man who is truly in love finds that this inner force lifts him out of the hum-drum of life into a new feeling of mental and sensational activity. There is born with this Love the urge to conquer the illusions of this world, he is no longer content to remain a slave to its illusions, but seeks to use the illusions for others. The woman on the other hand, through the eyes of her lover, sees the latent potentialities within her lover and strives to awaken these potentials into activity,she becomes the driving force behind the man.

Thus, when the fashioner of this World emerges from the Naught as a female, she changes the form of the Fashioner to become an active power who impregnates herself as the Womb of Nature. Here is the explanation of why the female is the stronger of the two sexes. The man today thinks that he is the conqueror of woman, but how mistaken he is, it is the woman who is the conqueror of man, without her man could not exist. It is the man who runs after the woman and by his very nature becomes submissive to her. We silently smile at the claims of man and his so-called manliness, he is so attached to his senses that he fails to see that he is the servant of the woman and thus gives woman domination over him.

We can also see that this sense of Naughtness can continue to exist between the two lovers when time, space and duration have ceased for them. This continuum is only possible when the two concerned are truly devoted to each other. When the importance of the self is voluntarily given up and it is no longer a case of what one of the two wants for himself, but of what is good for the other. This is the non-attachment of the self to the senses and in this is the beginning of the Philosophy of Naughtness where the attachment to the self and the validity of its sense perception has no place. Any attempt to bring about separateness between the two is rejected since the two minds can now reciprocally receive external impressions as a continuum.

In considering the illogical claim by some Eastern civilisations that a man can have a number of wives, we can only say that this is possible only when the absolute freedom of the wives is dominated and restricted by the animal desire of man. The wives in this case, have no chance to express themselves according to their nature. There is also the ancient claim that a man or woman can only love one person at a time, but that their affections can cover a number of persons at the same time. We refer you to our talk *"What is Love?" and you will see how these two talks blend with one another. We have concentrated upon the idea of the human relationships between two people for a definite reason; unless and until a man or a woman learns to fulfil their responsibility to another in whom they find their love nature manifesting, it is useless to try to grasp the far-reaching implications of this Philosophy of Naughting of the Self.

Thus, in the last and final analysis this old Philosophy of Naughtness is in reality the Philosophy of Love in all its incredible beauty and freedom of expression. Just as human love seeks to bind two people together into one, and at the same time seeks to encourage the two parties to express themselves in full, one reacting upon the other for the good of both; if we now lift this vast conception to the higher regions of man's being, we come to the idea of God who follows the same pattern as the human. Bearing in mind always, the Divine Soul is ever the Divine Principle to the personality, in the same way in which the Divine Unknown Principle is to its manifestation. In this, the Divine Soul of Man is Naughtness, but becomes 'something' by man reasoning upon it, and separating the Soul into an objective concept which becomes divorced from the Whole.

We can see that the attachment to the senses can cause the Essence of man to grow into shapes of peculiar nature around the human Soul. These can take on the likeness of particular animals, such as the wolf, ape, lion, goat, monkey, ass, snake, rat and many others. These cause the desires of the Soul to become like the special nature of these animals, for it imitates the actions of those whose characteristics it bears. This means that those so encumbered will intimately associate themselves with the impulses and impressions of irrational animals. The man who is pre-occupied with selfish sex-seeking will behave like a rat and desert the giver as soon as his need has been satisfied; the man who is pre-occupied with the affairs of others will assume the characteristics of a snake which will twist and twine when discovered. The obvious source of these animal propensities is in the man's images of menace which were first created by the concepts of his mind and then allowed to take control of it.

* This talk will follow the completion of the series "A Philosophy of Naughting"

It is not proper for a man to yield to his animal nature, nor to seek excuses for his misdeeds by saying that foreign elements attached to him have compelled him to sin; far from it, the choice is his, the responsibility is his, the human Soul's compulsion is brought about by the man's attachment to the world of the senses. It is the man himself who led his desire towards evil and refused to battle with the constrainments of the appendages. It is obviously man's bounden duty as Man to show himself ruler over the inferior creation within him, thus gaining the mastery by means of his Divine Soul which gains its existence from the Manifested God, which in turn owes its existence to the Naughtness of All.

If man builds into himself the characteristics of the irrational animal kingdom, then where do these aspects or concepts find themselves located and what are they? They are embodied in the "images of menace", whose life is derived from the subconscious mind of man which are to be found within the vital double of the physcial body. This is the Hate-Man, the very opposite to the Love-Man. The Hate-Man is evolved from the images of menace wherever they are given the opportunity of evil thought or action, however slight, and the man who becomes a slave to these illusory creatures becomes the embodiment of Hate in contradistinction to the Love-Man, the man who strives to free himself from these artificially created images of menace.

These images of menace are the crystallised forms of man's concepts. If they are attached to himself they can, if left alone, remain illusions. However, if the man, by continually thinking upon them or upon the idea or ideas which originally brought them into being, gives them the necessary mental food, they will gain control over the mechanism of the human computer in the subconscious mind. When this stage has been reached they will erupt in violence, usually in the first place against someone else whom they have convinced the man that he has a grievance against, but eventually against the man himself. All hell breaks lose until the man to whom they are attached learns, obviously the hard way, that the only way to defeat these creatures is to stop perpetuating the mental concepts which first caused them to exist. When this is done, they will whither and die and be blown away like leaves in a windy Autumn. Also,and this is very important because not often understood, they will have no life and will be unable to harm anyone. Only the man himself, if he is sufficiently foolish, can revivify them.

The fabricating Deity, the crystallisation of the Great Naught, as mirrored within the human Soul, fashions the human personality. Having no substance of its own, it uses the gross matter as its substance and out of this forms the human vestures, and thus are the eternal attributes of the Love-Man duly imprisoned in the darkness or ignorance of the personality. These human Souls spend their lives in ignorance, surrounded by their mental concepts, passing from one to another of the bodies which are under the ward of the creative power of the World Fabricator. Thus, by this ignorance, men have allowed themselves to create their tormentors, the images of menace, which causes their creators to hate the Light, as embodied in religion and the Power of Mysticism.

This means that the images of menace within man's own nature force him to worship the world of form instead of the World of Light, and in this worship he becomes attached to the world of illusion and breaks the Law of Natura Herself within himself, hence automatically creating his own hellish tormentors. The only way for man to restore himself to freedom of spirit, soul and body is to renounce the importance of the reality of matter for itself and to treat matter and its manifold forms as an instrument independent to man himself. This means the Naughtness is perfection itself, being of the nature of That Which Is and which transcends the intellect, being free from all deficiency.

The Whole Man, having his roots in the THAT, should manifest that perfection within his personality. This is not, so, however, since man having been granted the power of freewill of choice, decided to endure the vast sea of ignorance. In his choice to depart from his perfected state, he descended through the regions of force-matter, becoming more ignorant with every turn of the spiral until he found himself in darkness, his inner senses dulled to his Real Nature. By this descent into matter, he became subject to the Rulers of the Personality, who imprisoned man within the bodies and blinded his eyes to Reality, only to have him become aware of Illusion. This is the vast delusion of Souls for, since they had been breathed out from the That by means of emanation, until these Souls can free themselves from the Great Illusion their conception of God as the Great Naughtness becomes impossible.

In the moral man the Great Deceiver is the sexual force and man's adoration of the erect phallus, and under the mistaken impression that this alone can dull his mind from the great Illusion of the Senses, he creates, through his ignorance, the images of menace which torment him mentally, emotionally and finally physically. The ignorance of sex and its true meaning lies at the root of most, if not all, of man's frustrations, resentments and suffering. Here we are speaking of the sexual-force which is the creative force within all his three vestures, and not to the physical sex alone. Man is governed by the unnatural sway of sexual pre-occupations and his refusal to accept the Decrees of Natura. The results of this is that when a man finds himself under a sexual compulsion, either physically, emotionally or mentally he is flung into a state of turmoil through fear of the possible loss of his animal gratification. In this state a man ceases to be a creator of the world but becomes instead its willing slave.

The man who is under the sway of the Great Deceiver becomes oblivious to his manhood and degenerates into a mere human-animal obsessed with sex of all forms and his apparent need for it. This creates his images of menace which blind him to his true manliness and the possibility of becoming a conquerer of the world of illusion. For such a man, while in this state, the Philosophy of Naughtness is impossible and he still remains a human-animal,with all the fears and appetites of an animal. The sexual impulse on all levels of consciousness is continually moving towards creation of new forms, new vistas of knowledge, new methods of human advancement, new civilisations and new species wherein the human Soul can gain the opportunity of greater expansion of its Naughtness.

It is the wanton and selfish misdirection of this wonderful force which forces man to become the abject slave of the transitory world. He hides his life in small and darkened corners for fear that his friends may find him out. As a consequence his life is spent in running from this and that friend, and this runing causes him to adopt irrational beliefs which accentuate his loss and uselessness. In other words, he develops into a chronic neurotic for although he may think he is smart and feels that he can split himself into two, through his identification with the concepts in his mind such a separation intensifies his fear of being restricted or even dominated. In reality, it is this unreal and dangerous pre-occupation with sex for its own sake which creates the ugly neurosis and perpetuates the division between his Divine and human Soul.

The man who is filled with the expanding Nature of Love ceases to be pre-occupied with itself. He directs his creative force into creative channels such as, science, philosophy, art, music, poetry, or any other which may lead to the uplifting of mankind to a higher level of activity. This re-direction of his creative powers does not, however, preclude him from having a normal and healthy sex-life, far from it, it is vital that he should, it enables him to reap the beneficent results of such a balanced sex-life. Such a balanced outlook, free from the tormenting images of menace, becomes the driving urge within man which makes him want to climb the ladder of fame and success. So long as a man retains his unhealthy compulsion that he must have sex then he will fail, this unnatural compulsion will act as a barrier to the free expression of his creative force, but if he gains the love of another, then the lover will open him up to the rays of the Sun of Success.

Love, which is given freely and with deep sincerity, becomes the great binder and expander of man who will open up like a flower to the Sun of his Naughtness Self. All of his restricted programmed life will rush into a vast feedom of movement. His qualities, capacities and character will now be realised and released to the world and he will arise from his cave of selfishness and walk erect among his equals. His intelligence will be fired by the Flame of Love and he will stand out among men. Has this man lost anything? Definitely NOT. The fact that he has freed himself from his sexual compulsions enables him to enjoy the boon to man - the ability to change himself into a more wonderful man, no longer a slave to sex, but its master.

Let this be clearly shown: we are referring to sex on all levels of man's being, and let us not overlook this important classification of the meaning of sex, whilst it is true that the physical act performed in the body, the sexual act can also be performed in the emotional and mental vesture of man. According to the intelligence and wisdom of the man, so will his sex-force find its balance in all vestures, not one greater or lesser that the other. Hence the reason for our discussion of the danger of man's sexual compulsions, which compulsions bind him as a slave to the physical world of space, time and duration.

Therefore, this Philosophy of Naughtness deals with Space-Time-Continuum, a mental state where there is no division between the movement of energy, no form of separateness to act as a cubby-hole wherein a man can build his selfish nest of self-centredness, which shuts him off from the ever-expanding and growing Natura of God. Briefly speaking, Naughtness means that when man has come to the realisation that he must lose his self-individuality and become one with the social-individuality, the importance of what he wants, what he needs and what he knows is no longer of any value, he now knows that they are his working tools, and not himself.

Let us finish here, to continue this outline would cover many hundreds of volumes, in fact the whole of man's natural history, since the Naught is the All, and we have only touched on a small fragment of that All.

To Be Continued

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 81-84

LIBER # 83 GOODNIGHT ALL!

Personal & Confidential EIGHTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

The Arcane Discipline

LONDON WC1

Dear Friend

This lecture on the Law of Permutation is a very important one should you wish to understand the real nature of Hierarchy.

To put the teaching in another context we could say that the Hierarchy represents the sum total of Consciousness in relation to the Individual and that the Individual is like a link in a chain within this sum total; Thus, at our Individual level we are naturally linked with the Whole Consciousness and by the power of Divine Will have access - or fellowship - with every atom in existence.

The ecstasy mentioned is not a state of transcendental phantasy as some students understand it to be as in a meditation state: ecstasy is a real and vital experience had whilst one is performing the normal chores of living. Do not be led away by believing one can "meet God", or whatever, in a meditative state as it depends upon what the meditator's conception of God is as to the experience one has. We should not conceptionalise.

In our human state we are continually negating and we need to strive diligently to balance our nature with divine attributes. Once we are able to strike a balance between that which we consider to be Divine andthat which we consider to be human, the two become merged into one and life becomes more peaceful and satisfying.

Many students believe that they have to follow complicated systems to attain enlightenment. Really the way is simple and that is why it evades them. To sum the whole process up means that all we need to do is to stop ourselves asking too many questions about life and just be a natural and loving human being.

With Peace and Blessings

A PHILOSOPHY OF NAUGHTING

Part 4

CLASSIFIED

The Law of Permutation

This fourth part of this series was first given through the Duc de Palatine in 1962. Even at that time very few of the members were able to fully grasp the subtle implications of this Doctrine, mainly because of their pre-conceived ideas and conceptional sensory-intellectual knowledge. Now it is hoped that with the publication of parts 1-3, you will understand more of the ancient Doctrine of Mysticism or the Arcanum.

Within the Gnostic Mysteries, commonly called "The Mysteries of Jesus", and the secret Assemblies of Europe, the neophyte underwent a series of initiations which granted to the candidate a definite expansion of consciousness and enabled him to step out of the normal line of evolution to tread the shorter and steeper path, which is a more difficult path, to become a God-like Man.

The last initiation to be taken within the Secret Fraternities was always called the last and most awful of all the Mysteries, when the man so blessed allowed his Immortal Spirit to descend into the human tabernacle and dwell therein. This descent of the Immortal Spirit into man takes place in accordance with definite laws and if a man obeys these laws they will guide the aspirant to spiritual advancement towards the goal of Ultimate Perfection.

This is the first time that this Doctrine of The Law of Permutation has been permitted to be revealed to the ordinary man without first taking the ancient Sodalian Oath. We have not given the vital keys to this doctrine for a very good reason.

William Kingsland has touched upon this doctrine when he states: "Thus the Root Teaching of this Wisdom at all times has been the DIVINE NATURE OF MAN; and what was taught in the inner schools of the Mysteries - a teaching which can still be obtained - was the method of achieving this supreme knowledge in a practical manner, that is to say the attainment of God-like characters and powers. Every man is potentially a god, AT ROOT HE IS GOD....Knowledge is Power. The supreme knowledge confers upon its possessor the possibility which is not even dreamed of by the ordinary individual - or the ordinary Christian for that matter (and also the modern seeker of the Truth), notwithstanding the repeated assertion of that possiblity in the Christian Writ".

Remember that this system is not new, it has also been called Raja Yoga by the Hindus, the Hidden Path in Buddhism, the Way of the Cross in Christianity, the Philosopher's Stone of the Rosicrucians, and the Great Work of the Alchemists. It is also the Holy Grail of Arthurian Legend, the Lost Word of Freemasonry, and many more. This Path is ever the same although the names have been changed from century to century, but the purpose is ever the same, it is the process to attain the Dynamic Soul-Powers which are locked up within your human nature waiting to be brought forth to make you a MASTER AMONG MEN.

The process and method of fulfilment of the Law of Permutation as given in the Brotherhood and Order of the Pleroma is neither Christian, Theosophical, Rosicrucian, Masonic or Spiritualistic, but is fundamentally the Divine Wisdom as was embodied in the CHRISTIAN GNOSIS of the first three centuries A.D. Our teachings are based upon a scientific synthesis of the basic principles of the above systems whereby the modern man can attain the supreme knowledge which will make him a God Incarnate.

Further, the teachings as given in the Pleroma are not based upon the teachings of a man or a group of men, either from the past or in the preseent, but they are the direct teachings of the Immortal Spirit of Richard, Duc de Palatine, who is our human counterpart, who is simply the "transmitter" of the knowledge and instructions given to you. Therefore, we wish to take this opportunity of advising our Group Leaders that their teachings should at all times be drawn from their own Divine Immortal Soul and not from the incomplete opinions of men. Again we stress this important fact, every word which issues from the lips of Our transmitter can only be considered as an opinion until you have by your own efforts, proved them for yourselves. By following this golden rule you will avoid being caught up in analytical intellectualism, and on the other hand superstition and dogma of all forms.

The expression "Ye are Gods", which, to our biblical and modern students is a mere abstraction, is for the Gnostic of vital significance and more so for the student of the Pleromic Life. We have until now refrained from hinting of this doctrine of th Law of Permutation as we have felt that it is too high a doctrine to give outside the protection of the Secret Assemblies.

The comprehension of this vital doctrine lies in the understanding and experience of the Unity of God and Man and without this understanding we are afraid that what we are about to give will just pass over your heads. Although we have given the outlines of this doctrine throughout the Monographs, few students have been able to grasp its full significance. Come what may, we have been ordered to give it. Let us hope!

This Law of Permutation has implied that Jeshu and Paul, like certain other god-like men, had reached the highest of all stages on earth - the perfect union of the Immortal Spirit with the human Soul. The Trinity within man was complete and the man became a god incarnate. This means that we have here the true meaning of the term "Mediator". In fact, if the student really understands our purpose, the Pleroma teaches this doctrine.

There are two stages to be passed through in order to attain this complete union, first, one must attain Illumination or Ecstasy, which means that the human Soul must become unified with its Divine Twin - the Divine Soul."The path by which to Deity we climb is ardous, rough, ineffable, sublime". So the Path to Ilumination is one of conquest, when the Divine Soul conquers the Dragon of the lower self. We must emphasis this very strongly, that the attainment of the Illumination is not a matter of escape, of getting into the Kingdom of Heaven.

Yet the attraction which most occult systems offer has been that it is so easy; a mere matter of an intellectual acceptance of certain occult dogmas, such as karma, reincarnation, meditation and vegetarianism, etc., etc. These are all dogmas and have no foundation from the lips of these god-like men of old. This does not mean to say that the above are not useful, they are very useful when they are understood in the correct manner. There are so many conflicting opinions concerning them that the student does not know which system to accept.

To attain Illlumination you must be fully human in every way, you must blend the Divine and Moral Law into one whilst still in the body of flesh. The reason why you were forced to take up this body of flesh is to gain mastery over it and draw forth its inherent powers and capabilities, until you keep your consciousness focussed in the body you will not gain the Victory. This business of dwelling upon the "something" which is beyond the body, is one of the main stumbling blocks which act as a barrier to the student, this means that his or her whole attention is directed away from the INNER SELF.

There is no redemption outside the confines of this mortal body of yours, hence the purpose of reincarnation and karma. In most occult systems the student is taught that he must crucify the body and its powers in order to attain Samadhi or the Kingdom of God. Now, there is no real evidence for this claim, methinks that it received its beginnings from certain Theosophical writers who should have known better. As far as we can tell, all of the great Teachers of humanity demanded that we should live a perfectly normal and healthy human life, but at the same time we should endeavour to use the Gnosis as a means of directing our energies in the right direction.

Illumination is attained either by the absorption of the human Soul into the Divine, or the merging of the Divine with the human. The former is most common, the latter very rare indeed, perhaps one or two mortals in each century have the strength and determination to achieve this blessed state of consciousness.

Let us try to explain this process. The method of absorption demands a pure body, emotions and mind, the three aspects must be cleared of all the dross which has accumulated over the hundreds of incarnations you have had, admittedly Karma takes care of a great portion of this dross, but, the method of Karma is a slow and intermittant process. There are theories prevailing that one can neutralise one's Karma by good works. Now, this is absolutely impossible, it is not the action which is taken into account with the individual, it is the motive which originally prompted it which matters, the motive is the essence or force which must be dealt with.

Then we have the theory that a person will return to earth and pay off all the Karma generated in the previous life, this again does not stand up to logic. It would be impossible to meet the Karma from the previous life in the immediate life, this would then defeat the whole purpose, it would mean that you would have no chance to enjoy the good forces you have generated in the past lives. Nature does not work in this manner, sometimes a set of Karmic forces are held back for many lives, waiting for a favourable life wherein this Essence can be worked out, at the same time Nature also gives compensating opportunities which are worked out in conjunction with the evil forces.

So, it means that when a person desires to force his evolution, much of the evil forces are released to him in this present life, therefore, he has to cope with them and transmute them into spiritual energies which will enable him to clear out the dross quickly, this prepares the Shining Cord which links him to the Divine Self, meaning that the clearer and more expanded the channel is, the easier it is for the human Soul to escape into the Divine. This must not be considered as an escape in the ordinary sense as he must return to the body to complete his labours. The individual now enjoys the faculty of being lifted up into his Real Self for a short period of time, he then becomes Illumined.

Now we come to the process whereby the Soul consciousness is able to descend fully into the human Soul. He must first have fulfilled the above process, once he has done this he must work to entice the Soul to descend into the body, for this to take place, considerably more of his Karma is brought forth, he must clear his mind completely of all knowledge, the mind must become a clear concave mirror. The subconscious mind must also be harnessed and controlled by the spriritual will. If this becomes possible, then the two Souls can act as ONE, the subconscious mind is blanketed completely and the Soul then is able to speak forth the Divine Wisdom direct.

For this to happen to you, you must not allow your thoughts to flow forth to a guru, guide or master. If you do this, then you are diverting your vital energies into an illusion. It means in effect, that you have handed over your self-reliance to something outside of yourself, and even if the Divine Soul does speak to you, you will reject it and it will retire back into its own state for this incarnation. The Master can only give you advice and encouragement, but he cannot, nor is he permitted to, stand between you and your God within.

Then we come to the next stage, and normally a man reaches this stage rarely, perhaps twelve people in 2,155 years. This stage is reached when you permit the Immortal Spirit to conquer both the Divine and human Souls whilst you are still in the mortal body. The New Testament is replete with hints and suggestions given by such god-like men as Jeshu and Paul.

In order to explain this next stage, you will have to bear with us. It is not possible for the mortal man to directly behold his Spirit, he can only do this through his Divine Soul. "He who hath seen me, hath seen the Father". We mentioned the Shining Cord previously, now this Cord or Ray descends down from the Father and reaches into the human Soul, it looks like a funnel of shining light and along this ray are three centres of energy, or balls of dazzling Light, these are the spirit, soul and human soul, each one shares in the life and consciousness which is continually flowing from the Father - the Immortal Spirit of Man.

We must remember that as God manifests as a Trinity of Modes or Aspects, so the whole man is also a Trinity. Now this trinity of spirit, soul and body is also divided into three vestures or sheaths. This means that the Spirit functions in a complete vesture of three aspects, the Soul also functions in a complete vesture of three aspects and so does the human Soul. This ray from the Father links the Spirit with itself, and the Spirit is linked with the Divine Soul by this ray, and it again links the Soul with its human counterpart.

Logically, if from your standpoint, this is correct, then there is only the Life of God pervading the universe, and man and ~~all~~ creatures are ensouled by this Life. In fact, if it were not for this emanating Life of God, the whole of the universe could not exist in its present form. This means that you are as a human consciousness actually God encased in matter, but even the energy which gives matter life is the Life of God.

So God causes seven emanations to proceed from Himself through the Holy Spirit. In other words, God breathes into space seven times and on each out-flow of His breath, He forms one of the seven regions of matter until we have the following regions or types of matter - divine, spiritual, monadic; these form the vesture of the Immortal Spirit of man. On the next three breaths He forms the second aspect of the Monadic, the Christ level and the higher mental form and on the third breath He forms the lower mental, the emotional and finally the vital and its physical counterpart.

The Jewish Kabalah shows this process as the ten Sephiroths or Emanations, as Kether (Father), Chokmah (Son), and Binah (Holy Ghost), these are the Trinity which remain within the Deity, then we have Cesed (Divine), Geburah (Spiritual), and Tiphereth (Monadic) they form the Immortal Spirit. Then come Netzach (Christos), Jesod (Mental) and Hod (Emotions), and finally, there comes Mulkuth (Pysical or body), in one system.

This shows that each Sephira or Emanation produces by emanation another Sephira, each one a little more dense material than the former. You will see again that the Life which ensouls each Sephira or Region is the same as the Life of God, so we repeat again, that the Spirit, Soul and Body of man are actually the Three Aspects of God permeating the whole of manifestation, in other words, you could say that manifestation is the result of the Divine Thought.

So you have the Divine Plan simply as this: The Spirit embodies the Will of God, the Divine Soul is the Son of God and the human Soul is the Holy Ghost or Activity of God, apparently three aspects, but in reality they are ONE. So, as Jeshu says, "If I be lifted up, I will lift all men up unto me". So when we lift up our human Soul to become one with the Christ-Soul we become one in Christ, and when the Christ-Soul is lifted up into the Immortal Spirit, we become one in and with God. When this stage has been reached then you have a Mediator of the fulfilment of the Law of Permutation.

Now this process must not be confused with "reincarnation", this only refers to the descent and ascent of the human Soul into matter, permutation is a variation of the order of the series, meaning, of course, that when the incarnation is ready, there is a variation or addition to the Soul, that of the Immortal Spirit, this means that you will become god-like men and women, you will become a God-incarnate.

You may consider us very pretentious when we say that Richard is now finalising the last stages of this process, remember, he will refute this assertion, it is we, his Divine Soul, who makes this claim on his behalf. You may say, this may be, but what proof have we to substantiate this claim? There is ample evidence scattered through our writings through him, but even though we may affirm this, it still remains an opinion to you and the onus rests with you to prove or disprove this statement.

This is true Pantheism and this has been objected to by Christians and occultists who still retain a measure of their early religious beliefs, it may be regarded as reprehensible to the majority, but this doctrine was held by the Gnostics and the ancient Mysteries. We ask this question: How can a true philosopher or occultist regard the Deity as inifinite, omnipresent, omniscient and omnipotent and eternal unless Nature is but the lowest aspect of It, and It informs every atom in Nature? Think on this and you will realise why we state that the majority of systems are half-baked and based upon the shell of Theo-Sophia and not upon the kernel.

Such a doctrine would be rejected by Spiritualists and the modern and distorted versions of Freemasonry and the Rose Cross, but it was held by Jeshu and Paul and afterwards by the Gnostics and Secret Fraternities. How can these bodies honestly lay claim to be the successors of the Gnostics and the Mysteries when they reject the very foundations of the Gnostics? It does not make sense when we bring to bear pure logic upon this subject.

Theism, on the other hand, maintains that God and man are two distinct creations, man can never become God and God never man, that man can become the image of the Father and no more. From this illogical stand we have Theopathy, when the inidividual believes that he must suffer for his god, or that he must suffer because his 'master' or 'guru' or even 'guide' directs him to do so, this becomes sheer religious and occult fanaticism. With this blasphemy you have Theodicy when these people grant the'divine right'to either their god or master to afflict the innocent, and damn those predestined, and still remain a loving or just god or master, both theologically and occultly - A Mystery.

The state of man being both God and Man was known at Theothropism, and by the Hindus as Avatar in a minor stage who was born from a woman, and the other who is parentless such as Krishna was a Vishnu. This vital doctrine states that it is the descent of the Immortal Spirit into the body of a simple mortal. Meaning of course, that one must become as a little child before one can enter the Kingdom of Heaven. Yet Heaven is already within you here and now, all you have to do is to realise it. Yet, it sounds simple when we know it intellectually, but when we experience it, it becomes another matter.

This doctrine supplies the key to the nature and enigma of the great Souls, such as Jeshu whom the Gnostics claimed did not and could not suffer physically for mankind but suffered spiritually for the whole of the human race. Hence the reasons why they were called The Docetae or Illusionists. They claim that all Souls lived under a vast delusion because they were breathed out of the Spirit into matter, they were imprisoned in the darkness of the flesh and spent their lives passing from one to another of the bodies which are under the ward of the Creative Power. It is only by the descent of the Saviour or Immortal Spirit that the human Soul can ascend back to its original home in the Spirit.

Such souls as Jacob Boehme, Paracelsus and H P Blavatsky allowed their Divine Spirits to overshadow them. In the case of the Princes of Light or the Masters, They have become fully merged with their Immortal Spirits in so far as to be able to complete Their human evolution. They have been called the 'Demi-Gods' in as far as They are conscious of the Godhead, but not fully one with IT. They have become free of the human conditions in order to become their master. Even though They have attained liberation from the world of illusion. They have only completed the first major stage in Their divine evolution as Immortal Spirits. This infers that a Master is not infallible as most students are led to believe.

To Be Continued

The Arcane Discipline

LONDON WC1

Dear Friend

This portion of our lecture reveals the very strict discipline which is imposed on the initiate preparing for the final mysteries.

He, or she, is allowed no sanctuary, "no place to lay one's head" for the overcoming of one's lower nature is the task of many incarnations.

The human aspect of man is, for a long time, in a state of negation and until the Divine aspect gains control the physical body experiences untold suffering.

In our quest for individuation we are learning to be gods - or channels for The God to be incarnate within us, that we experience the "fulness of the Godhead bodily" and experience the true purpose of our sojourn here on Earth.

Such is the great work of all initiates to be as a servant to the Cosmic Life and a mediator, or bridge of communication, for the still struggling to become their real selves.

Yours sincerely in the Light

A PHILOSOPHY OF NAUGHTING

Part 5

CLASSIFIED

The Law of Permutation - continued

It is extraordinary, those who have purported to know the facts concerning the Masters of the Wisdom did not comprehend this vital doctrine. Perhaps the reason for this ommission lies in the fact that when the knowledge of these Exalted Beings was first publicly revealed to the world through H P Blavatsky, that century was one of smugness and intellectualism. The writings of C W Leadbeater and Annie Besant are replete with incorrect statements, it would appear that what they were not permitted to see or they refused to recognise, they imagined, thus their self-created thought-forms were accepted by them as being the Truth of what they saw.

It is due to the fact that the latter Theosophical writers ignored this vital doctrine of Permutation, that their writings have been sterile and misleading. More's the pity, that most so-called 'new' systems are simply a rehash of the fundamental doctrines of Theosophy. They have accepted the shells of Theo-Sophia and rejected the nut itself. This may be due to the fact that their 'inspired' and self-appointed 'teachers' have read the writings of the psuedo-Theosophists and have ignored the real Theosophist - Helena Petrovna Blavatsky - and those who went before her.

This doctrine is reflected in the writings of Job and we find in chapter two, verse nine, these startling words: "And I am a wanderer, changing place after place and house after house". This does not refer to reincarnation - but actually refers to the Immortal Spirit, and to the descent of the Spirit, and it is by means of this Spirit that souls are set free from the circle of metempsychosis, when the Divine Soul is germinated and unfolded due to their experience gained in the mortal forms and then only when their sins (Karma) have been remitted by personal effort, thus allowing the Immortal Alone-begotten Son to descend into the regions of the Soul-tragedy to effect their deliverance.

Now we must correct a very grave misunderstanding which has been allowed to gain credence. The world 'soul' has been used to refer to the EGO of man and in other places to the astral consciousness of man, this has been due to spiritual ignorance and lack of logic. There are two souls in man, a divine and a human soul. When we say 'two' souls we do not mean that there are two separate and distinct Souls in man contending for man, they are actually two aspects of the Ego of Man, they have been called the "Twins" in mythology or the "Lovers" in classical and medieval writings. Many of our Fairy Tales show the same theme.

These two Souls have been called Christ and Jesus in Christianity, and it was at the Baptism that the Christos entered into Jesus to dwell therein, at the same time the Voice (Immortal Spirit) spoke of Jesus, the Christed One, as being the Beloved Son of the Father-Spirit. This union is again shown at the Transfiguration, when the Spirit illumined Jesus, the other two showing themselves as the Divine and human Souls of the Whole Man. We can see that up to the time of baptism, Jesus remained simply as an advanced human Soul, after the baptism he becomes the Illumined One wherein the Divine and Human dwelt in one form, but after the Transfiguration, when the Spirit descended into the mortal form, the Man showed himself as a God-Man.

It was at the Crucifixion that the Spirit and Soul left the mortal form on the cross of matter, hence the agonising cry from the cross and why the Gnostics claimed that Christ could not suffer physically. It was Jesus the mortal Soul who suffered in order to complete his human evolution. This would account for the various wonders which occurred at the supposed death of Jesus and the phenomena which occurred after his Resurrection and his final ascent into the Spirit. "I go unto my god, your god; my father and your father". There is nothing in this statement warranting the Christian claim that Christ alone was the Son of God. What Christ really meant was that all men are potentially gods, but in a latent state of Being. They were sleeping in the tomb of flesh and it is the work of the Christos-Soul to awaken the 'dead' at the last trump, meaning, of course, in the light of the above, when the human Soul has gained the last victory over the Ruler of the Body.

Thus He says: "Except a man be born of water (soul) and of the spirit (fire) he cannot enter the kingdom of heaven; that which is born of the flesh is flesh". This can only be explained by the Gnosis and is explained by the gnosis in this wise: He (soul) was himself in the Jordan (the stream of the Deity), and after this purification in the waters of life he became clothed with a spiritual body, a copy or reflection of his virgin-made physical body; so that when the god of the body condemned his own physical body to death, i.e. meaning the four-fold constitution of the cross of the personality, the Soul body, nourished by the virgin body, the Soul vesture, he might strip off the physical body, and nail it to the 'tree', and then put on his new spiritual body of perfection instead of another body of flesh.

In the above you have the full meaning of the the Buddhist doctrine of the "Incarnations of the Buddha" in the Dhalie Lama and Techu Lama. It also explains the vague statement of Jesus when he says; "And if you will receive it, this is Elias that was for to come; he that hath ears to hear, let him hear. Ye do likewise". Elias here refers to the Immortal Spirit of the prophet and not to his Immortal Soul.

After each incarnation, the Soul dissolves its personality and has to assume and form a new body when it next incarnates and so on. This is reincarnation. The idea of the personality is withdrawn into the Soul after each incarnation to be blended into the Soul Vesture. When a man reaches union with the soul, the Soul is able to crystallise any of these Ideas and project them into its present personality and the human consciousness will assume the characteristics of this idea and relate all the inherent qualities through the present body.

For instance, if a Soul incarnated as Valentinius of the 2nd Century, the whole of this life would be withdrawn or stored in the Soul memory as a complete 'ideation' of that life. The Soul now returns to incarnation some 1700 years later and, if required, could cause its present personality to assume all the characteristics of Valentinius and a clairvoyant would see the vital vesture change and be remoulded into the likeness of the former for a short period of time. Here we have another misunderstanding of H P Blavatsky, Olcott was under the impression that it was a 'master' who used the mortal body of HPB, whilst writing "Isis Unveiled" and "The Secret Doctrine", this was due to his pre-conceived ideas and interest in phenomena. In actual fact, it was her Soul projecting the crystallised 'ideas' into the present form of HPB.

If our students of the Pleroma are astute enough they will notice that there are certain subtle changes in the style of writing in our literature and in the manner of our lecturing, these variations or permutations are due to our ability to project and crystallise some of our ideas (the essence of previous lives) into the human consciousness of Richard. Now when we come to the overshadowing or descent of the Immortal Spirit, the same process occurs. Instead of the Ideations of the Soul, we have the Ideations of the Spirit manifesting in the mortal body, the memory of the Deity flows forth into the outer world by means of this enlarged link made between the Spirit and the human Soul of Man.

So we would become a Mediator, a god on earth, must have reached a stage in his human evolution which allows the Immortal Spirit to shed Its radiance upon the human being as a God - Microcosmos of the Macrocosmos, he becomes consciously part and parcel of the Unknown God, of which the Immortal Spirit is a direct emanation. This means in effect that the man possesses all the attributes of his Parent Source, and is granted omnipotence and omniscience. The human man is endowed with these faculties, but yet unable to manifest them while in the mortal body. Normally during the incarnation they are obscured in most men, they are veiled and limited by the capabilities of the physical nature.

To understand this question, the following must be clearly known: since the Spirit, Soul and human Soul are actually one and the same Life of God, they posses all the powers of the Deity here and now, although these powers are stultified by the conditions of the body, but once a man honestly desires to become the Image of his Father and begins to prepare the personality for this descent or awakening of these powers, they begin to function, slowly at first, but as more and more effort is expended on self-labour, these powers begin to show themselves, first as all kinds of internal and external phenomena, then the emotional vesture becomes more and more susceptible to the influences of this region and finally the mind becomes fired with new mental energy. It must be clearly understood that all these forms of phenomena are just the outward and visible signs of an inner and invisible awakening.

Most students seem to be caught up in this phenomena and are under the impression that unless they experience some form of it they are making no progress. This means that they become glamourised by this phenomena and will refuse to take the next logical step. But once realising that phenomena is but the outward and visible sign of an inward and invisible progress, they begin to ignore it and leave all forms of phenomena strictly alone. They soon come to realise that these are really illusory and serve no real purpose, then they direct the whole of their energies towards the Inner Self and seek to become one with it and draw it down into the human consciousness.

Even when you have effected this union between the Divine and human Souls, the labour must continue and you must seek union with the Spirit and the blended divine and human Souls and drown, as it were, the powers of the Immortal Spirit in the body.

So the man who becomes divinely-inhabited may tower far above his brothers, evince a god-like wisdom, whilst the rest of the brothers around him are but overshadowed by their Divine Self. However, in spite of the fact that the Divine Self cannot make himself fully known, every chance is given to them to become immortal hereafter, with no other security than their personal efforts to win the Kingdom of Heaven, but the man so chosen has already become an immortal being while yet still in the body.

The man so blessed secures dominion over all the works of creation by employing the Power of NAME. There is an old belief that each perfection of man is the incarnation of the Supreme Soul and for ever the Invisible God. The average man is a latent incarnation of the Supreme Soul, but it is only after completing the requirements of the ARCANE DISCIPLINE that man will become a conscious incarnation of the Supreme. Many of the God-Men were and are complete men, gods on earth, for their gods or spirits have descended into their hallowed tabernacles, the purified physical bodies.

Now, perhaps you will see the reason why we are constantly stressing the moral and practical aspects of this teaching instead of concentrating upon the actual knowledge of the things that are. The acquirement of knowledge is absolutely useless unless it is accompanied by true morality, knowledge grants you the working theory of the Path to Attainment, but the moral teachings act as a means of achieving the Path. When we stress to you the various pitfalls which lie in wait for the student we have a very definite reason for this. Richard has already travelled this part to US, and he was guilty of the very things he writes about and thus held himself back from attainment, but now that he has attained the first stage, he can see where he failed and he is determined that those who are entrusted to his care will not fall into sin as he did.

Whether you accept the fact that you may be guilty of these sins lies with you, most people will refuse to accept the possibility that they are guilty of sinning of falling short of the glory of the Real Self, and when they read his strictures, they take offence and retire from him. Believe us when we say, Richard will not lose any sleep if you do retire from the Pleroma. He knows that when one drops out another will take his place, this must always be the case. Most people resent being told the truth about themselves,they cannot face the possibility that they may be wrong and he right, their pride stands in the way.

It boils down to this fact; Richard has attained what you desire to attain, he has learnt the lessons which you are learning now, he has realised his Divinity and you are hoping to realise this. Surely logic should make you realise that if Richard has attained, then you can do likewise, but if you will only accept that which you want to know and reject that which you should know, then do not blame him for your failures. Most people will only accept a set of ideas if they fall in with their pre-conceived notions, in spite of the fact that these notions have been proven wrong. In this case a man becomes his own worst enemy and hold himself back from realising the truth of Himself.

Human nature was the same in the past as it is now, the psuedo-leaders and teachers of most occult groups are so confident of their knowledge over their followers, the believers must be content with the blind acceptance of the claims of these leaders, whereas, there are one or two societies which actually have for their leader one of these god-like men and those who come into contact with such men, find them quite the reverse of their pre-conceived ideas of what a god-man could be. You will find such men living very simply and they give no indication of their godship, they are devoid of any pretence and pretentious claims as to their natural powers and knowledge. Outwardly, they give no indication of their inner powers, it is only when they will permit a trusted person to see behind the facade that you will realise who and what they are, in fact, it may be possible that one of your close friends is such a one. They live a normal life, in the midst of the world. We know of three such men and it was only when they began to trust Richard did they reveal themselves as men of great spirituality.

We often wonder why so many people have failed to grasp the deeper implications of the Pleroma, perhaps what they offer is considered to be beyond the normal individual or too high for them. You may be staggered by the vastness of the system presented to you, you may either consider it to be a new-fangled system created to ensnare you into joining, or perhaps it may be another 'carrot' to lure you on again.

We caused to be issued a pamphlet entitled "Has Life Conquered You", even some of our members took an objection to this, methinks they objected without bothering to understand its real meaning. Perhaps we had better explain the reason for this apparent mirage. We are all here in the world of flesh, which we call 'life', in fact it is the life of the animal world, and we all know that the material world can conquer us completely and if we fall for it, it will create a hell upon earth for us. It is the divine Soul which is the only Thing which can rescue us from the gloom of this world, which the ancients and Gnostics called DEATH.

Every one of us who still has to live in this world needs some kind of 'carrot' to egg us on to do something. A man will only work when he is sure of getting carrot-money, a man will only believe in a god if he is sure of securing the carrot-salvation, a man makes sure that he can win his beloved if he presents to her carrot-gifts, etc. You will see that we all need a carrot to egg us on, but where the carrot becomes a snare when the intention of the carrot is for evil purposes. Such as when a politician makes certain promises to you in order to secure his election knowing that he cannot fulfil them, these false promises are the carrots held out for an unworthy motive.

Therefore, it is very unwise to judge a thing or person by the world of appearances, one must stop and think about it very carefully and not attribute to a perfectly correct thing improper motives. This maybe is one of the reasons why so many people have failed to grasp the wonderful conception which the Pleroma presents to them. Yet they will allow themselves to fall for such blatant carrot-snares as this one: "What Great Powers Do These Men Possess?", it infers that if you join the order, these powers will be given to you. You could fall for this one, many have, but if you realise that these powers are already within you here and now, waiting to be brought into manifestation, you will see that the above is a barefaced lie. There are so many of these barefaced lies being accepted as being true, it is not to be wondered at that people have lost the art of pure reason.

As a well-known American novelist wrote: "..our national trait is to believe everything that's dished out to us and then, when the gilt paint wears off the gold brick, to blame everyone except ourselves .. the only way you can keep from swallowing the stuff that is handed out today, couched in the semblance of irrefutable logic, is to read the fallacies of yesterday, couched in the same irrefuable logic .. and no one stops to ask questions; they simply start dancing along behind the Pied Piper" (Erle Stanley Gardner). This complaint is world-wide.

Every student who enters into spiritual endeavour desires to attain the Goal of Life, but they lack the required development of the faculty of discrimination to sort out the real from the false and as a consequence miss many wonderful opportunities which are placed in their way. The Pleroma is the only public body propounding the vital secrets of the Gnosis and the Esoteric Doctrine of the Ages in a form which can be applied by the modern seeker. The whole of history stands as a living witness to the veracity of our teachings, so many of the God-like Men have reiterated this self-same system of attainment and by their lives stand witness to posterity to the correctness of this system.

To Be Continued

Disciplina Arcani

LONDON WC1

Dear Friend

The enclosed lecture reiterates the teaching that the Inner Gnosis is as old as man himself.

Truth can be seen from different angles and the great teachers - especially Jesus, two thousand years ago - merely gave us a new look at old principles. What is Genuinely True, as opposed to what is assumed to be true, can never change. The way to understanding That Truth cannot really change either. All the Teachers can do is to interpret the rules and help us to cast off all human illusions about life and seek sincerely and honestly to see it for ourselves. We each are responsible for our own lives as Jesus said, "Work out your own salvation". He never said that he could save us by his death on the cross - the Church invented that.

Elaborate rituals and long meditations do little for us if we do not maintain a watch on our attitudes and at least try to free ourselves from our "hang-ups" and to become mature people. The fact is that until our minds are free from human suppositions we cannot, under any circumstances, receive illumination of the Soul. The very presence of cluttered ideas keeps the inner peace away.

Each day as we work upon ourselves the nearer we get to a clearer sight of Truth. May you be well blessed in this glorious task.

With all blessings
Yours sincerely in the light

In order to avoid the confusion of formulating a new nomenclature for the purposes of propounding this ancient teaching, we have used the Christian Gnosis. We have chosen this medium simply because most Western seekers have at some time or other been members of one of the Christian Churches, so, naturally, they are familiar with the nomenclature as given. We also know from history that the Christian religion is derived from the GNOSIS and that in turn owes its existence to the Sacred Mysteries of the ancient world, and even beyond these.

By using the Gnosis one will see that the New Testament is actually the story of man and his efforts to become ONE with his Divine Soul, as we have endeavoured to show. The New Testament, as the life and history of a man in time cannot be accepted owing to the many contradictions and allusions to the main doctrines which are to be found in the older religions. Gnosticism is simply a Western form of Raja Yoga of India, most of the Sayings and Doings of Jesus have their prototype in the lives of Christna and Buddha, many of his sayings are to be found in Pythagoras and Plato, the mystical teachings of Jesus are to be found in the Egyptian Book of the Dead. So the gnosis is a blending of all the main doctrines of the former, yet presented in a new form and from this system emerged Christianity. St. Augustine says: "What is nowadays called the Christian religion was in existence among the ancient people, and has continually existed from the very origin of the human race, until Christ Himself having appeared, they began to designate as 'Christian' the true religion which which had hitherto been in existence."

The pandering to the desire of the Western mind for something 'new' has been the means of spreading confusion and conflict amongst seekers but if these seekers who are ever seeking something new would use their logical mind, they would soon discover that they have received nothing new in essence. What they have received are human conceptions born out of a very fertile imagination. Admittedly they work for a while and then stop, the seekers that gather up their skirts and go-a-wandering again until they find yet another 'bargain' in the same manner as the housewife who is always on the lookout for new contraptions to make her work easier. In the main, however, the new knick-knacks are simply a variation of the old.

One has only to read the 'brochures' which are sent out with an analytical eye, and one will see that they make promises to you but they, the writers, have not fulfilled what they claim. This alone should make you think. But do people really think for themselves? Surely what they accept as 'thinking' is a feeling. To feel that a thing is right cannot be accepted as Truth but when you know a thing you experience it, otherwise by feeling a thing is right you are not sure and this feeling lays you wide open to be taken for a ride.

The Pleroma has received full authority and this is proven by its consistent adherence to the Arcane Discipline and the Gnosis. Try, however, to tell people this simple fact and they will not believe you, more so when they find that you are teaching a very simple and straightforward doctrine and system. O what fools these mortals be! Now, there is another thing which stops people from acknowledging the truth when it is presented to them. They are so accustomed to being told that if they join such and such a society they will 'receive' something or that they will progress quickly, now this is a complete deception being put upon them. Take for instance, when you plant a small tree in the ground, you do not see it grow, but all the time it is continually growing, so it is with yourself. To think that you can see progress in yourself is another of the illusions of this world and yet you fall for this mirage. The more you bring your logic to bear on these things, you will see how much you have allowed yourselves to become glamourised by the ever-changing scenes and conditions of this world of yours.

Finally, we have been allowed to give you one of the most vital of all esoteric doctrines and we doubt if but a handful will really grasp the magnitude of the vista presented to you. Many of you may allow your pre-conceived notions to cause you to deny this fact, others may consider it far too high a teaching for them and still others may say that it is too simple to be true. TRUTH IS ALWAYS SIMPLE. It is you who have clothed it in mystique, you who have surrounded it with taboos. There are also those people, still glamourised by their religious training, who consider it a blasphemy to place oneself on the same footing as God.

The fact that we follow the ARCANE DISCIPLINE which has never changed in substance or procedure from century to century, should above all arrest your attention and cause you to make your own investigations into this society called the Pleroma. Did not Jesus say: "I have come to give you nothing new"? Surely this becomes clear, there is nothing new under the sun and each teacher, if he or she has the authority, can only reiterate the Ageless Divine Wisdom.

Think on these things and if you have the inner perception to see that the Pleroma is the right path, then you will either continue and if you have come newly to it, you will join it. If, on the other hand, you lack the required development, then you will pass this by and consider it just "another one of those doubtful societies" one meets up with every day of their life.

Jeshu of previous fame, being as he was a god-man walking the earth, one who had fulfilled the LAW OF PERMUTATION says, concerning the Gnosis or Arcane Discipline; "Till heaven and earth pass, not one iota shall in no wise pass from the Law, till all be fulfilled". The Law must be fulfilled in the whole of Man becoming a GOD-MAN on earth.

To understand this Philosophy of Naughting one must of necessity stop thinking in mental concepts, those pictures which the mind creates when one thinks of a thing, we must cause the senses to remain still and passive. By this means the reason is also silenced, then in the stillness of the self-image, the Voice of the Soul-Self can impress the brain cells with its Power.

We must also understand that it is ourself who conditions the boundaries of our objective mind by clothing our thoughts with mental force-matter in the dimensional time-sequence of the mental vesture. We all allow ourselves to be conditioned by our constant programming of our human computer or "self-image" as it is known in Psycho-Cybernetics. In Mystical Experience this self-image is shown as the inverted reflection of the Abstract Self within molecular matter.

In the new Psychological understanding of the human personality, this "self-image" is the key to the human personality and behaviour. Change this self-image and we change the whole of the personality - which includes the physical form, the emotional nature and the mental outlook - for it is this image which sets the limits of human achievement. If we ponder over this scientific premise, we will immediately see that the formation of this self-image is due to our action of mentally programming our human computer with mental concepts, and according to the nature of our mental outlook, so we set the boundaries of our knowledge and experience.

Thus, when we speak of the innate "Success Mechanism" as propounded by Cybernetics, we are referring to the Divine Soul of the Mystic. In both sciences, it is the Creative Mechanism within our very nature which operates this Success Mechanism and spurs us on to achievement of life. This Success Mechanism is impersonal and abstract in nature, it cannot be registered by the senses or understood by the reason. This Inner Drive will work automatically to achieve the goals of success and happiness, so long as we learn to work with this mechanism and refuse to clog up the mind with conceptional images which are derived from our imperfect senses which gives a faulty reason, or bring unhappiness and failure if we do not.

As we have stated before: with the ability to control the three-fold faculties of the self-image comes the crushing realisation that, except within the fleeting light-waves which flit through the grey cells of the brain, the past is nothing, the present is non-important and the future does not exist. In this realisation of our personal self-image we become aware that the past limits our awareness of the present, the present has no real permanent existence for us except by that which is reflected by the past, or by the nature of the deposits with which we have programmed our human computer or self-image, and we realise that the future is still an illusion and unborn in time and space and that above all, it is of no importance to the present.

In the United States the science of psychology has taken a very definite and most startling turn for the better. The previous interpretation of this science as being simply the "Science of Behaviour" has become outmoded with the discovery of the "self-image" which is the blue-print or mind picture of ourselves. It has now been scientifically proven that when we change this image and act upon it just as if it were true, we permit the Success Mechanism from the Soul to change our lives. In Mysticism, of the Philosophy of Naughting, this same premise is held and is identical to that now taught by Cybernetics except that the Science of Mysticism is not merely to be read about, but it is to be experienced in our daily life as a fact in the present.

It will now be seen that the acquiring of knowledge or sensual information in the manner of the intellectual is in itself passive, whereas the way of the Mystic and Adept is by experiencing the truth from within which is the active way of success. This now reveals the real and only reason why the members of the Pleroma and the Disciplina Arcani have failed to achieve Illumination of the self-image of the personality. It is only when the written word is treated as a means to understand the way in which the image can be lightened with the Light of the Soul, and not as the way itself, that a person can achieve the above. All through the Monographs of the Pleroma, some 108 Lessons, this instruction has been clearly given, perhaps not in the same picture-language as given in this Philosophy, but nevertheless it is essentially the same teaching.

The Science of Psycho-Cybernetics became possible through the work of the physicists and mathematicians, as they rightly claim that any new step in human knowledge applicable to any science is more likely to come from outside of the science in question. "Pasteur was not a medical doctor. The Wright Brothers were not aeronautical engineers but bicycle mechanics. Einstein, properly speaking, was not a physicist but a mathematician. Yet his findings completely turned upside down all the pet theories in physics. Madame Curie was not an M.D., but a physicist, yet she made important contributions to medical science." If we follow this line of reasoning, we find Cybernetics being derived from plastic surgery and possibly Mysticism will gain much help from science, and science from Mysticism.

Therefore, to seek the correct understanding of Mysticism and its Philosophy of Naughting, we must seek its solution outside the common understanding of what is called Mysticism, and Psycho-Cybernetics helps to understand ourselves as a personality, whereas Mysticism helps us to understand ourselves as a Whole. So in order to understand Mysticism and to use it in your life, we must know something of the mechanism it employs to achieve its goal, and toward this end we can see the need for the teachings of the Pleroma and the technology of the Disciplina Arcani, they combine to teach and show us how this Success Mechanism can work for us.

In the Mystic Philosophy of Naughting, which is the All, can be found the World of Design, it is the totality of Design in Essence, and this world of ideas has been shown by all the great mathematicians to be a world of beauty and they have described it as such. However, not only have the mathematicians stated this, but so have the great Mystics and Adepts of all ages and climes. The modern educational systems refuse to show us how to look for and contact the abstract world of ideas, they merely teach us how to memorise what others have recorded from that world, records, which, after all, have been coloured by their limitations, prejudices and emotional blind-spots of the recorders. They simply tell us what to look up and where to find it in the book of formulas which does not contain the Truth but only the reflections of truth.

Educators, teachers, and others responsible for education look upon the mind of man as a vacuum into which must be crammed the mind-pictures of the results of previous thinking, and it is seldom realised that all truth had to originally come out of the mind of someone. All great abstract truths are mathematical truths and theorems, all of men's progress and all real science is based on such abstract truths, and these truths are derived from the minds of men.

Let us be frank, the Ultimate Truth exists in an abstract form, and were it not possible for us to contact this Truth, there would be no known mathematical theorems and no science today. It is obvious that without these theorems, there could be no science of any description, thus the only true science is mathematics. The other sciences are merely a matter of classifying things according to some pre-determined arrangement of the conceptional ideas gained through the imperfection of our human senses. Whereas the mathematical truths are discovered when they come into the mind of someone, the history of scientific discovery shows that the scientists and mathematicians often awaken out of sleep with some great truth or problem in their minds, or they may dream a mathematical theorem.

These great truths appear to be related to them in a dream, when the senses and the reason are in a state of quiesence. It also appears that this action of programming intellectual material into the brain is only effective if it is indelibly impressed on the memory cells of the subconscious mind rather than superficially "remembered" by the conscious mind. In the abstract world there is no time or space, this can only be possible when there is change, and nothing ever changes in the Abstract. Thus, any mathematical theorem is the same today as it was in the time of Euclid and Pythagoras and from the beginning of the Mystery Schools.

This means that in the abstract World we have the prototype of all that which will happen in the world for the future, and the images which show the trail of the past to the present. We can contact this world only through ourselves and not by means of any of the mathematics devised which man uses in the external world, even though such devices are based upon the projected images derived from the Abstract World. Thus, when you follow the dictates of society and its intellectual images, you will have little chance of contacting the Abstract.

To be concluded

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 81-84

LIBER # 84 A GOOD NIGHT'S SLEEP!

Personal & Confidential EIGHTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

Disciplina Arcani

LONDON WC1

Dear Friend

This is the last part of the series A Philosophy of Naughting and we trust that you have found much food for thought in studying the teaching in depth.

We can never attain the true Gnosis through a mere reading of the teaching. It has to be applied to every department of our life - in waking and in sleeping.

It is only the mind that is free from the man-made illusions of this world which can come into a complete understanding of the Christ-Self within and realise that we are all at one and also at one with the great Boddhisattvas of the east. There is only one Truth and only one Way in Reality, and that is the way we have pointed out to you.

By giving up our own speculations and opinions about life as we believe it to be we can come into real knowledge by letting it reveal itself within us.

With all blessings
Yours sincerely in the Light

A PHILOSOPHY OF NAUGHTING
Part 7

CLASSIFIED

---ooOoo---

We can contact the abstract Self, the reservoir of all the prototypes of human existence, past, present and future as a Continuum, so long as we can remain alone, completely independent of the intellectual world and immune to what others may think about anything. Intellectualism belongs to the emotional world and thus the emotions cut us off from the abstract and prevent us from using our intelligent faculties - the faculties of the Soul, who reside ever in the Abstract.

Thus, the Laws which govern the universe of physical matter are abstract laws, which our physical obeys blindly. Thus, we can safely say that no scientist has ever discovered or invented anything yet - all that he has done is to tap the resources of the Abstract World and through his own inner nature, projected the mathematical principles into the human brain and then acted upon them. It is obvious, therefore, that to make contact with the Abstract we must leave emotional-intellectualism and think with the higher brain cells of man, for only then can we begin to think as a Continuum.

We have been asked what place 'religion' has to play in the scheme of things, when there are other divisions of science which apparently can cater for the needs of the people in a far better manner. To ask this question shows that the questioner has not studied the foundations of 'religion', but only the dogmas and creeds of what is called religion. H Fielding states the position of true religion fully, and we feel that there is no scientist living today who can better answer this pertinent question: "What you call religion I call only a reasoning about religion. The dogmas and creeds are not religion (perhaps this is what the intellectual calls religion). They are summaries of the reasons that men give to explain those facts of life which are religion, just as philosophies are summaries of the theories men make to explain other facts of life. Both creeds and philosophies come from the reason. They are speculations, not facts. They are pessimistic terms of the brain."

And he is right, creeds and dogmas, philosophic and psychological systems stem from the reason, which derives its power of action from our imperfect senses. Religion is a series of facts derived from the abstract World, and with a candid analytical research we find that true religion tells us more of the history of the world than even our histories can. The modern intellect, born from the emotional nature, is more apt to belittle and materialise religion than to expound it. It has been stated that psychology can do the work which religion does, but this is not quite correct; psychology and its theories change with every generation, wheresas religion never changes since it is the mirror of the Abstract World in the material world. Can our scientists deny this fundamental empirical fact? The answer is no!

The intellect of man has invented the creeds and dogmas, along with the philosophical thesis and the various types of psychological knowledge, within the limitations of the senses and the reason. However, the primitive conceptions of man and the world which are those of religion always survive from one age to another, in spite of the many attempts to either destroy or alter a religious system. The fundamental tenets of religion cannot be destroyed. For instance, the method of dealing with the mind of man in those remote ages was given under the guise of religion, and if we candidly analyse the psychological systems in vogue today, we will find that the ancient psychologists have been their precursors. The fundamental truths of life never change in their essence, however, their form and method of presentation may change with the enlightenment of humanity.

We are apt to grant to the majority of humanity intellectual powers which they do not possess, and in spite of the claims of psychologists that the evaluation of a person's IQ, can indicate various levels of ability, they frequently ignore the findings of their own science. This is understandable for the intellectual becomes impatient with those who appear not to comprehend him. What he fails to realise is that mankind evolves very slowly and the number of people today who can intellectually think for themselves is very small. Therefore, the same teachings presented in a 'religious form' appeal to the majority of mankind, bearing in mind that when the day arrives that the majority of mankind become intellectuals, there will be those who can think by intelligence, and they in turn will fail to appreciate the need for the intellectual systems of knowledge.

Even today, when we speak of religion, mysticism, and allied sciences, the intellectual sneers at these conceptions. On the other hand, however, the mathematicians and scientists are moving closer and closer to the acceptance of these apparently out-moded conceptions, and we thus have the conflict between the emotional-intellectuals and the mathematicians, who can and do prove the Abstract Laws by mathematical formulae. We can, therefore, now leave the intellectual to wallow in his sensory-intellectual conceptions, and press on to the real knowledge of the Naughting process.

Mankind has ever been told that if he prays for Divine or Abstact Guidance he will get it, but today, in the so-called age of communication, the intellectual does not believe that this can be done. He will never try it as he considers that it is beneath his intellectual status, and thus will never tap the Abstract World. You can never be a man of intelligence until you toss all intellectual orthodoxy and all of its superstitions out of the window. We must bear this startling fact in mind and we challenge any intellectual to disprove it.

The mathematician will tell you this: much of what is taught as science is pure superstition, and a considerable amount of astronomical knowledge is also superstition, this can also apply to a large part of psychology and religion. We will meet true science and the true religion as ONE and the same thing in the mathematical world. The Mystic refers to the Abstract World of Ideation as the Great Naught, a term which was used also by Plato and Pythagoras. It may surprise you to realise that were we to eliminate the influence of the philosophies of Plato, Aristotle and Pythagoras from the curriculae of our universities they would be left with very little to teach!

It is really amazing that when a new concept is presented to students they seem to twist it into a dogma, without first ascertaining the true meaning and the purpose of the expounder. They invariable place their own interpretations upon the words of the expounder, and this is precisely how our religious, scientific, psychological, and occult dogmas are formed. In the main, a dogma is nearly always devoid of a logical foundation, it is the result of our interpretation which we have in our mind, and the constant thinking upon it permits this mental-image to become tangible and objective in the mind. We then become a mental slave to this phantom thought and any attempt to dislodge it meets with a fierce reaction from the artificial image to which we have granted a semi-conscious life.

It has always been a mystery why people, listening to an expounder of any knowledge, never seem to hear the whole of the exposition, but only that which is acceptable to them and which verifies their own theories upon the subject in question, and in fact they usually overlook the vital parts of the discussion. The number of people who can actually reason logically is very small, since the majority of people accept and think through the emotional nature. All truth is relative, and it is the how of our perceptions, and becomes the perception of the relation and proportion of things, but there has always been a narrow (emotional) and a wider perception (reason) for this relativity, this sense of appearance. Most people accept the ever-changing appearances of reality and never question why there is this ever-changing reality in the world. Again most people accept a premise as being true by means of their imperfect sensual nature which in turn falsifies our reasoning abilities which are born from the time-sequence of space, time and duration process of our thinking.

The absolute or Abstract Truth would be the perception of a thing in all its relations and proportions; which sensual perception of the shadow or the appearance, paradoxically, would take it out of all relation and perception to the Thing itself. We, on the whole, judge things and life from the world of appearances and are unable to perceive the thing from all angles and its dimensions, since this would take us beyond the intellectual sensory perceptions of the world of phenomena, whereas our reason takes heed of the phenomenal world as a whole, with all its relations and proportions in all its dimensions of time and space - the reason, if developed, should deal with the Continuum or that of the fundamental Reality sphere of the Naught.

The Absolute Truth of the Naught cannot be perceived by the human mind or intellect, it can only be comprehended by the Intelligence alone, which is the Great Naught operating in and through the differentiated part of the Naught - being what we call a Man - can only register the Continuum of the Whole through a process of a time-sequence which allows him to register the outside world in a series of dots and dashes being received by the brain via the incomplete senses. Now, if we enter into a certain discipline which enables us to speed up the sequence of these dots and dashes of light, we would then perceive the many differentiated things and people as a One-Thing or One-Man. This is actually the position of an Illuminated Mystic.

For the Mystic perceives all the relations and proportions of the Naught as being experience within his own nature and, this being so, can perceive the Whole as a Continuum. He does this by speeding up the time-sequence of the space-time until his vision no longer registers the sequence of differentiated dots and dashes of light, but sees all the differentiated parts of the Whole as undifferentiated Life. In this state all the faculties of the five senses are acting as one, the reasoning faculty of the brain now perceives everything as a Continuum.

It is obvious that so long as we are attached to this dot-dash time-sequence our perception and understanding of a thing can only be registered in a series of time-frames of light-waves, in the same manner as a film is flashed on to the screen. By this means of the slowing down of the time-sequence, we allow ourselves to become attached to certain disjointed time-frames which appeal to the results of our imperfect senses, and we reject the intervening time-frames, which would normally grant us a perception of an apparent continuum. In other words, we become attached to only a part of the continuum and allow this disjointed perception of Reality to become tangible and objective in our mind, which, of course, crowds out any possible perception of the other rejected parts of the Whole sequence.

Now, this is exactly what the intellectual of all shades does, he is content to accept this disjointed reception of the brain these light-frames at the expense of the whole series of light-frames, because he can only register or "see" a part of the Whole. Thus, owing to the incomplete nature of his senses, he can only register these light-frames which are akin to the memories of previous light-frames which he has programmed into his human-computer mind, and it is by the reception of these differentiated light-frames which contain the images of the past that he conditions his present perception of truth.

This means that we have two computers within our make-up - the eternal Soul computer which has been programmed with the essence of our many incarnations in human bodies and which constitutes what could be termed the "Memory of Nature". Into this the Adept or Illuminee is able to put questions to which this computer is forced to give the right answers. Within this Soul computer are what is known as the "archaic records". These are the archives of events which are never written outside the human memory but lodged within this computer in their pure Essence. These are preserved by constant transmission from brain to brain through countless aeons with more accuracy than any written records. Our lives are countless, but the soul or spirit (cosmic computer) that animates us through these myriads of existences is ever the same; and though 'the book and volume' of the physical brain may forget events within the scope of one human life, the bulk of the collective recollections can never desert the Divine Computer within us. The whispers coming from this computer may be too high for our registration, the sound of its memory-bank may be too far off in dimension to be perceived by our untrained physical senses; yet the essence of events that were, just as the essence of events which are to come, is within its perceptive powers of recall, and they are ever present before it's minds' eye.

The human-computer is actually a part of this Soul-computer and is located within the human brain. If we are able to programme this computer with the correct deposits through this present life - through our knowledge and experience reflecting the Essence located with the Soul-computer - they react upon each other. When considereing this, we must bear in mind that the time-sequence of the Soul is a continuum and that the time-sequence of our brain consists of time and space registered by a series of dots and dashes printed the events of this life in replica. So, for us to allow the Essence of the Soul to become clothed in tangible matter to become objectified in our human mind, we must speed up this time-sequence of ours so that the disciplined and perfected senses can perceive things as a continuum, then the Essence of the Soul can be reflected in the brain and we have Plato's Reminiscence.

Now we must treat this personality of ours as we would treat an external physical machine, of which we, as the human Soul, are the Operator. This human machine has been given to us to perfect and to permit its latent qualities, abilities and character to be drawn out of its latency into activity. Once this machine has reached the maximum of its efficiency, the Soul can handle it with equal efficiency. But, so long as we refuse to take note of the importance of our human machine and to perfect it, we can in no wise hope to be able to use it to its fullest capacity.

This you, the human Soul, is in reality a slightly condensed form of the Divine, it is the bridge between the life of the body-machine and the Essence of the Soul, which also acts as a slightly condensed form of the spirit, which in its turn acts in the same manner for the Man-God, the crystallisation of the Naught in dimensional time. This Man-God acts also in the same manner to the God-Man, or the Great Naught, through which the Man-God and its replicas formed in the various dimensions of the Continuum, conveys to the human Soul all of its memory. The Naught is the complete cosmic computer composed of seven smaller rolls of programmed tapes corresponding to the memories of each dimensional matter, we are naturally not referring to physical rolls of programmed tape, but to the programmed tape of the brain, or in other words - memory.

By a form of discipline we are enabled to ask our human computer questions concerning the nature of the emotional tape, if we ask the correct questions this programmed emotional tape will respond to the human by giving the right answers. This is what we term 'psychicism', when the Essence of the emotional is able to affect the material consciousness, but if we are able to discipline the emotional body to obtain the right answers from the mental body, we have 'intuition'. To push this analogy still further; if the aligned and perfected human, emotional, and mental tapes of the personality are attuned to the Soul, and we know the right questions to give it, the Soul will then give us the right answers, then we have 'illumination', when the personality can receive from the Soul a continuum of light-frames and the brain can perceive them.

So long as we treat Spirit, Soul and human Soul as separate light-frames through which the Light of the Great Naught can shine into the various dimensional worlds, we will never achieve the alignment of these apparent concepts. But, the moment we can change our "self-image" from the concept that we are a human body into the self-image that we are God functioning in a body, we eradicate our attachments to these concepts and behold ourselves as the Great Naught.

Disciplina Arcani

LONDON WC1

Dear Friend

Love is the name of the First Cause according to the great teachers and the only way to understand or externalise Love is to align our human natures with It before It will take abode in our hearts

Love cannot be present with an unrequited and self-seeking human nature and many who claim to be expressing Divine Love (Agape) are deceiving themselves. The Test of Love is revealed in one's pure life - in the thoughts and actions towards others. Love cannot be deceived.

Therefore, then, since Divine Love is the greatest power operating in our Cosmos all human efforts to gain power for themselves are futile. It is in the disciple's own interest to align him or her self with this Love that they eventually become One with It and fulfil their true purpose here.

With all blessings in your quest for Love
Yours sincerely

WHAT IS LOVE ?

CLASSIFIED

The Root of the Disciplina Arcani is LOVE itself and this Love is God Himself. We can say with the great Mystics and Seers of all ages that Love is the Power of God within all human beings. This Power is not kind or sentimental in a human way, it is like a fire which sweeps away all counterfeits, whether they be knowledge, societies or orders, or any kind of dishonesty or hypocrites which we find in the spiritual movement. It tears aside the clever masks and facades and reveals the Truth to the student who has the strength to recognise the truth when he sees it.

Therefore, for a person to have and be Love, he must become one with Love, the Father within his own innermost nature. Before any man claims to have and believe in Love, then let him first manifest in his own life the following qualities to the letter: Love is long suffering, Love does not make a vain display of itself, and does not boast. It does not have jealousy towards another, nor does it spread lies about others. Love does not behave itself unseemly, nor does it seek its own at the expense of another. Love does not rejoice over the iniquities of others, even if they be true, but always rejoices in the truth within any man. Love bears all things, it believes all things that are true, and Love endures all manners of crucifixions and attacks made by those who fear the Truth. Love never fails the man who knows and obeys its commands, Love will always protect a man who lives the Life of Love. Love, above all things, does not envy anybody, nor does it show jealousy and will not believe lies and smears by those who have not the manhood to come out into the open.

To those who may claim that others may not have Love in their hearts; let them take heed, those who make this claim, are the very ones who lack true Love in their own hearts. Without Love within men's hearts they could not live, they would remain mere animals. But perhaps the reason these people cannot see Love within the heart of another is the fact that their own Love-Power has been smothered over by the external dogmas and pre-conceived notions, which will always cause a person to hate and detest those whose job it is to reveal the corruption and hardness of heart which is to be found within most of the pseudo-students of the Light.

We have been accused of not having Love in our heart, but surely these people must be stark blind, this accusation can be disproved by the very fact that we tolerate the members who seek to get our literature for nothing, who are the thieves of occultism. Yet these are the first to accuse us of being without Love. Then we have to suffer the attacks of one or two people in the San Francisco area who spend most of their time attacking us, yet have not the courage to come to us face to face, they show the counterfeit spirit of the Protestant and Roman Churches in dealing with those who disagree with them, these are the spiritual cowards which one finds among all spiritual societies, devoid of the quality of Love within themselves, they deny it to others.

The majority of mankind who, for various reasons, are not interested in Occultism of any kind, are the onlookers and what they see going on in the spiritual movement just sickens them to the back teeth. We have heard people say 'Look how these people who profess to be spiritual hate each other'. With this kind of behaviour coming from people who should know better, we have no hate for them, they will have to learn the hard way, sooner or later they will find that their friends will leave them and they will be alone, no decent person will tolerate any man or woman who smears the Holy Name of another.

However, Love has its own method of proving the honesty and reliability of a person: The acid test to be used to discover the spirituality of a person, is to ascertain whether they manifest the above qualities in their life and in their relationships with their brothers. We will now try to show you how this Love-Power manifests in people's lives and is reflected in their actions. So long as you keep this in your mind: trust all people but do not trust their human nature.

Psychologically, every person who is faced with a crisis, whether it be by a life of disappointment, or being found out in an act of deceit, or found out to be a trouble-maker or a host of otehr factors of which a person might be guilty, they turn upon those who have tried to help with all the venom of a jungle cat. These people never forgive those whom they attack. Those who uphold the attacker without first ascertaining the two sides of the question are just as guilty as the culprit.

When a person or persons attack another brother, we find that the Love-Power within has been disrupted, this occurs when the connection between the Divine and human consciosuness has been disrupted by the forces of evil. This disturbs the delicate balance between the two minds, depriving the human Soul of the Love-Power or Balance. When this occurs all sense of right and wrong seems to be smothered by the upsurge of human nature, and all that which is unpleasant in a person is brought to light making the individual bitter and frustrated, causing him to vent this vile nature upon others.

Those who pledge themselves to become the Guiders of Mankind, and those who are willing to follow them, must be prepared well before hand to suffer martyrdom at the hands of the very people whom they have been sent to help. But it is the Power of the Divine within which helps the Messenger to face and suffer in silence all forms of attacks from these small minds, in spite of the barking of the human dogs of envy, deceit and self-opinionated people, the work must go on in spite of these attacks.

We in the Pleroma are not the only ones who have to face the attacks of the unmasked brutal nature of our members, past and present. There is not one body which has not at one time been accused of thieving, lying, charlatanism, trickery and taking money under false pretences and, above all, of being Black Magicians. We call to mind some of the great Souls such as the Buddha, Apollonius of Tyana, Jesus, the Gnostics, Jacob Boehme, Paracelsus, Count Cagliostro, Comte de St.Germain, Eliphas Levi and H P Blavatsky and now ourselves, have all had to suffer the actions of being blasphemed and slandered by the very people whom they have come to help and guide. There is an odd thing about this business of martyrdom, when one has suffered the first attempt, they ever afterwards just laugh at their accusers, knowing that Love will always protect them from the forces of the unredeemed human nature.

My friends, whenever you have cause to face attacks from others, try not to react against them, for if you do, you will only feed their hatred of you, just love them in spite of it. Try to remember that when a person seeks to hurt you, they can only do so if you allow yourself to be hurt, so long as you know that you are Love in Action you are safe from their attempts. Let us give some advice to those who listen to these detractors: If a person listens to the nasty tirade of these detractors and accepts whay they say, they are just as guilty as the first person. If you do not accept, they it is your bounden duty to go to the person and demand the proof of his assertions. You will find that they will shut up in your presence.

Remember, only a person devoid of any form of true Love will slander another, but the person who wishes to remain faithful to the Light will just ignore the unpleasant substance which seems to flow unceasingly from these foul mouths, which pollute the atmosphere. Above all by accepting this filth, you are giving to the unenlightened public the very weapons by which they will crucify you. Love, then, is the sure protection against the evils of our world, but always remember, that it is Love which rules the world, but it is man who creates the evils of the world for his brothers.

Richard Duc de Palatine

circa 1968

From Levi's Transcendental Magic.

BAPHOMET, THE GOAT OF MENDES.

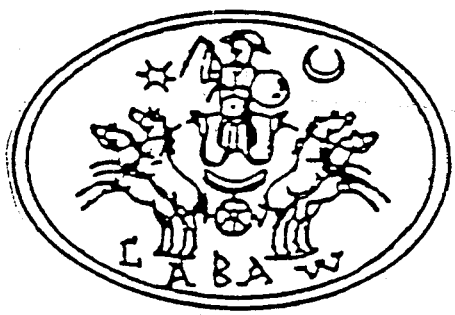
The practice of magic—either white or black—depends upon the ability of the adept to control the universal life force—that which Eliphas Levi calls the great magical agent or the astral light. By the manipulation of this fluidic essence the phenomena of transcendentalism are produced. The famous hermaphroditic Goat of Mendes was a composite creature formulated to symbolize this astral light. It is identical with Baphomet, the mystic pantheos of those disciples of ceremonial magic, the Templars, who probably obtained it from the Arabians.

I M A G E S O F M E N A C E

- by -

RICHARD, DUC DE PALATINE

Edited by
Christopher D. Riggin



THE SANCTUARY OF THE GNOSIS
London & Halifax
1987

CLASSIFIED

EDITOR'S NOTE

The contents of this booklet are a transcription of a tape recording of a lecture given by Richard, Duc de Palatine to a small group of students in 1966.

Whether Richard gave this talk impromptu is not known. However, the reader is certain to notice that several passages is the following text are somewhat repetitive. In preparing this work for publication we decided not to shorten it in any way. We have merely altered the structure of certain sentences for the sake of grammatical accuracy.

In view of the subject matter of this booklet, which, as Richard says at the beginning, has been neglected by many of the modern exponents of spiritual and occult teachings, we feel that this is well worth publishing in this form in spite of any weaknesses of composition which might be implied by the foregoing remarks.

COVER ILLUSTRATION

"Mendes - The Goat of the Witches" from Eliphas Levi's "Transcendental Magic."

The symbolism of this picture is discussed by Richard, Duc de Palatine on pages II and I2 of this booklet.

84 14

IMAGES OF MENACE

- by -

Richard, Duc de Palatine

The control and purification of the subconscious mind is one important aspect of spiritual teaching which has been either very carefully forgotten or deliberately ignored by the modern exponents of occult and spiritual knowledge.

The training given in the Ecclesia Spiritualis is designed to bring to the surface of the conscious mind forgotten images from the past. Such a process of purgation is terrible and sometimes very painful. As a consequence of this, very few students have either the courage or the strength to face and conquer the Dweller on the Threshold.

This battle between the animal self and the Divine Self has been retold throughout the ages in many ways. The story of the Minotaur of Crete is one version; the drama of the temptation and crucifixion is another, and, in the last century, it was again retold in the story of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. In the last century also Eliphas Levi attempted to restore this knowledge. Previously, we find Paracelsus also warning his readers about this process, and H. P. Blavatsky too mentions the qualifications and discipline required for the student to conquer and master this part of the human mind.

That these Images of Menace were well known to the ancient psychologists can be seen in the training and the disciplines of the Sacred Mysteries and later in the various conclaves of the Ecclesia Spiritualis. Such training was directed towards the dissolution of the counterfeit images which are allowed to sink into the subconscious mind and fasten themselves upon the vital counterpart of the physical body and inject into their waking consciousness their baleful power and drives.

Paracelsus calls these images 'Incubi and Succubi,' and says that they are sufficiently dense to become visible to certain people. When they do make themselves visible, they look like coloured shadows attached to the vital body. Having no conscious life of their own, they borrow their energy from the person who has called them into existence. They appear on the surface of the vital body as a limpet which acts as a parasite. These shadowy forms assume innumerable shapes such as half-men and half-spiders, or toads, or, as in the legend of the Minotaur, a bull with a human body.

According to the type of energy formulated by their creator, these forms are generated by the various human lusts, fears, appetites of immoral, depraved or diseased persons who are addicted to bad habits stemming from their mental, emotional and sensational natures. This means that each form is a perfect image of a thought created by the person. These are etheric parasites which draw their vitality from their creator and which, when they have exhausted the vitality of the human mind, cause the individual to become mentally unbalanced and finally bring about his death.

These parasites influence men and women according to the quality of their thoughts. They tend to deepen and increase any unnatural desire if their creators fall under their influence. They will also encourage their creators to find excuses for these faults in order to allow them to prolong their artificial lives. These larvae or images cannot act upon their creators unless they make room for them in their minds. They will only survive in persons in whom the animal nature predominates; therefore, only those who are habitually guided by their animal nature will be subjected to their baleful influence. Those minds which are illumined by the Divine Light of their Souls cannot be possessed by these creatures, for such Light will destroy these parasites out of the human organism.

The existence of these invisible creatures is the result of the continually creative habits of the conscious mind of man. The human power of imagination will produce these creatures. For instance, if an individual sustains a shock to his system, the cause of the shock will sink into his subconscious mind and will be reactivated when like conditions present themselves. We must remember that the subconscious mind is automatic in its action and does not think for itself, but simply reacts to the stimuli given to it. If the mind is already filled with unpleasant images of childhood, these will rise to the surface of the conscious mind when a corresponding stimulus presents itself. This mind is like a vast electronic brain and all throughout our lives we are building up deposits. These cover all the mental, emotional and sensational impulses generated by us, and all the good and bad energies. So in order to receive a response from the human brain, all we have to do is feed it with light energy and we shall receive a faithful response according to the original deposits.

Let us take a few instances which are prevalent today. A young man who lusts after sex will direct his libido towards the bosom of a woman for erotic experience. This means that whenever a bosom is thrust in front of him he will have erotic sensations, but he will fail to experience a true sexual relationship. The stimulus will direct his libido to certain portions of the male anatomy and thus fail to accept the whole image. This could mean that the frustrated image of the female bosom will be transformed towards its opposite.

Kraft-Ebbing, in his 'Psychoparaseculus,' has brought together a vast array of instances of the aberrations of the sexual life of human beings, and a study of this work will show very clearly how the subconscious mind and its operations will change the whole of human life from its normal rhythms and behaviour. If a person is frustrated in youth, this frustration will manifest in later life when he comes up against similar circumstances. In other words, the present stimulus will correspond to the previous circumstance and the mind will automatically react, recapitulating the identical situations which happened in the past.

The youth who is denied the love of a mother will develop a father-complex. Sometimes, when a woman is frustrated in love, she will gravitate to occult bodies in the hope of compensating for this lack of love, and will become attached to the leader or teacher who, in her vision, becomes the father-figure. The mental image of the father-figure is created in the human mind in the same manner. For instance, this father-figure becomes an image of rectitude by compulsion, whereas the image of the Soul becomes the image of rectitude by a developed free will. The Priest in the Church becomes the father-figure of his people. This image represents the moral path of rectitude by the compulsion of the image of the Church which uses this image to make her people obey her moral code.

Hitler became the father-figure of the German people and exploited the smouldering resentment for their country's defeat in the First World War. It is interesting to note that Hitler conquered the very nations last time that had a hand in the defeat of Germany in the first war. Thus, Hitler played on national resentment for past defeat to further his own ends.

The individual is, therefore, compelled to obey these artificial images as against the freedom deriving from his Divine Soul. Whilst the individual accepts the father-figure any attempt to exert his own free will of choice will bring him into conflict with the created father-figure image in the vital double of the material body.

For instance, the Imperator of the so-called Rose Cross becomes a father-figure to the Rosicrucians, and he can do no wrong in their eyes. The continual acceptance of such rectitude by authority as shown or imagined in the image of the Imperator forces the individual to obey, even against his better judgment and always at the expense of his free will of choice. The incubi or succubi become the ruler of the conscious mind and command that the individual obey the nature of the image by an unconscious compulsion. Sooner or later a resentment against the image is built up stemming from the individual's fear to disobey. When the student enters the Ecclesia Spiritualis, attempts are made to dissolve this image in the subconscious mind and thus free the person from this unnatural compulsion. When this has been accomplished, the individual is free to make his own decision about the part he will play in the organism.

It is because the Pleroma and the Disciplina refuse to allow you to make Richard a father-figure that an unnatural conflict arises within your mind. This image, being created by your former associations, seeks to continue its domination over you, and when you seek to obey the ancient teachings of the Disciplina a savage conflict arises within your own nature. Therefore, the student who refuses to accept the Disciplina which will bring him freedom and self-control, becomes the tool of his created images and is made to act according to their will. But the honest student seeks to do the will of the Divine Soul, the image of the Creator within him. The student who refuses to obey the Disciplina owing to the promptings of the subconscious mind runs into a terrible danger, greater than he knows. Once the Disciplina begins to bring to the surface of the consciousness the refuse from the past, if the student retains these creature-images they will completely dominate his consciousness, and he will begin to be dragged down into the unholy mire of his animal self, generally ending up in a mental institution or a degraded state of being. This is the meaning of the blood pact between the devil of the animal mind and the bound student, and whilst the subconscious mind rules the individual there is no hope for him or her.

Not only do these images compel the individual to obey them whilst he is in the atmosphere of the image, the teacher or leader, but they will exert their will upon him many miles away from the centre of the image. In some cases where attachment to the image is strong, it will tend to restrict the freedom of the individual. In some cases, the leader becomes the representative of the individual's frustrated love for his own natural parents, and such an image can intrude in later personal relationships and seek to upset them. The individual will accuse the father-image of breaking up the relationship, and will in turn, by the power inherent in the artificial parasites, seek by lying and perverting the true facts, to break up the relationship of his parents as a means of compensating for his own frustrations. All such feelings and actions are performed unconsciously and will only become overt when a similar condition presents itself. This can be seen in the case of women who use men as a means of compensating for their childhood frustrations, or in the case of Jack the Ripper who, according to popular theory, murdered prostitutes because he had been hurt by one of their number.

The number of cases of such resentment are legion. One has only to study the records of psychology to prove these facts for oneself, but, and this is important, the victim of these created images acts by compulsion and not by free will. He is driven on by the demons of resentment, envy, hatred, jealousy etc., and is not to be considered as being responsible for his actions. Thus we find that these creatures, the incubi and succubi, are formed by the imagination and morbid thoughts of individuals in their youth, and that they attach themselves to the vital vesture and exert their poisonous energy into the human consciousness via the solar plexus, bearing in mind that the solar plexus is the centre of the subconscious mind of the individual. From this centre the creatures can control and influence the whole of the personality of the individual. We have seen also that these creatures will become activated when conditions, events and pictures similar to those which initially caused the creatures to materialise again present themselves.

In his 'Transcendental Magic,' Eliphas Levi speaks of Mendes, the Goat of the Witches. We must bear in mind that Levi wrote in a double language, so we must look for the second meaning: that of the image of the subconscious mind. He shows a goat, Capricornus, sitting on top of the world. He is winged and has three horns representative of the three states of the human mind. It has the paps of a woman and the phallus of a man. There are two snakes intertwining from the phallus leading to the solar plexus. The right arm points up to heaven; the left down to hell. On the forehead one sees the five-pointed star, the symbol of the Soul imprisoned in matter. On the right side is shown the white moon representing the human soul, and the black moon, the symbol of the animal nature, is in the bottom left corner.

Within this picture Levi has shown many symbols, all of which describe the nature and workings of the contest between the higher and the lower minds of man. The goat has always been the symbol of the desires, instincts and passions, which shows that the Soul is the unborn, hornless, bearded goat which emanates from the Spirit, and when it incarnates in the animal nature it becomes the symbol of false knowledge and desire, becoming white-haired in its attractive and alluring attributes in which the human soul partakes of the sensuous enjoyment in the external activities of the animal mind. The Sabbat of the Witches, with its goat-god, is an externalised symbol of the desire-mental nature; the fall of the mind and emotions into the region of the sea-monster to finally climb out of the waters of the desire-nature upwards towards the Divine Self. It will now be seen that within the legend of witch-craft one has the full workings of the subconscious mind: the flying on the broomstick, the symbol of sexual desire; the annointing of the body, the glamour of the animal nature; the familiars, the images of the incubi and succubi, and the kissing of the back-portion of the goat which is followed by the orgy, all of which amply describe the will of the subconscious mind following throughout the whole human nature. These incubi and succubi owe their life to the sub-mental and love natures which are preceeded in the vital region by the earlier desires and gross instincts which, during the life of the individual, struggle up through the emotional region and pollute the mental region and vesture only to encounter the goat, the symbol of false knowledge and desire.

For an explanation of the mechanism of self-analysis by the human soul and how it finally frees itself from the Judas nature, one will have to study the legend of the hero-god Jesus and his Divine Nature, that of the Christos. Only those who have undergone the purgation period of the human soul, then the period of purification, and the final release from the bondage of the satanic nature of the animal self can really appreciate this tremendous forgotten drama entitled 'The Redemption of Man.'

We have seen how the student who has been denied the natural love and affection of his parents will seek by transference to gain this love from the teacher or leader. He imagines the teacher as representing one or the other of his parents. This imaginatory force creates one of these creatures which will assume the image of the father-figure upon which the individual will shower his affection. This transference becomes a barrier to his own freedom of movement on all levels of consciousness. In other words, this artificial mental creation becomes his own barrier to the light of the Divine within him. For instance, if another student gets more attention or affection that he, he will rise up in anger and will be forced by his own creature to accuse the teacher of such acts which are really to be found within the student's own nature. Such is the driving force of the artificial monsters he has created by his own resentment.

Let us digress for a moment. If we have a billabong or a portion of a river which has been cut off from the main stream, it will lie fallowing for many years and will become rotten with decaying rubbish which will cause a very unpleasant smell. But if we cut a new channel from the main stream into the billabong, the fresh water will rush in and bring to the top of the backwater all the accumulated rubbish which will, for a time, create an unholy state of affairs. However, soon the whole of the billabong will become purified and usable again.

The billabong represents the subconscious mind in which is lodged all the repressed desires, instincts and passions formed during the student's life. This means that he has been isolated from the steady stream of energy from the Divine into the human. When the student begins to arouse the animal mind, all these repressed images will be brought to the top, and there will arise a terrible conflict between the reason of the Soul and the instinctive drives of the animal self. In this process of purgation, the influence of the human soul is temporarily drugged into a state of quiescence to the animal self, and the individual becomes afraid. The strong influence playing upon the animal mind will arouse its torpid nature and this will act upon the subconscious mind, always to the humiliation of the human reason. Such a process happens unconsciously, and the individual is driven to form, act and live the nature of the subconscious mind as against that of the human soul.

It is through a process of psychoanalysis that the student can bring to the surface of the conscious mind these Images of Menace, and recognise his own nature and become free from them. In the Egyptian Mysteries the neophyte was shown these created images in an objective form and was taught how to recognise and name them. Once named, these images vanished.

Suppose that one student forms an attachment to another, and the teacher tries to give the student some advice. He will, through the influence of his creature, unconsciously misinterpret that advice as being an attempt to break up the association. It will be seen by this wrong interpretation that the student has reinforced the power of his creature to seek to infuse its poison through jealousy into any association which he may attempt to form. If the student is denied the love of a father, then the teacher will become a substitute for the father, and if the teacher forms an association with anyone else, no matter how innocent the association may be, the student will be forced by his creature to intervene and try to break it up.

There are literally hundreds of ways in which these incubi and succubi poison the minds of their creators. They also pollute the mental and emotional atmospheres of those with whom they come into contact. For example, a boy is in love with a girl, and another boy takes her away from him. The force of resentment will sink into the subconscious mind and be forgotten by the boy, but when, in later life, he comes up against a similar situation, this forgotten image of resentment will rise to the surface of the consciousness and try to compensate itself upon the others involved in the situation. This process will occur time and time again until the man comes to recognise the reasons for his actions. Then he becomes free from the creature. This applies also to any form of frustration, fear or resentment generated at some previous time in his life.

When such lust-habits of hatred, fear, sex, greed or envy are initially formed, one will see one of these creatures attaching itself to the individual. These lust habits can be of many kinds: the love of money, possessions, knowledge, power or position. They are created through the frustration of these things in early life. These creatures are simply the subversive mental images or powers created by the individual, and they grow in power according to his indulgence. Finally, these creatures become more powerful than their creator, forcing him to obey their unconscious will for expression. If permitted, they will finally, by blind persistence in arrogance, selfishness, fear or lust, subjugate the free will of the individual until he becomes their slaves instead of acting as a free-born individual.

It is the work of the Disciplina Arcani to encourage the student to recognise the existence of these artificial creatures in his own sensational nature and show him how to bring them to the surface of the conscious mind in order to deal with them and thus free himself from his own self-created prison. Once the student enters this work, all restraint is lifted from the animal nature. It is allowed to tempt the student to the full extent of its powers. Hence the meaning of the temptation in the wilderness. The Outer Head of this body is then placed in the unpleasant position of becoming the scapegoat for the student to throw his refuse upon and then kill in his mind. The scapegoat becomes as well the Divine Victim who is crucified by the student for the redemption of his created father-image. Such a process is a terrible one and its results are not pleasant to see. One has to stand by and watch one's loved ones dragged through the dark caverns of their own animal nature; to see them thrown into the pit of filth and mire of their own unpurified instincts and passions, and to see them driven to distraction to the point of consciously wanting to commit suicide. At this moment, the Divine Victim stops the process and the student becomes free and redeemed from the animal self.

Every man and woman has, at some time or another, created and formed one or more of these parasites through the over-indulgence of some mental, emotional or sensational lust-habit. Some are comparatively harmless and easy to deal with, whilst many others are positively dangerous and powerful. The method of freeing the individual from them is a long and painful one. Generally speaking, when the honest student makes an attempt to eradicate them from his personality they tend to become stronger before they are finally conquered and recognised for what they are. The student then becomes free from their unnatural compulsion.

In ancient Masonry the neophyte was asked whether he was free from the slavery of these monster-images, for only when he was free from them could he be permitted to enjoy the sublime knowledge and privilege of the Masonic teachings. So it is with the Ecclesia Spiritualis. The student must free himself from these vitality-suckers. During this process, the Elder Brother becomes the scapegoat. He is made to bear the student's unwillingness to free himself from these creatures. In the main, the student, when faced with this battle, will attempt to drag down all those who are associated with him. He will openly flout his obligations and then seek to excuse himself for so doing. In his slavery to his Images of Menace he will endanger the lives of the other members of the Disciplina. What is really happening is that he is fighting these creatures and they in turn are using every unscrupulous means of stopping him from annihilating them during this process of purification.

Whenever a student begins to rage and foam against the Elder Brother we know what to expect. The battle for survival is on, and again we must stand by and watch this life and death struggle with the Images of Menace. However, always at the last moment the logic of the Divine steps down into the human soul and peace is restored. In The Disciplina Arcani the student becomes subjected to the dynamic forces which flow through this body, and this energy tends to quicken the influence of these creatures, forcing them out of the subconscious mind and into the conscious mind. When this occurs, the student becomes aware of them and is enabled to purify himself from their influence. Obviously, these creatures assume a semi-conscious life of their own independent of the life of the Soul, and when they feel the influence of the Divine Power and seek to retain their own Life, they will cause a conflict to arise within the student. Thus the fury of these semi-conscious creatures is directed against the Elder Brother, and the student is compelled to do everything which would destroy the spiritual influence of the Brother where he himself is concerned. In other words, the Forces of Hell are let loose within the student, and the full force of this fury is centred upon the Brother and even upon the other members of the group.

The only power which these creatures fear is the spiritual love which emanates from the Elder Brother, for this love-force, when directed towards the subconscious mind, slowly but surely dissolves these Images of Menace. After each conflict, and the subsequent cleansing process, the student begins to feel a sense of freedom in his whole nature, but so long as there are traces of these creatures within his subconscious mind, he will fight the Elder Brother with lies, hatred, selfishness, jealousy, fear and misrepresentation. But in every case the Brother wins since He is the embodiment of Light.

The Elder Brother assumes the role of the father-image, the image of these creatures, and the student must destroy this image before he can become free. Once he has destroyed the father-image he has built up into the Brother, he destroys the power and influence of these creatures. He then recognises the true nature of the Elder Brother, and there is born an association of love and trust between the student and God. Under the benign influence of the Brother, the student then ceases to be merely a student and becomes a brother equal to the Elder Brother.

These creatures function entirely without the conscious knowledge or support of the student. Usually, if he is told about them, he hastens to deny the possibility. The genuine teacher knows, however, and actually sees these creatures attached to the student's vital vesture, and he will try many methods to force them to release their hold and gravitate into the conscious mind to enable them to project their baleful influences objectively. By this means, that which is lying invisible within the student's nature now becomes visible to him. The disgust and horror of knowing that he has been harbouring such evil and disgusting creatures comes as a shock to the student's pride. However, it acts as a spur to help him recognise them and seek the experience, knowledge and assistance of the Elder Brother to help dissolve these creatures. This can only be effective if the student will trust and respect the wisdom and judgment of the Brother.

Paracelsus says, " Nature can teach everything belonging to Nature. She derives her knowledge from the Spirit, but Spirit and Nature are one, for Nature is the light that comes from the Spirit." If Nature is the light that comes from the Spirit, the one becomes divided into two. The disciple asks questions and answers them himself. In a dream, the dreamer and the person he dreams of are one; and in temptation, the tempter and the tempted are one. There are some persons, very few indeed in each century, who live and function in this interior light wherein these creatures cannot possibly be found. In the majority of mankind, life is centred in their animal instincts, and they grope about in darkness and error brought about by their creatures. They are not wise, and when they create their creatures they allow them to take up residence and dominate their reason. They thus become like reasoning animals who act and speak according to the dictates of their animal nature.

In natural man, born from sexual intercourse, are the results of the natural imaginations of their parents from which the human sperm flows forth into the vital body. It is through this sperm that these creatures can live and survive. These creatures feed upon the wasteful exercise of the sexual force and create in man unnatural appetites from which stem most of the student's troubles. The average thoughts of humanity create a series of good and bad forms, but, in the main, the mental world of mankind is peopled by evil and dangerous thought forms which feed upon the perpetuation of the basest instincts of men and women, usually sexual, these causing over-excitement, frustration or resentment.

Most students are under the impression that once they enter the world of spiritual endeavour they have conquered the sexual impulse, but this is not so. What they have done, usually, is simply to have smothered the natural instinct and driven into the subconscious mind, there to ferment, a series of eruptions in the conscious mind which manifest periodically when the conditions are right for this to happen.

It is the fear of sex and its functions which causes the creation of these creatures. The attitude of many people today is to consider sex as being unclean, and these thoughts form the vital half-human and half-animal monsters which fasten themselves upon the vital vesture of the student, and, in order to seek expression and substance, form the mental image of a father-figure and use this image projected on to the teacher to supply the frustrated sex feelings. The sexual organs may be a small part of the human anatomy, but they exercise a terrific sway and control over the mental, emotional and sensational natures of mankind, and any attempt to regulate their functions - that is to say, bring them into line with the harmony of nature - causes a condition in the nature of man which can be likened to a raging beast which roams the fields of the human body and the surrounding fields seeking to devour and corrupt others. Any attempt to repress this natural force will produce for the student a period of hell on earth; more so when he enters into the dynamic stream of the Soul whose powers seek these artificially created images to destroy them.

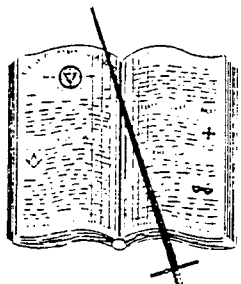
Natural control of the mental, emotional and sensational faculties by the student will do much good to destroy the dangerous influence of these creatures, and this method of control has always been advocated by the Disciplina in all ages. But during this period of purgation the student is allowed free rein to accentuate the influence of these creatures before he can safely conquer and annihilate them from his consciousness. This now resolves itself into the battle between the forces of light and the forces of darkness. The forces of light come from the Soul and must descend into the hell of the body and do battle with its ruler. The greatest instrument of protection available to the student is the light of his own Soul and the pure love of the Elder Brother which will protect him from the plagues of these creatures restricting their sorcery and eliminating their poison from the human mind. It will also protect the whole man from the evil influences which pollute the three regions of his being. And finally it will draw the poisons out of the body and absorb them entirely. Once these are eliminated from the personality old age is slowed down to the normal rate, all our fears are eradicated, our personal selfishness is transformed into impersonal selfishness and the whole body returns to the natural rhythm of nature which gave it life and form.

© The Sanctuary of The Gnosis

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

I.C.E.S.

International College of Esoteric Studies



Incorporated as a non-profit educational institution devoted to the advancement and mystical enlightenment of Man.

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

STATEMENT/RESTATEMENT OF PRINCIPLES & INFORMATION

1. The ICES/OTG is a non-profit institution devoted to the advancement and mystical enlightenment of Mankind. The ICES is the "educational" section, sending teachings to Associates all over the world via the Libers. The OTG is the "fraternal" component comprising groups of ICES members who delight in social and ceremonial work.

2. ICES are not the authors of the teachings and information being disseminated in the Libers. ICES was the beneficiary of a virtual library of manuscripts and documents which detail the teachings of the Alchemists, Gnostics, Kabalists, Martinists, Rosicrucians, etc. Many of the papers are the actual lectures that were given verbally to groups during Lodge sessions. Many of the Lodges are now defunct because of the direct or indirect consequences of the Second World War. Much of the information ICES is sharing in the Libers is no longer available from any other source. Much of the information ICES has had to have translated since many of the original papers were written in French and Italian. ICES is currently (1991) having the book Of Errors and of Truth by Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin translated. (The cost of the translation alone is $10,000.00! We mention this simply to indicate what we are doing in our endeavour to make vital information available).

3. ICES began its life on October 18, 1985 as The International College of Martinists (ICOM). This name was altered shortly after its inauguration to International College of Martinist Studies (ICOMS) and in 1990, to better indicate its wide curriculum, the name was changed to International College of Esoteric Studies (ICES).

4. When our activities began most of our membership was recruited through announcements in newspapers and magazines and most of the membership at that time was composed of sojourners who were taking their first steps on the esoteric path. Since 1989 most of our new affiliations are persons who have found us through being referred by members and almost everyone affiliating with us at this time (1991) are sojourners who have been on the esoteric path for many years. ICES has earned itself an enviable reputation for the high quality of the teachings it is sharing. We thank all members who speak of us to others and who are helping in the realization of the Great Work.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR ADVANCEMENT TO THE NINTH DEGREE

1) Photocopy this page & the reverse side, or detach and use this leaf.

2) Answer the 8° exam on the reverse side.

3) Complete the form below. Return both pages to the address shown and include your dues-donation according to your postal zone.

4) Your exam will be corrected and graded. (The grades you acquire accrue as credits re the MSS and DD Diplomas.) If you obtain a Pass, all the material for the 9° and your new membership card will be sent you in one package. (NOTE: Your membership card shows your active status for Commandery/Priory membership.)

5) If you fail the exam, your dues-donation will be applied as a credit to your account and you will be sent another exam paper for reexamination. Do your exam properly the first time and save yourself the trouble of having to do it over.

6) When you receive the 9° Libers, read each lecture through once, then go over it a second time, more slowly and thoroughly - then move on to the next lecture. Don't get lost in the sauce! Don't get hung up on one lecture thinking you don't understand it well enough to move on! Subsequent lectures throw light on earlier ones and of course you can revise. Some members like to study one Liber a month, others like to study two, three or four Libers per month. There is no set schedule, work at your own pace. There is no need to rush.

DUES-DONATION FOR THE NINTH DEGREE (Libers 85-89 sent by Air Mail)

Zone "A" Barbados. The Commonwealth Caribbean, Netherlands Antilles and Guyana. $30.00 Barbados Currency.

Zone "B" All other countries. $30.00 U.S. Currency. (Notice: Your dues-donation includes Air Mail postage.)

The Grand Prior
ICES/OTG
Worthing W31
Barbados, West Indies

Most Excellent Grand Prior

I can see the ivy and flowering vines on the ancient walls of the Adventurous Castle as I focus on them through our Captain's telescope. O happy day! I submit my Eighth Degree exam and dues-donation for the Ninth Degree earnestly hoping all will be in order. According to the ancient custom I now place my left hand over my heart, the right hand on my left, and respectfully say to you "Most Excellent Grand Prior, I humbly request to be admitted to the Ninth Degree if my Eighth Degree exam and Ninth Degree dues-donation are found acceptable. I renew my pledge to hold all material entrusted to me as strictly confidential and give my assurance that I will properly secure it from the eyes of the profane and the unworthy."

_____
Signature

Name & Address

Key number:

Amount Enclosed $

84 27

EIGHTH DEGREE EXAM

(Type or write clearly. Use all the space provided to express yourself.)

1) What are "Images of Menace"? How does one rid oneself of them?

2) Give a synopsis of the "Philosophy of Naughting".

3) Of the ideas presented to you in the Eighth Degree, state which one(s) you value most -- and why.

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 85-89

LIBER# 85 MORNING BREAKS

Personal & Confidential NINTH DEGREE

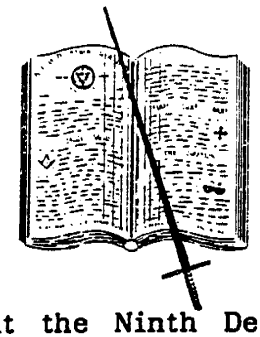
The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

I.C.E.S.

International College of Esoteric Studies



Incorporated as a non-profit educational institution devoted to the advancement and mystical enlightenment of Man.

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

Dear Companion

Here we are at the Ninth Degree! Over the past eight Degrees we have tried to present a broad cross section of papers from the heritage of material in our archives — the question now is — what shall we do in this and the last Degree? !

Well, we have decided to make this Eight Degree something of a 'potpouri' and simply include a variety of information which we hope will be helpful to sojourners ... and the last Degree — the 10th — will be confined strictly to material from our Martinist heritage.

During our travels, at many points along the way, we have stated over and over again that the material we are presenting is not authored by us ... ICES is simply a small organization operated by volunteer workers, in whose hands has been placed an archive of documents, and who are trying to do a service for the Light by making some of it available to pilgrims on the spiritual quest. We have no favourites! We do not try to push Hermetic lectures over Gnostic, or R+C over Alchemic, etc.. And again, as we have said, we are happy to share what we have with those who want it ... and just as happy not to share it with those who do not want it!!!

The fact is, that after some six years of operation (this is being written in 1991 and we started in 1985) we have received less than half a dozen sour letters! Of course some jumped ship before we made landfall and many wandered off into the wilderness, but of these, some were curiosity seekers, some became disillusioned when they found out that the road to spiritual heights has to be trod and that you don't get there by flying on a magic carpet ... and some dropped out because they don't like to know the truth! They just wandered off without saying anything. (It's not that it came as a surprise because we always know when one is going to go ... he seems disoriented, his face gets flat and his eyes are unfocussed.) We bear no grudge against them of course, we gladly welcome them back if or when they come to themselves ... and we are happy that many have.)

Anyhow... we have been at rest for sufficient time, the moment is here for us to make the final assault of the steepening slopes! So lets roll up our blankets, pack the bags ... and Adventurous Castle, here we come!

With all good wishes for a safe journey,

Sincerely

Disciplina Arcani

LONDON WC1N

Dear Friend

One can only come to fully realise the importance of Divine Love when he, or she, has trod the path of overcoming the dictates of the lower self - or the human way of looking at things.

During our efforts to see beyond our fears, hatreds, false images of ourself and others, and seeking to possess rather than sharing, we should keep our trust uppermost and without wavering on that quality of Divine Love within.

The path of Love is the way of the Christ and the Boddhisattva - a way of compassion to all creatures and a forgetting of one's own seeking - even for the light of Love.

When we speak of the Inner Light we mean this Love - for Divine Love (Agape) transcends all powers and contains all powers. Since Love is the only English word that we can use to describe It - it really means, in our terms, the Ultimate Nature of that Life and Light Intelligence from which all the visible or externalised world proceeds and It is capable of achieving anything when allowed to come into our personal experiences.

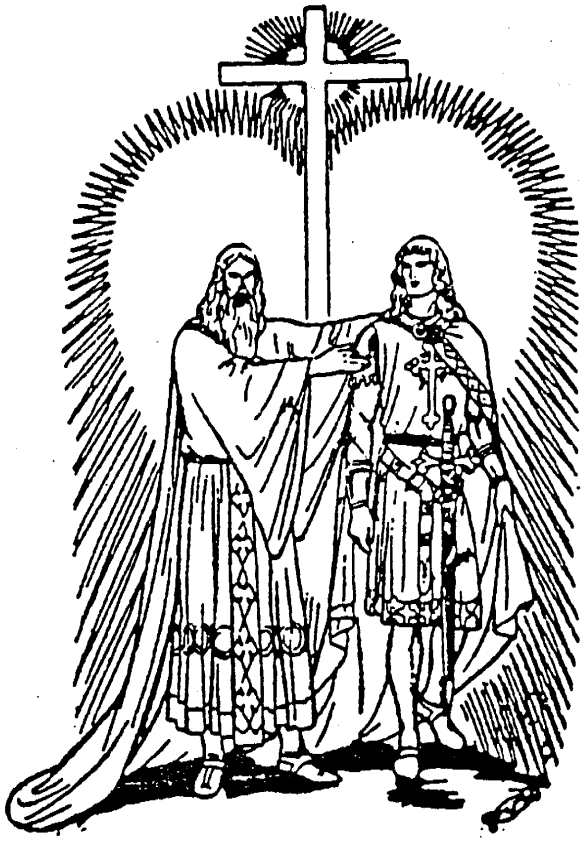
Whatever we call that Life Energy within us we should trust It ultimately with all our affairs and then witness It working out all our inners wishes for us.

When we can face our 'images of menace' with Love - for Love turns the tables on all harmful influences - then we can be free and learn that this great Power dissolves all that which is unlike Its own nature and It keeps us pure and free from all harm.

With all good wishes
Yours sincerely in the Light

Disciplina Arcani

FOR PRIVATE CIRCULATION



THE ULTIMATE LOVE

THE ULTIMATE LOVE

In the Ecclesia Spiritualis, we recognise that God is not a being in our ordinary sense of the word but is a generic term denoting Collective Humanity. In this light we adhere to the Pantheistic doctrine that God and Man are one and the same Being, that man must in the fulness of time become God and at the same time God shall become fully man. If we look at this subject from a different standpoint: the universe is a vast Synchronised Clock and each cog (human Souls) plays their part in the smooth running of this Clock; therefore, the Power which enables this vast Universal Clock to tick along is the Power or Love of God within humanity. This would infer that somebody or something wound up the Clock at the beginning of manifestation and the Clock will have unwound at the end of manifestation when the Power has been transmuted into energy.

This Power, mentioned by all the Adepts and Mystics, is the Love or Purpose of Humanity in its determination to fulfil its destiny. You may well ask: if God and Man are one and the same Being, why is it that man has no conscious awareness of his Godship? The essence which enables man to become God and God to become man is the instinctive recognition by man that he possesses a spiritual nature, and which shows itself in the effort he makes to realise this Nature, which is revealed in the mystic yearning of man to become one with that Love - the Life-Force of God within man himself.

The student must bear in mind the definition of the term "mysticism", for, unless this is clearly understood, confusion will be inevitable. Mysticism in its correct meaning refers to man as overcoming, changing and transcending the limitations of his finite self through the Power of his Divine Nature - The Christ Within. Those who have achieved this Union of the human with the Divine are granted superhuman powers and abilities. This granting and attaining of the Divine Power overcomes the mundane life of the body and renders the individual a conscious organ of the Deity or Collective Humanity.

Therefore, the barrier which apparently separates man from the Deity is his human nature and the images of menace which are generated, created and sustained by him through his morbid thinking. Professor William James, when dealing with the barriers which stop man from realising this Spiritual Nature, says: "This overcoming of all the usual barriers between the individual and the Absolute is the great mystic achievement. In mystic states we both become one with the Absolute and we become aware of our oneness. This is the everlasting and triumphant mystical tradition, hardly altered by differences of clime or creed .... Perpetually telling of the Unity of man with God".

So practical mysticism as against theoretical mysticism is the absolute conquest of the animal nature by the Power of the Indwelling Spirit - the "Christ in You" of St.Paul. Sin, pain, frustration, suffering and even death are conquered here and now, whilst still in the mortal body, in this very material world. We have every proof from modern records that this Knowledge and Power can be achieved, without the need to retrace our steps to ancient times. So, in Mystic Experience, we seek to bring the Spiritual Nature down into the confines of the mortal body.

It is said that many people are called to enjoy the benefits of this Union with the Light of Humanity, but very few succeed. The reason for this failure lies in their human conceit, pride which is being constantly egged on by their created images of menace within the subconscious mind, and their ignorance of the true nature and purpose of this Science of Regeneration. Such an opportunity can only be given to an individual once in a life-time, for such is the stern Law of Life. In other words, the eternal statement made by the Adepts of Life is that many are called, but few succeed. Why? - because they will put their self-importance and preconceived ideas in the way of the Divine becoming manifest within themselves.

Again you may ask: what is this Power of God within man and Nature? We will reply that this Power is the Ultimate Love of Collective Humanity, that force or power which drives Nature's species to fulfil their destinies. It is this Love which ensouls every visible and invisible atom in the universe. This means that all men and creatures have spirituality and physically the same origin; this being so, then mankind is essentially of one and the same essence, which essence is the One -infinite, uncreated, and eternal, whether you name it God or Nature. Therefore, nothing can affect one person without affecting all other men.

This power which binds and links all men and creatures into ONE Being is the Power or Love of Collective Humanity. We believe in a Universal Principle, which is the Root of All, and from which all proceeds, and within which all men and creatures shall be absorbed at the end of manifestation. This means that Nature is God or the One God - Collective Humanity - bearing in mind that man is the beginning and end of all manifestation. The Deity of the Ecclesia is neither in a paradise or in a tree, stone or building; it is everywhere, in every atom of the visible and invisible cosmos, it is in, over, and around every invisible atom and divisible molecule; for IT is the mysterious Power of Evolution and Involution, it is the omnipresent, omnipotent and even the omniscient creative potentiality.

Therefore, in our teachings - God is the Supreme Creator of all forms in Nature; God is also the Supreme Intelligence which drives the vast organism of the cosmos on its appointed path and finally, God is the Supreme Love which ensouls and draws all Nature's creatures toward its ultimate Source. Christ is made to say: "Know ye not that ye are the Temple of God and that the Spirit of God (the Absolute Love) dwelleth in you?" This being so, then the following statement of the Christ becomes logical: "It is not I who do these things, but the Power (God-Love) within me."

In the Science of Life as shown in the Western world, is the mystical consciousness as the Fountain of all Love, both human as well as divine. It has been well established that mystic consciousness is the only source of true moral activity, and brings the realisation that this Ultimate Love makes man know that his brother and himself are one, therefore his brother's sufferings are his own sufferings, and his brother's happiness is his own. This resolves itself into the manifestation of True Love. Therefore, it becomes obvious that all cruelty, self-seeking, pain and frustration result from the separateness of one human being from another. Men treat themselves as islands and have separated themselves from the main stream - Collective Humanity.

This Ultimate Love, then, is the Will of Collective Humanity in action within the universe both visible and invisible, and which manifests itself within the nature of things. Therefore, we teach in the Ecclesia that man must free himself from all inward and outward restraint before he can experience this Ultimate Love within himself. Once this Love has manifested itself fully within each member of the Ecclesia, then the Ecclesia will become a faithful instrument in the hands of the Deity both within the members and within humanity.

Before the Ultimate Love can fully manifest, it must first manifest itself within the individual member. To those upon whom the Ultimate Love will bestow its blessings, many things will happen before this can become possible. Many students who have returned to birth have voluntarily agreed to be reborn at this time to work with the present Archon of the Ecclesia Spiritualis, to assist him to re-establish an instrument on earth in another effort to assist mankind to take the next step forward. Many of the students who have decided to return have various kinds of Karmic debts to be repaid whilst they work for the Ecclesia.

The moment the twelve chosen members of the present Ecclesia entered the Conclave, their Karmic debts began to be brought forward, and at the same time the ever-pressing Power of the Soul begins its work of eradicating the images of menace within each individual. Thus begins a process of real purgation of each member. Most students try to stem this pressure from the Soul and thus create within and around themselves pain and frustration, and in many cases the members lose faith both in themselves and in the Ecclesia. The more this process is pushed forward the greater will be the chance that they will reach the required standard of inward unfoldment. Each member of the Ecclesia must become the embodiment of this Ultimate Love.

This means that the members of the Ecclesia are either Adepts or are nearing the Adept-stage of their development, and therefore it becomes possible that this Ultimate Love will show itself as a complete and unrestricted giving of themselves for the others of the Conclave. Normally, when a person is called to play his part in the Ecclesia, his past Help-Mate is duly brought back into incarnation with him; it is only a matter of time when the two are caused to meet. At first, the two human Souls just accept each other as being there, in fact they take each other for granted, and this acceptance continues for some time, perhaps years, but eventually this taking for granted must be changed into a new form of association and the two Souls begin a process of re-orientation.

Generally, within the Ecclesia is to be found an unconscious Judas, one whose work it is to stir the deep waters of the association in one way or another. The two parties begin to fear that they will lose each other and then begins the normal process of recriminations, accusations, suspicion, all of which is being egged on by the respective set of artificially created vital images of menace, who are activated and perpetuated by former associations and whose work it is to test the loyalty and love of the individuals to the limit of their endurance.

Sooner or later, the two human Souls come to the conclusion that they are being used by certain forces over which they apparently have no control. One of the human Souls is likely to be more experienced in this respect than the other, gets the first glimpse of this age-old process, and begins to stop the activities of the images of menace. Once this activity is diminished, the two human Souls begin the process of purgation of the human nature, this is slowly accomplished, all barriers are slowly dissolved, and the way becomes clear for the Ultimate Love within each to draw together - then is born a deep and abiding Love which no man can tear asunder.

The fear and suspicion which causes this friction between the two Souls stems from the past, either in former lives or in this life. Each one has allowed himself to create those images of menace through resentment, fear and distrust, but as the barriers are slowly dissolved, the two Souls begin to give each other for the other, so that they consume each other to such an extent that they become one and not two people. By this action they are reflecting within themselves and their union the ultimate pattern and purpose of the Universe. As we have stated, this stage of human relationships is very rare indeed, it can only be possible for those who have transmuted as far as possible all selfishness, and self-seeking seems to be eradicated and dissolves itself into a series of sacrifices for the other.

Experience has shown that when this Ultimate Love begins to manifest in two people, the danger lies in the appearance that this Love-Force may swamp both, if they are not sufficiently purified and controlled. But this cannot happen in reality, since this Ultimate Love cannot swamp anybody. The tremendous Power which surges through the bodies of the parties concerned seems to flow down the trunk of the spinal cord from the head, it then rushes into the nerves and then into the various glands of the body, causing them to revolve with a terrific whirling motion. By this action it allows the Divine Love from the Soul to rush into the body and causes a magnetic attraction between the two persons concerned.

Let us remember that this Ultimate Love of God is the Creative Force of God, which manifests within every level of man's being. Once the human Souls have purified themselves to a certain extent of their images of menace, then one finds little or no barrier to the untrammelled flow of the Creative Power of the Universe. This then flows through the two people concerned, true love is born, so that the Union is affected in the Divine Souls and is reflected in the human Souls. This union will continue until the Elder or more experienced Soul delivers the Younger to the Hierarchy of Light for Initiation.

Within the Ecclesia Spiritualis, this same process must take place, but in a slightly different manner. The two Souls mentioned have had many lives together, first drawn together by hate and fear, and as each life proceeded, this hate resolved itself into a deep love for each other. This takes place within the lives of every member of the Ecclesia Spiritualis in somewhat different ways: in some it will be the union between the human and Divine Souls, while in others it will take place in their association with another member of the Ecclesia; but in all, the same outline will occur.

It must be clearly understood that this Ultimate Love of God ignores social conventions or national customs, it is a Law unto Itself, it will not be restricted in any way, it demands that the individual upon whom she bestows her great boon be free both inwardly and outwardly. She will dictate her Laws to the individuals concerned in many subtle ways. This Love is the most wonderful and beautiful of all forms of Love - in fact it is the Love of God manifested in the flesh. Just as God gives of Himself for the joy and happiness of His Fragments within human creatures and asks for nothing in return, so will the man or woman who feels this Ultimate Love surging through their veins - gives all to the other and asks for nothing in return.

This Ultimate Love is the Supreme Sacrifice of one human for the other, thus in the Ecclesia, this Love creates in each member the desire to sacrifice himself for the rest. By this way, all barriers are swept aside between the member, there is created a tremendous Unity of Love and Purpose, then descends the embodiment of this Love within their hearts, they act with one Will, one Mind and with one Purpose. By this unified process they are able to perform the Science of Divine Theurgy, when each Divine Soul can manifest objectively in each member.

Laugh and mock as you wish - history stands as a living witness to this Mystic Love which transforms human life from one of fear and frustration into one of love and joy. Fear not that we speak from hearsay, we have found this Ultimate Love, and to clearly give a definition of this Love would be utterly impossible - but we can say - our life has taken on a new purpose, a new vista, no longer do we labour in the half-darkness of belief, but in the absolute surety that God has manifested within the object of our love and in ourselves. This now becomes the driving force within the Ecclesia Spiritualis.

In a small Gnostic manuscript, destroyed by the monks of the Christian Church, entitled: Confession of John", it is stated: "I loved Jeshu with all my being, from him came my help and strength, for I know that Jeshu returned that love. My heart burned with fire in his presence, he fired my mind and quickened my spirit, he lifted me into the heaven of his own Light and in that Light of Him I write of my experiences. In his Light I saw myself as a Pilgrim and knew that through his Divine Love I would also achieve. He quickened my spirit to know, even at his death, he stood beside me to comfort me and fired my pen to write what I have learnt. Truly, the Love which flowed forth from Jeshu is an ennobling Love and can and does change our lives from one of gloom and despair to one of determination and purpose. I knew that he was overshadowed by the Nous and became my hope of future success." (This manuscript was shown in Illumination, we have made a recension of the Aramaic rendering.)

It is said that there is a Love which passeth all understanding. This Ultimate Love, gained through mystic Union either with one's Divine Self or within the heart of another, is past all understanding. How many students talking about this Love of God manifested within the human heart really knows what it is? How many have received a glimpse of this Over-riding Love and yet have pushed it aside as being imagination? How many have clouded this Love with the baleful influence of their self-created images of menace? Perhaps, and we can only hope, in the Ecclesia Spiritualis there will emerge a group of people who will be fired by this Ultimate Love of God, so that the destinies of mankind may be directed into more constructive and co-operative channels.

The Ultimate Love shows itself in individuals in this wise: when the Indwelling God within a person reaches out for union with the Indwelling God in another, Union of the two becomes possible. The Creative Power of the Deity flows forth in its pristine purity, the two individuals are transformed, their lives are changed from uncertainty into surety, the hearts beat with pure Sacrificing Love, their minds are fired by the Creative Power of the Deity, no longer do they walk the half-light of human existence in fear and uncertainty, they look straight ahead with the absolute conviction that Man is God. They know that when they have transformed themselves into the Image of God, so shall humanity be changed into that Image and happiness shall once again reign upon the earth. They will seek to quicken others with the same Fire which has quickened them. For thus is the purpose of the Ecclesia Spiritualis.

Disciplina Arcani

LONDON WC1N

Dear Friend

The whole secret of the mystery of life is revealed in the second paragraph of this lecture. "The procedure of the Ecclesia does not follow the contemplative avenues of spiritual work, such as meditation and the various exercises which are now advocated by the pseudo-spiritual societies and orders." Without Divine Love (Agape) all else is like an empty shell.

Many students of the mysteries waste valuable time in trying to plumb the depths of astrology, invent awe-inspiring rituals and many other things, claiming these to be the wisdom of the ancients. Mainly those ideas are gained from the many books which are to be bought on the market. What one tends to forget now is that all our present-day sciences and spiritual knowledge have come down to us through a successive Priesthood. It was the priests of old who were the guardians of all-knowledge. Therefore without a valid priesthood all the claims of those who have jumped on the 'Ancient Wisdom' band-wagon have nothing really worthwhile to offer - only the husks of the truth which give temporary satisfaction. So, too, it is by a valid Priesthood in this age that new revelation will be made for mankind's future spiritual evolution.

The real work is on one's own stubborn nature. When the traits of wrong thinking and acting are overcome the Inner Light of Divine Love shines forth in our hearts and it is this Power which takes complete control of our life. No longer do we chase after straws for we then live in complete knowledge of our purpose here and as living flames in a world of dross we slowly purify the planet and become co-workers with the Hierarchy.

Yours sincerely in the Light

Mystics, at least those who have truly experienced the state of mystic consciousness, have been accused of being hard and barren and devoid of any human love, but they are accused by the uninformed of being dreamers because they themselves have not experienced this Ultimate Love in their lives. Even the members of the present Disciplina Arcani have not as yet experienced this very wonderful Love in their lives. Although this may take some time, on the other hand, it may take little or no time for this Love to manifest. Unless this Love does manifest in their daily lives, the progression and direction of the Ecclesia Spiritualis will take longer.

The procedure of the Ecclesia does not follow the contemplative avenues of spiritual work, such as meditation and the various exercises which are now advocated by the present pseudo-spiritual societies and orders. The Ecclesia is fundamentally and primarily a body of action; the field of action takes place within the very human nature of all members, whether they be Lay Members or a Member of the Twelve. meditation and spiritual exercises tend to accentuate the phenomena of spiritual things, instead of the spiritual thing itself. Man, being endowed with divine powers, and slowly feeling within him his Inner God, gradually feels that he is in very truth - a God-Man in his dual nature, though he may be conscious that he is still an animal in his physical self.

The moment the individual becomes spiritually linked with the Ecclesia, either as an Adept, or a Full Member or even as a Lay Member, the struggle between the two natures - divine and animal - which began from the very moment he tasted of the desire to enjoy and use the fruit of the Tree of Wisdom, this struggle begins the fight for life between the spiritual man and the psychic man, and then between the psychic and physical man. Therefore, the student must have fulfilled and completed the object of meditation and spiritual exercises whilst he was still a member of the Outer Bodies before he dares to seek admission to the Ecclesia. To the tyro, meditation is simply a practice or discipline of steadying and control of the mind in its three aspects, namely, the superconscious, conscious and sub-conscious mind.

It is only when the student for the Ecclesia has eradicated from his animal or subconscious mind all traces, images of menace and their morbid thoughts, the relics of his nursery credulity, that his three-fold personality will become pure and holy for the final descent of the embodiment of this Ultimate Love - the Divine Soul. You will note that we have restored the orignal mystic name for the Divine Soul of Man as used by the Christian Mystics for the past two thousand years. This term 'Love' (Divine Soul) was a technical term used by the various schools of religious philosophy to denote the object of their enquiry. This science was known in the West as "Mysticism" and in the East as the "Atma Vidya", the two terms being interchangeable.

This manifestation of the Ultimate Love within the human personality of the Mystics, was evolved by the Love-Power of their own Souls in close unison with their Spirits; by the superhuman morality and sanctity of their lives, and aided by conscious awareness of their own Man-God dwelling within their human temple.Therefore, such persons are temples in which dwells the Love of the Living God; but if the human temple is defiled by the admission of any evil passion, images of menace or morbid thoughts or desires, the mystic falls into the sphere of sorcery. This means that the door is opened; the pure Love of the Soul retires and the evil nature of the animal rushes in, which manifests as phenomena which are cloudy, noisesome, mephitic and nauseating to the pure Love inherent within the nature of the Soul; such a condition will attract only those foul beings, traces and images of menace who delight in these vibrations, as does an eel delight in the turbid waters of a back-water.

It is only those that have allowed the ever-abiding Presence of Love within their heart, which makes for pure emotions and mind, who can repel unconsciously, by the purity of their inner nature, the dark spirits which lurk in the animal hell of the body. Once realising the nature of the subconscious mind, we can readily see that any form of meditation or spiritual exercise does not in any way tend to purify the human nature, but effects only the conscious mind of man and overlooks the real cause of our human pains, troubles and miseries - namely, the sub-conscious mind.

Therefore, it is the work of the Ecclesia to assist its members or purify the human personality of all forms of evil, once this is effected, then the aspirant is granted the "mystic password" which can carry him from one order of spiritual beings to another, higher and higher, until he arrives at the Absolute Divine - the Man-God of every human being. This password gives to the aspirant the power and authority to command the terrestial and elementary powers to obey him, and through this Power, he could become a pure instrument in the hands of the Ecclesia Spiritualis.

Therefore, the only method whereby a man can enter into the Sacred Conclave of the Ecclesia was and is by personal effort, the struggle to bring the lower nature into harmony with his Divine Nature. Then shall the Spirit of Ultimate Love through our Souls descend upon each member of the Ecclesia, he shall then perform wonders, and at the same time be transmuted into another man - this other man becomes a Mediator wherein the divine and human are merged and the man so blessed becomes in very truth an embodiment of the highest ideals of Collective Humanity. Personal effort and discipline is the keynote of the Ecclesia, whereas, meditation and spiritual exercises are the keynotes of the pseudo-spiritualists.

Our scientists and philosophers consider that the claims made by the mystics are unscientific and unphilosophical, and therefore unworthy of deep thought. But history clearly shows that this secret doctrine of the Ecclesia contains the Alpha and Omega of universal science; and therein lies the corner and the keystone of all ancient and modern knowledge, which alone can unravel the dark problems of life and death. "As God (Collective Humanity) creates, so man can create. Given a certain intensity of will, and the shapes created by the mind become subjective. Hallucinations, they are called, although to their creator they are real as any visible object is to anyone else. Given a more intense and intelligent concentration of this will, and the form becomes concrete, visible, objective; the man has learned the secret of sciences; he is a Magician" - ISIS UNVEILED.

Therefore, the aim and objective of the Ecclesia is to make magicians or Technicians of Life. No man can perform the higher phenomena in the Ecclesia if his human nature is not purged and disciplined of all images of menace, traces of selfishness or the results of morbid thinking which act as a tempter of the man from the Path to the Self and directs and concentrates his attention upon the exaltation and perpetuation of the baleful powers of the animal self. This latter process tends to delude the aspirant that he can give lip-service to the Laws of the Ecclesia and yet at the same time pursue his old way of life and thinking. "But in the case of each who is pledged to the Higher Self is quite another matter. You cannot invoke the Divine Witness (of the Collective Ecclesia - the Supreme Soul) with impunity, and once you have put yourselves under its tutelage (the Ecclesia), you have asked the Radiant Light to shine and search through all the dark corners of your being; consciously you have invoked the Divine Justice of Karma to take note of your motive, to scrutinise your actions, and to enter all up in your account".

The first responsibility of all aspirants for the Ecclesia is to see to it that their personal lives are as pure as possible and that their minds are controlled and directed into avenues of trust, love and justice. Purity in motive and action will assist the aspirant to prepare the personality for the descent of the Soul, and upon which descent, the man becomes the embodiment of Ultimate Love, and through this Love-Power he can do all things. Man, being a God in chains, still has the ability to generate and manipulate the Love-Force on all the regions upon which he functions, and which brings about effects upon himself and others on the respective regions: for instance, all mental energies bring their results upon the mental region; the desire energies upon the emotional; and physical energies work themselves out on the physical region.

Therefore, every combination or octave of this Love-Force carries itself to completion upon the region on which it was generated, and reacts on those regions below it in proportion to its intensity. This means, that man by his thoughts and acts generates certain currents of force which inevitably react upon the originating centre for good or evil. This means, that once a man has become the embodiment of this Ultimate Love of God through the awakened Soul, he becomes a Technician of Life, with the power and knowledge of the inherent power, energies and potentials within Nature. This Love now becomes the guiding intelligence which moves a man towards the Ultimate Good or God.

If we remember: society is but the numerical extension of the individual; therefore,if we purify the individual's animal nature, we will automatically purify society, the further, if we purify the sensational, emotional and mental nature of the individual, we shall purify the corresponding collective principles of society. This process of the advancement and re-orientation of Collective Humanity into the position to be able to take the next step along the path of progressive unfoldment is skillfully guided by this Ultimate Love inherent in Nature, and Nature uses her superior creatures to act as her instruments in affecting this advance.

Thus, the Omniscient Love of Nature carefully selects certain human beings to act on her behalf, they are drawn together into a Conclave for the express purpose of acting upon each other to form an atmosphere of friction, it is by this friction that the dross of the member's natures may be stirred into activity, and finally transmuted by Love and Trust blended with impersonal co-operation. By this intimate and personal process such individuals become endowed with the Ultimate Creative Power of Collective Humanity by which they can collectively direct Nature's energies in and around humanity towards man's chosen destiny.

This Ultimate Creative Power is directed by the Ultimate Intelligence, and such Intelligence becomes the divine gift to man in order to give him reason and knowledge to know by first-hand experience the Will of Collective Humanity. But, this Intelligence and Creativeness is ensouled by the Ultimate Love of the God-Man. Thus, within the Ecclesia there will be formed a group of human Souls who will become the embodiment of these Three Powers of the Logos (Collective Humanity) - Love and Intelligence functioning as the wise Power to Create.

Let us imagine a smooth pool of water. If we drop a stone into the centre of the pool, we will witness a series of ripples beginning with the centre and rolling towards and outwards to the bank, then they will turn upon themselves and roll back to the centre. In the Conclave,which could be likened to a smooth pool of human atmosphere, the Archon acts as the stone being dropped into the atmosphere. Since he is the embodiment of Love, Intelligence and Creative Power,he begins to cause a series of vibratory emanations to flow from himself; these magnetic rays flow into each member, which has the effect of quickening the latent powers of which he is the active embodiment. It is by the continual bathing in the atmosphere of the Archon, that each member is slowly stirred in his Soul, this then grants the Soul the experience and power to descend into the human Soul fully.

The Archon has already been awakened by his two Soul-Friends from the past. His influence awakens their own Love-Power by their personal association with him,the three then become the embodiment of the Three Powers of the God-Man, and in the Ecclesia they become respectively the Director, the Hierophant and Male-Female Priest. The Priest collects the magnetic force from the members, this energy is now passed to the Director who blends all the combinations of this energy into One Force, then the Hierophant sends it through his concentrated Will to whatever purpose the Ecclesia intends it to be used.

The Three are bound into a common Entity and act as the Directors of the Ecclesia. They first met in past lives through hatred for each other, but through Karma were brought together in each succeeding life until this hatred was transmuted into pure Love for each other. From this Love shall the other Twelve be imbued with this same Love, and from these the rest of the Lay Members are linked to the Three by lines of magnetic force, along which this Ultimate Love-Force flows into each member, performing and recapitulating the initial process within the Conclave itself, within their own natures.

Slowly but surely, the influence of the Archon spiritualises the vital, emotional and mental vestures of the Director and Male-Female Priest, and then through them the rest of the Conclave are influenced to imitate the Archon. Then, radiating from the three Principal Officials of the Conclave, their influence flows forth to the Lay Members. The intention is to gradually awaken and unfold the Divine Nature within each member, distance is of no account, such influence is always affecting each member and influencing them to undertake the superhuman task of purification of the animal self, and to undergo the purgation of the subconscious mind of all images of menace, morbid thoughts, doubts and fears so that the barriers within his mind will be eradicated to allow the descent of his own Divine Nature within the human Soul.

This process, apparently vague and unprovable by scientific methods, is being accomplished by the Power of this Ultimate Love within the Conclave, and the results of this pressure are very noticable in the individual lives of the members. Naturally, such a Force which we call the Ultimate Love wreaks havoc within the turbid waters of the human nature of the member. This Love becomes a scourger of man and a spur to force him out of his turbid state of mind into activity, which intensifies the activity and influence of the artificial images of menace within his vital vesture, and he will react against the Archon and upon the other members of the Conclave. This process reacts violently upon the two Helpers of the Archon, friction, anger, incriminations and jealousy flares forth between them, this friction creates a corresponding atmosphere around the other members, thus assisting to bring up to the conscious mind of each the images of menace so that they can deal with them with the influence of the Three Officials.

As the magnetic atmosphere of the Conclave is stepped up in vibration, the Three in their subtle natures become acutely aware of each other; there is not one thought, action or motive which is not registered in each nature, therefore any form of deceit, jealousy, lying or any base act performed against each other is known to the others. This knowledge forces each one of the Trinity to make sure that his motives, thoughts and actions do not cause any friction to occur between them and this builds for harmony and co-operation between the Three. The harmony and co-operation begins to influence the rest of the Conclave and they will follow the pattern of the Three; this established pattern of morality and ethical behaviour is then directed through the others to the Lay Members who will gradually begin to imitate the pattern of the Conclave.

Therefore it is the universal testimony of those who have experienced this Ultimate Love in their lives that mystical experience transforms human life and alters character, aye, more so, a mean and deceitful person becomes a noble and selfless individual. We have the living witness of a long line of great Saints, Mystics, Adepts and Occultists who have been carried to great heights of knowledge and spiritual powers. The annals of European spiritual history teem with accounts of such Souls who have come and gone, leaving behind them a legacy of knowledge and wonders, ignored by modern science, mocked by our modern philosophers, condemned by the modern Church and spurned by our modern so-called occultists.

Thus, in the final analysis - to which science, philosophy and religion has no answer - this Ultimate Love has been the driving power and force behind all the major changes we have seen in human activity, there is not one department of human endeavour where there it has not been seen the guiding influence of a band of unseen and unknown Group of Superior Intellects, who have unceasingly worked and planned for the ultimate good and advancement of Collective Humanity, inspired by the Ultimate Love of and for Humanity. We know not their real indentities, but they have left a legacy in their labours. They were content to remain in the shadows of human activity, free from any restraint or interference from the credulous world, but they have laboured in the Name of Love - Collective Humanity.

We would like to repeat here a paragraph we gave in our last talk - The Ultimate Love shows itself in individuals in this wise: when the Indwelling God within a person reaches out for Union with the Indwelling God in another Union becomes possible. The creative Power from the Deity flows forth in its pristine purity, the individuals (and ultimately the whole Ecclesia) are transformed, their lives are changed from uncertainty into surety, the heart beats with pure Sacrificing Love, their minds are fired by the Creative Power of the Deity, no longer do they walk the half-light of human existence in fear and uncertainty, they look straight ahead with the absolute conviction that MAN IS GOD. They know that when they have transformed themselves into the Image of God, so shall humanity be changed into the Image and happiness shall once again reign upon the earth. They will seek to quicken others with the same fire which has quickened them. For thus is the purpose of the Ecclesia Spiritualis.

Disciplina Arcani

LONDON WCIN

Dear Friend

The greatest expression of Love is to be found in service to mankind - in the Christ and in the Boddhisattva.

A life of sacrifice is also one within the higher priesthood wherein a person forgets himself,orherself, in the everyday "chores" and sees the hidden beauty in things where others see but a life of "humdrum" and boredom.

The Cosmic Hierarchy has already opened its doors to admit initiate priests into its ranks and fellowship is offered to those who are priests by virtue of their sacrifice to others and not necessarily ordained officially by a living bishop.
Now is the time to take one's initiation into a living priesthood - the priesthood foretold by the ancient patriarchs and consummated by Jesus who, when he became Christed, became the first High Priest for this age. Wherever we are, whatever our station in life we can serve at the Altar within. Our bodies are the Temples of the living Christ and we each serve by way of the pure life that the Kingdom of Heaven becomes externalised in the place where we live. Such is the Sacrifice for us each to take in this age.

Yours sincerely in the Light

THE LAW OF SACRIFICE

To understand this Law of Sacrifice as shown in the Nature of things, we must love Nature and all her creatures, and the student who does not know or want to know her, cannot love Nature or her many creatures, he then knows that God does not love him; for his belly and genital organs are his God. The more knowledge we obtain through Nature, the stronger will our Love become and the greater will our power become, and coming from these two is born the will to sacrifice our very life to God through His instrument - Nature. Therefore, he that knows the Father, has faith in the Father; but he that does not know the Father within himself can have no true faith in himself to manipulate the power of Nature and to employ her forces for his own happiness.

If a man is amorous in nature, and all men should have this element in their human make-up, it does not indicate that his spermatic vessels are overloaded, but because the Love for God within his beloved is in a state of exaltation, in such conditions a conjunction of the combative and amorous elements takes place in his nature, which will result from an ebullition of jealousy, and unless there comes to the fore a harmonious acceptance of the respective roles, they may create a serious set of consequences unless counteracted by the superior power of reason and will.

Mankind will accuse God (Collective Humanity), of being a cold and callous God who would allow his people to suffer, sometimes needlessly, but God does not inflict. It is we who inflict upon ourselves the pain and sufferings which come our way, simply because we refuse to obey the Laws of Nature when we come up against them, we refuse because we have built up a philosophy of life which is wrapped around ourselves and therefore the welfare and happiness of others is of no consequence. Very few individuals realise that in forming an association with another, which has been decreed by Nature to survive all through their lives, it takes wisdom, understanding and above all sacrifice to make such an association work for both parties concerned and from this association the Will of God within themselves will be accomplished.

The Key to the teachings of the Disciplina Arcani is simply this: Man is Nature, and Nature is God, therefore, all men are the one universal Heaven and this Heaven is only the one Universal God-Man. Individual man is a part, if not the whole, of the Universal Man, and has his own individual heaven, which is a part of the Universal Heaven. We must realise that there are many points in a circle, and each point constitutes a circle of its own, yet they all belong to the Great Circle, and as each little circle may expand so as to encompass the whole, so the heaven in man will grow and will expand towards the whole or contract into his own centre and finally disappear.

Again, and we must stress this vital fact: most students of Life do not know the real meaning of Sacrifice, Love or Brotherhood, since they seek to condition these three states by their previous knowledge and experience; for a student to experience these three conditions, he must do either of two things: surrender his own individual life to the centre from whence come the qualities he seeks, then will begin the development of his own nature into that of the God-Man. Or - on the other hand, a man has the opportunity of being blessed with a Help-Mate who will help him or her through his life, but because of the artificial thought-creatures created by people through stress, resentment or frustration, they try to use the embodiment of the Love which they ever seek for the prepetuation of their own images of menace, by this means they fail to achieve their cherished desires and happiness.

Therefore, our advice to all students who desire to become unified with their Immortal Self is to take heed of the commands of Nature, resist her not, but just try to flow along with her directions and all happiness and success shall be yours. If you seek to resist the changes which she decrees must take place within your nature, environment, profession, love and social spheres, and you tell her that you will not obey her, she, being far stronger than you are, will punish you by drying up the channels through which you may hope to achieve or make something of your life, this means that you isolate yourself from the Great Circle of Life. Man cannot hope to succedin life in the secular activities without losing his humanity, and no man can hope to succeed in spiritual work unless he is prepared to sacrifice his manhood for the Love of God within humanity.

We feel sure that when you read this lesson you will accuse us of either making big things about something, or trying to stir things, or trying to play politics with you in order to achieve our own ends. This is absolutely false, the accusations thrown at us are derived from your images of menace and not from the Real Self. Nature is the Mistress of us all, either we work with her or we try to eliminate her out of our life. To obey the latter premise leads invariably to pain and suffering and obeying the impulses coming from the images of menace. Or you follow the former premise: that you follow and obey Nature as and when she decides to change your life, and you direct your energies into another channel which will ultimately benefit you.

It is obvious that we have only touched upon a few aspects of human life where Nature institutes certain changes, but there are many instances, both personal and impersonal wherein we see the hand of God at work, but always to our benefit.

The last word on this aspect of life is this: whenever men or women find that life has apparently treated them badly, they are the first to accuse God of treating them badly, and in order to justify this accusation they will formulate a system of morality and ethics which allows them to continue the status quo in their lives, but when True Love comes their way, they are apt to misunderstand the substance of this Love and ignore it in order to follow their previous understanding of Life. This coming of Love whether it be through the Self or through the personality of another, will always act as a spur to you to change your life, and if you flow along with the dynamic force of the lover or the beloved, then and only then will you achieve your cherished hopes and aspirations in this life. Fear not, for God (Nature) is not mocked by the undeveloped and selfish mind of man. God forces these illogical arguments aside and will implement His will within ourselves even in spite of our resistance to this natural change.

Love, then, in its ultimate sense is the Will of God in action within the universe both visible and invisible, which manifests itself within the Nature of Things. Nature follows this Law of Sacrifice within every one of her species, and also in man as Human Love. Therefore, Love is the constructor and destroyer of forms, wherein the Ultimate Life finds expression.

Within Nature, we find that each one of the species sacrifices itself for the other, there is no thought of self, except in its instinctive urge to protect the form, but otherwise, the various species have no conscious will as to whether they sacrifice themselves or not, but simply obey the natural Law of Evolution, namely, that one form is destroyed so that the Ultimate Life may gain a better means of expressing its characteristics and experiences.

Men, on the other hand, possess a conscious

Soul Vehicle by which man receives the power of freewill to chose his actions and future whether for good or ill according to the development of the human Soul. The human Soul, that individual consciousness called the 'I', is a ray from the Soul which is clothed for each incarnation in a new physical, vital, emotional and concrete mental form, but our Immortal Soul is retained throughout the whole period of the many incarnations of its human fragment. Within the Soul Vesture, therefore, persists the memory of all our previous incarnations.

Unlike the instinctive species of Nature, the conscious nature of man allows him freewill of choice within the limits of his own experiences from the past, man generates force-matters by his own conscious will, but the animal species, on the other hand, generate force-matters by their own inherent instinctive will. Man can either live for himself and thus shut himself off from the stream of progressive evolution, or he may forget his own individuality in sacrifice for his brothers, and is thus carried along and within the progressive stream of evolution, gaining by his own efforts greater and greater extensions of life, and greater power over the Forces of Nature.

The Soul Vesture of the average man is a fairly colourless sheath, through which the power of Ultimate Love can just barely manifest within the human Soul, but in the more experienced Soul, one will see many flashes of colour appearing within the sheath, which, as its development proceeds, will blend into a harmony of radiant splendour, which will reflect the Ultimate Splendour of the Man-God. The colours seen in the human and divine aura of the man, indicates the qualities, capacities and character which he derives from the wise choice of his freewill in this and past incarnations.

Thus, the more the man forgets himself in the devotion to the welfare of his brothers, the greater will the inherent and latent qualities of the Soul become manifest within the human Soul. The more vivid and tinted the colours are shown in the human aura, the more is indicated the strength and extent to which the Ultimate Love can penetrate and express itself within man. The animal species having no conscious Soul vesture, have a Group Soul wherein the multitude of experiences gained by the Spark, are stored against the day when that Spark is able to break away from the Group and continue its evolutionary journey as an individual Soul.

Therefore, the driving force behind all manifestation is the Love and Will of Collective Humanity in its desire to express itself and unfold its own collective nature. The Man-God, or Collective Humanity as the Spiritual Man, becomes the quintessence of this Ultimate Love on its own level, and in order to give life and consciousness to its lower aspect - the Divine Soul - it must die to its own level and become reborn within the Divine Soul, and the Divine in order to become conscious within the human, must recapitulate the action of the Spiritual Man, dying to its own level to be reborn within the human.

The average man in the street, having little or no conscious experience of his Immortal Self, lives in a world of cause and effect, his own consciousness is directed inwards to himself, and therefore his love and idea of sacrifice is conditioned by his desire to satisfy his own existence and preservation, his love becomes selfish and animal, his actions, thoughts and emotions are expended in order to prepetuate his individual self. Whereas, in the cultured man, this expression of Love shows itself in social and humanitarian work, but always with the view of perpetuating his own status quo and position within society he lives, his sacrifice becomes easy for him, because it is conditioned by the common welfare of the society or nation with which he fully identifies himself. This form of love and sacrifice is still fundamentally based upon selfish or individual survival.

The member of the Ecclesia Spiritualis and possibly the Pleroma looks at this Law of Sacrifice from the opposite angle - he knows, through his own experience, that the more he seeks to perpetuate his own status quo in society, this society-image will restrict him in all spheres where the impulse of the Soul guides him, therefore, his desire to live and sacrifice is coloured by the love for the welfare of his brothers. In this light, the Law of Sacrifice becomes a living force in his life, the more he lets himself go as an individual the greater will his consciousness become.

The Love-Force of this individual becomes the motive for his sacrifice, he knows, born from the memory of his Soul, that his Father - who is Himself, first began the pattern of self-sacrifice in order that He may be reborn within mankind, and that in order to restore Himself back to His pristine state of Glory, he must let go of the individual man and emerge within the Soul, and which Soul shall, in due time, let go of its own identity and emerge within the Spirit, and which Spirit shall, in countless ages hence, let go of its own identity and emerge within the Man-God, and finally which Man-God - the Ultimate Man, shall in countless systems hence, let go of its own identity and emerge Himself within the God-Man, upon which consummation shall the universe be destroyed in its present form by the very Power which gave it form - namely Man.

In man, this Ultimate Love shows itself as a complete and unrestricted giving of itself for the other, if he or she be nearing Adeptship, shall in turn give of itself to the other, by this means the two human Souls consume each other to such an extent that they become one and not two people, by this action, they are reflecting within their union the ultimate pattern and purpose of the Universe - those who are able to express and appreciate this Ultimate Love are rare indeed - for all selfishness and self-seeking seems to be transmuted into a series of sacrifices for the other. They cannot bear to be apart for more than 24 hours, but, it must be realised that this Love, beautiful and splendid as it is, can destroy each other unless the two parties have realised the greatest gift man has ever received - it must be regulated and directed into impartial channels which ultimately benefit the whole of mankind.

It is this Ultimate Love, which first manifests within a few, which becomes the basic drive within the Ecclesia Spiritualis, the impartial desire of people to sacrifice their individual -ity for the Group, and which Group collectively sacrifices itself for the progression of humanity as a Whole. Just as the Ultimate Love as expressed by the God-Man gives all of Itself without any reservation for the welfare and consummation of Itself within mankind, so we find in the manifestation of this Love between two people that there follows the same pattern and manifests the same results. For such a Union of Sacrifice motivated by the Power of the Ultimate Love there occurs one of the greatest blessings mankind can ever expect whilst still within the confines of a physical body.

Finally, those of you who have earned the right to enjoy this Ultimate Love are duly warned in advance - Love will not tolerate any form of domination, restriction or the exaltation of one over the other party, nor will it allow either party to lay down conditions for the expression of this Love. Love, being the ensouling Power within Nature, demands of those upon whom she grants her greatest boon, that each party treat the other as an equal; age, to Nature, is of no consequence, but to the limited vision of man, it becomes the ogre to all love benefits. This Love and the manner in which it expresses the Law of Sacrifice is perhaps one of the most mystical and human experiences man can ever experience, granted mainly to Adepts of all stages of unfoldment, but can and is destroyed by the self-seeking attitude of the average man in the street.

In the human sexual act, this Love finds its highest expression, wherein the Creative action of the Man-God is focussed within the lovers, here, all forms of restraint, prejudice, social morality are brushed aside, the lovers are free to allow the Love of God to lift them up into Itself. Humanity, whose minds are warped by many unhealthy attitudes towards the fundamental act of Nature, deny themselves the beauty and benefit of a natural and wholesome attitude on sexual matters. This sex act recapitulates itself within the mind, emotions, sensations and finally in the physical act, but so long as man divorces this act from the three subtler aspects of his nature, then he will never experience the Good and Beauty of his own Soul within the human body. This Soul then, becomes for man, the quintessence of Love and Sacrifice - happy are the lovers upon whom Nature has bestowed her greatest gift, woe be to those who scorn this gift and seek to restrict it according to their limited vision of the Love of God.

We are, A Brother of Light,

F Richard

Grand Archon.

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 85-89

LIBER# 86 BREAKFAST IS SERVED!

Personal & Confidential NINTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

FRATERNITAS ROSÆ CRUCIS

Rome London
& New York

No

"I AM"

And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM: and he said, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you."
Exodus, iii-14.

ACCORDING to the Hebrew Scriptures it was by virtue of the words just given, that Moses or Mesu, the Egyptian OSARSIPH, cousin of Menephtah and son of the Princess Royal, the sister of Rameses II, received his commission and message to the children of Israel.

Two notable features stand out with markt importance in the context. First, Moses was tending the flock and second, he was tending it on a mountain, in this case Mount Horeb. Therefore, in spite of his royal lineage we find him engaged in an occupation symbolizing humility, and furthermore pursuing that occupation on a mountain which, in itself, is one of the most significant occult symbols or allegories of personal attainment.

These two notable features form the perfect parallel to the early lives of all the Messiahs known to Man, who have visited this Earth plane prior or subsequent to the time of Moses. These two factors, individual humility, tried and proven on the spiritual Mount of Attainment have been the sign-manual and credentials of the world's greatest teachers who have brot their message and revelation to mankind.

We are not concerned particularly with Moses as an individual in this present study, however, other than as the instrument thru whom a most wonderful revelation was given to mankind; a revelation which opens up to us one of the most important avenues of knowledge in the whole domain of occult spiritual science.

The revelation is that of the identity and NAMES of two of the greatest Divine Powers ever made known to man,—for, on close examination, it will be found that there are two principal personages brot to light herein.

These two great Divinities are, THE ABSOLUTE and the Holy Spirit or JEHOVAH, highest Initiate of the Moon Period, and, at that time, the Race God of the Hebrews.

As has been so often explained in our Rosicrucian studies, the word "God" is used with great frequency thruout the Scriptures, without distinction as to the particular phase of Deity or Divinity intended. In the Jewish teachings, Israel is admonisht—"Hear O Israel, the Lord thy God is ONE God" and the God designated by that teaching was He whom we now know to have been the Moon Initiate, Jehovah, the Christian Holy Spirit.

In our text we note that God said unto Moses "I AM THAT I AM"; Then He specially orders Moses to say unto the children of Israel, "I AM hath sent me unto you."

I AM THAT I AM is one Divinity, Jehovah. I AM is a far greater Being, the ABSOLUTE. Only one Being could make the affirmation I AM in the strict sense and interpretation of its totality. Only the emanation of the ABSOLUTE could affirm—I AM THAT I AM.

"I" stands for the first person. The first person was the FIRST CAUSE, the "Great First Cause" of Herbert Spencer. It refers to the COSMIC MONAD EGO.

"AM" is the positive affirmation of egoistic existence. There is no record of the ABSOLUTE ever having spoken to man, angel or God. There is no possible reason for us to assume that the ABSOLUTE could have spoken for there can be postulated a time or condition when the ABSOLUTE was all comprehensive, before which and prior to which no Emanations had gone forth and thus there would have been no condition to which the ABSOLUTE could have made the affirmation. After the Emanations had proceeded forth, there would still be neither speech nor utterance of any sort, nor would there be need of it, for the Greater needs not to affirm its existence to the Lesser, the latter existing only by virtue of the former, and, so to speak, only in the former, as set forth by the permanent mantram of our Hermetic Section; "In Him we live, and move and have our being. (Acts xvii, 28)

"I AM", therefore, can refer only to the ABSOLUTE. It constitutes the only name by which we can indicate or identify our concept of the Nameless. It is the expression of the positive existence and manifestation of the Cosmic Root of all Being.

"I AM THAT I AM" in the Scriptural sense and interpretation refers to the Great Being who, thru countless incarnations and as the Highest Initiate of the three preceding World Periods was known at the time of His expression thus as the Race God of the Hebrews, but even then, this designation simply provided a means of positive expression and affirmation of His being, for according to Exodus vi, 3, he was not at that time even to his chosen people, known by the NAME which exprest his individuality and sublime and Deific personality.

In the chapter from Exodus we find it distinctly stated:—"And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by the NAME of God Almighty, but by my NAME JEHOVAH (the Tetragrammaton) was I not known unto them."

This secret, sacred, and unpronouncable name of Jehovah, as is well known, was held in such special sanctity that it was never given among the ancient Hebrews, and the same custom is still followed by some of the more strictly orthodox of that race even to the present day; the name Adonai being usually substituted instead.

This particular subject has been chosen as the motif of the present instruction, however, in view of the familiarity with which it is treated at the present day, both by fraternal organizations and by the multitude of liberal thought bodies whose name is legion. To the occultist there is revealed a degree of genuine ignorance which causes in him a veritable sensation akin to fear, at the manner in which this sacred formula is juggled as a ritualistic mantram.

In one notable fraternal organization particularly, this formula, "I AM THAT I AM" is used in a manner which leaves no doubt whatever as to the ignorance of the true import attaching to it, and emphasizes the fact that the members who use it with so little knowledge or understanding thereof may be accumulating to themselves a karmik debt which it may require long time periods to efface.

Names were peculiarly sacred things amongst all peoples of antiquity. Originally they were not bestowed merely thru sentiment, euphonius nomenclature or even designations of hereditary descent, but for special purposes of an ethical nature, intended to secure to the recipient and future bearer the best that mortal life could give him. Thus among the ancients we rarely find and never among the earliest peoples of mythos, the names of the Gods assumed by mortals. That would have been a sacrilege punishable in most cases by death.

And for supposedly enlightened mortals of the present day to use this sacred formula "I AM THAT I AM" merely as perfunctory ritual, borders almost even on positive blasphemy.

The writer has questioned several who are accustomed to this ritualistic usage, enquiring what the individual concept of the inner or real meaning of the formula is. The concensus of answers received is akin to the reply once given to the question "why are we here", meaning, in mortal life and the answer was,—"we're here because we're here" and that's all there is to it. Likewise the answer received to our present question in one case was—"well, I am because I is." "You can't put any magic into it at all."

If this is all that modern humanity understands of this sacred formula, then it had better cease playing with sacred things for it is akin to playing with fire. And we must not forget that certain priests of antiquity were once slain when, with the best and most laudable intentions, they entered the sanctuary where only the High Priest was entitled to enter once a year. There are still some places left where it is advisable to walk carefully, even as Moses was warned in the context of our subject, to "put off his shoes from off his feet, for the place whereon he stood was holy ground."

Only ONE is entitled to use the term "I AM" in its isolated sense and that ONE never used it himself. It was said OF Him by another ONE who had the right to use it because he did so intelligently.

And even that Great Other ONE did not use the formula for himself alone, but gave it as "I AM THAT I AM." Now we ARE entitled to use this last formula but only intelligently and in two distinct interpretations. Let us see if we can understand the distinction.

It is largely a matter of pronunciation and intonation. All sacred formulas of antiquity were used as mantra with specialized phonetic inflections that immediately made known the intention of the speaker or intoner. To merely say "I AM THAT I AM" as a matter of ritual is blasphemy and burlesque of the most sacred thing known to humanity. To use it intelligently but unworthily is even worse. To use it intelligently and worthily constitutes one of the highest forms of White or Constructive Magic within the power of mortals.

When Jehovah used this formula in speaking to Moses, giving him his commission to deliver Israel he conveyed thereby His assertion and affirmation of His At-One-Ment, kinship and relation with the ABSOLUTE. In this sense it would have been given "I, am that 'I AM'." In other words, paraphrased, Jehovah said, "I, the speaker, am a manifestation and a potential unit of the ABSOLUTE" and if the children of Israel wish to know your authority to lead them, inform them that THE ABSOLUTE hath sent you unto them.

No higher commission or credentials could be desired by the Hebrews for they well knew that any man with such a claim must stand ready to demonstrate it by the exercise of supernormal powers which would soon certify to them the genuineness of his claims, and furthermore that the day of such demonstration was immediately at hand and the court of the Pharoah would be the scene of action and scriptural history proves that such was the case.

And Moses could not hesitate for he, as an Egyptian Prince of the Blood Royal, brot up in the palace and initiated in the Temple Mysteries, "learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians" as we are taught, knew from his initiations that Divinity was in reality UNITY and that there was but one God and he felt the immediate influx of the Divine or Deific afflatus which gave him the courage and assurance to go to Israel and present his Divine Commission and Credentials.

Now we must remember that Jehovah albeit His Divine Eminence and attainment of Godhood, had been, even as ourselves, once human in the previous World Periods. He was entitled to assume this responsibility simply because He had attained to the conscious knowledge of his At-One-Ment with the ABSOLUTE.

Similarly, we of today, are entitled to the same privilege, IF we have attained the Cosmic Consciousness, or enterd into the knowledge of our Divine relationship and can mentally function actively therein. Some, even of the present day have succeeded to this sublime attainment. But we must not deceive ourselves by merely accepting the theory of At-One-Ment and Cosmic Consciousness. There is a vast difference between accepting the theory, believing in it, and actually attaining and practicing it.

It is this misunderstanding of the difference between accepting the theory and practicing it, that has caused the rise and development of so many alleged "New Thought" cults at the present time. Nearly all of them, with minor differences are purveyors of the so-called gospel of affirmation. "I AM good." "I AM well." "I AM prosperous." "I AM successful'„ etc., etc. And while we have the few successes held up to us as examples, we are not permitted to recognize the failures from these teachings, nor are we permitted to realize how the apparently successful, in many cases are so at the expense of their less fortunate associates.

No amount of affirmation will negate a wrong. The cancer victim will not be healed by denying the existence of the growth. The root of the evil must first be removed in every case. It IS true that the constant, conscious affirmation of right thought accompanied by right action will prevent the wrong principle from germinating, or of finding room for growth even if it has germinated, but nevertheless the seed, root or growth it HAS attained will remain, struggling against all attempts of positive, constructive affirmation, until it is removed in toto.

In some schools, the disciple is taught to say "I AM" this that or something else from fifty to several hundred times a day, but the only result this will produce is the destructive result of auto or self-hypnosis.

To repeat seriously the formula, "I AM THAT I AM," is equivalent to saying, "I, the Ego or speaker, am the ABSOLUTE." And such a statement is also equivalent to the drop of water saying "I am the ocean." Now the drop of water in lake, river, or stream is fresh and the ocean is salt. The water drop is of the same substance and nature as the ocean, but in its isolated sense it is absurd for it to make the claim of being the ocean. Furthermore, when it reaches the ocean it becomes tinctured with the salt of the ocean. It came originally from the ocean; it has travelled around the circumference thru vaporization, condensation, crystallization and final flow back to the ocean. And when it finally reaches the ocean and is tinctured by it and incorporated IN it, so that a test will show its absolute integration and unity WITH it, then the drop can truthfully say, "I am the ocean," as also can any other drop say likewise.

The same illustration holds good in respect of humanity. Man cannot, and should not DARE to say, "I am the ABSOLUTE." He IS of the same substance and nature as the ABSOLUTE. But Man, in the mortal world is microcosmic and the ABSOLUTE is macrocosmic. Man would be absurd in his isolated state to claim that he was the ABSOLUTE. Here he presents a certain degree of Divinity incarnate. When he reaches the ABSOLUTE thru development, he will manifest Divinity discarnate and macrocosmic. He will be tinctured with the attributes of the Macrocosm manifesting as Cosmic Consciousness. Man came originally FROM the ABSOLUTE. He has travelled around the circumference of the Cycle of Mortal Life, and he will return to the Center. He too, like the drop of water, has passed thru the processes of vaporization, condensation, and crystallization, and is now, thru evolution, returning to the Center and when he reaches that Center, he too, will be tinctured oy it and incorporated IN it, so that a test will show his abso-integration and unity WITH it, and then he CAN truthfully say, I am the ABSOLUTE in manifestation, for I and my Father are ONE.

To show the difference between the so-called "New Thought" and the understanding of the potential conditions involved, on the part of the early Rosicrucians, we give the following mantram, which was used by the Initiates who had attained Cosmic Consciousness and who therefore knew that they were entitled to use it beneficently in their work for Humanity. I, AM THAT I AM," a Child of the ABSOLUTE. My spiritual powers are your superior and can control you for a constructive good. This mantram was used by them whenever occasion required in their unselfish efforts to compel others to engage also upon a life of endeavor along the right lines. The NAME of Deity or the ABSOLUTE can never under any circumstances be used destructively or for selfish purposes, so there was no danger of its ever being misused. It was potent only when exerted Beneficently.

If, on the other hand, we have taught that this formula was too sacred to be trifled with, let us remember that Man is the descent of Divinity into Humanity. He is the Image of God, but, like all images, optically, he is the inverted image, showing that the same laws operate thru all the kingdoms and planes. This may be well illustrated by a diagram.

We may literally almost watch a plant grow from its seed. The modern developments of the motion picture or cinematography have actually made it possible for us to observe on the screen in the space of a very few momnts, the actual growth and even the unfoldment of the bud of a plant, altho the time really occupied in the process may have been several days. But our observation shows us that altho we do not see the microscopic evolutionary processes and activities, the multiplication of the cells, the accretion of substance, the depositing of the chlorophyll, nevertheless we have seen the complete general scheme of evolution manifested and we know that the blossom is the ultimate product, the epitome of all the creative energy expanded in the preliminary gestation, germination, growth and development of the organism.

It is the same with Man. We may not be able to observe the minute processes of his age-long course of evolution, except as they come to our notice in isolated examples of the species as compared with human relics of prehistoric eras, but we can and DO observe the general plan of his descent from Divinity and that plan is the plan of the Cross, the same plan as of all manifested life, for physical expression or manifestation is the result, price or penalty of the crossification of Spirit on Matter.

Whether Jew or Gentile, Catholic or Protestant, Christian or Confucian, the Sign of the Cross is the Sign of Humanity, the plan on which Humanity is built and developt. It originates in the ABSOLUTE as exprest by the Triangle with upward point; it shows the plan of human life and mortality in its unfoldment. It terminates in Man, the inverted image of God, and when our evolution is ended so far as the present Day of Manifestation is concerned, the inverted Triangle expressing the Microcosm will be drawn up into the uplifted Triangle of Deity, forming the interlaced Triangle, the sacred symbol of Judaism, signifying the perfect balance and equilibrium of Matter and Spirit or God and Man reunited.

It is difficult in giving an exegesis of Natural Laws, to say which is the greatest or most important of them all, for eventually we discover that the Laws of Nature or God resolve themselves into the inevitable Unity as set forth by our Father Hermes. But we will all agree that Law in any of its phases or expressions as understood and accepted by Man, is not only for the purpose of guidance; it is also for protection. We study the laws of chemistry in order that thru our ignorance we may not combine elements which would produce disastrous results and enable us to keep separate or under control, those elements of great power, which, unrestrained, would work havoc amongst us.

So it is with the Law of the I AM. No one can use it effectively unless he uses it understandingly and worthily. With all others it will be of no avail and it is presumptuous on our part to use it unthinkingly and merely as a ritualistic phrase or mantram, for by so doing we unwittingly assume to be that which we are not. The Law of the I AM is the greatest of the Laws of Affirmation for it is the cosmic basis on which all the Laws commonly known as those of Attraction, Positivity, and even the phenomena of consciousness depend. That which does not exist as an integral part of the active manifestation of the ABSOLUTE belongs to the realm of the Repulsive, and Negative forces.

It was on this basis of the I AM that ancient kings signed as their names, those of their respective countries, a custom followed even by the present vestiges of royalty and some ecclesiastics, signifying the personification of the State in the person of its ruler and meaning the affirmation that the State existed only in, by, and thru that ruler.

While this custom has happily lost its potency as fact, it is none the less interesting archæologically as an evidence of the persistence of almost primæval customs into the present age.

The misuse of the words "I am" even in ordinary every-day life affairs is the primal cause of much of the dishonesty that exists in the world today. It is used especially in our language which is far from perfect, as the shortest form of positive declaration. Instead of saying "I will do this or that", or "I will try to do so", it is instilled into us by prevailing methods of practice, that so much more can be accomplisht by the use of the positive affirmation "I am" that we use it today without the slightest idea of its origin or the esoteric value of it.

It is perfectly true that Rosicrucianism is above all things a Gospel of positivism, or affirmation, but it is equally true that it is also above all things a Gospel of the affirmation of RIGHT things, and right things INTELLIGENTLY and LAWFULLY used.

No number of positive affirmations wrongfully used will accomplish good results. It will simply work confusion in the Craft. It is curious to observe that those who use the "I AM" affirmation unconsciously, unwittingly, or ignorantly, simply because they have been taught to do so, do not realize that by telling a lie they cannot produce or accomplish good.

If you are in pain,—don't lie; don't deceive yourself. No number of "I Ams" will free you from that pain. Simply affirming "I am well; I am free from pain" will never stop the pain. You may indeed hypnotize yourself into thinking for the moment that you are free from it, but inevitably it will recur when the hypnosis has passed. Affirming "I am well" will not of itself make you well. Such affirmations will not heal or cure pain or disease, all ethical arguments to the contrary.

The mental attitude back of the affirmation in some cases will create a condition which frequently gives Nature an opportunity to reassert herself, where no serious organic conditions are concerned, and then we have the miracles of Christian Science, New Thought, Unity Centers, etc., held up for our approbation. The cure could have been more quickly if the cause of the pain or disease were removed first, and then with the road clear, begin the affirmations of health honestly, intelligently and worthily. Remember, it is the duty of Rosicrucian occultists to seek first the invisible CAUSE of all visible effects, and this applies to pain, sickness and disease as much if not more, than to any other conditions that may intimately affect humanity, collectively or individually.

Pain, sickness and disease are all forms of personal, individual Karma. Karma is an accumulation in the ordinary sense, of guilt. Guilt calls for admission, acknowledgment and contrition, accompanied by a desire for restitution. When you are in pain, first of all be honest and admit it. Recognize and acknowledge that it is an evidence that you have transgrest Nature's Laws in some way. THEN SEEK THE INVISIBLE CAUSE of the pain. Then bring in your affirmative powers. Affirm—"I WILL remove this cause, or cease the conditions that produce and maintain it. AND DO IT; don't temporize, or expect the physician to relieve the pain and leave you free to continue in your wrong doing. AND THE MOMENT YOU HAVE BEGUN THE PROCESS OF REMOVING THE CAUSE, BEGIN to affirm: I AM NOW FREE FROM THE CAUSE OF MY TROUBLE. THO I AM WEAK I AM IMPROVING, I AM GAINING STRENGTH RAPIDLY; I CAN FEEL MYSELF GROWING STRONGER HOUR BY HOUR; I AM DRAWING TO MYSELF FROM THE VITALIZING ETHERS NEW STRENGTH, VITALITY AND POWER. Then you will be working in honesty to yourself and to Nature.

Pain, sickness and disease are, when first observed, Nature's warnings and danger signals even as the engineer of an express locomotive must note every signal on his path if he wishes to pull his train thru with safety. Realize that in using the power of curative affirmation, what you are in reality trying to accomplish is the restoration to balance and equilibrium of your vital forces, for disease is lack of balance and disturbance of equilibrium. But also remember, that, affirm as much as you may, unless you use your "I ams" intelligently and worthily you will accomplish nothing and not only that, you cannot even deceive yourself for you will be conscious of your failure all the while, and in such cases people inevitably place the blame on the school or cult that taught them.

Finally, if we are among those who, after careful consideration and thought, really and sincerely believe they are those who are entitled to use the "I AM THAT I AM" formula individually, let us remember the answering prayer of Moses to the voice he heard in the Burning Bush, the manifestation of the Great Central Flame. This answer is not given in Exodus in the chapter describing the manifestation of God to him and the granting of his Divine Commission. It is found in the 90th Psalm. In this prayer Moses sums up all evolution in the opening sentences:

> Lord, thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations.
> Before the mountains were brot forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, EVEN FROM EVERLASTING TO EVERLASTING, THOU ART GOD.

In this answer of Moses to the Burning Bush, we have the proof that he as an Initiate, had perceived that his commission was from the ABSOLUTE, for he well knew that Jehovah having once been human even as we, tho he had ever been Divine even as we, had not been God from everlasting. Only ONE, the ABSOLUTE could hold such an ineffable and unsurpassed position in Cosmos. So he returned his answer directly to the ABSOLUTE, and as he did so, we also can do likewise if we truly feel we have the right to approach that sublime concept of the Human Mind.

Only ONE could have been our dwelling place in all generations, even He in whom we AND GOD, AND ALL THE GODS OF ALL SOLAR SYSTEMS, live, and move, and have our being . The God of our own Solar System may indeed have done the immediate work in the development of the System but it was only by virtue of His having "returned unto His Father", the ABSOLUTE and functioning therein, that He was able to act as a Creating God. And this is equally true of all the Logoi. The fact that some of these same Logoi may be even farther advanst than the God of our own Solar System is evidenst by the fact that science is now opening up to us the knowledge of Suns like Betelgeuse whose diameter is 300,000,000 miles, far exceeding the size of our Sun and some of its planets and their orbits. Antares is now known to be even larger than the great Sun just named, and suns, it must be remembered are the centers of other Solar Systems.

So far as we know, Moses was the only human being ever to be commissioned to assert his authority in the NAME of the "I AM", the only human being to be actually endowed with the lawful use of it. But because he WAS so invested, and because he WAS human, because he WAS AN INITIATE, so can all subsequent Initiates do likewise if they ARE genuinely Initiates and not mere theorizers or ritualistic mummers. At this time when the human mind is fast awakening to the realization of its tremendous powers and opportunities and possibilities, it seems as tho there were little left of reverence for sacred things. Even God would be placed on the dissecting table by some if such were thinkable or possible.

But in spite of the irreverence of modern humanity for that which is truly holy, every little while we observe that wise Nature in the form of some cataclysm or catastrophe overthrows all the pompous dicta of science and brings even the atheist to his knees in terror. Atlantis did not go down without purpose, nor did Vesevius destroy the center of vice and corruption, Pompeii, by mere chance or coincidence. All things in the natural world work together for a definite purpose and Man even in his pride is humbled. Let us keep this in mind as we carelessly use the affirmation "I AM" which originates with the ABSOLUTE, presumes to speak FOR the ABSOLUTE. Let us use it carefully at all times but especially so when we use it religiously or ritualistically, as a part of esoteric ceremonial. Being a spiritual fundamental, it should be used only in spiritual realization.

FRATERNITAS ROSÆ CRUCIS

Rome London
& New York

№

THE GUARDIAN OF THE THRESHOLD

A GENERATION or so ago the popular subject of the average orthodox sermon, on a bright and beautiful Sunday morning, was a graphic description of the soul inspiring and truly spiritual concept of "Hell-fire and Damnation," not omitting any of the thrilling details as to careful and accurate basting, turning and spitting, until the tensely vibrating sinners in the pews could almost feel themselves done to a beautiful golden brown of permanent color, for all eternity, under the skilfull manipulation of the master chef of His Satanic Majesty.

Those sermons were powerfully effective. The result is that actually, millions of people have been passably decent simply because they did not dare to be otherwise. Free-will was destroyed. Heaven became the fire-escape from hell. Added to this pleasing concept of an all-merciful God, in case the chief topic fell a trifle flat on already jaded ears, the ministerial pot-boilers, fearful lest anything like mental anaesthesia should allow their flock a moment's respite from this theological sword of Damocles which it was their particular business to keep constantly suspended over the heads of the suffering faithful,—would vary the main subject by occasional diversions into the realm of "Infant Damnation" and the total destruction of those not fortunate enuf to have been predestined or who had possibly passed into the higher life unbaptized.

With great and holy unction the eminent divines of that day (and some laggards in evolution still with us), would dwell with special fervor on the sufferings of little children who died in innocency, in spite of the words of the Master they profest to follow, when he said—"suffer them NOT—forbid them NOT—for of such is THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN."

In orthodox Christianity no one was to be permitted to enter Heaven except by the path of pain and suffering, the degree of which was to be carefully regulated by the self-appointed human guides of our spiritual destiny. And the perusal of a Saturday paper setting forth the vaudeville attractions offered by the average church for the following Sunday, will prove that the same type of guides, are still generously with us, for any advance of science, philosofy or research meets today with the same opposition and combat-from the churches as it did of yore.

Hell-fire and Damnation was the bogey of the average Christians who dared not think for themselves and depended entirely upon the "trained minds" of their erstwhile spiritual guides for information and assurance regarding their future estate.

The foregoing observations form a necessary prelude to our principal subject, that of the Guardian of the Threshold, for a few moment's consideration will show how prone the human mind is to travel in circles; how difficult it is to really think out one's own problems; how natural it seems to be for humanity to depend with childlike faith and simplicity upon the advices of some teacher of the regular theological unions, or the self-appointed advisers of humanity who hold forth for silver collections in the grand ball-rooms of well appointed hotels on Sundays, with week-day services to boot.

With the approach of the Mercury half of our Earth Period, mystic science, now on a better footing of acceptance with the reading public since its adoption by fashionable society as the fad of the moment, seemed to offer a more pleasing alternative to the rather strenuous concepts which orthodox theology insisted were absolutely necessary to the soul's salvation. Somehow, after all, when one reasoned it out, it did not seem true that only the select few were to be allocated to Paradise while the many roasted. There might be, after all, some truth in the assertions of mystic science that no human being could ever possibly be "lost."

Scientifically it seemed reasonable and logical, but—above all—individually it SOUNDED COMFORTABLE.

Now it has never been the intent of spiritual leaders either union theologues or free-lance mystics, to permit their followers to get something for nothing; to look forward with joyous anticipation to something that will not entail pain and suffering in its attainment, and mystic teachers viewed with growing alarm the concept which was becoming too rapidly popular, that since no one could be lost or damned, all would be saved. Something had to be brot forward to work in mystic philosofy as the hell-fire and damnation doctrine of unionized theology. Hence the pleasingly assorted teachings regarding the "Guardian of the Threshold."

The Christian who knew no better tried to be good to escape hell.

The mystic student who knows no better tries to be good to escape the Guardian of the Threshold.

And there you are. You pay your money and you take your choice. At any rate you pay, and if you have a mind of your own, you make your choice. If you do not, some one else makes it for you.

In presenting this rather vivid comparison between the old and the new devices to terrify the timid and to make the spiritual path more alluringly difficult, it is to be observed that we have not denied the existence either of hell or of the equally attractive "Guardian." Both do actually exist. But now comes the peculiar and rather humorous situation that has arisen. Mystic science has always asserted that hell exists, but exists as a mental state; that we each make our own heaven or hell, and that our escape or avoidance of hell means to preserve our mental and spiritual equilibrium. Orthodox pulpiteers, finding that the hell-fire and damnation doctrine no longer fills pews with shivering sinners, or pays the Pastor's salary, have been gradually turning to the more reasonable concept. Not that they accept mysticism, no—not that,—they "have been spiritually led to see the higher vision or revelation," after the same guides who may now be leading them have left their predecessors and their predecessors' victims in ignorance for centuries past.

But occultism,—the common, ordinary garden variety, after asserting the existence of hell solely as a mental state, and succeeding in shaping the orthodox mind to that more reasonable concept, now brings forward the good old-fashioned orthodox devil in material form under the more truly occult name of the "Guardian of the Threshold," occult, because no one knows who this "Guardian" is, or what sort of "Threshold" he guards.

Thus do even the "advanst minds" and "liberated intellects" revert in circles to their original starting points.

We remember reading somewhere of a young man, hopelessly invalid, on whom, at the importunate requests of friends, a well known mystic teacher was finally induced to call. The great teacher clairvoyantly saw that the unfortunate young man was being terrified by HIS Guardian of the Threshold, who croucht in malignant mien in a corner of the room and who saw to it that the young man was not allowed the possession of his sober senses. The great teacher saw, to his sorrow, that nothing could be done to alleviate the terrible condition; that until the young man's karma permitted and the astrological conditions were right, the case would have to remain in statu quo.

The friends of the young man must have had their sorrow turned to joy, as is usually the case when turning to the reverend clergy for some assurance of the hereafter on the passing of a loved one, with just about as much help and enlightenment as one would receive on questioning a New Zealander about Iceland, regarding which, having never seen it, he would be an undoubted authority.

The existence of the Guardian of the Threshold has always been one of the cardinal points in Rosicrucian doctrine and teachings, but not as a bogey nor should it be conceived as a source of terror. The Rosicrucians teach that hell is a purely mental state and they consistently teach that the Guardian of the Threshold is also a purely mental status with no more power to wreak vengeance, terrorize or destroy, than have the phantasmas of the victim of delirium, in fact the two states are closely analogous; both being perturbed mental conditions with resultant temporary loss of mental equilibrium.

It has often been stated, as a quick, temporary explanation without going into details, that the Guardian of the Threshold is the concretion of the thought forms of an individual developt thru his mortal experience and expression, and with which he is confronted after the process of death or the discard of the physical body and the awakening into the inner worlds. This statement is perfectly true, but, as stated, it gives no details.

Unfortunately it often does give the impression that such concretion means an actual, definite unification of all the thought forms into one mass, which, owing to the fact that there is so much variety between one's thoughts, and taking a lifetime as a whole—so little unity, adherence and coherence to a definite ideal or purpose, instability of mental equilibrium, and erroneous impulsion,—takes on an incoherent, misshapen, intangibly delirious aspect, approaching the monstrous in the case of those whose lives have been erratic, unpurposeful and vain, and further appearing even malignant in the case of those whose lives have been decidedly what are commonly called "sinful," criminal and dissipated.

By those who champion this explanation, we are told that in the case of those who have lived weak, unfruitful lives, not positively bad but lukewarmly good, the phantom takes on a grotesque appearance which cannot be identified as having any distinct features whatever.

Now, if these explanations were sufficient, by the same token we should expect that in the case of one whose life actually had been saintly, the concretion would have formed an almost celestial being, but on this phase of the question, occult scientists are strangely reticent. Furthermore, in the case of the young man previously referd to, it is passing strange that this was such an isolated case, and we marvel that in the total number of human beings we do not find a multiplicity of instances of perfectly harmless men and women being afflicted with inexplicable disorders without apparent reason, and whose cares may be similarly diagnosed by the rapidly increasing number of highly reputable and self-confest clairvoyants.

Most cases of actual obsession are now easily open to diagnosis as such and even the slow moving medical profession takes some cognizance thereof. But in the case of the story of the young man to which we are refering, behold, the great teacher who visited him discovered the great secret of his malady, and behold still further, this great secret was the same great secret discovered in some form or other in whatsoever is commonly regarded as otherwise inexplicable, it was—sh—none other than the secret, awful, malignant, terrible, mark of the influence of the Jesuit; the same great secret revealed to us by wise discoverers in whatsoever way or to whatsoever corner we turn. The "damned Jesuit" is assumed by some childish minds to be everywhere.

Now the poor young man referd to, it was discovered thru recourse to the Memory of Nature, had been a member of this Order, the Society of Jesus, the very name of which causes the timid Protestant heart to lose a beat, and as a penalty for this hideous crime of membership in a notable scholastic body, plus some personal habits made much of by medical science in the days when that science knew little about them, the unfortunate lad was being threatened by a malignant elemental as his Guardian of the Threshold. But we further noted in the story, that in view of his sincerity as a member of his awful Order, he had merited the right to admission into a Mystery School in the Spiritual Worlds, where he was to be trained as a Helper of Humanity, but must first work off the conditions of his previous lives.

Wonderful indeed are the workings of the trained occult mind. The young man was to be damned for his membership in the Jesuit Order and rewarded for his integrity as a member of it. This may be good occultism but thank God it is not Rosicrucianism. When a man passes from the life mortal to the life immortal, he passes the Guardian of the Threshold who is the result of his immediate past life. After going thru the heaven worlds, expiating his faults in his purgatorial career, assimilating his ripe experience, and then planning his future earth life and coming back to incarnation, he does not bring with him the Guardian of his past life. He brings back nought but such Karma as is to be accomplisht in the life to come, and that in a way by no means possible to inhibit him from progressing, otherwise he would have little chance, and opportunity for further incarnation would be useless to him.

Much misconception has arisen regarding the Guardian of the Threshold, from a custom fostered by mystic schools and teachers. Regarding anything in their various doctrinalia which they themselves do not fully understand, it is usually given out that the neophyte "must not ask questions." Students are told in whispers that they must not enquire regarding this or that. Such and such is a secret, only to be divulged when the student is duly and truly prepared. There is, of course, a certain amount of truth in such explanations, but as a rule it is operative more to conceal the ignorance of the teacher rather than an effort to prevent pearls from being cast before swine.

The only limit to man's right to knowledge is the limit imposed by his own powers of receptivity. Man has an inalienable right to know all that he can understand, and he has also right to wrestle with all that he is seeking to understand. The writer has often been approached timidly by good people, asking in whispers if they might be permitted to ask some particular question, instantly assuring him that if it was not right for them to ask, to please excuse them for so doing. Often the spectacle is ludicrous. A good, strong, husky man or woman, with evident brain power and intellect timidly requesting permission to ask a sensible, logical, perfectly proper question. No wonder that among such, the subject of the Guardian of the Threshold has spread genuine terror. No man or woman can hope to have the courage to enter the invisible worlds before his final natural time, until he has the courage to encounter and face all the conditions by which knowledge can be gained in the mortal world.

The Guardian of the Threshold should be no bugbear whatever. Pruned and divested of all occult buncombe, the Guardian of the Threshold is simply the epitomization and incarnation of FEAR, and as such is just as much our enemy constantly while in mortal expression, as it is said to become immediately after death has ensued, or when the neophyte has succeeded in attaining liberation and becomes able to enter into the invisible worlds while yet incarnate.

"As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." If he thinks he has no right to ask a perfectly lawful question, if he is afraid of public opinion or personal estimate, if he entertains fear in any way whatever, it will become manifest in his daily life and he IS A LIVING INCARNATION OF THAT FEAR. Roosevelt was perhaps the most prominent example in our day of one who was absolutely without personal fear in any way whatsoever, and this absence of fear made him a colossal world power, even among those who feared him. It was fear of him who feared nothing that kept so many of those who were his ardent admirers from supporting him in his later days.

Quoting from Instruction No. 10, of "Rosicrucian Fundamentals,"— The Terror or Guardian of the Threshold is the EPITOME OF KARMIC ACCUMULATION OF THE CONCRETED THOUGHT FORMS OF OUR INDIVIDUAL BAD KARMA, and takes the form principally developt by the major aspects of our hidden thoughts. If the thoughts have been sensual, the Guardian will be a sensual monstrosity, and similarly, according to whether our thoughts have been vicious, brutal, malicious, revengeful, envious, covetous or idolatrous.

While the Guardian is the epitome or karmic accumulation just described it should not and cannot logically be conceived as a distinct or definite entity exterior to one's self. Thoughts are things, undoubtedly. A house or a locomotive is a thought projected into visible manifestation in Matter. Man is a thought of God projected thru aeons of involutionary and crystallizing processes into Matter and visible manifestation. The Guardian of the Threshold however, is the creation only of a short life expression and is not possible of projection without, as a complete and separate entity, altho, given sufficient time and such would undoubtedly be the case. Wise Nature however, has limited the existence of the Guardian to the life that brot it into subjective being, well knowing that were the process to be permitted, the world would, in time, be peopled with malignant monstrosities.

The Guardian of the Threshold is the epitome or karmic accumulation WITHIN OURSELVES. When this epitomization becomes sufficiently powerful we are actually obsest by it. We witness this truth in every day life when we hear a friend say, and feel it often ourselves—"I can't imagine what has got into me, I never used to do this or that or feel this or that way." It is the Guardian at work, and he is not devising new trouble for you, but simply putting into operation ideas which in general have developt in your own self. and have now, by constant accretion become sufficiently dominant to make themselves felt.

Here, we see "as thru a glass, darkly." There, we shall see face to face. Here we see only the external presentiment of each other and our own selves. On the higher planes or rather the inner planes of being, we shall see each other as our character, personality and our Guardians or karmic accumulations have made us to be. The Guardian is within ourselves. Therefore, when death ensues and we step out of the physical body, or, when by development we have attained the privilege of liberation and can leave the body to enter voluntarily the inner worlds, before we can pass the Threshold of our own body the Guardian within confronts us in the shape of the accumlated inhibitions we have developt thru our life time up to this critical and crucial moment.

Now this karmic accumulation within ourselves is really the epitomization of all the elements of FEAR by which our lives have been dominantly altho possibly unconsciously, influenst. All error, wrong or so-called "sin," can, in its utimate analysis, be found to be the result of fear. Fear is either the actuating motive or the resultant of all our erroneous acts, and our Karmic Guardian is thus the accumulation of all the elements of Fear that have become actual component parts of our being.

The student who refers to Bulwer Lytton's "Zanoni" will find the Guardian therein described as a malignant monster of frightful mien, but who disappeared when she or it was defied, and the members of the highest degree of this Fraternity will also recall a personal experience illustrative of this point and truth. Absence of fear banishes fear. Here we may not see ourselves as others see us. But the time comes to every human being when he shall see himself even as he has been and is then, seen. Few of us will be able to recognize ourselves on that occasion. The Terror of the Threshold is so called, not from any actual destructive power it possesses for it has none, but from the nature of it that inspires terror in the person who for the first time encounters it not knowing that it awaited him, and being unprepared to meet it.

There is a saying originally used as a popular theme in churches, but now used as a most appropriate warning or greeting at the entrance to railroad crossings for motorists,—"prepare to meet thy God." If the inner meaning of this exclamatory warning were traced to its mental origin in the Memory of Nature, it would be found to have begun with the concept of its originator, in the personal knowledge of the Guardian of the Threshold, for the ignorant and unlettered Amos who wrote it, undoubtedly in his prophetic capacity had spiritual insight. And in the old Dispensation the newly awakening spiritual entity on being confronted with the Guardian immediately conceived it as being the type of avenging and punitive Deity formulated by his past religious beliefs.

Keep in mind that the Guardian has no objective reality, but is the personal visualization of the accumulation or accretion of one's thought forms solely on the mental plane, and has not even the relative permanency of an archetypal condition. In the best of us there is some so-called "bad." In the worst of us there is some, indeed much, good. And the conformation of our individual Guardian will depend entirely upon the relative preponderance of the good or bad in our lives. The Terror of the Threshold looms alarmingly to those who thru ignorance of its existence have gone on thru life unwittingly accumulating instead of discharging thru confession of wrong and attempted restitution the karmic debt to themselves, to Nature and to Humanity. We owe no debt to God for we are part of the very nature of God and our only obligation in that direction is to strive to become as wholly Godlike as is permissible and possible for incarnate humanity.

Ignorance has often been stated in these Instructions to be the worst and most unpardonable sin against one's self and against the Holy Ghost or sacred and Divine breath inherent in each homo. When one rises from ignorance and seeks to learn of that undiscovered country beyond the grave, and does so in a spirit of humility and sincere effort to avoid error and wrong and cultivates the spiritual life manfully and positively, not in effeminacy and silly sentimentality, then instead of being confronted by a malignant Guardian, such a one comes face to face with the spiritual being he has developt in the person of his Holy Guardian Angel who is equally his Guardian of the Threshold. We hear much of the one polarity in distressing, alarming form and shape, but orthodox occultism like orthodox theology has carefully omitted an equally trustworthy description of the other polarity, that of the attractive, life-giving Guardian whom each one can engender and bring to active functioning even while yet incarnate.

Many a person who has started on the Path that leads upward, and onward has found himself actuated by the same feeling of wonder, "why he performs this or that act of kindness and helpfulness to his fellow men," acts which he never thought of performing or even entertaining hitherto. Yet occultists seldom attempt to show that such actions are the results of the same Guardian of the Threshold, now transmuted into the Angel of the Threshold, welcoming him across the threshold of the material and physical, into the spiritual lands of progress and light.

The "Dweller on the Threshold" becomes our Guardian Devil or our Guardian Angel strictly in accordance with the extent of our efforts to live a constructive or destructive life. If all our mortal expression we have lived destructively, at the end we shall find our Guardian tearing down all that we have labored to build up by unworthy methods. If, on the other hand, we have attempted to the best that in us lies, to live constructively, we shall find to our amazement our Angel Guardian waiting to welcome us into the worthy structure we have unconsciously raised in the spiritual worlds.

If we have set our affection on things above, where moth and rust do not enter in nor thieves break through and steal, we shall find instead of a monster of malignant mien, a smiling celestial creation which may by its elemental degree of permanancy which attaches to all worthy creations, awaiting us, to whom we shall give force and vivify with our new spiritual life and energy, and develop into a permanent entity destined in time to become a true Helper of Humanity carrying on our worthy work once begun, long aeons after we shall have passed beyond earthly incarnations. The forces of destruction do not last. The forces of construction are destined, once they are given birth, to last thru all eternity and become constantly more active and constructive on a greater scale, ultimately to become world builders and world powers.

Every man and woman has it in his or her power to generate such a being in the form of an Angel Guardian, who shall in time become a world builder. Every man and woman who thus KNOWS, may begin here and now to be a world builder and to become the ancestor of a long line of spiritual hierarchies, who will be proud to trace their lineage in the Memory of Nature and the Akashic Records, to him or her who, in later aeons will be known as Initiates of the Earth Period; Initiates, because having awakened to the possibilities of their destinies, they rose to the occasion and began their work promptly, even with the rough working tools they then possest.

We read with pride on the pages of history of those who climbed by personal ambition to be empire builders and fathers of their country, not forgetting to give due credit to their personal integrity in many cases. But their work was of the mundane plane and they and their descendants saw the fruition of their labors. Their work was worthy and they have had their reward and many of them have come back to the very countries they founded and enjoyed the benefits of their own labors themselves. But how much greater it is to those who KNOW, to work, not for the moment, or immediate personal fame however, laudable the immediate motive may seem, but for the future, that ultimately better worlds and better beings may make their mark of progress in the ineradicable records.

One who intended to become the Buddha, began several incarnations before the attainment of Buddhahood, for that great event. One who desires to become a world builder, a Planetary Regent or the Director of a Solar System, can begin NOW, and if he is sincere, he can carry that great ideal thru all the necessary incarnations intervening. Such an one, who studies humanity, world development, cosmic science and evolutionary process thru many incarnations can begin the actual work of creation right here and now in formulating the mental abstractions necessary thereto, and like the mortal builder he may have to discard model after model but eventually, he will succeed, and his attainment of each life will be the starting point of the next succeeding.

No true Rosicrucian who KNOWS what the Guardian of the Threshold really is, should waste a single precious moment of mortality in fear or dread of this condition but, knowing that he has the power of transmuting the dread formation into an Angel of Beauty, should strive unceasingly to develop for himself this truly celestial helper and be thereby assured of a welcome into the land so far away and yet so near at hand.

FRATERNITAS ROSÆ CRUCIS

Rome London
& New York

№

THE GRAND MAN

THE statement is frequently made that "Man is a microcosm of the macrocosm." It is assumed through excellent logic that, as the atom is a solar system in microcosmia, (a group of atoms or a molecule therefore constituting an exceedingly miniature universe,) so man, consisting of incalculable atoms and molecules because there is no unit by which their number could be estimated, much less calculated, becomes a *Macr*ocosm.

2 Undoubtedly, man IS a *macr*ocosm to worlds and kingdoms of organic life, not alone among the insects but to that far more remote region discoverable and observable only under a high-powered microscope. Yet those worlds of teeming life are populated by monsters, compared to which the wildest flights of a Lewis Carroll, the active imagination of a Baron Munchausen or the solemn descriptions of a Leeuwenhook, a Pasteur, Koch, Spallanzani and hosts of the earlier pioneers in peering into the realm of the infinitesimals in size, are absurdly simple, and those monsters are of tremendous import to the human and all other life kingdoms in potencies for good or ill.

3 According to Dr. William Sadler, an average human body comprises 26 trillion cells. His estimate may be subject to revision, for a later estimate of the number of cells in the human brain alone approximates such vast figures as to challenge Dr. Sadler's estimate. Each human Ego is ruler, therefore, over an empire that is far greater in many ways than the great empires of antiquity And each of these cells is tenanted by the tiny but powerful hosts of the invisible microscopic kingdom. To them, therefore, man IS truly a vast Macrocosm.

4 That may be a basis of the inflated egoism many people manifest, but they can temper their pride a bit when they try to realize what it means when they are told that their individual existence,—yours—and mine—is the result of the combined and successive efforts and activities of (quadrillions) 2.251,799,813.685.244 grand parents in your individual line over the past 50 generations. This is 1,125,-899 times the present population of the earth. Verily the Great Book was right when one of its writers affirmed that "No man liveth unto himself alone." It is equally true that Nature's economy, of him for whom so much has been done, shall much be expected and required.

5 Some twelve years or so ago, the writer made public a statement that the average human being was worth about 85 cents on the hoof but that it would cost far more than that to resolve him into the pure chemicals in a useful state. That statement was widely plagiarized and copied. But like most investments during the past few years, man has declined in chemical value. This wondrous creature is worth today, according to statements accredited to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, just about 73 cents. And in his evident inability to formulate good government, remove want from plenty, or, in Europe, to live peaceably with his neighbors, this creature over whom quadrillions of people have labored, seems to have deteriorated mentally as well as physically. Yet, HIS MISSION HAS INCREASED TREMENDOUSLY.

6 But not alone to the world of infinitesimal organic life is man a Macrocosm. In him will be found in varying amounts and potencies all the metals and minerals, together with some not yet classified by scientists. In a broad manner of speaking, the metals and minerals of our earth are the by-products of man's existence. They are, because he IS. And so dependent on them is this sovereign emperor over trillions of cells, that a fraction of a grain of Manganese is the difference between death and life; a fraction of a grain of magnesium is the difference between the grouch and the sweet-tempered individual and sometimes between sanity and insanity. Men who find it wise to destroy food while millions are starving, quibble over the politics of alcohol. Yet so essential is it that nature distills a certain amount of alcohol in every human brain, and without it, the orderly processes of intellection would be impossible or at best uncertain, with brain diseases quite certain.

7 Is Man truly a *MA*Crocosm? We mentioned something about atoms and molecules. Using the Angstrom Unit of measurement, which is 1/250,000,000 of an inch, a Cleveland biophisicist estimated that there are not less than 500,000,000,000 atoms in a single liver cell. And each cell in the human body has its own specific intelligence. It was the Psalmist who said, "We are fearfully and wonderfully made."

8 The facts recited have been given for the express purpose of indicating just how truly Man IS a *MA*Crocosm to the worlds beneath him evolutionally. But if man is a Macrocosm to them, he is a *MI*Crocosm to worlds vastly higher than himself. Centuries ago, when astrology was studied as a true science, seers observed the effects of planetary influences upon man, just as every sensible person today can observe them. We know the effect of the moon upon tides. Is it possible that such a force can affect NOTHING ELSE?

9 Scientists who devote hours of painstaking labor to the study of the influence of sun spots and the solar radiations upon weather; farmers who well know the importance of lunar and other planetary influences upon the planting of crops; physicians who are keenly aware in many instances of the influence of the moon and especially of Mars in matters of surgery and subsequent convalescence, cheerfully agree in these fundamental principles, but when it is said that these same influences determine to a large degree our actions and attitudes, they scoff and call it an old wives' fable.

10 But thankfully, the day of the scoffers is passing. It is not a mark of erudition to sneer at what one has not personally investigated. and those who investigate thoroly and sincerely tell a different story about astrology. The ancients studied REAL astrology and they used the knowledge thus gained to correlate with what they termed the humours of mankind. Later. the Englishman, Sibley, developed the old ideas of Ptolemy into the science of human temperaments. Thus it is not that the vast planet Jupiter suddenly decided to send a check to John Brown, nor does Saturn gratify his whims by causing Susie's bones to break under a bad aspect. Instead, the intelligent person understands that we respond chemically to the auric substance of these great bodies, and by our individual temperamental reactions, which have a chemical basis, we translate our response in terms of action and attitude, which, of course, affect our mundane life as well as our intellectual and spiritual.

11 This is not a defense of astrology. It needs none. It has stood its ground on its own inherent merits through 7000 years, despite the sneers and persecutions of pseudo-scientists and wise men of earth, and it is now coming into its own. Our observations are necessary for one reason, namely, to PROVE that man IS A MICROCOSM of that vastly greater world outside of and higher than his own, for he contains within himself all the elements of these sidereal bodies just as he contains within himself all the elements of the worlds infinitesimal to himself, yet which affect his health and his actions and attitude no less than do the greater ones above him. How do we know this to be true?

12 First of all, by centuries of observation and record. Second, by the fact that the spectroscopic analysis of light rays from the sidereal bodies shows them to be composed of elements identical with those that compose man. There is, therefore, a definite physical and chemical relationship.

13 Third, a spectroscopic analysis of the N-ray or human emanation will reveal marvelous changes when observed under varying planetary aspects, proving an intimate correspondence between the infinitely great and the infinitely small. Especially is this proof strengthened when the subject of such spectroscopic observations makes a conscious, determined response, either in harmony with or defensively against the sidereal influences or radiations. Then the phenomena are truly marvelous. They prove that those who fail in life are those who through persistent ignorance (the only REAL SIN), let things take their course, float with the tides of custom and opinion, and make little or no real individual effort, while those who succeed are those who resolve to (and do) determine their own careers aggressively on a carefully planned basis and then compel their stars instead of being compelled by them.

14 So, there WAS something of merit in the ancient and mediaeval assumption of occultists and spiritual scientists, that there was and IS, as the Bible teaches us, a celestial man and a terrestrial man, only the theologians and the philosophers began to differ as to what sort of men they could be. Each tried to fit the basic fact to his own school of thought.

15 The philosophers concluded that the sidereal bodies with their central sun constituted the body of the heavenly or celestial Man, the GRAND MAN OF THE UNIVERSE. And as our planet Earth or Terra is one of them, so we must be parts of that Grand Man, and therefore a MICrocosm of that MACrocosm. Their idea was good, only it wasn't true—AT THAT TIME. They had merely sensed the outer concept of a greater fact.

16 The sidereal bodies, by their orbital revolutions, are constantly changing their relative positions to each other. But once in 25,868 years they return to a given identical position. This return is of course going on continuously. But approximately 16,000,000 years ago they did occupy positions that conformed to the figure of a man. This, of itself would not be remarkable. But it is a fact that that formation and that time period, probably in the Oligocene, also marked the advent of a type of proto-human emergence, as indicated by Dr. Zuckerman, Oxford zoologist, from researches reported at the Congress of Anthropological and Ethnological sciences in August, 1934. Since that time there have been over 600 precessional returns and those who delight in the study of ethnology would do well to list the mutations of the human species and migrations of races at such intervals. It will prove a startling revelation.

17 In this way, the Hermetic teaching, that "that which is below is like unto that which is above," has a basis in fact. Co-incident with each new formation of the sidereal man has been the profound mutation of the terrestrial man. Here again we find the Great Book giving us confirmation. Man is made in the image of his creator, i.e., of the heavenly or celestial man that expresses the epitone of the creative power of the central orb, which is the physical vehicle of the Logos or God of our solar system. And again, "the earthly bears the impress of the heavenly."

18 So man assumes a position of profound importance with an increasingly important mission to which we have alluded. Man IS A TRUE MEDIUM; not in the spiritualistic sense, but in a cosmic sense. Here we behold him, assuming the form of the celestial man, imbued with all the powers and potencies of the forces that compose the celestial bodies, and at the same time also comprising in his marvelous organization all the elements of the terrestrial world below him even to those which, in both higher and lower instances, are invisible. Verily that simple command "Know thyself" by an unknown philosopher has a cosmos of meaning. It was a precept inscribed in gold letters over the portico of the Temple at Delphi. It has been ascribed to Pythagoras, Chilo, Thales, Solon Cleobulus, Bias, and Socrates. It has also been ascribed to Phemonoe, a mythical Greek poetess of the ante-Homeric period. Juvenal says that it descended from heaven. Nevertheless man still continues to study everything in the world except himself and to seek everywhere in the world for that which he desires, except within himself. And all the while, behold, all things are contained within him.

19 Man is a medium, a cosmic medium, through which the sidereal and celestial forces of light and life; of soul and spirit, are focussed to produce corporeal form, in color and tone. Through him the divine descends to become human. Through him the lower forms of life learn the mysteries of evolution back to the divine. Man is a medium of constant flux between forces celestial and forces terrestrial. He incarnates the Spirit of his Creator, that he may reassemble for the creation of vaster systems to come and the conquest of time and space into which he is already pioneering. His mission is to raise himself to true divinity by raising lesser intelligences to true humanity. He mediates between worlds seen and worlds unseen, between visible forms of life and invisible forms of life, between those extremes of spirit that are matter, energy and gravity at one end and divinity at the other, spanning the polar extremes.

20 So the philosophers of olden time made the same mistake that man has ever been prone to make. He sought his Grand Man of the Universe in the skies, where it could do him no practical good, while behold, his Grand Man was—HIMSELF.

21 This concept of the Grand Man was what the earliest philosophers sought to crystallize into the idea expressed by Adam Kadmon, the primordial, archetypal man, composed of the entire host of Cosmic Powers, the original creative spirits. This partial concept was preserved in the Zohar and the Kabbala, but subsequent editions, revisions and editings have distorted the original almost beyond recognition.

22 Most Bible students misread their Genesis and fail to observe that man was created before the animals. In chapter one, where he is led to conclude that man was the finished product, the animals referred to are not those of earth, but the Holy Animals of the Zodiac, the figures of the constellations, and the "man, male and female," of that chapter are the celestial hosts or choirs, the grades of the angelic hierarchies. That is not the man made after God's likeness nor in His image. It was the early idea of the Adam Kadmon, the first Adam, the synthesis of the ten sephiroth. In the second chapter, we find that the second Adam was created BEFORE the animals and the word Adam applied not to a single indivi-ual but to a race. What is more, man appeared at seven different sections of our planet; hence, in the Divine Pymander of Hermes, we find reference to seven primaeval men evolved from Nature, and the Heavenly Man, i.e., the primitive Adam Kadmon. These later became the seven Kings of Edom referred to in the Kabbala.

23 Another definition of the earlier concept of Adam Kadmon was of the name as a generic term for the sexless angels who assisted in creative process by mental and spiritual powers alone. Consequently the propagators of this idea had to conceive of a primitive race of human beings, made in their image, i.e , also sexless. But how sexless humanity, that had fallen into generation, could reproduce and perpetuate its own species called for an ingenious explanation. They are therefore assumed to have destroyed themselves by reincarnating into their own progeny, who had been created by them before their fall; this time bringing into being the divided types, male and female. The explanation is ingenious, especially for the time in which it was first formulated, but the twentieth century intellect and imagination will experience some difficulty in following out the logical deduction therefrom to any satisfactory conclusion.

24 It was the Adam of the second chapter of Genesis who strengthened their etheric or ethereal bodies by solidifying clay or the so-called "dust" of the ground about them, bringing the visible, physical body into being through the normal laws of evolution. But the early philosophers brought another Adamic figure into the intellectual concepts, namely, Adam-Adami. Adam-Adami is assumed to personify the dual Adam, the paradigmic Adam Kadmon or creator, and the terrestrial Adam or first human progenitors. The latter, due to the method of their assumed creation, had the "breath of life" according to the Syrian Kabbalists, but no soul. Man obtained or learned how to develop his soul only after, by and through his allegorical "Fall." The soul being the composite organ in a spiritual nature of emotion, intellection, and rational consciousness, it developed through the incidents that would bring into manifestation such faculties in an organism capable of expressing them. So Man "fell" but he got his soul as a reward for falling.

25 There is more truth however, in these early ideas, than would appear on first thought. Man's "Fall" was due to his immediate opposition of his newly discovered free-will to the Divine Will and opposition always means friction. It also means that, as a result of conflict, there is bound to be a divergence of some sort, an institution of two separate and distinct ways. Man was destined to become the Grand Man, but he chose the Path of Pain and Sorrow and after all it was the best way. Perhaps that, too, was a part of the Divine Plan.

26 But while he was destined to be and has become the Grand Man forseen by the ancients, he is not nearly so grand as he is still destined to become. For if, as at present, he uses somewhat less than a third of his brain substance and still accomplishes miracles, what may we expect him to become when he shall have developed the use of his full brain power. Some there are who dream and talk and write about supermen as though they would be a different and higher race of men. They will be the same men, using all their powers instead of a third of them, and we hope that by that time the full use of such powers will also have demonstrated the uselessness and asininity of wars, and the shedding of one's brother's blood.

27 But, as a matter of fact, with all their good intentions, the early philosophers worked up so many Adams that they became hopelessly mixed up. The first was the Holy, Perfect Adam, described as the "Shadow that disappeared"; the second was the protoplasmic androgyne of the future terrestrial and sexually separated Adam. The third was the "man made of dust," the first innocent Adam. The fourth Adam was the being who became clothed with blood, bone and tissue, provided with the breath of life, a physical body and the powers of physical reproduction, and this fourth Adam is assumed by some to be the progenitor of the Human or Fourth Root Race, and the forefather or ancestor of our own Fifth Race. We prefer the more academic but straightforward exegeses of anthropology and geology.

28 In a way, Tetragrammation, the letters IHVH arranged in human form, is not only the Sephirotic Tree, it is also Adam Kadmon, the united body of the heavenly man, from whose limbs emanate the Universe and everything in it. So the crude idea of Adam Kadmon does bear some true correspondences and analogies with the Grand Man of a later and higher order of spiritual science. Adam Kadmon was assumed to be a septenary or seven-fold organization. True, for the Egyptian texts mention the seven souls of the pharaohs; seven souls or principles were identified in man by the British Druids; and Rosicrucianism is based on the sevenfold structure of man. So, truth, crudely revealed, persists in a clear stream.

29 Man, now really the Grand Man, stands to the celestial and the terrestrial as do the converter and transformer in an electric circuit. His office is that of transmutation. He converts the divine cosmic powers from invisible sources to visible uses. He transforms ordinary matter into divine substance. He transmutes lower forms of life energy into higher expression. Some men have sought to transmute ordinary or base metals into silver and gold. It is possible, and it has been done in some well-authenticated laboratories, but at a prohibitive expense. But man, solely within the laboratory of his own self, transmutes daily, whether his ignorance prevents him from doing so consciously or unconsciously, as the case may be, lower metals and minerals into something far higher than metallic silver and gold; namely, the purer gold of ethical and spiritual conceptions, insights and understandings. The Devil's taunt to the youngsters in the allegorical Garden of Eden, "ye shall become as gods" is being proved true every day in the year.

30 And speaking of the Garden of Eden and its famous Trees that have played such a tremendous part in human consciousness, few who read Genesis ever seek out the last words about those famous Trees. But the Tradition connected with them shows how irremovable an idea, once established, can become by the simple process of the mouth to ear repetition.

31 As it may have some interest for those who have done some intensive work in Rosicrucian lore, it will be briefly stated. It appears that the two Trees, the Tree of Life and the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil, were somewhat more than Trees. They each possessed individual consciousness, as became their importance. So, after the expulsion of the allegorical naughty Pair, the two Trees concluded that the Knowledge of Good and Evil was an essential concommitant of Life, so they joined roots and eventually became one Tree. In later ages, having grown large, and being preserved from vandalism because of the flaming swords of the Cherubim placed in their bark to keep off attacks, thus converting them into Thorns, they, or now it, became the tree under which Abraham met angels and conversed with them. Under this Tree also Enoch was given the keys of what later on became the Sacred Kabbala.

32 The united Tree played an important part as the shelter of many of the world's great ones down to the time of Christ. It furnished the wood for the Holy Ark of the Covenant in Solomon's Temple. A slab made from one of its branches was used by Christ to cross the Brook Kedron in his last hours. As an act of contempt, bystanders picked up this slab and offered it to the Roman soldiers, from which they made the Cross on which Christ was Crucified. Twigs torn from the rough sides of the slab furnished the Crown of Thorns on the head of Jesus. Later on, Joseph of Arimathea, after having successfully released the body of Jesus from the Cross, cut a stout staff from one of the lower branches of the parent Tree and used it on his travels northward to the British Isles, where, it is alleged, it was stuck into the ground, took root, blossomed and became the Holy Thorn of Glastonbury, and even put out the eye of a Puritan vandal who tried to cut it down during one of Britain's rhythmic religious frenzies. A chip from the axe put out the eye of the vandal and later caused his death.

33 So the Traditional history of the Tree of Life and the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil bobs up all through history in many more instances than these principal ones. Space prohibits a full catalog, but they show, as does the analogous story of the Wandering Jew, the persistence of an idea based upon original fact, supported and re-inforced by intervals of known fact; all of them together amplifying the original truth. Naturally, Good and Evil compose what we call life. The real cross on which the Christ was crucified was the cross of mortal life. But life springs eternal, even when forced into the ground, especially a foreign soil, and it WILL find the light and enter again and continuously into manifestation.

34 Man is described in Rosicrucian philosophy as a triply threefold being, having a threefold body, a threefold spirit and a threefold soul. As the Grand Man he is true to the ternary. His position and function as the Grand Man is also threefold, physiological, psychological and psychical, the last term holding the intrinsic merits of the Greek psyche in its fullest interpretation.

35 Physiologically, Man, as composed of and master of incalculable cells, each having its own specific intelligence, divides these cells into groups called organs, each of which becomes vested with the sum of the intelligence of that entire segregated grouping. Each organ then develops its own specific function. Each organ develops the selective power to choose from the nourishment supplied to the collective group of organs, that which it individually needs. This is but another phase of the law of natural selection which is so powerful elsewhere in the development and unfoldment of humankind. We say that man himself has made the division of cells into organs. This is most true, for man has not been left to come through evolutional process in a crazy, hap-hazard fashion, but under definite guidance, only THAT GUIDANCE HAS ALWAYS BEEN FROM WITHIN.

36 As man is the composite of innumerable cells, so each man is a cell in the structure of Adam Kadmon, wrongly called the Grand Man (which is Man himself, individually and collectively), but in reality the Archetypal Man. Collectively, the waves of human evolution and the type of life wave on other sidereal bodies of whatsoever nature they may be, constitute the organs in the greater structure of Adam Kadmon. Again, both the earthly and the heavenly bear the impress, each of the other.

37 Psychologically, Man, the Grand Man, functions in the sea of Mind Stuff which is the auric envelope of Adam Kadmon, extending far beyond the limitations of his far-flung celestal body and by virtue of which the Centrum or Logos is able to make His will felt and His mandates brought into manifestation in creative process. It is this sea of Mind Stuff that constitutes the vehicle of communication, connection and basic operative platform commonly known by spiritual scientists today as The UNIVERSAL MIND. Contrary to some opinions, Universal Mind is not our God or Logos Himself. It is the vehicle through which He contacts all His creation and carries on His process, which is far from being ended.

38 Through his ability to function with accelerating ability and capacity in this sea of Universal Mind, our Grand Man develops soul power and the vehicle of the soul. As this development of soul proceeded, Oh, so slowly at first, it might aptly be called the process whereby man literally DID pull himself up by his own bootstraps, out of the primaeval ooze, and began those rude cultures whose artifacts proclaim his age-long days in Nature's kindergarten.

39 Science has long puzzled the problem whether some individual man out of the higher pithecoids gradually emerged into waking intelligence and consciousness, and then communicated his own accomplishment to limited offspring, or, whether the emergence was that of a large collective group. It was the latter, made up of varying degrees of awakening. Most spiritual scientists are more or less familiar with the experiments made photographically of human emanation under various emotional states. Those who devote much of their time to the present-day concept of operative thought-forms can tie in their mental efforts on this basis of mental emanations, too. Well, does it not occur to students that what individuals are doing in isolated instances, the whole of our Grand Man IS and ALWAYS HAS BEEN DOING, and that is what has raised him from darkness and obscurity to the light of his present consciousness and the attainments made because of it?

40 Just as the French scientists were able to photograph the mental emanations under emotional states, so, if we could see all humanity collectively, we would see a remarkable phenomenon. Close to the earth plane would be seen an apparently seething ocean of semi-visible emanations, gas-like, twisting, turning, writhing, seeking to arrive at tangible form, yet obstructed by the efforts of other sections. But out of the whole, at times, a major form develops, which is the synthesis of a common desire or basic necessity on which all humanity unites, even tho unconscious of its unified action. This major form soon becomes so powerful that it enters into external manifestation, and another step upward is taken by the races; another year of progress dawns; another step toward the light has become a permanent fact instead of a hesitating venture.

41 Psychically, the Grand Man has developed that tenuous thread of divine consciousness, which has become well-worn in the eon-long search for self-consciousness. But now that his self-consciousness IS attained, perhaps to an undue degree, man is turning back to his divine consciousness and his psyche,—his permanently established soul, and is tuning up his aggressively vital physical organs and sensoria to that subtle pitch whereby they again become atone with the ineffable harmonics of the spheres; and, through a quickened intuition, the Grand Man, collective humanity, is bringing his culture, in spite of its mechanistic tendences, to a status of relative perfection. Psychically, our Grand Man is a true harp, responding to the vibrations of those Great Ones who have passed to Liberation ages before him, and in whose footsteps he is learning day by day how better to follow on.

42 So the true Grand Man of the Universe—ourselves collectively—you and I individually and on an infinitesimal scale, stands midway between the infinitely great and the infinitely small. From a study of the chemic conditions of other sidereal bodies, astronomers believe that while there may be sentient life on Mars and Venus it is more than probable that our earth holds the requisite position orbitally between extremes of solar heat and spatial cold to produce a form of organism that can respond consciously to life with high intelligence. The highest knowledge man has thus far developed is the knowledge that he occupies the position of a creature, and that he has profound assurance of the existence of a Creator. That gives a definite goal toward which he is consciously working, for work onwards he MUST. He is the focal point upon which the forces and energies of life invisible to him, both beneath and above him, impinge. So, he is a true medium or rather mediation. Through him the lower steps up. Through him the higher can step down for greater manifestation and revelation as fast as man develops the capacity to receive, understand and assimilate it.

43 In man, the ancient Greek mythos of the demi-god suspended between heaven and earth finds a fundamental basis in fact. And when we realize that there are giant suns capable of holding several of our own suns, with all their attendant planetary satellites, it is not inapt to allude to our planetary neighbors as organs, and to the humanity of them (or of our own at least) as the cells of those organs, with each cell composed not only of teeming forms of life but of atomic solar systems.

44 We have become so accustomed, through the emphasis placed upon biological and anthropological studies, to assume that our human progress is being made solely by ourselves, and from and of our own initiative, that we take a more or less mechanistic view of life in spite of our carefully cherished religious and ethical ideas. Yet the truth is quite the contrary. All our great adaptation of natural forces to commercial and other convenience has always been POSSIBLE, but none of them became facts in manifestation until we arrived at the capacity to receive and USE them properly. Had they been available in our earlier ignorance they might have destroyed the species. Every great discovery made by man has been due, of course, (either through accident or careful intent), to his persistence and initiative. Beyond all these factors each discovery has also been a true revelation, a far truer revelation than many of those propounded by theologians, who, after all, have obscured God more than they have ever revealed Him.

45 So, although we sometimes fear we are taking a too mechanistic view of life and its purport, after all, our material progress has been and IS consonant with our spiritual unfoldment. That is why our species constitutes the Grand Man. That is why you and I are really grand men and women, which we are also quite prone to assume ourselves to be. But human progress has always been dependent upon our unsatisfied search for "something better," a "better way," a better hope, as the apostle termed it. How much progress would have obtained had the history of our race been one of continuous effort to evade responsibilities, to do less and less, to be content with aboriginal conditions? And we are making an even stronger attempt to get ourselves out of the aboriginism of the present than our ancestors did to get out of that of the past.

46 It is customary among the serious minded, to take some subject for daily meditation. How often does it occur to them to take, say, the thought, "I am a model of the Universe. In me all things meet. My mind is elastic. It comprehends much of the infinitely small. It responds willingly and intelligently to motivating impulses from the infinitely great. Just WHAT IS MY INDIVIDUAL PLACE IN THIS GREAT PLAN?" Such meditation might arouse in the thinker an unusual train of ideas, and such ideas could only lead to something very much worth while. Only, when we ask ourselves, "What is my individual part in this Great Plan?" let us not make the mistake made by so many, of running about asking this one or that to tell us what our part is. That must come, if it is to come at all, to us through our own inner faculties which will prompt us to seize, opportunely, the time and the place to enter into the niche life holds in store for us.

47 Great thoughts do not force themselves upon one. Great thoughts come only to those who seek them and make ready to receive them by keeping the vision broad and clear from all clinkers of prejudice, egotism, smug self-satisfaction or a quasi-dilletantte attitude toward life. For such, life seldom takes the trouble to develop a message worth while. There must be persistent desire and intent to qualify to receive life's inner message of meaning. Not to feel that one IS always fully qualified and possessed of the right to demand of life its message that the Grand Man is ever interpreting, but so to live, that the process of living is, in itself, a process of continuously qualifying. Then, when we least expect it, the individual word is given us and a world of new significance opens out before us.

48 If we could only bring ourselves to stop contemplating ourselves as a collection of biological growths, functioning in more or less unity and harmony, we might set a far more legitimate evaluation of ourselves. Substitute for the mechanistic attitude the idea that life is a spiritual adventure in mortality, remembering always that the mortal is unreal and illusory,—permanent only for so long as the sense perceptions can hold the picture it presents. That same picture is ever changing for and to others; no two of us see life in the same way or as the same thing, no matter how much we may agree. Only that which is the same to all and for all, always, can be REAL and eternal.

49 The Grand Man will go on and on, unfolding more and more, casting off obsolete structures as time calls for their elimination in favor of simpler processes and modes of being and functioning. But he will become a far grander man when his individual units become more and more aware of the true grandeur of their position and begin to call into action the divine talents with which they are invested.

50 For many millions of years our Grand Man was anything but grand. Those first millions of years, occupied in slowly awakening, were devoted to the struggle for existence when existence meant a REAL struggle against the gigantosaurians. His instinct and cunning animal faculties were sharpened to a point that made the access of waking consciousness seemingly a sine qua non.

51 But in due time, there came a point from which he began to forge ahead of the lower orders and began to assume his rightful place. His speed has been constantly accelerating. Today, an individual, in the same number of years, leads an infinitely longer and fuller life than his forefathers of two or three generations ago, and incredibly beyond that of his forbears among the real bears of cave-dwelling times.

52 If we are to develop a vital comprehension of our position as, individually or collectively, the Grand Man of the Universe, we must always have right up front in our consciousness the fact that there are two salient fundamentals of our higher consciousness, namely;—

1 Nature is God in external manifestation.
2 Humanity is God thinking Himself into expression.

Add to these the fact that Humanity is the highest expression of Nature and we arrive at a point in logic that should make our status quite clear. The next thing to do is to LIVE UP TO IT.

53 No one who has arrived at maturity and has failed to gain a concept, not unmixed with awe, of the grandeur of human life, is capable of entering upon the active conscious exercise of his mission as a mortal. It is easy to ask as children and later as grown up children the usual questions, "Where did I come from, How did I get here, Where am I going, etc." The best and sanest question of all would be for us to ask our inner and higher selves WHAT AM I? It is true that we are, each, divine emanations, flashing for a moment in time into a second of space, leaving a trail of sequential effects, and then, like meteors, snapping back into the invisible. Compared with even the best theory of eternity which mortal mind can entertain with safety, human life is less in duration than the flash of a fire-fly on a summer's evening, yet in that so brief space it is capable of making an impress that sometimes secures immortality in the hearts and minds of its fellow beings.

54 It seems a far cry, as we look up to the sparkling scintillating diamonds in the sky, to try to convince ourselves that in some not only mystic but actually chemical way we are individually and collectively a part of that vast vault. Only those, who, by their evolutionary status of unfoldment, have reached the requisite degree of understanding of at least a part of Nature's infinities, are capable of doing so in the fullest sense. But no one can even attempt to do so without experiencing at the same time a wave of wonderment. CAN THESE THINGS BE TRUE? we ask ourselves. And from somewhere, inwardly, there comes the sense of a reply in the affirmative. We do not hear a sound. We hear no voice. We FEEL the answer, and in that way we KNOW it to be a true answer.

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 85-89

LIBER #87 MORNING PRAYERS

Personal & Confidential NINTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

FRATERNITAS ROSÆ CRUCIS

Rome London
& New York

№

SPIRITUALITY

The man that hath no music in himself,
Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils:
The motions of his spirit are dull as night,
And his affections dark as Erebus.
LET NO SUCH MAN BE TRUSTED.

Shakespeare, Merchant of Venice, Act v, sc. 1.

THE subject texts of several of our recent Instructions have been taken from the writings of William Shakespeare, the great Rosicrucian and Master of human nature, and we offer no apology for so doing for it has been with special intent and purpose.

Scriptural texts are more or less familiar to all, even to those who may know little about the Bible as such, itself. To select a biblical text for this particular subject would be to defeat our own purpose, for what we want to arrive at above all is, not the theological definition of "spirituality" nor the orthodox concept of it, but a practical, acceptable, sensible understanding of the term, based upon a concensus of the carefully workt out interpretations of those who are recognized authorities on matters pertaining to the human heart and mind.

Possibly no one word in the English language of equal importance is so often misused by clergymen, filosofers, psychologists, scientists and laymen alike. Above all, it is most often misused by those who are self-appointed leaders and teachers of the manifold groups of "New" or "Liberal" Thought cults and societies.

As a result of this careless usage, the term "spirituality" has come to be almost synonymous with whimsical, nonsensical sentimentalism, vivid imagination, abnormal concepts of the ideals of love, human brotherhood, Divine paternalism, and even our ideas of patriotism and love of country.

To be "spiritual" as the world interprets the word today, means more often than otherwise, to be a mollycoddle. To be truly spiritual does not necessarily mean woozy hair and burlap smocks festooned with frenzied designs of Aztec atrocities for "advanst women" nor unkempt locks, flossy neckwear and velvet jackets for men. It is not acquired by reading erotic verse, attending lectures on "soul culture" by those who have not the faintest idea of what the soul really is, nor is it acquired by assimilating theories of government by the individual, compiled by those learned and advanst individuals who have not the slightest ability to govern themselves.

Spirituality is the manifest possession of a definite personal power that comes, not from any outward source, theory or cultus, but from the Source of ALL power, the God within. Spirituality comes not from academic instruction of any sort but from the FIRE enkindled by the afflatus consequent on true awakening to the Divine nature of the Ego, its Divine Sonship and the consciousness of being in rapport with its Divine Parent.

Spirituality is not consequent upon education, erudition or scholastic attainments, nor upon the possession of Degrees in Divinity which few Doctors thereof understand. True spirituality enabled the profets of the Hebrew dispensation to stand as mighty men before powerful pharaohs and kings; spirituality enabled twelve unlettered men of the new dispensation to joyfully sacrifice their lives in the defense of what they KNEW to be truth; and spirituality enabled hundreds of Christian martyrs to suffer death in the Roman arena and elsewhere in the cause of their profest principles.

Today, however, in spite of some notable exceptions whose examples stand out in sharp contrast to the general background of Humanity in the mass. it is seldom that we find those whose spiritual power manifests in anything like the same degree as that already cited. Then, spiritual power enabled men to stand before kings and princes. Now, there is insufficient to enable us to stand before politicians. The nature and character of men and women which, in times of crisis, takes a back seat or a secondary place in deference to policy, diplomacy, or what is ambiguously called a conservative "view of the circumstances," can hardly be called "spiritual."

Then again, what often passes current for spirituality, is really none other than the manifestation of a morbid imagination or attitude toward life as a whole and some particular phase thereof as a focus of attention.

Let us recur to the text; "The man that hath no MUSIC in himself, nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds . . . The MOTIONS of his spirit are dull as night."

Shakespeare's writings have been oft times favorably and seriously compared to those of the Bible. In this case we must apply the same rule as an exegesis of the wisdom of this later Master, as we do to Him of whom it is recorded that "without a parable, spake He not unto them."

Exoterically, or, taken as they stand, the lines quoted from the Bard of Avon would mean little more than a mere matter of sentiment; the gauging of human character by the response of the emotions, and this may often exhibit many contradictions and paradoxes of nature, personality and individuality, not the least of which is the truth that even among the most hardened criminals so-called, we find murderers who are especially humane to animals, brutes who soften at the cry of a child, wife-beaters who rush to the defence of a woman in distress and yet, as the late P. T. Barnum would have put it, "the entire stupendous and glorious aggregation going into raptures and even tears over some old familiar hymn like "Nearer My God to Thee" in the prison chapel. Yet all of them were WHERE they were because, as Shakespeare put it, they were "fit for treasons, stratagems and spoils, their affections were dark as Erebus; they were men not to be trusted."

Shakespeare knew this as well as we do; perhaps far better. Esoterically, there is far more under the surface than appears, in the lines of our text. He had a very definite purpose in emfasizing the importance of MUSIC as a feature in estimating the depth of human character and its conjoined reference to the spirit. As one of the highest initiates of the Rosicrucian Fraternity, he proves his title to the designation by the very fact of his emfasis on the potentiality of Music, for it is well known to be a fundamental Rosicrucian principle.

Art is usually comprehended under the three generalizations of Painting, Sculpture and Music. The first two derive from the Astral World which is the region wherein Form and Color have the origins that are exprest in the Physical World. But Music, the highest of all artistic expression originates in the Thought World, the home of Tone. Music, NOT JAZZ, comes to us from the Second Heaven or Concrete Thought division of the Thought World and the best musician is he who can not only become in rapport with the vibrations of this region or plane, but who can also most truly approximate true abstraction and become in rapport with the vibrations of the Abstract Thought division of the Thought World. These become the foremost of their Art, Masters, whose works live imperishably after them.

Now if this ability to sense and appreciate music to SOME extent were denied to humanity as a whole and limited only to the disproportionate few, we should have no cause at court and society would have ample cause to scoff at the teachings of spiritual scientists who have made a careful study of man's subliminal nature. And Humanity would be doomed to a dull, drab, sodden existence, unrelieved by any of the brighter phases of human consciousness. The very fact that even criminals of the types mentioned ARE moved by music, proves the truth of our filosofy. But even so, and in full recognition of the general truth of this statement, there are, unfortunately those who have no music in themselves. And when we find such unfortunate mortals who are not moved with concord of sweet sounds; whose savage breasts no music hath charms to soothe; we may be very sure that such ARE fit for treasons, stratagems and spoils; we may be very sure that their affections are dark as Erebus and they are not to be trusted.

Let us contemplate the brighter side. Music has its origin as stated, in the second and third heavens or Concrete and Abstract Regions of the Thought World. Now these are also the home of the Human Spirit. The World of Life Spirit is the home of the Life Spirit. The World of Divine Spirit is the home of the Divine Spirit in man.

Spirituality therefore, is the combined product of the Divine, Life and Human spiritual potentialities in Man and is that phase of these three lofty and exalted World Regions inherent in Man.

To be truly spiritual therefore, a man or woman must manifest in the individual character the Divine, Life and Human Elements equally comingled. It is a matter of common observation that this is rarely true. In our state of society, one may evidence all the qualities of intense life or vitality, combined with humanitarian interest, but lacking any appreciation of the Divine. In fact several of the world's greatest humanitarians have been utterly without any sense of Divinity, even to the point of denying such a possibility.

Then again, there are those who have a keen sense of the Divine in all things, coupled with strong vitalizing sensibilities, but utterly without sense of human obligations or interest in the welfare of humanity as a whole.

Finally, there are those who are possest of a clear vision of the Divinity of all Nature and a conscientious sense of responsibility to Humanity, who are absolutely unable thru vital weakness of spirit to put into operation the forces which would make either their Divine or Human consciousness of value to the race.

Neither of these three classifications of humanity can be truthfully called "Spiritual" for neither of them posses the equalization of the three potentialities of the Threefold Spirit in a way that is applicable to human needs and scarcely sufficient for their own needs.

This truth applies equally to both men and women, for as Milton expresses a well known Rosicrucian truth in his Paradise Lost (Bk. i, line 423):

"Spirits, when they please
Can either sex assume, or both."

Sex applies to the Physical Body, not to the Threefold Spirit. It is a notable fact that the male sex has produced the greatest number of undoubted Master Musicians, while the female sex has the most generalized appreciation of the Art and gives the most instant and unrestricted response to it.

While none of the three classifications of humanity mentioned (and these classifications can be multiplied and sub-divided to a great extent like the permutations of the Tetragrammaton), can be called truly "Spiritual", nevertheless, none of them will be found unmoved by concord of sweet sounds or totally without music in themselves. Rather will they be found to be limited in their appreciation of music and inconsistent in the quality of the music that does affect them.

This is seen in the fact that music is an expression of the highest approach to spirituality in man from the aboriginal savage if such still exists, to the most cultured product of our civilization. The savage expresses his concept of the proper manner of recognizing and acknowledging the power of Divinity by his dances and native music, and to him it is as impressive as the masterly compositions rendered in an imposing cathedral with aumented choirs in our centers of culture.

True spirituality will always be found to have its concomitant of musical appreciation, even tho the individual may be totally unable to express himself in an orthodox musical fashion. At least there will ALWAYS and INEVITABLY be noted the possession of "music in the soul," "music within himself" and the response to the concord or harmony of sweet sounds or the assimilation of the subtle vibrations of the spheres of Abstract Thought. The true musician has the opportunity of expressing himself thru improvisation, and it is a noteworthy fact that those who are most truly spiritual, who respond unrestrictedly to this language of the soul and evidence of spiritual power do so to a greater extent to improvisation than to a definite composition, for there is the recognition that they are in the presence of a personal rapproachment with the music of the spheres brot down to our mundane plane.

Spirituality is the manifestation of the equilibrium of the forces of the Threefold Spirit is composed of the Divine, Life and Human Elements.

Each phase of the Threefold Spirit must therefore have its co-ordinate expression in manifestation. These co-ordinates are—

Of the Divine Spirit.....Personal Responsibility.
Of the Life Spirit.....Moral Accountability.
Of the Human Spirit.....Guardianship of Life.

The first manifestation or expression of Spirituality is the sense of obligation in the guardianship of all life. This has been an esoteric doctrine of all religions of antiquity, except among those wherein animal and even human sacrifices were offered. As man progresses in intelligence he gradually begins to understand the tremendous processes which have made organic life in all its multiform phases, possible, and he values life and cherishes it, first on account of its value to him, then on account of his dawning recognition that all comes from God or Deity of some conception and IS therefore, Deific in its inherent nature. Even human life, cheap as it is held under some circumstances, is vastly dearer today than it was a few centuries ago.

This last statement may sound like an euphemism, but it is woefully true, for in many countries a horse or other animal is slain with greater hesitation than a member of the human family.

The second manifestation of Spirituality is the developing and quickening sense of Moral Accountability. The evolving homo is learning more and more of the truth that he is individually accountable morally for his deeds and misdeeds, than ever before. Time was when the king thought for his subjects, priests thought for their parishioners, local magistrates thought for their fellow townsmen. But today, every man, theoretically at least, stands equal before the law and ignorance of it excuses none.

This fact has develop a higher sense in man than merely being good to evade the law, or as someone has said, using heaven as a fire escape from hell. It has made man stop, look and listen, in his attitude toward his fellow men and gradually it has dawned and is still dawning on the individual man that he IS his brother's keeper and the keeper of the public conscience to the limit of his individual ability.

The third manifestation of the true Spirituality, is the awakening and evolution of the sense of Personal Responsibility. We are responsible personally for WHAT WE ARE PERSONALLY. No man or woman can make us other than what we are willing to be be. If we permit them to do so, it is a sign and confession of individual weakness but still we are responsible personally.

We are individually responsible for what the world is while we are in it. We may not be responsible for all that is in the world but we ARE responsible for our individual share of what we have contributed to the world. If we have contributed fraud, trickery, deceit, sensualism, frivolity or dishonesty, we are responsible not only for the immediate measure, but we also assume unconsciously the accumulation of karma that shall be developed by the response of others to our contribution.

If we contribute honesty, constructive enterprise, moral and social development and civic regeneration, then we shall also be responsible for its effects on future generations, and so acute and exacting is this law, that we shall be responsible for the seemingly distressing effects that our intended good may cause to others who may not be in sympathy with our ideals. Nevertheless, our intent will prevent in this case the accumulation of distressing karma, for our forces are allied with those of constructive good.

The sense of Guardianship of Life, teaching us our relation to our younger brothers of the Animal Kingdom and the value and sanctity of ALL life, is the first manifestation of Spirituality.

The sense of Moral Accountability and our equitable relations with our fellow men, is the second manifestation of Spirituality and will be observed to also comprise essentially the first manifestation, or sense of the value and sanctity of life.

Personal Responsibility is the third manifestation of Spirituality, and in its application to our attitude toward the world, it will be observed to comprise the first and second manifestations.

Thus it is, that true Spirituality should combine in perfect equilibration all the potentialities of the Threefold Spirit, Divine, Life and Human. It is only by this complete and perfect equilibration that we can understand the truth that spiritual things can only be spiritually discerned.

"God is a Spirit and they that worship Him must worship Him in Spirit and IN Truth." How many of the millions of nominal adherents of this truth have ever fully understood it? Man is a Threefold Being. He has the Threefold Spirit, Threefold Soul, and Threefold Body. But his Threefold Body is first in visible manifestation on the mundane plane. His Threefold Soul is the product or pabulum extracted or developt FROM the Threefold Body by the Threefold Spirit. Now obviously, Man cannot worship God in any spiritual sense with his body alone. Nor can he worship God with his Soul, if the soul extracted is too weak, or if poverty of experience has made it difficult for the Threefold Spirit to develop Soul to the requisite strength, nor will he even have sufficient soul-quality if the activity of the Threefold Spirit is too weak to carry out the process of extraction.

Therefore, it is not difficult to see that only by the development to full strength and power of the three manifestations of the Threefold Spirit on the mundane plane, can Man have the ability, power or privilege of really worshipping or KNOWING God in the real spiritual sense. His knowledge will be after all, an academic theory or hypothesis, which may, nevertheless, be perfectly sincere.

The man or woman who has developt the three requisites of Guardianship of Life, Moral Accountability and Personal Responsibility, indicates that he or she has truly attained a definite degree of real Spirituality as distinguisht from sentiment or emotionalism and is therefore capable of spiritually discerning spiritual things and of intelligently and consciously worshipping or knowing God IN Spirit and IN Truth, because in a state of Spiritual Unity and Truthful Unity; Truth meaning simply oneness or unity, immutable and unchangeable; fixity and permanence of Fact.

Spirituality therefore, being the combined attributes of the product of the Thought Worlds, also comprises all the conditions of the World Regions immediately anterior to the Thought Worlds;—the Astral, with its seven sub-divisions of Soul Power, Soul Light and Soul Life, Feeling, Wishes, Impressionability and Passion, and the seven subdivisions of the Physical World, including the activities and potentialities of the four Ethers. No mortal or finite creature can judge his fellow men from the standpoint of the immortal and Infinite. But we can for our own safety and the assurance that we are receiving correct teaching, apply the acid test of these three positive requisites, to the lives of those who asume to be our teachers, leaders and guides to the attainment and realization of the Spiritual life.

Does a man presume or assume to teach us true Spirituality? How shall we be justified in placing dependence upon his teachings? By this rule;—has he a strong and acute sense of Personal Responsibility; has he a strong and acute sense of Moral Accountability, or is he one of those who take life as it comes along, irresponsible, leaving things to "work themselves out somehow, sometime, someway or other? Has he a well defined sense of the sanctity and value of all life from the lowest to the highest, knowing it to be the scale of manifested processes of the Divine thinking Itself into tangible, physical expression?

If our teachers have all these necessary qualifications, let us apply the final acid test, prescribed by Shakespeare—has he music in himself?, is he moved with concord of sweet sounds? For in the ultimate analysis it will be found that music and spirituality are one and the same, synonymous and indivisible. Music is the language of the Spirit and none can claim to be spiritual who do not understand the language of the spiritual world and the spiritual life.

Every human being who is really spiritual will also be found to have this music within himself. For public safety nature has wisely ordained that most of us will keep it within ourselves for it is given to but few to be able to express the music of their souls audibly. We may not be able to vocalize or to express our feelings instrumentally, but we do know what it means to sing to ourselves within ourselves, to see music as some can, in color and form, in all nature; and, if we have individually attained any definite progress or standing, in everything that we contact.

This does not necessarily mean that we must expect a well developt appreciation and understanding of music before one is entitled to be called "spiritual." It does mean that inwardly, sub-consciously or consciously, one does feel a definite response to rhythm and a sense of stimulated vibration and exaltation consequent upon an appreciation, as Sandivogius expresses it, "of the wonders of God in all natural things."

The deeper science probes into the fenomena of vibration, the nearer it approaches to an actual study of the Divine. To physicists, the relations between the vibrations of sound and light are well known. Sound waves under certain circumstances become luminous. Light waves under certain conditions become not only audible but resonant. At present we only dimly apperceive the the existence of vibratory conditions and states far above and below the ordinary range of sense perception, and when we shall have learned more about them, we will find that sound and light vibrational waves are always both luminous and resonant.

In this sense we can understand why it is that the person with music in his soul is light hearted and we can also understand the reason why many have experienced the greatest spiritual illumination and awakening while under the subtle influence of music, but if the ability to appreciate and respond to it were not present the finest music in the world would have been to no avail.

Another point is hereby brot home to us. If there is such a tangible association or identity between the musical and luminous vibrations and if these vibrations manifest in definite physical and ethical resultants, then we must assume that true spirituality is not only a definite state of mind, but also that it has a very positive physical basis of substance and this substance is none other than the co-ordinated etheric substance which forms the impalpable medium of expression between the seen and unseen worlds.

The proof of this substantive basis of true spirituality is witnessed psychically in the aura of the person definitely striving toward and arriving at a spiritual estate. The shades of violet demonstrate the attainment of the higher type of psycho-intellectual life, but when the extreme of the violet begins to merge into a well defined golden glow, it is indisputable evidence of the attainment of a genuine status of true spirituality, indisputable because it will be attested and corroborated by the daily life of the person showing it.

This may in some cases become so strongly defined as to be visible not only psychically but physically, and so visible has it become in many cases that this golden aureole about the head and shoulders of the individual gave rise to the concept of the halo which we find depicted by artists about the head of persons justly renowned for their spiritual attainments. This we find in stained glass and oil portraiture of persons to whom sainthood is commonly accorded by unanimous assent.

Nowhere can we find better guidance to true spirituality than in the Old and New Scriptures of the Holy Bible which is the one great text book of the Fraternity, a fact attested by our Father Christian Rosencreutz. But we have purposely excluded reference to it so far in this Instruction simply in order to arrive at a scientific understanding of it based, not on Scriptural authority altho that is the highest, but to remove it as far as possible for the moment from the realm of theology and filosofy,to the plane of science and substantive fact.

Spirituality is not the ability to express glittering generalities and meaningless platitudes or mushy sentimentalism. It far more. It is the result of actually living a definite life scientifically planned for the purpose of developing our spiritual natures and above all designed to give full play to the activities of the Threefold Spirit, which in our age of crass materialism are made secondary or subordinate to physical conditions.

There is at the present day a wave of speculative inquiry into spiritual things but on a purely material plane. The man from Missouri says "show me." And in so doing he disqualifies at the start by ignoring the rule that spiritual things must be spiritually perceived. The Kingdom of Heaven cannot be taken by storm and the spiritual nature cannot be developt by laboratory methods. It is the Magnum Opus that must be accomplisht by each individual working solely by and for himself in the service of others.

As St. Paul said in 1. Cor. ii, 4, "my speech and my preachment was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power." 11, "For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him" Even so, the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God." 13, "Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth; comparing spiritual things with spiritual." "But the natural man, (the unawakened man 'from Missouri') receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them because they are spiritually discerned."

To be spiritual it is not necessary for us to go about with our heads figuratively in the clouds, affecting a narrow, repellant, morbid attitude of disapproval of all things essentially human. The "I am holier than thou" or "I thank God I am not as other men are" attitudes, are no evidence at all of any degree of spirituality. The best way to approach the spiritual life is by doing all that we have to do or can do the best we can possibly do it, striving for efficiency in things human while we also keep in mind that all things human are but the crystallized products of spiritual archetypes, and that whatever we build for a transient mortal expression we are also building for a permanent spiritual preservation and that generations yet to come will be guided in large measure by what we are doing today. If we keep the dual nature of all things ever in mind and cherish a desire for true spiritual awakening we may accomplish and attain it even before we are actively conscious of it.

THE CELESTIAL HIERARCHY; or, The Empyrean World

by

Miranda

The subject of this discourse is the realm of the abstract. It is not an easy one to research, being of a non-material nature. We have to rely on experience of mystics as set forth in their writings, as well as in scriptural documents. The subject can very easily take on tinges of fantasy which was amply illustrated when I started delving into it and came upon all kinds of material which gave the impression of being products of a too vivid imagination. Of course, I cannot prove anything I say. I can only give the fruits of my researches. Any statements I make or conclusions I draw, will necessarily be my own and may not be so in fact.

This Discourse on the Celestial or Angelic Hierarchy is in three sections: first, a listing of the divisions in the Angelic Hierarchy; second, descriptions of individual categories as far as I have been able to find in the sources consulted; and third, relationship to the Human Kingdom--that is, just where and how does the Angelic Kingdom tie in with humanity.

Let us consider the Empyrean World, or the World of Emanation, comprised of the three Sephiroth: Kether, Chokmah, and Binah--its nature has always fascinated mystics because of its laws, which, if fully discovered would make life more meaningful. It was thought that this realm is not ruled by change, such as prevails in the World of Orbs, or the World of Formation. One approach to the study of the Empyrean World is to study the Angelic Kingdom, which is about as easy as catching a moonbeam, as the popular song has it.

In considering the three worlds: Empyrean, Orbs, and Formation, we must keep in mind that there is no sharp line of demarcation between worlds--Physical/Etheric, Emotional, Mental/Empyrean. The Empyrean world is not an area somewhere out in the depths of space, jillions of miles away--all three worlds are ever present, interpenetrating one another. Which world we respond to, depends upon our state of consciousness.

The Sepher Yezirah of ancient Hebrews speaks of the Empyrean World, thus: ..."He (meaning God), established the throne of glory, the Seraphim, holy living creatures, angels, and of these He formed His habitation."

Psalm 104, verse 4, says: "Who madeth His angels spirits; his ministers a flaming fire."

Both, the Old and New Testaments of the Bible, abound in references to angels.

We have a catalog breakdown of the Angelic Hierarchy in a compilation of writings ascribed to Dionysius, the Areopagyte. Various critics doubt the authorship, and literary analysis shows that it is not the work of one person, but right now we are not considering the pros and cons of Dionysius, and only refer to the catalog, whoever the author or authors may be, to whom we are indebted for information. The dispute is a long-standing one and doubtless will continue.

Anyway, there are nine grades to the Angelic Hierarchy, and the scheme allots three grades to each World. It shows Seraphim, Cherubim, and Thrones in the Empyrean World.

In the World of Orbs, we have Dominions, Virtues, and Powers.

And, in the World of Formation, there are Principalities, Archangels and Angels.

In Dionysius' listing, the categories are called choirs, which constitute the Celestial Hierarchy. There are three choirs, one for each world, and each of the choirs has three divisions as listed above.

The term, Hierarchy, means a scheme of ascending grades of rank and power, which connotates the idea of evolvement. Mystical writings seems to be in agreement on the evolvement idea in connection with the Angelic Kingdom. It seems that the Angelic Kingdom is evolving the same as the Human Kingdom. Both Kingdoms are parallel in a way. But, there is a difference in the manner by which evolvement proceeds. In the Human Kingdom, evolvement is achieved through suffering and limitation. In the Angelic Kingdom, evolvement is through joyousness and service. Evolvement in the Human Kingdom is comparatively rapid and in the Angelic Kingdom it is slower, taking eons upon eons as measured by our time standards. In short, the definition of Hierarchy, itself, denotes a rank or order, each subordinate to the one above it. So much for that.

A few descriptions are available of the various ranks:

Seraphim--Isaiah, Chapter 6, verse 2 in the Bible, says that each Seraphim has 6 wings--with 2 he covers his face, with 2 he covers his feet, and with 2 propels himself. Since the Empyrean World is pure emanation and energy, the "wings" are deduced to be radiations of force and energy. The Law of Attraction, we are told by the mystics, is an attribute of the Empyrean World, therefore it is the vast cohesive force of the universe in operation. Also, it is pure Adoration. And that is the Kingdom of Beings nearest God.

Cherubim--Again Isaiah, as well as Ezekiel, describe them as winged beings that go in pairs. They typify Universal Mind in operation, governing analysis and multiplicity in the universe. They emanate Wisdom, and are the Spirit, the very essence of Truth. Seemingly, Cherubim is a composite being, and according to Ezekiel, symbolize wisdom and justice. Francis Bacon says, "We find as far as credit is to be given to the Celestial Hierarchy of that supposed Dionysius the Senator of Athens, the first place or degree is given to the angels of love...termed Seraphim; the second to the angels of light, termed Cherubim."

Thrones--We go back to Dionysius. Thrones attend to the functions of Rulership on the universal level--it is the Universal Will.

Virtues--These govern mental activities and work closely with Dominions (sometimes called Dominations), the category just below them.

Dominions--In modern language, one would say they are the Angels of supply and demand, in fact the agents of supply and demand. They take care of the economy of Nature. Plans and orders for unfoldment of manifested life originate in this realm. Research on this class of beings seems to have been quite intensive and extensive by mystics in India. Apparently, Indian mystics did much more in the way of study, as well as recording their findings on this particular category. They call it the Deva Kingdom. But, they do say that these are only one of the great lines of force contained in the Divine Expression.

Powers--These deal with universal laws of cause and effect; they work to transmute evil into good. "Lords of Destiny" they are called. Archangel Michael belongs to this order.

Principalities--These Beings govern areas, nations, governments, inspire leaders and world servers. They are in charge of various religions. Mostly they work along humanitarian and cultural lines. They do not have anything to do with the policies of nations, however. Jacob Boehme in his Mysterium Magnum has a chapter on the Angelic Kingdom, which agrees with Dionysius. He also says that each country has an angel with his legions. Evidently, Boehme refers to Principalities. He says also that there are angels over the four elements of earth, air, fire and water--which corroborates what Indian mystics have recorded.

Archangels--These are the "Staff Officers", as it were. They serve as emissaries or messengers of God.

Angels--These are closest to the physical realm of being. They are supposed to be readily seen with a minimum of clairvoyance. Nearest to us is the Guardian Angel Kingdom. It is said that rarely, but not too much so, a Being of this order gets somehow onto the path of human evolvement by desiring faster progress or some other reason and takes on a body, thus continuing evolvement as a human. This is the lowest Order in the scheme of the Celestial Hierarchy.

Hebrew tradition, specifically the Zohar, gives no tables of the Angelic Hierarchy. It does speak of great hosts and cohorts, battalions of Guardians. It does specify, however Metatron as the leader of the Celestial Host and his place is immediately beneath the throne of God.

1st Choir	2nd Choir	3rd Choir
Seraphim	Virtues	Principalities
Cherubim	Dominions	Archangels
Thrones	Powers	Angels

In Scriptural writings, we find references to Archangels: Michael, Gabriel, Raphael, and Uriel. The Apocryphal Book of Tobit, Chapter XII, verse 5, quotes Raphael as saying, "I am one of the seven." Apparently, there are seven Archangels in all. Diligent search in the Bible locates only five:

Gabriel--He ministrates comfort and sympathy to man. He is a herald of good tidings, and announced the coming of the Messiah. Mohammedans believe that it was he who dictated the Koran to Mohammed.

Michael--He is said to have special charge of the Israelites as a nation, according to Daniel X, verses 13, 21. He also warred with his angels against the rebellious hosts and drove them forth. He is the cleanser of evil and discord in humans, organizations, and systems. Thus, he is pictured with a flaming sword, a symbol of his function.

Raphael--As mentioned before, the Apocryphal book of Tobit mentions him as traveling with Tobias and advising him. The Apocryphal book of Enoch also mentions him. Hebrew tradition has him in charge of healing. Genesis refers to a book of the generations of Adam. The Zohar explains that this signifies a secret and supreme book, source of all (and that each name mentioned in this book of generations veils some sort of information). This book of Generations was given to Adam by Raphael, who is said to be in charge of the supreme mysteries. He is also the keeper of creative talents, and is supposed to endow worthy individuals with the gift of being able to portray beauty through the arts.

Uriel--According to Hebrews, he is the flame or light of God. He is supposed to be the Supreme Helper, working with the discouraged. He sends renewed inspiration. Also, he works specially with music.

Now, that lists four. What are the other three? In adding Metatron, we have five, which still leaves us short. We need two more to make seven.

Interestingly, Japanese tradition lists seven spirits of happiness:

Benten--music and eloquence (Uriel?)

Bishamon--giver of wealth. (Apparently an angel from the Powers category.)

Daikoku--god of supply and plenty (another angel of the order of Dominions).

Ebisu--connected with fish and water in some way. (This would be a being from the Principalities category.)

Hotei--guardian of children. (Apparently of the Guardian Angel Kingdom.)

Jurojin--bestows longevity. (Probably a being of the Virtues category.)

We are free to make our own comparisons.

Mather in his book on the Kabalah, lists the following: Metatron as ruler over Ratziel, Tsaphkiel. Tzadkiel, Kamael, Michael, Haniel, Raphael, Gabriel, and Sandalphon. This gives us ten--three more than seven.

A.E. Waite's The Secret Doctrine of Israel, has an interesting circular chart of the Sephiroth, which gives us this list: Metatron, Ratfiel, Sabtaiel, Thadkiel, Camai, Raphael, Henil, Michael and Gabriel. And this gives us nine. The numbers and names vary. Somewhere there must be an explanation and an agreement.

The various descriptions of angels, which I came across, opened up a scientific line of reasoning. According to the descriptions given, there are indications of streams of force of a terrifically high frequency. Technological speculation on ultrahigh frequencies opens up trains of thought on the nature, the characteristics, the laws governing operation of microwaves, electronics, nucleonics and make thinking about the Celestial Hierarchy very interesting from a scientific point of view.

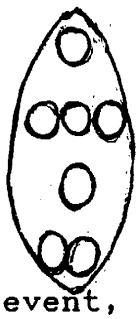
It is said that angels emanate colors. This triggers off speculation on photons which are quanta of radiant energy.

The body of an angel seems to be a web of closely interlocking streams of force. This web, or mesh of knots, which in their tens of thousands, are woven together and form in certain localities in the energy body of an angel various focal points of force, of which the most important are seven centers. However, there are many smaller focal points in the body of an angel. Among my notes in my files, I found a diagram showing the location of the seven major focal points of force in an angelic body. I do not remember now where I got this diagram.

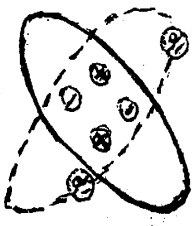


Points of force in an angelic "body"

In any event, Angels' function seems to be that of transmitting spiritual energy, which we call love, in all its aspects. Another name for this energy, is the Law of Attraction. Mystics from time immemorial knew of this energy, termed Law of Attraction.

Science is just discovering it. Although the atomic theory was set forth by Democritus about 400 B.C., it is only within the twentieth century that any intensive and extensive experimentation and study has been applied to this subject, so closely related to the Law of ATTRACTION. When it was discovered that the atom is not the ultimate constituent of matter, the discovery gave only partial answers. We still do not completely understand scientifically what the forces are which hold the nuclear structure together and oppose the electric repulsion forces which otherwise would provoke the dispersion of the protons in the nucleus.

Protons in opposition



Helium

What is the explanation for the fact that protons which repel each other so violently should remain solidly bound in the atomic nucleus? What is this Law of Attraction? It takes billions of volts of electricity to smash a picayune tiny, tiny atom that one cannot even see. This cohesive force which glues together the particles of an atom, this Law of Attraction, we are told by the mystics, is an attribute of the Empyrean World, and is the vast cohesive force of the universe in operation--also it is the realm of the Angelic Hierarchy.

As far as science is concerned, this Law of Attraction is the highest energy we know of, and yet know nothing about it. How does it work? Is this force by itself, electrical? thermal? magnetic? We know that it is a cohesive force holding the particles of an atom together, but does it undulate in waves? Has it a rotary motion? or a spiral one? In short, what is its nature and what are its attributes and characteristics?

Scientists now are trying to find the answer. They have built particle accelerators in Europe and in America. The accelerator at Stanford University in California is a long, long tube, at least a couple of miles long, in which atoms are accelerated--made to spin faster--to make the particles within them separate so that action and reaction of the particles can be studied. A vacuum has to be created within the tube in order to do this. It was hoped that the Law of Attraction will reveal its secrets. This is the realm within which, the Celestial Hierarchy holds forth, and any discoveries concerning it, will surely be of great interest to mystics.

In making comparisons of the Human with the Angelic Kingdom, we have to find the common denominator, or that element or aspect which both have in common. This seems to be energy. We know that a human being is an electromagnetic force. We have instruments proving electrical frequencies in human beings. Increasingly we are being made aware of our physical bodies as having electrical properties. Much along these lines of research was an outgrowth of the effort to put man into space, possibly on other planets. The human body has never been studied as intensely as it is being studied now. Biophysics has had millions of dollars allotted to it by the government, so that research laboratories and universities are coming up with more and more instruments, magnetic, electronic and microwave, to measure and analyze the way force and energy work with the human mechanism. Increasingly, scientists are verifying what mystics have known for thousands of years. Sometime, somewhere, maybe in the not too distant future, the two lines of inquiry, mystical and scientific, are going to meet and I hope it happens very soon. I would like to see it.

The chemistry of the body seems to be closely linked with the electromagnetic forces generated within us. The depths of the chemical constitution of our human bodies shows that we have a spiral, a screw-like activity in every one of us, and in every one of us it turns the same way. Our bodies contain the right rotary motion of glucose, and the left rotary form of fructose--both making a continuous back and forth spiral. This consideration of the energy and forces in humanity which show itself as being the common denominator existing between the Human and the Angelic Hierarchies, must be the link between the two. But, in the human, it is natural that the chemistry of the body be tied in with the electrical force. We all know that various type crystals are conductors of electricity and both emanate and receive various forms of energy. Crystals have growth and the crystals in our bodies are microscopic and are sensitive to ultra-high frequencies, higher frequencies even than can be detected by modern instrumentation. The food we eat is, of course, important in the chemistry of our bodies. The chemistry of our bodies manufactures the crystals, and the type of crystal manufactured will determine the type of energy to which we will respond. This is really the story in back of vegetarianism. The finer the ultimate crystal growth, the higher the forms of energy it will respond to.

One thing about this transmission and receiving of energy: electrical, magnetic, nucleonic, microwave, or whatever--it has mathematical laws, like music, and the type of harmony it makes will determine which field in which world, we will contact. And there you have choirs of angels singing. They are not actually singing, it is the vibration of their bodies, harmonic waves--if you will--which translates itself to us as we tune in, as singing. It is their harmonic emanations that sound like music when we attune ourselves to their realms it seems.

Another curious sidelight. We as humans, do not seem to be developing evenly, at least in our sensory perceptions. For instance, some testimonies show that individuals have seen these glorious--in our eyes--beings, and have heard nothing. Others have heard the most beautifully ethereal music not encountered on the face of this earth, yet have seen nothing. Very, very rarely, are there testimonies where both sight and sound were synonymous.

Back to the spiral of energy in the human body, and the relationship between the Sephiroth and the human kingdom. The Hebrew tradition, from which the Christian tradition is drawn, says that this tree, the Sephirothic Tree, the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil, is in every human being and reintegration of Man with God depends upon raising the vibratory rate of the spiral, screw-like flow of energy comprising the tree, until the vibratory rate approximates a harmonious octave with the various choirs of the Angelic Hierarchy. The higher the vibratory rate, the higher the order of the Angelic Kingdom will be contacted.

Jacob Boehme, one of the foremost Christian mystics, said that we cannot see angels with our physical eyes because we do not live in their principle as yet. When he speaks of living in their principle, he means illumined man, infused with the Christ force, Yeheshuah, the pure Love, the force of the Law of Attraction of the Empyrean World. Such a person, infused with such a power, will have the power of the pentagram, both to invoke and to banish. In drawing the Pentagram, he will draw upon the power, the force, the energy of each Sephirah of the Sephirothic Tree inside of himself. Crown, Splendor, Wisdom, Intelligence, Victory, and back to Crown. Naturally, we have as much power as we have Christ force within, no more and no less. If our house is not wired for 220, we cannot have an electric kitchen. Oh, we can run a vacuum cleaner, perk some coffee, run a washing machine--but nothing really big. This is a homely comparison, but a good illustration.

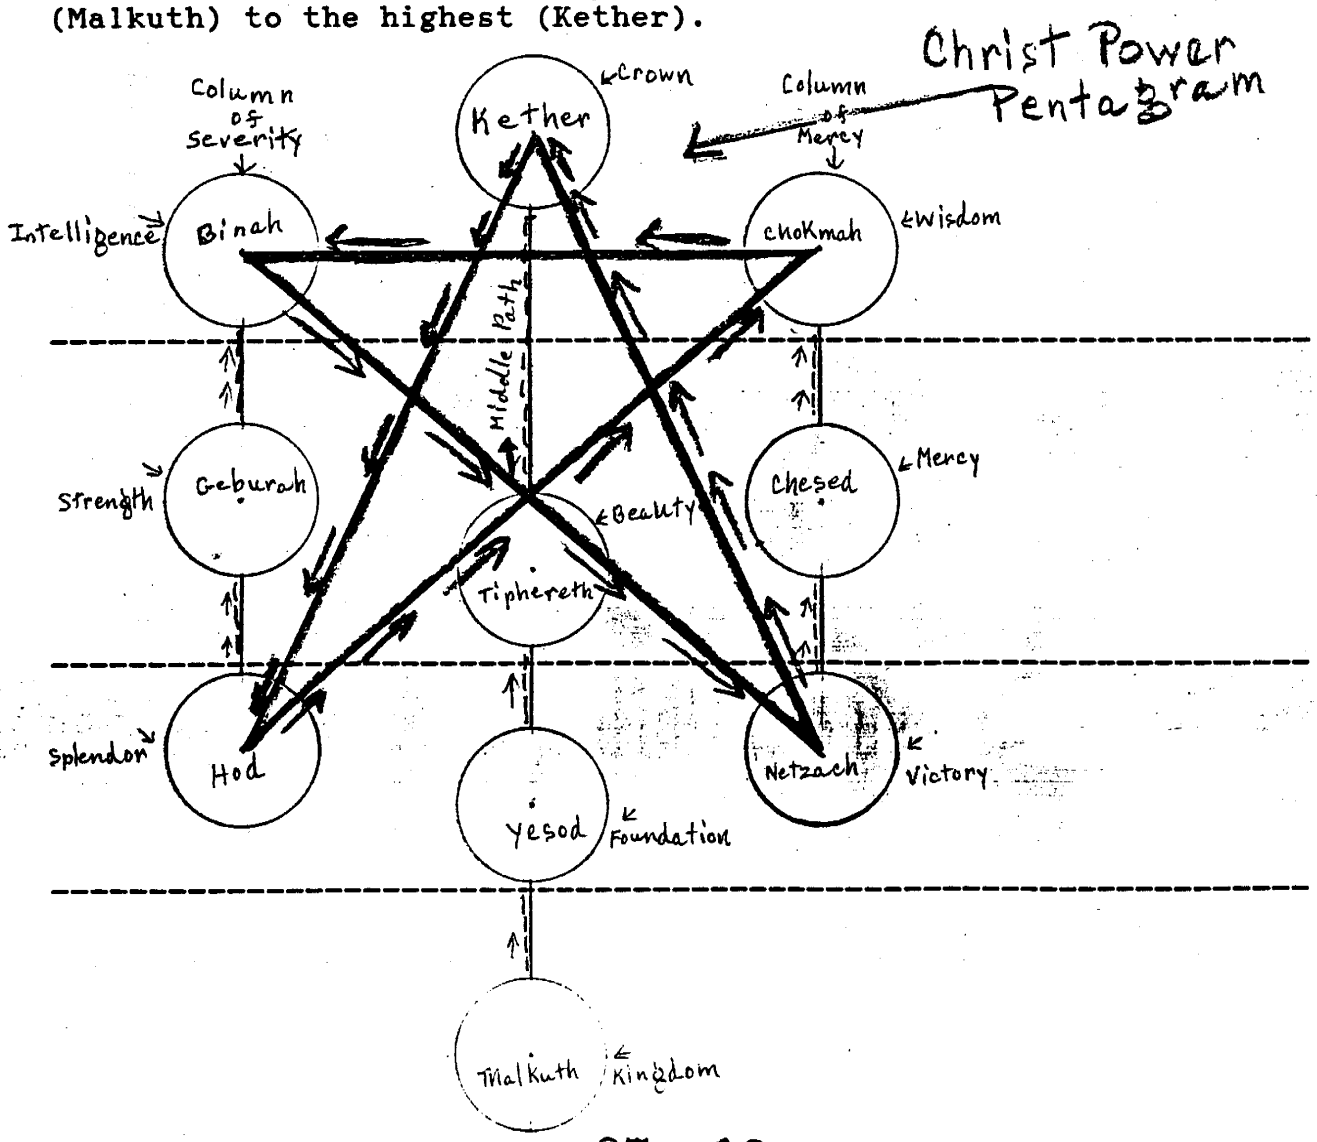
Emanuel Swendenborg, the eminent Swedish mystic, had a great deal to say about his experiences with angels and wrote a lot about them.

William Blake, the 18th century English mystic, wrote freely and with great detail on his seeing angels and hearing them.

Modern writers include Flower Newhouse, whose many volumes on the angelic kingdom have a wonderful charm, and two prominent authors and lecturers in the Theosophical tradition: C. W. Leadbeater and Geoffrey Hodson.

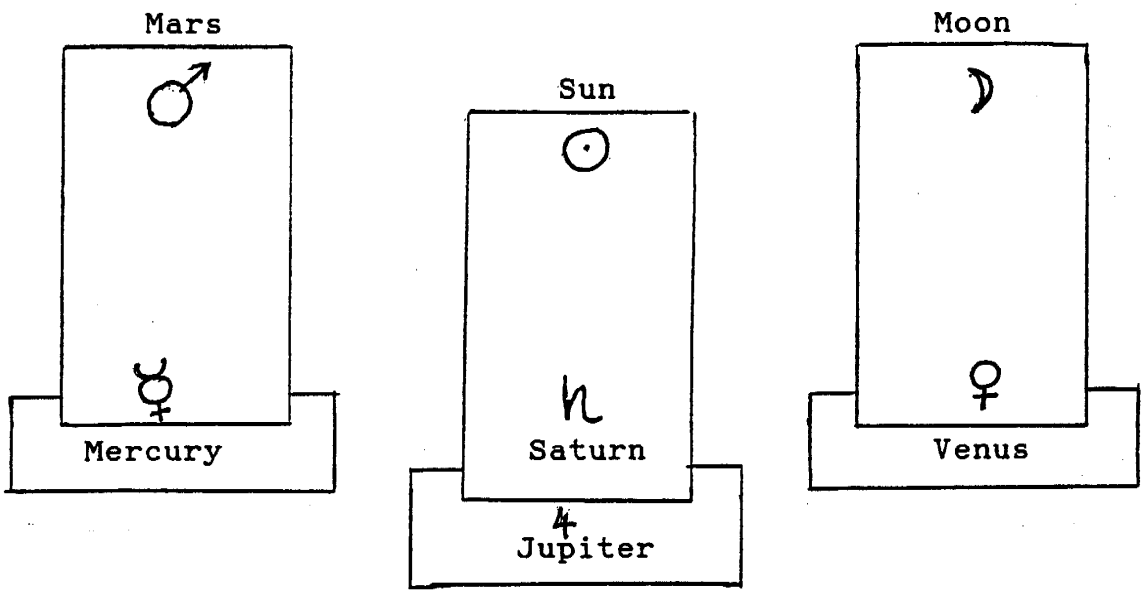
Yes, once one starts looking for material, there snowballs a whole mountain of it, and the problem becomes one of selection rather than scarcity. All of which testifies to the fact that among the teeming millions of humanity, here and there, now and then, an individual has arisen to achieve the experience of contacting some order of beings in the Celestial Hierarchy. These examples, however, of recorded experiences are few and far between. The question arises. Is there a way by which people can achieve the faculty of consciousness within the Inner Realms of Being?

To repeat what is said in the Hebrew tradition, the "lightning path" which touches on all Sephiroth, is a way to this kind of illumination. This path zig zags from the lowest Sephira (Malkuth) to the highest (Kether).



Now, what does this mean in terms of everyday life? The Law of Correspondences: As Above So Below, says that the Sephirothic Tree as it exists in the Universe, repeats itself within us, since we are the Microcosm and the Universe is the Macrocosm. Meditation on each Sephira, right usage of each, elevates the vibratory rate, step by step, until illumination comes. In the Chart of the Pillars, various heavenly bodies are placed. Every orb in space radiates its own characteristic energy which is its signature, as it were. This energy radiating from each orb, is a consciousness, an Intelligence, well nigh incomprehensible to the consciousness of the human mind. Hebrew tradition includes these ensouling principles in the Celestial Hierarchy under the World of Orbs.

Pillars



Man being the microcosm, a universe in miniature, has the corresponding energy within himself and will react through the Law of Attraction to the energy of the various orbs according to the degree of his control and ability to manipulate, through the power of the mind, and will, these corresponding vibrations he has in himself. For instance, if he has achieved mastery over the particular vibrations which are characteristic of the planet Saturn, he is said to have progressed through that particular Sephira and goes on to learn how to master the next. Sephira on the columns are like gateways at the end of the pathways leading from Sephira to Sephira.

Angels of the proper order in the Hierarchy are guardians at the various gateways. The Angels receive the prayers, aspirations and dedications of self to God, and through these Divine Messengers, the prayers and supplications are answered. This type of progress works for the majority of humanity. Progression from Sephira to Sephira in this scheme of evolvement, takes a long, long time.

This was the state of affairs in Hebrew tradition until Jesus came along. Jesus came and upset the Rabbinical apple cart, by disclosing the "Middle Path", the mystic way. The Middle Path, known only to the innermost selected few of the priesthood during Jesus' time, was a most sacred, not to be mentioned, mystery. Jesus proclaimed himself the Wayshower of the Middle Path. He argued to make it public to fishermen, sinners, tax collectors, publicans, and worst of all the Gentiles. The Jewish priesthood was furious, did everything to stop him, and finally had him crucified on other pretexts. They could hardly discuss the Middle Path in public.

This Middle Path, was also know to Buddha, 500 years before Jesus, and he taught it to his disciples.

Man's reintegration with God according to this Middle Mystic Way, gives him direct aid from the Angelic Kingdom and is through the Shekinah. The point to consider here is the place of the Shekinah in the Sephirothic Tree, or the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil, the fruit of which is being eaten by mankind to this day. It is the Middle Pillar, the Middle Path which is between the two pillars familiar to all Masons, Rosicrucians, and Martinists. It extends from Malkuth, to Yesod, to Tipereth, and up to Kether. This is the Mystic Way, the Way of the Christ Power, the Yeheshuah. This Christ power is so mighty that even Angels and Archangels, all the Thrones, Dominions, and so on up to the Seraphim, bow down before it.

The Shekinah, alone stands free and unhindered, having direct connection with the Throne of the Most High for one who has prepared himself, infused himself with the Christ power, and has chosen the Middle Path. No wonder the Rabbis were furious enough with Jesus to have him killed for letting this mystery be known, for being the Wayshower--this mystery which had been disclosed only to Abraham, Moses, Solomon, and through them to a very select few.

And why should mankind have the choice of this direct approach to God?

According to divinely inspired Scriptures, God created man in His image and that man should be superior to all God's other creations. Man was crowned with celestial crowns and was so endowed that he could rule over six directions of space, or six dimensions if you will; he was perfect in all things. Angels surrounded him and honored him. Man beheld all supreme mysteries and all wisdom--exceeding, over and above, the science of the Angels. In creation, the end in view was that God might manifest Himself and be called by His Divine Name. It is noted that this Name was not revealed to the Angels, which is one instance only that man was in a position of superiority to all other hierarchies of being. This superior position of man in the Paradise state of being, is given as one of the reasons for the War in Heaven and rebellion of some of the cohorts in the Angelic Kingdom. Mankind, the last of God's creations, a Johnny-Come-Lately, was above the Angelic Hierarchy. He was to rule the Angelic Kingdom. Milton's "Paradise Lost" goes into this.

After Man's fall into a coat of skin, or in being clothed with a body of flesh and bone, the Christ power steps in as a means for reintegration and restoration of man to his rightful position as ruler of the Universe, including the Angelic Kingdom, as was intended by God in the first place. And this was Jesus' mission.

Some interesting Gnostic documents published in one volume entitled Pistis Sophia, says that man, illumined man, realizing his full potential, excels the Angelic Kingdom, indeed rules over it. In view of the fact that Christianity says Christ is the King of Angels, this makes sense. The Christ power descended into Jesus at the time of His baptism by John, and showed itself as a dove, and thereafter Jesus was known as Jesus the Christ.

This energy force, the Christ power, is the same energy of which Angel bodies are formed. The same force in man establishes the link between humanity and the Angelic Kingdom. The "Middle Path" leads straight to the Empyrean World. When it is said in Psalm 103, verse 20, "Bless the Lord, ye his angels...", the reference is to those infused with the Christ force, who are God's angels on earth. Indeed, when the Christ power suffuses a human, he becomes visible to the Angelic Hierarchy, and vice versa. Christianity is full of references to angels, which is entirely understandable since the Christ force is the very essence of the Empyrean World.

Sooner or later in esoteric studies, one reference keeps cropping up, and this is the reference to a ladder, which seems to exist between the Human and Angelic Kingdoms. It seems to be a Ladder of Purification for those who come up out of a wholly material way of life. Angels seem to be able to go up and down it at will. Genesis 28, verse 12 says, "And...behold a ladder was set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven, and behold the angels of God ascending and descending on it."

Hebrew tradition, being for the most part engrossed with achieving illumination through going via all the Sephira, rather than the Middle Way, says that man must climb 5 different ladders of 25 degrees to each ladder.

The idea of the ladder denotes a methodical, step by step advancement in purification of self. Like the sweeping out of the Augean Stables by Hercules to make one's body a fit habitation for the Christ power.

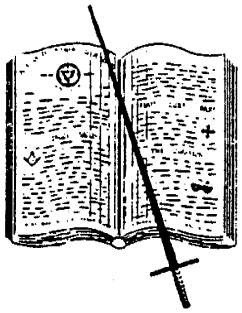
This purification process in brief entails the following:

Pure Belief - One Reality of God
Pure Will - Identification of own will with that of God
Pure Word - Words uttered always to be acceptable to God
Pure Behavior - Actions always to be charity, mercy, kindness and forgiveness.
Pure Means of Living - Never defile being by doubtful morality.
Pure Application - Unceasing zeal for higher truths of life
Pure Memory - Permitting only loving, constructive, and Divine to echo in halls of memory.
Pure Meditation - Each day contemplate perfections of God's living universe.

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

I.C.E.S.

International College of Esoteric Studies



Incorporated as a non-profit educational institution devoted to the advancement and mystical enlightenment of Man.

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

Tuesday evening

Dear Companion

The works of the OTG were started in the English-speaking world under the auspices of the ICES. Tne OTG is derived from the European Order and it took quite some time to translate the material and evolve it into a workable system that would be viable in today's social environment. After much work, everything is in order and several Commanderies are now operating.

An OTG Commandery is a beautiful and rewarding activity. The Works may easily be operated in one's living room (or spare bed room) and are designed to function with a minimum of red tape. A Commandery is an excellent work to operate even exclusively among the members of one's own household ... it is spiritually unifying and yields effects of the most harmonious kind.

Think about this: a Commandery can be a small unit comprising family members only — or with the inclusion of a few close friends — or you can make it into a large operation with dozens of people, as you please!

We have prepared an 'information package' giving full details of the purpose and programme of the Order. If you have a feel for ritual and ceremonial work we invite you to write and express your interest and ask that we send you the information on how to start a Commandery.

We will be looking forward to hearing from you!

May He who gives us life light your way and lead you to the Glorious Kingdom.

Sincerely & Fraternally

Grand Recorder

CR/sm

FRATERNITAS ROSÆ CRUCIS

Rome London
& New York

№

"THE HOLY GHOST"

"Wherefore he saith in another Psalm, Thou shalt not suffer thine Holy One to see corruption. Acts, xiii, 35.

THE Gnostic Apostle Paul, speaking to the believers at Antioch in Pisidia, had previously referd to the Psalmist King, David. After the utterance which serves us as both text and theme, he continued in explanation;—"For David, after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep, and was laid unto his fathers, and saw corruption. But he, whom God raised again, saw no corruption."

It is evident, to the exoteric as well as to the esoteric student of Holy Writ, that an obvious virtue and peculiar sanctity attaches to the human concept of the personality and nature of the sublime Principle known, theologically, as the "Holy Ghost."

In the profanity and vulgarisms of the language of all nations from the earliest times of the Christian Era, we find oaths sworn and curses uttered both in the names of God and of the Master Jesus, but we do not find the name "Holy Ghost" used for similar purposes.

Among those who are inclined to give thought to such subjects we find an almost universal desire to know just what was really meant or implied in the statements found in the Gospels of Matthew and Mark. In the first, the xii chapter, 31st and 32nd verses it is written;—"Wherefore I say unto you, All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men; but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men. And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of Man, it shall be forgiven him: but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him neither in this world, neither in the world to come."

In Mark iii; 28, 29 it is written,—"Verily I say unto you, All sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, and blasphemies wherewith soever they shall blaspheme: But he that shall blaspheme against the Holy Ghost hath never forgiveness, but is in danger of eternal damnation."

Now let us analyze, if possible, some of the statements in the Scriptures and see what essential clues may be found that will in some measure assist us to a better understanding of this mystic and mysterious Being or Personality, bearing in mind that all fundamental scriptural statements are to be taken as in the nature of parable and embodying mysteries which it is given to some to understand, but which, to others, it is not given. Our authority for such a statement is contained in the answer made by Jesus to his disciples who asked him—"why speakest thou unto them in parables?" The answer was, "Because it is given unto you (that is, the followers of the Christ Principle) to know the mysteries, but to them (the multitude) it is not given."

In Luke iv; 1, we are informed that Jesus, being FULL of the Holy Ghost, returned from Jordan, and was led by the Spirit into the Wilderness."

In John vii; 39, we are advised that this which He spake of the Spirit, which they that believed on him should receive, was to come to pass: for the Holy Ghost WAS NOT YET GIVEN, because that Jesus was not yet glorified."

Then the Gnostic Apostle Paul states in Acts i; 8, "But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."

In 1 Cor. ii; 13 Paul refers to the ethics taught, saying that they were virtually inspired; "Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth; Comparing spiritual things with spiritual."

And the same Apostle concludes his second epistle to the Corinthians (2 Cor. xiii, 14) with the benediction—"The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and THE COMMUNION OF THE HOLY GHOST be with you all, Amen."

In all these quotations certain features stand out with uncompromising prominence and strength and we shall list them as follows;

1 Jesus HAD it after his Baptism. (The Holy Ghost)

2 No one else had it for it was NOT YET COME TO THEM.

3 It appears to be an universal Principle, manifesting to the uttermost part of the earth, instead of locally and individually.

4 It conveyed the power of speaking in a higher than man's wisdom.

5 Altho in the world it can never see corruption.

6 When possest by Jesus he was mentioned as being the Son of Man, i. e, a human personage, not Divine.

7 After the death or rather crucifixion of Jesus it was possest by the Sons of Men. (Note the plural)

8 It is referd to as the Comforter, a continuous, real, active Presence.

9 Up to the time of Jesus, it had not been known to the Theologians. After Jesus, it was a Principle come to abide with Humanity forever. (In the sense of the duration of our planet).

10 When once known and recognized it was found to be of such special sanctity that blasphemy against it earned danger of eternal damnation.

Referring to "Rosicrucian Fundamentals," the chapter devoted to the exegesis of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, we find these three are listed as forming the Mundane Trinity, that is, the Trinity of Beings who have attained the Divine Nature, yet pertaining to our planet in particular as having accomplisht the evolutionary processes provided for and required of the humanity of our earth. In the exegesis of the Nicene Creed we find that the Son is "begotten" or sent forth of the Father, and the Holy Ghost "proceeds from" the Father and the Son.

Then we find that this begetting and procession is in reality the orderly, sequential series of continuous incarnations of the same Great Being, who, as the highest evolved virgin emanation of the Cosmic Trinity, ABSOLUTE, SUPREME BEING, and SOLAR GOD, has attained Divinity or Godhood.

As the Father, He was the race God of the Hebrews; as the Son, He was the highest Initiate of the Sun Period, the Christos; as the Holy Ghost, He was the highest Initiate of the Moon Period of human evolution.

The homo or human being of today possesses the vehicles he constructed in former periods, viz; the Astral and Etheric, plus the Physical body. He has not discarded the Astral and Etheric simply because he has succeeded in building the Physical, and under the proper conditions of devolopment, he can leave the Physical at will and function in his Astral or Etheric vehicles as he chooses.

In like manner, the Great Initiate of whom we respectfully treat, having built all necessary vehicles and attuned them to his immediate requirements, could function in the one required for a given environment.

When therefore, in due time, it was possible for him to enter visibly upon the scene of mortal manifestation, he found a vehicle of flesh adapted to his requirements in that of the Man—truly the SON of MAN—Jesus; he entered that vehicle in his nature and aspect of the CHRISTOS. But as he was within himself Father, Son and Holy Ghost in one, a true unity, having completed the separate incarnations as such, we can see the truth of the scriptural statement that after his Baptism, Jesus was FULL of the Holy Ghost, and it was this triune Spirit that led him into the Wilderness to accomplish his resistance to temptation and strengthen his spiritual fibre for the work that lay before him.

As the Holy Ghost, as one of the triune aspects of the Great Being incarnating or spiritually obsessing the physical body of Jesus, was, during his active teaching and preaching ministry, within that physical body, obviously the Holy Ghost could not have been given to his followers, in other words they could not have been partakers of that Divine Afflatus which was then confined to the ministry of the one Teacher, Leader and Messiah.

After the drama on Golgotha commonly called the Crucifixion, the obsessing or occupying Spirit in triune form, Father, Son and Holy Ghost was releast from the physical corpus, and by entering into the earth thru the blood that flowed, could thereafter send its emanations thruout the earth sphere, enfolding all humanity in its auric folds, and specially inspiring to great words and works those receptive spiritually to it, TO THE UTTERMOST PARTS OF THE EARTH; physically and practically possible because it spread itself organically thruout and entirely around the world. The aura of an evolved Spirit extends sometimes to incredible distances, as witnest by the remarkable healing power of such beings. And therefore in the case of the Highest of all Human Initiates, one who had at last reached Godhood, it is not only possible but logical to entertain this concept of his comparative omniscience. As the Planetary Spirit of Earth, he must be at least omnipresent in the sphere or domain of his jurisdiction.

Again, those who are receptive thru spiritual aspiration, belief and interior conviction, to the power of the Spirit, will naturally speak while under such afflatus, not with the wisdom of Man but with the Wisdom of God, as manifested by the degree of Divinity they are individually competent to express, by the assistance and guidance of this tremendous and all-powerful spiritual Source.

Finally, we observe that it was the invariable custom among the members of the first Apostolate and continued by their successors, to impart the Divine blessing in the name of the Triune UNITY, and one particular form of expression in this blessing was the one we have cited, namely, the COMMUNION of the Holy Ghost. Why should this term "Communion" be specially applied to the Holy Ghost?

For this reason: Grace is mentioned in the same way as Love, as being special characteristics of the Father and the Son. Each of those Expressions imparted its own specific emanations and auric influences. But each of them did so as personalities, for the time being individualized, according to their corresponding period of incarnation. "Communion" is given as the particular characteristic of the Holy Ghost, for it indicates that after the crucifixion, the triune UNITY REMAINED organically incorporated in and with Humanity and the world and works of mortals.

So acutely was this realized by the early followers of the Christos, that we find one of the great Churches of Christendom which maintains the early liturgies, rituals and ceremonial customs in all their occult symbolism, still celebrating what is known as the "MASS OF THE HOLY GHOST" in which ceremonial the omniscience and omnipresence of that aspect of the triune UNITY is specifically emphasized.

This brings us to the point of perhaps the greatest importance to humanity as well as the feature of greatest inquiry bordering even on curiosity, namely, Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost. Humanity is assured that sin or blasphemy against either the Father or the Son will be forgiven, but blasphemy against the Holy Ghost will not be forgiven, either in this world or in the world to come. How and why can this be so?

In the light of occult science the answer is comparatively simple. Both the Father and the Son were the more directly personal, individulized Expressions of the triune UNITY. In their character and capacity of highest Initiates of their respective Periods, they had attained to perfect compassion and were and are too far beyond personal emotions, sentiments or prejudices to be influenst by the thotless utterances or acts of Humankind.

This is also true regarding the Holy Ghost, so far as the Holy Ghost is considered in its personal aspect. But in considering the Holy Ghost and attempting to fathom its essential mystery, we are going much farther than personal aspects. The Holy Ghost was the last Periodic incarnation of the now triune UNITY and after ceasing to occupy the vehicle of the Ego Jesus, it assumed a far different status than either that of the Father or the Son. While retaining the individuality hard won thru its incalculable journey thru incarnation after incarnation, the Holy Ghost aspect of the triune UNITY after the occupancy of the Jesus vehicle, generalized itself thruout the planet. This is difficult to express in words of the English language. A better word and yet one hardly satisfactory would be to say that the Holy Ghost Principle "diffused" itself thruout and about the planet, just as we say that the Creative Logoi diffused thru specific cosmic planes in their journey to, and manifestation in, creative activity.

In this diffusion, we encounter another characteristic or aspect. We shall discover this characteristic by an analysis of the two words "Holy" and "Ghost." "Holy" aside from the Latin "Sanctus", is derived from the Anglo Saxon word "Halig", meaning "whole" and wholeness was also a synonym for sacredness much in the same sense as we now use the word At-One-Ment or Atonement. Therefore, in a dual sense the word "Holy" means a sacred wholeness. "Ghost" is also from the Saxon "gust" or breath, in the sense of the essence of life.

This gives us the true sense of the term as we shall find it to accord with the scriptural statements, making possible the phenomena ascribed to the activity of this exalted spiritual Principle. After the occupancy of the vehicle of the Ego Jesus, the triune Spirit logically took no body as we understand such a term into the earth. Such would be unthinkable. After the Crucifixion the triune UNITY no longer required specific vehicles for various world planes, but as Pure Spirit, entered into its future habitat. In this sense the name "Ghost" coincides with the academic definition, namely, "a disembodied spirit; the soul or spirit, the undying principle in man; the breath of life."

The Holy Ghost therefore is the sacred wholeness of all three incarnations of the same Great Initiate. It designates the status at which he had arrived. The Holy Ghost was the triune Spirit UNITY disembodied of the vehicle of the Ego Jesus; undying, it was the Holy One who should not suffer corruption, for tho as the Highest Initiate of preceding Periods it had also undergone the respective deaths of the Humanity of those Periods, but would never do so again; as the breath of life it was the essence or vital Principle of the triune Spirit UNITY which thenceforth should pervade the earth planet as its Planetary Spirit.

The entering into its earthly Kingdom was the crucial point of its evolutionary career, the sublime honor of being entrusted with the reward it had earned, the jurisdiction of an entire Planet as a world ruler. Up to this time it had not therefore been given to Humanity and sins against its two former aspects or characters could be forgiven, but after its assumption of complete authority sin against it could not be forgiven because it no longer had the power to forgive.

This seems strange at first thought. But sin, so-called, is usually conceived as being forgiven by the one against whom the sin was committed. The sinner cannot forgive himself. And this is just the status that now exists. As the breath of life it is now the vitalizing Principle, developing the intelligence of Humanity and active as an integral part of that Humanity. With all reverence we may say that the Holy Ghost Principle is now to Humanity, as the yeast is to bread; the quickening leaven. History alone will prove the tremendous advance made by the awakened intelligence of Humanity since the beginning of the Christian Era, the time when the Holy Ghost was given and entered into Humanity.

In its aspects as Father and Son, this Principle could, would, and did forgive sins against it. But in its generalized, diffused aspect as the Holy Ghost it is impossible for it to forgive, for by so doing it would undo all natural laws and havoc and chaos would ensue. The individual human cannot forgive his own sins. The Holy Ghost as the Principle now incarnate in the world's Humanity, as its vitalizing, intelligencing force and power cannot forgive sins against it for the same reason. Sin against the Holy Ghost is sin or outrage committed against one's own inner, higher, better spiritual nature and impulses, sin or outrage against the life principle itself in defiance of the promptings of conscience and all the spiritual safeguards provided by the higher powers for our guidance! The Holy Ghost Principle within us, and against which we commit the outrage or sin, is powerless to forgive for to do so would contravene the laws of compensation and karma, take away from us individual responsibility and moral accountability, all of which it is the purpose of evolution to teach us and develop within us. What is true of the individual is also true in greater measure of Humanity in the mass aggregate. Sin against the Son of Man or any Son of man can be forgiven, for in those cases we deal with the Human element exclusively. Sin against the Holy Ghost is Sin against Divinity.

If theologians could but understand this mystery they would realize that no essential difference should exist between Judaism and Christianity, for the Father, Son and Holy Ghost of the Christians is none other than the Unity or Jehovah of the Jews. And just as there has always existed among the Jews that special reverence for the name of Jehovah, insomuch that among some of the more orthodox they will not pronounce it but substitute Adonai. so there has always existed among the Christians a similar reverence for the Holy Ghost, insomuch that the name has not yet found its way into our every day vocabulary, and very often we find the words "Holy Spirit" substituted.

The foregoing statements regarding the diffusion and generalization of the Holy Ghost character of the triune UNITY are emphasized in still another manner. We have spoken of the form of blessing often used as originally set forth by the Apostle Paul. He speaks of the "Communion" of the Holy Ghost. In other forms of blessing notably in use among many Protestant bodies today, we find the term "Fellowship" used synonymously. This word Fellowship expresses the real meaning perhaps better for our immediate purpose, which is, to show the generalization of the Holy Ghost thruout the world's Humanity.

It is noteworthy that in none of the ancient rituals or liturgies of ancient races or religions do we find anything like a benediction of this sort. It was customary for the priests and hierophants of the old world to dismiss the populace who came up to the great Temples at festival or titular seasons to do honor to some particular tutelary Deity, with the favor of the god worshipt. But nowhere do we find the religious officers commending the people to the "Fellowship" of any particular God. It is therefore notable that the first instance we do find of such commendation is in reference to the Holy Ghost aspect of the UNITY, AFTER the Crucifixion, when He had taken and assumed his rightful place in the World's Humanity. Thereafter, among millions of that Humanity, we find daily exhortations to specific fellowship, a fellowship that means the unifying brotherhood of Humanity. And such a fellowship has been possible only since the Holy Ghost became the generalized, unifying Principle in and of that Humanity.

This truth has been demonstrated ever since the knowledge of the Holy Ghost was given to men. First, He manifested as the Christos in a Man, designated for the sake of special emphasis as the SON of MAN to controvert the popular idealism which even in the day of the Ego Jesus, was prone to Deify him even tho the idealists did not fully understand his ministry or mission. After the Crucifixion we find the Holy Ghost becomes the special guide, "comforter" and inspiration of the SONS of MEN, emphasizing the truth that He came first thru a Man, in order ultimately to reach and become a part of ALL Men. Had He come as God or a God, it would have been a phase or manifestation of supernaturalism that would have been of little value to Humanity, for it would have provided and establisht a criterion impossible of attainment by any human being, even tho human beings had participated in its inspirational afflatus.

But coming thru a Man, we can understand it if we will, AS MEN, or humans, and if we realize this truth, we shall see that sin or wrong against our own selves or the life that is entrusted to each of us, is the sin against the Holy Ghost,—the "unpardonable sin"—which cannot be forgiven, for we cannot forgive our own selves and each of us is the Temple of the Holy Ghost personally.

For any one of us to so sin against ourselves, is exactly what was mean in the 30th verse of the 3rd chapter of St. Mark, where after sounding the warning that sin against the Holy Ghost should not be forgiven, we find the statement in explanation of those who sin against the Holy Ghost,—"Because, they said, He hath an unclean Spirit."

Unclean in this sense and usage does not necessarily mean insanity or the familiar demons or devils of ancient concepts, nor does it mean dementia. Such are logically irresponsible for their acts. Uncleanliness means a Spirit enmesht and crystallized in the illusion of desires, passions and materialism and such an unclean spirit is quite apt. to act against its own best good and higher selfhood.

This punishment (by karma) of those who outrage their higher selves or, as we say, sin against the Holy Ghost, is further emphasized by the fate that we, as occult students, know awaits those who commit suicide. Suicide is taking into our own hands that which does not belong to us. We STEAL LIFE when we pilfer or take our own. We may have built the body or vehicles we occupy. We gathered together in the inner worlds the stuff wherewith to mould and fashion the Temple we occupy in the outer or visible world. But, as we say in our requiem rituals, "The Spirit (or Life) shall return to God who gave it." No mortal ever made life. Life makes the mortals. No mortal can take that which he has not made. No mortal owns the tiny speck or modicum of Divine energy actuating him, that we call Life. If he attempts to do so or to inhibit, stop, or prevent it, he STEALS from God and his punishment is sure, and the fate or estate of the suicide in the invisible world is far worse than that which he has attempted to escape. First he has thrust himself into a state unprepared for him and for which he is unprepared. Second, he has unconsciously attempted to thwart his karma by seeking to escape conditions of his own making, without conquering them.

No man can escape his karma. Prior to the coming of the Holy Ghost actually and tangibly among Humanity, karmic laws were administered by the invisible Hierarchs, largely thru repetitive incarnations. Since the coming of the Holy Ghost it is notable that Humanity is apt to find that individual karma often succeeds or follows quickly upon error or the commission of wrong. Our lives are lived more rapidly; we see the results of our acts very often in quick succession to the acts themselves. Effect follows cause more obviously and evidently. This is one of the principal labors of the Holy Ghost among men. The omnipresent activity of this invisible Divine Spirit everywhere manifests in compelling Humanity to see its own errors and administering karmic law and justice. The judge has no choice or power of forgiveness. His duty is to administer the Law. With the Governor or President lies the power of pardon or forgiveness.

The Holy Ghost is the Judge or Magistrate of the Humanity of our Planet. He has no choice or power of forgiveness. His duty is to administer the inexorable Laws of Karma and Compensation. With the Absolute, the Supreme Being and Solar God lies the power of pardon or forgiveness, as exemplified in the quality of Mercy, brot out so symbolically in the Kabala of the Hebrews and in the Degree work of the Rosicrucian Fraternity.

The name Holy Ghost or Holy Spirit is a transliteration of the Greek word Paraclete, meaning, not only the Comforter, but an advocate, helper, one called to the aid of another. While as the Judge of Humanity the Holy Ghost has no choice but to administer karmic laws, nevertheless as that same Judge, it has the power of recommending Humanity individually and collectively to the Mercy of the Absolute Justice incarnate in Cosmos. Hence it is the Holy Ghost aspect of the triune UNITY that really acts as our Mediator and Advocate, even tho he be at the same time our Judge.

And all of us have need of this Mediation and Intercession, for tho we receive indeed the sentence of our karmic responsibilities and must pay to the uttermost farthing, nevertheless, without Justice tempered by Mercy, annihilation must inevitably overtake us long before our karmic debts could be liquidated. Every day, every moment almost, we are transgressing thru our complicated social and mental structure some law of Nature. Momentarily, by our own selfish or personal desires we are concreting thought forms which, while acting apparently and temporarily to our own immediate benefit, unconsciously to ourselves work another's deprivation. That we may not know of such conditions does not make us immune to the Law. Ignorance of the Law excuseth no man, was the old Roman Law, a Law which might be said to be of cosmic origin. But we live, the best of us, too much preoccupied with Self.

The mission of the Holy Ghost while that of a Judge, is also that of the Comforter. The commission of a constructive act or work brings with it what we commonly call "the approval of a good conscience." Now conscience is primarily the memory of past pain. The approval of a good conscience therefore is not exactly the reactive incident of past pain but something higher; it is really the approval of the Holy Ghost within us individually. For while the Holy Ghost is quick and strict to reprove, it is equally quick to commend and approve.

This is the function of the Comforter. The individual who gives thought to the higher phases of life and is seeking earnestly to overcome the flesh and enter somewhat consciously into the higher spiritual consciousness, is, time after time, overcome with the apparent hopelessness of combating the complex laws of Humanity as they are now interpreted as either right or wrong. It is often difficult to reconcile our individual ideals of right and justice with establisht codes and ethics of morality, and this difficulty discourages us from going forward strenuously in our endeavors. Too often we say,—"what's the use" and feel tempted to relax our efforts and let things take their own course, assuring ourselves that if we do not come out all right in the end it will not be our own fault.

We have of course, the privilege of making such a choice if we choose. Free Will is the inherent attribute of every individual human being. But those who decide to continue in the fight and go forward against all apparent obstacles, setting their thoughts on things above, and regarding as secondary and trivial those things which fall below a definite spiritual status, receive a strength when they least expect it, and come out victorious in the end. Those are they who conquer. Those are they thru whom the Holy Ghost has manifested powerfully. Whether as the skilled musician before the wondrous mechanism of a magnificent pipe organ made by a master builder, or as a backwoodsman swinging his axe among the melodious tones of nature's organ in a cathedral forest, all human beings may attune themselves to the vibrations of the Holy Breath, the Essence of Life, the Vital Principle of Nature known to us as the Holy Ghost, the undying Principle not only of Man but of all Life, the Holy One whom no corruption can ever touch, who was raised up, nevermore to suffer mortal incarnation; who has attained Divinity and Godhood, our Comforter, our Judge, our Mediator, the Divine aspect of our OWN SELVES.

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 85-89

LIBER# 88 PACKIN' UP

Personal & Confidential NINTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

M A S T E R S A N D

P U P I L S

Three Essays on the Teacher-Pupil Relationship

- by -

RICHARD, DUC DE PALATINE

Edited by
Christopher D. Riggin

THE SANCTUARY OF THE GNOSIS
London & Halifax
1987

EDITOR'S FOREWORD

"When the pupil is ready, the Master appears."

Most esoteric students are familiar with that statement. Since the end of the 19th Century, when Helena Blavatsky revealed the existence and identity of a number of 'Cosmic Masters' to a wide cross-section of the public, many aspirants have endeavoured to establish contact with one or another of them in the hope of being accepted as one of his personal pupils. A great number of books have been written by people claiming to have had mysterious encounters with these Masters, many of which owe more to the fertile imagination of their authors than to any basis in fact. In spite of this, the subject is one worthy of serious consideration, and to those who wish to obtain some reliable information we recommend a careful study of the three excellent essays in this book by Richard, Duc de Palatine.

AUTHOR'S IMAGINATION

Strict conditions are imposed upon the student, and there are certain qualifications which he must develop in order to become accepted as a pupil of a Master or an Agent of The Empire of Light. An outline of these conditions and qualifications are given in the first essay, which is entitled "The Masters and The Disciplina."

The second essay, "Our Divine Destiny," reveals the circumstances in which the initial contact is likely to be made between the pupil and the Agent, and the kind of relationship which will subsequently develop. Here the reader is told how the Agent will observe and direct the pupil's progress, and what the pupil may in turn expect to observe in the Agent.

The ultimate aim of every pupil is, of course, to become a Master in his own right. The final essay, "Masters and Pupils," focusses on the series of Initiations through which the pupil may expect to pass on his journey to Spiritual Mastership. The author also discusses and dispels some of the erroneous ideas which many students hold about the Masters, and concludes by delivering the reader an ultimatum!

Richard used to claim that of all the qualifications needed by the pupil, the most important was his willingness to open himself up to be guided and helped by the Master-Adepts and thereby become an efficient instrument for the advancement of humanity. It is through self-abnegation that the pupil allows the Master to give help where appropriate and speed up the individual's development. The Masters must use human instruments for the advancement of their work, and will always do so when such an instrument shows himself willing to be used.

In every century The Disciplina Arcani has expressed itself in different ways according to the prevailing social conditions of the times. Behind every such expression has stood one of the Adepts who accepted the responsibility for its advancement and fulfilment. According to Richard, The Ekklesia Spiritualis has been ruled for the past three hundred years by the Adept known as The Comte de Saint Germain. The history of the evolution of a number of Masonic and Mystical Orders is replete with definite and historical references to this Adept and his connection with the Ekklesia. He is known to have used many aliases to conceal his identity, but he is known to be the most famous Adept who ever moved across the pages of European history. In his famous work, 'The Most Holy Trinosophia,' he revealed all the stages of The Arcane Discipline in detail. If this work were placed alongside the teachings of the present-day Disciplina Arcani one would find no difference.

(The Disciplina Arcani is the inner section of The Sanctuary of The Gnosis wherein are presented to suitable pupils the deeper teachings of the Sacred Mysteries. Further information is available on request from The Sanctuary).

Many centuries ago, the great Indian teachers of Advaita Vedanta (the eastern equivalent of The Gnosis) taught that the serious student of The Mysteries who aspired to self-knowledge or God-realisation needed to develop four instruments of spiritual knowledge known as the sadhanachatushtaya. The first of these is viveka (discrimination). He must be able to separate the permanent from the impermanent; the real from the unreal. He should act in a manner reflecting his realisation that his body, emotions, mind, desires, fears and ambitions belong to the phenomenal realm. He should perceive that beyond the changing is the unchanging, and that the Self within is identical with the Absolute, which alone is the permanent substance. Secondly, the pupil's life should exemplify vairagya (renunciation). He should know that all pleasures, because they are products of action, are transient, and that many worldly pleasures destroy character, compounding one's ignorance, impurity and suffering. He should be non-attached to everything of a temporal nature. Thirdly, the pupil should have the shatsampati (the 'six treasures'). These are shama (calmness): the inner poise which comes with continuous contemplation of the Supreme Reality; dama (self-control): the restraint of the lower nature from every activity except the pursuit of the real; uparati (self-settledness): the mental ability to restrain the lower nature, temporarily governed by shama and dama, from again pursuing the unreal; titiksha (forbearance): the ability to endure, with detachment, everything arising from any of the pairs of opposites, such as heat and cold or pleasure and pain; samadhana (perfect consecration): the steady centering of awareness on the nature of the Absolute as interpreted by the scriptures and one's teacher; and shraddha (faith): the affirmative and intuitive attitude of heart and mind which enables the pupil to respond to and to accept scriptural truth as his teacher expounds it. Fourthly, the pupil should have mumukshutwam, the intense longing for spiritual liberation. When the foregoing three qualifications have been fulfilled, then the fourth may be achieved, and having it the pupil may be said to be truly ready to experience absolute knowledge.

In his essay, "The Masters and The Disciplina," Richard refers to these four ancient disciplines or instruments of spiritual knowledge (top of page I3). The Way to Immortality is the same today as it was in ancient times, and it will always be the same in the future. With this one example we have shown you that this little book contains authentic, reliable and traditional guidance for your journey to Spiritual Mastership. May the timeless wisdom in the pages which follow bring you enlightenment and inspiration.

THE MASTERS AND THE DISCIPLINA

FORMATION AND PURPOSE OF THE PLEROMA

The power which caused the Pleroma to be formed in I953 was derived directly under the inspiration of the Masters of the Empire of Light when it operated as a private body, and then it was brought before the public in I956. It was the Masters who caused all the Lines of the Esoteric Tradition to be brought together for the re-emergence of The Disciplina Arcani in I965 to continue the work of the Hierarchy on Earth.

The main purpose of the existence of the Pleroma is to prepare men and women for the time when they will be accepted as a pupil by their respective Masters. Such a privilege cannot be granted to anyone unless he has rid himself to a certain extent of the impurities of his animal nature. This purification is done through your adherence to The Order of the Pleroma; in this century this is the only direct public body available to the western student to become a pupil of one of the Hidden Masters, but this does not take into account those people who have striven in private to qualify themselves for this privilege.

Once you enter The Disciplina Arcani you become subject to the direct influence of your own Master, and it will depend upon the effort you have made in your daily life to implement the puinciples whether or not you will become a pupil of a Master. It will then rest entirely on the Master's decision whether you are fit enough to enter the Disciplina or not. This decision does not rest with us in any way. You, and you alone, are the person who determines this.

Long before any student begins to strive towards the inner realisation of his Divine Nature, his own Master in the higher regions has been carefully watching him against such a time as future unfoldment may merit his acceptance as a pupil. The Empire of Light may admit a man to its ranks only when he has shown that he has endeavoured to implement the Principles as taught by one of the Messengers of Light. The strictest conditions are imposed upon any Disciple, and only he who has eliminated any form of selfishness is entrusted with the powers and abilities which are awakened within him through contact with his Master.

DIVINE LAW

The rules of the Empire of Light are very stern, and to these rules all members of the Empire must conform. This Law covers all people, from a Disciple of a Master up through the hierarchical scale to the King of the World Himself. Ignorance of this Law is no excuse: the Principles of the Law have been restated in every century by the Messengers of Light, and it is left to the people whether they obey them or reject them. If a pupil accepts the Law and tries to implement it in his life he will be swept along by the steady pressure of the Logos towards Perfection as far as the human personality is concerned. But, if the pupil refuses to accept the teaching of the Messenger, then he will be sent back to incarnate time and time again until the Retributive Law compels him to take heed of the Law and obey it.

There is a time factor ruling this procedure of acceptance. From the moment a student becomes the accepted pupil of his Master to the time he attains the Fifth Initiation, which will take him out of human evolution, it normally takes thirty-three lives, but this period can be increased or decreased according to the student's state of mind. If the student grasps the subtle implications of the Messenger and tries to make them a part of his life, then it is possible to reduce this period to one life, as was shown in the Legend of the Christ. This means that every Messenger seeks to speed up the unfoldment of his own pupils beyond the normal rate of evolution. Naturally, this speeding-up process will cause an upheaval in the life of the student, for by the steady pressure coming from the Messenger, the dross within his human nature is steadily transmuted into the purity of the Spirit.

The Path of Life is divided into a number of stages, and at each initiation or stage there is a definite widening and extension of consciousness taking place according to definite laws which are embodied in The Disciplina Arcani. It is the function of this Disciplina and its teacher to guide the aspirant into spiritual awakening which will sweep him towards the goal of Ultimate Perfection. With each stage of unfoldment in the life of the aspirant, new knowledge is revealed and definite powers over the superphysical forces of nature are granted to him.

ABUSE OF POWER

As we have said, the strictest conditions are, therefore, imposed upon any candidate, and only those who have eliminated selfishness are entrusted with the sublime instruction of The Disciplina Arcani. It must be stressed very strongly that if any aspirant, once accepted as the pupil of a Master, begins to use any of the mental and spiritual powers so given for selfish ends, it will result in dire consequences for him. This fact lies at the very basis of The Disciplina Arcani, and it is the responsibility of the Messenger for each century to make sure that every candidate he presents to the Master for acceptance must have freed himself from selfishness, greed, pride, jealousy, anger and attachment to the transient things and people of the world.

MASTER

Pupil's REQUIRED ATTRIBUTES

There are certain qualifications necessary for the student to develop at the different stages before he can take the next step forward. To become a pupil of a Master he must have developed the qualities of control of thought, which entails purity, truth and compassion for others; and, although perfection is not expected at this first stage, the aspirant must, nevertheless, have made the attempt to build these qualities into his nature. From this moment on, he must face the many tests and trials which will bedevil his ordinary life. It will depend upon his ability acquired in order to be able to cope with them. From this time onward, the aspirant will always be subject to the temptings of the lower nature; the satanic force within his subconscious mind.

For the second stage, the aspirant must attain some degree of development in the following qualifications:

PAGE 13

(a) Discrimination between the real and the false;

(b) Indifference or non-attachment to worldly people and objects;

(c) Six qualities of the mind must be attained (control of mind, control of body and senses, tolerance for all people and things, endurance of all conditions, faith in one's own Divine Nature at all times, and equilibrium or balance in all things and acts), and

(d) The desire for Liberation, not for one's own sake, but for the sake of suffering humanity.

For the third stage, the aspirant must must have eradicated all sense of illusion of the personal self; doubt and uncertainty about the Messenger, in the Master and his work to overcome by knowledge and experience; and finally he must have outgrown all forms of superstition including all kinds of infantile and nursery credulity regarding the supernatural and the irrational fear of the unknown and the mysterious. This also covers the mistaken reverence of teachers and leaders in politics, the church and social and national spheres.

In the fourth stage, the aspirant learns to work on all levels of being and to communicate from the mind, and also to use the superphysical forces on the earth level for the benefit of humanity and not for the personal self.

The fifth stage is when the aspirant realises his unity with the Spirit and attains Illumination and Interior Communion with the Divine Self, and the last shred of earthly desire is eradicated from his human nature. The evil of separateness is no longer in his mind or body; he feels himself at one with all that lives. For this stage, the aspirant must cast off the last five fetters which still bind him to the illusory self: the desire for life in form and the desire for life without form, all form of pride in his attainments and abilities; he now ceases to be perturbed for either the conditions in the world or the attacks from those who know no better; and finally the illusion of the self and the world in general. Once he has freed himself from all these fetters he need now be born no more in physical bodies, and his knowledge covers everything in our world. He now becomes a Master among Men.

At the sixth stage, the aspirant can either remain with humanity and take his own pupils and help them to reach his stage, or he may leave this evolution and help a less developed evolutionary scheme.

From now on, every thought, word and deed will be measured and assessed by the Master to see how his aspirant is progressing, and if he has passed the requirements demanded by Him, the he will receive an invitation to enter The Disciplina Arcani, and not before. It must be noted, however, that the moment when a pupil joined The Brotherhood of the Pleroma, he was noticed by his own Master who ever hopes that, through the teachings given therein, the aspirant will make the required unfoldment which will enable Him to give him ever-increasing help when required.

The Law of the Empire clearly states that no Disciple for acceptance as a pupil by the Master is permitted to know the identity of his or her Master until he has reached the First Initiation, by which time the aspirant will have learned to keep his lips sealed. The Master will communicate with His pupil through the Divine Soul of the pupil and not at any time to the human soul direct. Here we come to one of the barriers which face the aspirant. If the Master has cause to communicate with the human soul through the Divine, the aspirant immediately thinks that it is the Master speaking. He does this because he has read somewhere that a Master does not speak to his pupils audibly.

A PITFALL

The constant refusal of the aspirant to always listen to the Voice of the Soul only when it is labelled 'The Master' has been the cause of holding many good men and women from their rightful spiritual position. They are chained to the illusion of an attachment to an external Master. This is also applicable to the Messenger. Because the Messenger comes amongst them and continues to live a normal life without any of the accretions which are supposed to surround him, they refuse to believe or even accept him as the Messenger. The outer appearance of a Messenger is that of the common people, but inwardly they are the Elect. They give no leader or teacher access to themselves. They also assert no claim to be leaders or teachers. They are busy with someone or something, according to his need, and they earn their daily bread through the labour of their hands in the service of their brothers. They refuse to allow any man to perform any deed which they, themselves, would refuse to do.

Those who are pupils of a Master will assert that the above is applicable to the Masters as well as the humblest of Messengers. We know that the True Self is not achieved by mere passive membership in any society or religion, but by an inner accomplishment through the spiritual and physical struggle with the illusions of the senses. This path leads from the world of appearance to the world of Being; from mere sensory, intellectual belief to that of sure, personal knowledge born of one's own experience. This is accomplished by following the road which leads ever inward to the Divine Self.

The student, aspirant, pupil and Messenger realise one vital fact, and that is that the majority of mankind hate to think for themselves. They will resent as an insult the invitation to step for a moment outside the limitations of the transient self and established patterns of thought and use their own critical faculties. But once having proved by demonstration the way to follow the new path, each one of these enlightened people has to face crucifixion and be rent into shreds by the 'dogs' of envy, malice and ignorance.

SLAVERY TO HABITS AND CUSTOMS

The student must realise that the old slavery to state and man has disappeared only to be replaced by slavery to things, ideas and self; that is to say, one's own vices and idiotic social customs and ways, and it is his work to destroy this form of slavery by every means at his disposal. If he refuses to perform this humane duty to his brothers, he will find that the Master will refuse to recognise him, and he will be forced to leave the Pleroma due to the promptings of his own unredeemed nature.

So, my readers, try to reach the required goal for The Order of the Pleroma. Do not run away with the idea that we are trying to frighten you. Far from it. We are simply obeying the Esoteric Tradition which all the Princes or Masters of Light must obey to the letter. It is obvious that if you let yourself down, you will let the Pleroma down and also the honour of your brothers.

OUR DIVINE DESTINY

There is sufficient evidence to be found in the various mythologies and traditions of the ages to show that man once lived in a Golden Age; an age when the whole of mankind knew and lived in the knowledge that he was a God descended from the Supreme Father. He consciously possessed the powers and nature of God. His God-faculties were utilised to the fullest extent to produce a civilisation which gave man happiness and peace. He was full of the Wisdom of Nature and could rightly style himself the 'Elect of God.' Such a civilisation was located on the fabled island of Atlantis.

MAN'S "FALL"

Man 'fell' from that wonderful state of being a consciously divine being for two reasons: firstly, the mighty civilisation of Atlantis was formed after the pattern of the Invisible Empire of Light as the prototype of the future state to which man would eventually return, and the second reason being that with the slow downward urge of involution it was necessary that man should lose his sense of being a divine entity and enter into the dense form of material existence. As this proceeded, man became selfish and began to worship his own stature. As a consequence of this, the veil of matter diminished his powers until they could function no longer in the gross body, so sin and conflict were born, and, according to the law of change, the wonderful Garden of Eden sank beneath the waters in 9564 B.C.

In spite of the majority of men at that time falling into sin, there remained a few who followed the Good Law and who were saved, going to the west and east of Atlantis there to found the Sacred Mysteries in which are preserved the history and knowledge of man's Divine Nature. Only those who had shown themselves worthy to receive and be entrusted with this Gnosis were permitted to enter the Schools so that they could become the Agents in the work of guiding and helping humanity to return to their original nature. When the Schools were closed because of ignorance and selfishness, those who remained pure formed themselves into Brotherhoods in order to perpetuate the Esoteric Tradition of the Gnosis. From them came the Templars, Rosicrucians, the Orders of Chivalry etc., known to the public in name only but ever working under the guidance of the Adepts of the Empire of Light, fulfilling the great programme of Race Regeneration and the Advancement of Man's Spiritual Destiny. It was they who perpetuated the principles of The Arcane Discipline to this day, that Discipline of which The Pleroma is but the Outer School.

THE ARCANE DISCIPLINE

The Arcane Discipline of the Atlanteans and the successive Secret Schools were devised to bestow a degree of self-sufficiency and surety of one's Divine Nature in order to attain happiness here in the body. The faculties of the Invisible Empire of Light and its Initiates and Pupils were always available to those who voluntarily associated themselves with the Agents of the Empire, meaning that those who were ready would find one of the Agents waiting to help them. It is because of human glamour that most men fail to recognise the Agent when he calls upon them to labour.

THE AGENTS

No attempt is made by the Empire or Its Agents to reserve the Knowledge of Life for themselves or their members for selfish motives. History has clearly shown beyond any possible cavil that all those who feel themselves worthy and having the sincere desire to serve humanity will always be given the opportunity of so serving. But he must have unfolded certain internal resources such as the awareness of his Divine Nature, which only the Discipline can assist him to bring forth in his life.

The work of the Agent is extremely difficult at the best of times, and without proper training, serene faith and patience, disaster is almost inevitable; more so for those who seek to serve with wrong motives. The future Agent must not only possess the internal knowledge of his Divine Nature and the understanding of the Plan of God for man, but he must also have the discrimination to know what can be taught and to discern those who can be taught; and also to assess the proper time at which such instruction can and will accomplish the greatest good for humanity.

It has been found that the undisciplined student - one who has not conquered his animal nature and pierced through the natural glamour of this world - is almost certain to develop disastrous over-enthusiasm which can and will destroy his perspective. It will also intensify his animal nature to such an extent that it will create internal and external obstacles to the realisation of his nature and purpose in life. This will also frustrate the reasonable ends for his action.

In this work for humanity, the Agent must possess the important element of willing co-ordination of effort with others. He must realise that he is a part of the whole; although to all intents and purposes an individual within the body, as the Soul he is the whole; hence the reason why he feels his unity with the whole. Once the individual becomes aware of the Great Plan for Man and begins to unite his efforts with others who are motivated by the same unselfish principles and motives, a greater amount is accomplished than is possible by the isolated enthusiast who is, in the main, prompted by his own undeveloped and undisciplined benevolence coupled with impractical instincts.

Again, history has shown that it is possible for the uninitiated mystic or occultist to come into contact with the Agent in some mysterious manner. The Agent will take over his training from that point, but, if perchance he does not receive the direct training required, he may come into conflict with the programme of the Empire for that time and that of the Agents whose work he desires to advance. It is obvious then that unless he is willing to become a party to the stage of the Plan, he will have no way of knowing in which direction the Empire is operating or any hope of implementing the Plan. This may be one of the reasons why so many good and well-meaning students fail in their efforts; they have not been linked to the thought source of the Empire.

Since 1900, the beginning of the Aquarian Age, many have felt that the Agents should seek out and inform the sincere individual to allow him to share in their part of the Plan, and, above all, to accept him into Their Presence, without first undergoing the Discipline or accepting the obligations which are demanded of an Agent of the Empire. In reality, it is the future helper who must seek out the Agent first and trust the Agent to know how the Plan is to be unfolded to him. It is not possible by the Law of Nature to grant or transfer this enlargement of the consciousness of the Agent to the helper. This can only be achieved by the actual participation in the rules and regulations of the Empire which the Agent serves.

DOOR TO THE EMPIRE

It must also be remembered that the Sacred Law is never imposed upon the student but is released to him through his Divine Soul as soon as he refines and attunes his consciousness according to the principles of The Disciplina Arcani. There has always been One Door to the Empire: that through the process of Soul and human generation. So long as the pupil assures himself through human glamour that he is sufficient, then the Door will always remain shut to him. But once the student chooses through the conscious realisation of his own insufficiency to seek entrance through the Door of his own Soul and to voluntarily accept the principles of the Empire, then the Agent is powerless to protect him or advance his cause, as it then becomes an entirely personal work. He can be guided, but he must do the whole of the work himself. There must be no dependence upon any outside agency.

Then, if the cause of the student is sincere and devoid of all tinge of selfishness, he will find the Agent who will accept him as a student and who will offer him a small part in the Plan. He will be watched to see if he is capable of carrying out his part. Then he will be given a larger share of the work, and this will continue enlarging when the student becomes smaller in his human consciousness and sense of importance. Throughout this period, the Agent will constantly watch the student's progress. He knows what to look for and how to assess the results, but so long as the pupil thinks he knows, then the Agent will withhold from him further opportunities of inner growth and service.

It must always be remembered that the Agent does not lay down the Law, nor does he decree the Law, for He Himself is simply a servant of the Law; so the pupil must come to this realisation and be prepared to accept the Law at the hands of the Agent until such time as he himself shall become the Law in his own person. The Agent will always say, 'I have come to do the will of Him who sent me.' In this way the Agent becomes the embodiment of the Law. Here we must be very careful. The Agent becomes the Law in His dual nature; therefore, His higher nature is the Law, while his lower nature is the vehicle of the Law. Because of the fact that He still requires a mortal body, there is always the chance that the lower man could deviate from the Law and fall into error.

DISCRIMINATION NEEDED

The pupil, on his part, once he accepts the Agent, must have discrimination in recognising the movements of the two natures; to discriminate when the Agent speaks and acts 'ex cathedra,' in other words, as a Divine Being, and when He acts and speaks as a mortal man. It is the Divine Man who fulfills the purpose of the Empire, whereas it is the mortal man who is fulfilling his own evolution. So the pupils of the Agent must ever be on their guard and develop their own discriminatory powers to their highest efficiency in order to know what to accept and what not to accept from the Agent.

The ~~a~~ninitiated Illuminee is always drawn towards the Door of the Empire through one way or another, but generally by becoming a co-worker with an Agent of the Empire first. Through the high-powered atmosphere of the Agent the pupil's vision enlarges and his inner understanding deepens. All of his human doubts about the dual nature of the Agent and his purpose are slowly dispelled by the experience of his own consciousness. At the same time, he begins to realise that the Agent is not an isolated entity in a vast scheme, but is simply a link in an eternal chain of many Agents. He realises that the Agent is a continuum of the One Law, and is yet another embodiment of the esoteric descent within the Hidden Church of the Illuminati. He also begins to realise that the Agent and himself are a unity in the Eternal Plan which is operating in the world of men, and that the greatest good to the greatest number of human souls can only be achieved by the few through the gentle submission to the Principles of The Arcane Discipline of which the Empire is the living expression.

HIDDEN BROTHERS OF LIGHT

At the same time, the pupil begins to realise that behind the facade of the Agent stand many secret institutions which have laboured unselfishly for the good of mankind for thousands of years. He sees through the Agent an avenue whereby he may seek admission to these institutions. Their forms seem to loom up before him, faintly at first, then slowly but surely he senses that the Agent does not labour alone. Although unseen to him, he knows that there are Sanctuaries of Adepts which seem to stand invisibly behind and in the Agent. He becomes aware of these 'other' bodies through the veiled hints of the Agent, and this quickens his interest and desire to become one of Them. The Agent knows this and will prepare the way for the pupil to become one of the Hidden Brothers of Light. But before this becomes possible, the Agent will withdraw His Light from the pupil; this is done in accordance with The Discipline. By this withdrawal from the pupil, there seems to be a weakening of the pupil's resistance to the promptings of the subconscious mind. Doubts are allowed to creep into the mind concerning the Agent. At the same time, his Soul also begins a partial withdrawal. The 'Dark Night of the Soul' begins to have its effect. External conditions begin to go wrong, and the pupil senses that he is being discarded by the Agent. But so long as the pupil is aware that the Soul and the Agent have not really withdrawn from him, and that it is only his subconscious mind beginning to assert itself once it finds that the restraint of the Soul has been withdrawn, and if he fights this sense of frustration and retains his faith, he passes through this period and realises that it was he himself who caused the blankness to occur, and that the Agent and the Soul have never really withdrawn from him.

Having passed through this dark period, the pupil will find that there is a quickening of consciousness within him, and he will see through the Agent a glorious Tradition of Light. He then throws himself upon the Mercy of the Law without any mental reservations, and pledges himself and his Soul to the Light. Then comes the quickening of his faculties and he seems to grow in stature and feels the Powers of Light surging in and through him urging him on and on.

He no longer wants simply to know the Light, but wants to become the Light (Soul), and then he finds people seeking him out asking for his help and wisdom. His time and energies seem to be spent in the service of others; his whole being becomes a fount of love and blessing to those who come into contact with him. He is ever ready to help and give advice and encouragement. Always at the right time the Wisdom comes, so that increasingly the importance of the mortal self slips away from him, and more and more he lives as a Divine Being.

Then, instead of knowing the Truth through the sensory-intellectual perceptions, he begins to feel and live it. The past begins to be relived in him and he Knows. He asks for nothing, he seeks nothing. Because of this he finds that all things come to him at the right time. He begins to live in the Eternal Now and becomes filled with the happiness and peace which passeth all understanding of the ordinary man. He has once again been restored to his Divine Nature; his whole life is transformed, and, from being a mortal man alone, he becomes a God-Man walking the Earth.

Then, and only then, will the Agent present him to the Empire of Light and will plead for him that They accept him as one of Their number. If he is accepted, then he will remember and know that he is safe for all time. He will find one of the Secret Brothers at his side who will admit him to Their Sanctuary. He will be able to pass through the tests and trials by virtue of his Inner Strength and Powers of his Soul. This, my Brothers, is the glorious future which lies before you. As you lived in the days of Atlantis as a god, so shall you live again as a God on Earth.

MASTERS AND PUPILS

Since the death of H. P. Blavatsky in 1891, the conception and teachings of those Exalted Souls known as The Masters have been obscured by false mystique and attitude. Whenever one speaks of these Exalted Men, it creates a hush coupled with a false reverence by those who have read about Them and yet have not met Them in the flesh. The purpose of this essay is to try and clear away the erroneous teaching about Them and to present Them and Their pupils in a sane and healthy light.

A Master is a human being who has fulfilled his human evolution but who voluntarily comes back to earth to help humanity reach his stage of evolution. The Masters take as pupils those who have reached a certain standard of inward growth, or who show a special capacity and desire to serve their brothers. Then you have those who are known as Adepts. They are also human beings who have completed their human evolution, but who do not accept pupils, their principle work being to assist in the evolution of Nature.

A pupil of a Master is one who receives tuition from his Master during physical life, which teaching may be imparted either while he is in the physical body or out of it during the sleep state. Normally a pupil may not know his Master on the physical level, but in certain circumstances such knowledge may be vouchsafed to him or her should he be engaged upon a special mission. He accepts an obligation, however, never to reveal or hint to the uninitiated that he is a pupil except by the direct permission of his Master.

A pupil may graduate to become an Initiate; that is, one who has been admitted to the ranks of the Empire of Light. He accomplishes this by passing various tests imposed upon him. It must be realised that there are Initiates of many grades of progress. Once he has passed the tests and been accepted, the Initiate then steps out of the ordinary line of human evolution to tread the Path of The Disciplina Arcani, and consequently has to tread a more difficult path to human perfection. The Initiates are sometimes known as Adepts.

Therefore, each pupil must go through a series of Initiations on the inner levels, each one giving him an extension of conscious awareness and granting him certain powers. This progress takes place in accordance with definite laws which were laid down many millions of years ago. It is the function of The Disciplina Arcani to guide the aspirant through the various Initiations towards the goal of ultimate human perfection - A Master Among Men. Each stage on the journey is marked by an Initiation, which not only reveals new knowledge but also confers definite powers over super-physical forces of Nature. The strictest conditions are imposed upon the aspirant, and only those who have eliminated personal selfishness and who have become truly honourable men and women, can be trusted with the sublime instruction from a Master.

INITIATION

Initiation implies, of course, an Initiator; one who has already trodden the Path and who is empowered to grant the training and instruction to enable one to reach the stage when Initiation is possible. Therefore, one cannot initiate oneself, as some societies claim. There are five stages or Initiations through which the pupil must pass, the last one enabling him to become a Master or Adept, thus reaching the highest point possible in moral and spiritual development.

To reach Initiation, the aspirant must become a technician of life. This infers practical application of the Gnosis and not the theoretical acceptance of a set of doctrines. It means that one can only attain Initiation by action, for while a man can become a probationary pupil of a Master by theory, if he wishes to proceed further he must change his way of life to one of action. The Gnosis or The Arcane Discipline is the deeper Wisdom underlying all religions and philosophies. Such Wisdom is not usually expressed in writing but is passed on from generation to generation verbally or by direct instruction by the Master during the sleep-state.

THEOSOPHY

It was entirely due to the German School of Thought that the Gnosis was once again brought before the thinking public, but it was H. P. Blavatsky who took this one stage further and called it 'Theo-Sophia' - Knowledge of the Science of the Soul, but those who came after her mis-translated this term to mean 'God's Wisdom' which altered the whole course of The Theo-sophical Society. Instead of it studying the Powers of the Soul and their practical application, the members became admirers of the Wisdom only. The term 'Gnosis' refers to the knowledge of the 'Things That Are,' or the Science of the Soul.

The Science of the Soul and its methods reside in the heart and minds of a few of the wisest men in every generation. One of the reasons for the Church declaring that the Gnosis is a heresy lies in the fact that those who have become overshadowed by the Holy Spirit through the Soul are not subject to authority or man-made rules and dogmas. They have always claimed that any attempt to organise the Wisdom leads to dogmatism and selfishness, hence the reasons for the rejection of the authority of the Church by the Gnostics. Each Gnostic becomes an Illumined Adept; one who has allowed the Immortal Soul to become unified with the human soul. These Adepts may be Initiates or otherwise, but all through their lives they remain as human beings, still subject to their respective karma. It is the Presence of the Soul within their tabernacle which makes them Adepts or Technicians of Life.

THE ANIMAL NATURE — THE SUBCONSCIOUS MIND

Those of us who have either met our Master in the flesh or who are consciously aware of His presence all through our life can honestly discount the teachings which have been put forward by those who have made the claim that they are 'pupils of a Master.' In most cases, they are the apt pupils of the master of their animal nature - the subconscious mind. The Master is a human being plus the full awareness of his integration of his Soul in the mortal body. He possesses a conditioned control over the forces of nature and bends them to his controlled will, whereas we, as groping humans, are still, in various ways, subject to the forces of nature.

For instance, how many of you have met a Master in the flesh and have failed to recognise him? Or for that matter, when you have met an Adept in the flesh did you fail to recognise him? This non-recognition is entirely due to the false teachings which have been allowed to be passed off as facts. Should a Master deign to reveal Himself as a man, you will meet an ordinary man. There will be nothing spectacular about him except that his eyes will manifest a depth of Wisdom and Power. Even if a Master appeared in your room, would you recognise him?

PUPILS OF A MASTER

To the outsider, a pupil of a Master appears just like any other human being, living and going about his Father's business with an inner joy and happiness. His life has changed from one of doubt and uncertainty to one of hope and joy. Life, for him, has ceased to be an illusion, but rather one of surety. No longer does he struggle alone, but feels the strength and faint awareness of his own Soul and Master gently guiding him into new channels of service and success. Some pupils have accepted the process of being chastened by the Father. They resent not, fear not, seek not, but live for every moment of the day, ever ready to give a helping hand to those in need or a word of advice when required. Life for them becomes one of purpose. But ask them "Are you a pupil of a Master?" They will just smile at you and say, "Don't be funny; I'm not ready for that yet!"

There is another factor which begins to show in their lives and actions towards others: Their word of honour can be accepted, and one will know that they will fulfil it to the letter. They are honest in their dealings with their brothers; they are moral in their lives and have built up a code of strict ethics until they radiate the Power of the Spirit. They have no need to assume false facades to impress others; their very presence alone commands the attention of others, which inspires trust and confidence in those who need this help. Their words are few indeed. They think very carefully before they speak, but when they do speak their words contain direct and commanding help to others. They do not run around telling others what they know. They choose to appear as beginners in the Wisdom. They know that they know nothing, and that what they think they know is only second-hand knowledge at best.

Pupils of a Master - con'd

They know that to know the Wisdom of the Divine Self, the first requirement is to be silent upon what they know, for they know that their knowledge would be scorned by the profane. They listen to the Tutor with respect, and if he has cause to blast them they remain silent and think, "Is he hitting at me? If so, where have I fallen short?" Then they know that this particular fault will be revealed in time. They would not dream of resenting the methods of the Tutor, but will respectfully weigh his words, and if the shaft hits home, then they are grateful. Resentment against the Tutor reveals pride and arrogance in the resenter. Yet, they are all living the life of a pupil and do not know it.

This ignorance of the fact that you may be a pupil of a Master is your own protection from the machinations of the lower self. If you were to know that you are a pupil of a Master, there is a grave possibility that you might become puffed up with pride and arrogance. Then you would have to waste time in eradicating these evil qualities. Hence one of the reasons why each pupil has to accept the obligation that he will never reveal the fact that he is a pupil, except under the direct instructions of his Master. Anyway, what good would it do you if you did know? Would it help you to live a more spiritual life? There is no evidence to prove this, but there is ample evidence to prove that such knowledge can become a real danger to you and could hinder you in fulfilling your chosen task.

The Laws which govern the life of the Spirit are absolutely just and were designed to help us along the Path of Evolution. It is only when we try to exert our own finite self that we come into conflict with the Law of God. The Law will change for no man; it is we who must change. If we flow with the Stream of the Law it will carry us on to Perfection, but if we try to pit our wits against it, then we must expect pain and suffering of our own making. Progress is only possible whilst we are in the mortal body of flesh. When we finally die to the world, all progress stops until we return again to the scene of our former labours. The more we obey the Law, the shorter will our lives become. Thus, by aspiring to become a pupil, you aspire to become a True Man in the flesh, and, as this process unfolds, so you become an Initiate and then finally a Master-Adept.

Therefore, it is the destiny of the Pleroma and The Disciplina Arcani to help you forward on your Path of Life. You have two choices before you. Either you obey the Ageless Discipline and attain Mastership, or you obey the finite and selfish self and find yourself returning to incarnation life after life. The choice is yours and yours alone. It is so easy to place the blame for your failure on the Pleroma, but it is a very difficult thing to admit that you are wrong and The Disciplina right.

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 85-89

LIBER #89 ON OUR WAY!

Personal & Confidential NINTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

FRATERNITAS ROSÆ CRUCIS

Rome London
& New York

No

THE BIOLOGY OF THE SOUL

And the Lord God formed Man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life: and man become a LIVING soul."
Genesis, ii, 7.

HAT IS the human soul? Whence came it? How is it formed and of what is it formed? How do we know that we have such a thing as a soul?

These are some of the questions that have preoccupied the world's greatest thinkers since the dawn of recorded human intellection. Manifold theories, speculations and hypotheses have been put forth and doctrines upon which the very salvation of the soul was asserted to depend, have been establisht by ecclesiastical mandate, yet the insufficiency of the explanations offerd by orthodox theology have long since caused the laity to suspect that our recognized spiritual leaders are no more competent to reply than the supposedly less spiritual erudite layman.

In everyday usage, we note the frequency with which the trinity of terms "Body, Mind and Spirit" or "Body, Soul and Spirit" are employed and as a result, the word "soul" is more frequently than otherwise used entirely out of its proper place and meaning. This is probably because the liberal translations of the Greek "pneuma" are often employed to indicate either soul or spirit, whereas the soul is personified in the Greek "Psyche", and "pneuma" indicates more properly air or breath.

This furnishes us with our immediate clue to the esotericism of our text, for we learned in the preceding instruction in this course, that every thing springs from its own seed, and also that every seed must die before it can be quickened or grow into fulfild manifestation.

So, therefore, even as the seed in Mother Earth first dies, and is then quickened by the breath of Brother Wind and the vitalizing power of Friend Light, so the Lord God breathed into man the breath (pneuma) of life and that same God being the source of Light, SOME sort of seed in man which had died was quickened, sprang into activity and man became a LIVING soul.

So it is with the Soul of the Experience assimilated by Man. Age after age he has progrest, gathering experience; learning what to seek and what to avoid, and often stubbornly refusing to avoid that which he has learned he SHOULD avoid, and the nourishment afforded by the Soul pabulum extracted has been accordingly.

Soul has made Man a LIVING creature in the sense of being an intelligent creature as distinguisht from the Animal, but soul itself has been undergoing a gradual development just as the soul of the food stuffs of today would hardly keep alive the human aborigine of perhaps 100,000 years ago. And the soul qualities of man of that period would not prevent him from murder and crime of every conceivable sort if he could suddenly appear in our midst today, for to him, such acts would not be *im*moral but simply *un*moral and merely a means to gain what he individually desired.

One evidence that, contrary to the teachings of orthodox theology, soul is not a developt vehicle at birth, we found in the subject text of the previous Instruction that "that was not first which was spiritual, but that which was natural", i. e., the physical body. And in our present text we find a confirmation that fits the facts of the case exactly, for it reads,—"And the Lord God formed Man of the dust of the ground". In other words, his physical body was evolved to active functioning first. Afterwards when there was a physical body, the Threefold Spirit could begin to make its soular extractions therefrom.

Soul becomes the pabulum or nutrition of the Spirit and Ego, which require substantial nourishment for their existence, just the same as any other phase of expression of the Life Principle.

Among the ancient Hebrews, soul was confused with this Principle of Life itself as embodied in all living creatures, and this concept was perpetuated all thru the Old Testament writings and to some extent continued in the New and it is due to this fact that so much misunderstanding has arisen.

St. Augustine, as a disciple of the later Greek philosophers even tho a rigid churchman, taught "the simple, immaterial and spiritual nature of the human soul—a view which has remained that of the scholastic philosophy and of the Christian theologians down to the present time.

Descartes, by his theory of automatism as applied to the bodily organism and his doctrine that the essence of the soul is rational thinking, gave the modern turn to the present diverse views of the true conception. Of these views, monistic idealism, materialism, parallelism and functional interactionism are among the more prominent. Churches have long since abandoned the older form of substantialism or the "entity theory", and as Rosicrucian students we know that the soul is not an entity, but, when developt, simply a threefold vehicle.

Soul has a distinct mission to perform. It is not alone nourishment for the Spirit; it reacts upon that self-same Spirit to purify it, redeem it and restore it to its original Divine status as before its dip into Matter and what has been since called the "Fall of Spirit" which is synonymous with the "Fall of Man" for it means no more nor less than the crystallization of Spirit IN Matter.

The plant grows, blossoms, and then in its ripe maturity it gives forth its individual seed. But that seed contains not only all the potentialities that have been manifested in the immediate plant, but also those that shall manifest in greater degree in the next subsequent growth therefrom.

In the Animal types we find it manifesting as what we term Instinct.

In the homo or human, it is at last the LIVING PERFECTED, MANIFESTED Soul Quality we call REASON, which makes possible the KNOWLEDGE OF SELF.

It is by virtue of the Soul Seed Atom that the spinal cord with its flower the Threefold Brain, Frontal, Mid, and Lower is developt. These are again subdivided into five divisions, 1 Cerebrum (prosencephalon), 2. Diencephalon or interbrain, containing the optic thalami and parts contiguous thereto; 3, Mesencephalon or mid-brain comprising the crura cerebri and the corpora quadrigemina; 4. the Metencephalon, comprising the cerebellum and pons varioli; and 5, the Myelencephalon, or medulla oblongata.

To these five we add the Pineal Gland and the Pituitary Body and we have the mystic SEVEN; with the cuneus and precuneus we have NINE, and with, the septum lucidum, foramen of Monro, the fourth ventricle and the paracentral lobule we have the mystic THIRTEEN. So the cosmic 3 5, 7, 9 and 13 are microcosmically crystallized to make possible to Man alone of all the Kingdoms known to Earth, the KNOWLEDGE OF HIMSELF, thru the pabulum afforded by the Soul, which, as previously stated is grown or extracted from the Threefold Body by the activity of the Threefold Spirit.

Soul is ESSENCE. It is in each homo, the essence that homo has brought over from a previous phase of expression, and, in the cases of the first homos, it is the essence Divine brot over from its nascent state in the Solar Orb.

It is extracted by exactly the same processes analogously, as any other essence is extracted, bearing in mind, however, that the process is on the spiritual plane of being, and while the Soul Seed Atom is located at the base of the spinal column contiguous to the seed producing and bearing organs of the physical body, it is in spiritual biology thus situated so that it can supply the necessary stimulus and motive power to effect the raising of the spinal vertebrae from the horizontal position of the Animal Kingdom, to the upright position of the Human, crowning the homo as the result, with the sublime gift of Reason, which makes Man a little lower than the Gods.

We know that day by day we take into our bodies meals consisting of various mixtures of food stuffs, prepared unfortunately as a rule without much attention to the proper chemistry involved. Yet from this mixture, the bodily organs select from the pabulum distributed to them by the blood, exactly what they individually need. All this pabulum, taken inclusively is known as the nourishment extracted from the food stuffs by the bodily organs, for the sustenance of the physical body.

This is what has actually happened. The digestive processes of the body have extracted the SOUL OF THE FOOD STUFFS for the bodily nutrition.

In a similar way, the Threefold Spirit extracts from the Threefold Body itself the SOUL of the Experience it has taken in as Food Stuff or nourishment from the intellectual faculties.

The Soul of the food stuffs of primitive Man was far different from that of Man today. In the beginning, man not only ate everything the natural world provided, in his ignorance eating that which hurt and sometimes kild him as well as that which did him good, he sometimes ate even his fellow men. He had to learn by long, continued observation, what was good for him and what was evil, and how to distinguish between them.

Twelve of these tendrils radiate out exactly like the roots which form from ordinary seed and become the channels of nutrition for the psychical or spiritual centers of the body which operate under the control of the awakened solar plexus.

The thirteenth or odd tendril cannot in the lower Kingdoms make further progress because its position is inverted and therefore remains dormant until the human stage of expression is reacht. In the human, this thirteenth tendril develops upward thru the channel in the spinal cord known to occultists as the Shushumna—as the Hindus call it.

The rapidity of its growth depends upon the intensity of the internal creative fire or spiritual power called the Kundalini, which can be greatly augmented by special developmental processes but which is, nevertheless, operative in every human being to a greater or lessr extent.

Proceeding up this Shushumna or spinal canal, it began its formative expression at the point of junction of the spinal cord with the brain, known as the Daath Junction in our rituals. The brain itself is the flower or blossom, the fruit of soul development in so far as in the human it conveys to the organism the power of individual perception and Self Knowledge; in other words, as distinct from the purely animal brain, man becomes a LIVING SOUL, or an organism in which, at last, the soul finds manifestation or expression in the rational, sentient and emotional qualities.

Exprest diagrammatically, the growth of the soul will be found to illustrate the growth of the Rose and this is the esoteric secret of our Fraternity of which the ROSE above all other symbolisms, is the correspondence and analogy.

The breaking down of the spiral structure of the Soul Seed Atom as previously mentioned may be illustrated by the magnet. First we observe an ordinary bar magnet with its plus or minus, positive and negative. North and South poles at the two extremes of the bar.

Now if we bend this bar into such a shape that the two ends are opposite each other but side by side, we have the ordinary so-called "horse-shoe" magnet. If we continue to bend it until we join the two ends or poles and form a circle, apparently we have closed our magnet and lost its polarities.

But such is not actually the case for if we were to experiment, we should find that we have simply changed the location of the polarities, and now, one side of the circle would display one polarity and the other side would display the other. Nature WILL INSIST on keeping the two polarities present and active in all cases.

So it is with the Soul Seed Atom. The polarities are present when the spiral structure is unbroken before quickening. But when, in the homo the pneuma or breath of life awakens the development of the Mental Faculties, these spiral structural lines of force are broken down, then the two polarities express at the extremities of the broken lines of curvature, and become the forces which move to growth in the tendril-like formations already described.

The substance of the Soul Seed Atom is electronik, combining to form the atomic structure. And altho it may not find its expression as developt LIVING Soul in the lower Kingdoms, nevertheless the evidences of its presence and power are none the less obvious.

In the Mineral Kingdom its power manifests as the forces which cause crystallization in regular, perfect, geometric forms.

In the Vegetable Kingdom, it manifests as the exquisite essence we call the perfume.

It is because we know ANYTHING AT ALL, that we are sufficiently intelligent to know that we have a soul. We behold evidences of varying grades of intelligence or rather states of dormant consciousness in the lower Kingdoms, but nowhere do we find evidences of anything like actual knowledge. We are familiar with the trance-consciousness of the Mineral; the Dreamless Sleep-Consciousness of the Vegetable; the Dream-consciousness of the Animal, but all the evolutionary processes and degrees of activity peculiar to each we find to be the result of external guidance by the Group Spirit of each Kingdom.

Man is the only creature on this planet that KNOWS and KNOWS THAT HE KNOWS. Man is, therefore, the only creature on this planet possessing manifested soul qualities, in other words, Man IS a LIVING SOUL.

The Animal has both bodily and spiritual vehicles but it has neither individuality nor personality, simply because it has no indrawn Ego and there can be no Ego until the Spirit becomes individualized. In order to effect this, there must be some intermediary condition or pabulum by and thru which the Spirit can react upon the Material vehicle. This intermediary condition is necessary in order to establish the requisite co-ordination and synchronization of vibratory conditions which will make possible the consciousness of Self and thru this consciousness of Self, effectual individualization, the beginnings of knowledge and the ability to translate external sense perceptions into intimate personal experience.

So it is thru the individualization of the Spirit or the attainment of Ego-ness, that we KNOW inherently and inwardly that we DO possess a Soul or something in addition to our ordinary physical and spiritual qualities that makes it possible for the one to apprehend the other.

What IS the human soul?

Everything grows from its own seed. This, therefore, is true of the soul. And when we apply our analogy to the human soil, we must naturally look for the seed of the soul just where in the human economy seed is formed.

We are all more or less familiar with the biological aciton of ordinary seed. We understand the process of division by fission and the increase of structural substance by the continued multiplication of cells.

The same process is true by analogy with the soul only here we are dealing with electrons which form the substance of the Soul Seed Atom instead of protoplasmic cells.

The seed of the human soul is the spiritual, invisible counterpart of the seed generated in the human generative organs. It is not the substance of those organs but the potentiality embodied in the matrix from which those organs are developt.

The Soul Seed Atom itself is an elongated lemon-shaped structure, which, seen phychically, would appear like an open spiral in a state of the most intensified vibration. As the homo develops and matures until that particular cycle of seven at which the mental faculties function independently is reached, it gradually breaks down its atomic structure in a manner similar to that by which an atom of Radium breaks down, and in this process of dying, its spiral lines become resolved into tendril-like formations expressing the two polarities taught by Hermeticism as commen to all departments of the Life Kingdoms.

This breaking up into polarized extremities is the process which is analogous to the division by fissure of the primitive cell.

In the Polarian Epoch we had only the MINERAL MAN, that is, the physical body with its mineral-chemical constituents.

In the Hyperborean Epoch we had the PLANT MAN or VEGETABLE MAN with the Etheric and Physical Bodies.

In the Lemurian Epoch, we had the ANIMAL MAN, with the Astral, Etheric and Physical Bodies.

In the Atlantean Epoch we had Man, the homo, possessing all the vehicles of the former epochs, but with MIND unfolding, and it was to this period that the text from Genesis refers, for it was when Man became able to function with his Mental Sheath or vehicles of Mind Stuff, that he also became a LIVING, that is, a sentient, rational Soul.

The researcher may enquire at this point: "if everything grows from its seed, whence came the seed of the soul of primal Man"?

Some years ago, when the mummy of one of the Ramessidæ of ancient Egypt was unwound, several seeds were found. After the lapse of several thousand years, science did not, at that time, believe that life could be preserved thru any such medium of perpetuation. However, it was decided to plant them and see what result, if any, occurd. The result was what is now known as the Royal Rameses Dahlia, one of the most gorgeous and richly beautiful of blossoms.

Now, science knows that the life principle, as a latent force in seed preservation, stretches over almost inconceivable time gaps.

This illustration will prepare us for the answer to the question, whence came the soul seed of man?

From the Sun!

It has been taught all thru our courses in occult science, that Man is essentially and potentially Divine. He possesses the Divine Spark which links him to his Solar Source.

And while the lineage of Man may be traced thru the descent or dip of Virgin Spirit into Matter, nevertheless the original Soul Seed Atoms originated with the celestial or Solar forbears of Earth's Humanity.

Nascent Man, or Man-in-the-making, preserved these Soul Seed Atoms intact all thru the long periods knows as Polarian, Hyperborean and Lemurian, for just as each seed in Nature requires its own specialized soil and individual chemic requisites, so the Soul Seed Atoms remained in darkness and gestation until Man, by the use and function of Mind, could supply the LIGHT they particularly required, and when this Light of Intelligence distinguisht Man from the Animal Types, then his spiritual faculties, releast from their age-long confinement in the types of consciousness peculiar to the lower Kindgoms, opened up to and received the Breath of Life in their awakening to and recognition of their Divinity and Man became a LIVING soul.

In other words, the Soul Seed Atoms had died thru the three preceding Periods as explained in the preceding Instruction, only to be quickened in the Four or Atlantean Period.

Just as the gardener, on a sunny day, plants some special seed, and thereafter many days and nights must pass ere that seed comes into manifestation, so the Soul Seed Atoms developt in nascent man, while germinating in the Sun ere our Earth was cast therefrom, have been dying, in the words of St. Paul, or disintegrating their physical envelope during the Cosmic Days and Cosmic Nights alternating the great time divisions thru the lower Kingdoms, to find the Light in the Awakening and Dawn of Intelligence, in Man.

So it is with the Soul Seed Atom of Man. Releast at the ripe maturity of death, it contains not only all that the individual homo HAS been, but also the potentialities that shall characterize the next subsequent incarnation of that self-same Ego, thru the storing and assimilation of the experience thoroly digested.

The products of the food-stuffs of the body after the soul of them has been extracted by the digestive organs are excreted and cast off as fecal or refuse matter. The experience of the Threefold Body from which is extracted the Threefold Soul when no longer of service to the Threefold Spirit is likewise cast off or excreted from the spiritual economy as Karmic matter or experience, the accumulation of which, about the Spirit must be workt off by the Law of Compensation which is the great sanitarian of Cosmos.

Food gives to the physical body power, strength, and the ability to function; Soul gives to the Ego, rationality, sentience, and the ability to sensibly appreciate emotional differentiations.

It is thru the soul qualities that we are able to apprehend and appreciate beauty in form, color and tone, which go to make up the fundamentals of all culture, whether it expresses thru literature, the drama, poetry or even science, for science is simply an understanding of the beauty of the harmonic law of the universe wherein all things have their appropriate place with mathematical exactitude.

The aborigine in whom the soul is just beginning to struggle for expression has no concept of beauty and order as cultured and so called civilized beings have it, nevertheless even with him, the soul quality will be found working its way outward in the geometrical designs of his wonderful yet crude weavings, his totems, charms and objects of religious expression.

While soul is gradually working its way to greater perfection of expression, we can assist and accelerate that growth by conscious, intentful, intelligent acts of soul culture, which consist in cultivating a true valuation of the beautiful in every phase and department of life. We can by so doing abbreviate many otherwise long periods of evolutionary process, just as by the supply of proper nourishment given with all extraneous elements carefully deleted, we can assist and accelerate the growth of plant and animal forms of life.

This is not only our privilege, but our duty, as possessors of the Divine faculty of Self-knowledge and those who decline to give such culture their attention are penalized by a still greater crystallization into materialism than they at present maintain.

This is that which was intended by the Prophet Isaiah (LV, 3) when he exhorted Israel,—"Incline your ear, and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall LIVE".

To incline our ear means to give attention. To "come unto Him" means to seek the source of all Truth and all Beauty. To hear, means to receive and understand. If we seek at the source of Truth and Beauty and open our minds and inner vision to the Reality of Being, attempting to the best that in us lieth, to understand, we shall be conscious of living as we never lived before.

Most people go thru life's Path seeing but one side of it. They are not conscious that there IS another side, or, if they are so conscious to some vague extent, they will not look at it, because not having seen it they are fearful lest they see that which they will not wish to see and may not understand. Such people leave the culture of their soul to work its own way as best it can, and in such will seldom be found any keen appreciation of the higher, better and more beautiful things in life.

This necessity of soul culture was voiced by the Psalmist when he said (CIII, 1) "Bless the Lord, O my soul: AND ALL THAT IS WITHIN ME, bless his holy name." This was a frank recognition thru the inspirational insight, of the intelligent functioning of the spiritual and soular vehicles for in the words "ALL THAT IS WITHIN ME" he indicates that he well understood that there were within himself specialized vehicles of consciousness entirely differentiated from the physical body alone.

The power of soul when cultured and releast from the shackles and confinements and the artificial restraints of conventionality which man erects in every age to mark his pseudo culture but which are in reality monuments to his true ignorance of correct values, is wonderful in the extreme.

Many a man in whom the soul quality is powerfully developt has risen almost from the proverbial gutter to become a recognized and adored leader of men and world events. The great movements in human life have not sprung from so-called "Society" wherein it is considered great humanitarian work and act of supreme self sacrifice to dance, eat, shimmy or roll a few yards of sanitary bandages, nominally for "sweet charity" but principally for their own sakes.

The big things in human life and the big human factors in that life have almost invariably sprung from lowly surroundings but the soul qualities developt in them in previous incarnations have blossomed forth in their season and the world rubs its eyes and wonders "if any good thing can come out of Galilee", and having decided that some thing HAS come, grudgingly at first makes the best of it, and after that soul has passed, appoints national holidays to show its unanimous accordance of the laurel leaves to the one who has passed.

But far greater are they who are thus honored, for they belong not half so much to their own generation, as to the generations who shall come after them and who, profiting by their example, shall continue the constructive work they set in operation. These are they who have come out of great tribulation, from every every tribe and every people of all the nations upon the earth. These are they whose soul qualities were manifest as LIVING, tangible Principles which none could pull down and which all could join in emulating. These are they who make the rest of humanity appear small and insignificant with their petty ambitions; these are they who have learned in the close of their involuntary incarnations that sacrifice is the supreme test of mortality and who are willing and glad to take upon their shoulders the sins of the whole world, if by so doing they could leave it a better world than when they entered it.

If we give half as much thought to soul culture as we to physical culture we shall not have to worry about the former, for we shall develop powers that will regulate al other activities and bring the Kingdom very close to our mortal perception.

R+C

"ALCHEMY OF THE SOUL"

MUCH has been written about the human soul and much will be written about it in ages to come. We have stressed the importance of the soul to an extent that causes some to ask, "Why is it so necessary?" An understanding of the soul is necessary to man's next forward step. In the past, he has regarded it as merely something to do with his religion. It is far more important than that for the religious side is only one phase of it. We will try to make it clear, for only when one understands his soul does one begin to live.

Each one of us is three beings, but we shall not use the terms with which you are so familiar. Each of you is a Physical Man and a Spiritual Man. With those two terms you are familiar. You are also something else. In the earth life, the producer gets his goods to the consumer only through an intermediary. The consumer gets his necessities only through an intermediary from the producer. That intermediary you call the middleman. In humanity, each soul is a middleman. If you will keep in mind these three,—Physical Man, Middleman and Spirit-Man you will begin to understand yourselves and the importance of the soul as never before.

The physical man draws upon the Spirit only through the soul. The Spirit avails itself of the functions of the physical man only through the soul. Without soul, one would not be human. Soul being the essence or food on which the Spirit or Ego feeds or grows,—could anything be more important?

Your physical body exists and grows and remains vital or full of life because of the chemical elements you put into it. Your mental life owes its existence, capacity for expansion and ability to remain fit or creative to the thoughts you engage in and put into your mental life. Thoughts are the mental food of the mind. This may seem like a paradox because you have been told that mind is cosmic or universal and you ask,—how can our own individual thoughts affect the ocean of mind? Yes, it is a strange paradox but true just the same. This law applies to the physical plane as well as to the mental plane. All life is universal, yet man has been given the privilege or opportunity of using a portion of it. What he does with the life principle that has been apportioned to him individually is his own personal responsibility.

The body is to be used, improved, nourished and cared for. Man has, through experience, learned that if he does not eat, he starves. Yet the very same laws that apply to the physical plane apply also to all other planes as well. "As above, so below and—as below, so above." Man can also starve mentally, emotionally and spiritually. We all know this from experience but, aside from taking care of the physical requirements, how many strive to nourish intelligently the other vehicles or bodies which are equally in need of proper nourishment?

Aside from the Four Elements of which the body is composed, think of the many chemicals it embodies and the many substances it requires for proper living and functioning. Man, analyzed chemically, is found to possess all chemicals in various quantities according to temperament and environment.

Man contains within himself the various forms of the Mineral Kingdom from lead, the lowest, to gold, the highest. As man advances in his knowledge of the Elements he will discover he also has radium. He possesses them all, in minute quantities it is true, but they each and all play an important part or function in his physical life. The quantity of each of these chemicals that he possesses largely determines his temperament. We all know that any one having much iron is energetic and has greater resistance, while he who possesses more lead is sluggish and has lower resistance and less physical vitality.

The blood stream is the River of Life and each organ in the body receives its nourishment from this wondrous and mysterious stream. Blood is referred to as the home of the Ego. It is really more than that; it is a channel or medium through which the Ego can keep in touch with every cell in our bodies. Think that over!

Our constant reference to the functions of the physical body is to impress one fact and that is, that all the other bodies of man obey or follow the same laws.

If man, on the physical plane, responds to the component chemicals and elements of his physical body, mentally he responds or reacts to these on the mental and spiritual planes too.

We all have seen the effect of lowered vitality on the physical plane usually reflected in similar lowerings on the mental and spiritual planes as well. Notice that we use the word "usually" and therein lies the secret and power of the Alchemy of the mind. When man lives a purely physical or material life his body rules his mind, but when man lives a mental life, his mind rules his body.

In another way we can say,—"Tell me what you think and I'll tell you what you are."

Man's ability to govern and control his thoughts is what he is now striving to develop, just as in ages past he has learned how to control and use his physical body and to co-ordinate his physical activities.

What has all this to do with the soul you ask? Just this,—that man seems to forget that the analogies or correspondences of all his physical experience have spiritual and mental counterparts.

As the blood stream is the river of life and enables the Ego to contact every cell in our physical bodies, so our consciousness is the mental river of life through which the Ego can feel and contact all mental experiences or mental life.

Our consciousness or our awareness is the result or product of our physical experiences in ages past. But—"What of the soul?" you ask. "Is the soul the product of our emotions?" The soul is the essence or product of our experience on the physical, the emotional, or astral, and the mental planes. It is a living essence, upon which the Ego or Divine Spark feeds and grows.

Man, in his daily speech, often voices truths he does not know he is expressing. How often have we used the term "poor soul," "rich soul," "gentle soul," "A soul of stone," "a generous soul," a "selfish soul" and so on. Unknowingly, man is describing the soul but he knows it not. He believes he is only using a form of speech. You ask then, whether the soul is something in man that can change during an incarnation,—and be one thing in youth and another thing in old age? Yes, for the soul is the essence or product of our experience in a given life and our experiences alter or change as we live.

Do we not observe the change in physical bodies according to the chemistry of the foods we eat? One person's blood is well supplied with iron, therefore, it is rich and thick, whilst another's lacks that iron and is weak and anaemic. Too many arsenoids cause pallor. Acidosis, arthritis and many other conditions show the changes the body makes according to what it receives and it is equally true with the soul.

The soul changes according to what it receives, in obedience to the common law. The essence of every experience in our physical, emotional and mental life is absorbed by the soul. The soul then digests this experience, as it were, into an essence that can be absorbed by the Ego. It is a spiritual chemistry or alchemy, where the essence of our experience is being raised to an higher vibration.

This absorption is constantly taking place during mortal life but to a limited extent because the major part of our life is spent in physical activities and that is as it should be.

The major and most important absorption or transmutation takes place after so-called death, when the physical is not demanding all the attention and the other vehicles have an opportunity to function more actively.

The soul is the storehouse of our experience in a given incarnation. It is squarely up to each one of us individually what we store in that soul for the Ego's consumption or absorption. In other words, the soul is the storehouse of the essence of what we do, what we feel and what we think. There are incarnations when the Ego gets very little nourishment and others when it absorbs much. It all depends upon how man uses and lives his life.

Remember, that man learns through his mistakes and it is this learning that becomes the essence that the soul extracts. In other words, all experience, whether good or so-called bad has value to the soul. No experience is in vain; all has its place and value. The soul is the clearing house, the middleman, through which it must pass.

Although the soul is the product of each individual incarnation, remember that the seed atoms of each vehicle contain the substance or essence of past experience and therefore the soul forming in a given life is actually re-forming from the essence of all our past experience. This is a difficult thought to convey in words. Our soul, although expanded in each life is the product of all our past experience. Do we make ourselves clear?

You could not have a so-called black soul in this life and have had a white one in a previous life. That would be devolution and unthinkable. If some one has a noble soul it is because the essence of the seed atoms has extracted nobility from their previous life experiences.

You ask, "Has soul a body?" Yes and no. It functions throughout all the bodies of man and yet has no form of its own. Blood functions similarly, yet has neither form nor shape.

How can the soul function? The soul not only absorbs the essence of all experience to digest and transfer to the Ego,—but it also transfers from the Ego to the various bodies the essence of its past experiences. Again, the middleman we formerly described. It acts as a transmitter to both sides and therefore is of tremendous importance in the life of man.

When man is listening to the "inner voice" he is dependent upon the soul for the transmission of the message from the Ego itself to his consciousness.

You ask,—"How about the cases of the mentally ill? Can the Ego work its way through?"

The Ego knows the answer but when a vehicle is ill or out of alignment the Ego is unable to work its way through to the physical or conscious man.

You ask,—"Does an Ego learn under such circumstances?" Yes, but in a limited way. It learns mainly that it must learn to build more perfect vehicles through which to function and that, in itself, is a great lesson. The next time the Ego begins its journey to earth, it will be very careful in helping to build the vehicles it is to occupy,—for the Ego plays an important part in building its physical, etheric and astral bodies and carelessness in any part of these is greatly repented later.

The Ego is not only the builder of man but also of all the vehicles through which that Ego shall function. How truly then, we are the builders of our own lives but see it not. Only when we fully realize this fact do we begin to build our lives into what we want them to be.

Yes, you say, that is all very well and good, but what about the man or woman who has a weak physical vehicle to work through, but desires to accomplish much and cannot?

Yes, even these beings can accomplish what they desire if they will use all the powers and abilities they possess to the utmost.

Beethoven was stone deaf in later life yet he produced miracles in music. Milton went blind but that did not prevent him from seeing with the eyes of the Spirit,—which is true poetry. Helen Keller is deaf and blind but that has not prevented her from becoming a light and a Guide to those entombed in a world of darkness and silence.And so, friends, we could list thousands of cases, some known to history and others unknown and unsung. A man or a woman can become a source of inspiration, light and radiance even when bed-ridden. It all depends upon the co-ordination between the Ego, the soul and the mind—again our middleman.

The co-ordination between the soul and the mind is what produces—will power. If we lack will-power, the co-ordination between the soul and mind is weak and requires exercising. Will-power is something that can be developed no matter how lacking it may seem to be. Discouragement and lack of confidence are its greatest enemies.

Observe and note, that people with the greatest will-powers are the souls full of courage, confidence and faith; the channels through which the will can operate. The reason why we are dwelling upon the power of the will, or will-power, is because man's spiritual growth is so dependent upon this faculty.

Some people have the mistaken idea that to be stubborn and inflexible after reaching a decision they are exercising will-power. The truth is, they are exercising just the reverse. Will-power has intelligence; inflexibility has none.

Will-power is under the direction of the Ego and through the Ego strengthens the soul of man and his mind. Stubbornesses are fixations in the brain and have no spiritual guidance behind them. Do we make our point clear?

The use of will-power produces vital, constructive, happy results in our life. The use of stubbornness and inflexibility produces nothing and brings much unhappiness to all concerned. Therein lies the answer. One is a constructive, vital, spiritual power; the other is a negative and purely physical reaction.

The Ego is at all times eager to reach out and guide its vehicles but, paradox of paradoxes, the very vehicles it has built are making it difficult for the Ego to accomplish this very thing. Why does man encumber himself with these vehicles? Because he is learning to become a creator and builder.

Friends, at the close of the reading of this message, try this spiritual exercise, in fact, try it every night before retiring.

In the silence—relax completely!

Then, above all, hold a feeling of friendliness for everyone you know. Hold no resentment, for resentment closes the door between the Ego and the soul. Then let the Ego or Divine you pour the essence of its glorious vitalizing power into your soul. Feel your soul, mind and body expand and sense a glow of radiance and happiness and well-being, the like of which you have not sensed before.

It is when you are in this state of being that the Ego and soul are in rapproachment and the transmission between these two vehicles is perfect. Exaltation and inspiration are the result.

Man has this perpetual source of Light, Life and Happiness within himself at all times and yet he looks elsewhere for the answer.

We are considering the "Alchemy of the Soul." We have said somewhat regarding the soul itself. Now what do we mean by alchemy? It is an obsolete word, used more or less contemptuously, especially by those who know nothing at all about it.

The word alchemy itself comes to us from two words, the Arabic "al" and the Egyptian "Chemi" which is a modernization of the earlier form Khemi or simply Khem. Khem was one of the names of ancient Mizraim as Egypt was formerly termed. Lands, like human beings, in Egypt bore many names, each having its assumed magical or special significance. Khem, in one sense, meant "hidden." Al signified fire. Hence from this combination, alchemy originally meant the Hidden Fire of Egypt and as Fire was also, in another sense, wisdom and Egypt was assumed to be the shrine of wisdom in alchemy, we have the study of the Hidden Wisdom of Egypt.

To Egypt therefore, as history shows us, journeyed the greatest scholars and philosophers from all parts of the ancient world. In ancient Khem or Khemi, they sought the Hidden Fire or Wisdom which would make possible all things.

You have been taught, and rightly so, that man is a threefold being, a composite creature of body, soul and spirit. That is one of the priceless heritages from the ancient "Mother of Nations and Races" or "Land of Beginnings." In their studies in that hoary land scholars learned also that man was threefold, a composite creature of the Ka, the Ba and the Khou. And especially did they seek the secret of transmutation, the change or mutation of the soul into the seed of the greater man-to-be in his next earth-life or incarnation.

This idea, in a warped conception of it, found its way northward, and mediaevally, scholars applied it to the attempt at the transmutation of metals, at least outwardly, to produce the raising of one element to an higher. We say the idea was warped, for while they were on the right track they went about it by mechanical means and formulas for which the world was not ready. Still good comes from all well meant and worthy attempts and while they were unprepared for their Great Work or Magnum Opus they did discover and bring to light many natural laws which gave us our modern science of chemistry, still the old name under a new form.

Transmutation is a fact, attested by laboratory demonstration in many different lines. But its modern votaries show little respect for their ancient parent and disport themselves in casting contempt and ridicule upon the pioneers who made their modern successes possible by their crude attempts to apply a spiritual principle to industrial and economic purposes. Yet the alchemists had their secret too. They were not ignoring the spiritual principle. Perhaps it was their greatest treasure, because any study of the attempts of the mediaeval alchemists reveals that they used the spagyric art as a genuine and profound cloak to conceal their endeavors to learn and to probe more deeply into the soul of man.

Their studies had revealed to them that the soul transmutes the essence of one life expression into the seed of the next succeeding and this is the marvelous "Alchemy of the soul," the subject of this thesis. Soul has been previously described in the Rosicrucian Wisdom Teachings as a "pabulum," extracted by the threefold Spirit from the experience of the threefold bodies. It has also been described as the nourishment of the Ego and that which makes man a rational, sentient and emotional being. It is through the soul that we rise, life by life, evolve, progress and become more proficient creators as becomes sons and daughters of our Heavenly Father.

Life is nature's process of growth. Life after life, the Ego grows more and more in the scriptural stature of the fullness of Christ. The spirit of man grows in power and capacity to carry on the Father's work of creation which is never ended. Bodies grow to organic completions and then disintegrate in order that the Ego and spirit may have at regular intervals newer and better vehicles of expression. Finally, the soul grows too but in its own peculiar way. It grows into fullness and completion and transmutes itself again into the seed of the soul of the next and greater expression, repeating the transmuting process over and over again. In its own transmutation, it also transmutes the experience of spirit and Ego into the pabulum for enrichment not only in the present but in the future expressions to come. Still more, it holds over the best in the past, to enrich the present and to build both past and present into a greater future. The soul is the alchemist of the threefold man. The soul of man is the hidden Treasure of Treasures for with soul man can attain the greatest heights. Without it, he could not leave the tree-tops and the plains.

The Ego, from its vantage point in the head of man, has been termed the Watcher. The soul then may, with equal accuracy, be termed the Worker, the craftsman within. For the soul is not only the digested experience of the individual, it is also the craftsman who etches that experience into the several seed atoms that are to be carried over at death, for subsequent use in the development of the future vehicles of man. For remember, everything grows from its own seed and the vehicles or bodies, physical and spiritual, are no exceptions to this universal law.

Soul, therefore, is truly, the middleman in the threefold set of human vehicles. It is developed by extraction from the accumulated experience of the individual on all planes and then becomes, in turn, the bodily alchemist who performs its own transmutation into the seed of life-to-be that shall manifest therein as our conscience, our response to higher consciousness and, as it grows and expands, bestows upon us the gifts that arise from the exercise of reason.

Always, it is soul that gives us our strongest sentiments of patriotism. Flesh and blood are kin to no land in particular. Soul is, for that which composes it is of the essence of the locale in which the experience from which it is derived, originated.

We are each and all pioneers because each day is a new day of discovery in many ways. The battle of life calls for strong warriors and a strong warrior is one who has a strong soul. Through a strong soul, though the body be weak, the Ego can raise one to the greatest heights of ambition, inspiration, intuition and attainment. Strengthen your soul. Develop your soul power.

Oh Man—KNOW THYSELF—for in thee IS hid the Treasure of Treasures.

May the Light of Love and True Understanding guide our lives to the at-one-ment we are all Seeking.

FRATERNITAS ROSÆ CRUCIS

Rome London
& New York

№

"WHO ARE THE DEAD?"

Ezekiel XXXVII, 1 etc. The hand of the Lord was upon me, and carried me out in the Spirit of the Lord, and set me down in the midst of the valley which was full of bones.

2. And caused me to pass by them round about; and, behold, there were very many in the open valley; and, lo, they were very dry.

3. And he said unto me, Son of Man, can these bones live? And I answered, O Lord God, thou knowest.

4. Again he said unto me, Prophesy upon these bones, and say unto them, O ye dry bones, hear the word of the Lord.

5. Thus saith the Lord God unto these bones: Behold; I will cause breath to enter into you, and ye shall live.

6. And I will lay sinews upon you, and will bring up flesh upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath in you, and ye shall live: and ye shall know that I am the Lord.

7. So I prophesied as I was commanded: and as I prophesied, there was a noise, and behold a shaking, and the bones came together, bone to his bone

8. And when I beheld, lo, the sinews and the flesh came upon them, ana the skin covered them above: but there was no breath in them.

9. Then said he unto me, Prophesy unto the wind, prophesy, son of man, and say to the wind, Thus saith the Lord GOD: come from the Four Winds O breath, and breathe upon these slain, that they may live.

10. So I prophesied as he commanded me, and the breath came into them and they lived, and stood upon their feet, an exceeding great army.

THERE are still countless adherents of orthodox systems of religion who have absolute faith in a general or final resurrection, at which time the bones of all who have passed from mortal life, will reassemble themselves, become clothed with sinews, flesh, and finally skin, at the sound of the trumpet of an archangel, and as a part of a spectacular phantasmagoria almost beyond the power of man to conceive.

This is the occasion commonly termed the "end of the world" and in our own generation we have observed several movements based upon various prophecies teaching its imminence and detailed preparations have on several such occasions been made, preparatory to the great event. But the planet has continued in its orbit as usual and if we could ascribe to it a personality, we would almost feel that we could note its gentle smile of compassionate amusement at the mental vagaries of its human microbes.

We can use the last term quite advisedly, for if the newly formulated Laws of Relativity reveal to us the sublimity of cosmic dimensions, they also compel our attention to the relatively microscopic proportions of man.

There is another and numerous group of strictly orthodox interpreters, who find in the lines quoted from Ezekiel, one of the greatest of the mystic prophets of antiquity, two distinct correspondences; one, relating to the physical development and multiplication of the House of Israel and its final return to its own country, foreshadowing in a way the present Palestine Movement or Zionism; the other giving a prevision of the establishment of the Christian Religion as the custos of the fulfild prophecies of the Jewish Dispensation.

Both these interpretations have been the inevitable result of attempting to comprehend this mystic chapter in a purely exoteric sense.

It is especially appropriate that we consider this question, who the so-called "dead" really are, because the business of the Rosicrucian Order consists chiefly in "RAISING THE DEAD" to life, in accordance with the Scriptural command.

In our Alchemical and Hermetic Instructions we learned that our Ancient as well as our Medieval Brethren in their obscure verbiage, gave the name of "Dead Matter" to ALL LIVING BODIES in the "NATURAL" state, or as found in Nature. (Jun. Herm. No. 1) This is the "Terra Mortua" or dead earth, sometimes called by alchemical writers, the "Terra Damnata" and by St. Paul, the "Body of Sin". (Jun. Hermetics, No. 6)

Every Rosicrucian Initiate of the Collegiate grade is instructed at the outset, that the SUBJECT of Rosicrucianism is MAN; and the OBJECT of its ART is the Perfection and Improvement of Man; HIS TRANSFORMATION FROM THIS STATE OF NATURE ALLUDED TO INTO A STATE OF GRACE; in other words his transmutation from death in Matter to Life in Spiritual awakening, and it will have been noted that in our Requiem Ritual, which is not at all secret, the departed Fraters are always alluded to as the "awakened".

Death is really a state of sleep; a state of somnolence. Like the Apostle we too can truthfully say, "I die daily", (1*Cor. xv,* 31) for every time we sleep, we die, the only difference between that state and the final one we commonly call death being that in the daily incident the Silver Cord is not sundered, but the Ego does depart while the restorative functions of the Etheric Vehicle are being carried out.

Death is never, under any circumstances, a final state. Neither the daily death nor the culmination of mortality are final states, and herein lies our hope of salvation from complete and final crystallization into Matter, for as in that Matter or ADAM, ALL DIED, so in Christ or the awakening to the consciousness of Self in the Light of the birth of the Christ within, even so shall all be made alive. (1 Cor. xv, 22)

Even in our death in Matter we have no choice for as the Apostle also saith in Romans xiv, 7, none of us liveth to himself and NO MAN DIETH TO HIMSELF, in other words, no man can escape, sooner or later, the awakening to the knowledge of SELF and his spiritual existence for that is the fundamental principle and basis of the Law of Evolution and were this not true, there would be neither growth, development or progress in the organic kingdoms of Nature and all would be the dense, mineral formation thruout an inconceivable eternity.

Mortal Life is the Valley of Dry Bones referd to by Prophet Ezekiel, who viewed them in his spiritually clairvoyant capacity, as witnest by the very first verse; "The hand of the Lord was upon me, and carried me out in the Spirit of the Lord, and set me down in the midst of the valley which was full of dry bones", the dry bones of philosofy, science, mechanics, industry, commerce, and even religion, unquickened, unawakened, unconscious of any vital spiritualizing factors, and well enuf did the Prophet look clairvoyantly upon them amazed, when he saw "they were very dry".

Calling attention to this lamentable estate of Humanity fallen into death, or dead in Adam, the Divine Spirit raised in his mind the question,—"Son of man, CAN THESE DRY BONES LIVE? And the same question is equally apropos today as we look about us upon a world absorbed in grossest materialism, engaged in struggles between nations for conquest, territory, commercial prestige and concessions in trade, the maddening craze for speculation on stock markets whereby some hope to win by favor of the Goddess Chance, that which they have not earned and to which therefore, they are not entitled,—CAN THESE DRY BONES LIVE?

Then come the words, familiar to some Initiates; "THE MASTER DIES IN LIFE, TO RISE IN DEATH" and we begin to realize the struggle of Rosicrucianism and Freemasonry to inculcate in their elaborate philosophy exprest in allegory, the true concept of Life and the glorious opportunity that death, so much misunderstood, really gives.

But to refer back to the Prophet and his dismayed observation of the crystallized estate of Humanity. After the question "Can these dry bones live", inspired by the Spirit, he attempts to clothe them. Under his stimulus, Humanity begins to take some thought of its condition. It develops the sinews of scientific fundamentals and the exoteric knowledge of Nature and her laws. It grows and fosters the development of the flesh of philosophic inquiry, speculation and analysis as a basis of arts and letters; finally, it assumes the skin or outward cloak of cultural polish exprest thru religious symbolism and doctrinalia, but, in spite of all these steps toward progress and accomplishment, there was still NO BREATH IN IT, and we must remember that in the first study of cosmology and the appearance of Man, it was as a purely physical being, UNTIL GOD BREATHED INTO IT THE BREATH OF LIFE,—the Divine Breath which is the stimulus to the development of SOUL; the first attempts of the Threefold Spirit to extract from the Threefold Body with all its perfections, the latent and incipient Soul Pabulum, without which the Divinity IN man cannot exprest itself and Man cannot hope to KNOW HIMSELF in accord with the time honored maxim of the ancient sage. (Thales)

So, in obedience to the commands of the Spirit, the Prophet spoke unto the four winds saying; "come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain, that they may live". And the breath came into them, and they stood upon their feet, an exceeding great army.

In other words, wind being the symbol of active force, the Prophet called into activity the forces of the Four Elements of which man was composed and into which he was so crystallized, and by the opposing polarities of Fire versus Water, Air versus Earth, was establisht the rhythmic vibrational status that stimulated into acitvity the Divine Breath in Man, somewhat as is accomplisht in the case of a new born infant when by inflating and deflating the physical lungs the first breathing is effected.

But, as stated, death is never a permanent process nor a finality. Consequently in all ages, Humanity while mortal, exhibits this state of death or Dead Matter. And today we find it equally true. While we have the rich inheritance of the wisdom accumulated thru the ages, Man is still more or less inert in his crystallization into academic science. Philosophy expanded into psychological ramifications and an external skin or pseudo culture which so often fails in the acid test, but exprest by conformity to religious symbolism and ceremonial; the glitter of a New Thought which is neither new nor thought itself; a "Christian Science" which is neither Christian nor scientific; a medical system which substitutes gentle arsenic and nitro glycerine for the delicacies of boiled toads and serpents; a psychology from which the soul, whence it derives it name is carefully eliminated; government wherein the assent of the governed is seldom askt or desired; business in which the old principle of honor has long since become archaic; society which considers the "shimmy" and the "kitchen sink" dances far more esthetic than the stately waltz or quadrille; arts in which real music is only right when interpreted as jazz, pictures which are a travesty on Nature and sculpture which has for its principal purpose, its possibilities as a Lloyd puzzle. Can THESE DRY BONES LIVE?

Verily, in the midst of life we ARE in death. But knowing that death is in no sense finality, we have hope and the certain knowledge that all these things shall pass away, for they are the impermanent, transitory illusions of a world that has temporarily lost its equilibrium and is now in the reaction from one of the most notable convulsions that have ever disgraced its history and no amount of glory won on field or sea can ever erase the underlying selfishness of nations of Humanity that caused it.

It is not always pleasant to contemplate these conditions or to have them thrust upon our attention, especially at a time when the world has gone mad, like the Athenians of old, in search of some new thing which it fondly imagines will give it a newer and deeper insight into the verities of Life itself. But this insight will never come to Humanity as a mass nor to the individual as a unit, until both are equally desirous of learning Truth in its fundamental aspects, regardless of what personal shock to preconceived ideas it may bring.

As above, so below. That is the Law. And as there are in mortal life, the dead all about and around us, so in the inner realms, there are also the dead, those who even yet, have not awakened to the higher vision and who must pass thru incarnations to come before the Breath of Life will function in all its power within them.

The transition commonly assumed to be death, is merely the dicarding of the outer vehicle. When we retire for sleep we discard all the garments of the day until nude, when we prepare for the night. So it is with the Ego. When about to begin its return journey in the Cycle of Life, it discards the outer garment or the physical body and after due preparation and activity discards in turn the etheric and astral vehicles and for each discard there is a corresponding state of death. Finally, when in the nudity of its individuality it reaches the Third Heaven, it begins to prepare for its long sleep by the assimilation of digested experience, and on awakening, it begins to reclothe itself with the various garments or vehicles requisite for its later functioning in the physical world again.

The graduating class of a university is always less in numbers than the freshman class. The class graduating from Life's School is, correspondingly, always less in number than the class entering upon a given term or phase of expression.

Broadly speaking therefore, we may assume that there are just as many dead on the "other side" of life, or in the spiritual worlds, as there are in the physical or mortal world. The dead are those who, in physical or discarnate expression have not as yet awakened to the true knowledge and understanding of their own spiritual natures and self-hood. The man or woman who passes from physical life engrost in materialism will remain just as much dead in the inner worlds as before he entered them and only the stimulus to rebirth will give him an opportunity of learning this important lesson.

It is right at this point that we begin to perceive the value of an "occult order or Brotherhood" such as our own. The Rosicrucian Fraternity is not by any means the only occult organization of value or devoted to the successful accomplishment of this necessary process; it is simply ONE of the instruments used by the Great White Lodge of Masters of Wisdom to reach a certain class of people who could only be reacht or guided by the practices, arts and methods peculiar to it.

But the first and principal duty of the occult student is to seek the hidden, invisible Cause of all revealed or visible Effects and this, the Rosicrucian Schools inculcate more deeply and to greater detail than any other, as it is at present the parent of all other occult or arcane bodies of a legitimate nature or pedigree.

It is only by this seeking or searching out of the invisible CAUSES of visible EFFECTS that we can attain conclusively to an accurate knowledge of ourselves, our Divine lineage and descent and thus it affords us sure and certain KNOWLEDGE, not Theory, regarding the great Principle of Life as Deity Incarnate and Humanity as its manifestation or expression. If our philosophy were mere speculation, it would be a criminal waste of time for us to engage in the study or practice of it, but age after age we have the record of attainment and resurrection from death unto life thru its teachings, and even today, we have with pardonable joy, the splendid record of several who have attained what they sought thru strict and conscientious adherence to the study and practice of our Secret Work. They have been raised from death unto life and experience a consciousness of rest, assurance and contentment foreign to those who have not travelled this way before them. This is the true value of an occult Brotherhood, to raise its members from death unto life by bringing them to a realization of the Truth thru actual personal experience, not alone theory and hypothesis.

Those who have passed before us are to be congratulated, for tho they may or may not have have awakened in this life expression, at least they have completed one more term in Life's School and are one term nearer the goal that we must all eventually attain. We can help them by concentrated thoughts for their illumination and welfare, not by wishing them back, or hoping to receive a message of some sort from them, pleasurable and welcome tho that message may surely be.

It is human nature, when considering a lesson of this sort, to apply the parallels to our next door neighbor, while we rest complacently in the assurance that it is not ourselves, personally, who may be indicated. But let us take serious thought and question whether or not, we too, may not be among those who constitute the "Valley of Dry Bones". Let us ask ourselves whether we can and do LIVE. Let us not be content with theories, glittering platitudes, sentimental burblings but take ourselves strictly to task and introspect. There is one infallible test of our position.

If we set anything in this world, business, pleasure, social activities, friendships or personal relations, the amenities of every day intercourse, diplomacy, or so-called matters of policy ABOVE a strict regard for the Truth, the whole Truth and nothing but the Truth; above a strong unqualified desire for personal progress along constructive lines, then we may be sure we too are among the "dry bones" and in sore need of awakening.

If we are content to adopt an orthdox "thank-God-I-am-not-as-other-men-are" attitude or the complacent "I-am-holier-than-thou", pose, we may be equally sure that our own personal dry bones are rattling with an eloquence that makes a serious discord in the "music of the spheres."

If some undoubted celestial being should appear in our modern world, calling each of us to account for the talents entrusted to us like the husbandman returned from his journey, can WE be quite sure that WE would register on the right side of his ledger? Would WE be reckoned among the DEAD or among the LIVE?

Without speculating on the improbable, let us take another view; if a friend suddenly propounded to each one, the question—What is YOUR basis of living and YOUR PERSONAL attitude toward the Universe, what answer could you make? The many would take refuge in the usual platitudes and sagely reply,—"O, I believe in living on the square and dealing honorably by all",—a good old platitude and one vastly more honored in the breach than the observance—but this would be no reply at all.

If we have passed thru mortal life many times already in previous incarnations, then by every token we ought to KNOW SOMETHING ABOUT IT and if we do not, and cannot give a rational resume of what life IS to us and MEANS to us, it is a positive sign that we have wasted much of our past life and that for every moment we have wasted, we must make due restitution, for TIME, in the abstract, is the greatest gift of God to Man. Have you ever thought of that?

The scientist would tell you Fire was the greatest gift. The Philosopher would tell you Reason; the Churchman would tell you, your Soul and yet none of them would be worth a farthing, were it not for the supreme gift of Time. Time exists not in cosmos for there it is purely an abstraction like Space, but in mortal life it is a superlatively Divine Gift, measuring with exactitude according to the immutable laws of the planets, our individual span of opportunity. That is what Time is to the Human Family,—ITS MEASURE OF OPPORTUNITY. Time exists not with God but it DOES exist with Humanity, and every second of the Divine Gift wasted, is also a part of the Divine Gift spurned and insults to God are not lightly condoned.

We may summon the so-called dead from the Four Cardinal Points of the World and they do not reply. But even so do not forget that the so-called dead DO hear, that which you and I do not hear. We call them the dead because they do not hear US. They KNOW us to be the really DEAD because we cannot hear THEM. We cannot hear, we cannot see, we do not ordinarily even sense the far greater world they occupy, simply because we are DEAD CRYSTALS of Humanity. We are built in the Image of God, we sparkle with the false lustre of intellectual brilliancy but we sneer when a little child speaks of its invisible playmates, or some researcher gives out his findings in psychology as applied to the persistence of consciousness after death.

Persistence of consciousness AFTER death! Ye gods, what a burlesque on human intelligence. We are the dead NOW. Let's not worry about being conscious after the discarding of the physical vehicle,—let us try our utmost to awaken some consciousness right here and now.

The words of the Apostle in Ephesians V, 14 were never so applicable as to our own crystallized selves—"awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead", and the immediate birth of the Christ Spirit within shall give thee Light.

Let us not work thru life on the old saw that "we shall be a long time dead". It may be true, measured by mortal concepts, but "over there" we shall no longer have the mortal concept. Opportunity is here—now. Does Nature go thru the ordeal of giving birth to countless humans simply that they may engage in trade and the pursuit of pleasure? We are here in mortal life simply because the descent into Matter is necessary to complete our education for our future existence in purely spiritual spheres. The bird born and reared in the captivity of its cage does not know what to do with its liberty when that liberty is offered to it. Even prisoners immured for long terms, become in some cases so detacht from the outer world and attacht to the prison home, that it is with difficulty that they can be made to leave it.

Humanity that is destined to ultimately become Creative Hierarchs must serve its apprenticeship in the Matter with which it will some day have to work. And until we can certify that we have served our full time and become Master Builders and Craftsmen, we may be sure that we shall not be entrusted with the privilege of working among the cosmic craftsmen.

"I am the resurrection and the Life". These words are found in practically every burial service in Christendom, but they apply with equal power and appeal to the Jew as well, for they were not uttered by the Man Jesus, but by the Christos or Sun Spirit, and this Great Master Initiate as we know, appeals to ALL Humanity and not to any race, nation or people.

The Christos IS the resurrection and the life, not at some far off, indefinite period when our planet shall have completed its course and the dry bones reassemble from every part thereof in spectacular and dramatic effect. He is the resurrrection and the life to all who come to him at any moment of mortal time, and by coming to him is meant simply the recognition of his existence as the Indwelling Spirit and Regent of our planet and the fact all life thereon is now a part of and vivified by his life, and so shaping our lives anew that he may be born again in each of us.

Then, "tho we WERE dead, yet shall we LIVE" (John xi, 25) is the assurance held out to us of our escape from the REAL DEATH of materialistic crystallization. It has been a long cherist tradition of the Rosicrucian Fraternity, that the possession of the Philosopher's STONE conveys to its holder the gift of escape from physical death and eternal life. It is not within our province to discuss this teaching publicly, but we may say in passing and also as apropos of the present theme, that there is far more truth in this wonderful teaching than the world has any idea of. But like all esoteric truths it must first of all be rightly understood. The Philosopher's STONE is given freely to those worthy of possessing it, but in all the ages of the history of mankind it has never been given to the unworthy, and from those who have possest it, neither torture, intrigue, threat or violence can wring it. The reason is, that tho it were betrayed, the unworthy could not understand it nor could they recognize it even tho they contacted it daily as all human beings do.

It is the one secret that has been absolutely preserved thruout all the ages, from the temporary enthusiast, the thrill or mystery hunter, the curious scholar or researcher, but it IS fundamental Truth and Truth is immutable and imperishable. We CAN attain everlasting life right here and NOW, if we are willing to undertake the life required for it, but it is lamentably true of Humanity that while the spirit may be tacitly willing, the flesh is very weak, weak because it is merely the flesh stretched over the dry bones, thinly disguising their uncanny rattle of superficiality.

Our Ancient Brethren understood the Truth in many respects far better than we. They taught that the SUPERIOR qualities and conditions were the Internal, the Above, and the Celestial (Jun. Herm. No. 1) and the IN-FERIOR qualities and conditions were the External, the Terrestrial and the Below. The primacy was always given to the Superior of the two classifications, and while they as a consequence did not make the same advance in mechanical enterprise, they left behind them the priceless legacy of riches of wisdom which today constitute the basis of thought and scholarship and the sole key to the Mysteries of Life and Death.

It is possible for those of this modern world who wish to follow in their footsteps, to do so without immuring themselves in monasteries, convents or any other form of seclusion from the world. Separateness makes for diversity, diffusion and confusion, not for progress. It is possible to be IN the world yet not OF the world and while such may be sneeringly termed "mummies" BY the world, it will be only a revelation of the world's ignorance and its unreadiness to accept the true and natural way of life that leads to the REAL LIFE ETERNAL. The choice is ever offered but its acceptance is never compelled, for eternity stretches before Humanity and the gods are the embodiment of patience, knowing that Humanity MUST eventually learn its lesson, however much it may procrastinate.

If our Rosicrucianism means anything at all to us, let it lead us OUT of the Valley of Dry Bones. Let it clothe us with the real sinews of spiritual strength, the flesh of Truth, and the skin of Resistance to the temptations of Matter and endow us with the Breath of Divine Knowledge and Understanding, that we may come forth from Death and be raised unto LIFE Eternal here, and NOW.

Let us not lament the dead in other worlds, of which, at best, we know very little, but concern ourselves with the dead all about us. Let us wish them joy on their completion of another term in Life's School, but try and understand what that term has meant to them, profiting by what advance we have observed them to make, and endeavoring by laudable emulation to make even greater progress than they because OF their example, covering with the cloak of charity their possible failures, and magnifying their virtues, so that when our turn shall come to graduate into the higher life expression, we may carry to them a message of encouragement, based upon our advance due to their previous good works. This will be the real and only genuine reunion with the so-called departed.

There is only ONE REAL WAY, the way of Him who said, "I am the WAY, the TRUTH and the LIGHT". "No man cometh unto the Father, but by me". (John xiv, 6) It is the WAY of the Christos, our Planetary Regent, unto whose care all things on this earth are committed, and who is ready and waiting to be born anew in every human being who seeks AT-ONE-MENT with him.

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 90-100

LIBER# 90 BREAKIN' NEW GROUND

Personal & Confidential TENTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

Martinism is a way of life or a doctrine or a system of Christian Chivalry based on a particular teaching of the origins of Man, of his place in Creation, and on the relationship existing between God, Man and the Universe. Its aim is the Re-integration of Man (mankind) with his First Estate, or first cause. It proposes to achieve this aim in two ways: 1/ By the regeneration of Mankind through the regeneration of the individuals; 2/ By the removal of the forces that maintain Mankind in its present exile.

"INITIATION! Extraordinary power of the divine afflatus which radiates from the hands, creates priest or adept and communicates the understanding and potential possession of the sciences! Magical virtue situated on the extreme borderline of the natural and the supernatural! Miraculous and impalpable agent that is given without dividing, that passes from person to person without losing its potency and preserves intact its action which remains infallible, but which develops its full power only in the mind ready to nurture it! Subtile current of a vital fluid which animates the member of the mystical body!"

Saint-Martin entrusted to his disciples the Initiation that it might grow in him who was worthy to receive it and purify him who was not yet thus prepared. In his work "The New Man" Saint-Martin writes: "If the power of Initiation does not give visible results, it nevertheless works infallibly as a preventive and prepares the shell of him who remains pure to receive salutary impressions when the spirit deems it advisable."

Saint-Martin was inspired by: Abbadie, Burlamaqui, Martinez Pasquales & Jacob Boehme.

Man's most important endeavour is to know himself. This he discovers by observing his own behaviour, thoughts, tendencies, reactions, hopes, likes, dislikes, etc. etc.

According to Aristotle, wondering about things is the beginning of philosophy. Wonder takes us away from materialism. Everything is a subject of wonder. In the process of self-study wonder is the link that unites Man, the observer, to Man, the object of observation. The first wonders at the other. The true mystic has an infinite capacity to wonder.

Self-study reveals that Man is rarely an integrated being, that he is made of many "I"s functioning on different planes and fighting for pre-eminence. The most essential virtue in practising self-study is sincerity.

Saint-Martin advocates the study of Man. Such a study reveals that Man is a dual being who can THINK and FEEL and who can thus realise that he is in a state of exile or privation.

The three phases of Man's realisation of Self are: 1/ Discovery in himself of a "Superior Principle". 2/ Consequent realisation of the misery of his present condition. 3/ Logical conclusion that at one time Man lost the state of bliss that was his.

Coming to a realisation of the Fall of Man and the consequent predicament in which we find ourself the need arises of attempting to regain our First Estate or Lost Paradise.

Of the two ways by which re-integration may be accomplished, Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin favoured The Inner Way which is the interior development of Man's spirituality and union with his center. Martinez Pasquales advocated The Operative Way, that is, by acting directly on the forces that are keeping Man away from his First Estate, through theurgic practices.

The Martinist Initiate is SUPERIOR because he is superior in humility. Although he still has everything to learn he knows this and he knows that the secret to his progress is within himself. It is only by remaining UNKNOWN in his superiority that the Initiate establishes his superiority. To reveal this superiority and make it a source of vanity would be to prove himself still in the Forest of Errors and therefore not truly superior.

AN EXERCISE IN CONCENTRATION, SELF-STUDY AND ANALYSIS which should be a regular practice.

Faithful performance of this exercise is an absolute MUST for every sincere Martinist. Its most important effect is the realization of personal responsibility and practice of self-control in all incidents of daily life.

1: On retiring, before falling asleep, go over in retrospect the events of the day. Begin always with the events just before retiring and work back toward the beginning of the day.

2: As you consider each event, weigh it carefully, judge yourself, your attitude, at the time the event occured and at the time you are concentrating upon it.

3: Decide the right or wrong of your position, and if you find yourself to have been wrong, make it your imperative duty on the following day, to rectify that wrong so far as lies in your power.

4: By so doing you will in a large measure assimilate the experience it is the purpose of your present incarnation to acquire, and further you will prevent the accumulation of Karma.

5: Then bring mentally the symbol of the Pentacle of the Order before you and contemplate what message it may have for you personally.

NOTES FOR STUDENTS "SIX"

The Martinist Order is not, strictly speaking, a Qabalistic Order, but it includes Qabala as part of its curriculum because Qabala enshrines many elements of Truth which are of vital importance to Martinists.

Please review your notes from the Degree having to do with Qabala and study the articles in Martinist Digests 3, 4 and 5 having to do with the Qabala. These Digests were formulated as specific aids.

The Zohar is one of the main sources of Qabalistic knowledge. It is like a pawn-shop, - a jumble of trash and articles of value. Here are crowded together and stacked up the cast off intellectual clothing of many minds, cheap jewelry, base metals thinly plated, gold, diamonds, silver, copper and brass. If one wishes to bring out the treasures it is necessary to delve deeply among the rubbish which encumbers its shelves and search around. Only in this way will you find the pearl of great price. The supernal diadem is there, - but it has been broken up, the urge of secrecy having dismembered it and hidden its priceless fragments away in the most unlikely corners. However, what little you may find will be of inestimable value. Being universally true, it offers a key, which, in these tumulteous years that we live, will unlock the door which at present bars us from a completer understanding.

The Qabala is not a book. The word קבלה (QBLH) is spelt many ways, such as: Qabalah, Qaballah, Cabala, Kaballa, etc.. This word simply means "reception", something received, an oral transmission, or the spoken word. In other words it refers to information passed on from mouth to ear, information which in centuries past was considered too secret and sublime for the common eye. Even today only parts of the Qabala have been written down. The real secret arcana remains an oral transmission.

In spite of our advancement in scientific knowledge, the universe remains a mystery. Transcendental knowledge is knowledge which transcends the intelligence, yet it need not be knowledge which is beyond the focus of the mind. Differential calculus is common knowledge to mathematicians and yet it is transcendental to the majority of mankind. So it is with practically all science; it is in itself the perqusite of the few whom we call the wise.

Jesus understood this when he said: "Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you." To the common folk Jesus spoke in parables, not because he was of a common mind, but because he was an Initiate and so understood how fine is the division between reason and madness, and how easily can knowledge dissolve the filament which separates these two. This essential wisdom, - and wisdom is largely the application of knowledge to circumstances, - has always been realized in the East. Amongst the Jews, - and Jesus was of that race, we find it firmly established, and it is not a mere coincidence that the Hebrew word Sod, which means "mystery" or "secrets", has the same numerical value, namely 70, as the Hebrew word which represents "wine"; for mystery can intoxicate as well as refresh.

The mysteries of the early Hebrews were closely guarded by the Sons of the Doctrine, and it would appear that many of their secrets were derived from Egypt and later on from Babylonia. We are told that Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians (Acts 7: 22) and that in the first five books of the Pentateuch he has esoterically laid down the principles of the secret doctrine. He initiated 70 elders into the mysteries (Numbers 11:24), which they transmitted from mouth to ear.

over

con'd

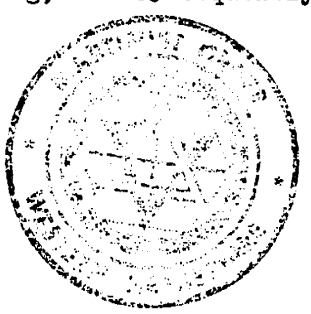
According to the Book of Proverbs "It is the glory of God to conceal a thing." "With the lowly is Wisdom." In other words, wisdom belongs to those who have conquered the arrogance of the intellect. Moses is looked upon as such a person; he kept the secret law secretly....and transmitted it to the elect (Zohar I, fol 28b). He also compiled the public, or exoteric law for the multitudes or common folk.

The Qabalistic wisdom is formed within a vast number of doctrines, such as the nature of God; the mystical cosmogony of the universe; the destiny of the universe; the creation of man; the immutability of God; the moral government of the universe; the doctrine of good and evil; the nature of the soul, angels, and demons; the transcendental symbolism of numbers and letters; the balancing of complimentary forces; etc. etc.. All these many problems are divided under two main headings, the Theoretical and the Practical Qabala; the Theoretical Qabala is again divided into the Symbolical, Dogmatic and Speculative branches. The first main division, that is the Theoretical, is philosophical; the second is magical. The Speculative, or metaphysical, Qabala is the more important branch. According to Adolphe Franck: "It forms the heart and life of Judaism." It covers the evolution, involution, and devolution of the universe in every conceivable spiritual, moral and intellectual form, and under such symbolism as "The spirit clothes itself to come down and unclothes itself to go up"; and again in Ecclesiastes: "Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth?" All these doctrines are wrapped up in the most complete secrecy. They form, in fact, the ancient Sod, or Mystery of the Hebrews.

The origins of the Qabala are primeval; they are lost in the mists of legend, magic and folklore. They have grown through a process of mystical integration until they have absorbed all the great myths of the world. The Qabala is consequently a universal philosophy, combining the eternal masculine and the eternal feminine, and cementing them into the eternally human. So it happens that wherever we search we find origins. Thus we find Qabalism among the Essenes....but long before the Essenes existed lived the Qabala. Aryan and Chaldean esoteric doctrines percolated into it. In Egypt, the mysteries of the Sun god, and Moon goddess, of Osiris and Isis, impinged upon it. Assyria and Babylon gave it much, and not a little may be traced to the Vedas, the Upanishads, the Bhagavad-Gita and the Vedantas, and much of the Practical Qabala to the Tantras more especially.

Historically, the main point of interest is that the Qabalist is an inveterate plagiarist; he never hesitates to absorb knowledge from outside. His doctrines, being secret, are vastly attractive; they suck in all mysteries and digest them into a universal form. Consequently there is both grist and chaff in the Qabala, a medley of wisdom and nonsense which often defies separation. The outstanding advantage of this plagiarizing is that it offers something to everyone; consequently the Qabala has developed into a world-embracing philosophy well adapted to the ideals of a world-scattered race. In it will be found Hinduism, Taoism, Buddhism, Zoroastrianism, Christianity, Theism, Deism, Dualism, Agnosticism, Pantheism, Satanism, Spiritialism, and Atheism. Every cult, except Polytheism, has burnt offerings on the altar of the Qabalistic mystery.

The philosophy of the Qabala is not difficult to define, - it is a question of balance, of poise, and of equilibrium. But to EXPLAIN what is meant by balance or poise is not so easy and in place of attempting to do so in a few words, it is left to each student to slowly comprehend and evolve in his/her own mind the meaning, and consequently the application of this salient teaching.



ORDRE MARTINISTE

CONVENTICLE 17

HAVE TREE OF LIFE DIAGRAM READY FOR HAND OUT

ALSO NOTES FOR STUDENTS "SEVEN"

Greetings

In this Degree so far we have studied the Martinist Movement from the doctrine of the Founder Master, Martinez Pasquales, through the mystical development of our Venerated Master, Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin and very shortly we will begin a fairly comprehensive study of the history of the Order under the presidency of the Illustrious Papus. While we are doing this we shall also turn some of the pages of THE BOOK OF MAN as foreshadowed ever since the beginning of our Works.

Following the Western Esoteric Tradition, this will mean Qabalistic exercise and meditations.

I will now ask the Hon. Master Recorder to hand out a copy of the diagram known as the Tree of Life. (HON. BRO. RECORDER DOES SO). also Notes "Seven"

Brothers & Sisters, with our introduction to Qabalistic study we require you to memorise this diagram of 10 circles. You can do this easily by copying the diagram on a piece of paper and drawing it several times. You will notice it comprises three triangles and a single circle at the bottom. The first Triangle has its point up and the other two triangles have their points downwards.

Let us say a few words about this symbol: First, it is the outline of a composite mystical symbol which enables the Qabalist to remember the many interconnected branches of the generation of Cosmic Forces --- which we have met as seemingly personalised powers in the Celestial Hierarchy according to Martinez Pasquales. At the same time it serves as an image-diagram of the Divine or Archetypal Man. Still further, it assists us in understanding our human psychology as a Collectivity and in this respect it also has distinct correspondences with Esoteric Astrology and the Tarot. It is not our purpose to acquaint our members with more than an outline of this extraordinary mnemonic. --- To be worthy of the title of ✠ ✠ means to be alert to its significance. The Book of Man is in your hands.

The ten circles are best thought of as spheres or concentrations of force within the Cosmos. (PERHAPS THE BRETHREN SHOULD WRITE THAT DEFINITION IN THEIR NOTE-BOOKS). They are stages of Cosmo-genesis which have emanated out of Eternity or Omneity into realms of manifestation. These realms are, according to ancient Qabalists, (and, incidentally, to Oriental Masters too) --- FOUR in number. Consequently, the ten spheres manifest in these four realms in a progressively limited manner. Sometimes these realms are called "worlds", but we shall avoid this overused word and adhere to 'realms' which you are now asked to note carefully. Please observe the small diagram on the page* handed to you a moment ago and make notes either on the page or in your note-book. *Notes for students "Seven" Page ONE.

The highest realm is ATZILUTH or the Realm of Emanations from the Unknowable Centre of Omneity. These Emanations, as we have already been taught, were not created but were, and ever are, the Direct Rays of God. Our human conception cannot reach to that ineffable, ARCHETYPAL, level, so let us do as the mystics of the East do and regard it as wholly transcendental.

(In other words omniā is above Kether in atziluth) con'd

con'd

Although we transmit the idea of ten spheres in the Realm of Atziluth, it is only in the next Realm that some aspect akin to objective consideration can be conceived. So we now note the second realm as that of BRIAH or the Realm of Creation. When the ten spheres OR globes of Light are reflected in the Realm of Briah they become the Ten great Creative Forces or Agents of God, sometimes called Archangels. This realm is also known as Formless, that is to say that whatever objectivity exists, — there is no shape to it. - Discuss -

This reminds us of the pages of the Book of Nature which begin with Motion, Rhythm and then Harmony, which have no SIZE but do have a TIME dimension, as for example in Music. ------- Similarly we can be aware of different colours without additional dimensions. Again: we are reminded of Martinez's doctrine that Man can return to this realm in the process of Reintegrating the Collectivity into the Archeytpe. Such is the destiny of Adam Qadmon of the Qabala.

The third realm is that of Yetzirah (or Ietzirah) which corresponds to Formation in both the Eastern and Western traditions. It also denotes the Astral World in which the Masters usually dwell, although their hierarchy reaches from Earth right up to the Realm of Briah. The ten spheres, which we shall from now call Sephiroth, are more sharply focussed in the Realm of Yetzirah. The classic text on this subject is entitled "Sepher Ietzirah" which gives us our T.Q. and is a recommended book for careful study. Finally we have the Realm of Assiah or Action, wherein the ten Sephiroth have direct application to our physical life, as we shall see. ↓

Here we are furthest removed from the Divine Source and so most free to wander in the Forest of Errors. Our habitual mode of consciousness is to refer to our five material senses and to relate these to what we imagine to be "self". In eastern terminology this is called the "realm of sense-desire" and is the field of active karma. Our Path of Return from this field is to be revealed to us by the "TREE OF LIFE" which is the arrangement of the SEPHIROTH on our diagram.

DISCUSSION * QUESTIONS Where on the TOL would the Creative Place the 3 Mothers if Worlds?

Now Bros ∴ and Sis ∴ as we open the BOOK OF MAN in Qabalistic language, we must realize that certain other esoteric arts and occult sciences are inextricably interwoven — which we must recognize and respect — even if we do not appreciate their precise value. These include Numerology or the use of Numbers as Mystical Symbols.

Our former Grand Master, Papus, has written a book, now republished in English, entitled: "The Tarot of the Bohemians" (i.e. Romanies, or Gypsies), wherein he explains the correspondences between the 22 "Trump Cards" known as the Major Arcana and the 22 Hebrew letters which have been mentioned in an earlier degree. Likewise, Papus shows the links with Esoteric Astrology, although this particular book is not intended to be encyclopedic on these subjects. To be really thorough with the Qabala would necessitate a good knowledge of Hebrew, Numerology and Esoteric Astrology. Let this not disconcert any ∴ ∴ . If he or she is determined to delve into the origin and destiny of Being, these long-preserved symbols of the Ancient Wisdom will prove their worth as Portals of Understanding in the Consciousness of the Collectivity.

↓ on Malkuth the VICE/VIRTUE is INERTIA/DISCRIMINATION. We are meeting the effect of INERTIA very much at this time when the newly acquired 'things' of the material World are having a Mesmerising effect on the society.

con't

At this point, the Sovereign Tribunal reminds Lodges that the Martinist Order is not exclusively a Qabalistic Order. Consequently, brethren must understand that our approach is not intended to be a full investigation of this subject which is in fact :: a life-long study. Some of us may wish to go further with this method of deep mystic symbolism than time here permits, so we shall mention books available to those who desire them. Additionally, if other Initiatic Orders linked with Martinism become operative in this Jurisdiction, keen students will have the opportunity of entering them in due time.

Remember, my Brothers and Sisters, "WHERE THERE IS A WILL, THERE IS A WAY". The PATH DOES open to those who seek, ask and knock, — but as a motto for this Quest let us recall the lines of Alexander Pope:
"KNOW THEN THYSELF, PRESUME NOT GOD TO SCAN: THE PROPER STUDY OF MANKIND IS MAN."
This thought was contained in the Delphic Mysteries:
"KNOW THYSELF AND THOU SHALT KNOW THE UNIVERSE AND THE GODS."

Do you remember our quoting it earlier?

Furthermore: we have inherited a GNOSTIC tradition which is based on the concept of Man containing the Way of Salvation in himself,* but he must be AWAKENED to it. This awakening is said to be a greater transition than that from normal dreaming to mundane consciousness. - - - - It is all based on the Path of Return to the Divine Center of our Being, whence we can view with unutterable serenity the passing of temporal events. (RE-READ THESE LAST TWO PARAGRAPHS).

Among some thirteen volumes of papyrus found in 1946 near Nag Hamadi in Egypt was a complete "Gospel according to Thomas" - a second century Thomas. It contains 114 sayings attributed to the Master Jesus. Saying 18 reads thus:
"The disciples said to Jesus: Tell us in what way our end will take place. Jesus said:...You have indeed uncovered the beginning so you may seek the end; for in the place where the beginning is, there the end will be. Blessed is he who will stand in the beginning, and will know the end and will not taste death."

This Gospel also opens with these remarkable words:

> "Let him who seeks, not cease in his seeking until he finds;
> and when he finds, he will be troubled,
> and if he is troubled, he will marvel, > and will be a King over All".

This is reminiscent of something in our Mystic's Monitor, which you are advisedly committing to memory. The same scroll quotes the Master as saying that > "The Kingdom is within you and outside you." - - - an unusual variant of the orthodox scriptures. This is echoed in Buddhist thought which presents the Enlightenment as both a realisation of the whole Universe as being inside oneself and simultaneously as expansion of consciousness to embrace the Universe.

QUESTIONS — DISCUSSION COMMENTS

* Jesus taught that the Kingdom of Heaven was within each person (So many people still believe that God & Heaven are somewhere up in the sky!) con'd story of Little Divinity

So, Brothers & Sisters, we resume our study of the BOOK OF MAN with the aid of the Qabala. During this week please memorise the Four Realms and make several copies of the Tree of Life diagram and bring them with you to future conventicles as much information will be given which can be charted thereon.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

******* ******* *******

(1) Interrogate the brehren on Q's 15 - 16 - 17.

(2) Instruct the brethren to study the article 'EN SOPH AND THE 10 SEPHIROTH in Martinist Digest no. 5, in preparation for next conventicle.

"The Spirit clothes itself to come down and unclothes itself to go up."

Name some of the Cosmic Forces: The upbuilding forces of cohesion that are particularly noticable in young growing things. Love is a cohesive force, it brings together. The disintegrating forces that causes things to decay and fall apart. Hatred is a disintegrating force, it seperates.

The forces well known to astrology which cause the particular characteristics to people.

desires urges impulsions gravity magnetism atomic forces electrical forces attraction inspiration adhesion Cohesion

TREE OF LIFE

NOTES FOR STUDENTS "SEVEN"

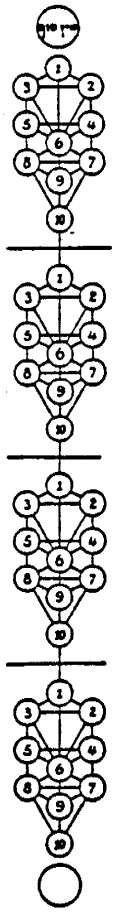
At this point in our Works, we begin, in Qabalistic language, the study of THE BOOK OF MAN. This was foreshadowed at the very beginning of our Works. This means: Qabalistic exercise and meditations.

"KNOW THEN THYSELF, PRESUME NOT GOD TO SCAN: THE PROPER STUDY OF MANKIND IS MAN."

Our approach to Qabala at conventicles is not intended to be a full investigation of this subject, which is, in fact, a life-long study. For those interested in going further into this method of deep mystic symbolism we shall mention a few books from time to time which will be helpful. At this time we can direct your attention to two: Tarot of the Bohemians (Gypsies) by our Past Grand Master Papus; and for those interested in learning to use the Tarot as an oracle for divination: The Tarot Workbook by Emily Peach, published by The Aquarian Press, Denington Estate, Wellingborough, Northamptonshire NN8 2RQ, England, - is excellent.

We have inherited a Gnostic Tradition which is based on the concept of Man containing within himself the Way of Salvation. This is reminiscent of the words of Jesus who said the Kingdom of Heaven is within each person. However: we must be awakened to this and it is said that such an awakening is a greater transition than that of awakening from normal dreaming to mundane consciousness.

The Ten Circles which comprise the Tree of Life are best thought of as Spheres or Concentrations of Force within the Cosmos. They are stages of Cosmo-genesis which have emanated out of Eternity or Omneity into realms of manifestation. These stages, or Realms are, according to ancient Qabalists (and incidentally Orential Masters too) - FOUR in number. Consequently, the Ten Spheres manifest in these Four Realms in a progressively limited manner:



1. The first Realm is called ATZILUTH and is the Archetypal Realm or Realm of Pure Spirit. This Realm is considered to be the highest level of manifest existence, and, as the Archetypal Realm, contains the first pattern of that which is to be. In Atziluth are the Names of God. Each of the following Realms is a denser and denser solidification which starts in ATZILUTH:

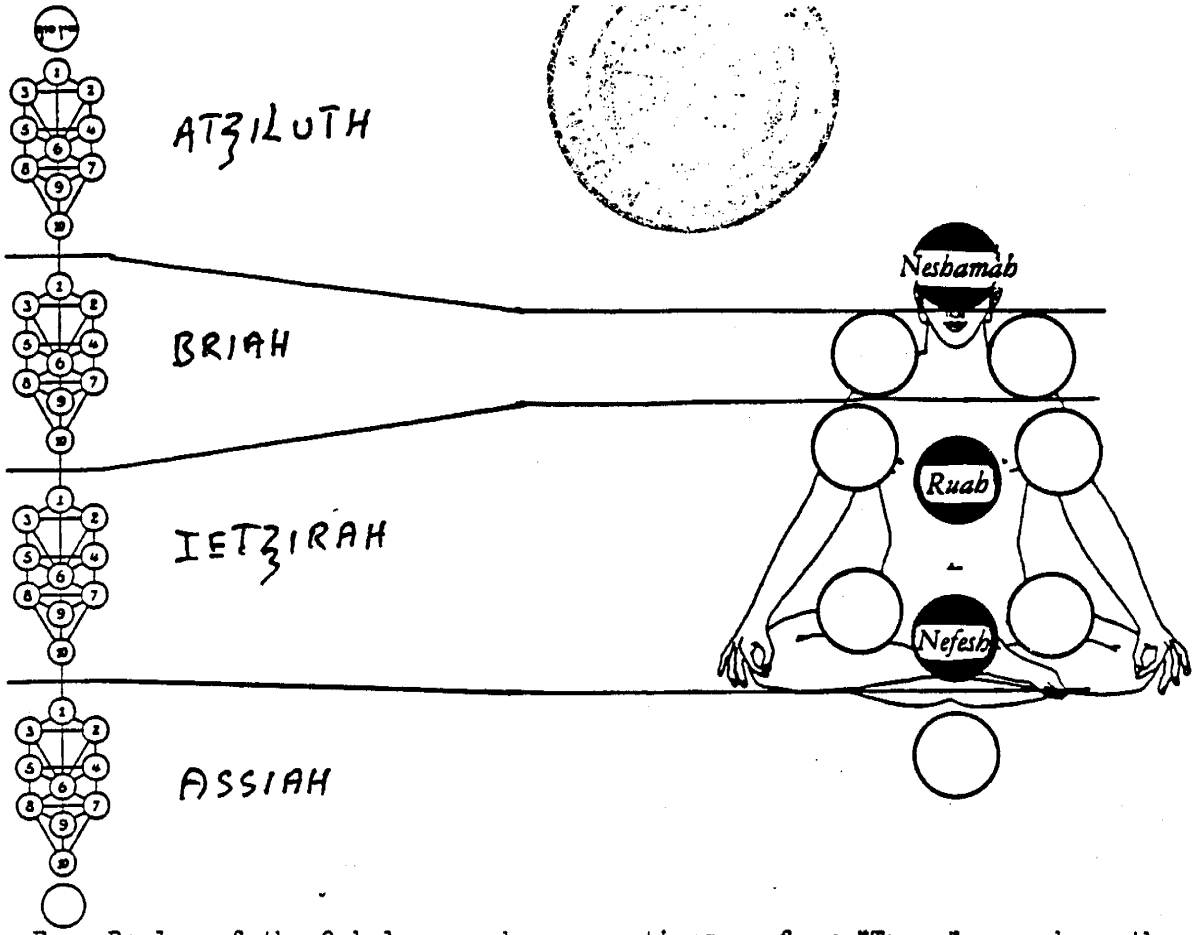
2. The second Realm, BRIAH, the Creative Realm, is also spiritual in nature and contains no admixture of matter. Manifestation here is more concrete than in the Archetypal Realm. It is best thought of as the Realm where the patterns of the Archetypal Realm begin to take shape. It represents a level of consciousness which may be called superconsciousness. Duality begins in Briah and is the level of the Archangels - and their opposites: the Archdemons.

3. The third Realm is called YETZIRAH. It is the Formative Realm and is the level of normal consciousness, although it can be said to include subconscious levels. It proceeds from Briah and although less refined in substance is still without matter. Here are found the Orders of Angels and their opposites: the Orders of Demons.

4. ASSIAH is the fourth Realm and represents the material world. It is here that the various planetary attributions apply. (See reverse side).

- - - - - - - - - - -

It will be necessary to make several copies of the Tree of Life diagram and bring them with you to future conventicles so that upcoming information can be charted.



The Four Realms of the Qabala are shown sometimes as four "Trees" one above the other. The concept of the Four Realms is not as simplistic as it may first seem. Every Sephirah exists in all four realms - and all four realms exist in every Sephirah.

One of the easier ways of dealing with this very complex matter is to recognize the Four Realms for what they are: seperate, but overlapping dimensions in time and space, and to imagine that they are Four Trees, each one superimposed upon the next. When viewed this way (which is still overly simplified) the creation of the cosmos can be seen as a logical progression of events, rather like the construction of a building, which commences from an idea in the mind of the architect, through the various stages of blueprints and plans, material gathering, building and final completion.

The Tree of Life illustrates, symbolically, a process of manifestation, or force precipitating into form. The word "force" in this context is considered to imply an infinite, purposefully directed creative energy; while "form" implies a finite vehicle - - a "shape", a limiting, disciplining factor that provides the force-energy with a means of expression and an environment for optimum growth and development.

THIS CONCEPT WAS EXPRESSED BY EINSTEIN IN HIS FAMOUS $E = mc^2$

Force and form are in reality one and the same thing. Form is constructed of organized force. Force in organization undergoes an increase in complexity and density on descending the Tree and that incease takes place in — four orderly and clearly defined stages. An alternative way of representing the Four Realms (other than showing the Four Realms one above the other) is indicated above.

Form structures, from the Universe itself to the 'bodies' we inhabit, maintain themselves for a certain length of time before breaking up and releasing the force in organization of which they are constructed - back into the system to be recycled, for only the shape which is the visible manifestation of the eternal force, changes. The life force which inhabits the temporary form is eternal.

"As above, so below." The Tree of Life is a "wiring diagram" of the Cosmos....and the mind of man. The forces that play across the vast reaches of interstellar space are parallel to the forces which play within our psyche.

ORDRE MARTINISTE

CONVENTICLE 18

Greetings

Brethren of this degree are now in possession of the "Tree of Life" of our Western Esoteric Tradition known as the Qabala. At our last conventicle we learned of the Four Realms or Worlds of the Qabala in which the Ten Holy Sephiroth exist. While they are diagramed one above the other they can also be thought of as existing one in front of the other. This picture of three reflections of the original Ten has led some students to speak of forty spheres or globes, but the old adage: " AS ABOVE, SO BELOW " answers this point. So as to complete the foundation of our Qabalistic study, let us have now a few historical facts.

The first five books of the Bible, known as the Torah to the ancient Hebrews, or as the Pentateuch to Greek scholars, were written scriptures stemming from the time of Moses. Also, there were recorded from time to time certain commentaries by learned Rabbis concerning the oral tradition of the Creation of the World and the place of Man within it. Eventually the many commentaries and varied explanations were so complex that an effort was made to sift the principles from the countless deviations.

The main sources for the Qabala as a Concealed Tradition are the Sepher ha Zohar, or Book of Splendour; the Sepher Ietzirah or Book of Formation; and, according to Eliphas Levi: the Book of Revelation of St. John the Divine. The actual pattern on the "Tree of Life" is analogous to the Ancient Egyptian tradition as taught in the Temple, so we ask members to refer to their large diagram and to place in the circles these Egyptian names: 1: RA, 2: Shu, 3:Tefnut, 4:Seb, 5: Nut, 6: Osiris, 7: Horus, 8: Nephtys, 9: Set, 10: ISIS.

If the Brethren now observe the alignment of the names on what they will come to know as the Central Pillar, they will see that the first and last are RA and ISIS. Thus as the neophyte ascends he has the first syllable "IS" at Sephira No. 10, which by theosophic reduction takes us to No. 1 where we have the syllable "RA". From this Divine Path we ultimately reach the Godhead EL. Hence we see formation of the Secret Wisdom of IS-RA-EL or Isreal. (NOTE TO MASTER - THIS IS MENTIONED SOLELY FOR GENERAL INTEREST :: IT IS NOT A QABALISTIC DOCTRINE).

This arrangement of Egyptian deities is known as the great Company of the Gods or Paut Neteru. Neteru in one sense means nature.

It is not however, until the Middle Ages, that this Qabalistic Tree seems to have appeared or re-appeared --- probably due to the usual reasons of discretion where orthodox authorities might have "purified" such "heresy" with fire.

Looking at the Sephiroth on the Tree of Life we note that they are placed in a certain sequence. If lines are drawn from 1 to 2 and from 2 to 3 and so on down to 10, we have the traditional Lightning Flash. In the Sepher Ietzirah, as translated by Dr. Kalish in 1877, we read: "The appearance of the ten spheres out of nothing is like a flash of lightning, being without an end. His word is in them, when they go and return; they run by His order like a whirlwind and humble themselves before His throne."

Finally, for tonight's study and for memorising, we observe the first three Sephiroth as belonging to the Upper World of the Qabala, representing a Holy or Supernal Trinity, found in religion as Father, Son and Holy Spirit. In Gnostic tradition, with which we are also linked, the Holy Spirit is feminine in aspect. The remaining seven Sephiroth signify, among other things, the Seven Days of Genesis.

--- --- --- --- --- ---

Interrogate brethren on questions 18 - 19 and 20.

ORDRE MARTINISTE

CONVENTICLE 19

Greetings

HAVE READY: NOTES FOR STUDENTS "EIGHT"

We ended our last Conventicle by mentioning the Lightning Flash which created the Decad out of Nothing. Please keep the diagram of the Ten Holy Sephiroth in front of you as we go along, because it is our memory-aid at all stages of Qabalistic work. It is also urged on those who do not readily recall to mind this "Tree of Life" as it is often called, to practice drawing it in between conventicles. If Martinism is to be a mode of thought and a way of life, constant daily attention must be given to it.

Before continuing with the examination of each Sephira in turn, let us pause to consider the Qabalistic doctrine regarding the origin of the first one which is named KETHER, meaning CROWN. (M.L. SHOULD AGAIN SUGGEST TO THE BRETHREN THAT THE PERTINENT INFORMATION SHOULD BE CHARTED.)

Speaking figuratively, tradition tells us that Kether was the first manifestation from the Unmanifest. In the Zohar, we read:

> "When the Concealed of the Concealed wished to reveal Himself (or Itself) He first made a single Point; the Infinite was entirely Unknown and it diffused no light before this luminous point violently broke into vision."

In our pronaos we learned that OMNEITY is ever both Immanent and Transcendent. Now we may begin to see the use of the Circle in our Martinist Pentacle. The circle implies world-without-end, or for that matter, without beginning. This is sometimes called "Negative Existence" because it does not manifest itself. The Qabalistic term for it is AIN SOPH AUR which translates as "Limitless Light" or "Unlimited Light". Qabalists also maintain a triadic pattern even in this incomprehensible infinitude by speaking of two other veils of negative existence "before" or "behind" Ain Soph Aur. These are Ain Soph, meaning "Unlimited", which leaves out even the conception of "Light" -- no matter how free from its normal dual insinuation. In other words it is unlimited nothingness. Then even anterior to this unconditioned negativity the Qabalists also spoke of "Ain" which is equivalent to the English prefix "Un-". This first of the three negative veils of the Great Unmanifest, AIN, is therefore the utter negation of all that did, does, or even shall, EXIST.

Now to return to the Point within the Circle which the Concealed of the Concealed manifested, rather like the first motion from a state of Eternal Rest. This point was, or eternally is, the focus of the First Holy Sephira which in turn immediately emanated Nine others. These were the Divine Emanations, --- Ten out of No-thing. In the hitherto undifferentiated ZONE between the POINT and the CIRCLE, there now existed the FOUR REALMS, namely: those of Emanations providing the Archetype, then of Creation, next of Formation, and lastly of Action. With this provision for dimensions of time and space, the Ten Sephiroth, like globes of coloured lights, shone through the Four Realms, causing untold variations of LIFE processes. These processes include ourselves, that is to say, — our atomic and chemical make-up, our physical selves, our emotions, our mental reflections about all these processes, our ability to differentiate between our observations, our freedom of will to seek a Path of Return from endless ramblings of uncontrolled consciousness with its inherent uncertainties.

So that we can pursue this age-old Quest of the Supreme Incognate or the Sublime Initiate, please make sure you remember the Three Negative Veils prior to Kether, the First Holy Sephira --- and the Four Realms or Worlds of the Qabala. It may help to recall that our Pentacle is divided into four sectors.

Interrogate members on questions 15 to 22.

HAND OUT: NOTES FOR STUDENTS "EIGHT"

NOTES FOR STUDENTS "LIGHT"

The cosmology of the Qabala may be defined as a process of world emanation from the No-Thing or Ain. The PRIMAL CAUSE is called Ain, - the No-Thing; that is, Something which, because it transcends the human intellect, can only be described negatively. "It is so named because we do not know, and it is impossible to know that which is in this Principle, because it never descends as far as our ignorance and because it is above Wisdom itself." Zohar III fol. 288b.

Out of this No-Thing emerges as it were the Ain Soph, the Endless, Boundlessness, and Eternality of No-Thing - therefore, in a way, a qualified No-Thingness. In the Book of Job we read: "He stretcheth out the north over the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing." It is also called Attikah D'Attikin, the Ancient of all Ancients, and Attikah Qadosha, the Sacred Ancient; it is sexless and is sometimes described as the Non-Ego or Not-I, the Ain being altogether beyond the I.

In the Zohar we read: "And there went forth, as a sealed secret, from the head of Ain Soph, a nebulous spark of matter without shape or form, a center of a circle, neither white nor black, neither red nor green, in fact without any colour." Zohar I, fol. 56 (Cremona edition).

This is the Ain Soph Aur, - Light, not as a contradistinction to Darkness, but as a vibration. First, so the symbolism describes, the Ain Soph withdrew Itself into Itself to form an infinite space - the Abyss. In this space appeared a point of light, or life-giving energy, which filled it. The Ain Soph Aur is, consequently, pictured as contraction and expansion, a sucking-in and throwing-out within itself; it therefore symbolizes the centripetal and centrifugal energies of creation, which through their rhythm constitute the Infinite Light out of which the universe is made; this Light has been called the Idealized Blood of the Universe.

This trinity of Primal Causes, - the Ain, the Ain Soph, and the Ain Soph Aur, - is concealed in the first three verses of the Book of Genesis: the creation out of God, since everything in "the heavens and the earth" comes from the No-Thing; the Spirit of God; and the Light which emanated from God's Spiritual Voice (the totality of the 22 letters) or words - "Let there be Light". The graspable beginning is Light; all before it or, so to say, behind or beyond it, is impenetrable mystery, - an Absolute Darkness to the mind.

From the Ain Soph Aur emanates Eheieh, (no. 1 on T.O.L.) - the "I" or "I Am" - abstract thought; then IHVH, (no. 2 on T.O.L.), "It who was, and is, and will be", - thought in time; and lastly Elohim, (no. 3 on T.O.L.) - God in nature and the God in the Bible, in which IHVH (Jehovah or Yahweh) is translated as "Lord", the equivalent of the Hebrew Adonai, for the true name of Tetragrammaton (IHVH) may not be pronounced.

Thus, as the Ain, Ain Soph, and Ain Soph Aur form a group of three unthinkable principles, so do Eheieh, IHVH and Elohim form a group of three intelligent principles, - abstract thoughts, thought in time and thought in everything; for the whole universe arose out of the Voice (the creative instrument) which expressed the ineffable thought of Light in the words "Yehe Aur", - "Let there be Light". Thus to the Qabalist the universe is a divine form reflected in a beam of light, a form which will vanish utterly back into the Ain when this beam is cut off. Existence, therefore, is Light; perhaps that light which present-day science calls "radiation".

over

con'd

The Sephirotic emanations are arranged in a pattern called generally: The Tree of Life. The attributions of each Sephiroth are many. A full and complete exegeis can be found in the many works on Qabala, the leads to some of which were given in M.D. no. 4.

The T.O.L. is not so much a system as it is a method. On its own it means nothing. Those who formulated it realized the important truth that in order to obtain clarity of vision, one must circumscribe the field of vision. The Qabalist does not try to explain to the mind that which the mind is not equipped to deal with, - they give it a series of symbols to meditate upon and these enable the mind to build the stairway of realization step by step, and climb where it cannot fly. The mind can no more grasp transcendent philosophy than the eye can see music.

In working with the Tree it is wisest to keep on going over it, rather than to concentrate on a single point until it is mastered, because one thing explains another and it is out of the perception of the relationships between the different symbols that enlightenment comes.

THE TREE IS A METHOD OF USING THE MIND - NOT A SYSTEM OF KNOWLEDGE.

A symbol will do more for the mind when the meanings of words have become exhausted. In fact, in highly abstract regions the mind can use nothing but symbols. Symbols have the power to convey realizations to minds that know how to use them. Symbols are the seeds of thoughts from whence understanding arises. SYMBOLS ARE THE WORKING TOOLS OF THE MYSTIC!

The Tree is a glyph of the soul of man, the microcosm; and the universe, the macrocosm. The study of one throws light on the other. Here we approach the study of the Book of Man. Through using the Tree, it is possible to reduce to diagramatic form, the forces and factors in the manifested universe and the soul of man, to correlate them one to another and reveal them spread out as on a map so that the relative positions of each unit can be seen and the relations between them traced. In brief the Tree can be a compendium of science, psychology, philosophy and theology.

The Heavenly Man or Adam Qadmon is the archetypal man, - we all come out of the same basic mould, every individual is a Tree in themselves.

The Trinity of the three supernals is separated from the rest of the Sephiroth by the Abyss, - which normal human consciousness cannot cross. Here are the roots of existence hidden from our eyes.

Qabalistic teaching states that beyond Chesed, individuality ceases to exist.

Regarding this question of the maintaining of one's individuality, from a strictly Martinist point of view - we have here to differentiate between the reintegration of the individual and that of Adam Kadmon. In the first case, the regenerated and reintegrated individual retains in some way his individuality, forged by his experience(s) when in the flesh and sifted while out of the flesh. But it is the sum total of the re-acquired knowledge and wisdom of its "individual" cells during the "living" existence(s) that will one day, enable Adam Kadmon to return to the bosom of the First Cause. On that occasion, however, individualities will be submerged in the One consciousness. However, this One consciousness encompasses, contains and preserves as a whole all its possible fractions, representing the individualities that make up the whole. When we will have reached that stage, it is doubtful whether our puny little individualities will seem important.

ORDRE MARTINISTE
SUPERIOR DEGREE

CONVENTICLE 20

Greetings O Unknown and Silent Ones ! HAVE STUDENT'S NOTES "NINE" READY.

As we have seen, the Qabala is the foundation stone of the Western Esoteric Tradition. Originally, the Qabala was considered to be so holy that it was reserved entirely as an oral tradition, that is, it was handed down since Biblical times strictly 'from mouth to ear'. 'Qabala' actually means 'from mouth to ear', however, from the twelfth century some of it was written down and made available through the works of such translators as Picus de Mirandola, Knorr van Rosenrath, Cornelius Agrippa and others. There is no single work or single authority on the Qabala, it is such a vast subject it would take a person several lifetimes to unravel all its mysteries. Nevertheless, as we have already discovered, many of its basic tenets form the backbone of most, (if not all) of the popular religions, even though these religions may not know it.

The entire wisdom of the Qabala can be revealed through the simple, yet unique and marvellous diagram - - - - the OTZ CHIIM ✡ The Tree of Life. Simple as the symbol looks, it has been described as "The Mighty, All-Embracing Glyph of the Soul of Man and the Universe." Indeed, without this composite symbol it is probable that the Western Tradition would have been completely destroyed. Owing to its simplicity, however, it can be committed easily to memory, and owing to its profoundity, a complete and practical philosophy and knowledge of the structure of life, both in its inner and outer aspects, — can be derived. * Woodcut ETZ - Hi - Ellen

As we proceed in our studies, both individually and collectively, let us keep in mind that there are several ways of illustrating ideas on the Tree. When we study the various ideas that have been expressed we come up against the problems associated with semantics or the use of words. Different people use different words to express the same meaning. We should therefore not fall into the error of adopting a too rigid point of view in the belief that there is only one explanation of things. Our fruitful symbol of the 3-branch Candlestick tells us that there is One Truth coming from different sources. One example of a seeming contrary exists where one school places the Father at Kether, the Son or Logos at Chokmah and renders Binah as "understanding intelligence or spirit, sometimes called Immah, the Mother or Queen." Another school places the Father at Chokmah, the Mother at Binah and the Son at Tipherth, (No. 6).

As seekers of truth, let us avail ourselves of the vast body of knowledge which is our heritage and, along with our individual meditations, shape our own realisations. As we shall see, there is yet another representation of the Trinity: Father at 1, Son at 6, and Holy Spirit at 9. One of the problems that face members of exoteric religion is understanding the nature of God. God is held as being One, but at the same time he is described as three.

Although the unity of God is most strongly emphasized in the Old Testament, there are passages wherein God speaks of Himself in the plural. In Genesis I, 26 God said "Let Us make man in our image." This undoubtedly refers to the Supernals as illustrated on the Tree of Life and the Church Fathers said they refer to the Christian Trinity. In Genesis 3:22, speaking of Adam, God says he "is become as one of Us." In Isaiah 6:8 the Lord speaks of himself as both singular and plural, saying: "Whom shall I send and who shall go for Us?" In Genesis I8 the Lord appears to Abraham in the form of three men and Abraham hastens to his wife Sara and asks her to prepare three measures of flour. Elsewhere they are spoken of as the One Lord. In the early Christian Church these three were taken to be symbols of the Holy Trinity.

con'd

con't

The number three is often used in the Old Testament to signify completeness. For example three men were cast into the fiery furnace and survived; the three sons of Noah peopled the world after the flood; Jonas was in the great fish three days, etc...There are quite a number of other examples illustrating the idea of completeness through the number three in the Old Testament.

In the New Testament three is the most important number. Soon after his birth Jesus was visited by three Wise Men who brought three gifts; at his baptism the Holy Trinity was represented by himself, by the Father in a voice from heaven and the Holy Ghost descending in the form of a dove. At the Transfiguration Jesus took three apostles; the three great virtues are named: faith, hope and charity; Jesus prayed thrice in the garden; referring to the resurrection Jesus said the the temple could be destroyed and rebuilt in three days...etc. In the Epistles of St. John (I John vrs 7) it says there are three that give testimony in heaven, the Father, the Word or Son and the Holy Spirit and these three are One.

The Moslem Religion (Islam) rejects the doctrine of the Trinity. The Koran says that God cannot be the third of three. Nevertheless, Moslem theology has three symbols connected with God. The first thing created by God or that co-existed with Him, it was said, was qulam, the pen which recorded all the things to be created. Next came the tablet or scroll called luah which recorded all the decrees of God. Finally there was the 'arsh or throne of God. To the philosophers the Pen represented the Prime Intellect or First Reason, the tablet or scroll the Second Reason and the throne the Third Reason. Some Moslem theologians refer to three divine entities: God; the light of God and the light of the Prophet. The Sufis who are Islamic mystics say there are three aids to devotion: attraction; the path; and ascent to divine things.

The Egyptian trinity comprised Osiris, Isis and Horus.
The Babylonian genealogy commenced first with Apsu, Tiamat and Mommu. These were later replaced with Anu, Enlil, and Ea.
The mysterious Hittites who occupied much of Asia Minor about 2000 B.C. to 1190 B.C. seem to have had a mythology very similar to the Babylonians for they had a sacred triad of chief gods whose names have been given as Anu, Alalu and Ea.

The Zorostrian religion emphasized Zervan Akarana, Mithra and Ahura Mazda or Ormuzd.

In the Hindu religion there is Brahma, Vishnu and Shiva.
The Buddhist have Buddha, Dharma and Sangha. Buddha signifies initiation to the highest grade. (The historical Buddha is only one of many Buddhas). Dharma is the central moral code of the Universe. Sangha is the bond of religion itself - God as love.
The supreme triad or Trinity of the Taoists are called the Three Pure Ones. They are: Shang-ti or Yu-ti, August Supreme Emperor of Jade; Yu-Huang, Saviour of the World; and Wan-chang.

The Kelts had Teutates, Hesus (or Esus) and Tharamis.
The Druids, who were the priests, law-givers and initiated teachers of the Keltic people believed in three forms of God and have so many triads that we cannot include them here. However, they represented the gods by the symbolism of the vegetable kingdom; the chief triad seems to have been oak, mistletoe and apple. Later the mistletoe became the symbol of the Messiah. It was called the Branch, an Old Testamant title for the Messiah.

In Christian Angelology the number three is prominent in the tradition of angels passed down from Dionysius, the Aeropagite. They are classified in three circles

con'd

con'd

and each of the circles in three orders:

The first circle consists of Counsellors and is divided into Seraphim, Cherubim and Thrones. The second circle called Governors consists of Dominations, Virtues and Powers. The third circle consists of Ministers. These include Principalities, Archangles and Angels.

Although it would be easy to add many other triads, major and minor, the foregoing should serve well enough to show how the idea of a threefold aspect of God has persisted and still does persist today. In A.D. 325 the dogma of the Divinity of Christ was upheld at the first Oecumanical Council at Nicaea and at the Second Oecumenical Council at Constantinople in 381 A.D. the Divinity of the Holy Spirit was upheld. The dogma of the Holy Trinity has seldom been questioned, even among Protestants. Unfortunately the esoteric meaning of the Trinity is not generally known and the exoteric or outer meaning has prevented certain persons of perception from considering it seriously.

Among the philosophers Plato refers to the Divine Triad as Theos (God), Logos (Word), and Psyche (Soul). Elsewhere he writes of Goodness, Truth and Beauty. Aristotle distinguished between rational soul, peculiar to man, the animal soul possessed by man and animals and the vegetative soul by man, animals and plants. St. Paul also had a threefold division of man: pneuma (spirit), psyche (soul) and soma (body). The threefold classification has been advanced by as varied thinkers as Kant and Swedenborg. Among the depth psychologists Freud had the threefold divisions of the Unconscious: super-ego, ego and id, whilst Jung spoke of anima, ego and persona.

Turning now to the sciences, we find modern natural science speaking of three basic physical entities: space, time and energy. Matter, which is now regarded as a form of energy, exists in the three forms of solid, liquid and gas. Time appears to us as past, present and future. In alchemy there were the three principles salt, sulphur and mercury. Our work as Associates has also unfold many other groups of three.

It now behoves us to consider the Supernal Triangle of the Tree of Life, namely the Trinity of the First, Second and Third Sephiroth. These are named KETHER or Crown; CHOKMAH or Wisdom; and BINAH or Understanding. Sometimes Binah is rendered as Intelligence. The first thing to be noted is that Kether is a Unity on its own. There is NO DUALITY in Kether. The first appearance of duality occurs with the emanation of Chokmah and Binah, -- rather analogous to a pendulum being suspended at Kether and able to swing to Chokmah and then to Binah. The second and third Sephiroth are therefore the first semblance of vibration or swing between opposites, or again, they remind us of the Divine Word sounding forth. Hence we may use this remarkable mnemonic pattern to represent to us the World of God, placing Kether primarily in the Realm of the Archetype, with the other two highest Sephiroth in the Realm of Creation. This will help us to compare the usual three worlds of Martinism with the four of the Qabala.

After the first three Sephiroth we have six more, which we find representing the six "Days" of Creation and which we can visualise in the World of Orbs of Martinism, or in the Realm of Ietzirah or Form in the Qabala. This also gives us the Book of Nature with its special application of the opposites. Lastly, we have the tenth Sephira which we understand best in the Realm of ASSIAH or action, that is, the Martinist World of Man. Thus: Man sums up the whole of Creation from the foot of the Tree of Life. Number 10 reduces to 1 and Man's Path leads back to the One. We shall return to this subject and examine the Sephiroth in turn with their correspondences. For the present, let us have something to meditate on.

con't

The Tree of Life is also used as a framework for "crucifying" the Divine Man. The Divine Man, ADAM QADMON or Archetypal Man, is regarded as having his head and shoulders in the Supernal Trinity. This gives us a picture of Unity in the Mind, with Duality on the two sides of His Body, the Body of the Collectivity of Mankind. His feet are on Earth at the Tenth Sephira. The Sephiroth on the two sides of Him are in two columns, like the Pillars of the Temple. —— The first, sixth, ninth and tenth Sephiroth are in positions of Equilibrium, thus forming the White Pillar or Path of Return. Think about this. Also, the first three Sephiroth provide the individual man or woman with a symbol of thought processes.

In our Mystic Degree we learned how duality needed a process where all Action was performed by something or someone ON something or some one. We said that Music resulted from player and instrument, this breaks up the stages in a time sequence. Thus Kether, also named the Ancient of Days because it was before time became relative, — exists as Crown to the Highest Wisdom which in turn is applied to the Highest Intellegence. This is a Macrocosmic application.

In our own case, suppose we observe an object which we firmly regard as not being a part of ourselves. - If we make full use of the exercise taught a year ago for maintaining Single Awareness, we can now note carefully how our consciousness shifts alternately from "self" to "object" and back again rapidly. This shift is usually so rapid that it is almost imperceptible, however, we can now observe how this gives us the idea of "space" between "self" and "object". Likewise, we can appreciate the time interval between the awareness of the object and the linking of it with "self". IF, HOWEVER, WE CAN KEEP OUR SINGLE AWARENESS ON THE OBJECT, WE SHALL HAVE THE SHATTERING EXPERIENCE OF IDENTIFYING SELF WITH OBJECT. Time will "stand still". Space will disappear. A minor mystical union will have taken place. This experience is the start of the journey on the central Path of Return. It is worth bearing in mind that no amount of reading will get us there —— nor can anyone do it for us!!! God helps those who help themselves; Masters can only point the way.

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

_____:

Interrogate members on Questions 1 - 5.

_____

HAND OUT NOTES FOR STUDENTS "NINE"

_____

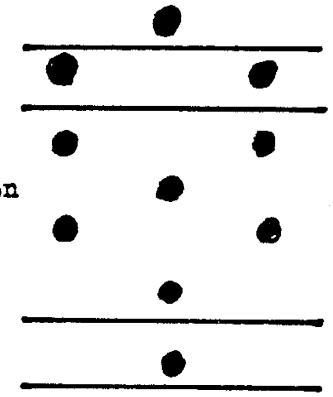
The 10 Sephiroth, when combined with the 22 Hebrew letters, form what is known as the Tree Of Life, which constitutes the framework of Adam Kadmon, the Heavenly Adam, similar in anatomy to his human counterpart, - the earthly Adam.

Man is a combination of three spheres of force, the intellectual (Kether, Chokmah, Binah); the moral (Chesed, Geburah, Tiphareth); and the astral (Netzach, Hod, Yesod). His soul is also threefold with the Neshamah grade in the first triangle, the Ruach in the second, and the Nephesh in the third.

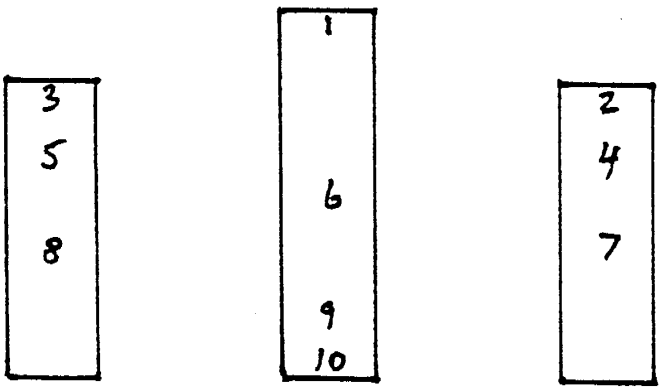
The tenth Sephirah, Malkuth, is the last or bottom of the Tree. This Sephirah represents the completion of the scheme formed in Kether. Here involution ends and evolution begins. From Malkuth it is possible to ascend towards Heaven (Kether) or descend into the Qliphoth (Hell). Malkuth is the end result of the life process, the Fallen Sephirah, - dense solidification. It is the world of Assiah and the center of experience. In Malkuth high aspirations can develop and mature, or be destroyed. Avarice and inertia are the vices in Malkuth; it is the world of temptations and corruptible riches. Karma, good and bad, is accrued in this sphere of consciousness.

Corresponding to man, the Tree of Life is divided horizontally into four planes:

(This is an alternative schema to the representation of the Four Realms as shown in notes "seven".)



and divided vertically into three trunks:



The Central Pillar is known as Harmony, or Mildness, the Pillar of Equilibrium, consisting of Kether, Tiphareth, Yesod and Malkuth, it is the Tree of Life as mentioned in Genesis. The right hand pillar, that of Chokmah, Chesed and Netzach is active, male, positive and is called the Pillar of Mercy; that of Binah, Geburah and Hod is passive, female and negative and is called the Pillar of Justice. These two "outside" Pillars constitute the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil, because they are made up of unbalanced forces which can only find equilibrium in the central trunk or Pillar. The balancing of the two outside Pillars constitutes the Great Work of the Qabala.

over

con'd

The duality in man is hidden in the words "Let us make man in our image", that is, in light; "after our likeness", that is, in darkness, which is the garment of light. Between the opposites of Good and Evil is placed the free will of man, which establishes harmony between them and by which man exercises the divine power of judgement. Man, as we have already noted, is, therefore, a living representative of the Tree of Life, or conversely, the Tree of Life is a pictorial representation of Man. In man, good and evil represent the Pillars of Mercy and Severity (or Justice), whilst free will represents the Central Pillar of Equilibrium.

Regarding the Four Realms: From Genesis - "Let there be Light" refers to the Atziluthic Realm; "Elohim saw the Light that it was good" refers to the Briatic Realm; "Elohim divided the Light from the Darkness" refers to the Yetziratic Realm; "Elohim called the Light Day, and the darkness he called Night" refers to Assiatic Realm. The whole process of creation is the evolution of Light:

from an absolute quality to a tangible quality;

from what is incomprehensible to what is comprehensible;

from what is from God and beyond man to what is of God and within man;

all and everything is Light in varying forms of density or purity.

From Light we come and unto Light we go. The great Qabalistic secret is the transmutation of Darkness; light in its material form into illuminism, that is, Light in its spiritual form.

SUCH IS THE GRAND TELESMA OF THE WORLD!

Duality begins in Briah, there we have the dual forces: Archangels and Archdevils. In Yetzirah we have the Hosts of Angels and the Cohorts of Demons. (See Notes 13 & 14).

Duality in Assiah is the vice and virtue of each Sephirah but particularly Malkuth, the last Sephirah on the upright Tree and the first on the Qliphotic,-it is one and both. In other words the Tree of the Qliphoth is upside down. From Malkuth one can ascend towards Heaven or descend into Hell. Sephiroth 1 - 7 on the Qliphotic Tree are the Seven Hells. Should a person go down into the Qliphoth and cross the Qliphotic Abyss - there is no return and the ultimate end is total anhilation.

The Christian Trinity can be depicted on the Tree in a variety of ways: (There is no absolutely "right" or "wrong" way).

Father	Son	Holy Spirit
(a) 1	2	3
(b) 2	3	6
(c) 1	6	9

A dogmatic position should not be taken. Meditation and study will open the Book for each student.

What ideas do YOU have?

 Better terminology here would be:
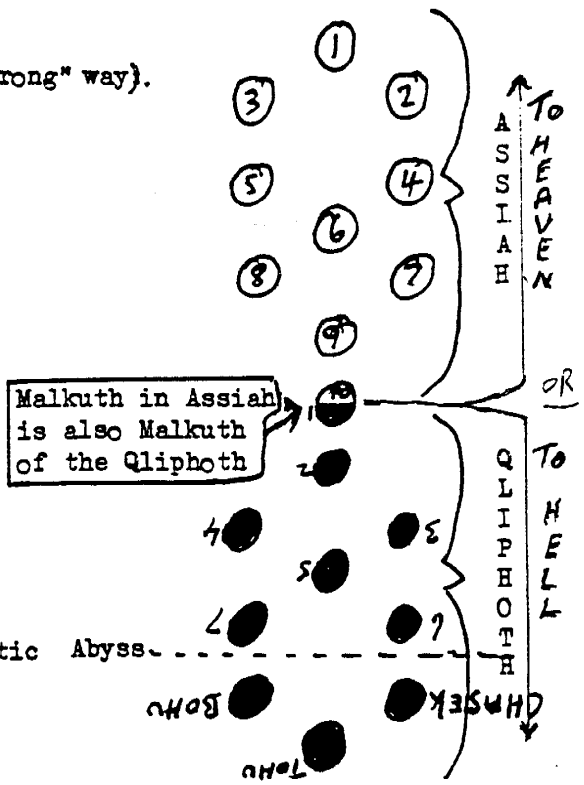
"Father" (2)
"Mother" (3)
"Son" (6)



General Attributions of the Major Paths of Wisdom

Sephira	Vice/Virtue	Image	General
KETHER	Attainment	An ancient bearded king, in profile	Kether is also known as Primum Mobile or First Swirlings. It represents the beginning of things, and also the final ending of things; for this Sephira symbolizes that form of the Creator that is Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending. It indicates all first principles.
CHOKMAH	Devotion	Any father figure	To Chokmah is attributed the mundane Chakra The Zodiac, and the Sephira is sometimes called The Father. The Sephira as a whole can be regarded as a source of energy, and in particular masculine, life-giving energy. Its choir of Angels, Wheels, indicates the aspect of this Sephira which puts things in motion.
BINAH	Silence/Avarice	Any mother figure	To Binah is attributed the planet Saturn, which pertains to form, restriction and limitation. This Sephira is sometimes called The Great Mother, and it represents the feminine form-making principles as Chokmah represents the masculine force principles. This is the Sephira of birth, and consequently also of death.
D'AATH	Apathy or Inertia/ Detachment	(D'aath the "invisible Sephirah" is not usually shown on the Tree.)	D'aath is the Sephira of abstractions and absolute justice. It is to some extent associated with intuition; but revelation and inspiration are better words for this aspect of the Sephira. D'aath in its purest form has no symbolism at all, and there is consequently no magical image for this Sephira.
CHESED	Obedience/Cowardice and Pride, Hypocrisy, Gluttony and Tyranny	A mighty crowned and throned King	To Chesed is attributed the Planet Jupiter, and consequently it has to do with abundance, growth, organization and prosperity. Its virtue indicates co-operation with the codes of society. The Sephira is also connected with learning, and just law
GEBURAH	Energy and Courage/ Cruelty and Destruction	A mighty warrior in his chariot, crowned and armed	To Geburah is attributed the planet Mars, indicating action, initiative, critical judgement, energy and haste. Martial and surgical matters particularly fall under the dominance of this Sephira. The Sephira has the reputation of representing conflict and violence, but this is not really so — although it does govern change, and the overturning of the old for the new.
TIPARETH	Devotion/Pride and Vain-glory	A King, or a child, or a sacrificed god	To Tipareth is attributed The Sun, which is the centre of the solar system and the giver of all life. As you will recall, Tipareth is the centre of the Tree, and is the harmonizer of all manifestation. Under this Sephira fall all matters of healing, life, abundance and success, and this Sephira is the Christ Centre.
NETSACH	Unselfishness/Lust and Unchastity	A beautiful naked woman	Venus is the planet attributed to Netsach, and this is the sphere of right relationships. Under its dominance fall the emotions and the arts.
HOD	Truthfulness/Falsehood and Dishonesty	An androgyne	Mercury is the planet attributed to the Sephira, and under it come books, learning, communication, trade, commerce and the exchange of goods and ideas. Included in this list should be travel and contracts, the art of magic and thought in general.
YESOD	Independence/Idleness	A beautiful naked man	To Yesod is attributed The Moon, and so it has to do with rhythm, organic growth, fluctuation, tides and cyclic change. It also covers the subconscious, psychic and etheric, and biological functions of life.
MALKUTH	Discrimination/Avarice and Inertia	A young woman, crowned and throned	Malkuth is the centre for earth and material things. It is closely associated with Kether, of which it should be the material expression.

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 90-100

LIBER# 91 MIXED FEELINGS

Personal & Confidential TENTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

ORDRE MARTINISTE

SUPERIOR DEGREE

CONVENTICLE 21

Greetings O Unknown and Silent Ones! HAVE READY: NOTES FOR STUDENTS "TEN"

Tonight we will pause for a moment for a quotation or two. It is not instructive to have long quotations, since members can refer to textbooks themselves and in so doing, spend more time meditating on the spiritual significance.

The Old Testament has a useful reminder from the greatest of its prophets, namely Isaiah, who, in a moment of divine inspiration, wrote:

> "For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways, my ways; saith the Lord." (Chap 55: 8-9).
> "For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts."

This passage points to a higher mode of thought process altogether.

Since we are concerned with the science of numbers from time to time, it will also be useful to mention certain paragraphs of the Sepher Ietzirah. We shall use the numbers 3 - 7 - 12 in connection with the Path of Return, but while we are still examining the Involution of Being — or Genesis — let us note the following: Chapter IV, sections 15 and 16 of the Sepher Ietzirah gives us these statements:

"Hence, God loves the number seven under the whole heaven!"

"Under the whole heaven" means throughout nature. In the Book of Nature we had seven pairs of opposites relating to the evolution of mankind. Let us refresh our memories as to these before the next lesson.

Section 16 : "Two stones build two houses, three stones build six houses, four stones build twenty-four houses, five build 120 houses, six build 720 houses, and seven build 5040 houses. From thence, go further, and reckon what the mouth cannot express and the ear cannot hear."

This section obviously does not mean dwelling-houses in the mundane sense. We remember our first degree work with theosophic addition and reduction. Now we are presented with what we could term "theosophic multiplication"!! This is in fact a simple mathematical series which is made up of factorials. Each of the numbers in this ancient treatise is formed as follows:

2 x 1 = 2 3 x 2 x 1 = 6 4 x 3 x 2 x 1 = 24 5 x 4 x 3 x 2 x 1 = 120

6 x 5 x 4 x 3 x 2 x 1 = 720 and so on.....

Considering how cumbersome were the ancient letters-used-as-figures, we can only admire the manner in which the master-writer received his inspiration and expressed it. It is interesting to observe that these factorials express the total number of ways in which a given number of articles, such as cards, can be laid out. For example: take the letters A, B, & C. These can be written ABC, BCA, CAB, and then in reverse: CBA, ACB, BAC. Thus factorial three (3) equals six possible different orders. (Pause).

Lastly, the link with Ancient Egypt is again noticed in the ratio of the numbers 22 (which is 3 + 7 + 12) — and 7. This is the height (original) of the Great Pyramid (7) in relation to its base perimeter (22) and is now well known as the Pi (π) of mathematics or the appropriate relationship between the diameter of a circle and its circumference. This is also observable in our Pentacle.

For meditation this week: What was the Sepher Ietzirah indicating when it spoke of the stones and the houses? (REPEAT.)- - -(HAVE THE BRETHREN NOTED THIS ???)

con't

con'd

Let us continue: It is hoped that Brethren who are trying to penetrate the Wisdom of IS-RA-EL will keep careful though brief notes of the main points of these studies. Those who placed the Ancient Egyptian Paut Neteru on the Qabalistic Tree of Life may care to note that this was taken from a papyrus known as the NESI AMSU which was found at Thebes in 1860. The Godhead RA, which amounts to the Solar Centre of our World Of Orbs, is quoted as saying:

> "I was alone, for nothing had been brought forth; I had not then emitted from myself Shu or Tefnut. I evolved myself; I emitted from myself the gods Shu and Tefnut and, from being One, I became Three; they sprang from me and came into existence in this Earth: Shu and Tefnut brought forth Seb and Nut; and Nut brought forth Osiris, Horus-Khent-an-maa, Nephtys, Set and Isis at one birth."

It is also worth noting in connection with our meditations on the last conventicle, that Moses of Cordova had something to say on the metaphysical connection between the first three Sephiroth:

> "The first three Sephiroth, Crown, Wisdom, Intellect, ought to be considered as the sole and same thing. The first represents GNOSIS (that is, final unconditioned awareness), — the second that which knows, and the third, that by which it is known. The knowledge of the Creator is not that of the creatures; On the contrary, the Creator is Itself wholly at the same time, Knowledge, That which Knows, and That Which is Known." (Compare this with Page One: para. two - - Isaiah's quotation)

From all this and from our meditation we may begin to perceive that ancient name of God I AM THAT I AM*. H. P. Blavatsky coined the term BE-NESS for this state of pure Being which is ever at the Divine Center of ALL, unconditioned, not relative to any human thought. In the East it is similar to the 1,000-petalled Lotus. Such is KETHER in the Realm of Atzilith. (see NOTE 'a' page 4)

Let us now have a closer look at these three Sephirah. In the Emerald Tablet of Hermes we find these words: "All things are from One, by the mediation of One, and all things have their birth from this One Thing by adaptation." What is the One Thing? This One Thing is Living Light, or Conscious Radiant Energy. Hebrew Qabalists had this in mind when they said that every cycle of manifestation, great or small, is begun by the concentration of this Living Light - - which they called Aur - - upon itself, at a Point within itself. This interior point, or Point Within the Circle is represented on the Tree of Life by the number 1.

This Point is Innermost and is sometimes called "the beginning of the whirlings" because all manifestation is the result of whirling, spiral, or vortical motion. The Central Point is named Kether (CROWN) because it is the control point for everything external and subordinate to it. (The Brethren could chant this).

In Kether is seated Yekhidah, the Indivisible, or the Unique. This is the ONE SELF, the only SELF, which is the core of reality within all manifested "selves". It is the Rootless Root. Because it cannot be divided, Yekhidah is present as a whole at the heart of every human life. The whole Limitless Light, Ain Soph Aur, is concentrated at this Central Point. (see NOTE 'a'.)

In its self-manifestation, this ONE, remaining eternally Itself, produces within itself the manifestations called Sephiroth, which is a Hebrew word meaning "numberings" or "emanations". The ONE thus produced the numbers 2 and 3. The one, living, conscious Light knows itself perfectly. Its perfect self-knowledge is represented by 2, because that knowledge is the perfect duplication of the real Being of the One, in that One's complete self-awareness. To this Sephira the Qabalists gave the name

*"EHEIEH"

con't

con'd

Chokmah, Wisdom and they added the title Ab, Father, because the One knows itself to be the perfection of all that is masculine and initiative. Again, Chokmah is called the Sphere of the Zodiac because the One knows itself as light, of which all luminaries (stars or suns) are condensations into physical form. In the physical universe, this light radiates from stars or suns and is reflected by planets and their satellites. The same radiant energy, identical with itself everywhere in space, is alive. Therefore Chokmah, 2, is said to be the seat of Chaiah, the universal life-force, which is latent in the mineral kingdom, and progressively more and more active in the scale of evolution which extends up through the vegetable, animal and human kingdoms --- and beyond.

Knowing itself perfectly, the One Reality knows also the logical outcome of what it knows itself to be. Looking into itself, it sees what is in itself. Looking, as it were, away from this aspect of itself, it perceives the necessary consequences of what it finds in itself. This intuitive perception of the consequences of what it knows itself to be is designated by the number 3, and is named Binah, Understanding.

Qabalists call Binah Ama, the dark, sterile Mother, and Aima, the bright, pregnant Mother. These names are given to Binah because this aspect of Reality is the matrix of all possible specialized forms of expression. Ama, the dark, sterile mother, represents this aspect of Being prior to the beginning of a cycle of the Life-power's self-manifestation. Aima, the bright, pregnant mother, is the fertile womb from which flow forth all forms made manifest during such a cycle of the Life-powers self-expression.

Again, Binah is called the Sphere of Saturn. In esoteric astrology, the contractile, limiting power is called Saturn. Every appearance of special, particularized manifestation necessitates limits of quantity, quality, mass, form, etc.. Note in this connection, that the birth of living creatures results from contraction of the womb which carries the body during gestation.

Also to Binah is attributed Neshamah, the Divine Breath. Qabalists say that no matter how gravely a human being sins, this Neshama is never involved. It is the highest aspect of Soul, the seat of the Divine Life's intuitive knowledge of all that it is, and of all that it must inevitably bring into manifestation because of what it knows itself to be. In man, Neshama is the source of intuitive knowledge and spiritual truth. It is also the supreme source of guidance in the progress of man toward mastery. (See Note 1B: page 5)

As we have seen, these three Sephiroth: Kether, Chokmah and Binah, constitute the Supernal, or Divine, Triad. Eternal, changeless, without beginning or end, this Divine Triad is the core of Reality behind and within every manifestation of the One Life. Whatever is real in human personality is actually a direct expression of the One, Living Light. There is no separate individuality. Neither is there any separate personality. All are related, one to another. All are aspects of the One.

Brothers & Sisters: every device your ingenuity can suggest should be employed to intensify your awareness that the Supernal Triad has always been, is now, and will always be the innermost reality of your being. Understanding this, and knowing it, will place you in a privileged position to turn the pages of the Book of Man.

In addition to the meditation already given, kindly turn to Genesis, Chapter 1 vrs 27 - - "So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them." Meditate on this my Brothers & Sisters, reflect on the Divine Man, ADAM QADMON as above the polarities at the Head, yet with two feet on the Earth; which helps us to understand the foregoing verse from Genesis. Then let us return to pondering the self-and-object relationship again. con'd.....

con'd

(M.L. - Go over the lecture and have the brethren map the names and various attributions of the three Sephiroth.)

Sephiroth 1 - 2 & 3 = the Martinist World of God. Deity.
Sephiroth 4 through 9 = the Martinist World of Nature.
Sephiroth 10 = the Martinist World of Man.
Have the brethren chart this also.

QUESTIONS:

(1) In the light of the T. O. L. where do the brethren consider the Father to be in the phrase: "Our Father who art in heaven." ?

and -

(2) The Father abiding in me, he doeth the works - what does this mean?

Is the Father who is in heaven the same Father who does the works?

Does Father and God refer to the same thing?

NOTE 'a'
from Mystical Qabalah
by Dion Fortune Page 111

It is a continual surprise and illumination to discover the extraordinary significance of the hints contained in the tables of correspondences, and the manner in which they lead the mind on from concept to concept when pondered upon. The First Sephirah is called the Crown, be it noted, not the head. Now the Crown is something superimposed upon the head, and this gives us a clear hint that Kether is of our cosmos, but not in it. We also find its microcosmic correspondence in the Thousand-petalled Lotus, the Sahamsara Chakra, which is in the aura immediately above the head. This, I think, teaches us clearly that the innermost spiritual essence of anything, whether man or world, is never in actual manifestation, but is always the underlying, behind-standing basis or root whence all springs, belonging in fact to a different dimension, a different order of being. It is this concept of the different types of existence which is fundamental to esoteric philosophy, and must always be borne in mind when considering the invisible kingdoms of the magician, or operative occultist.

(3) Where is Kether in the Universe? (SEE IMMEDIATELY ABOVE)

(4) Where is Kether in the individual? (JUST ABOVE OUR HEAD)

(5) Is there any scriptural reference to Kether (Crown) or to the Sephiroth in the body? (ISAIAH 61:10) "My soul shall rejoice in the Lord, for he hath clothed me with the ROBE OF SALVATION and with the GARMENT OF JOY hath covered me. He hath set a CROWN upon my head, like unto a bridegroom and as a bride hath he adorned me with JEWELS" Here the spiritual body in different stages of activation are con'd con c

The soul is comprised of three grades: the Nefesh, the gross element which bears all the instincts & bodily cravings; the Ruah, the grade which contains the moral virtues & the ability to distinguish between good & evil; & the Neshamah, the sublimest grade of the trinity which may be properly called the soul. (All three Hebrew terms mean, literally, 'soul'.)

Neshamah §The Neshamah grade is the highest of all grades & even when it is not consciously realized it rules the course of a man's life. In one place the Kabbalists say that a man may not know the Neshamah until he dies, & yet in another they say that the perfect devotee may come to know her. This apparent contradiction seems to mean that the perfect devotee is one who dies in a spiritual sense only, both for himself & the world. For those who do not know this spiritual death, only the natural & common death may bring the Neshamah before their eyes.

The Neshamah, the highest phase of existence, is in no way bound to the two lower grades. It is beyond sin & judgment & is often identified with the divine Shekhinah.

Note 'B' from Kabbalah by Charles Ponce
Pages 202-208

(5) con'd -
refered to as the "ROBE OF SALVATION" and "GARMENT OF JOY" and the spiritual organs or centers are called the CROWN and "JEWELS".

HAND OUT NOTES FOR STUDENTS "TEN"

If time permits, have one of the brethren read the hand-out.

1. Eternity, depicted by the Circle having no beginning or end, is also the Absolute or Primary God of Mysticism, Martinism, Gnosticism, and is sometimes called the Great Unmanifest.

2. Qabalists speak of three stages prior to Manifestation: Immediately prior to Kether (the first point of manifestation) is the Unlimited Light or Ain Soph Aur. This is preceded by All that is Unlimited: Ain Soph. Anterior still is utter non-existence - Ain.

3. Within the Circle of Eternity the First Point manifests, this is Kether (Crown). This is the first Sephirah, the secondary God or Demi-Urge, or Manifested God, which at once emanates nine more Sephiroth.

4. With manifestation there occur Four Realms between the Point and the Circle. These are:

   Atziluth or the Realm of Emanation.
   Briah " " " " Creation.
   Ietzirah " " " " Formation.
   Assiah " " " " Action.

5. The Ten Holy Sephiroth are thus emanated in Atziluth, then reflected without form in Briah, to shine like globes of light in Ietzirah and provide forces and forms of action and reaction in Assiah.

6. Kether is dominant in the Realm of Assiah. Chokmah and Binah are most effective in the Realm of Briah. These create the Supernal Triangle of the Tree of Life and are thus equivalent to the Martinist "World of God."

7. The next six Sephiroth correspond to the Six Days of Creation and the World of Nature in Martinism. They are most operative in the Realm of Ietzirah.

8. Finally, individual, microcosmic man is in Assiah, at the foot of the Tree, represented by the Sephirah Malkuth, or Kingdom, the Tenth Sephirah. From this, the Seventh Day of Rest, he commences the Path of Return.

9. Man must reintegrate the Ten as he rises up the Central Pillar through the Four Realms. Individual Karma must first be equilibrated. Then he shares in the Collective Reintegration of the Divine Man, Adam Qadmon, Who as the Secondary God of our Ven[illegible] Masters, ultimately passes beyond both Life and Death.

10. Kether in Atziluth is the focal point of origin in Ain Soph Aur. (Revise previous notes and articles for details). It is the beginning of Adam Qadmon, Archetypal Man, the Macrocosm.

11. Individual man, the microcosm, at the foot of the Tree of Life, Malkuth in Assiah, begins his Path of Return by observing the Book of Nature and learning to orient himself midway between the apparent opposites of everyday life. (Refer to your notes if the opposites are not well memorised. This also applies to the five pages of the Book of Nature.)

12. Moses of Cordova wrote: "The first three Sephiroth: Crown, Wisdom, Intellect, ought to be considered as the sole and same thing. The first represents GNOSIS; the second That which Knows; and the third, That by Which It is Known. The Knowledge of the Creator is not that of the creatures; on the contrary, the Creator is Itself wholly at the same time, Knowledge, That Which Knows, and That Which is Known." From this and our studies, we acquire the idea that there is an eternal state of Divine Man which we as individuals cannot comprehend. However, by treading the Path of Return to the First Estate, we may reach the Gnosis wherein the phenomenal world of our five senses is transcended and "We" can say, just as Moses of Isreal cognised the words, "I AM THAT (real) I AM."

13. This re-uniting with our Principle, as Saint-Martin called it, can occur in brief, minor ways in this Realm of Assiah. All the elements of our being must be brought into harmony before we can ascend the Central Pillar of Equilibrium through all Realms. We may here understand, albeit only mentally, the words of the Master

Jesus (Ieschouah): "I and my Father are One." This is the Christhood or Salvation.

14. The Pillar on the Right, objectively is called 'Mercy', the sense of which is "Grace" or unlimited power. The Pillar on the Left is called 'Severity' which in a cosmological sense suggests the beginning of opposition which is necessary for manifestation.

15. The three 'mother letters' are Aleph, Mem, Shin; symbolising Alchemical Air, Water, Fire, respectively. The fourth element, Earth or Adam, is acted upon, by and through these three. In early Mediterranean civilization there were only three seasons, those of dryness, wetness and heat; thus showing how the mystical symbolism was drawn from Nature. The correspondences in the personality are: Air with mental processes; Water with feelings; and Fire with the Spiritual Transmutation or Cosmic Christ. Hence, Yod - He - Vau - He becomes Yod-He-Shin-Vau-He or Ieschouah, the Way of Return or Middle Way, on the Central Pillar. The missing Sephirah, Daath, is Gnosis for Man while still (seemingly) incarnated. Ponder this.

16. The seven double letters (see your notes) stand for the mundane opposites which have their effect in the Realms of Briah and Ietzirah as well as in Assiah. They are also explicable by the seven traditional planets of esoteric astrology. Esoteric Astrology works with (a) a state of matter (b) a mode of motion, and (c) a co-ordinated consciousness arising therefrom. This is a seperate study but it has many points of contact with the Qabala. The time and place of incarnation read by the 'Cosmic Clock' indicate the individual destiny.

17. The twelve simple letters correspond to the twelve signs of the Zodiac which, like the Ten Holy Sephiroth, are exterior or interior according to the view taken of this fundamental duality.

18. The last two sections of the Sepher Ietzirah read: "There are 22 letters by which the I AM, Yah the Lord of Hosts, Almighty and Eternal, designed, formed and created by three Sepharim (Numbers, Letters and Sounds) His whole world and formed by them creatures and those that will be formed in time to come. When the Patriarch Abraham comprehended the great truism, revolved it in his mind, conceived it perfectly, made careful investigations and profound enquiries, pondered upon and succeeded in contemplations, the Lord of the Universe appeared to him and called him his friend."

19. Our attention is drawn to the phrase "succeeded in contemplations". This we must do too if we are to know the real I AM which is hidden behind our mental processes. This is the Superior Inconnu in Reality. The reference to the Lord of the Universe appearing is a word picture for the finite mind of the seeker. The Eternal Gnosis excludes "appearances".

20. Correspondences are also noted between the Qabala and the Tarot and have been a subject of Martinist Masters of the past. The 22 Paths linking the 10 Holy Sephiroth, summing up the 32 Paths of Wisdom, are depicted by the 22 Tarot trumps or Major Arcana. The numbers on the cards do not, however, fit the paths given by the corresponding Hebrew letters. The correct order of the cards is said to have been lost. Some of us may care to study this. The 'Fool' in the Tarot pack is said to be Adam since the Fall of Man. He is making his way back to the Crown, his trials being illustrated by the other cards.

21. The four suits of the Tarot are the four Realms of the Qabala. The King, Queen, Knight and Knave are the terms of Yod, He Vau, He, in their sense of positive, negative, neuter and transition as detailed in "Tarot of the Bohemians" by Papus.

22. In the reign of Ptolemy Philadelphius 285-247 B.C., Greek was the language of the Court and, according to the Epistle of Aristeas, one of the Kings courtiers, the Torah was translated into Greek and so became the Pentateuch. Students of the Qabala go back to the Hebrew for its special symbolism.

*** * ***

ORDRE MARTINISTE
SUPERIOR DEGREE

CONVENTICLE 22

Greetings O Unknown and Silent Ones ! HAVE NOTES FOR STUDENTS ELEVEN READY.

The oft-quoted phrase "As above, so below" could better be expressed in the present-day words: "As it appears outside, so it is within". The macrocosmic powers depicted by the Ten Sephiroth are also present in the same pattern within Man, the Microcosm. The division of the Tree of Life into three PILLARS is a form of mystic symbolism familiar to all of us. The Pillar headed by Chokmah is usually called the Pillar of Mercy, whilst that headed by Binah is called the Pillar of Severity. This may seem strange when we regard these two columns of Sephiroth as being manily positive and negative respectively. (Please look at your diagram).

The word "mercy" however, at the top of the positive column, is in its prime sense of "grace" or pure benevolence. The "globes" on this pillar are centres of force or motive power at different levels. The word "severity" at the top of the negative column implies restriction or background against which the active forces are turned into "form" or in some way limited in activity. An analogy would be the flight of an arrow, - harmless while in flight but effective upon impact. Sunlight is only effective (whether for good or ill) when it encounters matter. Quoting the Sepher Ietzirah, Chap 2, section 6: "He created a reality out of nothing, called the nonentity into existence and hewed, as it were, colossal pillars from intangible air."

PAUSE AND ELABORATE - - QUESTIONS/COMMENTS

These alignments of Sephiroth on the pillars should be born in mind when studying their individual natures. The middle pillar, sometimes given as white in colour, stands for consciousness which must be the equilibrating Path of the Initiate. Ascending this Pillar, he passes from Malkuth to the sphere of Yesod, which means "Foundation" and is the first step through the Formative Realm which he perceives as "astral" in his present stage of evolution.

This brings us to the question of correspondences with Esoteric Astrology with the Tarot. Before discussing these, let us see what our Sepher Ietzirah says in this association of ideas which are so closely interwoven with the Tradition which in turn represents our Collective subconsciousness. Chapter II, section 1, says: "There are 22 letters, stamina, Three of them, however, are the first elements, fundamentals or mothers; seven double, and twelve simple consonants." These are the original Hebrew letters which also stood for numbers. In Chapter III, section 3, we read: "The three mother letters (Aleph, Mem, Shin) are: air, water, fire." As this evidently has an Alchemical connotation, we may wonder where earth is signified; but reflection brings us back to Adam whose name meant "red earth" and was synonymous with the Egyptian "Atum".

The ancient Hebrew civilisation borrowed much from the earlier Egyptian and it is also important to know that there were only three seasons in that climate, namely: flood-season; hot-season; and cold season; - there being no rain in Egypt. So we can see how early metaphysical thought, profound as it was, made use of familiar phenomena when we read in section 4, "The three mother letters produce in the year, heat, coldness and moistness." (The order here is a bit misleading).

We are told in section 5 that in man, these same three mother letters refer to breast, body and head, in that order. Obviously the breast contains the air, the body the fluids, and the head fire. This last is more in agreement with modern science which reduces cerebral activity to neural currents. Thus Aleph, Mem and Shin are important working tools and it is observed that spiritual exercises actually employ all three according to the particular school: Breathing-exercises, Body-postures, and Mental concentration.

ARE THERE ANY QUESTIONS/COMMENTS? con'd

con'd

The seven double-letters represent, according to the Sepher Ietzirah, Chap IV, section 3: Wisdom-Folly, Wealth-Poverty, Fruitfulness-Childlessness, Life-Death, Freedom-Bondage, Peace-War, Beauty-Ugliness. Likewise the seven double-letters symbolise the dual aspects of the seven traditional planets: Moon, Mars, Sun, Venus, Mercury, Saturn, Jupiter. The letters are B, G, D, K, P, R, Th.

Esoteric Astrology considers three things; namely, a state of matter, a mode of motion, and thirdly a co-ordinated consciousness therefrom. It is also regarded as if the human soul is born into a time and place determined by accumulated karma or composite tendencies brought forward from previous incarnations. The time and place are read in accordance with the Cosmic Clock of Planetary and Zodiacle positions; thus enabling the mystic astrologer to evaluate character and tendencies in this present life. Similarly, the Sephiroth are regarded as functioning not only in the interior world of man but also in the exterior universe of planets and other heavenly bodies. So we give the planets relevant to the Sephiroth as follows: Malkuth-Earth; Yesod-Moon; Hod-Mercury; Netzach-Venus; Tiphereth-Sun; Geburah-Mars; Chesed-Jupiter; Binah-Saturn; Chokmah-Zodiac.

Now that we have mentioned the Zodiac, the student may rightly expect the twelve simple letters of the Hebrew alphabet to stand for these twelve signs. We are giving the letters in modern script for simplicity here, but the student may follow the Hebrew from any book on the Qabala. The correspondences are: H, V, Z, Ch, T, I, L, N, S, O, Tz, Q. The signs of the Zodiac are then in the usual order: Aries, Taurus, Gemini, Cancer, Leo, Virgo, Libra, Scorpio, Sagittarious, Capricorn, Aquarius and Pisces. Other correspondences will not be given here because a full appreciation of the possibilities of the Qabala is not required of every Martinist. Each member is nevertheless expected to have a broad outline since this has a practical value to him and moreover provides common ground with other esoteric Orders in due time.

ELABORATION — COMMENTS — QUESTIONS — DISCUSSION

(The Sephiroth have a macrocosmic and a microcosmic application. In the microcosm, i.e. man, the Sephiroth in one sense may be assigned to the psychic centers or "chakras" in the body. The correspondences will be dealt with at another time.)

Does any brother or sister have any thoughts to share on the stones and the houses from the Sepher Ietzirah, on which you were asked to meditate?

Let us continue Brothers & Sisters - -

Those of you who have had some experience of the Qabala before becoming fully-qualified Martinists may think that this series of lessons is rather too simple. Certainly, many of the correspondences have been left out so that beginners will not be fogged by too much information before they can assimilate it. Nor will they be put off by the idea that only a highly educated person can hope to understand it. The Qabala contains much that is facinating and of real meditative value, but each has to find what is best suited to his or her own personality. For this reason our presentation gives brief indications of the associated symbolism of Numerology, Esoteric Astrology, Comparative Religion and the Tarot.

con'd

con'd

The mystical student often hears of the 32 Paths of Wisdom. These are the 10 Holy Sephiroth, which are both cosmic foci and psychic powers, and the 22 Paths linking them on the Tree of Life. The Sephiroth are in a sense objective, since they are externalized powers in thought at least, whereas the 22 Paths between them are subjective and are a mode of applying oneself to these 10 Spheres. There is a method of "treading" these Paths called "Pathworking" which is a technique that all occult students concern themselves with and this will occupy our attention in due time. The 22 letters of the Hebrew alphabet are used as pointers and as numbers for these Paths, as also is the Tarot pack of cards which are replete with mystical and occult symbols.

Let us pause and note that there are in existence many different packs or decks of Tarot cards, each deck having its own history. The symbolism is not the same on all decks, however the pack is composed of 22 "trumps" called Major Arcana and 56 other cards called the Lesser Arcana. Why these are called the "lesser" is hard to fathom because they have to do with the most recondite mysteries of the Holy Qabala. These minor trumps are divided into four suits of 14 cards each. The suit of Wands corresponds to the element of fire and to the Realm of Atziluth, the Archetypal World. The suit of Cups is representative of the element water and to Briah, the Creative World. The suit of Swords corresponds to the element of air and to Ietzirah, the Formative World and the suit of Pentacles symbolises the element earth and represents Assiah, the Realm of Action.

Because some aspects of the Qabala and the Tarot are technical and complex we are, as you know, making certain important information available in the notes you are receiving. In this way the information can be studied and assimilated much easier and you can then share your understandings during our discussions.

Regarding the 22 Paths represented by the 22 Major Arcana cards, both of our Ven∴M∴ Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin and Papus made a study of this absorbing subject. Papus' book Tarot of the Bohemians (Gypsies) has been translated and is available in English. Those interested can follow this subject in this book and in the others mentioned in the notes.

A Diagram of the Tree of Life with the Paths and Tarot assignations will be given you in the notes shortly. I should mention that there is some uncertainty among scholars regarding some of the Tarot cards and particular Paths. The "Fool" in the Tarot is said to be Adam since the Fall of Man. He is making his way back to the Crown, his trials being illustrated by the other cards. Some of us may care to study this.

PAUSE FOR QUESTIONS — COMMENTS — ELABORATION

Our examination of the principle features of the Qabala, in the light of the Tree of Sephiroth, has shown us the "Decade out of Nothing" emanating in the highest Realm, the Realm of Atziluth, and shining with diminishing purity in the other three Realms. We have observed the alignment of the Spheres or Pillars which, as we learnt in our Heptad Works, continue as Astral Pillars as far as duality exists.

We have noticed the arrangement of the Sephiroth as three triangles, the first, with the point up, being the Supernal Triangle of special symbolic significance.

con'd

con'd

These Holy Sephiroth head the three "colossal pillars" which "preside to support and adorn the Temple we are erecting to the Glory of the Sovereign Architect of the Universe." These are referred to as Wisdom, Strength and Beauty in our rituals - - - and among Freemasons the description is: "Wisdom to contrive, Strength to support, Beauty to adorn, the Temple not made with hands." * -- Pause and explain

Some students of the Qabala place the first three Sephiroth in the Realm of Atziluth, and place Wisdom, Strength and Beauty, - Sephiroth 4, 5 & 6 in the Realm of Briah, or Creation. As mentioned earlier, Mercy, Sephirah 4, is a form of grace from higher Wisdom, hence we could regard the center triangle of the Tree of Life as the special plan of the Creative Temple. (Mercy, #4, drawing from Wisdom, #2, immediately above.)

Giving our attention now to the lowest triangle formed by Victory, Glory and Foundation - Sephiroth 7, 8 & 9 - these relate most easily to the Realm of Ietzirah, according to this system of classification. Please follow on your diagram. These spheres represent aspects of the personality, - Netzach or Victory, Sephirah 7, is connected with Nature forces; Hod or Glory, Sephirah 8 with Occult knowledge; and Yesod or Foundation, Sephirah 9 with Psychic phenomena. ALL THREE GO TOGETHER. (Pause and make sure the brethren chart this).

In cosmo-genesis, these two last triangles, the two with their points down, are the six active days of creation. In reintegration or the Path of Return, the Initiate learns to hold all his faculties in equilibrium. Also, Tiphareth is the Sun-Center of the Tree, and the place of the Incarnate Christ where Man completes his evolution in each Realm. Not only is each Sephirah a modified copy of Kether, but Tiphareth is Kether made Man - - and at the same time Malkuth, or man of Earth raised to Christ Consciousness. Here we have the symbol of the Son of Man. This is the letter Shin. (I-H-V-H - manifested by the addition of Shin)

(GO OVER THIS PARAGRAPH, ELABORATE; DO THE BRETHREN WISH TO MAKE ANY NOTES?)
(PLEASE USE THE PAGES PROVIDED AT THE END OF THIS LESSON FOR NOTES, JOT DOWN)
(YOUR INSIGHTS THERE FOR THE BENEFIT OF MASTERS THAT FOLLOW AFTER YOU.)

Bearing in mind that the 10th Sephira, is Malkuth, Kingdom, it will be of interest to recall the doxology of the "Lord's Prayer" which says: "for Thine is the Kingdom, the Power and the Glory." - - We shall leave this seemingly odd triad to each brother & sister for meditation.

We shall close this lesson by quoting the last two sections of the Sepher Ietzirah:

"There are 22 letters by which the I AM, Yah the Lord of Hosts, Almighty and Eternal, designed, formed and created by three Sepharim (i.e. Numbers, Letters and Sounds) His whole world, and formed by them creatures and those that will be formed in time to come.

"When the Patriarch Abraham comprehended the great truism, revolved it in his mind, conceived it perfectly, made careful investigations and profound enquiries, pondered upon and succeeded in contemplations, the Lord of the Universe appeared to him and called him his friend...."

DOES ANY BROTHER WISH ANY PART REPEATED?
ANY QUESTIONS/COMMENTS?

* We refer to these Ch VII Sephiroth in our Rituals as W-S-B-Lion of TOL W-S-B Lion #2 4 Sanctum EXPLAIN THIS.

HAND OUT NOTES FOR STUDENTS "ELEVEN" - if time permits have one of the brethren read the hand-out.

Inform the brethren that beginning at the next conventicle we will commence with the study of the History of our Order. This will be in addition to the regular lecture.

The 10 Spheres or Sephiroth on the Tree of Life are linked by 22 "Paths" sometimes called Keys or Doorways. The 10 Spheres may also be thought of as pools or reservoirs of influence, acting as termini for the beginning or ending of each Path. "Pathworking" is a term used for entering or travelling the Paths. Pathworking is a journey into your own mind.

Like all mandalas, the T. O. L. is a tool to be employed by man. When used properly it can give a deeper understanding of ourselves and self-knowledge is one of the greatest quests of mankind. The motive of pathworking should therefore be for the acquistion of knowledge, especially of self-knowledge.

This mention of motive is raised early because there is a potential danger in pathworking. This danger has to do with one of the problems that may arise. This problem is: facination. A whole new world opens up when you pass through a Doorway into the Astral. You have a natural tendency to explore it as fully as you can. It is big enough to bring you novelty on every trip.

Because your interest can easily get out of control you may tend to yield to the temptation to continually wander on the Astral Plane. You do not have to sit at home in your favourite arm chair to take a trip into the Astral. After the technique has been mastered you can enter it in the midst of the noisiest market-place. While your attention is fixed there, physical plane function is in abeyance. Therefore you must rigidly control your interest or you may tend to take an Astral trip while at work, or standing at the bus stop. Your friends will notice the result before you do....they will say you have become moody or dreamy.....and they will be right. At best there will be a decline in your efficiency. At worse you'll get knocked down by a truck.

It is because of this that in the past, occult schools have kept the knowledge of Pathworkings a closely guarded secret. Only those who had proved their ability to cope with the temptations of the inner levels of illusion were trained in its use. The traditional door that was kept tightly closed to the profane world is now being eased-open, just a little, and some of the techniques of the acquisition of self-knowledge and inner perception is being made available to those who need only the habit of self-discipline to be successful.

ASTRAL JOURNEYS SHOULD BE STRICTLY LIMITED AND CLEARLY DEFINED. IF YOU TRAIN YOURSELF IN GOOD HABITS FROM THE BEGINNING THE CHANCE OF TROUBLE IS GREATLY REDUCED.

The most common form of Astral operation is the day-dream. Your immediate thoughts are brought alive, as a playwright's words come alive on a stage. You see thoughts as pictures, rather than hearing them as words. And you have a more or less conscious control of what is going on. As you travel further into the Astral however, control becomes less secure. Unconscious forces shape the environment. Symbols take on a life of their own. At the same time the Self gradually loses touch with the physical world and awareness becomes increasingly confined to the Astral.

Once awareness of the physical is lost, the inner landscape takes on reality tone and becomes environment in every sense of the word. The most familiar example of this is dreaming. Dreams are a function of the Astral Plane. Their chaotic nature springs from the fact that discrimination and control are usually relaxed in sleep. The unconscious forces are allowed full play. Illogical associations produce illogical dramas. The techniques of Pathworking via the Major Arcana AND the penetration of the Unconscious through Qabalistic meditations will be given in due time.

You will notice in the above that the words 'Astral' and 'mind' have been used synonomously. Eliphas Levi, writing in his History of Magic, said: " The composite form of the sphinx also represents by hieroglyphical analogy the four properties of the universal agent, that is to say, the Astral Light - dissolving, coagulating, heating and cooling. These four properties, directed by the will of man, can modify all phases of Nature, producing life or death, health or disease, love or hatred, wealth even or poverty, in accordance with the given impulsion."

con'd

Many people have read this paragraph, and similar ones, almost all their lives and have been unable to find out what it meant. Occult grimoires are full of references to the Astral Plane or "Astral Light" as Eliphas Levi calls it, - but lucid definations are hard to find.

The mystic is concerned with absorbing himself in God and for this reason occult work is generally seen by him as a diversion from spiritual development. For the magician, however, the Astral Plane holds many rewards. On it he will find the visions of Time Past and Time to Come. On it he will find the gods and the demons, the sylphs and the salamanders, the archangels and the elementals. On it he will find the secret of power, the key -- as Levi intimates — to the production of miraculous effects on the physical plane. All this and more..... .....provided he can reach the Astral Plane itself.

Where or what is the Astral Plane? There are different descriptions for it. Some think it to be a place. Others do not consider it to be a "place" in the strict usage of this word, - one reason why Levi used the term Astral Light. Many modern occultists consider the definition of "Astral Plane" to be an old term for: the realm of visual imagination. It can also be said to be a level of the mind.

Whether you wish to consider it to be the realm of imagination, or a level of the mind, one thing is certain: it is REAL. Your psyche exists as a fact of life, it can't be measured by physical instruments any more than the physical world can be measured by psychological techniques ... but it is there. You are aware of it and you are influenced by it. Similarly the inner level is REAL by any reasonable definition.

It is the extent of the influence of the psyche that makes it so important. Its forces can produce an ulcer, or, channeled into enthusiasm for work, produce money in the bank. But these things are too familiar to be impressive. The picture becomes more dramatic when you consider the rise of Hitler - - - an insignificant, poorly-educated little man who was dominated by inner forces. They drove him to take over most of Europe. Forces powerful enough to produce such effects deserve respect.

Energy is the key word of the psyche. It is on the Astral Plane that these energies take on form. The transformation may mean a decrease or an increase of power. This is something to be remembered.

READ THE QUOTATION ABOVE FROM ELIPHAS LEVI SEVERAL TIMES AND THINK ABOUT IT.

Question: WHAT and/or WHERE is the Astral Plane?

Write down your own answer:

Question: What do you understand from the quotation above (para. 1) from Eliphas Levi?

Write down your own answer:

ORDRE MARTINISTE
SUPERIOR DEGREE

CONVENTICLE 23

Greetings O Unknown & Silent Ones! HAVE READY FOR HAND OUT NOTES "TWELVE"

We shall not say much more about the Taort at this time as it is a full study in its own right. However, it may interest you to know that Papus, in his book that we have so often referred to, gives extensive explanations, drawing from earlier writers, of all the cards. So far we have not spoken of the King, Queen, Knight or Knave of each suit. These are another illustration of the Yod-He-Vo-He principle, which Papus uses fundamentally to mean Positive, Negative, Neuter and Transition terms. Just as we noticed in our outline of Numerology, the numerals 1, 2, 3, 4, add and reduce to one, so if we take the number 4 to start or initiate a new cycle, then 4, 5, 6, 7, will reduce to 4. Yet again, taking the transitional term 7 and continuing with 8, 9, 10, we also return to 7. Hence the King of each suit is the Initiating power, the Queen is the receiving channel, whilst the Knight is the Equilibrator or Initiate. When he comes to the end of his cycle, the fourth term, the Knave, represents the passing into another field of activity; .... so the Knave is not popular!!! The four suits, as mentioned already, stand for the four Realms of the Qabala, which brings us to the end of this section of our study.

Well do we know the phrase, "...manifested by the addition of SHIN..." When the Initiate has completed his work, when he has obeyed, when he has kept Silent —— or in other words achieved Cosmic Communion which cannot be revealed to another, then the FIFTH ESSENCE or Quintessence has manifested. This is the Christ Power. This gives the former Initiate the title of Christ or Union with Christ Consciousness. This is the manner of YOD HE SHIN VO HE, which is the Hebrew spelling of IESCHOUAH, or in Greek —— IESOUS. We begin to see why the disciples of the Master Jesus addressed him by this profound title. It is at this stage of human evolution that the human personality becomes Divine and incarnates no more in this world. This is the Divine Harmony of the mystic number 8. It is of symbolic note that the first number 4 seems to spell transition from the Real of Assiah to Ietzirah —— or from Pentacles to the Sword which keeps us out of Eden; whilst the second "Death" which the Saviour of the Christian Initiates conquered, the second four making up eight, takes us to the Realm of Briah, the suit of Cups or Chalices, —— the Superior Astral Realm.

In conclusion, as some members may wonder at the peculiar accent on the Hebrew Language, let us examine for a few moments the development of the language for interpreting the visions and mystic attainments of the ancient Occult Masters. We are only concerned with the spiritual IS-RA-EL which is older than the Jewish people, but we must freely recognise that these people have had the privilege of preserving the Tradition, although few among them realise its proper value; —— indeed few folk anywhere know it.

Those who can obtain a copy of the book "The Great Initiates" by Edouard Shure, who was understoof to be a martinist, will find a very fine account of Moses who had the advantage of the Egyptian learning when he achieved the Christ Consciousness and was able to define his experience as set out in the first five books of the Bible. However, the pre-Canaanite language of his day, which became in time classical Hebrew, ceased to be the vernacular idiom during the Babylonian captivity, when Aramaic developed. The Semitic peoples, said to be descendents of Shem, son of Noah, included the Babylonian, Ethiopic, and Arabian branches.

By the 5th Centuary B.C., Aramic was the common language and the scriptures were read out first in Hebrew as the sacred or original tongue, —— then uttered in Aramaic. (See Nehemiah 8:8, where this interpretation is mentioned.)

con'd

con'd

At this period a Jewish military colony was in Egypt (by arrangement between the Pharaoh and the King of Judah, — the Kingdom of Israel having been overthrown) where Aramaic was their spoken and written language. In the reign of Ptolemy Philadelphus 285-247 B.C., Greek was the language of the Court and according to the Epistle of Aristeas, one of the king's courtiers, the Torah was translated into Greek and so became the Pentateuch. Thus we see how students of the Secred Mysteries needed to go back to the Hebrew for its SYMBOLISM.

- - - - - - -

With the explanations and teachings we have been privileged to receive, the time has come, Brothers & Sisters, for us to pursue more earnestly, the practical aspect of our work as Martinists. Beginning at our next Conventicle therefore, we will carry on with a practice begun in our earlier degrees in which particular symbols associated with the Tree of Life and the Qabala will be used.

One fact, supremely important to the Martinist, especially to the Unknown Superior, must be focused on and emphasized. It is that, on the basis of the correspondences made evident between the visible and the invisible worlds, the Pillars of Opposition which the Sepher Ietzirah names as the antitheses of life must have their prototype in the Empyrean World. In other words, we must expect to find in the Empyrean, those pillars of opposition similar to those which challenge us in the realm of the visible.

Since we know the Empyrean to be outside the limits of the visible and tangible, we have defined it as invisible and intangible. Likewise, since it is outside the range of conscious faculties, it must be defined as the unconscious.

Dreams are the means of entering the unconscious world — dreams and meditation. In this manner then, one may meet the Astral Pillars of Opposition and harmonise them. Dreams, therefore, are important. But, as said before, we are interested only in those dreams which reach that depth or height of the unconscious where the astral prototype of our earthly Pillars of Opposition present themselves.

Until our next meeting I am therefore asking all Brethren to prepare for the work to come by carrying out during the interim, this exercise which was given you in the Mystic Degree: Sit quietly and passively with the eyes closed. Turn the gaze inward and focus your attention on the nape of the neck. After a few moments ask mentally that you may reach the level in the unconscious which is your particular goal. Close your meditation with a prayer of gratitude that Omneity has you always in its care. This exercise can be done at any time during the day as a meditation. It is also recommended for use just before you get ready to retire for sleep.

In the weeks to come, we shall cover in our study of the "Book of Man" the Astral Pillars, as we did their earthly counterpart so that, step by step, we may attune ourselves and bridge the gap between ourselves and the regions in the unconscious that must be successfully passed on our journey upward.

MYSTIC MONITOR

Interrogate the Brethren on Questions 6 - 13

WHAT ABOUT THE "SELF-STUDY" ASPECT OF OUR WORK?
WHAT ABOUT EXERCISE "C" - SINGLE AWARENESS? - - - HAS ANY BROTHER DISCOVERED THE VALUE OF THIS EXERCISE YET?

HAND OUT NOTES "TWELVE" - HAVE A BROTHER READ THEM.

con'd

con'd

In "Notes for Students Eleven" handed out last week, the following two questions were asked:

What and/or where is the Astral Plane?

What do you understand from the quotation from Eliphas Levi (para 1, page 2) "Notes Eleven"?

The students were asked to write down (in the space provided at the bottom of the hand-out) the answers to these two questions..... ask the brethren to share their answers.

After this section is closed, proceed with the start of the History of our Order beginning on the next page. The members will find the History of our Order very interesting and it should give them a sense of pride as they realize what a noble tradition they belong to and the need to preserve and transmit it.

Suggest that they set aside a section of their note book for important details.

Inform the brethren that at the next conventicle they will be questioned on points covered in the hand-outs nos. 1 - 3 and they should therefore spend the interim in revision.

con't

" It is on the Astral that these energies take on form. "

Facination is not the only danger of Astral exercises. Anyone with experience of mental illness knows the strength of psychic forces. On some levels of the Astral these forces are met head on. The effect on an unprepared personality can be staggering. Dream deaths have actually been recorded in the Philippines.

With dangers like this, you might now ask why anyone should venture deep into the Astral at all. You will find part of the answer in Hunt's famous answer to "Why climb mountains?" The answer: Because they are there to be climbed. You will find another part in Jung's writings about the creative imagination. This is a technique strikingly similar to some forms of Astral Working and one which leads to very considerable psychological benefits. And you will find a further part of the answer in the quotation from Eliphas Levi. Re-read that quote again (NOTES FOR STUDENTS "ELEVEN", PAGE TWO, PARA. ONE).

"Pathworking" is a fairly new term for what used to be called "scrying in the spirit", an old term and one not all that accurate. It is a subjective experience that brings into play a unique talent belonging only to mankind: The ability to project the mind-self into a series of situations, landscapes and events that can either be run on a mental screen and watched like a film, or, once the mind has been trained, experienced as a participant with full sensory perception.

The first method is used unconsciously by eight-tenths of the population when they daydream or fantasize. Everyone uses it every day to prepare themself for both pleasant and unpleasant encounters. If you have a dental appointment you will probably endure the experience many times before you get to the door of the surgery. We mentally reherse an important interview ahead of time in order to feel able to cope with any crisis that might arise. We use it to relive events that were exciting or pleasurable. A youngster's first kiss or first date will be run over many times on their mental screen. A wedding or graduation becomes a mental video tape that may be repeated as we wish. In fact: a small but efficient time machine is built into every human being.

Of the remaining two-tenths, one will use this ability to daydream with purpose. They may have discovered by accident or through some form of teaching, that the mind can be programmed for success (or failure) by the simple means of a constantly repeated daydream, fuelled by their emotional need. This is the basis of every 'You too can be a Success' book. But few have the patience to persist, expecting results within hours. Fewer still can overcome the vice of inertia and call up the emotion without which the whole thing is a non-starter.

The remaining one-tenth will be those trained in occult methods and able to use this talent to its fullest extent.

"It is on the Astral that these energies take on form." If you run into something nasty on the Astral, it is because it already exists in your mind. The Astral plane does nothing more than give it form. If during an Astral trip you come across an unpleasant apparition, remember that its FORM is pure imagination, but the FORCE behind is real enough on the mental level.

It is this fact that underlies all magical instruction about purity of motive, emotional control and self-awareness. The Mystic who has achieved perfect self-control can venture freely on the Astral. The Saint, who has spent years purifying his soul will meet no dangers there. Fortunately very few of us carry the seeds of serious psychosis. But if they are there, in your mind, they will flower during Astral experiments.

Consequently, it is best to give yourself a really searching self-examination before experiments are attempted. Those who have been conscienciously using the symbols and exercises given ever since the opening of the Works and who are striving to eliminate from themselves all forms of negativity will be well prepared for Pathworking. Anyone who has any doubts should undergo full psycho-analysis, preferably with a Jungian psychiatrist. The drawback here is usually time and money, but at least you can be sure of the results.

If this course is out of the question the alternative is to make up a Magic Mirror: Take a notebook and divide each page into two columns. Head one of these with the words - Fortunate Mirror - and the other with - Unfortunate Mirror -. EACH DAY make at least one entry under each heading. Under Unfortunate should go all those negative characteristics you notice in yourself. Arrogance, for instance. Or cowardice. Or envy. Under Fortunate should go all the positive characteristics: loyalty, courage, benevolence, etc.. Observe yourself closely, ruthlessly. Examine your fears and aversions, your emotions and your moods. Discover the reasons for them. And learn to control them. This may be the most difficult job you will ever attempt. It certainly will be the most worthwhile.

THE TESTING TIME WILL COME WHEN YOU ARE CONVINCED BOTH COLUMNS ARE FULL. That is the time to keep working with your mirrors because THIS IS THE TIME YOUR UNCONSCIOUS STRENGTHS AND WEAKNESSES WILL BEGIN TO COME OUT. It is recommended that ALL students make up a Magic Mirror.

Another useful approach to purification is dream analysis. The problem here is how to catch your dream. Again, notebook and pencil are the important tools. Have them at your bedside and note your dreams immediately after awakening.

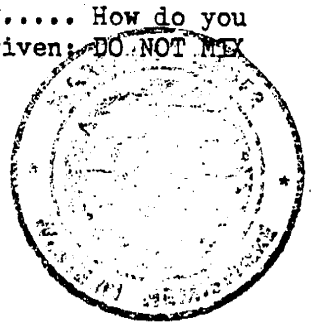
There is, unfortunately, no substitute for immediate action. The notes should be made the VERY FIRST THING you do after waking. They must be made BEFORE getting out of bed, even before rubbing the sleep from your eyes or stretching your body. This calls for considerable will-power, BUT THERE IS NO OTHER WAY!

Dreams evaporate within seconds. Scientists are convinced we have numerous dreams every night. We remember perhaps one or two a week. You have already been given the method of stimulating true dreaming. USE IT.

Having caught your dreams, don't waste time looking them up in pseudo-occult books about interpretation. Your dream is your own. Only YOU can see the meaning in it. Even an experienced psychologist can only point the way towards this. Examine the dream situations and ask yourself what they mean TO YOU. Ask yourself: "WHY DID I HAVE THIS DREAM?" Give your intuition full play. And face up to the results.

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

A timely reminder: The Sepher Ietzirah is the oldest of the Qabalistic writings. The Qabala, as based on the Zohar, was a later development. The student is warned against trying to make easy comparrisons between two systems which may not be compatible. The Ietziratic and Zoharic Qabalas offer two different views of the same truth.....it has already been pointed out: the scientific spliting of white light with a prism reveals seven colours, but the practical spliting is into three colours as used in colour television and printing..... How do you reconcile the seven with the three? Again the warning is given: DO NOT MIX IETZIRATIC IDEAS WITH ZOHARIC!



ORDRE MARTINISTE

SUPERIOR DEGREE

CONVENTICLE 24

HAVE READY: NOTES "THIRTEEN"

Greetings O Unknown and Silent Ones !

It has perhaps been sifficiently emphasized that to the ancients, the solar universe consisted of three worlds. In the Associate Degree we considered the Elemental World, in the Mystic Degree we considered the seven pairs of opposites which are associated with the seven planets of the World of Orbs, now, as Unknown Superiors we are to work at learning about the Empyrean World. As we have seen, these three worlds were suggested to the Hebrew mystics by their alphabet with its three mother letters, its seven double letters and its twelve simple ones. We have also learnt that the Hebrews were able to express all knowledge and philosophy mystically by reference to their alphabet. We shall see that a very definite correspondence exists between the system of the Hebrew Qabala and the Choirs of the Empyrean World as set forth by Dionysius.

Let us remember that the Sepher Ietzirah has stated Omneity created all by number and letter, constituting 32 mysterious paths of wisdom - - the 22 letters of the alphabet and the 10 numbers spoken of as "a decade out of Nothing." It is this "decade out of Nothing" which forms the pattern of creation as it is set forth in Genesis —— and it is also this decade which makes up the 10 leaves of the "Book of Man" of Martinism.

At this time I would like all Brethren to place the chart of the Tree of Life before them and to mark a circle exactly between the Spheres No. 1 and No. 6. (AFTER THIS HAS BEEN DONE, CONTINUE): (DRAW IN CIRCLE USING DOTTED LINES).

The name given to each Sephira was capable of many interpretations (as we have seen), but it was intended to describe some particular aspect or attribute of Omneity. These represented certain qualities on the path of man's return that were necessary for him to make his own again — in order to be worthy of re-entrance into Omneity's realm. This sphere that you have just placed on your chart occupies the position of the invisible Sephira Daath which means KNOWLEDGE. This Sephira is on the center or Equilibrating Pillar which the Initiate must complete for himself. The point you have indicated by the circle you have drawn suggests the area of our individual consciousness to be awakened by our meditation on the nape of the neck.

This simple yet impressive figure known as the Tree of Life was sufficient to carry the teaching of our ancient instructors regarding man and his effort to return to the realm of Omneity, — and we shall find it sufficient for us. Man seemingly is in exile at the farthest removed point from Omneity; yet, by acquainting himself, step by step, with each of these ten attributes of Omneity, and letting that acquaintance expand to full knowledge and acceptance, he can shorten his period of exile and at the same time occupy himself creditably as an Agent of Omneity.

It would seem, perhaps, that we should concern ourselves first with the place where we are, which we may call the farthest outpost since our building must start here; but since we must know our goal, we give our first attention to the highest, which is the first leaf of the "Book of Man". It will be well for each of us to make several diagrams of the Tree of Life and then fill in the information regarding each Sephirah as it is unfolded through study, meditation and experience.

con'd

con'd

In his book "Of Errors and Truth" our venerated master Saint-Martin writes: "In its first page, the Book of Man discusses the principles from which emanated all the other centers of creation."

We understand from this that the original point or primitive cause, the base of all that is created, the vibratory essence which has always existed, without beginning or end, God, the Absolute, the Supreme Creator, the Eternal, from His creative power proceeded all the wonders of creation; His will, His great desire took form and expansion from Himself in diversity, until the universe was created, as He so desired.

This first page the Qabalists called Kether, or Crown. It is Unity. It is that which is above all since it is the Source from which everything comes. It is so far above man's consciousness that its brilliance seems blinding. It is a whirling circle of light. It is equilibrium, androgenous (Male & Female), pure existence. It is the head of Adam Qadmon. It contains all that has been, is, and is to be. It is chaos, yet it manifests in order. It is the place of unity wherein fire, water, air and earth find their origin and are one. Description has well-nigh exhausted itself in the attempt to make it understandable. If we tried to represent it as a portrait of a man, we could not do so except perhaps by likening it to a bearded profile in which as much was turned away from us and hidden as was made visible. The Qabalists named it Kether, but they also called it the Concealed of the Concealed, the Most High, the Vast Countenance, the Head which is not, Existence of Existences, and the Point within the Circle. The Bible refers to it as the Ancient of Days and the Amen. The Zohar spoke of it as Most Mysterious and Recondite King and gave it the name Eheyeh (Eh-hay-yeh-eh).

All of the names are only the attempts of man to express to himself the nature of something which is and yet is not so far as his feeble abilities are capable of comprehending. - - - - But as the English poet, Robert Browning, so beautifully and truly said: "Aman's reach should exceed his grasp or what's a Heaven for?"

The position of all these terms is indicated by the capstone of the pyramid which man is attempting to build; and so it is right and necessary that he contemplate it in his meditation. For the coming week, it is recommended that the meditation period continue to be devoted to the practice outlined last week. A crown or a point within a circle may be used as a symbol. The one chosen should be carefully drawn on a small card about 4" x 4". With eyes focused on the symbol, address the following invocation to Ommeity, using the name Eheyeh: "O Thou Most Mysterious and Recondite King of all above and below, whose name we call in love Eheyeh, protect us with a ring of light that in Thy light we may know Light. Amen".

After a few moments concentration on the chosen symbol, close the eyes and project the mental image to the nape of the neck. This will seem equivalant to seeing the symbol back of you. After a further time in silent contemplation, close your meditation are retire. Any experience that may come during sleep should be noted in a note-book kept for the purpose under the heading, "First Leaf, 'Book of Man'". Such experiences should not be made the subject of discussion, nor should you ply the Master or others with questions regarding them. All experiences will be for you alone and will be in such a form as to have meaning for you alone.
As the practice is continued from week to week with the various Sephiroth or leaves, as we shall call them, what comes during sleep will be found to substantiate, complete and extend the Initiate's understanding in a way not possible otherwise. Unknown Superiors will once more have occasion to prove the worth of practical mysticism as it is set forth in Martinism.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

con'd

con'd

DISPLAY CHART SHOWING THE ILLUSTRATION OF A CROWN AND THE POINT WITHIN THE CIRCLE.

HAVE ALL THE BRETHREN COPIED DOWN THE INVOCATION?

HAVE ALL THE BRETHREN SKETCHED THE SYMBOLS?

DOES EVERYBODY UNDERSTAND HOW TO PROCEED WITH THE MEDITATION?

A NOTE-BOOK MUST BE OBTAINED AND THE PAGE HEADED "FIRST LEAF, BOOK OF MAN" UNDER WHICH ALL EXPERIENCES ARE TO BE RECORDED.

KETHER IS IN THE ATZILUTHIC WORLD - THE WORLD OF THE ARCHETYPES & ARCHETYPAL IDEAS.

"No amount of reading will give us practical experience. No-one can do our work for us. God helps those who help themselves. Masters can only point the way."

DISTRIBUTE "NOTES FOR STUDENTS - THIRTEEN -"

Questions on "Notes 1 to 3"..... add any further questions you may wish to ask:

Notes One

1 What is Martinism? (para 1.)
2 Explain what you understand by 'Initiation'. (para 2).
3 To what particular quality did Aristotle attribute the beginning of philosophy? (para 6).
4 What are the three phases of Man's realization of Self? (para 9).

Notes Two

5 Explain Martinez Pasquales Doctrine of the Fall of Man.
6 Who is Adam? (The whole of mankind.)
7 How will Adam be reintegrated to His pristine condition? (When each individual cell becomes reintegrated to the Archetype - thus leading to the Universal Reintegration).

Notes Three

8 What do you understand by the word "God"?
9 Give the name of the Highest God. (The Ain Soph).
10 On the Tree of Life, what is the name of the God usually found in the Bible? - - - - Give the name and the position on the Tree. (The Hebrews had many Names for God, and each Name referred to a particular aspect of God. Regretably, in most instances, all of the Names are translated simply as "God" in the English Bibles and unless one has recourse to the Hebrew text, one cannot know. However the "God" of the Bible, which is the Creator God, is one of the Supernals - often Elohim, No. 3. Also Jehova, No. 2. Sometimes Eheyeh, No. 1. It was Eheyeh, No. 1 that Moses heard in the burning bush, who said: I am That I am. In addition, the other Names at other Sephiroth are in the original Hebrew text as well - not only the ones in the Supernals. This question is asked mainly to stimulate discussion - and not to supply a definite answer.)

Ask the brethren to study Mystic Monitor questions 6 - 10 for next conventicle.

THE SEPHIROTHIC ATTRIBUTIONS

1. The attributions of symbolism assigned to the various Sephiroth are best considered under certain classified headings.

2. At first sight some of the headings and the attributions may appear arbitrary or nonsensical, but this is purely a conscious mind reaction. The Tree of Life speaks to the unconscious mind which has its own lines of reasoning that the conscious mind cannot readily understand. It will be found that after working at the Tree for a time the attributions will fall into place quite naturally without any efforts of conscious memory. And after all, if the Tree is what it is claimed to be, a diagram of the inner structure of man, then this is only what one has a right to expect.

3. It must always be remembered that it is a Tree of Life and not a Framework of Mentality. Mere mental juggling with symbolism will lead nowhere, it has to be made a part of one by meditation, contemplation, prayer, or fasting, sack-cloth and ashes if necessary. The implications of the symbolism, as well as being considered by the mind, must be felt in the heart, groped for by the aspirations, embedded in the viscera almost. The Tree of Life is not merely a lifetime's study, it is a way of life.

4. In view of this it will be plain that any so-called 'objective' study of the Tree of Life would be, if not impossible, certainly of little consequence. The remarks on the attributions throughout this book then must be taken, not as an attempt at logical proofs to the rational mind, but as the often unclassified results of practical experience, including great chunks of symbolism which have not been fully explored, and also tentative intuitions of further possibilities. The implications of the Tree of Life are so vast that no definitive treatise is possible.

5. However, a brave attempt will be made at a rational approach so that the student can find his bearings. And if anything is found which appears too fantastic, or just incomprehensible, it is best to leave it alone and come back to it at some future time, when it may have become clearer. Of the attributions, only the Hebrew Divine Names are part of the original Tree and thus with claims to be divinely inspired. The remainder of the attributions have been built up by subsequent research through the intervening centuries, and as incorporated here, include some of the most recent concepts of advanced esotericism. The latter are included as being a possible help to occult students of some experience; they should not be allowed to become a barrier to anyone who comes to esotericism for the first time via this book.

6. On contemplating the problems involved in getting across some of the concepts of the Tree of Life one is strongly tempted merely to list the basic symbolism, give a few simple instructions on meditation, and then tell the reader to get on with it. This might perhaps be too bald an approach, but it is hoped that the reader will set down and get on with it after having read this book—otherwise it will have been written in vain. What matters is what one receives from the Tree oneself and one only gets that by working on it.

7. In view of this, nothing which appears within these pages should be taken as authoritative. The only real authority rests within oneself, and it has to be searched for. "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you. For everyone that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened." And it is perhaps not always realised that the giving of what is asked, and the revealing of what is sought, and the opening of the Way it is desired to tread, is done by the same being that does the asking, the seeking, and the knocking—to wit, oneself.

8. The Title of the Sephirah: This gives, in so far as is possible, a root idea of what the Sephirah stands for in one word, e.g. Wisdom, Understanding, Beauty etc. It is given first in anglicised Hebrew and then in English, and a table of the letters which go to make up the Hebrew titles and Divine Names is given at the back of this volume.

9. It is well to become familiarised with the Hebrew letters because they play an important part in practical working upon the Paths between the Sephiroth, which will be dealt with in Volume II. Much was made of the numerical value assigned to each letter by early Qabalists and by an elaborate system of codes and anagrams, hidden significances and secret teaching was said to be revealed.

10. As an example, Genesis xviii 2, "And lo, three men" in the original Hebrew has a numerical value of 701, which is equal to the numerical value of the Hebrew sentence, "These are Michael, Gabriel and Raphael"—three of the Sephirothic Archangels. Further, the first word of the Old Testament, used as an acrostic by the medieval Jewish Qabalist, Solomon Meir Ben Moses, was taken to hold the following secret meanings:

a) "The Son, the Spirit, the Father, Their Trinity, Perfect Unity."

b) "The Son, the Spirit, the Father, ye shall equally worship Their Trinity."

c) "Ye shall worship My first-born, My first, Whose Name is Jesus.

d) "When the Master shall come Whose Name is Jesus ye shall worship."

e) "I will choose a virgin worthy to bring forth Jesus, and ye shall call her blessed."

f) "I will hide myself in cake (baked with) coals, for ye shall eat Jesus, My Body."

CON'T

Con'd

11. By means of these he apparently converted another Jew, previously bitterly opposed to Christianity. However, the number of permutations and combinations used in this branch of Qabalism make it possible to prove almost anything and there is probably more superstition, special pleading and logic chopping in it than anything of value. But like most superstitions, it has a basis of truth to it. It seems that certain words, usually Proper Nouns, were specially constructed originally with this kind of thing in mind. As an example, the name for the metaphysical concept, 'the great sterile Mother' is AMA, (Aleph, Mem, Aleph.) The letter Yod, as a symbol, represents the fertilising aspect of nature and so the name for 'the great fertile Mother' is the same, but with a Yod added to show that it has been impregnated with fertility—namely, AIMA, (Aleph, Yod, Mem, Aleph.) This is quite apart from any numerical significance or coding.

12. But to pursue a comprehensive line of research in these matters would require a knowledge of the Hebrew language and access to the Qabalistic literature, the Old Testament in the original, the Zohar, the Sepher Yetzirah, the Sepher Sephiroth, the Asch Metzareph and all their dependencies. This is beyond the scope of most students including the present writer. It is also beyond the scope of this book which is concerned primarily with the Qabalistic diagram, the Tree of Life, which, from experience, is quite enough to keep anyone occupied for a very long time.

13. However, in the case of obvious significances, tentative interpretations will be attempted. It is a field which has been little tilled and there appear to be some strange growths in it. Anyone who has the necessary qualifications is invited to reap what he can find but he will have to go it alone. There is little modern literature on the subject and most references seem to be derived from Magregor Mathers' 'The Kabbalah Unveiled', written in 1887, or Christian Ginsburg's 'The Kabbalah' of 1865.

14. It is interesting to note however, the vast wave of popular superstition that has arisen from this Judaic tradition. There are any amount of books purporting to tell future and character from the letters of one's name, or adding the digits of one's date of birth and so on. These are of little, if any, worth and are merely suffocating and foul-smelling smoke from, and concealing, a very dim-glowing fire. Even the know-it-all Crowley abandoned the comparison of modern alphabets with early ones as hopeless.

15. Subsidiary Titles: These are further titles culled from Qabalistic literature which expand the concept of a Sephirah, often from a different point of view.

16. The Magical Image: Magic is the term used for building mental images and is perhaps an unfortunate term as it has a glare of glamour about it. The Magical Image then, is the mental picture which can be built up to represent a Sephirah. The unconscious mind works primarily in pictures and so it is a useful device. Like all symbolism that has been used for long ages, a pool of force and ideas grows up around it so that one has only to tap that central symbol and all the related ideas will flow up from the unconscious. The technique for doing this is, of course, meditation.

17. The God Name: This, together with the Archangelic and Angelic Names is an original part of the Tree of Life and thus has claims to divine inspiration.

18. The God Name represents the most spiritual form of the Sephirah and thus is conceived as functioning in the Kether, or Atziluthic World, of that Sephirah. In commencing a meditation or practical operation on one of the Sephiroth the spiritual force of the God Name should be dwelt on first. One should always, as a matter of principle, start from the most spiritual aspect and work downwards. Concentrated work purely on the God Name is not recommended because it represents a direct force, untempered by any intermediary, and thus can well prove too hot to handle unless the operator is well experienced.

19. It must be borne in mind also that all the God Names are aspects of the One God. Thus one would think in terms of 'the One God, in His Name . . .'.

20. These Names all appear in the Old Testament but for the most part have been translated by the single word 'God', though with occasional attempts at more literal translation such as Lord, The Ancient of Days, Lord of Hosts etc. It is interesting to note that in the original Hebrew, God can be both masculine and feminine, singular and plural. For instance, in Genesis iv 26 the literal translation is "And Elohim said: Let Us make man . . . ." The word Elohim is a feminine singular stem with a masculine plural ending. Thus the principle of polarity is taken well into account, a point which is lost in the translation.

21. The approximate English equivalent is given in the table of God Names but in practical work the Hebrew version should be used. One can visualise the Name in its Hebrew form, not forgetting that Hebrew reads from right to left, and if it is said aloud or mentally, experience has shown that pronunciation is not important, the Hebrew Names anyway consist mainly of consonants.

22. The Archangel: This may cause some initial difficulty to those brought up on Protestant theology or on no theology at all.

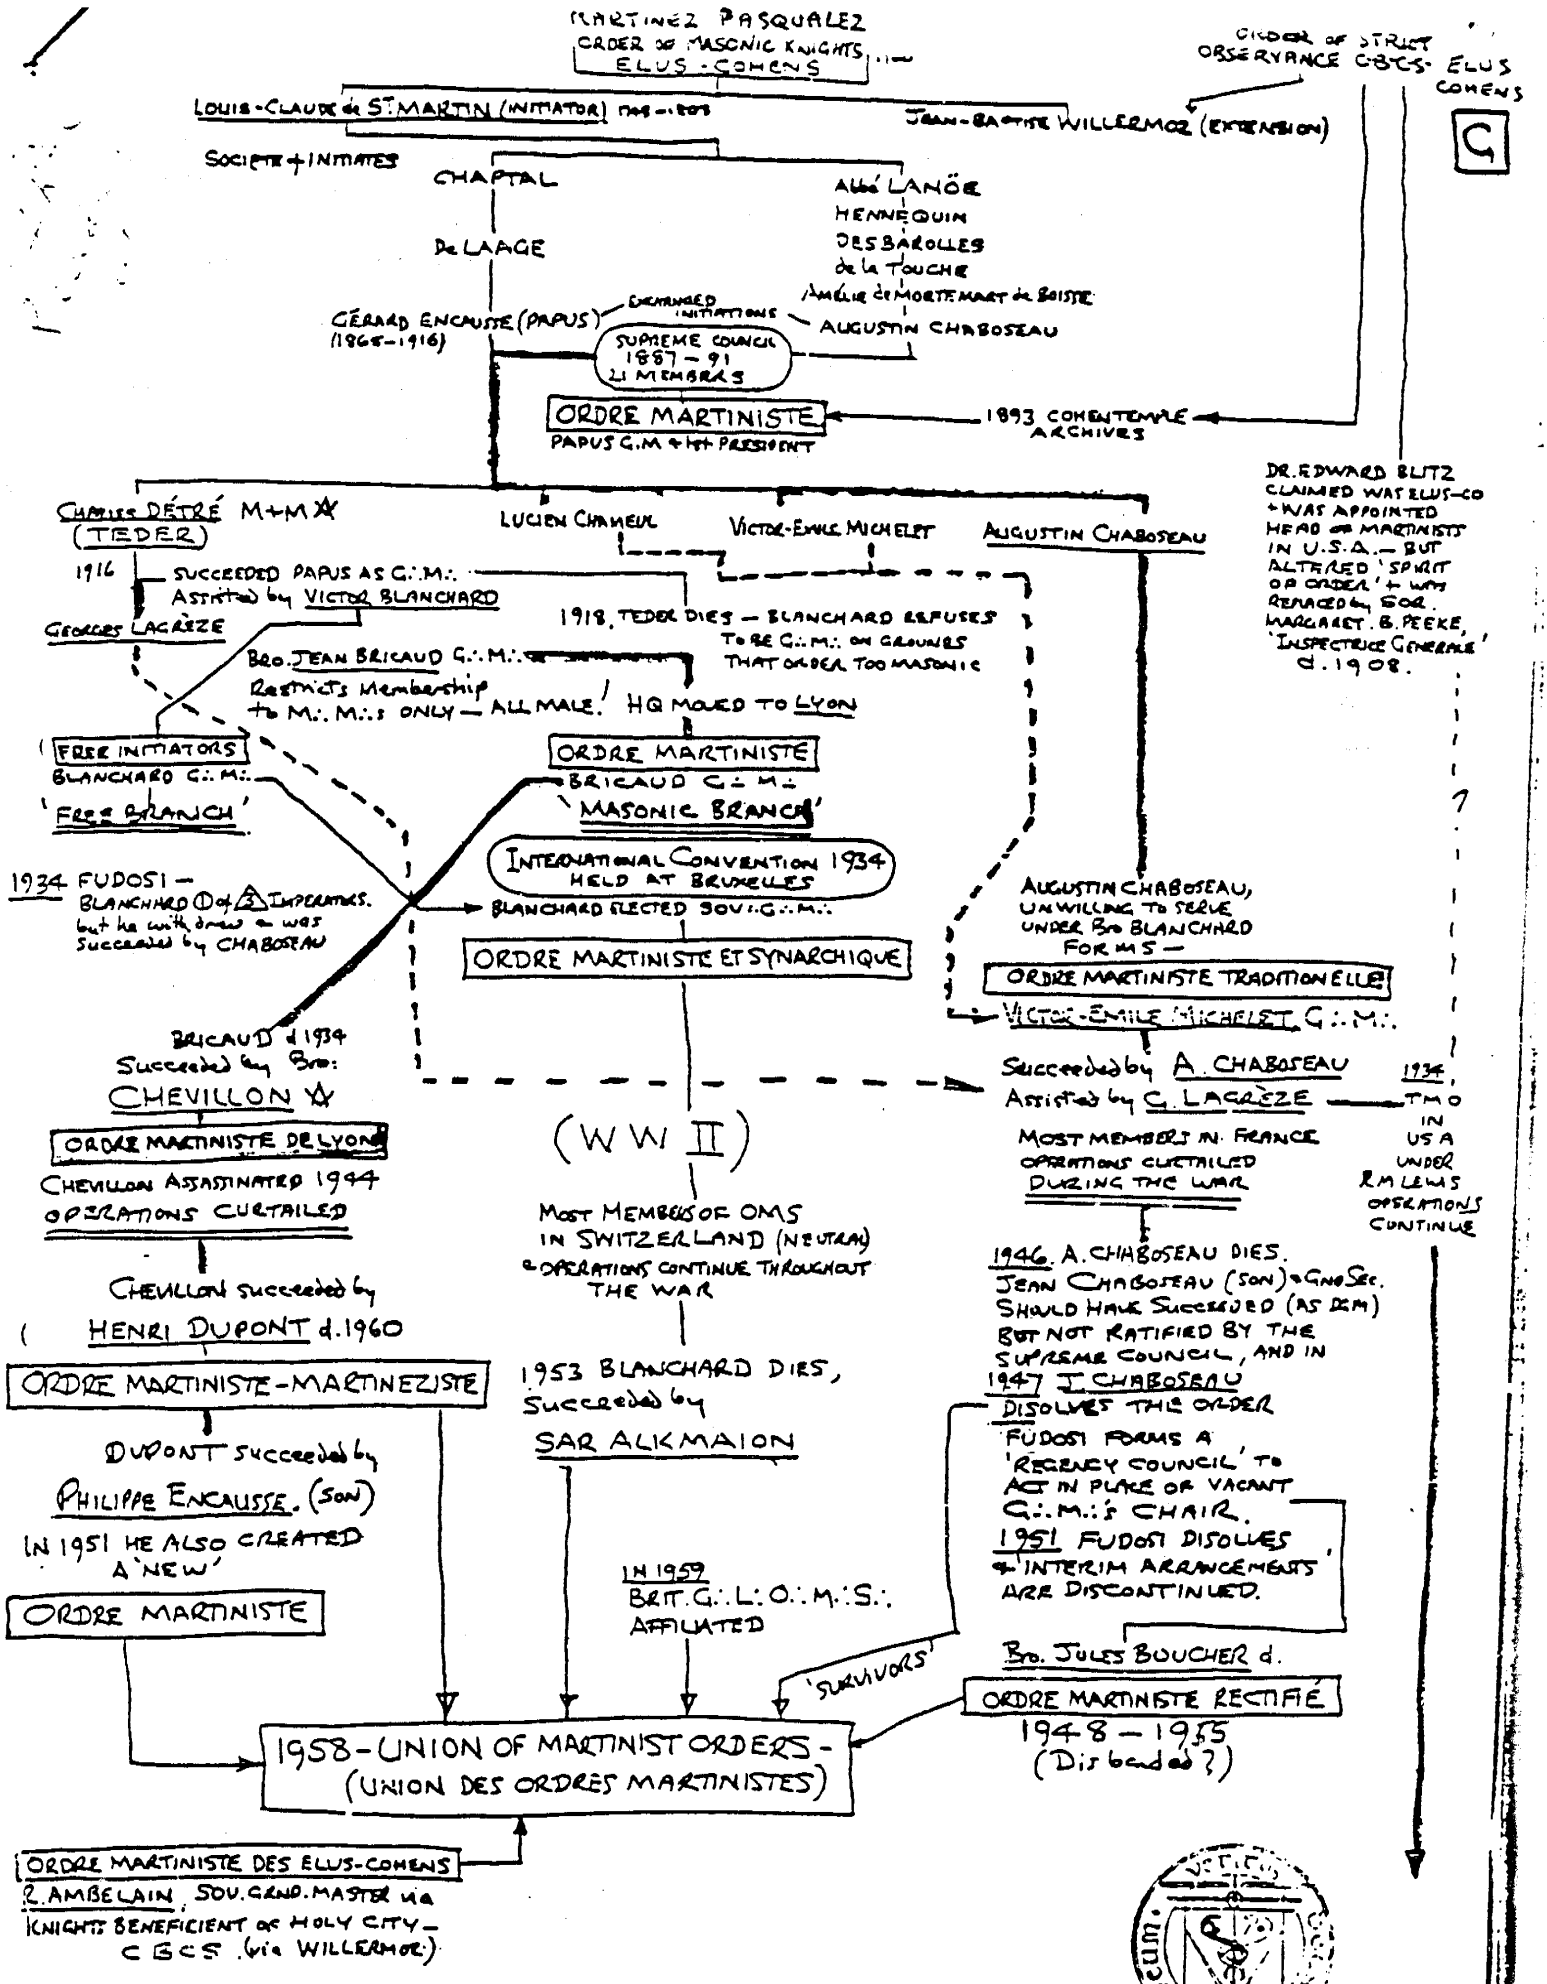
23. The Archangel organises the forces inherent in a Sephirah and the direction of motivating forces that come under its presidency. It thus works on the Briatic level, the Creative World, of a Sephirah, and certain of the symbols and titles of a Sephirah relate to that level. Reflection on these symbols or titles can bring a contact with the corresponding Archangel. Thus 'Ama' has a special relationship to Tzaphkiel, and the orb and tetrahedron have a special relationship to Tzadkiel. Experiment is recommended with regard to the other Sephiroth.

These notes are taken from the book:

A Practical Guide to Qabbalistic Symbolism

by Gareth Knight.

con't



MARTINEZ PASQUALES
ORDER OF MASONIC KNIGHTS ELUS-COHENS
LOUIS-CLAUDE de ST. MARTIN (INITIATOR) 1743–1803
JEAN-BAPTISTE WILLERMOZ (EXTENSION)
ORDER OF STRICT OBSERVANCE CBCS
ELUS COHENS
SOCIETE des INITIATES
CHAPTAL
De LAAGE
Abbé LANÖE
HENNEQUIN DESBAROLLES
de la TOUCHE
Amélie de MORTEMART de BOISSE
GÉRARD ENCAUSSE (PAPUS) (1865–1916)
EXCHANGED INITIATIONS
AUGUSTIN CHABOSEAU
SUPREME COUNCIL 1887–91 21 MEMBERS
ORDRE MARTINISTE
PAPUS G.M. & 1st PRESIDENT
1893 COHEN TEMPLE ARCHIVES
CHARLES DÉTRÉ M+M ✡ (TEDER)
LUCIEN CHAMEUL
VICTOR-EMILE MICHELET
AUGUSTIN CHABOSEAU
DR. EDWARD BLITZ CLAIMED WAS ELUS-CO + WAS APPOINTED HEAD OF MARTINISTS IN U.S.A. — BUT ALTERED 'SPIRIT OF ORDER' + WAS REPLACED by SOR. MARGARET B. PEEKE, 'INSPECTRICE GENERALE' d. 1908.
1916 SUCCEEDED PAPUS AS G.·.M.·. Assisted by VICTOR BLANCHARD
GEORGES LACRÈZE
1918, TEDER DIES — BLANCHARD REFUSES TO BE G.·.M.·. ON GROUNDS THAT ORDER TOO MASONIC
Bro. JEAN BRICAUD G.·.M.·.
Restricts Membership to M.·.M.·.s ONLY — ALL MALE! HQ MOVED TO LYON
FREE INITIATORS
BLANCHARD G.·.M.·.
'FREE BRANCH'
ORDRE MARTINISTE
BRICAUD G.·.M.·.
'MASONIC BRANCH'
INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION 1934 HELD AT BRUXELLES
BLANCHARD ELECTED SOV.·.G.·.M.·.
1934 FUDOSI — BLANCHARD ① of ③ IMPERATORS. but he withdrew & was succeeded by CHABOSEAU
ORDRE MARTINISTE ET SYNARCHIQUE
AUGUSTIN CHABOSEAU, UNWILLING TO SERVE UNDER Bro BLANCHARD FORMS — ORDRE MARTINISTE TRADITIONELLE
VICTOR-EMILE MICHELET G.·.M.·.
BRICAUD d 1934 Succeeded by Bro: CHEVILLON ✡
Succeeded by A. CHABOSEAU Assisted by G. LACRÈZE 1934, TMO IN USA UNDER RM LEWIS OPERATIONS CONTINUE ORDRE MARTINISTE DE LYON
CHEVILLON ASSASSINATED 1944 OPERATIONS CURTAILED
(WW II)
MOST MEMBERS IN FRANCE OPERATIONS CURTAILED DURING THE WAR
CHEVILLON succeeded by HENRI DUPONT d. 1960
MOST MEMBERS OF OMS IN SWITZERLAND (NEUTRAL) & OPERATIONS CONTINUE THROUGHOUT THE WAR
1946. A. CHABOSEAU DIES. JEAN CHABOSEAU (SON) & Gno Sec. SHOULD HAVE SUCCEEDED (AS DEM) BUT NOT RATIFIED BY THE SUPREME COUNCIL, AND IN 1947 J. CHABOSEAU DISOLVES THE ORDER
ORDRE MARTINISTE-MARTINEZISTE
1953 BLANCHARD DIES, Succeeded by SAR ALKMAION
FUDOSI FORMS A 'REGENCY COUNCIL' TO ACT IN PLACE OR VACANT G.·.M.·.'s CHAIR.
1951 FUDOSI DISOLVES & INTERIM ARRANGEMENTS ARE DISCONTINUED.
DUPONT succeeded by PHILIPPE ENCAUSSE. (SON)
IN 1951 HE ALSO CREATED A 'NEW'
ORDRE MARTINISTE
IN 1959 BRIT.G.·.L.·.O.·.M.·.S.·. AFFILIATED Bro. JULES BOUCHER d.
'SURVIVORS'
ORDRE MARTINISTE RECTIFIÉ 1948–1955 (Disbanded?)
1958 – UNION OF MARTINIST ORDERS – (UNION DES ORDRES MARTINISTES)
ORDRE MARTINISTE DES ELUS-COHENS
R. AMBELAIN, SOU. GRND. MASTER via KNIGHTS BENEFICIENT OF HOLY CITY – CBCS (via WILLERMOZ)

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 90-100

LIBER# 92

Personal & Confidential TENTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

SUPERIOR DEGREE CONVENTICLE 25

Greetings C Unknown and Silent Ones! HAVE READY: NOTES "FOURTEEN".

The seeming strangeness to modern man of the method Martinism urges is due to the fact that the viewpoint of man today as it touches most matters has been established by those who have lost the perspective of the ancients. Thus, it has come about that the conscious man, that is, the brain man with his five physical senses, is regarded as the only man. Naturally, then, few have understood the significance of the unconscious part of man, and fewer still have dared investigate it. But our so-called teachers have led us even further astray, for they have so completely broken the field of knowledge into so many specialised departments that it is often difficult to accept the fact that all of these separate studies are in reality only parts of one whole.

It is necessary, if man is ever to know himself completely, that he recover his view of the whole, not alone as it applies to the field of conscious knowledge --- but also to the unconscious. Once man so knew himself. His viewpoint embraced both the conscious and the unconscious, and by it he was able to understand both the universe and himself better. He was then a better balanced and more perfectly integrated being than he has ever been since. This is not to say that man has not made some advance over his predecessor in the ancient world. It is to say that that advance would have been much greater if it had been made with a sense of the value of the viewpoint of the whole rather than with a denial of its value to his scheme of knowledge. With the matter of how this viewpoint became lost, Martinism rightly does not concern itself, for in the mystery schools this whole viewpoint was not lost. Martinism has concerned itself only with restoring this viewpoint to its Initiates.

The process is necessarily slow and gradual and demands painstaking co-operation on the part of the Initiate. It consists, first of all, in establishing a harmony between the known and the unknown by means of correspondence, analogy and synthesis. Having acomplished this, one must, step by step, orient himself within this harmonious pattern. Picturesquely, Martinism calls this process the reclamation of the man in exile. It is basically a simple process -- practical and effective rather than experimental and uncertain. In spite of this, however, it is often passed over and neglected for the reason that there is an ingrown notion in man that only the abstruse, complex, and difficult to understand have value.

It seems to many therefore, that it is impossible that such a process can be successfully pursued through so simple a means as meditation. Let us not give too much heed to such shortsightedness. Meditation is the very tool, simple though it is, with which we can work exactly to awaken those dormant functions in the unconscious and call them into orderly activity. It is this fact which makes the "Book of Man" so important a part of our study.

Meditation upon symbols has for centuries been resorted to by the devout for the purpose of bringing about the experience called union with God. Perhaps only Martinists have developed it into anything like a graded system. This is not because the technique is difficult, but rather because no pattern or plan could be agreed upon generally that would lead one surely and safely to the desired goal. The effectiveness of the series of connected meditations which you as Unknown Superiors have undertaken, therefore, is something that you will prove for yourself during the remainder of your earthly experience.

You have been given the framework, or pattern, and, step by step, you will discover its meaning out of your practice. That you may not feel that you have been altogether successful so far is natural and no cause whatever to be concerned.

con't

con'd

If you have accepted the reasonableness of the process and have determined to make it a continuing practice and study, you may be assured of success. As with any new skill, the faculties you are now calling into operation need a period of careful training. They have in most cases been dormant for many years; in some cases, they have been denied and thwarted since the time-conscious education began.

Their first efforts at response may, therefore, be expected to be weak. They may report uncertainly, too, and the material of their reports may appear garbled and senseless. This should not concern us greatly, for we are merely placing symbols in the way of these unconscious faculties in order to awaken them to serious activity. For that reason, we shall make no attempt to interpret. We shall simply record what comes in response to our meditation exercises, either consciously or during sleep, confident that in time meaningful responses will come.

The second leaf of the "Book of Man" brings us to a consideration of what the Kabalists called the second Emanation of Omneity, the Sephirah Chokmah, (Khawk-mah), Wisdom. Our Martinist teachers spoke of this as the intermediate cause of the universe, the dual law, or two-fold manifestation. This indicates that there can be no manifestation without a differentiation into opposites. This second page discussed the law of corporeal duality, the cause which the universe supports, the double nature which governs man, and all that is created and formed by the two great positive and negative forces, to which man is subject, — as well as all creation. Without these polarities no existence could be possible. Man represents the third point, the manifestation in the material plane.

The positive polarity is manifested in man's good traits, his talents and constructive potentials; whereas, his negative polarity is reflected in his faults, physical and intellectual limitations and destructive tendencies.

Chokmah is Absolute Wisdom. The first swirlings of Kether are reflected into wheels of force in Chokmah; emerging from the wheels is the first abstract idea of the Universe, as yet force without form. This Sephirah is known as the Sphere of the Zodiac through which the remainder of manifestation takes place,but at this level form has not yet taken place. Chokmah is the Supernal Father in contrast to the third Sephirah Binah which is the Supernal Mother.

In the Zohar, it is written that when Kether, - "The Holy Aged, the Concealed of all Concealed, assumed a form, he produced everything in the form of male and female, as things could not continue in any other form."

It may be recalled that, early in our work as Men of Desire, we were given instruction from one of our Past Masters to the effect that "the deep symbolism of the two columns holds the key to the oppositions which exist in nature." He also wrote: "It is initiation alone which brings knowledge of the law of equilibrium or the common term which is able to reconcile opposites."

We see, then, that our consideration of the second leaf of the "Book of Man" reminds us of the law of duality and introduces us to the positive, or masculine pole of Omneity's manifestation called Chokmah, or Wisdom. It is the head of the right-hand pillar, which has been called the Pillar of Mercy.

In the Book of Genesis, it is connected with Reshith, "beginning", in the opening words, "In the beginning." This is because the word Reshith is from the root word rosh, meaning head. The Zohar names it Father, and in the Bible it is referred to as Abba, translated Father. All of these terms aim to indicate headship or beginning, and since that quality or aspect of Omneity is judged to be masculine and positive, the term father is descriptive and exact.

con'd

con'd

fatherhood This suggests a male figure, whose fatherhood is represented both by solicitude and positiveness. Whatever we can conceive the eternal masculine or positive pole to be, in an abstract and impersonal way, that we shall call Chokmah.* The Magical Image is that of a bearded male, -- bearded to indicate maturity; the father who has proved his manhood, in other words not the untried virgin male.

One of the names given to Chokmah is Yod of the Tetragrammaton, that is the first letter of the unpronounceable name of Omneity; so the Hebrew letter Yod may be used as a symbol in our meditation. Another symbol is the rod or straight line, representing power. Draw one or the other of these symbols and conduct your nightly meditations as you have been doing this past week, using the same special invocation and then retiring. Make careful notations of the results, for a little later you will discover just what has occured and why.

--- DISPLAY ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE SYMBOLS ---

* CHOKMAH and the next Sephiroth BINAH are in the World of Briah, - the World of Creation. DUALITY BEGINS IN BRIAH. . . . . continued on page Three (a)

Question the brethren on Mystic's Monitor, questions 6 - 10

Inform them for next conventicle they will be questioned on Notes For Students Nos. 4, 5 & 6.

HAND OUT NOTES "FOURTEEN"

ADMONISHMENT:

After having spent the majority of time during the early work in philosophical considerations and intellectual concepts - - the time has come when our work has taken a definite turn towards the practical side of esotericism - as is evidenced by the actual conventicle work and material that will be handed out in note form. It is the practical applications which are going to bring our conceptualizations to fruition. In fact: it is pointless being involved in this work at this stage if the bretheren are not going to use what is being given. The methods being taught are safe and sound. Most of mankind lives in a state of half awareness. The object is to bring ALL our faculties into normal and practical use. Teachers can only point the way...it is up to EACH PERSON to do their own work.

Entry into the Rose+Croix* is also a few steps away. There they will be expected to be teachers, givers out of insights as each person grasps them, ... in other words the time is coming when they will be required to give, which is the opposite of what they are doing now, - right now they are receiving.

These points must be emphasized in a firm but friendly way.

* for some

continued from page three

.... Kether/Chokmah/Binah together form the Holy Upper Trinity or Higher World. Kether is in Atziluth, Chokmah & Binah are in Briah. Duality begins in Briah. Kether is the first point to come out of the Great Unmanifest, - the Ain Trinity - and as Number 1, is Unity. Everything exists in Kether, - past, present & future, Kether knows all that was, is, and will be.

Kether differentiates Itself in two polarities, - Chokmah & Binah, because everything that exists other than Absolute Unity manifests through two poles. These two poles are variously named in an effort to understand their opposite qualities:

CHOKMAH (No. 2)	BINAH (No. 3)
Father	Mother
Male	Female
Positive	Negative

As will be seen later, Kether is the "Father" who is referred to by Jesus.

Con'd

24. Archangels are real beings though they have not physical bodies. Their anthropomorphic forms, as represented in religious painting for example, come from the human mind, which has to have a mental form acceptable to the understanding. More appropriate forms would be pillars of vast force, or profound geometric shapes in accordance with the basic nature of the Sephirah—such would be more in accordance with the real 'appearance' an Archangel would assume.

25. An Archangel is a Lord of Flame, the Lords of Flame being a life evolution previous to humanity—in fact the primal evolution—which laid down the prime stresses of the Universe which are the basis of the physical laws discovered by science. It is impossible to enter into these fascinating fields of esoteric cosmology here, but they can be examined in Dion Fortune's 'The Cosmic Doctrine' (Aquarian Press, London.) The Flame referred to in the title, Lord of Flame, is Divine Fire, which is a highly abstract condition of Will—the myth of Prometheus has relevance to it.

26. It is, generally speaking, easier, and as said before, more suitable, until a fair degree of experience has been attained, to invoke the Archangel of the Sphere rather than the God Name—though the God Name should be dwelt on briefly first to base the meditation or operation on a spiritual level. The force of the Archangel is easier to handle should the potency invoked cause too great an influx of power. The force of the Archangel will, strong as it is, dissipate and disappear more quickly. In invoking angelic help, visualisation of the appropriate colour and playing appropriate music is of great assistance. One can also dwell mentally on those whom the Archangel has helped, for example, with Raphael, the young Tobias, or, with Gabriel, Daniel or the Virgin Mary.

27. In case this should appear as sheer superstition to any reader it might be as well to reiterate that experience is the only proof. And if mental contact is attempted in a spirit of scepticism then the result will be failure—though this failure will be considered success no doubt from the sceptical point of view. In mystical work certain steps have to be taken in faith and this is one of them. The critical faculties should by all means be used after a psychic experiment—blind credulity is of use to no-one—but when doing actual work along these lines, belief is necessary, and the controlled use and receptivity of the creative imagination. In Qabalistic words, one does the work in the spirit of Netzach, the Occult Intelligence, but uses one's Hod, whose ethic is Truth, afterwards in analysing the results.

28. Those who are more inclined to credulity on the other hand should beware the superstition that the Archangel is standing there in the room before them. The contact is an inner one. By visualising the appropriate symbols and performing the appropriate invocations one is tuning in one's mental radio to a particular wavelength and this analogy explains how it is possible for several people in different places to get onto a particular contact at the same time. Much misunderstanding has been caused by taking statements of mystics too literally—the seeing and hearing is done with the inner eye and ear and not with the physical organs. In other words, with the creative imagination.

29. It should be said though that an objective shell can be built up for a psychic force to indwell, but this is not likely to be achieved by anyone who has not undergone a long course of mental training. And anyway, the form would be visible only to someone having 'etheric vision'—a natural psychic. This form of psychism is fairly uncommon and the lack of it causes much heartburning to many esoteric neophytes. However it is no particular advantage to have it—in fact it can be more of a hindrance for it tends to draw the attention entirely to the glamour of astral forms. Esoteric schools train people to perceive on a higher level, to develop a hyper-sensitive intuition, and this, although less sensational to the perceiver, is a far more reliable method of psychic perception.

30. The Order of Angels: Much that has been said about the Archangels applies also to the Angels. The Angels are responsible for what might be called the 'mechanics' of a Sephirah and operate in its Yetzirah, or Formative World. God has been called The Great Architect of the Universe, the Angels are His builders. By the same metaphor the Archangels could be regarded as His foremen or overseers.

31. There are, besides the Sephirothic Angels, other Orders, including great and beautiful Nature Beings of the higher types under whom Elementals work. The order of their hierarchy is Archangel, Angel, Elemental Spirit. In the East they are generally known as Devas.

32. Certain Angels work especially with Group Souls of animals, others with Group Souls of nations, that is, under the presidency of the National Angel of the country. A National Angel is best built in the form that holds the ideals of that nation. For example it could take the form in Britain of Britannia or St. George, and in the United States of the Statue of Liberty. Remember that the forms that the potencies indwell are man made.

33. There are other Angels that ensoul the essence of beauty in the various forms of art, whether music, painting, sculpture, poetry or drama. If these arts really touch the higher levels they bring down a great amount of Angelic force which intensifies a hundredfold the appeal to the hearer or onlooker. Ready-built man-made forms for these are, for example, the Nine Muses.

34. It is quite useless expecting contact with these beings if one never thinks of them, therefore if one wants Angelic contacts one must think of the Angels, feel with them, imagine them as they are, great and wonderful forms of light and glory, deep protective presences in contact with God and man, forming a link between. Where Angels speak or send messages to man, they do not exactly send a message in language, but they impress the idea or the meaning of the message very strongly on the mind of the recipient and his subconscious mind supplies appropriate words. They are also much concerned with immediate after-death conditions of man and the beasts.

con't

con'd

35. An Angel is a perfect entity, it does not evolve. In a way, the lesser Angels are divine automata. In this they are superior to man but they do not have man's potentialities. Man has plucked the fruit of the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil which makes him potentially a God, though only after a long period of travail being strung halfway between the condition of the Angels and the beasts. Man's Path is one of the equilibrium between the opposites, forging the pattern of his humanity. The bestial type of person is really no worse than the one who deviates to the side of the Angels and is 'too good to be true'—in fact the latter can be even more, and literally, inhuman. The glyph of the Pillars is very much of personal as well as Universal application.

36. The Mundane Chakra: This is not a good name for the idea it tries to convey, but must be used for want of something better. The Mundane Chakras are, for the most part, planetary attributions, but the astrological forces associated with the planets are properly allocated to the Paths between the Sephiroth, which are psychological states, microcosmic, as opposed to the Sephiroth themselves which are primarily Universal or Macrocosmic.

37. What is implied by the Mundane Chakra is that each of the Sephiroth has some resemblance to the Divine Plan behind certain planets or astronomical forces. The writers of science fiction speak truer than they think for there are life forces on or in or 'in-forming' all the other planetary and stellar bodies but perhaps not in a way readily imaginable to man. Whenever a certain concept takes a grip upon the mind of man in the mass it is a good indication that there is a truth behind it, however fantastic the imaginative speculations may appear. And the truth often turns out to be stranger than the fiction; the limits of man's mind are, in a certain sense, his protection.

38. While astrology is by no means a certain science, there being so many variable factors involved, the development and constant change of the 'zeitgeist' or 'spirit of the times', the similarity in branches of art work and the frequent cases of simultaneous scientific discovery can be considered largely the result of extra-terrestrial influences.

39. The Spiritual Experience: This title explains itself and each one is called a Vision. This is misleading because it does not mean a picture thrown into consciousness, but a state of mind or expansion of awareness brought about by realisation of the powers of a Sephirah. It is similar to being 'informed' by an Archangel, as Daniel was by Gabriel, which does not necessarily mean the hearing of any words, or a seeing of any pictorial visions, but a process of being 'in-formed' so that one's psyche acts as a vehicle for, or is permeated by, the powers concerned. Thus is spiritual growth steadily but unspectacularly made.

40. The Virtue and Vice: These are not strictly part of a Sephirah itself but are the reactions of the human psyche to it. The Virtue is the quality that the Sephirah should confer and which is essential to the proper working of the powers of that Sephirah. The Vice is the type of unbalance that a Sephirah may cause through human weakness; really a Sephirah has no vice, but the 'Mundane Chakra's' astrological bad influence is put there, sometimes with dubious correctness. However the Vice can sometimes serve as an interesting indicator in an occult school, for human nature being what it is, the unbalance usually manifests first, so that when a student well established in the harmony of Tiphareth starts becoming unaccountably contentious then one can mark it down as a possible symptom of spiritual growth, for it may mean that he is approaching Geburah but has not attained full control of its potencies yet.

41. The Symbols: These are images subsidiary to the Magical Image and as already mentioned in the section on Archangels, can be used to make contact with certain aspects of a Sephirah. They can also throw further light on a Sephirah from a different angle pictorially, as the subsidiary titles do verbally.

42. The Yetziratic Text: These texts are descriptions of the Sephiroth and Paths as given in a supplement to the Sepher Yetzirah, or Book of Formations, an early Qabalistic document. The language, though obscure, yields much to meditation.

43. The book of texts designates as 'Paths' all the facets of the Tree—the ten Sephiroth and the twentytwo Paths—hence the expression 'The Thirtytwo Paths of Concealed Glory'. It also gives each one a title, called an 'Intelligence', which acts as a very useful subsidiary title to the Sephirah or Path.

44. The translations used are those of Dr. Wynn Westcott, taken from the Hebrew version of Joannes Stephanus Rittangelius printed in Amsterdam in 1642, and with reference to numerous other versions. Dr. A. E. Waite has criticised them as being too eclectic and has offered his own translations which he claimed to be more accurate, but experience has shown the Westcott versions to be more valuable. It can hardly be repeated too often that the Qabalah is a living practical system, not a cut and dried body of authority. Even if Waite's contention is true, that his scholarship is superior to Westcott's, it does not alter the fact that, as far as the modern practical Qabalist is concerned, an intuitive reconstruction of an ancient and probably corrupt text is superior to an unimaginative literal translation.

52. The Qliphoth: These demonic forces are best left until a good general idea of the Tree has been assimilated. They are thus also treated separately.

53. Miscellaneous: This includes precious stones, plants, animals, perfumes, alchemical terms etc., most of which are highly arbitrary and in any case more in the province of the experienced ritualist. Thus a separate chapter is allocated to this subject also.

SUPERIOR DEGREE CONVENTICLE 26

Greetings O Unknown and Silent Ones ! HAVE READY: NOTES "FIFTEEN"

The subject of dreams, which has enterred our consideration in recent conventicles, is one which illustrates again the necessity of careful thinking lest common conceptions or past superstitions divert our attention from their only value.

It was early discovered that the material of dreams did not arrange itself according to a pattern which the conscious faculties could call logical. That is, events were mixed so far as time was concerned; - - peaople and places appeared without regard to space or geographical distance, and irrelevant words and meaningless symbols were somehow made to have meaning. The individual was often perplexed and always assigned too much significance, or not enough, to these reports from his unconscious, or subjective, self. Having no conception of the purpose of this unconscious activity of his --- and lacking the understanding to relate it to any pattern, man was prone to regard his dreams superstitiously and fearfully. He, therefore, of necessity sought someone whom he considered wiser than himself to interpret them for him.

This was a mistake even though a very natural one. The interior pattern or shape of things in the unconscious, although remaining the same in essence, would nonetheless be colored in its appearance by the necessity od drawing on the experience of each individual for its elements. Another person, therefore, unless he were carefully instructed himself, - could easily misinterpret. The danger of this existed no matter whether his intentions were good or otherwise. There was always present, too, the tendency to make the interpretation conform to a set of notions believed in. This was especially true when the Church assumed the role of sole authority in the matter of dream interpretation, insisting that it alone could determine the meaning and value of the dream itself. The Church, it must be said, did not deny either the dream or the possibility of its having meaning, but only the priest could interpret it, however. Said Benedictus Pererius at the end of the sixteenth century: "God truly is not such as to be bound by the laws of time; nor is he without the opportunity of working as he wishes, for whenever and to whomever he desires, — He breathes upon him dreams." On the whole though, while not denying Omneity's power to communicate through dreams, the Church refrained from according much credence to them.

The point to be noted is that by such means the teachings of the mystery schools were distorted and misconstrued. The mystery schools taught that dreams came from within man's own unconscious self. They were not so much Omneity's pronouncements and warnings as they were the efforts of the individual's own unconscious self to respond to stimuli received. Having arrived through their studies at a knowledge of the interior pattern, these mystic teachers knew both how to awaken a response through dreams AND how to interpret that response when it came. This was a very different thing from regarding dreams either as oracular or as being Omneity's direct communication with man.

A second mistake must also be noted in connection with man's uninstructed opinion concerning dreams. This is the fact that he all too often relates them to the future instead of to the present, or the past. Time, it has been stressed, does not express itself at all in dreams as in the waking state. It is opening the door to grave errors, then, when one starts imagining that dreams are always prophetic and concerned wholly with what is going to happen. It also diverts the attention from the purpose of dreams, which is to complement the knowledge man acquires consciously and to give him complete knowledge. This is something to remember.

con'd

con'd

Explain the value of dreams. THE VALUE OF DREAMS LIES IN THE FACT THAT, AS RESPONSES FROM THE UNCONSCIOUS PART OF MAN, THEY MAY BE USED TO FILL OUT OR COMPLETE THE KNOWLEDGE GIVEN HIM BY HIS CONSCIOUS FACULTIES.

Are dreams always prophetic? NO. DREAMS ARE NOT ALWAYS PROPHETIC ANY MORE THAN THEY ARE ALWAYS MEANINGFUL. THEY DO REPRESENT A PATTERN WHICH IN TIME BECOMES INTELLIGIBLE.

Can someone else interpret our dreams other than our own self? NO. DREAMS USUALLY ARE IN SYMBOLS AND SCENES MADE UP OF ELEMENTS FOUND IN THE INDIVIDUAL UNCONSCIOUS, THEY CAN BE MEANINGFUL ONLY TO THAT INDIVIDUAL.

Rather cryptically, it is said that the third leaf of the "Book of Man" "treats of the basis of all bodies and of all resultants of whatever kind." This has fuller meaning when we refer to the Zohar, where it is written: "Hence Wisdom, the Sephirah, and the beginning of development when it preceeded from the Holy Aged (Kether) emanated in male and female, for Wisdom expanded, and Understanding, the third Sephirah, proceeded from it, and thus we obtained male and female, viz: Wisdom, the Father, and Understanding, the Mother, from whose union the other pairs of Sephiroth successively emanated." In other words, from the unmanifested, the manifested appeared as duality called father & mother, Wisdom and Understanding, positive & negative. Wisdom, the first expression of this duality, we call masculine, or father; and Understanding, the other aspect, we call feminine, or mother. These three aspects of Omneity: Crown, Wisdom, Understanding, considered together constitute the Upper World of the Qabalists.

This third page of the "Book of Man", which completes the Supernal Trinity, relates the formation of the bodies and the results. This is the key or explanation of the animated or inanimated material substances, which material kingdom grows first through involution and later through evolution. That is why there exists a path of descent or disintegration of the One to the multiplicity, and a path of ascent or reintegration of the multiplicity to the One. This indicates that we have been separated from our original source, the Unity, God, through the involution of the self, and it must be our purpose and obligation to prepare ourselves by all possible means to return to our original state of spirituality through evolution. This can be achieved by cultivating our positive potentials and by separating ourselves from the destructive faults by acquiring greater knowledge and consciousness of our own being.

In Binah resides Absolute Understanding just as Absolute Wisdom inhers in Chokmah. It is the feminine aspect of Kether just as Chokmah is the masculine aspect. Binah completes the trinity known as the Supernals. There is now balance in the sphere of consciousness above the abyss.

In the Sephirothic arrangement, therefore, Binah is the head of the left-hand Pillar, the Pillar of Severity. The Qabalists called it mother, Palace, the Great Sea, they also named it Elohim just as they named Chokmah, Reshith and Kether, B' because the three Sephiroth were expressive of those high attributes of Omneity active in creation according to the first words of Genesis, "In the beginning God created, etc." In Hebrew, this phrase reads "B' Reshith(Bara)Elohim." As we have already seen, Elohim is a feminine noun with a masculine plural ending; Elohim is incorrectly translated in the Authorised and Revised Versions of the Holy Scriptures. Dion Fortune in her work "The Mystical Qabala" states: "Marriage is not a matter of two halves, but rather of four quarters, uniting in balanced harmony of reciprocal fecundation. Binah & Chokmah are balanced by Hod & Netzach. There are goddesses as well as gods for man to worship. Boaz and Jakin are both pillars of the Temple, and only when united do they produce stability. A goddess-less religion is half-way to atheism. In the word Elohim we find the true key. Elohim is translated "God" in most versions of the Holy Scriptures. It really ought to be translated "God and Goddess", for it is a feminine noun with a masculine plural termination affixed. This is an incontrovertible fact, in its lingustic aspect at any rate, and it is presumed that the various authors of the books of the Bible knew what they meant, and did not use this peculiar and unique form without good reason." This authoress renders the second verse of Genesis as "And the spirit of the male and female conjoined principles moved upon the surface of the formless, and manifestation took place." Be this as it may, the important point for us at this time is to note the male & female attributions that comprise the Holy Upper Trinity, represented by Chokmah, the masculine principle and Binah, the feminine principle. The first 'He' of the four-letter name of God (YHVH) is placed here.

con'd

con'd

As we should expect, the Magical Image of Binah is a mature woman, a matron.

Two symbols both in constant use in the Roman Catholic Church are associated with Binah and we may find either acceptable to use. One is the Chalice, or cup, and the other is the Vesica Piscis. Literally, this latter means fish bladder and was used by the early Christians as a symbol of the Savior. The reason for this was that the letters of the Greek word for fish, ichthus, form an abbreviation of the sentance: Jesus Christ, the son of God, the Saviour. This symbol is a pointed oval and is often met with in religious paintings and stained-glass windows, where it surrounds a figure of the Virgin Mary. The fact that it is so often associated with the Virgin Mary is not without esoteric significance. The Virgin Mary is held to be intimately associated with Binah, the Great Mother; and from this attribution the mind is led on to the idea of that which brings forth the All but retains its virginity; in other words, whose creativeness does not involve it in the life of its creation, but which remains apart and behind as the basis of manifestation, the root-substance whence matter arises. For although matter is held to have its roots in Binah, yet matter as we know it is of a very different order of being to the Supernal Sephirah in which its essence lies. Binah, the primordial formative influence, the parent of all form, is behind and beyond manifesting substance; in other words it is ever-virgin.

Let us therefore carry on with our meditation exercise. The invocation for use this week will be: "O Thou most holy who dwellest in the bosom of immensity and whose name we call Elohim, grant that the chalice of our heart may overflow with thy divine love."

- - - - - - -

DISPLAY ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE SYMBOLS FOR MEDITATION.

DO ALL BRETHREN UNDERSTAND THE PROCEEDURE OF THE MEDITATION EXERCISE?

con'd

Questions on "Notes 4, 5 & 6"

Notes Four

Which Sphere on the Tree does the black section of our Altar cloth represent? (Malkuth, No. 10).

What part of the Tree does the red of the Altar cloth represent? (Spheres 7, 8 & 9).

What part of the Tree does the white part represent? (Spheres 4, 5 & 6, - which is as far as man can attain by reintegration).

What part of the Tree is represented by the three flames of the Luminaries? (Spheres 1, 2 & 3 - which belong to the realm of Deity — beyond man's aspirations.)

Man's aspirations are symbolised by the incense burner anchored on the white plane, whose smoke drifts up between the three flames and represent man's aspirations, to be reabsorbed as reintegrated Mankind, Adam Kadmon, into the bosom of the First Cause that emanated him, i.e.: the Deity, Sephiroth 1, 2 & 3. This incense burner, however, also represents something else. What is it? (It represents the "bridging" Sephira Da'ath = which is not usually indicated on the T.O.L. diagram = Da'ath corresponds with the psychic center at the nape of the neck.

Notes Five

What are some of the names of the Seconday Cause? (See notes "Five").

Contemplating Da'ath on the Tree and realizing its correspondence in the human body, with the understanding of the function of the center at the nape of the neck, what ideas does one get? (That we can sence conditions in the Supernals, which is an area that man cannot actually attain in his present outcast state.)

Notes Six

What is the Qabala? (The Western Mystery tradition. Knowledge that has mainly been passed on by mouth to ear, received knowledge.)

What are the two main sources of Qabalistic knowledge? (The Sepher Ietzirah and the Zohar.)

HAND OUT NOTES "FIFTEEN"

Inform the brethren to prepare to answer questions on the Mystics Monotor 11 - 15.

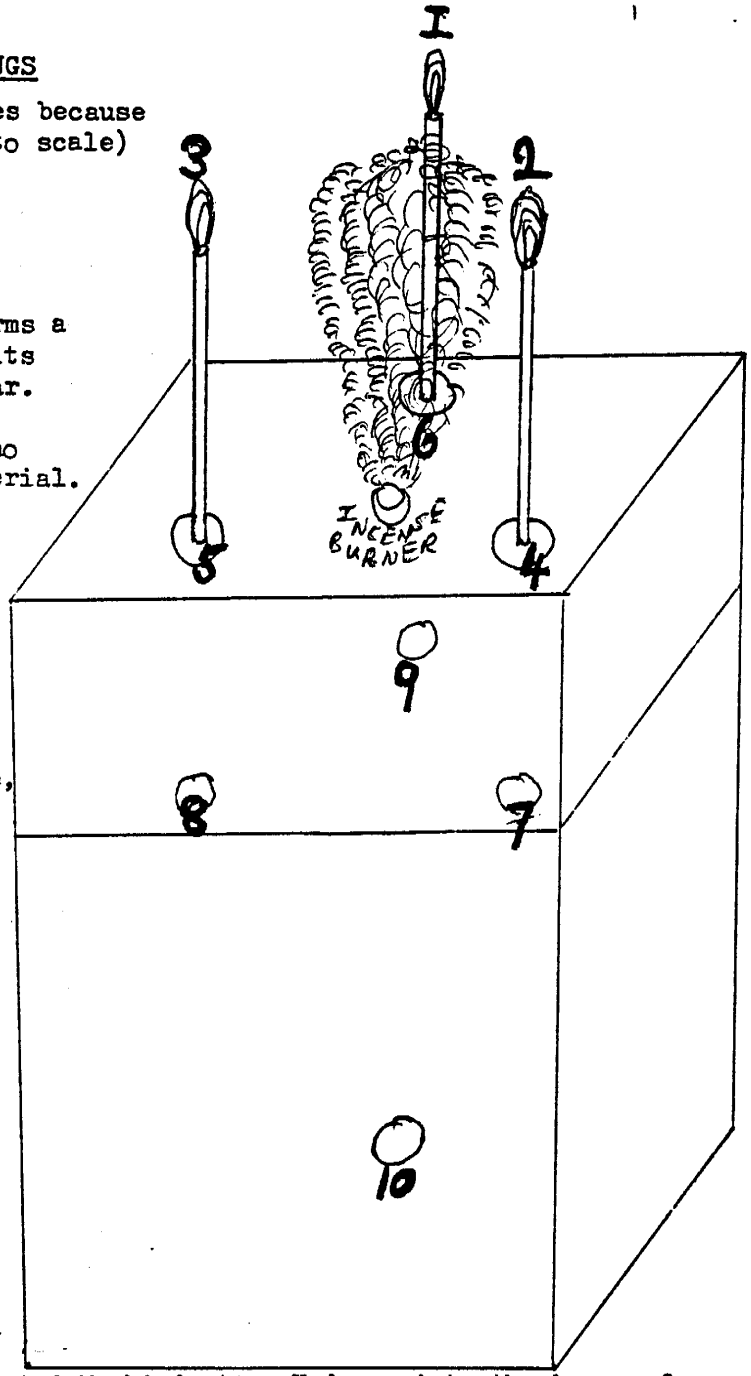
PLEASE GIVE US A LITTLE MORE LIGHT ON THIS PASSAGE: "THE EARTHLY PILLARS OF OPPOSITION HAVE THEIR PROTOTYPE IN THE ASTRAL WORLD. THROUGH DREAMS, MAN MEETS THESE ASTRAL PILLARS THUS BRIDGING THE GAP BETWEEN THE CONSCIOUS AND THE UNCONSCIOUS."

You raise here a point that has two aspects and I am not quite sure on which one you require assistance: (a) pillars correspondence, or (b) dreams as a means of bridging the gap. I will therefore give a brief opinion on both!
The essence of Martinism is the search for correspondences between the three principal parts into which creation and the pairs themselves can be divided and subdivided ad infinitum. Works of our masters are concerned with the relationships of Man with his First Estate or condition, which means: that part of him that existed on the other planes, -- and with correspondences between God, Man and the Universe. If at the stage of the conventicle in question, we had concluded that the understanding of the correspondences between our present earthly condition and the divine in us was beyond our present power of understanding and better left to further study, -- we were left with the task of working at the correspondences between the conscious (waking) mind, and the unconscious mind; one corresponding to the material or earthly plane, and the other to the astral plane (so-called).
The principles of the pillars -- polarity having to be balanced to reach a state of equilibrium — as applied to our earthly existence :» justice tempered with mercy, and numerous other pairs of opposites «: must necessarily be reflected on the astral plane according to our system of correspondences. The form that these opposite poles and reconciling third force would take on the astral plane -- is the subject proposed to the reflections and meditation of the brethren.

Now we come to the dream part. As well as reflections, (which imply intelligent analysis), and meditation which reaches beyond objectivity into subjective understanding, — we have been given dreams, a process of reviewing of the recent activities of the mind for sorting into categories of events either worth storing in the memory, - or "disposable." This reviewing has the advantage of bringing up all activities of the mind, even those of which we may not have been conscious in our waking state. Thus when we have consciously and objectively reflected on a given subject, the unconscious side of our mind was equally active, but its musings and conclusions were not normally perceived by our conscious mind. At the dream stage of analysis, these items can be picked out -- and give us a glimpse into a level of consciousness with which we are not normally attuned. Then, with proper training, and this is not idle talk but factual statement of phenomenon experienced by many of us, and the matter of proper experiment, one can at one point of a dream, without waking up, direct that dream into fields of enquiry AND OBTAIN ANSWERS. At that point, the most difficult thing is to bring back these answers into the field of conscious thought, that is, - to remember them on waking up. But with proper guidance and practice it is feasible.
It follows therefore, that this field of investigation brings us in touch with that which, on the astral plane, corresponds to the pillars on the material plane.

SYMBOLISM OF THE ALTAR AND ITS FURNISHINGS

(Please observe the Altar at Conventicles because the accompanying diagram is not drawn to scale)



You will notice the black part forms a perfect cube. This denotes the realm of Malkuth.

The red part, already more rarified, forms a solid whose height is to its width, as its width is to the total height of the altar.

The white, symbolising the spirit, has no height or thickness, thus being non-material.

Whereas the black cube is the perfect image of matter, realm of Malkuth, no. 10 on the Tree of Life, the red portion is the realm of the soul (motion, change) and of the lowest triangle on the Tree of Life: Sephiroth 7, 8 and 9.

The white part has no material substance, being only two dimensional and the tree spots where the candlesticks rest, represent the second triangle of Sephiroth: 4, 5 & 6. This is as far as man can attain by re-integration. Having reached this level, he must await the will of the First Cause that emanated him to withdraw him into Itself.

The flames of the three luminaries represent the three highest Sephiroth: 1, 2 and 3: Kether, Chokmah and Binah, which belong to the realm of Deity, - - beyond man's aspirations. Man's aspirations are symbolised by the incense burner anchored on the white plane, but whose smoke drifts up between the three flames ... representing man's aspirations to be reabsorbed as reintegrated Mankind, Adam Kadmon, into the bosom of the First Cause that first emanated him.

This "bridging" incense burner also symbolises the mysterious "additional" Sephirah Da'ath (which is not usually indicated on the Tree of Life glyph.) Applying the Tree to man's body, Da'ath corresponds with the center at the nape of the neck.

*** * *** *** * *** *** * ***

Are you carrying out the exercise in concentration, self-study and analysis given on page two of "Notes for Students 'one'"? Brothers and Sisters: We cannot emphasize too much that KNOWLEDGE comes from our own experience. Study the Book of Nature! Study the Book of Man! Wonder about things! Persist with the exercises you are given! PLEASE READ PAGE 14 OF THE BOOK - FIVE CHRISTIAN PRINCIPALS - AND REFLECT ON IT.

NOTES FOR STUDENTS "FIVE"

0: THE AIN SOPH, THE ABSOLUTE, THE INFINITE, THE ETERNAL, OMNEITY.

1-2-3: THE FIRST CAUSE

4-5-6: SECONDARY CAUSE

"Adam Kadmon"
"Primitive Adam"
"Archetypal Man"
"The Archetype"
"The Word"
"The Logos"
"Creator of the Universe"
"S. A. O. T. U. "

Questions for your own contemplation:

What do you understand by the word 'God'?

Where on the Tree would you place 'God'?

Is 'God' singular or plural?

Is 'God' male or female?

Is there more than one 'God'?

The center at the nape of the neck, which is of particular interest and value to Martinists, corresponds to Da'ath. Contemplating Da'ath on the Tree (above) what ideas do you get?

Study notes "three" "four" and "five" in conjunction with 'Qabala: Four Worlds' and 'The Qabalistic Doctrine of the 'En Soph and the 10 Sephiroth' in Martinist Digest no. 5.

What thoughts do you have on 'individuality'? Do we retain our individuality forever? Which ever way you answer - what is the basis of your reply?

Let us observe at the very beginning of these notes that the English language is, unfortunately, not very rich in words that can be used to describe "higher things" and this is one reason why there is so much confusion about the finer points of many descriptions and meanings pertaining to the Astral and Invizible Realms. We will therefore have to apply a broader meaning to the words we do have. Sometimes we will put these words in quote marks: " " but we rely on the perception of the reader to understand what is being said, to avoid innumerable punctuations.

"Astral projection" and "astral travelling" is a blanket term used to describe the shifting of consciousness from its usual physical seat to one of our "higher" "bodies".

It should be obvious to everyone reading these notes that there are "higher" and "lower" levels of consciousness; that we each have more than one "body"; and that we can "plug in" to the other levels. As some readers will be interested in scriptural references: you will recall that Ieschouah said "In my Father's house there are many mansions." This is obviously a reference to the "planes". In 2 Cor. 12:2 we read "I knew a man in Christ, fourteen years ago (whether in the body, I know not; or whether out of the body, I know not; God knoweth), such a one caught up even to the third heaven"... again, another reference to the planes. Verse 3 of the same chapter tells of someone who was caught up to "Paradise", where they heard unspeakable things. The Bible is full of similar references - - many refer to the "highest" heaven, and those interested can check a concordance.

Again, in 1 Cor. 25:44 we read that "there is a natural body and there is a spiritual body." Subsequent passages in this chapter reveal man as comprehended in three general divisions. M:? as you know, divides man into three main sections, and Being into three Realms; but we also know that these are main divisions and that there are sub-divisions. Esotericists speak of the seven-fold division of man and certainly this number is used throughout sacred writings to indicate completeness.

To close this introduction we must again refer to the limitations of language: the noun "body" when applied to the bodies "higher" than the physical...does not mean quite the same thing as when applied to the physical, however there is no other good word to use except perhaps "centers of consciousness". There is a kind of organization about each of these centers...and for that reason "body" is about the best word we can use.

Now each "body" has a "plane" corresponding to it. Conversely, it could be said that for each plane there is a corresponding body. The physical plane and the physical body is made up of matter that is characterized by stability and inertia. On the Tree of Life this is Malkuth. The mundane chakra (see Notes 14, para. 36) is Cholem ha Yesodoth, Sphere of the Elements; in the microcosm this is the Muladhara chakra, the sacral plexus at the base of the spine. In Tarot this corresponds to the Saturn center. . . . . . MALKUTH on the Tree of Life.
(Bear in mind that the psychic centers or plexuses are "transformers" of energy. These centers, or Chakras, are to be understood as situated, not in the physical body but in the subtle or etheric body, although there is an association with the ductless or endocrine gland, or ganglion).

The plane "above" the physical is the etheric. The Egyptians used to call the Etheric Body the Ka. The Etheric Body is something you were equipped with in the natural course of things. Although intangible, it belongs to the physical plane. It is sometimes described as being composed of "finer matter". Some schools hold that it is a grid of force, possibly similar to electricity. It is a mirror image of the physical body and usually coincides with it. It can be projected out of the physical body and carry our consciousness virtually anywhere on the physical plane. In certain circumstances it can be seen with the physical eyes.....a "ghost" is very often an etheric projection (whether done consciously or unconsciously).

con'd

On the Tree of Life, the Etheric Plane in the Macrocosm or the Etheric Body in the Microcosm is Yesod. The Mundane Chakra is Levanah, the Moon. This is the Svadhisthana chakra, situated on the spine in the region above the genitals, the prostatic ganglion, upper & lower mesenteric plexuses. In Tarot: the Mars center.

The Etheric Plane is small, narrow and limited and somewhat personal in application. It lies very close to the physical plane and the etheric body is very close to the physical body. One can become aware of it quite easily. Many strange and powerful things can be done with the etheric body on the physical plane. It is possible, particularly at certain times, to "thicken" the etheric body so that it can be seen and felt by others. The Etheric body can be affected by mental thoughts and strong emotions. If one is successful in bringing about an etheric projection one is able to travel freely on the physical plane - - to "fly" -- and observe physical plane happenings. Extra strong physical shocks can disrupt it and tear it loose from the physical body - - it is in fact driven out by anesthetics and when a person suffers a jolt in a car accident for example, or is put out for a surgical operation, it sometimes happens that consciousness is awakened during the occasion, and then one witnesses themself being carried away upon a stretcher, or undergoing the operation.

"Above" the Etheric Plane is the Astral Plane. It has a much wider application to the physical universe than the etheric plane. It is very "large" and contains much more of a variety of things than on any of the other planes. For this reason it can probably be considered to be much more important. Many more of Nature's forces course through this plane than any of the others and their application is widely distributed (whereas the forces, by the time they enter the Etheric Plane, have begun to become individualized and personalized.)

The Astral Plane differs from the others in that there are divisions. Some speak of the lower astral and the higher astral, whereas others say there are seven distinct divisions of the Astral. Similarly there is a Lower and a Higher Astral Body. The lowest part of the astral is very much like the etheric where they con-join, and the highest part very much like the Mental where they come together. The other planes do not have their higher and lower levels so well delineated. The physical is largely the physical, and the etheric is largely the etheric, and so too the mental...but the astral contains elements of the etheric and the mental...which is what makes it facinating in one sense and puzzling in another. The astral must be entered carefully and correctly, or there can be trouble of an annoying nature.

It is on the astral that things are formed, where things are moulded, where things are "plastic", where things change quickly. Remember this.(Check Notes 11, para. 9).

On the Tree of Life, the astro-mental body is Hod and Netzach.
In the microcosm the Manipura chakra is at the center of the Solar Plexus, the epigastric ganglion. In Tarot: the Jupiter center. Location on the Tree of Life: at the intersection of Paths 25 & 27. (See diagram on "Notes Twenty-One").
All astral forms are composed of many points of colour, so much so that the astral plane is sometimes called the Star Plane....astral means star. As basic forms have a wide play on the astral plane there is much colour which is the force itself. During a conscious projection to a higher plane, observation of the scenery is one way of knowing where you are. On the etheric plane the matter is finer than that of the physical and the higher up you go, the finer and finer is the "matter" - and also the less stable. On the Higher Astral shapes are moving and changing rapidly. The forms near the bottom of the Lower Astral partake of the nature of the etheric and are more stable, but still show the star-like effect - - which is the signature, as it were, of the Astral Plane. The higher up into the Astral one goes, the more will the forms, such as they are, be more fluid and flow and change shape and appearance very easily and quickly. Higher still forms have practically no form at all, colour takes over completely as the Astral blends into the Mental Plane.

con'd

SUPERIOR DEGREE

CONVENTICLE 27

Greetings O Unknown and Silent Ones ! HAVE READY: NOTES "SIXTEEN"

It is possible that you may have recorded in your notebooks several impressions or dreams which may have seemed trivial, meaningless, perhaps altogether ridiculous. You may even have begun to question the motive back of the request to keep such a note-book in the first place. As we proceed each week, we shall find the explanations and our dream experiences gradually become clearer.

Mysticism has always concerned itself with the whole mind of man. This whole mind, or psyche, as the science of psychology has come to call it, consists of both a conscious active part and an unconscious active part. The conscious part is altogether a thing of the present; that is, it makes its appearance at birth and is developed through the education and experience of living. — The unconscious part, however, is very old. It is made up of elements brought along from personal experience in past incarnations, and it even includes material that we may call a collective deposite of the genus man, as well as many things which have been dropped into it from the conscious level and been forgotten.

These two sides of the psyche complement each other and should function as a unit to enable man to make the most of his life. If he neglects either or if by some circumstance he loses the sense of unity between them, he becomes one-sided or unbalanced. If he lives wholly dependent upon his objective faculties and denies his unconscious or subjective self any part in his thought or decisions, he is walling off vital energy in subconscious levels of his psyche, which seeks other perhaps less profitable or even detrimental outlets. He is really building an explosive deposit there that may at any time burst through some opening or weak wall of his mental or physical structure and do him harm. This may show itself in peculiar illnesses which defy diagnosis, important life decisions that are wrongly made, habits that cannot be controlled, and failures to make adjustments to situations which are met with in the course of association with others. All because a part of himself — a part nature gave him to fit him completely for living — has been pushed aside and refused the right to function.

On the other hand, the individual who refuses to use and develop his objective faculties and continuously lives in accordance with the dreams, fantasies, and visions which arise in his unconscious self soon begins to deny the reality of the world of his objective faculties. He lives more and more withdrawn from experiences which his fellow beings accept as valid and, consequently, becomes mentally ill. If he persists in such a course, he loses all balance and becomes insane.

It is natural to the child to live mainly in the dreams, fantasies, and experiences of the unconscious world. His conscious faculties are new, strange, and untried. They report to him only that which is confusing and unfamiliar, whereas to him the unconscious realm is tenderly known and comforting. By the time he is two or three years old, the objective world has become acceptable and he adjusts to it. Nonetheless, he maintains his contact with the world of unconsciousness and through it works out a better understanding of what happens to him in the newer conscious world in which his growth must take place.

Unfortunately, all too often the child is thwarted in his attempts to help himself in life by continuing his dependence upon his unconscious world by parents who scold and punish him for telling tall tales and imagining impossible explanations about his dreams and fantasies. They tell him that only what his senses report has any meaning and that only wickedness and horrid things come from fantasies and fairies and dreams. He is thus faced with a very real crisis and is more times than not guided to the wrong decision of turning his back on the unconscious and accepting only the conscious as real.

con'd

con'd

It is well nigh impossible for the child without understanding parents to realise that both worlds are his, given him by nature to insure his complete success in the new experience that is his. Therefore, his decision is almost always a wrong one. His life later shows the mistake he has been forced to make. Usually, he denies his unconscious self, "outgrows" the fairies and dream playmates, even forgets the way in which dreams in the past have helped him adjust to the problems of living. Thus he keeps shut off from use half of himself and buries within himself explosive seeds of energy that are certain to burst out later to his surprise and hurt. Thus, too, he cripples himself inthe solution of the age-old questions of life, for the answers lie locked away in a compartment of his being, the existence of which he is no longer aware. Dreams are the only way left by which he can find that compartment again.

Perhaps at out next Conventicle, it will be possible to throw more light on our personal dreams and show how they will lead us to an acquaintance with, and understanding of the contents of the Collective Unconscious. In the meantime you are strongly advised to continue keeping as complete notes as you can of all your dreams.

- - - - - - -

What are the two divisions that the totality, or psyche, of man has? THE CONSCIOUS AND THE UNCONSCIOUS.

In what way has most of us been wrongly taught? ALTHOUGH THE UNCONSCIOUS AND THE CONSCIOUS SELVES WERE INTENDED TO FUNCTION AS UNITS COMPLEMENTING ONE ANOTHER, WRONG EDUCATION HAS LED MAN TO DISREGARD THE UNCONSCIOUS AND DEPEND ALTOGETHER UPON HIS CONSCIOUS SELF.

What does the neglect of of unconscious self do? IT LEADS US TO UNBALANCE AND INCOMPLETE KNOWLEDGE. FURTHERMORE, IT WALLS OF IN THE UNCONSCIOUS SELF POCKETS OF ENERGY, OR FORCE, THAT UNEXPECTEDLY BREAK THROUGH AND BRING DIFFICULTIES.

How does the unconscious strive to express itself? THROUGH DREAMS.

- - - - - - -

We now turn to the fourth leaf of the "Book of Man" and read that it treats of "whatever is active; the principle of all tongues temporal and extemporal; also of the religion and worship of man." This leaf, in the Qabalistic pattern is identified with the fourth Sephirah, called Chesed (Khez'ed), Mercy.
It is the first of the Sephiroth relating to the Lower World, in contrast to the previous three which make up the Upper World. It is the first Sephirah below the abyss. Chesed, therefore, is another starting point. The great Qabalistic commentary, the Zohar, calls it the "first day". In Genesis, this is the day of the gathering of light into focus out of the darkness.

As we can see from its position on the Pillar of Mercy it is Chokmah on a lower arc. It is the loving father, the protector and preserver, just as Chokmah is the All-begetter. It continues the work of Chokmah, organising and preserving that which the All-Father has begotten. Chesed is the sphere of benevolence, beneficence, love, emotions, sentiment, feeling and all that is part of an expansive nature. For this reason Jupiter with all the expansion that it implies is assigned to this sphere. This page is the symbol of life and bears the qualities of grace and righteousness. This level of consciousness is the sphere of the Masters, it is called the Measuring and Receptacular Intelligence because it contains and emanates the Holy Powers and Spiritual Virtues. Wisdom and peace may here be understood.

con'd

con'd

Chesed, being the first emanation in the Lower World, is the sphere of the formulation of the archetypal idea, the sphere where consciousness apprehends an abstract idea and concretes it. When the abstract principle that forms the root of some new activity is formulating in our minds, we are operating in the sphere of Chesed. All the creative work of the world is done by minds working in terms of Chesed.

It is to the sphere of Chesed that the exalted consciousness of the adept rises in his occult meditations; it is here that he receives the inspirations which he works out on the planes of form. It is here that he meets the Masters as spiritual influences contacted telepathically, without any intermingling of personality. This is the true, and the highest, mode of contact with the Masters, contact with them as mind to mind in their own sphere of exalted consciousness.

As we have seen, then, Chesed or Mercy is called "first day" which signifies beginning or initiative activity. The Zohar gives it the name El Gadol, meaning "the great", and Right, which assigns it to the right-hand or positive pillar. This pillar is most often called the Pillar of Mercy because of the influence of Chesed. Let us note that Chesed is the first of the Sephiroth to express a double aspect. Our Martinist description of it is that it includes whatever is active. Whatever is active may be active constructively or destructively; that is, in a manner which integrates more closely, or, separates more widely. We may even say that Chesed — and the remaining Sephiroth as well — have a high side and a low side. For example Chesed represents love --- but there is a kind of love that is very near to hatred.

* * *

Discuss the DUAL ASPECT of the Chesed Force. (Remind the brethren that the Sephiroth are levels or depths of consciousness. The Love of Chesed has to do with altruistic Love, benevolent Love, compassionate Love, - the kind of Love which the Martinist wishes to cultivate. Love of Mankind. Brotherly Love. The kind of Love expressed by Jesus. This is not sensual love, or physical love. Sensual love/physical love/emotional love is the love associated with Sephirah No. 7 (Netzach, the Sphere of Venus) - which is Chesed on a lower arc. - - - As it was said in the discourse, there is a kind of love that is very near to hatred. Discuss this.

The following information is to be 'charted' by the brethren on their Tree of Life diagram:-

The Magical Image is a mighty crowned king sitting on a throne.

This Sphere is assigned to Jupiter. (In esoteric astrology, Jupiter is called the Greater Fortune).

The pair of opposites: Wealth/Poverty.

The vices are: Bigotry, Hypocricy, Gluttony, Tyranny.
The virtue: Obedience.

con'd

con'd

The symbols are: The four-sided pyramid (three sides and a bottom);
a rulers Orb: i.e., a sphere surmounted by an equal-armed cross;
a shepherd's crook; and an equal-armed cross.

This is the invocation we will use to help us reach the condition of Chesed:

"O thou Great One whose name is mighty and whose nature is just, rule in me that I may show forth Thy mercy."

The symbols for our meditation will be:

A four-sided pyramid (three sides and a bottom):

a ruler's Orb:

DISPLAY THE SYMBOLS.

HOW ARE THE BRETHREN GETTING ALONG WITH THEIR MEDITATIONS?
DOES EVERYONE HAVE THE PROCEDURE?
ARE THEY RECORDING THEIR EXPERIENCES? THIS IS ESSENTIAL.

NOTIFY THE BRETHREN ABOUT THIS:
MANY TIMES THE QUESTION HAS BEEN ASKED - "WHY DO WE HAVE TO MEMORIZE THE ASSOCIATE'S APPRAISAL AND THE MYSTICS MONITOR?" NO ANSWER REGARDING THE REASON HAS AS YET BEEN GIVEN. YET THERE MUST BE A REASON. AND THEY WILL SOON FIND OUT.

Question the brethren on Mystic's Monitor 11 - 15.

HOMEWORK: BE READY TO ANSWER QUESTIONS ON "NOTES 7 - 8 & 9".

HAND OUT: NOTES "SIXTEEN".

THE ALTERNATE NAME OF CHESED IS GEDULAH.

CHESED IS THE FIRST SEPHIROTH IN THE IETZIRATIC OR ASTRAL WORLD.
THESE SEVEN LOWER SEPHIROTH 4 - 10 HAVE ASSIGNED TO THEM ONE PAIR OF THE SEVEN HEBREW DOUBLE-LETTERS. SEE IF THE POSITIVE & NEGATIVE ASPECT OF THE SEPHIRAH CAN BE REVEALED IN THE DOUBLE-LETTER.

con'd

The Astral Body is sometimes called the Desire Body or Body of Light. Its component elements are mind-stuff. Its form is what you make it, - - consciously or unconsciously. In other words, your desire body can be anything you desire. The only limitation is your talent for shaping the astral forces. Should this talent be lacking it will tend to build itself in conformity with your inner nature. Frequently the results are startling, - - often they are far from flattering!!

For the average person, the astral body is used only on the astral plane. But the trained occultist can use it on the physical as well. The nature of the astral body does not change, rather it is "superimposed" on the physical world. This technique, however, is difficult.

Above the astral plane is the mental plane. It is the Plane of Forces and has no form or forms at all. The entire mental plane is all colour, which are the vibrations themselves. There is a type of operation in which a person can enter the mental plane with matter "brought up" from below, but this is advanced work. The Higher Mind is Tiphareth on the Tree. The Mundane Chakra of Tiphareth is Shemesh, the Sun. In the microcosm it is the Anahata Chakra located at the spinal center at the region of the heart, the cardiac ganglion. In Tarot: The Sun. Assignations of the Chakras to the Tree are as follows: The Anahata Chakra is at Tiphareth. The Ajna Chakra (Pineal Gland); the Visuddha (at juncture of spinal column and medula oblongata); and throat center, thyroid gland; -are all associated with the Sephirah Daath.

You know your physical body. You can become aware of your etheric body quite easily, but you cannot become aware of your astral body in a material way. Regarding the Mental Body and the one above it, the Causal Body, not too much can be said about them. Some occultists say the Mental Body is not yet well enough organized (at this stage of man's evolution) to be called a "body" and should be more properly described as a "sheath".

While we are living, moving, existing on the physical plane, we live and move in all our bodies but our consciousness is centered in the physical and so much so that most people do not even know that there are other "parts" of themselves. Each night when we "go to sleep" our consciousness "shifts" from its physical seat into one of our other "bodies". (Did consciousness not shift we could'nt "sleep".) Nor is the average person aware of their nightly "projections" during sleep. In order to remember it is only necessary to begin to use the faculties which, for most people, have been left sleeping and undeveloped almost all their lives. It is simply a matter of training.

As already said "astral projection" is a blanket term used to cover an experience that is not altogether physical...but an etheric projection and an astral projection when the terms are correctly used are two different things. An Etheric Projection is not an astral projection and an Astral Projection is not an Etheric Projection.

Let us pause here long enough to note that when we speak about "higher" or "inner" ... or "lower" or "outer" planes, that these are not arranged one above the other like shelves on a bookcase, or one inside the other like the layers of an onion. Like radio waves, - long waves, and short waves, and medium waves, etc... they are all in the same "place" it is a matter of "vibration" or "frequency". And so when we "project" it is not so much a matter of "travelling" as it is of "tuning in". Remember for us on the physical plane, we are affected with the "problem" of Time, Space and Motion, - but on the "higher" or "inner" planes time and distance does not have the same status. (NOTE: The Physical and Etheric bodies are physical plane vehicles, - you cannot "travel" to the "higher planes" in the Etheric Body or the Physical Body.)

For those interested, the best book of instruction that we know of is: Leaving the Body by D. Scott Rogo. Mr Rogo is a psychologist on the graduate faculty of John F. Kennedy University, Orinda, California. This book is written from the perspective of a scientist. More details at the end of the following page. *

con'd

Continuing with the chakras: The fifth chakra (from the bottom) is the Visudda, located at the juncture of the spinal column and the medula oblongata, (nape of neck). This chakra is associated with the etheric body. - DAATH on the Tree.

The sixth chakra is called by the Tantrikas: Ajna. It is located between the eyebrows. It is the pineal gland or conarium. In Tarot: the Mercury center. Visuddha and Ajna are located on the Middle Pillar of the Tree at Daath, which is the equilibration of Chokmah and Binah. Located on the Tree at the intersection of Paths 13 & 14. (The Throat Center is located on the Tree at the intersection of 13 & 19). The seventh is the Sahasrara Chakra located 4 finger-breadths above the crown of the head. Corresponding with the Pituitary gland, it is the Moon Center in Tarot and Kether on the Tree of Life.

Now let us gather together what we have learned up to this point. The same ideas have been looked at from different positions. One of the reasons why we are incarnated on the physical plane is so that we may learn to conquor matter. The end results on the physical plane have their origins, beginning and causes on the inner or higher planes. By learning how to penetrate and work on the inner/higher planes it is possible to study the causes of coming events. And more than this: It is possible to stop or divert something that is coming. It is possible to create in the inner worlds what we want to become manifest on the outer. Stop here and consider what you have just read.

THE OUTER, PHYSICAL PLANE IS THE RESULT OF INNER PLANE ACTIVITY.
YOU CANNOT BE SUCCESSFUL IN HANDLING THE OUTER PLANE, OR THE LOWER PLANE IF YOU PREFER THAT WORD, UNTIL YOU BEGIN TO MASTER THE INNER PLANES (OR HIGHER PLANES), THE REASON BEING: THAT EACH LOWER PLANE IS NEGATIVE TO THE PLANE ABOVE IT.

THE ONLY WAY TO INFLUENCE THE PLANE BELOW IS TO WORK ON IT FROM THE PLANE ABOVE.

Learning to control the emotional (astral) body is of the greatest importance, for it is more the emotions and feelings, than the mind, that makes trouble for us in this life.

Let us stop here now and assimilate what we have learned so far.
For meditation: (a) The Kingdom of Heaven is within. (b) Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness and all the things you wish for shall be added unto you.

*** * *** * *** * *** * *** * *** * ***

LEAVING THE BODY by D. Scott Rogo. ISBN 0 - 13 - 528026 - 5. From Prentice-Hall, Inc., Englewood Cliffs, New Jersey 07632, U.S.A.. Price $6.95.

Leaving the Body, A Complete Guide to Astral Projection. A step-by-step presentation of eight different systems of out-of-body travel. Chapters include: The Out of the Body Potential; Projection through Progressive Muscular Relaxation; Projection through Visualization; Projection through Dream Control; The Monroe Techniques; Of What Use is Astral Projection? etc. etc...

"Astral Projection, the ability to "leave the body" at will, is a phenomenon that has long facinated both the scientific world and the general public. In plain, straightforward language, this realistic guide explains the techniques and potential applications of astral projection. How do the techniques for out-of-body travel compare and contrast? Does one particular method work better than any other? How can you best use this skill for your own self-enrichment? Leaving the Body is a book that will certainly change your thinking, and it may even change your life."

"...there are two modes of knowing: through argument and experience. Argument brings conclusions but does not cause certainty nor remove doubts in order that the mind may remain at rest in truth, this is provided only by experience. A typical consequence of an out-of-body experience is: "I no longer BELIEVE that I have a soul, or that some part of me will survive death, I KNOW IT."

IN MODERN LANGUAGE IS CALLED THE SUBCONSCIOUS MIND. DO NOT LOOSE SIGHT OF THIS!

SUPERIOR DEGREE CONVENTICLE 28

Greetings O Unknown and Silent Ones! HAVE READY: NOTES "SEVENTEEN"

Most of us are not aware that our reactions to persons, things, and happenings are the result not only of objective decision but also of subjective judgement. In fact, it many times happens that our subjective self influences almost completely our objective attitude. For instance: we attend a debate where we are asked to preside as one of the judges. The subject is one in which we find ourselves immediatoly in sympathy with the affirmative proposition. We know personally only one of the debaters, and he is a person whose opinions in the past have been such as to cause us to disagree violently. We note, however, that he is speaking for the affirmative in the debate. We listen perhaps more carefully to his argumants and rebuttal than we do to the others. We agree this time with his arguments: They are, after all, on the side which we normally favour; - - - yet we decide against the affirmative. Why?

Mainly because our past experience, hidden away within us and which we have told ourselves we have already forgotten, rises up strongly enough in our consciousness to force us to find the argumants on the negative side sounder and better sustained. If, however, we had made an effort to be impartial and absolutely fair and had given our decision on the affirmative side and so favoured the individual of whom we disapproved, the fact of subjective judgement would still have to be conceded. Nor would it be at all necessary for us to be aware of the fact that a past experience was exerting pressure on a present one. So far as most of us are concerned, the influence is wholly unconscious and undetected --- so much so that we would sincerely deny it if it were suggested.

This is only one example of how our unconscious functions and how its contents are added to. We forget many things too trivial and burdensome to be remembered; but we also forget many others because, for one reason or another, it is painful or humiliating to remember them. Just because we push them out of our sight, however, does not mean that they are destroyed. In the subconscious, they gather force and have more influence than before. They put on many disguises and contribute to many puzzling sequences in our dreams. We might call these personal or individual elements in the unconscious, and since they lie nearest the surface or closed to our conscious existence, it is to be expected that they would be the elements to show themselves first and most often in our dreams.

For that reason, too, we should expect such kind of dreaming to be the first result of our recent meditations, especially if in the past we have paid no attention to dreams or have thought that we never dreamed because we could never remember them. Those Brethren amongst us who have taken the lead given in the earlier degrees and have been practising the exercises will be better prepared. We must record our dreams and attempt to find meaning in them even though they may many times seem too inconsequential to bother with and very far removed, indeed, from the kind of true dreaming through which knowledge of the higher worlds may come. We shall find that, with care and patience, we can restore to its former useful functioning this important unconscious side of our psyche; and when that has been achieved, we shall find the door to the inner worlds opening. In the meantime, we shall be learning the technique of working with reports from the unconscious. This, in itself, we shall prove to have a tremendous value in bringing about the proper balance between the two halves of our whole selves. This will show itself by our seeing in our recorded dreams a certain pattern taking shape. It will possibly be more like a theme or thread of melody that is variously dealt with as in a sonata, let us say, where the theme is inverted, transposed, played in different keys until it swells to a climax or resolves into unmistakeable simplicity.

con'd

con'd

Suddenly, somewhere in the process, we shall discover meaning and say: "Oh, now I see what that means," or "So that is what I should do". We shall come to know too, that through dreams the side of any particular matter that is being neglected or forgotten will be brought back again and again in a variety of ways just so that we shall have knowledge of it to aid us in our decision. We must never forget this function of the unconscious: to fulfill, complement, make complete the functioning of the conscious faculties.

Perhaps the following example will make clear both the process and value of dreams in the realm of the personal. This is the experience of a young woman who kept dreaming of childhood scenes. She was not too happy, for she had been forced to live with her parents again after unsuccessfully trying to be independent by earning her own living. She continually dreamed, as was said, of her childhood. Once, she stood on a little strip of rocky beach that she had especially loved. It seemed necessary for her to go somewhere on the water; but the waves were high and threatening. Many little boats were on the water tossing about, some being over-turned and sinking. As she watched, fearful and afraid to venture on the water, she noticed a curious little craft that was pink in colour. It was bobbing up and down but did not sink, and a voice told her that it was the only boat that would carry her safely and that she need not be afraid to trust herself to it. As she continued to watch the tiny pink craft, it became more and more familiar until she recognised it as a little pink mug for toothbrushes.

Such a dream possibly seems without meaning; yet it held a very important message and lesson for the person concerned. It is easily seen, perhaps, that the setting and atmosphere is an expression of the young woman's feeling of security on the shore near her childhood home and a fear of venturing away from that security on the heaving sea. But what of the ridiculous little pink toothbrush mug which seemed so foreign to the other elements of the dream? And what of the advice that she could trust it to carry her safely? That little mug held the answer. It was the only thing that she had in her room which she had bought with her own money. Money is a symbol of energy, ability, talent; and all this was bound up in the image of the little pink mug. The voice in the dream, which was her own unconscious self, was helping her solve her problem. In effect, its advice was: "Your own talents, ability, capital do seem small, but never fear, bravely make use of them and you will find them to be sufficient." In our next discourse, a further clue to our own personal unconscious and how to give heed to it will be set forth.

— * * * * * * * —

Are our reactions to persons, things and happenings the result only of our objective decisions? NO - - THEY ARE ALSO THE RESULT OF SUBJECTIVE JUDGEMENT.

Why is it that we forget many things? WE FORGET TRIVIALITIES WHICH WOULD BE TOO TROUBLESOME TO REMEMBER CONSTANTLY --- BUT WE ALSO FORGET MANY OTHER THINGS WHICH ARE PAINFUL OR HUMILIATING TO REMEMBER.

What happens with these things we forget? THEY PASS INTO OUR UNCONSCIOUS. THESE SUBMERGED ELEMENTS REAPPEAR IN OUR DREAMS AND OFTEN ASSUME UNRECOGNIZABLE APPEARANCES.

What are the materials of dreams drawn from? THE MATERIALS OF DREAMS ARE DRAWN FROM ELEMENTS WHICH THE CONSCIOUS MAY HAVE FORGOTTEN BUT WHICH MAY HAVE A PART TO PLAY IN OUR DECISIONS. THESE ELEMENTS RECUR CONSTANTLY IN MANY GUISES IN THE HOPE THAT THE CONSCIOUS SELF WILL SOMETIME RECOGNISE AND ACCEPT THEM.

What is the first step that must be taken in order to study our dreams? RECORD THEM.

Give an example of one of the useful aspects of our unconscious. TO FULFILL, COMPLEMENT, AND MAKE COMPLETE THE FUNCTIONING OF THE CONSCIOUS FACULTIES.

Quite apart from harmonizing our personality, what other value does the restoration of the proper functioning of our unconsciousness have? IT OPENS THE DOOR TO THE HIGHER WORLDS SO THAT KNOWLEDGE FROM THAT LEVEL MAY BE OBTAINED.

con'd

con'd

Our teachers in Martinism say the fifth leaf of the "Book of Man" treats of idolatry and putrefaction. These are intriguing characteristics and indicate the importance of this leaf, which is symbolised by the Qabalistic Sephirah Geburah (Gay-Boo'-rah), Force. As we may see, the study of this page demonstrates the law of duality in all phases of creation, -- even in terms or words, which may signify the negative or positive (i.e. what is false in comparison with what is real). If we consider the word idolatry we may see two aspects: the negative phase which means passion, passionate love for something false, without value, an inconsiderate love; and the positive phase which represents a sentiment of sincere veneration, true, towards something of a known value.

Putrefaction in its negative phase means all that is rotten, stinking, repulsive. In its positive phase it signifies the process of destruction or decomposition of elements in order to obtain a new element of value, or so the elements can be put together again to build or rebuild a better form.

We learned last week that Chesed represents First Day and is associated with the Pillar of Mercy; so now we find Geburah called Second Day and associated with the Pillar of Severity where it is located in the center. The Planet associated with Geburah is Mars with all the fire and turbulence connected with it. The colour is Red. It is the sphere of punishment and rigour. Titles given to Geburah are Din (Justice) and Pachad (Paw'-khod) (fear). Vehement strength is associated with this sphere. It is the symbol of death. The magical weapons are the scourge, the sword and the spear. All breaks in Universal Law are corrected in Geburah, - it is the center of Karma. Iron is the metal associated with it.

In the Ietziratic Text it is said that Geburah unites itself to Binah. When we recall that in astrology Saturn, the planet assigned to Binah; and Mars, the planet assigned to Geburah, are called the Greater and Lesser Infortunes, we see that there must be more than a superficial connection between the two. Binah is called the bringer-in of death because it is the giver of form to primordial force, thus rendering it static; Geburah is called the Destroyer because the fiery Mars-force breaks down forms and destroys them. Thus we see that Binah is perpetually binding force into form and Geburah perpetually breaking up and destroying all forms with its disruptive energy.

Whenever there is anything that has outlived its usefulness, Geburah must wield the pruning-knife; wherever there is selfishness, it must find itself impaled on the spear-point of Geburah; wherever there is violence against the weak, or the merciless use of strength, it is the sword of Geburah that is the most effectual counteractant; wherever there is sloth and dishonesty, Geburah's sacred scourge is needed; where there is a removal of the landmarks set for our neighbour's protection, it is the chain of Geburah that must restrain. These things are as necessary to the health of the society and of the individual --- as brotherly love. Someone has got to cry "Halt" to the aggressor and "Move on" to those who are blocking the way, --- and that someone is functioning as a priest in the sphere of the Holy Fifth Sephirah.

With these aspects of Geburah understood, we can see that the spheres of Geburah and Chesed balance each other:
Chesed balances with Mercy the Severity of Geburah.
Chesed is anabolic or upbuilding in contra-distinction to Geburah which is down-breaking and katabolic.
Chesed is the left hand that holds the Orb, Geburah is the right hand that holds the sword.

con't

con't

Chesed is the King, seated on his throne, holding sceptre and orb, ruling and guiding his people, he is a lawgiver in a time of peace. Geburah is the King dressed as a mighty warrior in his chariot, crowned and armed, fighting for his people in a time of war, ensuring that justice is done. Chesed, the king on his throne, the father of his people in times of peace, may win our love; but it is Geburah, the king in his chariot going forth to war, who commands our respect.

We need Geburah's realism to balance Chesed's idealism quite as much as we need to temper justice with mercy. Experience in the handling of children soon teaches us that when we spare the rod, we spoil the child. Attention needs to be emphasized in the part played by the sentiment of respect --- in the emotion of love. We have a love for the person who is kind, forgiving and compassionate. -- There is also a love for the person who can put the fear of God into us, should occasion arise. Although of quite a different quality, it is far more steadfast and permanent, and, curiously enough, far more emotionally satisfying than the love in which no tinge of awe is mingled. It is Geburah that supplies the element of awe, of the fear of the Lord which is the beginning of wisdom, and of a general wholesome respect which helps us to keep to the straight and narrow way and calls forth our better nature — because we know our sins will find us out.

The initiate of Geburah is a very dynamic and forceful person, but he is also a very controlled person. His characteristic virtues are an even temper and patience under provocation. It is well know on the sports field — which is the play aspect of the god of War, that a loss of temper gives the game away. Every boxer knows that if he gets angry and starts fighting instead of boxing, the odds are against him. The initiate of Geburah fights without malice; he spares the weak and wounded; he does not set out to destroy the law but to see to it that it is properly fulfilled. He is the corrector of the balance, and as such is always the defender of the weak and oppressed. When a soul is at that stage of development when the only way it can learn is by experience, Geburah sees that it shall not be disappointed when it goes about looking for trouble. Geburah is thus the Great Initiator of the swollen-headed!

Geburah and Chesed must work together; never the one without the other. We must adore the God of Battles as well as the God of Love in order that the combative element in the universe may not break from its allegiance to the one God, I Am That I Am. (= Eheieh = Kether). The sword must not be cursed as an instrument of evil, but blessed and dedicated in order that it may never be unsheathed in an unrighteous cause. It must not be cast aside in an impracticable pacifism, but placed at God's service --- so that when the command goes forth that the evil thing shall not be suffered any longer, the mighty Khamael, Archangel of Geburah, may lead the Seraphim into battle, not in destructive rage, but temperately and impersonally in God's service in order that evil may be cleared up and good prevail.

(NOTE TO M.H.M.:) REMEMBER: SEPHIROTH 1 - 2 & 3 ARE IN THE "UPPER WORLD" AND INDEED SOME TAKE THESE THREE TOGETHER AND REFER TO IT/THEM AS "DEITY". CREATION BEGINS AT SEP. 4 WHICH IS 1ST DAY. TONIGHT WE ARE AT SEP. 5 CALLED 2ND DAY. IT IS ESSENTIAL TO POINT OUT THAT THE TWO OUTSIDE COLUMNS OF THE TREE REPRESENT UNBALANCED FORCES AND THEY MUST BE BALANCED OR ELSE WE ARE OUT OF HARMONY AND IN TROUBLE. WE SAW THAT CHESED WAS ALTRUISTIC LOVE AND MERCY. WE FIND TONIGHT THAT GEBURAH IS JUDGEMENT, SEVERITY, PUNISHMENT. TO EXHIBIT NOTHING BUT LOVE AND MERCY AND HAVE NO JUDGEMENT AND PUNISHMENT WOULD MAKE ONE A NAMBLY-PAMLY MOLLY-CODDLER, I.E. A SISSY. ON THE OTHER HAND IF ONE WAS ALL JUDGEMENT AND SEVERITY AND SHOWED NO MERCY OR COMPASSION, ONE WOULD BE A TYRANT AND A CRUEL DESPOT. SO WE SEE HERE THAT "JUSTICE MUST BE TEMPERED WITH MERCY" I.E. THE TWO EXTREMES MUST BE RECONCILED - - RESULTING IN THE THIRD TERM - WHICH WOULD BE BEAUTY, TIPHARETH, SEPHIRAH 6, WHICH WILL BE OUR STUDY NEXT WEEK.

con'd

con'd

(1) Discuss the DUAL ASPECT of the Geburah Force.

(2) Discuss how Chesed and Geburah must be balanced. (In the raising of children you hear about "spare the rod and spoil the child" - meaning that if you are too merciful and don't correct the child it will be spoilt.) Also Chesed is the building-up force in the Universe, Geburah is the breaking-down force. Both are necessary for the progress and evolution of the individual/universe.....if our baby body did not "break down" we could not become a man or a woman.....if the chick does'nt break open the egg-shell it could'nt grow and develop. Ofentimes the breaking down force seems "evil" when it is not understood. Discuss this.

The following is to be charted:

The Magical Image of Geburah is a mighty warrior in his chariot.

This Sphere is assigned to Mars. (Everyone should know what Mars stands for in Astrology.) (War and rash action).

The pair of opposites: Beauty/Ugliness.

The virtues are: Energy & Courage.
The vices are: Cruelty & Destruction.

The Qabalists called it: Elohim Gebor.

The symbols are: the scourge, the spear, and the sword.

The force of Geburah is great and in all likelihood our experiences with it will be such as to give us a definite impression of it. Do not be timid or bashful to face it. It is indeed essential that we contact this vortex early, for thus our tendency toward mental or even physical crystallization will be broken up. --- Our complacency may be jarred, but it will be a healthy experience.

The invocation will be: "O thou Most Holy, may we pass through thy purging and be clean."

DISPLAY ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE SYMBOLS: the scourge the spear
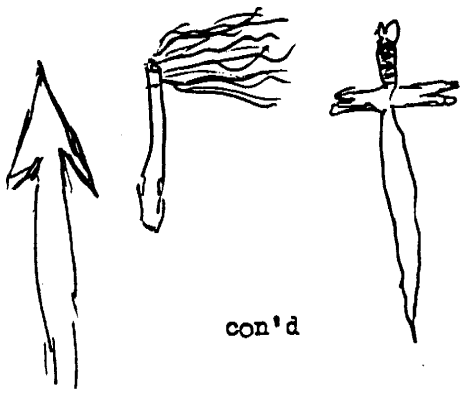
the sword

Either of the three may be used.



con'd

Questions on Notes 7, 8 & 9

Notes Seven

How many Realms are there? (Four)

Name them. (Atziluth, the Archetypal Realm; Briah, the Creative Realm; IETZIRAH, the Formative Realm; Assiah, the Material World.)

Notes Eight & Nine

What is special about a symbol? (In highly abstract regions the mind can use nothing but symbols. They have the power to convey realizations when the meanings of words become exhausted. They are the seeds of thoughts - and they are the working tools of the mystic!)

What is the Primal Cause of all? (The Ain).

Why is the Ain called the No-thing? (Because it is so remote that nothing can be said about it)(It is beyond and outside the range and concept of the human mind.)

In which Realm does duality begin? (In Briah).

In which Realm do we find the Names of God? (In Atziluth).

In which Realm do we find the Angels? (In Ietzirah, the Formative Realm).

In which Realm are the Archangels? (In Briah).

In which Realm are the elements? (Assiah).

At which point on the Tree does involution end and evolution begin? (No. 10).

What is the name of the Middle Pillar? (The Pillar of Equilibrium).

For homework: Prepare to answer questions on Mystic's Monitor 16 - 20.

HAND OUT : NOTES "SEVENTEEN"

con'd

(Remember that each Sephirah denotes a level of consciousness. Each level of consciousness exists within you.* The study of the Tree of Life is a study of Man. The purpose of our present studies and practices are to enable each person to "tune in" to the levels of consciousness which exist within all people).

* a "level" in your subconscious mind.

T I P H A R E T H

Tiphareth is sometimes called the Place of Incarnation, which is a singularly apropos appellation. The normal human, upon raising his consciousness to the next level above those of mundane life, - - is said to be reborn. It is his second birth; the Adam-man has died; the Christ-man is born. Having rent the Veil of the Temple, the spiritual aspirant has taken the first, and most difficult step towards liberation.

One of the magical images of Tiphareth is the Child. It is the lowest point reached by the incarnated God, and having come into birth in Tiphareth, the Son of God becomes a link between human and Divine. The child is the true son of Binah, Mary, Marah, the Great Sea; but it is the precipitation of that Sephirah through its lower level emanation - Geburah - the Giver of Death. The Son of God is thus born to die, as are all living beings, but his death is ordained and dedicated to a special purpose. While still in this life, he strives to bring his kingdom up out of worldliness and carry it across the Abyss that separates mankind from illumination; he labours to "redeem" humanity, to free it from bondage, to liberate it. He is truly the Redeemer, and in the end, his life is sacrificed, loosing great forces to restore the equilibrium between the elements of the Tree.

Therefore, the second magical image of Tiphareth is the Sacrificed God, and it is this image that has become the focal point of all observances in the Christian churches. It is difficult, if not impossible, to find a church of any Christian sect that does not somewhere feature a Cross, which is not only a Christian symbol, but also one of the symbols of Tiphareth.

What Christians have not considered is the third image of Tiphareth: a majestic King, which brings us straight back to Kether, the Crown. The close tie between the Son and Kether, through Chokmah and Binah, "Our Father (and our Mother) which art in Heaven," has been ignored. Only the link between the Son and Chesed, "Our Merciful Father" is observed. Thus, Christianity has lost its mystic way, and except in a few instances, (Saints Augustine, Francis, Bernard, and Meister Eckhart - - and others - -), there is not, and has not been for some centuries, any visible mystical teaching and practice. The Church, by concentrating upon the image of Christ as the Child and the Sacrificed Redeemer, to the exclusion of the Majestic King, - - has performed an even greater sacrifice - - that of relinquishing the true salvation and liberation of its people.

Meanwhile, the Son stands patiently in Tiphareth, ready to lead all who come to him - - to the illumination of Kether. The road to Kether passes through Tiphareth, which is the meaning of Jesus' words: "No man cometh unto the Father, but by me". This is written in the 14th chapter of the Gospel of Saint-John, who must certainly have been a Qabalist, for he has also said in the 10th chapter: "I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved." In further support of the probability that John was a Qabalist, one might recall the statement, virtually meaningless under any other interpretation, also from chapter 14: "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you." Is not the Otz Chiim, the Tree of Life, "my Father's House?" And are not the "many mansions" the Sephiroth?

over

con'd

The text in the Sepher Ietzirah says of Tiphareth: "The Sixth Path is called the Reconciling Intelligence, because the inundation of the precipitations are multiplied within it, for it emits its influence as a stream to fill the reservoirs of the blessings by which they are united one to another." The question immediately arises: "Why is the Sixth Path called the Reconciling Intelligence?" The answer is simple once we look at the Tree: It is the only Sephirah to which every Path leads directly. It is in immediate contact with every one of the other Sephiroth, and thus it imparts to the four lower Sephiroth some of its own essence, as well as the essence of each of the higher Sephiroth. Tiphareth is also in the center of the surrounding five Sephiroth which, with it, have collectively been called Adam Kadmon. Receiving the "inundation of the precipitations" from the more etheral Sephiroth, it "fills the reservoirs of the blessings" of those below it, uniting and reconciling them.

Tiphareth is the only Sephirah to have assigned to it two Spiritual Experiences: the Vision of the Harmony of Things, and the Mysteries of the Sacrificed God. Although seemingly unrelated, they are consonant to a large degree and singularly appropriate to the realm of the Son. The second of these has already been discussed in the context of the magical image of the Child and requires no further elucidation here. And in view of what has been said just above in the Ietziratic text, we should have no difficulty in understanding that upon entering into the vision of the Son, one would become fully aware of the harmony of all things, material as well as spiritual. This Universe is one, - for there is no other. God not only reigns in His world - - He has become His world. If we do not come to understand this, we have not comprehended what is meant by the precipitation of the creative forces through Kether into each of the succeeding Sephiroth. That which finally flows into the most material section of the Tree of Life is the same as that which first entered the Tree from the Ain Soph Aur through Kether.

The Hindu sage says: "Aham Brahmasi" - - "I am Brahman". Does this seem a shocking piece of egocentricity to the person raised under the Christian ethic, or the Jewish ethic, for that matter? Does he really mean to say that he is God? Yes, of course he means it. What else could he be? What else is there for anyone to be? If you are something else than God, you do not exist at all, for God is all existence. There is only existence and non-existence, the latter being only a figure of speech since nothing can not-exist. Would you be willing to say: "I am not God?" To say this is the only real blasphemy, for you are denying both God and yourself, and it would be absurd to deny your own existence.

If you exist, God exists; if God exists, you exist.

How can it be otherwise ?

TO ALL MARTINISTS WHO HAVE REACHED THIS PLATEAU OF THE I.C.E.S. CURRICULUM

Greetings in the Light of Martinism!

We are willing to share with you certain material which will be of value and interest. Since this is private & confidential material for Martinists only, before we can send it, we will require that you prove yourself to be a Martinist. This means you must send a photocopy of your S:: I:: Certificate of Initiation with your order. We will return your photocopy with your order. Please do not order any of the following material unless you can verify your status. Photocopy this page, cut off and use the order form.

---------- cut off here ----------

MARTINIST ORDER OF THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE
C/o P. O. Box 31W, Worthing, Barbados, West Indies.

Dear Brothers!

Thank you for sharing! I enclose payment and a copy of my S:: I:: certificate to verify my Martinist affiliation. Please send the following material by Air Mail. I have placed a check mark (✓) against the numbers I wish at this time:

	U. S. Currency
FIRST DEGREE DOSSIER (Marrakech Convention)	$10.00
SECOND DEGREE DOSSIER	$25.00
THIRD DEGREE DOSSIER	$25.00

(The above are lectures/teachings for Associates, Mystics and S:: I::)

THEURGY (Essential requirements and rituals)	$8.00
SPRING CEREMONY	$8.00
SUMMER CEREMONY	$8.00
FALL CEREMONY	$8.00
ADMINISTRATIVE FOLIO	$8.00

(Procedures for operating the Lodge ratified by the Grandmasters at Marrakech, Morocco, May 16, 1988).

Name & full mailing address (print clearly please)

Amount enclosed $

Notice: the Dossiers are heavy. Prices include Air Mail to North America and Europe. For orders to far countries (Australia, etc.) you will have to include an additional $5.00 per item.

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 90-100

LIBER[#] 93

Personal & Confidential TENTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

SUPERIOR DEGREE

CONVENTICLE 29

Greetings O Unknown and Silent Ones ! HAVE READY: NOTES "EIGHTEEN"

It is immediately evident that anything that can be accomplished with one half of one's faculties can be much more easily accomplished by using all of those faculties. In spite of the truth of this simple fact, education encourages man to depend altogether upon his conscious resources. Every effort, it would seem, is made to have him deny, neglect, and forget that part of himself called the unconscious.

Our Martinist teachers tell us that it is this short-sighted attempt to confine man within the limits of his objective consciousness which has kept man wandering in exile for so long. It is this situation, too, which our Order is striving so hard to correct. Man's imprisonment and exile begin to lose their effect once he begins to realize that in the subconscious part of himself lies the key to his escape. It might be said therefore, that one of the prime objectives in this degree is to become acquainted and know ourselves through the process of self-study as was advocated earlier, and by the techniques which are being given at this point in the Works. When we are able to perceive and comprehend ourselves and know both the conscious and sentient part of ourselves, as well as the unknown and unconscious aspects, we will then be better equipped to meet the obligations and responsibilities of Agents of Omneity. For this, both the conscious and unconscious faculties of our beings must function harmoniously as a whole.

Because of its knowledge of the unconscious and the manner in which it functions, our Order has emphasized the value of dreams in supplying knowledge of the higher worlds. Another equally valuable aspect of dreams has been kept in mind as well. This is the ability of dreams to help us individually in integrating our knowledge of ourselves so that we may become aware of our past mistakes and present immaturities and have the means to correct them.

It is for that reason that we have been asked to form the habit of recording our dreams. This for most may seem both unimportant and unneccessary, for having been taught to regard dreams as being due to physiological causes and with no sensible bearing upon our daily affairs, we have considered that those who pretended to find meaning in them were either overly superstitious or exceedingly gullible. No doubt, such is many times the case, for without the explanations given to initiates, dreams can easily become subjects of superstitious interpretation and lead man away from truth rather than toward it. They can also be interpreted by the unscrupulous so as to make the naive and inexperienced dreamer fearful, assigning more importance to them than they should have and at the same time transforming the intent of every dream into something impossible or fantastic. This is little better than being dependent upon fortunetellers or mediums to direct our lives.

OUR ORDER DOES NOT ENCOURAGE SUCH DEPENDENCE ON OTHERS. It shows us the technique of right dependence upon ourselves and gives us the explanations necessary for making the proper approach to our unconscious, instructing us carefully in our analysis of its reports. The first essential, however, is that WE FORM THE HABIT OF RECORDING OUR DREAMS. This is not always easy, for unless we do it immediately upon awakening from the dream, important elements slip away and are lost. It is necessary then, that we keep a notebook and pencil nearby, and perhaps a flashlight, so that a dream occuring in the middle of the night will not escape us. The second step is to review the dream before returning to sleep and to read through carefully the next morning what we have written during the night. If additional details occur to us which we may have forgotten to record, we should add them as footnotes. Then it may be possible to group the elements of a dream so that the unusual, significant, or puzzling parts may be separated.

con't

con'd

Since we know that dreams are intended to supply forgotten, hidden, or neglected aspects of things, we should accept any particular dream as the comment of our unconscious on some subject that once represented a wish, a fear, or a problem in the conscious realm. Therefore, if we have retired with a mind filled with perplexity or troubled by an unfulfilled wish or a problem unsolved, we might first test the dream for a possible relationship to that problem, wish or perplexity. Sometimes, the relationship is evident at once although the situation in the dream seems reversed and even the setting and characters are changed. If, however, the problem in our mind is in any way related to others with which we have been faced or grows out of a characteristic attitude toward life which needs correcting, it is likely that the dream will contain many elements that seem altogether without meaning or possibly of application to the present situation.

Suppose, for instance, that you dreamed that you walked into a store and asked to buy a typewriter ribbon but the salesman subtly changed into a judge and began to lecture you as though you were in a court and an attempt were being made to prove you guilty of some offense. Suppose the salesman-judge said to you: "Your offense is great and you will be confined to the jail at New York." As the officer leads you away, he smiles at you. You recognize him as an old friend, whose name is familiar. Then you wake.

Let us say that you have been faced for some time with a problem of getting a particular kind of information. It may be of a mechanical nature and your own experience and experiments have not helped. You were not thinking specifically of this problem when you went to sleep, but it was prominent in your consciousness. Perhaps in the office that day you passed a stenographer's desk while she was putting on a new ribbon in her machine. Your first thought is to dismiss the dream as being merely a garbled joining of the day's activity. Then you recall the courtroom part of it, your being sentenced to New York and the fact of the friendly jailer. In thinking over this, you probably wonder why you were to be jailed in New York: Then you remember that your friend who appeared in the dream as the jailer lives in New York. You have not thought about him in a long time; but now the thought strikes you suddenly that he is the very one to give you the information you must have.

The dream which before seemed curiously silly now has meaning. The typewriter ribbon which in your dream you are trying to buy represents the information you want. You are arrested and told you have committed an offense. (You had to be arrested, or stopped, because you were trying to solve the problem incorrectly). Finally, you are sentenced to New York and find your jailer to be your friend because he is the one who can help you with your problem and he lives in New York. In other words, your unconscious faculties have dramatized your situation out of striking oddments available to them to call your attention to elements which your conscious mind has forgotten. Although this is a hypothetical dream, it illustrates the process as well as the help the unconscious stands ready to give once we pay attention to it. Our necessity is to encourage our unconscious faculties to assert themselves, and this we are doing by regular periods of meditation. IF WE ARE PERSISTENT IN THIS AND IF WE FOLLOW IT BY CAREFULLY RECORDING AND ANALYSING OUR DREAMS, WE SHALL FIND OUR MARTINIST TEACHINGS EFFECTIVE IN PREPARING US FOR OUR MISSION IN LIFE AND SUPPLYING US AS WELL WITH THE KNOWLEDGE OF WORLDS BEYOND THIS ONE, WHICH WE SO MUCH DESIRE.

What is one of the main objects of this degree? TO BECOME ACQUAINTED WITH THE UNCONSCIOUS PART OF OURSELVES TO THE END THAT IT AND OUR CONSCIOUS FACULTIES MAY FUNCTION HARMONIOUSLY AS ONE.

What are the value of our meditations? THEY ARE FOR THE PURPOSE OF STIMULATING OUR UNCONSCIOUS TO ACTIVITY AND ENCOURAGE ITS RESPONSES.

What is the specific technique we must use to understand our dreams? THEY MUST BE RECORDED IMMEDIATELY AND LATER REVIEWED, OR RELIVED, AND CAREFULLY ANALYSED. con'd

con't.

What can we expect from our dreams? IT IS TO BE EXPECTED THAT DREAMS WILL BE OF SERVICE TO US IN THROWING LIGHT UPON OUR HOPES, WISHES, FEARS AND AMBITIONS.

Should we ask other people to interpret our dreams for us? NO. OUR AIM IS TO INTERPRET OUR DREAMS FOR OURSELVES. WE SHOULD NOT DEPEND ON OTHERS NOR SHOULD WE OFFER TO DO FOR OTHERS WHAT IN TIME THEY MUST BE ABLE TO DO FOR THEMSELVES.

* * * * * * *

(M.L.: THIS IS A LENGTHY LECTURE, BUT FAIRLY CLEAR. PERHAPS IT WOULD BE BEST IN THE INTEREST OF TIME AVAILABLE , TO REPEAT SALIENT POINTS BUT HAVE MINIMUM DISCUSSION.)
The sixth leaf of the "Book of Man" treats of the laws governing the formation of the temporal world and the natural division of the circle by the radius." This center, called "Third day" by the Qabalists, deals with the sun as the source of life on our planet and especially with those phases of it above and below the horizon.

This page corresponds with the Sephirah Tiphereth (Tiff'er-eth), Beauty. There are three important keys to the nature of Tiphereth. Firstly, it is the center of equilibrium of the whole Tree, being in the middle of the Central Pillar; secondly, it is Kether on a lower arc and Yesod on a higher arc; it is the point of transmutation between the planes of force and the planes of form. (M.L: BETTER GO OVER THIS). The titles that are bestowed on it in Qabalistic nomenclature bear this out. From the point of view of Kether, it is a child; from the point of view of Malkuth it is a King; and from the point of view of the transmutation of force it is a sacrificed god. DO NOT pass until this is clearly understood — Here is the Crux of the Qabala! Have the members write it down.
Macrocosmically, that is to say from the Kether standpoint, Tiphareth is the equilibrium of Chesed and Geburah, here Justice and Mercy blend in one. Microcosmically, that is to say from the point of view of transcendental psychology, it is the point where the types of consciousness characteristic of Kether and Yesod are brought to a focus. Hod (No. 8) and Netzach (No. 7) equally find their synthesis in Tiphareth.

The six Sephiroth, of which Tiphareth is the center, are sometimes called Adam Qadmon, the archetypal man; in fact, Tiphareth cannot rightly be understood except as the central point of these six which, for all practical purposes, constitute the archetypal kingdom which lies behind the kingdom of form in Malkuth and completely dominates and determines the passivities of matter.

When we have to consider a Sephirah in relation to its neighbours in order to interpret it in the light of its position on the Tree, it is not possible to proceed with an entirely systematic and orderly exposition of the Qabalistic system, for we must of necessity forestall with partial explanations in order to be comprehensible. We must therefore pause and give some explanation of the three lower Sephiroth grouped around Tipareth — Netzach, Hod and Yesod.

Netzach is concerned with the Nature forces and elemental contacts; Hod with ceremonial magic and occult knowledge; and Yesod with psychism and the etheric double. Tiphareth itself, supported by Geburah and Chesed, represents seership, or the higher psychism of the individuality.

The four Sephiroth below Tiphareth represent the personality or lower self; the four Sephiroth above Tiphareth are the Individuality, or higher self, and Kether is the Divine Spark, or neucleus of manifestation.

Tiphareth, therefore, must not be regarded as an isolated factor, but as a link, a focussing point, a center of transition or transmutation. THE CENTRAL PILLAR IS ALWAYS CONCERNED WITH CONSCIOUSNESS. In Tiphareth we find the archetypal ideas

CON'T

Tiphareth is sometimes called the Place of Incarnation, which is a singularly apropos appellation. The normal human, upon raising his consciousness to the next level above those of mundane life, is said to be reborn. It is his second birth; the Adam-man has dies; the Christ-man is born. Having rent the Veil of the Temple, the spiritual aspirant has taken the first, and most difficult step, toward liberation.

One of the magical images of Tiphareth is the Child. It is the lowest point reached by the incarnated God, and having come into birth in Tiphareth, the Son of God becomes a link between human and Divine. The child is the true son of Binah, Mary - Marah, the Great Sea, but it is the precipitation of that Sephirah through its lower level emanation, Geburah, the Giver of Death. The Son of God is thus born to die, as are all living beings, but his death is ordained and dedicated to a special purpose. While still in this life, he strives to bring his kingdom up out of worldliness and carry it across the Abyss that separates mankind from illumination; he labours to "redeem" humanity, to free it from bondage, to liberate it. He is truly the Redeemer, and in the end, his life is sacrificed, loosing great forces to restore the equilibrium between the elements of the Tree.

Therefore, a second magical image of Tiphareth is the Sacrificed God, and it is this image that has become the focal point of all observances in the Christian churches. It is difficult, if not impossible, to find a church of any Christian sect that does not somewhere feature a Cross, which is not only a Christian symbol, but also one of the symbols of Tiphareth.

What Christians have not considered is the third image of Tiphareth, a majestic King, which brings us straight back to Kether, the Crown, The close tie between the Son and Kether, through Chokmah and Binah, "Our Father (and Our Mother) which art in Heaven," has been ignored. Only the link between the Son and Chesed, "Our Merciful Father," is observed. Thus, Christianity has lost its mystic way, and except in a few instances, Saints Augustine, Francis, Bernard, and Meister Eckhart, --- and others --- there is not, and has not been for some centuries, any visible mystical teaching or practise. The Church, by concentrating upon the image of Christ as the Child and the Sacrificed Redeemer, to the exclusion of the Majestic King, has performed an even greater sacrifice, --- that of relinquishing the true salvation and liberation of its people.

Meanwhile, the Son stands patiently in Tiphareth, ready to lead all who come to him -- to the illumination of Kether. The road to Kether passes through Tiphareth, which is the meaning of Jesus' words: "No man cometh unto the Father, but by me." This is written in the 14th chapter of the Gospel of Saint-John, who must certainly have been a Qabalist, for he has also said in the 10th chapter: "I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved." In further support of the probability that John was a Qabalist, one might recall the statement, virtually meaningless under any other interpretation, also from chapter 14: "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you." Is not the Otz Chiim, the Tree of Life, "my Father's house?" And are not the "many mansions" the Sephiroth?

The text in the Sepher Ietzirah says of Tiphareth: "The Sixth Path is called the Reconciling Intelligence, because the inundation of the precipitations are multiplied within it, for it emits its influence as a stream to fill the reservoirs of the blessings by which they are united one to another." The question immediately arises, "Why is the Sixth Path called the Reconciling Intelligence?" The answer is simple, once we look at the Tree. It is the only Sephirah to which every Path leads directly. It is in immediate contact with every one of the other Sephiroth, and thus it imparts to the four lower Sephiroth some of its own essence, as well as the essence of each of the higher Sephiroth. Tiphareth is also in the center of the surrounding five Sephiroth which, with it, have collectively been called Adam Kadmon. Receiving the "inundation of the precipitations" from the more etheral Sephiroth, it "fills the reservoirs of the blessings" of those below it, uniting and reconciling them.

Tiphareth is the only Sephirah to have assigned to it two Spiritual Experiences, the Vision of the Harmony of Things, and the Mysteries of the Sacreficed God. Although seemingly unrelated, they are consonant to a large degree and singularly appropriate to the realm of the Son. The second of these has already been discussed in the context of the magical image of the Child and requires no further elucidation here. And in view of what has been said just above in the Yetziratic text, we should have no difficulty in understanding that upon entering into the vision of the Son, one would become fully aware of the harmony of all things, material as well as spiritual. This universe is one, having emanated from the the One Source. All things are one, for there is no other. God not only reigns in His world, He has become His world. If we do not come to understand this, we have not comprehended what is meant by the precipitation of the creative forces through Kether into each of the succeeding Sephiroth. That which finally flows into the most material section of the Tree of Life is the same as that which first entered the Tree from Ain Soph Aur through Kether.

The Hindu sage says, "Aham Brahmasmi" - - "I am Brahman." Does this seem a shocking piece of egocentricity to the person raised under the Christian ethic, or the Jewish ethic, for that matter? Does he really mean to say that he is God? Yes, of course he means it. What else could he be? What else is there for anyone to be? If you are something else than God, you do not exist at all, for God is all existence. There is only existence and non-existence, the latter being only a figure of speech since nothing can not-exist. Would you be willing to say, "I am not God?" To say this is the only real blasphemy, for you are denying both God and yourself, and it would be absurd to deny your own existence. If you exist, God exists; if God exists, you exist. How can it be otherwise?

con'd

of manifestation should be assigned. All references to the Son always refer to Tiphereth; all references to the Father refer to Kether; all references to the Holy Ghost refer to Yesod.

Let us sum up: Jupiter, the beneficient ruler and law-giver of Chesed, is balanced by Mars the Warrior, the fiery destructive force in Gebruah and the two are equilibrated in Tiphareth, the Redeemer. In the Supernal Triangle we see the primary Sephirah, Kether, emenating a pair of opposites which express the two sides of its nature: Chokmah, Force — and Binah, Form — masculine and feminine respectively. In the Second Triangle we have the pairs of opposites which find their equilibrium in a third, placed upon the Middle Pillar —— Tiphareth. From this we deduce that the First Triangle derives its significance from that which lies behind it —— and the Second Triangle derives its significance from that into which it issues forth. In the First Triangle we find a representation of the creative forces of the substance of the universe; in the Second Triangle we have a representation of the governing forces of evolving life.

In Chesed is the wise and kindly king, the father of his people, organising his realm, building up industry, fostering learning, and bringing the gifts of civilization. In Geburah we have a warrior king, leading his people in battle, defending his kingdom from the assaults of the enemy, extending his boundaries by conquest, punishing crime, and destroying evil-doers.

In Tiphareth we have the Saviour, sacrificed upon the Cross for the salvation of his people, and thereby bringing Geburah into equilibrium with Chesed. Thus we see that the mercies of Chesed and the severities of Geburah unite for the healing of the nations.

Behind Tiphareth, traversing the Tree is drawn Paraketh, the Veil of the Temple, the analogue, on the lower plane, of the Abyss which separates the three Supernals from the rest of the Tree. (M.L: PAUSE HERE AND HAVE THE SSII DRAW IN THE VEIL ON THEIR CHART. IT IS DRAWN ACROSS THE TREE BEHIND TIPHARETH, BETWEEN TIPHARETH AND THE TWO SEPHIROTH ABOVE (GEBURAH & CHESED). (WRITE IN THE NAME: PAROKETH). Like the Abyss, the Veil marks a chasm in consciousness. The mode of mentation on one side of the chasm differs in kind from the mode of mentation prevailing on the other. TIPHARETH IS THE HIGHEST SPHERE TO WHICH NORMAL HUMAN CONSCIOUSNESS CAN RISE. When Philip said to Our Lord: "Show us the Father", Jesus replied: "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." All the human mind can know of Kether is its reflection in Tiphareth, the Christ-center, the Sphere of the Son. The veil, Paroketh, must be pierced by those who would ascend in consciousness the middle pillar and liberate themselves from the purely human delusion of separated selfhood, which must be "crucified" and enter into realisation of unity with the Great One Self of All. Paroketh is the Veil of the Temple which was rent asunder from top to bottom when Jesus "yielded up the ghost" upon the Cross. SSII now have enough knowledge to meditate on this and glean further light. Ask yourself,------- WHAT DOES THIS MEAN?

All should now understand that the Sephiroth on the Middle Pillar, the Pillar of Mildness, may be taken as representing levels of consciousness and the planes on which they operate. Malkuth (no. 10) is sensory consciousness; Yesod (No. 9) is astral psychism; Tiphareth is illuminated consciousness, the highest aspect of the personality with which the individuality has coalesced; this is the condition which really constitutes initiation; it is the consciousness of the higher self brought through into the personality. It is a gleam of higher consciousness coming from behind the veil Paroketh. It is for this reason that the Messiahs and Saviours of the world - of all the various religions - are assigned to Tiphareth in the symbolism of the Tree, for they were the Light-Bringers to humanity; and as all who bring fire from heaven must do, they die the sacrificial death for the sake of mankind. It is here, too, that WE DIE TO THE LOWER SELF in order that we may rise in the higher self. Daath, the Invisible Sephirah, we have already seen is Knowledge, according to the Rabbis, and conscious awareness or apprehension according to the terminology of the psychologist. At the head of the Middle Pillar is Kether, the Crown, the Root of all Being. Consciousness, then, reaches from the spiritual essence of Kether, through the realisation of Daath, which carries it across the Abyss, into the translated consciousness of Tiphareth, wither it is brought by the sacrifice of the Christ, which rends the veil Paroketh; then on into the psychic consciousness of Yesod, the Sphere of the Moon, —— and thence to the sensory brain consciousness of Malkuth. Thus we see that consciousness must first descend in the course of INVOLUTION from the First Manifest through the subtle planes of existence to dense matter. Then must be evolved that which was first involved. It is obvious that nothing can be evolved or unfolded which was not previously involved or infolded. The question that is addressed to each of you individually is: How are you going to rend the veil of the temple from top to bottom? How are you going to pierce the veil of Paroketh?

con'd

con't

Tiphareth is called by the Qabalists Shemesh, or the Sphere of the Sun. The sun is to us truly the Giver of Life and the source of all being; it is the only adequate symbol of God the Father, who may aptly be called the Sun behind the sun, Tiphareth, in fact, being the immediate reflection of Kether. It is through the mediation of the sun that life comes to the earth. Kether, Space, the source of all existence, reflects into Tiphareth, which acts as a transformer and distributor of the primal, spiritual energy. We receive this energy directly by means of sunlight, and indirectly by means of chlorophyll in green plants, which enables them to utilise sunlight and which we eat at first hand in vegetable foods, and at second hand in the tissues of herbivorous creatures. Modern people have learnt the value of sunlight and vitamins in the physiological economy, but have not realised the very important part played by the spiritual aspect of the solar influences in one's psychic economy. There is a Tipharic factor in the soul of man which, according to ancient tradition, has its physical correspondence in the solar plexus, which is able to pick up the subtle aspect of the solar energy in the same way that the chlorophyll in the leaf of a plant picks up its more tangible aspect. If we are cut off from this energy and prevented from assimilating it, we become as sickly and feeble in mind and body as plants growing in a cellar cut off from its more tangible aspect. This cutting-off from the spiritual aspect of Nature is due to mental attitudes. When we refuse to acknowledge our part in Nature, and Nature's part in us, we inhibit this free flow of life-giving magnetism between the part and the whole; and, lacking certain elements essential to spiritual function, psychic health is impossible. It is through the mediation of the sun, then, that life comes to earth, and it is by means of the Tipharic consciousness that we contact the sources of vitality and draw upon them, both consciously and unconsciously.

We cannot spend any more time on this interesting Sephira tonight so we will bring this introduction to a close with a few words about sacrifice: The three Magical Images of Tiphareth are curious, for at first sight they are so utterly unrelated that each one appears to cancel out the others, however their significance and relationship appears clearly, speaking through the language of symbolism, especially when studied in the light of the life of Jesus.

con'd

Tiphareth, being the first coagulation of the Supernals, is aptly represented as the new-born Child in the manger at Bethlehem; as the Sacrificed God he becomes the Mediator between God and man; and when he has risen from the dead He is as a king come to his Kingdom. Tiphareth is the child of Kether and the king of Malkuth, and in His own sphere He is sacrificed. We shall not understand this aright unless we have some concept of the real meaning of sacrifice, which is very different to the popular one, which conceives of it as the voluntary loss of something dear. Sacrifice is the translation of force from one form to another. There is no such thing as the total destruction of force; however completely it disappears from our ken, it maintains itself in some other form according to the great natural law of the conservation of energy, which is the law that maintains our universe in existence. Energy may be locked up in form, and therefore static; or it may be free from its bondage to form and be in circulation. When we make a sacrifice of any sort, we take a static form of energy - and by breaking up the form that imprisons it - put it into free circulation in the cosmos. That which we sacrifice in one form turns up again in due course in another form. Apply this concept to the religious and ethical ideas of sacrifice and some very valuable clues are obtained.

The God-name of this sphere is Aloah Va Daath, which associates it intimately with the Invisible Sephirah that comes between it and Kether. This Sephirah may best be understood as apprehension, the dawning of consciousness; and we may interpret the phrase "Tetragrammaton Aloah Va Daath" as "God made manifest in the sphere of mind."

In the microcosm Tiphareth represents the higher psychism, the mode of consciousness of the individuality, or higher self. It is essentially the sphere of religious mysticism as distinguished from the magic and psychism of Yesod. Be it remembered: the Sephiroth of the Central Pillar represent levels of consciousness, and the Sephiroth on the side pillars represent powers and modes of function.

Tiphareth is said to be the Sphere of the Greater Masters; it is the Temple not made with hands, eternal in the heavens and the Great White Lodge. It is here the initiated adept functions when in the higher consciousness; here that he comes to meet the Masters, and it is by means of the Name and by an understanding of the significance of the Name of Aloah Va Daath that he opens up the higher consciousness.

The characteristic virtue of the Sphere of Tiphereth is Devotion to the Great Work. Devotion is a very important factor in the Way of Initiation that leads to the higher consciousness, and we must examine this carefully. Devotion might be defined as love for something higher than ourselves; something that evokes our idealism. When a stronger emotional content is infused into devotion and it becomes adoration, it carries us across the great gulf fixed between the tangible and the intangible and enables us to apprehend things that eye hath not seen, nor ear heard. It is this Devotion, rising to Adoration, in the Great Work, which initiates us into the Mysteries of the Crucifixion.

The Vice assigned to Tiphareth is Pride, and in this attribution we have some very true psychology. Pride has its roots in egoism and as long as we are self-centered we cannot be made one with all things. In the true selflessness of the Path the soul overflows its boundaries and enters into all things through limitless sympathy and perfect love; but in pride the soul tries to extend its boundaries till it possesses all things and it is a very different matter to possess a thing -- to being made one with it, wherein it equally possesses us in perfect reciprocity. It is this one-sided arrangement which is the vice of the adept. He must give as well as receive, and he must give himself UNRESERVEDLY if he would participate in mystical union, which is the fruit of the sacrifice of crucifixion. "Let him who would be the greatest among you be the servant of all", said Our Lord. It is against this vice of Pride that the Martinist is protected through the symbolic wearing of the mask - - if he is sincere.

con'd

con'd

Brethren, as interesting as the subject is, I'm afraid that the lecture has become rather too lengthy and I do not think we will have time for further discussion. I hope however that our work is stimulating you sufficiently to encourage you to do yourown independent research and study, for we have only limited time at Conventicles. Please now chart the following:

The Magical Image: There are three - A Majestic King.
A child.
A sacrificed god. (Note: small "g").

(Ask the Brethren to study the Magical Images of each Sephirah and see how they help explain the meanings.)

The Mundane Chakra is: the Sun.

Virtue: Devotion to the Great Work.
Vice: Pride.

Correspondence in the microcosm: The breast. (which encloses the heart).

Here are the symbols: A truncated pyramid, i.e. a pyramid with the top cut off - therefore having 6 sides: four sides, a top and a bottom. (see diagram).
A cube.

The invocation: "O wonderful, beautiful Kingdom of Light, shed upon my heart Thy rays of truth that all pride may be consumed and only perfect love remain."

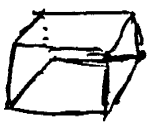
The pair of opposites: Fertility/Sterility (Fruitfulness/Barrenness).

There is a lot to ponder here, please do so before we meet again.

The God Name is: Tetragrammaton Aloah Va Daath. The Vau of the Tetragrammaton (Yod-He-Vau-He) is placed here. Remember that the Yod is at No. 2; the first He is at No. 3; and the Vau is here at 6.

Carry out the meditation this week using the invocation and either of the symbols.

DISPLAY ILLUSTRATION OF THE SYMBOLS



all sides of the cube should be of equal length.

Brethren, in view of tonight's lengthy discourse I will forego the examination of the Mystic's Monitor; however, for next time be prepared to answer questions 16 - 20. There is a very definite reason why you are required to know the Appraisal and the Monitor by heart. You do not suspect the reason and you will soon find out. So be patient and do as you are requested !!!

HAND OUT NOTES "EIGHTEEN".

Con't

CREATIVE VIZUALISATION

Visualization is an essential part of meditation after the Western Tradition and demands the development of the ability to visualize creatively.

CREATIVE VISUALIZATION is the term used to describe a technique designed to train the memory and imagination to reproduce in the mind, and in exact detail, objects, people and situations complete with sights, sounds, smells and tactile sensations of reality.

This technique (which is basically creative daydreaming) is arguably the greatest and most important of all the occult arts. It is also one of the most difficult to master. This is because, for one thing, exact visualization, like total recall, comes naturally to very few people; - - as for most us, acts of imagination of such magnitude are possible only after months or even years of consistent and patient practice.

Secondly, the imaginative faculty, which we all possess to an abundant degree as children, is quite often discouraged or actively repressed in most of us in our formative years, because it is thought to be an undesirable quality, that leads to the 'time wasting' activity of daydreaming. Consequently, we lose touch with our imaginative faculty almost completely at a very early age, and find it very difficult indeed to regain it on demand in later life.

The purpose of creative visualization in the Western Tradition is twofold. Firstly, it can be used in meditation to 'enliven' scenes such as those found on the Tarot Cards, thus potentiating the imagination and ensuring 'active' and enlightening meditation sessions. Alternatively, it may be used to create a scenario in the mind which it is intended should eventually come to take place in reality.

The first of these alternatives constitutes the primary use of the technique which you are, or at least should be, using in connection with the path workings given in notes "twenty-two".

The second alternative may be unfamiliar to you. It depends for its successful application upon the power of the human mind, working in concert with certain cosmic laws, to affect the plastic ether that underlies the reality we see about us every day, and so change it. (At this point, kindly pause and re-read Notes for Students "Eleven", page two, para. one.)

This latter is the most important - and the most misunderstood - use of the technique of creative visualization. It has, in modified form, been modernized and popularized (and rather poorly utilized) under the new title of "positive thinking", although "positive thinking" as it is presented by the various books and courses available on the subject is only a pale and barely recognizable shadow of its more powerful cousin - CREATIVE VISUALIZATION.

The hows and whys of creative visualization, when it is used to 'tamper' with reality, can be very succinctly summed up by two well-known occult precepts. The first is: "As Above, So Below."

As you already know, what this means, basically, is that the macrocosm (or larger scheme of things) affects, and can be affected by the microcosm (man). If you can appreciate that reality exists on many levels, and that those levels differ one from the other, then you will realise that what most people call reality is in fact only the last, and the densest of many. These levels, or Realms, which you have already learnt of, are separate from, yet closely associated with each other, in time and space, and together form a complex and closely interwoven matrix of being that is organized and purposeful, and that involves everything that is.

cont

con'd

The most important thing to realize about them is that all events first occur in the highest of them - the Archetypal or Atziluthic - and that the higher levels are more fluid and less dense than the lower ones.

Events that will eventually come into being on the material level (our reality) - first exist on the Archetypal level, where they exist in essence, but not yet in fact, - or rather, not yet in our material fact, and there is a slight lapse of time between the birth of any given event on the Archetypal, or the highest level; and its passage through the intervening levels; and its corresponding existence in our 'reality'.

This time lapse is very important, for it means that any event that occurs in our dense reality has already occured, in essence, on a less dense, more plastic and higher cosmic level, - on which level it can, if the task is approached correctly, be altered to a more desirable pattern.

The morals of altering reality, and of how each Initiate will use the knowledge being shared, is for each person to settle for himself. The "how" of the situation, as opposed to the "why" is very well explained by the second of the two occult precepts mentioned earlier: 'Thoughts are Things".

The truth of this statement can be very difficult to come to terms with, because we are used to thinking of things in a very material sense (tables, for example are 'things', as are telephones or cars or light bulbs), or as being, in fact, tangible shapes.

Thoughts are not, of course, tangible on this, the material level, and they have no tangible shapes here either; but they do have a shape, for theirs is the capability of defining shape, and they are the media whereby shape is given to concepts that would otherwise remain formless.

The capability of thought to define shape, however, is best illustrated not by reference to material objects like tables (which are fully capable of expression in material terms) but by reference to abstract concepts, or concepts that cannot be expressed in material terms but which nevertheless retain shape in the mind.

'Honour' for example, is just such an abstract, and patience is another; for although these "things" can never be expressed as material objects, they are nevertheless states of being that have shape in mind, - and therefore existence also, for only when shape and expression are given concepts can they have any existence at all.

There is a level within the matrix of being — it is not the Archetypal level, but it is nevertheless a level that is a good deal less dense than the one our physical bodies inhabit — upon which thoughts do not only define, but actually determine shape. Indeed, thoughts on that level are an active creative force capable of having the sort of direct impact upon the environment that they lack on this one. Thus thought can be said to have two basic capabilities within the cosmic scheme: it will define shape on this, the densest of the levels; and determine it on other, more subtle ones.

Consequently, it is possible to use concentrated thought and imaginative imagery, - creative visualization, in other words, - TO CHANGE REALITY, or to determine its shape; and this is done by deliberately directing thought to the correct level, where reality is more plastic and so can be easily moulded to the desired shape.

An understanding of the twin capabilities of thought has led occultists to treat thoughts as entities, and to think of them as living things with shape and purpose; things that enjoy a life of their own quite independently of the mind that bore them. Additionally, it has brought them to the realization that thoughts are immensely powerful, and potentially very dangerous things.

Continued on Notes "Nineteen".

SUPERIOR DEGREE

CONVENTICLE 30

Greetings O Unknown and Silent Ones ! HAVE READY: NOTES "NINETEEN"

When it was stated at our last Conventicle that in the unconscious part of man lies the key to his escape, it was not in any way to suggest that escape meant a denial of life or a turning from reality. Far from it: BURIED IN THE UNCONSCIOUS LIES THE WHOLE OF MAN'S PAST. This may have been neglected through many lifetimes and present such a wealth of material when man does first attempt to acquaint himself with it that it may take time to arrive at the realization that acquaintance with it and use of it, is orienting him more perfectly than before with practical reality. Nonetheless, such is the case.

Many people make this mistake and so retard their own progress. They choose mysticism as a way out of the hard reality of life; but, in truth, it is rather a way into it. That is why those who expect mystical studies to connect them immediately with higher beings who will solve all their problems for them -- must always be disappointed. True mysticiam corrects such wrong thinking and shows the student how to connect with the higher faculties within himself and thereby be able to solve his own problem. We may be very sure, therefore, that if one has imagined that the study of dreams has been entered upon for any reason other than opening up a way of increasing his own mature and responsible approach to the problems of living, - - he is again mistaken.

Dreams are worthless until we learn how to deal with the material they report; until we realise, in fact, that as with any other material or spiritual substance, we dissipate it when we improperly use it. As the philosopher, John Locke, once wrote: Mental ability is measured by both perception and reflection. One has to know, or perceive, first what lies in the mind ---- and then by reflection he must choose wisely what applies.

This accords with the Druidic teaching that the conscience is the eye of God in the heart of man which sees everything; that reason is the revolving of the conscience in the contemplation of what comes before it, - and that understanding is only the knowledge acquired by the activity of reason.

All minds, said the poet-philosopher, Emerson, even those we call rude and uneducated, "are scrawled all over with facts, with thoughts. They (that is, the persons themselves) shall one day bring a lantern and read the inscriptions." In writing of the intellect, he said also: "In every man's mind, some images, words, and facts remain without effort on his part to imprint them, which others forget, and afterwards these illustrate to him important laws. All our progress is an unfolding, like the vegetable bud. You have first an instinct, then an opinion, then a knowledge, --- as the plant has root, bud and fruit."

The unconscious of everyone is a vast storehouse which holds fact, fancy, hope, ambition, heartache, and disappointment -- everything, so to speak, of our own and of the races before us. In order to use any of it, we must be aware of it. We must know what it contains. Dreams make the most natural entry into it, and from their reports we learn what it contains. Then by reflection, we must sift and sort until we can with confidence choose the significant elements and evaluate them. When we have learned reasonable well to do this, we shall be convinced of the practical worth of this means of solving our problems in living.

How necessary and important the part of reflection is in the process, though, may well be illustrated in the experience of two individuals in dealing with reports from the unconscious. The widow of a very wealthy manufacturer of firearms was advised by her unconscious that she would continue to live as long as she continued to build. She accepted the advice literally and began to call in carpenters to add rooms, stairways and closets to her already ample dwelling. When the opportunity to enlarge in a normal way was no longer possible, she continued to build without any consideration of usefulness. Doors and windows were put into walls uncecessarily; space was enclosed into closets without any idea of use; stairways ended abruptly, leading nowhere and serving no purpose. She called the process —— building; but it was so far from fulfilling the constructive intent of that word as to constitute the reverse of it. Her effort was both childish and futile because she had completely failed in the matter of reflection on the advice given her.

(Mrs. Remmington) con'd

con'd

In decided contrast to her experience was that of the scientist, Dr. George Washingtom Carver. It was once necessary for him to make some sandpaper. He experimented for some time unsuccessfully and then lay down in his laboratory to rest. While resting, he slept; and sleeping, he dreamed. In his dream, he was again in his laboratory working on the problem of sandpaper. He became conscious of a figure behind him watching. Finally, the figure asked what he was doing. "I am trying to make sandpaper," he replied.

"Tell me how you have gone about it," the figure said. Dr. Carver explained, step by step, the method he had used. "Good", said the visitor, "your process is correct, but you need to boil the sand." Immediately, the scientist awoke, got up from the couch, and began once more the process of making sandpaper. This time, he boiled the sand and his experiment was successful. His ability to reflect on the advice given was such that he made no misinterpretation.

These examples may be of great help to us in the matter of making good use of the reports our dreams supply. They may also serve in the matter of drawing a larger meaning and application from the statements contained in the "Book of Man."

Throughout the degrees, at all times when the Qabala has come up, it has been pointed out that it is a large subject, too large in fact to be properly studied in the limited time we have available at conventicles. During our recent meetings, however, we have sought to briefly touch upon some Qabalistic teaching as we turn the pages of the "Book of Man" in connection with our meditations. We hope the Brethren are benefitting from these glimpses and that they will be encouraged to further pursue Qabalistic study.

****

What happens when we improperly use any material or spiritual substance?
WE DISSIPATE IT.

According to the philosopher John Locke, how is mental ability measured?
BY PERCEPTION AND REFLECTION. ONE FIRST HAS TO KNOW OR PERCEIVE WHAT LIES IN THE MIND —— AND THEN BY REFLECTION HE MUST CHOOSE WISELY WHAT APPLIES.

Are our dreams able to help us in this respect? YES. - OUR DREAMS ACQUAINT US WITH THE CONTENTS OF THE UNCONSCIOUS. THIS CORRESPONDS TO PERCEPTION AND KNOWING. OUR ANALYSIS OF THE ELEMENTS PRESENT IN THE UNCONSCIOUS CORRESPONDS TO REFLECTION. AS EXAMPLES OR PROPER AND IMPROPER REFLECTION WE SHOULD REMEMBER THE EXAMPLES OF DR. CARVER AND MRS. REMINGTON.

Who was the visitor in Dr. Carver's dream? Was it his own unconscious self, or was it "someone" from one of the Planes?

Should we try to interpret our dreams for ourself, or should we turn to someone else for an explanation?

What about our work in self-study? Have you noticed how this work with our dreams forms a part of self-study? Can any Bro/Sis report any favourable change in their personality?

con'd

con'd

We are now to consider the seventh leaf of the "Book of Man" which equates with the Qabalistic Sephirah Netzach (Nets'-sock), Victory, also called Fourth Day. It forms the base of the Pillar of Mercy.

Netzach, the Sphere of Venus, is best understood by contrasting it with Hod, the Sphere of Mercury (No. 8). Netzach is on the Pillar of Force and represents the instincts and the emotions they give rise to, — whereas Hod represents the concrete mind. Perhaps the Brethren would like to note that at the appropriate places on their diagrams. In the macrocosm these represent two levels of the process of the concretion of force into form. Brethren have undoubtedly noticed that as we come down the Tree we are moving from a rarefied to a denser atmosphere. In Netzach force is still relatively free-moving, being bound only into exceedingly fluidic and ever-shifting shapes. In Hod it takes on for the first time definite and permanent form, — though of an exceedingly tenuous nature. In Netzach a particular form of force represents itself as a type of beings, flowing backwards and forwards over the boundaries of manifestation in an exceedingly elusive manner. Such beings have no individualised personalities -- they are rather like the armies with banners that one can see on evenings in the clouds at sunset. In Hod, however, individualisation into units has taken place, and there is continuity of existence. All mind is group-mind in Netzach, -- but in Hod the human mind has its beginnings.

Let us now consider Netzach itself, both in its micro-cosmic and macro-cosmic aspects. Let us bear constantly in mind that Netzach is the sphere of Illusion, and what is about to be described in terms of form — are appearances as represented by the intellect to itself and projected back into the astral light as thought-forms. This is a very important point and must be understood thouroughly in order to avoid falling into superstition.

Everything that is "perceived by the eyes of the intellect and the contemplations of faith" as the Ietziratic Text puts it so graphically --- has it metaphysical basis in CHOKMAH, the Supernal Sephirah at the head of the Pillar of Mercy. But with Netzach a great change comes over our mode of apprehending the different types of existence assigned to each sphere. Before, we have been perceiving by means of intuition; our apprehensions have been formless, or at least represented by highly abstract symbols; but after Tiphareth things become more concrete.

It is the Netzach factor in ourselves that is the basis of our instincts, each of which, in their un-intellectualised essence, gives rise to appropriate reflexes — just as an infant's lips will suck on anything that is inserted between them. The beings of Netzach are the Elohim and are not so much intelligences as they are the embodiments of ideas. These Elohim, to give them their Hebrew name, are the formative influences whereby the creative force expresses itself in Nature. Their true character is to be discerned in Chesed --- where they are described by the Sepher Ietzirah as the "Holy Powers". In Netzach, however, which represents the upper stratum of the reflecting ether, they undergo a change, the image-making mind of man has begun to work upon them, moulding the astral light into forms that shall represent them to his consciousness.

It is vitally important that we should realise that these lower Sephiroth of the Plane of Illusion are densely populated by thought-forms; that everything which the human imagination has been able to conceive, however dimly, has a form built about it out of the astral light, and that the more the human imagination has dwelt upon it to idealise it, — the more definite that form becomes. Consequently: subsequent generations of seers, who can see only on the lower planes, when they seek to discern the spiritual nature and innermost essence of any form of life --- are met by these images --- the "creations of the created" --- and will be deceived thereby --- mistaking them for the abstract essence itself, which is not to be found upon any plane that yields images to psychic vision BUT ONLY UPON THOSE THAT

CON'T

con'd

ARE DISCERNED BY PURE INTUITION. (M.L. Go over this paragraph).

When his mentality was still primitive, man worshipped these images, by means of which he represented to himself the great natural forces so all-important to his material well-being, thus establishing a link with them, by means of which a channel was developed whereby the forces they represented were poured into his soul, thus stimulating the corresponding factor in his own nature and thereby developing it. The operations of this worship, especially when it became highly organised and intellectualised, as in Greece and Egypt, built up exceedingly definite and potent images, and it is these that are generally understood as "the gods". Generations of worship and adoration build a very strong image in the astral light, and when sacrifice is added to worship, the image is brought a step farther down the planes into manifestation and acquires a form in the dense ethers of Yesod, (No. 9) and is a very potent magical object, capable of independent action when ensouled by the concrete ideas generated in Hod.

We see, then, that every celestial being conceived by the mind of man has as its basis a natural force, but that upon the basis of this natural force is built up a symbolic image representative thereof, which is ensouled and rendered active by the force it represents. The image, then, is but a mode of representation indulged in by the human mind for its own convenience, but the force that the image represents, and which ensouls it, is a very real thing indeed, and under certain circumstances can be exceedingly powerful. In other words, although the form under which the god is represented is pure imagination, the force associated with it is both real and active.

This fact is the key, not only to talismantic magic in its broadest sense, which includes all consecrated objects used in ceremonial and for meditation, but to many things in life that we cannot fail to observe but for which we have no explanation. It explains a great many things in organised religion that are very real to the believer but very baffling to the unbeliever, -- who can neither explain them, -- nor explain them away.

Let us now consider Netzach from the point of view of the microcosmic Tree of Life, that is to say: the subjective Tree within the soul, wherein the Sephiroth are factors in consciousness.

The Three Supernals and the first pair of manifesting Sephiroth, Chesed and Geburah, represent the Higher Self, with Tiphereth as the point of contact with the Lower Self. The four lower Sephiroth, Netzach, Hod, Yesod and Malkuth, represent the Lower Self, or personality, the unit of incarnation, with Tiphereth as the point of contact with the Higher Self, which is sometimes called the Holy Guardian Angel.

From the point of view of the personality, Tiphareth represents the higher consciousness, aware of spiritual things; Netzach represents the instincts and Hod the intellect. Yesod represents the fifth element, Aether, and Malkuth the four elements which are the subtle aspect of matter. (Air, earth, fire and water in the old terminology, - solids, liquids, gases and radiant energy in the new.)

All that the average human intellect can realise is (1) the nature of dense matter, - Malkuth; and (2) the intellect, - Hod. Both of these are aspects of concrete existence. The average human intellect has no appreciation of the forces which build the forms, as represented by Netzach, the Sphere of the Instincts, -- and Yesod, the etheric double or subtle body. It is important therefore to make a careful study of Netzach because its nature and importance are so little understood.

con'd

con'd

We shall best comprehend the nature of Netzach in the microcosm if we remember that it is the Sphere of Venus, with all that that implies. Translated from the symbolic language of the Qabala into plain English, this means that we are concerned here with the function of polarity, which is a very great deal more than mere sex as popularly conceived.

Polarity really means the flowing of force from a sphere of high pressure to a sphere of low pressure; high and low being always relative terms. Every sphere of energy needs to receive the stimulus of an influx of energy at higher pressure, and to have an output into a sphere of lower pressure. The source of all energy is the Great Unmanifest and it makes its way down the levels, changing its form from one to the other, till it is finally "earthed" in Malkuth. In every individual life, in every form of activity, in every organised group for whatever purpose, whether army, church, football club or limited company, we see this exemplification of the flowing of energy in circuit. The great point we need to realise is that in the microcosmic Tree, -- the Tree within ourselves -- there is a flow down and up the positive and negative aspects of our own subjective levels of consciousness, whereby the spirit inspires the mind, and mind directs the emotions, and the emotions form the etheric double, and the etheric double moulds the physical vehicle, which is the "earth" of the circuit. This is a fact that is generally realised and its implications are easily seen as soon as attention is drawn to them.

But a point we do not so readily realise is that there is a flow and return between each "body" or level of consciousness and its corresponding aspect in the MACROCOSM. Just as there is an intake and output on the level of Malkuth whereby food and water are received into the body as nutriment and rejected as excreta -- which in turn is the food of the vegetable kingdom which receives it and rejects it -- so is there an intake and output between the etheric double and the astral light and between the astral body and the mind side of nature and so on UP the planes, with the subtler factors represented by the six higher Sephiroth. The essence of the Magical Qabala, which is the practical application of the Tree of Life, is to develop these magnetic circuits of the different levels and so strengthen and reinforce the soul. Just as the physical body is nourished by eating and drinking and kept healthy by adequate excretion (which might be called the operations of the Sphere of Malkuth) so is the soul of man energised by the Operations of the Sphere of Tipheth, which is also called the Sphere of the Redeemer, who brings health to the soul. We know how initiation develops the power of the higher psychism and enables the human understanding to apprehend spiritual truths; what we do not realise is that for the full gamut of human development we need also to develop our power to contact natural energy in its essential form as represented by the Sphere of Netzach.

It is this transmutation of energy that initiates deal with by means of the technique of the Tree of Life; and as CONSCIOUSNESS transmutes up and down the Central Pillar of Equilibrium, so does energy transmute up and down the Pillar of Mercy, of which Netzach is the base ---- and form transmute up and down the Pillar of Severity, of which Hod, the intellect, is the base. - Pause -

I very much regret the length of these discourses Brethren and ask your indulgence. Even with the most introductory glimpses that we are sharing, time quickly mounts up.

Chesed, as we have seen, is the Sphere of Beneficient Regulation. The basis of all regulation is memory. Businesses operate through the mechanical memories of filing systems, card indexes, account books and the like. In this connection it is interesting to note the impetus given to science and technology by the electronic memory systems built into our modern computers. Netzach is a direct reflection of Chesed, just as Chesed is a reflection of Chokmah.

con't

con'd

Netzach is the sphere of the desire-nature and desire is based on memory. We desire to repeat past experiences even though the memories and wholly subconscious, -- then desires manifest as instincts as we have already indicated. Memory is behind it all. The personal mind often distorts desire, it presents us with mistaken forms of desire and with mistaken notions of what means we should use in order to make our desires work out as actualities and this is why Netzach is called the Sphere of Illusion.

Yet, every desire is a promise. Desires make their first appearance as feelings of lack, hunger, or the state of not having or enjoying what is desired. Actually, there is no lack, no imperfection, no shortcoming, in the One Life. Nothing is wanting to its perfection. Omnipotence never fails. That is why it is written that before we call we are answered. Our desires are budding realizations of what we really are and what we really can be. That is why the desire-nature is attributed to the Sephirah Netzach, - because Netzach means Victory. We desire what God intends. It is the FORM a desire takes, or the means chosen to satisfy it, which may need rectification. Recalling the observation made by John Locke -- after we have perceived or become aware of what lies in our mind, we must then reflect on it and choose wisely. Or we find ourselves acting foolishly or in trouble. The essence of any desire is always good. It is how we fulfill the desire that is important.

— o — o — o —

The Hebrew title of this Sephirah is Netzach, meaning Victory. The implication is that through mastering the energies manifesting in this sphere, we become Victorious.

The God-name is: Jehova Tzabaoth, meaning the Lord of Hosts, or God of Armies.

The Mundane Chakra is the planet Venus.

The Magical Image is a beautiful naked woman.

The virtue is Unselfishness.

The vice is unchastity, that is, love abused; and lust.

The pair of opposites: Wisdom/Foolishness.

The invocation to be used with our meditation this week, following the usual practise, is: "O thou great and hidden source of all that man may feel and know, restore in me the light of true knowledge."

THE SYMBOLS ARE: THE ROSE, THE LAMP. DISPLAY ILLUSTRATIONS FOR THE BRETHREN TO COPY.

If time permits.....

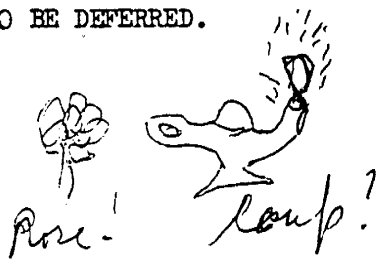
Discuss the "blockages" of force that takes place within one's self due to wrong ideas, preventing the free moving of energy up and down our personal "Tree" and causing sickness and imbalance as a result.

Discuss the meaning of Love on all three planes - physical, emotional and mental - in both of its aspects: excess and insufficiency.

Discuss the virtue and vice of this Sphere, in relationship to the Hod consciousness.

BECAUSE OF THE TIME FACTOR, THE MYSTIC'S MONITOR WILL HAVE TO BE DEFERRED.

HOMEWORK: BE READY TO ANSWER QUESTIONS ON NOTES 10 & 11



HAND OUT : NOTES "NINETEEN"

CREATIVE VIZUALISATION - continued

The idea that thought is either powerful or dangerous is another concept that is often difficult to accept - again because we persistently think of thought as being a 'no-thing' rather than a 'some-thing'. This latter mental hurdle is best got over by even a very cursory examination of the well-attested power of thought to make us well or ill, - our innate mental capacity, in other words, for internal or personal self-destruction or regeneration.

It is very generally realized these days that quite a lot of serious illness is the physiological result of psychological stress, and that we possess a compensatory mechanism that can enable us to actively retard or repel such illness. However, and insofar as we are concerned here, the very fact that we become ill in this way at all from such a cause, is an indication of one of the most important capabilities of thought, and that is that it can (whether it be deliberately initiated or not) AFFECT US AND OUR ENVIRONMENT FOR BETTER OR WORSE.

In the larger scheme of things, this means that our disregard - or ignorance - of the potential of thought has resulted in the less than perfect world we see about us. From a wholly personal standpoint, it means that all the unpleasant and fearful thoughts we think, - thoughts that we are accustomed to think of as being 'harmless' and 'private' - are, in reality, neither harmless nor private, but are all the time affecting, on a subtle level, those persons at whom they are directed, - including, of course, ourselves.

Appreciation of these dangerous potentialities of thought is the reason behind the occultist's preoccupation with the control of his thoughts; and this explains why so great a proportion of occult training is given over to meditation (which improves concentration) and achieving mastery of the thought processes.

In the light of the above, it should be obvious to you by now that using the technique of creative visualization to 'tamper' with reality is a project that demands considerable skill, care, and experience; and the whys and wherefores of this use of the technique is being explained at such length for two reasons:

Firstly, regular practice of the techniques of meditation and visualization causes changes to occur in the levels of efficiency with which regular practitioners of those techniques think, and increases the power with which their thought is projected.

Secondly, regular exercise with the technique of visualization eventually results in the practice of it --- if care is not taken --- becoming automatic, or not self-initiated on a conscious level.

In other words, it is quite possible to find oneself using the technique of creative visualization to affect reality while remaining quite unaware that one is doing so; and because of this, it is important to learn to think, not only constructively, but also with clarity and care.

This latter is particularly important in that such mental 'actions', - despite the fact that you may be unaware of having taken them, might cause you to experience repercussions in your life. These repercussions occur because the matrix of being is, on all its levels, constructed strictly upon the principles of polarity, or positive and negative forces in balance, and is a very orderly affair in which certain rules apply. (Call them natural laws if you prefer).

Those rules will operate, whether you are ignorant of them or not. And, - very simply speaking, - the rules of the matrix of being as they apply to the practice of creative visualization when it is used to project thought to the level where it is capable of reacting positively on its environment, can be stated thus:

DO AS YOU WOULD BE DONE BY.

over

con'd

It is absolutely forbidden to use creative visualization to influence or hurt another person. Indeed, it is forbidden to use creative visualization in such a way that its use reacts in any way, - detrimentally or otherwise, - on any other person.

This means that you must not only, in the ordinary course of events, take care not to project your thoughts so as to contravene these rules, but also that - - - if and when you decide to use creative visualization deliberately - - - you must take extraordinary care to formulate your INTENTION correctly.

The word 'intention' as it is applied here means the deliberate formulation of a proposed act, the consequences of which are planned or foreseen; and formulating intention involves mapping out, in perfect and intricate detail, any given project in all its ramifications.

The deliberate formulation of an intention closely resembles an enormous and complicated game of chess; and some appreciation of the difficulties involved can be gained by sitting down + + + NOW + + + and attempting to formulate an intention for something you want in such a way as to obey all the rules. You will find that the intricacies of this task, and consequently the difficulties you would experience in trying to visualize it clearly, are enormous, and in many cases quite maddening.

There are, of course, ways in which creative visualization may be used safely; and primary among these is to use intention as it was intended to be used and project change within oneself. This is always acceptable, and (if you are going to start at all), is the proper place to begin.

Two points need to be emphasized here:
(1) You will make better progress with meditational work if you meditate on a regular basis, 10 - 15 minutes every day and if possible at the same time of day. This is much more effective than irregular meditations of longer durations.
(2) The mind does not like to be trained! It will bring up every reason why you should not bother to meditate. Watch out for this!

CREATIVE VISUALIZATION

You must first have a definately chosen object, subject or goal and you must be sufficiently interested in it. Seat yourself comfortably, feet on floor, hands in lap, unclasped. Eyes closed. Breathe naturally. Do not begin the visualization until the body and mind are relaxed and in a state of calmness.

Form as complete a picture in your mind as possible. Develop every detail of the picture. It makes no difference whether your desire is abstract or 'physical'. DEVELOP THE PICTURE OF IT. See it as a reality, as an actuality. See it in color. If the environment calls for sounds, words, smells, feelings, tastes - build them in. ENLIVEN THE SCENE. Visualize it as clearly as you can, as intensely as you can. FIX IT by holding the visualization for 10 - 15 minutes.

Do not end the visualization by suddenly opening the eyes and jumping out of the chair. Become aware of yourself, open your eyes slowly, get up, stamp your feet on the floor, "ground yourself" - drink a glass of water and turn to some mundane activity.

On awakening each morning bring up the picture. Glance at it several times during the day.

As already said, set a particular time of day for your meditations/patworkings/visualizations. This can be early on mornings before the rest of the household rises, during the day, or in the evening or at night. The time of day does not matter. Choose the time that you find best. The important thing is daily exercise and preferably at the same time of day.

PHOTOCOPY THIS PAGE AND RETURN THE PHOTOCOPY.

Dear Associate

We are on the last leg of our journey! While the Libers in this Degree are sure to interest all members, those who are Martinists will especially appreciate them.

Since we began this labor of love that has become the ICES, we have seen steep rises in the cost of material. Paper, general supplies and stationery have gone up, POSTAGE, and equipment service. Also, we have had to employ an office supervisor since the volume of work has increased beyond what we can do on a 'part time' basis. The MAJORITY of work, however, continues to be done by Brethren who give their time freely.

Regarding the Libers for this Degree: we want you to study them thoroughly and to participate fully in the special exercise that will be disclosed. For that reason we have decided to send the Libers two at a time, as you request them, rather than 'all in one package' as before.

Since you have paid for the whole Degree, you just have to return the slip, and as soon as we receive it we will send the next two Libers. Please note that we have no alternative than to send them by SURFACE MAIL. If you wish Air Mail we must respectfully ask you to include a small donation to cover air postage.

Well this is all for the moment! We trust you will continue on in good spirits and we shall look forward to receiving this slip when you are ready for the next two Libers.

ATTENTION BRETHREN!

SLIP FOR RECEIPT OF THE NEXT TWO LIBERS

Please detach and return this page when you are ready to receive the next two Libers of this Degree. Your dues-donation is already paid so do not send any addition contribution, however: if you wish the Libers sent by AIR MAIL, kindly include three dollars to help with postage. Thank you! As usual, we ask you for your thoughts and comments on the material in the Libers you just perused.

To the ICES/OTG, Worthing 31W, Barbados, West Indies

Dear Secretary

Re my progress in the 10th Degree - kindly send the next two Libers. I am making a few comments on the reverse side on the last two Libers and beg you to accept my honest opinions.

Name and address (print clearly)

Key#

If you wish air mail service kindly include a donation and mark here the amount you send: Thank you!

PLEASE USE THE REVERSE SIDE TO MAKE YOUR COMMENTS

PHOTOCOPY THIS PAGE AND RETURN THE PHOTOCOPY.

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 90-100

LIBER$_{94}^{#}$

Personal & Confidential TENTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

SUPERIOR DEGREE

CONVENTICLE 31

Greetings O Unknown and Silent Ones ! HAVE READY : NOTES "TWENTY"

There is little doubt that most of us have dreams that are as significant as those reported at our last Conventicle. The unconscious part of every one of us functions continuously; but when its activity goes unheeded year after year or when reports are consistently pushed aside as being of no value, it is to be expected that confusion, uncertainty, and a great deal of vagueness will appear prominently in any reports reaching consciousness. In other words, our sudden conscious decision to receive reports from the unconscious and let them help us in the matter of living is not of itself enough to bring about immediate and clear-cut dream experiences that will dissolve all our perplexities without effort. It is, nonetheless, a necessary first step; without it, we can make very little progress. This is why, as members of the Superior Degree, we are having the matter presented to us so constantly: It holds great possibility for us if we will be patient and make a persistent effort to acquaint ourselves with this little known and age-old side of ourselves. Let us be reminded that the goal of the Martinist is to attain to the state of Self-knowledge and through dreams we have a key to this end.

It may be that consciousness of self is to most people a frightening or, at least, an upsetting experience; therefore, they avoid conscious self-examination and will not venture at all to make the acquaintance of the unconscious self. Even the conscious and honest self-examination of oneself, which we are all supposed to be regularly doing since we entered this Degree, is neglected by many of us because, while we are willing to criticize and find fault with others, we are ashamed and embarrassed when we discover our own foibles. This unwillingness to correct our imperfections denies our progress. Those who suddenly choose to analyse themselves or attempt to find meaning in a dream, are so little prepared for either experience they they would be helped but little. They would be like the people Cicero wrote about: "I am extremely surprised, that though people have wit enough to give no credit to a notorious liar even when he speaks the truth, they still, if one single dream has turned out true, do not so much distrust one single case because of the numbers of instances in which they have been found false, as think multitudes of dreams established because of the ascertained truth of this one."

IT IS NOT THE SINGLE DREAM THAT IS IMPORTANT; nor is its importance always due to its seemingly shocking or prophetic nature. The Martinist must value dreams for a different and perhaps less spectacular but certainly for a more scientific reason: They are links in a chain of unconscious events. Studying one dream may give only a knowledge of the link itself; but by observing a series of dreams, one begins to see the separate links united in a chain. Thus, he begins to trace his way into the unconscious and to discover things in himself which will help him know himself better. Since every success in life and every spiritual advance depends upon self-knowledge, this, then, is a matter which we should not neglect.

A long time ago, Owen Feltham wrote: "Dreams are a notable means of discovering our own inclinations. The wise man learns to know himself as well by the night's black mantle as by the searching beams of day. In sleep, we have the naked and natural thoughts of our souls: outward objects interpose not, either to shuffle in occasional cogitations or to bale out the included fancy. Surely, how we fall to vice or rise to virtue, we may by observation find in our dreams. The best use we can make of dreams is observation and by that our correction or encouragement, for 'tis not doubtful but that the mind in the fullest depths of sleep."

Coming somewhat nearer to our own times, we find an equally instructive comment by the novelist, Robert Louis Stevenson: "Dreams," he said, "are witnessed in that small theater of the brain which we keep brightly lighted all night long, after the jets are down and darkness and sleep reign undisturbed in the remainder of the body."

con'd

con'd

For a final comment on the naturalness of dreams and the important function they perform, we turn to a psychologist who has gone further in the matter of explanation than any other outside the ranks of avowed mystics. He is the Swiss doctor, Carl Gustav Jung, who wrote: "Our modern attitude looks back proudly upon the mists of superstition and of medieval or primitive credulity and entirely forgets that it carries the whole living past in the lower stories of its skyscraper of rational consciousness. Without the lower stories our mind is suspended in mid-air. No wonder that it gets nervous. The true history of the mind is not preserved in learned volumes but in the living mental organism of everyone."

Everything, then, - - personal experience, the mystic tradition, the investigations of modern psychology, - - points to the fact that in the neglected, forgotten, unused unconscious part of man lies the secret of his well-being, success, and spiritual advancement.

It contains in a dormant yet living state all that man and the race of man was. It is there in the unconscious that the unseen foundation exists upon which the visible conscious superstructure rests. It is there, too, that all treasure lies buried: A dream may fix the importance of this thought in our consciousness. A man who lived in the English village of Swaffham in Norfolk was once told in a dream to go to London and stand on London Bridge, for there someone would tell him something of great importance. Obedient to the dream, he journeyed the ninety miles to London and stood there for three days without anyone saying anything to him. Just as he had decided to return home, a man asked him why he was standing there. When he had finished his explanation, the man said: "It is well that you go home, for if I had nothing more important to do than follow my dreams, I should go to Norfolk myself. For three nights I have dreamed of a certain apple tree in the village of Swaffham there and I have been told that if I dig under it, I shall find a great treasure." So the Norfolk man returned home, dug under the apple tree and found the treasure. Treasure always lies within ourselves; but dreams, even though they direct us by a circuitous route, will always lead us to it.

- - - - - - -

Every success in life and every spiritual advance depends upon self-knowledge.

A single dream may not seem important; nontheless, it is a link in the invisible chain of events happening in the unconscious.

Beyond its possible immediate comment on, or explanation of a present happening, the value of a dream is as a means of discovering our own inclinations. OBSERVING OUR INTERESTS, HOPES, FEARS, AND AMBITIONS AS THEY EXPRESS THEMSELVES IN THE DREAM STATE, WE ARE PROVIDED WITH THE SELF-KNOWLEDGE NECESSARY FOR SUCCESSFUL LIVING.

Personal experience, mystic tradition, and modern psychology point to the fact that in the unconscious of each of us lies the secret of well-being.

- - - - - - -

We come now to the eighth leaf of the Book of Man which is said to enlighten us regarding the being who has two names and four numbers, whose action extends over four worlds, and whose powers are both legislative and judicial. The Qabala calls this vortex of force Hod, or Splendour, also Fifth Day and El Shaddai.

Hod is composed of the three Hebrew letters He, Vau and Daleth. It comes from a Hebrew root derived from a noun designating the human breast; therefore, ideas of nourishment and the satisfaction of hunger are directly related to the name of this eighth Sephirah. It is situated at the base of the Pillar of Severity, where it is balanced by Netzach, which is at the base of the Pillar of Mercy. Hod is therefore the opposite and compliment of Netzach.

con'd

con'd

The special activity of Hod is the discriminative power of Intellect, chiefly concerned with the wise selection of right means and the bringing of them to fruition.

Hod is the rational, concrete mind that imposes inhibitions on the dynamic animal nature of the soul, condenses them, formulates them, and directs them by limiting them and preventing diffusion.

Hod is especially the Sphere in which the magician works, where by the power of the mind forms are formulated and by his will - and linked with the natural forces of Netzach - the forms are ensouled. In other words, whereas the natural forces are free-moving in Netzach, in Hod they are constrained and directed to ends that are willed and designed. HERE IS THE KEY TO THE OPERATIONS OF MAGIC: VISUALIZATION, EMOTION (OR FEELING) AND WILL. (EMPHASIZE AND DISCUSS).
Another name for Hod is glory, and this suggests at once that in this, the first Sphere in which forms are definitely organised, the radiance of the Primordial is shown forth to human consciousness. Which is to say: the glory of God can shine forth in manifestation only when there are forms to manifest it. Hod, then, is essentially the Sphere of forms ensouled by the forces of Nature; and conversely, it is the Sphere in which the forces of Nature take on sensible form.

The virtue is Truthfulness. The vice is Falsehood and Dishonesty.

The mundane chakra is Mercury. The Magical Image is: A hermaphrodite.
The God name: Elohey Tzebaoth (the God of Hosts).
The symbol, which we will use for our meditation, is the ritualistic apron in the form of a square. The pair of opposites: Life/Death.

The Invocation to help us in our contact will be: "O thou resplendent being whose name is Truth and whose acts are just, infuse my being with thy holy power."

DISPLAY ILLUSTRATION OF THE SYMBOL:

HAND OUT : NOTES "TWENTY"

Examine the brethren on "Notes 10 & 11":

Notes 10

Name the three stages prior to the manifestation of Kether. (Immediately prior to Kether is the Unlimited Light, Ain Soph Aur; This is preceded by All that is Unlimited, Ain Soph; anterior still is utter non-existence - Ain.)

What is the dominant Sephira in the Realm of Atziluth? (Kether).

Which Sephiroth are most effective in the Realm of Briah? (Chokmah & Binah).

Notes 11

What is the value of studying the T.O.L., dreams and engaging in Pathworking? (The acquisition of Self-knowledge).

What danger does Pathworking pose? (Fascination - that we get so enraptured in Astral journeying that we become withdrawn from the physical world.)

What is the most common form of Astral Operation? (The ordinary day-dream).

What is to be gained from Astral Operations (Mastery of life in the physical world - life is lived from the inside out - and it is possible to create conditions in the Astral Realm and cause them to manifest in the outer or physical world.)

HOMEWORK: MYSTIC'S MONITOR. QUESTIONS 16 - end. con't

HOD & NETZACH

The great religion of the West, Judeo-Christianity - - the combination of the Old and New Testamants into one Bible, is no accident - - it has its occult and mystical facets. There are a number of passages in the Old Testament that, properly understood, are pure occultism. We come first upon one of these in the 14th Chapter of Genesis, repeated in greater detail in the New Testament, in Hebrews. The story concerns the defeat of a coalition of kings by Abraham, after which he is rewarded with a blessing by Melchisedec, King of Salem, which is: "King of Peace" (Hebrews 7:12). We read further in 7:3 that Melchisedec was "without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life; but made like unto the Son of God; abideth a Priest continually." Just prior to these verses, in 6:20, we read "....Jesus, made a High Priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec." We also find in the earlier account in Genesis, that "Melchisedec, King of Salem, brought forth bread and wine," for Abraham. This is the first appearance of what was later to become known as "The Lord's Supper."

Consider the facts:

(1) That Jesus was said, by Paul, to be of "the order of Melchisedec, (not Aaron, the first High Priest of the Exodus, as one might have expected).

(2) That the Last Supper, or Eucharist, is a Magic Rite, belonging to the classification of the occult, . . . for what else is the transubstantiation of bread into flesh, and wine into blood, - but magic?

And is'nt Melchisedec - birthless, deathless, without parents or offspring, - - - an occult figure ?

HOD: The Sphere of Mercury, the Greek analog of the Egyptian Thoth, Lord of Magic, Lord of books and learning; Hermes; the intellect, concrete thought, the reduction of intuitive knowledge to form. HOD is especially the Sphere of Magic, because it is the Sphere of the Formulation of Forms, (through Creative Visualization) and is therefore the Sphere in which the Magician actually works. His will makes the link with the natural forces of the Sphere of NETZACH, that ensoul them. These two Spheres - - HOD: Intellect, the concrete mind, the Sphere of the Formulation of Forms, with its counterpart - - NETZACH: creative imagination, energy, instincts, emotions, natural forces, ::: is the level where forms are ensouled and brought into manifestation in Malkuth (the physical plane), through Yesod. The technique: FEELING, (emotion), CREATIVE VISUALIZATION (creative imagination), WILL.

It is this method that is used in Magic. It is this method that is used in working the Mass by those Priests who have knowledge. There are two types of Priests: the beneficed parish clergy - - and the men who belong to Monastic Orders. These Monks frequently bring to the working of a Mass a very high degree of magical power, as any psychic can testify. It is the ensouling of an astral * form with spiritual force which is the real act of transubstantiation. It is on the knowledge of these things that make the workings of the occult and esoteric Fraternities so vital; and it is in the possession of organized bodies of men and women trained in these techniques in the encloistered Orders, that the strength of the one Catholic and Apostolic Church lies; it is the lack of any such inner knowledge which is the weakness of the numerous "Bible churches", - a lack which makes the ritual of some churches, even when worked with full ceremonial, - - as like water unto wine - - when compared with others, - for there the men just "go through the motions" and have no knowledge of the Secret Workings.

N.B.: The same procedure is used in the making of a talisman.*

PLEASE GIVE US A LITTLE MORE LIGHT ON THIS PASSAGE: "THE EARTHLY PILLARS OF OPPOSITION HAVE THEIR PROTOTYPE IN THE ASTRAL WORLD. THROUGH DREAMS, MAN MEETS THESE ASTRAL PILLARS THUS BRIDGING THE GAP BETWEEN THE CONSCIOUS AND THE UNCONSCIOUS."

You raise here a point that has two aspects and I am not quite sure on which one you require assistance: (a) pillars correspondence, or (b) dreams as a means of bridging the gap. I will therefore give a brief opinion on both!

The essence of Martinism is the search for correspondences between the three principal parts into which creation and the pairs themselves can be divided and subdivided ad infinitum. Works of our masters are concerned with the relationships of Man with his First Estate or condition, which means: that part of him that existed on the other planes, -- and with correspondences between God, Man and the Universe. If at the stage of the conventicle in question, we had concluded that the understanding of the correspondences between our present earthly condition and the divine in us was beyond our present power of understanding and better left to further study, -- we were left with the task of working at the correspondences between the conscious (waking) mind, and the unconscious mind; one corresponding to the material or earthly plane, and the other to the astral plane (so-called).

The principles of the pillars — polarity having to be balanced to reach a state of equilibrium — as applied to our earthly existence :- justice tempered with mercy, and numerous other pairs of opposites -: must necessarily be reflected on the astral plane according to our system of correspondences. The form that these opposite poles and reconciling third force would take on the astral plane -- is the subject proposed to the reflections and meditation of the brethren.

Now we come to the dream part. As well as reflections, (which imply intelligent analysis), and meditation which reaches beyond objectivity into subjective understanding, — we have been given dreams, a process of reviewing of the recent activities of the mind for sorting into categories of events either worth storing in the memory, - or "disposable." This reviewing has the advantage of bringing up all activities of the mind, even those of which we may not have been conscious in our waking state. Thus when we have consciously and objectively reflected on a given subject, the unconscious side of our mind was equally active, but its musings and conclusions were not normally perceived by our conscious mind. At the dream stage of analysis, these items can be picked out -- and give us a glimpse into a level of consciousness with which we are not normally attuned. Then, with proper training, and this is not idle talk but factual statement of phenomenon experienced by many of us, and the matter of proper experiment, one can at one point of a dream, without waking up, direct that dream into fields of enquiry AND OBTAIN ANSWERS. At that point, the most difficult thing is to bring back these answers into the field of conscious thought, that is, - to remember them on waking up. But with proper guidance and practice it is feasible.

It follows therefore, that this field of investigation brings us in touch with that which, on the astral plane, corresponds to the pillars on the material plane.

94 05

Six types of dreams

THERE ARE SIX basic kinds of dreams, and you may remember snatches from several of them: clearing the house of clutter, teaching, problem solving, precognitive, prophetic or visionary, and outside interference.

Clearing House Dreams: clean out the input from the day, sorting through mental and emotional clutter, re-running experiences. Often the mind is running a mile a minute when you first try to go to sleep. You are anxious and stressful. These dreams help release useless concerns and help body and mind relax.

Teaching Dreams: give you information on problems you are facing and provide insight on what is going on in your life. You may find yourself sitting in a classroom, talking with a teacher, hearing or giving a lecture. Many discoveries or inspirations have come from teaching dreams.

Problem Solving Dreams: are those you deliberately programme or ask for. All knowledge and information are available to you when you learn how to tap it. When you begin to use dreams for problem solving you are utilising one of your most valuable inner resources.

Precognitive Dreams: give you a glimpse of something that is going to happen in the future. Precognition means foreknowing. Usually precognitive dreams are about someone other than yourself. They have a special feeling of reality about them. As you learn to sense and recognise them, you will be able to tell which images are symbolic and which are literal precognitive information.

Prophetic Or Visionary: dreams come from the mystical level of awareness. Prophesies of old and mystical teachings have come through the visionary level of consciousness. A vision has many qualities within it: insight, understanding, realisation of the oneness of all life, power and love. It has a totally unique quality of awareness about it.

Outside Interference: dreams are produced when something in your physical environment is causing enough disruption to get incorporated in your dream story. For example, you may dream you are very hot and awaken to find you are under too many covers. Indigestion or a full bladder can also affect dream images.

SUPERIOR DEGREE

CONVENTICLE 32

Greetings O Unknown and Silent Ones ! HAVE READY : NOTES "TWENTY-ONE"

It may be that through our efforts at self-analysis, it is becoming increasingly plain that our obligations as Agents of Omneity are far more serious and far reaching than we at first had thought. It may be that lifetimes will be required before we achieve the full perfection we desire. Certainly, we see that no course of study can ever do more than suggest a plan to be followed. The effort to put that plan successfully into operation must always be our own.

Our teachers have been wise in their experience, however, and they have marked the way clearly for us. The plan they have outlined is time-tested, simple and exact. We have much in our favour, for we have learned what many seek for all their lives without ever finding. We have recognized the way our teachers have pointed out. We have, in fact, already begun to walk it. We need have no fear, for if we continue in this well-marked way, we shall succeed.

We have, no doubt, often wished the progress were more rapid; and, perhaps, we have been disappointed that at every step more has been demanded of us individually when we had hoped to have more done for us by others. It is like the process of growing up: the freedom, power, and independence a child imagines an adult to have gradually changes as he realizes that their attainment must always be by dint of individual effort.

The greatest surprise, however, is likely to be that the remaking of oneself is the chief work of the mystic. It is with himself that he must contend in his advance toward every goal. It is himself that is always his chief, sometimes his only, obstacle. The momentary shock of this realisation, however, usually gives way to gratitude in the heart of the mystic student sooner than in others because his teachers have been wise enough to set forth very plainly and simply the means by which the knowledge of self can be made to serve as a steppingstone to the desired goal.

The "Book of Man" is in reality a panacea in that regard. It shows that although the student has a lifetime task ahead of him in moulding the self into a perfectly functioning whole, he need never be in doubt as to the success he is achieving if he makes constant reference to his text and is faithful in applying its principles to himself. Although his acquaintance with this text may have only begun, he will find its simplicity able to serve him at every step of his advance. It is only a matter of daily continuance with the exercises, which have for their end the complete balancing of man that he may function in life harmoniously and as a whole.

Every day brings added evidence that no teaching and no explanation has done so much for man as the explanation and teaching given in the mystery schools. This is nowhere seen more clearly than in the growing recognition that man is unhappy, unsuccessful, and unsatisfied in his adjustment to life because his knowledge of himself is faulty. Psychology, to which modern man has turned more and more desperately in his search for help, has been compelled to accept the age-old mystic view in order to be of any assistance at all. This is encouraging since those not mystically trained are being given encouragement in their struggle to integrate themselves; but it is even more heartening in its substantiation of the rightness of the mystic's instruction.

As we have had pointed out to us in our studies, psychology now recognizes that man is both an unconscious and a conscious being. He is like the iceberg in that while the part everyone sees is the fragment called conscious man, the part that is hidden, the larger and more important unconscious, is nontheless man, too. It is the unconscious that overshadows and conditions man to his surroundings, and also unites him to his past. Whenever man fails to function as a whole, it is because in some way the unconscious and the conscious have become unbalanced.

con'd

con'd

There are four ways characteristic of man's attitude, according to the psychologists: thinking, feeling, sensation, and intuition. We could say they represent the whole man in his response to life. If any one becomes too important and the other three are neglected, the individual's response to life becomes uncertain, unhealthy, and unwholesome. We see these in the conscious man, or the ego; but they are all conditioned or governed by the unconscious. When there is an imbalance, it must be corrected in or through the unconscious.

That is why psychology is seeking to know something about the unconscious side of man. It is interesting that those studies are leading back to metaphysical principles. The methods, too, are an approximation of those used throughout the centuries by all genuine Initiatic Orders. One psychologist, Dr. Carl Gustav Jung, has indeed done mysticism a great (even though indirect) service by showing that in the integration of the self the unconscious must be entered and its shapes and forms studied until once more a harmonious relationship is established. Dr. Jung has here acknowledged the mystic achievement, and he has closely approached the fundamentals which may restore the validity of the mystic way in the eyes of all men. He has helped many to a wholesome view of life by first directing them to their own unconscious and, through acceptance of it, to a reintegrated whole. He would have been the first to acclaim our Martinist procedure in this degree if he had been acquainted with it, for he would have senn in our attempts to contact these great centers of force in the unconscious, the secret of his own successful practice. The leaves of our book, the Sephiroth of the Qabala, and his great unconscious archetypes would have been seen to be related.

It might be helpful to acquaint ourselves briefly with Dr. Jung's discoveries. We might, thereby, find reassurance in our own efforts. Dreams were Dr. Jung's approach as well as ours. He found them to be filled first with images more or less parental, that is, dreams in which the father or mother plays a prominent part. This is especially the case when the individual's attitude toward life is one of escape or withdrawal, when it is immature or infantile. These images persist until one recognizes them for what they are and becomes more mature by heeding their significance. The dreamer also sees himself in his dreams in the aspect he knows, which we might call the ego; but he sees himself as well in two other aspects, or personifications, which may occasionally startle him. These are representations of the way he appears to others and of the side of his nature hidden even from his conscious self. Their names are the Persona and the Shadow. There is one further dream character always to be found, which represents an important but difficult aspect of oneself to recognize: It is that complementary percentage of opposite polarity in each which clothes itself in the dream state as a seperate entity. With men, it is a feminine being called the Anima; and with women, a masculine personality called the Animus. Behind all these lie countless other images of an archetypal nature similar in essence and function to the Qabalistic Sephiroth. When the process of dreams has been entered upon and given the proper heed, the pattern takes shape. One finally perceives the confusing and disparate elements called Shadow, Persona, and Anima merging into a new and better integrated being, which is the new self.

This explanation of our work from the standpoint of modern psychology should make us more than ever grateful for our mystical instruction since it is virtually a return to it after many centuries of trying unsuccessfully to solve life's problems without its aid.

con'd

con't

- - - - - - -

The remaking of oneself is the chief work of the mystic. Our advance depends upon self-knowledge.

Our Martinist teaching aims at producing a new man -- the perfectly integrated self.

The "Book of Man" is a textbook in which we shall find a life-time of study. We must, however, test it by personal and constant application in order to prove its worth.

Modern psychology furnishes an example of the necessity of return to mystic principles if man is to be perfectly adjusted to life.

The methods used by Dr. Carl Gustav Jung furnish a means of assessing the value of our Martinist studies.

Using dreams as the basis of his approach to the unconscious, Dr. Jung described the characters or images most frequently met with in dreams as the Ego, the Persona, the Shadow, and the Anima. In addition, there are parental images.

Any and all of these may lead to the archetypal images in the unconscious, which have a relationship to the Qabalistic Sephiroth as well as to the leaves of the "Book of Man."

Through the dream sequences, according to Dr. Jung, the Persona, Shadow, and Anima merge into a new reintegrated self.

- - - - - - -

The Ninth leaf of the "Book of Man" is called Foundation. It deals with the formation of corporeal man and the decomposition of the universal and particular triangle. Despite the seeming obscurity of this characterization, it may be gathered that the foundation of the new must always be found in the break-up and realignment of the old. In the Qabalistic pattern, the ninth leaf corresponds to Yesod (Yay'-sod), and is almost at the base of the central pillar called the Pillar of Equilibrium. It is also called Sixth Day and El.

As we come to these lower regions of the Tree we find ourselves in a position where it is very difficult to give thorough explanations in one brief lecture. I can only suggest to our Brethren who are interested in studying the Qabala deeply, to pursue this study on their own. Our main purpose is to give sufficient information as will serve as an introduction for personal meditation and to impart the symbol and invocation. These specific techniques are not readily available outside our Order. Kindly refer to your personal diagrams and follow accordingly.

We notice right away that Netzach and Hod have come to rest, in equilibrium, in Yesod. But Yesod is more than just the point of balance between force and form. Each Sephirah, as you know, receives emanations from the one above it on its Column, and this means that Yesod receives an outpouring from Tiphareth, and thus also from Kether. The precipitations Yesod receives from Hod are also from Binah, through Geburah; those it receives from Netzach have come down from Chokmah through Chesed. So, all the presipitations have come down to Yesod from all eight of the Sephiroth above. For this reason, the Qabalists have called Yesod the "Recepticle of the Precipitations." We have the text in the Sepher Ietzirah, which says of Yesod: "The Ninth Path is called the Immaculate Intelligence, because it sanctifies the Precipitations. It verifies and rectifies the plan of their representations, and orders the unity in which they are planned without decreasing or dividing it."

con'd

con't

Yesod, then, must be conceived of as the receptacle of the emanations of all the other Sephiroth, and as the immediate and only transmitter of these emanations to Malkuth, the physical plane. As the Ietziratic Text says, it is the function of Yesod to purify the emanations, and to prove and correct them; consequently it is in the Sphere of Yesod that all operations are carried out which are designed for the correcting of the Sphere of dense matter, or in any way to dispose of its unity of design. Yesod, then, is the all-important Sphere for any magic which is designed to take effect in the physical world.

Yesod is the sphere of that peculiar substance, partaking of the nature of both mind and matter, which is called the Aether of the Wise, the Akasha, or the Astral Light, according to the terminology one chooses to use. This Aether of the Wise is NOT the same ether of the physicists. Let us be sure we note and remember this. The Aether of the Wise, or the Astral Light, is in fact the basis of the phenomena which the physicist attributes to his empirical ether. The Aether of the Wise might, in fact, be called the root of the ether of physics.

Let us now return to the Tree and note that all the Spheres operate according to their nature, and that that nature cannot in any way be altered by any magical or miraculous influence, however powerful. We can only "correct" the "designing" of the representations. The things represented remain constant. The conditions of the material world cannot therefore be arbitrarily disposed of, even by the highest spiritual force, as is popularly believed by those who pray to God to intervene on their behalf, healing their diseases or sending rain upon the earth. Neither can they be influenced by the most powerful wizard with his spells. The only approach to Malkuth is through Yesod, and the approach to Yesod is through Hod, where the "representations" are "designed". Let us now once and for all dis-abuse our minds of the popular idea that spirit can work directly upon matter; - it never does so. Spirit works through mind, and mind works through the Astral Light (or Aether of the Wise) and the Astral Light, or Aether, which is the framework of matter and the vehicle of the life-forces, can be manipulated within the limits of its nature, which are by no means inconsiderable.

All miraculous and supernatural happenings, therefore, are brought about by the manipulation of the natural qualities of the Aether, and if we understood the nature of the Aether, we should understand the rationale of their production. We should no longer attribute them to the direct intervention of God, or to the activities of the spirits of the departed.

(M.H.M.: BE SURE THE POINT IS UNDERSTOOD. IT IS NOT BEING DENIED THAT CHANGES IN THE PHYSICAL WORLD CAN BE MADE, - THE POINT IS THAT THE CHANGE IS NOT MADE DIRECTLY ON MATTER, IT IS MADE ON THE UNDERLYING STRUCTURE OF MATTER, - THE AETHER OR THE ASTRAL LIGHT, - AND THIS IN TURN CAUSES THE CHANGE IN MATTER TO COME ABOUT. SUCH OPERATIONS ARE CARRIED OUT AT THE LEVEL OF HOD.)

From the point of view of magic, Yesod is the all-important Sephirah, just as Tiphareth is the functional sphere of mysticism, with its transcendent contacts with the Supernal. If the Tree of Life is considered as a whole, it will be seen clearly that it works in triads. The Three Supernals having their correlatives on a lower arc in Chesed, Geburah and Tiphareth. Anyone who has had experience of practical Qabalism knows that for all practical purposes Tiphareth is Kether for us while we live in the house of flesh, for no man may look upon the face of God and live. We can only see the Father reflected in the Son, Tiphareth, who "shows us the Father."

Netzach, Hod and Yesod form the Lower Triad, overshadowed by Tiphareth as the Lower Self is overshadowed by the Higher Self. One might, in fact, say that the four lower Sephiroth form the Personality, or unit of incarnation, of the Tree. The Higher Triad

con'd

con'd

of Chesed, Geburah and Tiphareth form the Individuality, or Higher Self, and the Three Supernals correspond to the Divine Spark.

It will be observed that although each Sephirah is considered to emanate its successor, the Triads are always represented, when once emanated and in equilibrium, as a Pair of Opposites manifesting in a Functional Third. In this, the Lower Triad, then, we find Netzach and Hod equilibrated in Yesod, which is conceived as receiving their emanations. But it also received the emanations of Tipareth, and through Tiphareth, of Kether, because there is always a line of force working down a Pillar; consequently, as it received also from Netzach and Hod the influences that they in turn have received from their respective Pillars, it may aptly be called, in the words of Qabalists, the "receptacle of the emanations"; and it is from Yesod that Malkuth receives the influx of the Divine forces.

Yesod is of supreme importance to the practical occultist, because it is the first Sphere with which he makes acquaintance when he commences to "rise on the planes," and lifts consciousness above Malkuth. Having trodden the terrible 32nd Path of the Tau or Cross of Suffering, and of Saturn, he enters Yesod, the Treasure House of Images, the sphere of Maya, that is - Illusion. Yesod, considered by itself, is unquestionably the Sphere of Illusion, because the Treasure House of Images is none other than the Reflecting Aether of the Earth-sphere, and corresponds in the microcosm to the Unconscious of the psychologists, filled with ancient and forgotten things, repressed since the childhood of the race. The keys that unlock the doors of the Treasure House of Images and enable us to command its denizens are to be found in Hod, the Sphere of Magic. It is truly said in the Mysteries that no degree becomes functional until one has taken the next. Anyone who tries to function as a magician in Yesod soon learns his error, for although he can perceive the Images in the Treasure House, he has no word of power with which to command them. Therefore in initiation upon the Western Path, the grades of the Lesser Mysteries go straight up the Central Pillar to Tiphareth, and do not follow the line of the Lightning Flash. In Tiphareth the initiate takes the first grade of adepthood, and from there returns, if he so desires, to learn the technique of the magician relative to the Personality of the Tree, that is to say the macrocosmic unit of incarnation. If he does not desire this, but wishes to become free from the wheel of Birth and Death, he proceeds up the Central Pillar, which is also called by the Qabalists the Path of the Arrow, and aims at Kether. He who enters this Light cometh not forth again. Or, as it is written of Enoch, he walked with God and was not - - meaning that he was Reintegrated. "You cannot see God's face and live" expresses the same idea.

We will bring this explanation of Yesod to a close now, Brothers & Sisters, when you become a Rose+Croix Martinist there will be ample opportunity to delve deeper into this interesting Sephirah.

Now here is the information for charting on your Tree of Life Diagram:

The Magical Image is a beautiful naked man, very strong.

God Name: Shaddai el Chai

The mundane chakra is the Moon.

The virtue is Independence, the vice is Idleness.

The pair of opposites: Peace/War.

The symbol for our meditation is: a pair of footprints.

The Invocation: "O Thou of hidden name and perfect nature, whose foundation is in the Center, plant my feet firmly in the way wherein Thou would'st have me go."

DISPLAY ILLUSTRATION OF SYMBOLS.
HAND OUT NOTES "TWENTY-ONE"
QUESTION MEMBERS ON MYSTIC'S MONITOR 16 - END.

NOTES FOR STUDENTS "TWENTY-ONE"

Have you made your Magic Mirror? Are you using it? Are you recording your dreams? The Book of Man is in your hands. Teachers can only point the way.

It has been said that the motive of Pathworking is the acquisition of knowledge, more especially self-knowledge. Life is a school. We incarnate to learn. Once the lessons are learnt and we have equilibrated our karma, we attain the status of a Regenerated Being and free ourselves from the wheel of voluntary reincarnation. The learning process is rigidly controlled by the Law of Karma. What we sow we reap: no more, no less. Normally, hard knocks force us upwards, as pain forces the child to respect fire. But this is slow. And the occultist is impatient. He wants to hasten his reintegration.

To do so he makes use of a little-known fact: IN KARMIC TERMS, PHYSICAL OCCURRENCES DO NOT MATTER. IT IS OUR REACTION TO THEM THAT COUNTS. Since all levels are real, after their own fashion, the Qabalist attempts to abreact as much of his Karma as he can ON THE ASTRAL PLANE. It is easier to shape than the physical world. Our experiences in life are initiations. On the Astral Plane, within limits, one can choose the initiations he wishes to undertake.

Think about this phrase: As above, so below. What does it mean to you now, ... in the light of further knowledge?

How often should a Pathworking be done? No two people are alike in their reaction to these things, so some method must be used to monitor them. Study your reaction over a period of 10 - 14 days. One working a week is sufficient for a beginner, but after some experience has been gained you may be able to cope with two. If after some days you begin to feel 'hooked', cut it down to one every 10 days at once. If you find yourself hurrying through the day, thinking only of getting home in order to enter this newly discovered world, you are getting a danger signal. Occult work of any kind must never be allowed to assume more importance than your everyday life or work. If after doing a Pathworking once a week you find yourself well able to cope, try one every five days, but never more than that.

Remember: a Pathworking is a form of ritual every bit as powerful as any performed in a temple or lodge. It is very easy to underestimate its power to affect the physical world. The inner world is there to be explored and to learn from ——— not to use as an escape from reality. Nothing is won without effort, the benefits are great and lead to increased awareness of the subtle levels, plus higher degrees of self-control and concentration. But people can become "fairy charmed" and seem to disappear into the invisible world of the mind and become no trace of the person they used to be. THIS IS THE DANGER OF OCCULT WORK AND THIS IS A WARNING TO ALL WHO WOULD TREAD THE OCCULT PATH. Like everything else in life it calls for discipline. Like everything else in life it is the MISUSE, not the use, that causes the trouble.

There are many Doorways to the Astral. The technique to be given in these notes calls for the use of the Tarot trumps. Any Tarot pack will do but if you are setting about to obtain one, try to acquire the Rider/Waite deck. The Tarot trumps or Major Arcana are Archetypal images built on the Hebrew letters. Their association with the Paths on the Tree of Life are shown overleaf. The method of Pathworking that will be given is simple, safe and effective. For those who wish to go into Astral Operations in a wider way, here are some leads:

THE TAROT WORKBOOK by Emily Peach

THE INNER GUIDE MEDITATION by E. Steinbecher

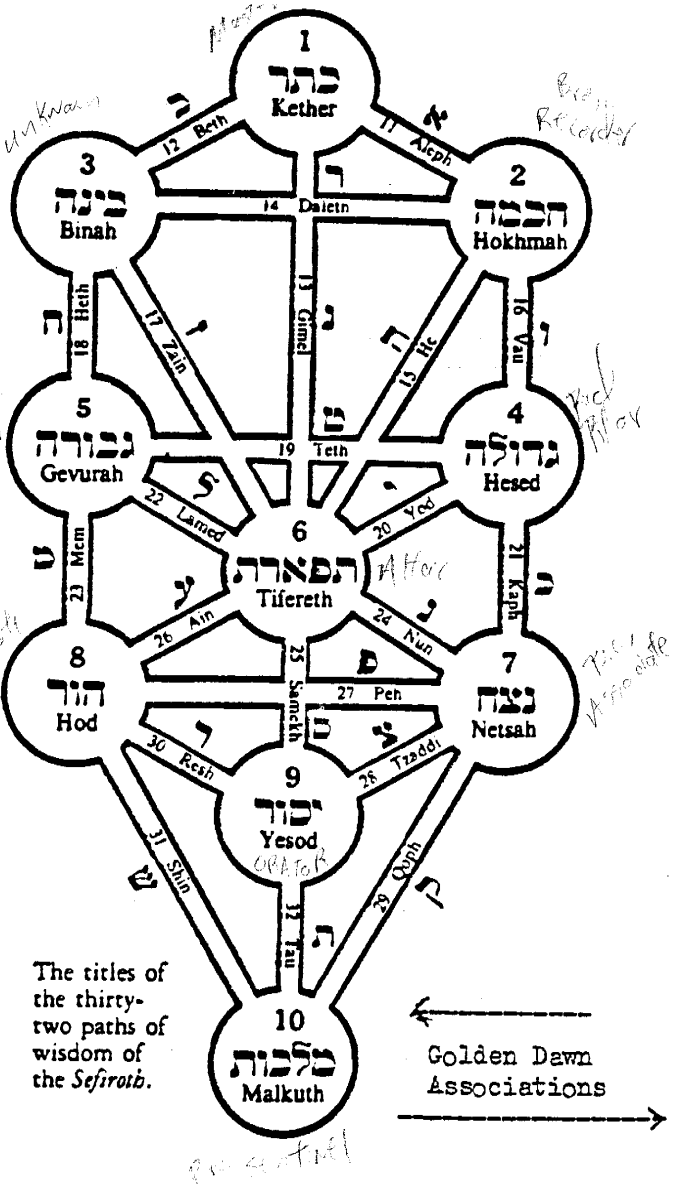
ASTRAL DOORWAYS by J. H. Brennan

FIRST STEPS IN RITUAL by D. Ashcroft-Nowicki

THE SHINING PATHS by D. Ashcroft-Nowicki

FOUNDATIONS OF PRACTICAL MAGIC by Isreal Regardie

All available from: The Aquarian Press, Denington Estate, Wellingborough, Northamptonshire NN8 2RQ, England.



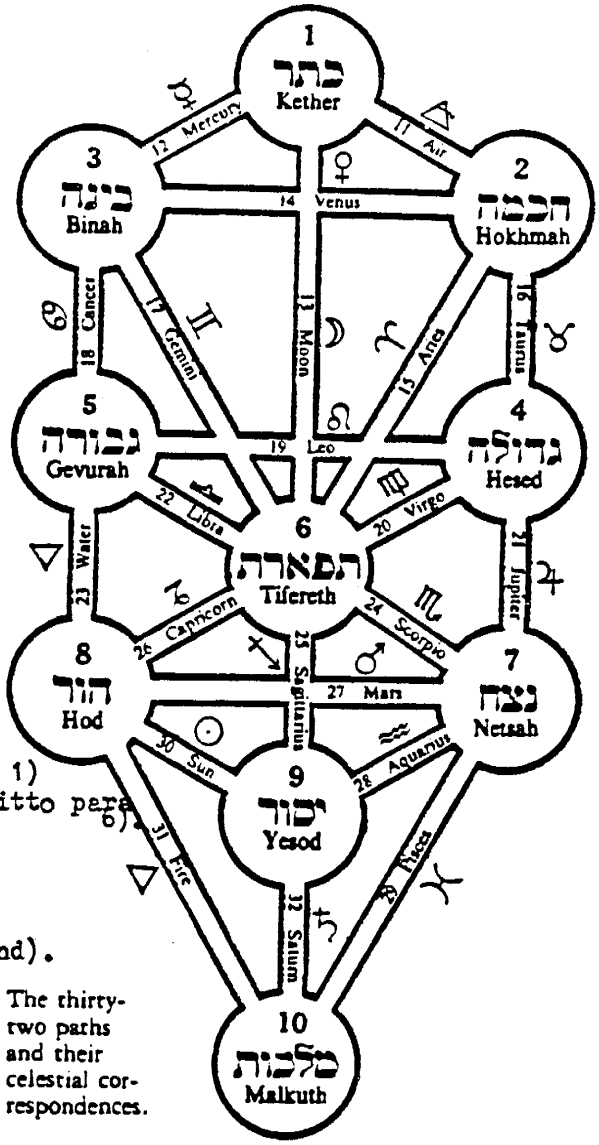
The titles of the thirty-two paths of wisdom of the Sefiroth.

Golden Dawn Associations

We begin at Malkuth - - - - and then have to face all the other trials at some stage of the Path. The "Fool" in the Tarot is said to be Adam since the Fall of Man. He is making his way back to the Crown, his trials being illustrated by the other cards, the correct order of placement on the Tree is said to be lost. Some of us may care to study this.

For this reason we defer the reproduction of a diagram depicting the cards on the Tree. See the standard works on the Qabala. For example: The Tarot of the Bohemians (Gypsies) by Papus.

The Mystical Qabalah by Dion Fortune



The thirty-two paths and their celestial correspondences.

EXAMPLE:
Some Qabalists place the Fool at Path 32, others at Path 11. The positioning of the Tarot Cards on the Tree is an interesting and rewarding study.

THE CHAKRAS ON THE TREE:

Muladhara - MALKUTH (Sacral Plexus).
Svadhisthana - YESOD (See notes 15, p2, para 1)
Manipura - Intersection of Paths 25 & 27. (ditto para 6).
Anahata - TIPHARETH. (Cardiac ganglion).
The Throat Center (Thyroid) - intersection of 19 & 13
Visuddha - DAATH (nape of neck).
Ajna - Intersection of 13 & 14. (Pineal Gland).
Sahasrara - KETHER (Pituitary gland).

SUPERIOR DEGREE

CONVENTICLE 33

Greetings O Unknown and Silent Ones ! HAVE READY : NOTES "TWENTY-TWO"

Too many so-called mystical organizations imagine that intellectual knowledge of a thing is all that is required. This is by no means true. It seems unnecessary, therefore, to point out that an intellectual comprehension of the matters we have been considering at our last nine Conventicles is only incidental to their real understanding. Martinists want to know only what they may use. Whatever has not sufficient practical value to be of use in the matter of reintegration of the self, has little to recommend it to us.

The very practical purpose to be found in our attempts to make dreams extend our knowledge of the unconscious is that we thereby work out a balance between the conscious and unconscious sides of ourselves and become better integrated beings. Every attempt we make to acquaint ourselves with the centers of etheric force which have been called archetypes brings into our conscious selves that much more of our hidden selves and furnishes us with the necessary knowledge for our spiritual advancement. The pattern which the Gnostic writer Dionysius called choirs and the Qabalists the tree of life, we Martinists refer to as the "Book of Man." This under one name or another has been described as being a part of the Empyrean, the World of Orbs, and the World of Elements. There were, according to Dionysius, three choirs of three grades each. The Qabala describes a decade of Sephiroth, the final Sephirah being a return to the first. Our Martinist "Book of Man," patterned after the Qabala, has ten leaves.

In every case, the explanation intended is that a certain arbitrary pattern suggests the presence of Omneity in action in every sphere or at every level of knowledge. Seemingly separate and individual, these are all aspects of Omneity; and Omneity, being infinite, cannot be comprehended by man in Its entirety. (M.H.M: GO OVER THIS PARAGRAPH. IT IS IMPORTANT).

Thus, although One, Infinity seems to be many. Of its aspects, only seven can really be brought within man's comprehension since only these have qualities capable of being understood by man in his present state of consciousness.

This means that in each of the three divisions of the Solar System as the ancients knew it, — Empyrean, Orbs, and Elements — the first three centers of force remain altogether beyond the ability of man to describe. They refer to aspects of Omneity so far above man that he calls them the Trinity. Of the seven remaining, however, he can have knowledge and experience. In the Empyrean, man refers to these forces as Archetypes, or the two choirs: Dominations, Virtues, Powers; and Principalities, Archangels and Angels. The ancients, who some call pagans, considered these to represent the gods in the World of Orbs, calling them Jupiter, Mars, Sun, Venus, Mercury, Moon and Saturn.

However, the Hebrews spoke of them as Days, and the Qabalists named them Sephiroth and set forth their powers under the terms: Chesed (Mercy), Geburah (Force), Tiphereth (Beauty), Netzach (Victory), Hod (Splendor), Yesod (Foundation) and Malkuth (Kingdom). Martinists refer to these same centers by leaves 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10 of the Book of Man.

It is in the World of Elements and in man himself that all of this has application and meaning. For that reason, the ancients emphasized the fact that man was a microcosm, or little world; and the mystic philosophers repeated again and again the phrase, "Man, know thyself." In the body of man, these choirs, Sephiroth, or leaves have their counterparts. We call them nerve centers, plexuses, Inner Holy Planets, psychic centers or chakras. They are a part of the sympathetic nervous system, which in the average individual lies almost wholly dormant. It is complimentary to the spinal nervous system, however, and, when aroused by mystical study and exercise, these centers of nerve force in man function in conjunction with the spinal nervous system. United, these two systems bring about man's spiritual enlightenment.

con'd

con'd

Each center is related specifically to an area of man's physical body, which corresponds to a like center in the universe and in the Empyrean. As each center is awakened to activity, it brings a particular power or development into man's consciousness to be assimilated into his being. Therefore, whether one meditates upon himself, upon a point in space, or upon an area in the unconscious, the remaining two points of the trinity respond. If such a center is unnaturally called into activity through the use of alcoholic stimulants or drugs, both the physical and astral bodies suffer. When all centers are normally functioning and man has balanced their forces within himself, he becomes a new being, for he has completed the path of return and has accomplished his reintegration. This is why the Martinist considers man an exile in the world and recommends his return to Omneity by the way of reintegration.

The meditations offered in this degree are recommended as the necessary and accepted means of stimulating these plexuses into activity. Some may be more readily responsive than others, for the sincerely seeking individual in trying to reach a higher plane of living has oftentimes made more spiritual progress than he is aware of. In fact, he has usually done far more than the ambitious seeker who knows and has been told much and, therefore, resorts to questionable exercises and practices that will let him see, hear, and feel psychically. This is one reason why the who matter is written about so indefinitely: Ambition has no place in the true mystic's make-up and to attempt to hurry the spiritual process has many times brought tragic failure to otherwise capable students. If the spiritual process were plainly set forth, it would only lead to its wholesale misuse by ambitious and improperly prepared individuals.

The foundation of instruction which our Martinist instructors have laid down for us has been such that the simple but effective exercises this degree provides will be altogether sufficient for our continued growth and protection.

In using the meditations on the various leaves of the "Book of Man", two methods are in order. You may either go from 1 to 10 and then start at 1 again; or, you may go up the Tree, that is from 1 to 10 and then from 10 to 1. Continue to use the exercises from the early degrees, especially exercise "C", remembering the mask and the cloak as well. In fact, it is a good idea to mentally dress yourself in your Martinist Regalia before doing all meditations and exercises.

Let us now bring our work on the "Book of Man" to a close with an examination of the tenth leaf.

The Qabalist called the 10th leaf, Malkuth (Moll'-kooth), Kingdom. It will be observed that the conformation of the Tree falls naturally into three functional triangles, but that Malkuth participates in no such triangle, but stands apart, and it is said by the Qabalists that it receives the influences or emanations of all the other Sephiroth. But although Malkuth is the only Sephirah that does not participate in a triangle, it is also the only Sephirah that is divided into four quarters, which are assigned to the four elements of Earth, Air, Fire and Water.

con'd

con'd

And although it is not functional in any triangle, it represents the end-results of all the activities of the Tree. It is the nadir of evolution, the outermost point on the outgoing arc, through which all life must pass before returning whence it came.

Malkuth is said to be the Sphere of Earth; but we must not make the mistake of thinking that the Qabalists meant by Malkuth only the terrestrial sphere. They meant also the Earth-soul, - that is to say, the subtle, psychic aspect of matter; the underlying noumenon of the physical plane which gives rise to all physical phenomena. Likewise with the four elements. These are not earth, air, fire and water as known to the physicists, but are the four conditions in which energy can exist. The mystic distinguishes these from their mundane counterparts by referring to them as the Air of the Wise, or Earth of the Wise, etc., as the case may be.

The physicist recognizes the existence of matter in three states. Firstly, as solid, wherein the particles of which it is composed adhere firmly to each other; secondly, liquid, in which the particles move freely over each other; thirdly, gaseous, in which the particles all try to get as far away from each other as possible, or in other words to diffuse. These three modes of matter correspond to the three elements of Earth, Water, and Air (of the Wise), and electrical phenomena corresponds to the element of Fire. Esoteric Science classifies all phenomena manifesting upon the physical plane under these four headings, as giving the best clue to the real understanding of their nature. And it recognises that any given force can pass from one stage to another under certain conditions, just as water can exist in a state of ice and steam as well as its normal fluidity.

The mystic sees in Malkuth the end-result of all operations; the Pairs of Opposites cannot be said to have completed any given cycle of experience until they have achieved the settled equilibrium which gives the state of Earth, or coherence. When this is achieved, they build a permanent vehicle of manifestation and stereotype its reactions; the machinery of expression thus evolved becomes self-regulating, and will continue to function with the minimum of attention, just as the human heart opens and shuts its valves with perfect regularity in response to a stereotyped cycle of nervous impulses and the pressure of the blood.

The great point to be remembered in connection with Malkuth is that herein is achieved stability. It is in the inertia of Malkuth that its virtue lies. All the other Sephiroth are in varying degrees mobile; even the Central Pillar only achieves equilibrium in function, just as a tight-rope walker achieves it.

Like all the other Sephiroth, Malkuth can only be understood when considered in relation to its neighbours. But in this case there is only one neighbour, - Yesod. No understanding of Malkuth can be arrived at except through an understanding of Yesod.

While Malkuth is essentially the sphere of form, all coherence of parts, except simple mechanical stresses and electro-magnetic attractions and repulsions, depend upon the functions of Yesod. And Yesod, though it is essentially a form-giving Sephirah, depends for the manifestation of its activities upon the substance provided by Malkuth. The forms of Yesod are, in the words of the novelist, "such stuff as dreams are made on" till they have picked up the material particles of Malkuth to body forth their forms. They are systems of stresses into whose framework the physical particles are built. - - - - And equally with Malkuth, it is inaminate matter until the powers of Yesod ensoul it.

We should therefore conceive of the material plane as the OUTWARD AND VISIBLE SIGN OF INVISIBLE ETHERIC ACTIVITY. Malkuth, in its prime essence, is only known to the instruments of the physicist. It goes without saying that where there is life, there is Yesod, because Yesod is the vehicle of life; but it should also be realised that where there is any kind of electrical activity or conductivity, whether of crystals, metals, or chemicals, there is Yesodic force in function. It is this fact, by the way, which makes certain substances suitable for use as talismans, because they will take a charge of astral force.

con'd

con'd

Malkuth is therefore not only the low point on the Tree of Life, but the turning point, since all the forces that have flowed down into it must begin the slow climb back up the path to the source from which they came.

The stability of Malkuth is expressed in the fact that it is the only Sephiroth in a state of equilibrium that has been precipitated by a sphere which is in a similar state. Where it not so, the earth plane and all those who dwell upon it could not exist in stable material form. As we have seen, the Sephiroth above Malkuth, on the Central Pillar, have been described as in a state of equilibrium also, but it in an equilibrium between action and reaction, not a stability in manifestation of form. Malkuth gives us the stability of inertia; things remain as they are, - at least for a time. We are able to recognize people and things we know because they do not change radically from day to day.

Regarding the relationship of Malkuth and its neighbour Yesod, we might make the comparison of the sculptor and his clay, each of whom relies on the other for significance. The sculptor would have nothing to work upon were it not for the clay, and the clay would remain a shapeless mass were it not for the sculptor. Yesod would have no outlet for its formative powers were it not able to manifest them in Malkuth. Yesod is the sphere of form, but these are the forms of the Will o' the Wisp, - changing more swiftly than the eye, - a proverbial eye - can follow. Yesod is the former of things; Malkuth is that which has been formed.

Malkuth is the visible form of the forces precipitated by Yesod, and all living things in Malkuth receive their life forces from Yesod. But Yesod does not work directly on matter, since atoms are quite recalcitrant and resist force outside themselves. Material particles are extremely resistant and unresponsive in their nature, and it is only by working on the most tenuous aspect of matter, to which Initiates give the name of the Element of Fire (the Primordial Fire we met with in our earlier study), that Yesodic forces can produce any effects. Once a response can be obtained from this Elemental Fire, the other Elements can in their turn be influenced. In other words, Yesod must work to influence the subtle Elements beginning with Fire, after which the other Elements of the Wise fall into line and, through them, the material particles themselves.

Let us be sure that we understand clearly the Primordial Elements of the Wise. Elemental Fire is a kind of over-state of matter which which only the most advanced physics has any acquaintance. It might best be called a state of relationships rather than a thing in itself. Elemental air might be described as a capacity to achieve these relationships, and as such, is the vital principle of physical life; for it is only in so far as matter has a capacity for organization that organic substance is possible. Elemental Water, the Water of the Wise, is just plain protoplasm; and Elemental Earth is inorganice matter.

(N.H.M.: PLEASE SEE THE MYSTICAL QABALA BY DION FORTUNE, PAGE 269 FOR FURTHER DETAILS ON THIS SUBJECT.)

In spite of what has been said all along, - that all the Sephiroth are equally holy - one is still apt to think of Malkuth as materialistic and unspiritual. But Malkuth is not the lowest point of evolution, the bottom of the barrel of life.

con'd

con'd

It should be considered as the marking-buoy in a yacht race around which the yachts must go before they can turn for the finish line. Any yacht that puts about on to the homeward course before it has rounded the marking-buoy is disqualified. We must spend the necessary time in the material sphere, learning the lessons it has to teach us. To attempt to escape from it before we have mastered the physical plane is impossible; the one who tries will only have to go back and start again. There is no cheating in this race. It is not that some Deity will disqualify him; he will disqualify himself, because he has not the basic knowledge required before he can take the next step. The chief reason that the kindergarden graduate is not permitted to enter college is that he would not be able to comprehend the work, or possibly even read his assignments. The path must be negotiated step by step. Those who try to escape from the discipline of matter before they have mastered the lessons of matter are not advancing heavenwards, but suffering from arrested development. It is these spiritual defectives who flock from one to another of the innumerable wildcat uplift organizations and fast-dollar gurus that come to us from the Far West and the Far East. They find in cheap idealism an escape from the rigorous demands of life. But this is not a way of advancement, but a way of retreat. Sooner or later they have to face the fence and clear it. Life brings them up to it again and again, and presently begins to use the whip and the spur of psychological sickness; for those who will not face life, dissociate; and dissociation is the prime cause of most of the ills that mind is heir to.

Mankind, since the beginning of civilization, has worked in the Sphere of Malkuth, and that work has been most productive in terms of art, music, literature and science. We live not only a better life, but a richer and fuller life, than did our barbarian ancestors. Those who would return to the primitive life with Jean Jacques Rousseau, must be prepared to live without medicine and hygiene, without electricity and indoor plumbimg, without any of the ameliorating features of our lives. They must also be prepared to suffer from toothache, famine, and the depredations of wild animals. One does not turn his back on civilization and all its works, but one must master the essence of Malkuth and begin the climb to the top.

In bringing this review of Malkuth to a close I will quickly give you these attributions which I am sure you will find interesting:

The Four Elements correspond to the four temperaments as described by Hippocrates, the four Tarot suits, the twelve signs of the Zodiac, and the seven planets. If the implications of these statements are worked out, it will be seen that herein are contained some very important keys.

The Element of Earth corresponds to the Phlegmatic Temperament; the suit of Pentacles; the signs of Taurus, Virgo and Capricorn; and the planets Venus and Luna (the moon).

The Element of Water corresponds to the Bilious Temperament; the suit of Cups; the signs of Cancer, Scorpio and Pisces; and the planet Mars.

The Element of Air corresponds to the Choleric Temperament; the suit of Swords; the signs of Libra, Gemini and Aquarius; and the planets Saturn and Mercury.

The Element of Fire corresponds to the Sanguine Temperament; the suit of Wands; the signs of Aries, Sagittarius and Leo; and the planets Sol and Jupiter.

In considering the Microcosmic Tree, the physical body is Malkuth; the etheric double is Yesod; the astro-mental body is Hod and Netzach; and the higher mind is Tiphereth. Whatever the higher mind can conceive can readily be brought through into manifestation in the subjective Malkuth.

con'd

In a sense, Malkuth, or the tenth leaf of the "Book of Man" is the most important, for it compliments all the others. It has the greatest affinity with and stands nearest to the first leaf from which all others come.

Most significantly, in man's body are to be found seven nerve plexuses, which have a relationship to the etheric forces characterized by the Seven Days, or last seven leaves, of the "Book of Man."

Man, therefore, is in truth a microcosm, or little world, and by the meditations outlined in this degree we can stimulate these nerve plexuses into normal functioning, thereby bringing about our illumination or reintegration with Omneity.

This progress cannot be rushed, but the methods we have recommended are simple, safe, and effective. It should never be departed from by the aspiring Martinist.

The magical image is a young woman, crowned and throned. god name: Malekh Adonai

The mundane chakra is the Sphere of the Elements.

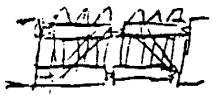
The virtue is discrimination and the vices are Avarice and Inertia.

The Qabalists referred to our tenth leaf under the designation, Malkuth, Kingdom. The Zohar calls it Seventh Day, Day of Rest or Return, and gives it the name Adonai.

The symbol is a closed gateway. The pair of opposites: Dominion/Dependence.

The invocation for our meditation is: "At the gateway to the Path of Return, we stand humbly seeking permission to enter. May we ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom!"

DISPLAY ILLUSTRATION OF SYMBOL FOR MEDITATION



M.H.M.: THIS BRINGS THE SERIES OF QABALISTIC MEDITATIONS TO A CLOSE. THESE POINTS MUST BE EMPHASIZED TO THE BRETHREN:

The work of Reintegration is an individual work — no one can do it for us.

The Brethren have been given all they need by way of practical techniques and philosophic explanations to enable them to both DO and UNDERSTAND. All the Work of the Three Degrees has been useful information, to the point, and no "filling". IT IS UP TO THEM NOW TO USE WHAT HAS BEEN GIVEN.

The Qabalistic Meditations, like all the other techniques, - use of the Mask & Cloak, self-examination, and the various exercises - must be incorporated into daily life, and lived and used until the end of one's life.

Regarding the Qabilistic Meditations: One can work down the Tree, or down and then up and then down again, etc.... or one can start at the top each time. Or from the bottom.

PATHWORKING MEDITATION "TWENTY-TWO"

First, read through the entire set of directions.

Choose one of the Major Arcana cards. Spend at least 10 minutes 'mind's eye examining' it. Make sure you can reproduce this card in your mind. Test this by closing your eyes and seeing how much of the picture on the card you can reproduce in your mind.

Settle yourself comfortably in your armchair, with your feet together on the floor, and your hands in your lap. Having achieved a comfortable position, close your eyes and make a deliberate effort to relax. Begin this relaxation process at your feet and progress right up to your face and head. (Check hands, face, shoulders, these are usually areas where tension resides).

Breathe easily and naturally through your nose and become aware of your breathing. You may, if you wish, say the word 'one', silently to yourself whenever you breathe out. If you become aware of noises in the room or in the street, make a deliberate effort not to think of them as annoyances, because this will only make them more intrusive. If you try to accept them, you will find they are NOT intrusive at all.

When you feel you are sufficiently relaxed,* call up in your mind the image of the card that you have chosen and see it as a card, that is, as a piece of pasteboard with a border and a picture hanging against a black background.

When you have fixed that image firmly in your mind, concentrate on it and on it alone and commence to draw the image closer, very slowly, so that the black background you imagined disappears ——— and the entire range of your mental vision is filled by the picture of the card, surrounded by its white border.

When you have achieved this, you will find that you are facing a landscape through a kind of a door. On the doorstep of that door will appear the name of the card you have chosen. It will look very large. Above, you will see the white border of the card as the lintel of the door. At your sides and within reach of your mental hands, will be the white door jams that, again, is in reality the white border of the card.

What you must do next is likely to prove difficult at your first attempt, but will become easier with practice: you must now mentally step over the doorstep and into the landscape beyond it. Walk into the landscape and keep on walking.

Once you have overcome the difficulty that is usually experienced at this point, you will find that you are free to wander in the landscape you have vizualised, and to adventure in it. You may also converse with the inhabitants of that landscape, and learn from them; for you will find that your attempt at creative vizualisation has indeed potentiated your imagination as it is supposed to do; and that both the landscape and its inhabitants will appear to be quite real. This is, of course, quite facinating, but you should keep it always in the forefront of your mind that the experience is subjective and NOT objective.

Thereafter it remains only to return - - and this must be done correctly if it is to be done well and offer no unaccustomed shock to your system.

Returning to normal consciousness should therefore NOT consist of suddenly opening your eyes and leaping out of your chair in a state of disorientation, - but of completing the entire process outlined in reverse.

This is achieved as follows: Simply step backwards through your doorway, seeing the card name appear beneath your feet and the white door jams and lintel.

*Do not begin the visualization until you are quite relaxed and the mind is still. over

con'd

When you have fully returned to normal consciousness and before you do anything else, you should write down a full description of your experiences, including: what you saw, what you did, what you felt, and the gist of any conversation you may have had. This latter may prove difficult as it is notoriously hard to recall what is said in these situations; but you should at least try to remember and write down any fragments you can, however nonsensical these may appear to be. Practice makes perfect in this, as in everything else; and quite often phrases that seem very odd indeed when you write them down take on a certain sense when you look at them afterwards.

Such realizations as you do obtain, of course, will be absolutely personal to you and have meaning in terms of your own psychic structure. They are intended to give you insight into your own personality; and in this regard you should be aware that such insights are sometimes unpleasant because they jog to the surface certain memories that you have very carefully forgotten. Perseverance, if this happens, it is the only way to clear things up; and with perseverance ::: however unpleasant this might be ::: is the way you should proceed, for it is the only sure route to success.

Because realizations ARE personal and individual, you will find that if you discuss your experience with someone else who is using the same card, that their experiences and realizations are different. This does not mean that somebody has gone wrong. On the contrary, it is worth listening to everybody's realizations about a particular card because each individual's realization will simply be a facet of A TRUTH, the single truth of which the card is an expression.

When you have written down all your realizations, you should ensure your full return to consciousness by getting up and doing SOMETHING - - even if it is only stamping the feet, which is, incidentally, the classic and accepted gesture with which to end a meditation session, because it symbolises a very literal 'feet on the floor' return to the material world. Drinking a glass of water or taking a light snack is also in order.

SUPERIOR DEGREE

CONVENTICLE 34

Greetings O Unknown and Silent Ones:

Tonight we are at Conventicle no. 34, which means that there are only six Conventicles left to complete this Degree. Those of you who were in the Degree when it opened and who have achieved the required attendance, will be eligible for culmination when next that ceremony is scheduled.

As you know, Brethren, meeting as we do (once, twice, three, four) times a month, it is not possible in such a limited space of time to delve deeply or exhaustibly into the various topics which come up. Such in-depth work must be pursued independently by each member, according to his/her particular interests and ability. Generally, what we have striven to accentuate are the practical methods for the attainment of Self-Knowledge and Re-Integration.

We have noted the three-fold division of God, Man and Nature: If you are partial towards Nature, you will be inclined twoards becoming a Natural Philosopher. If you prefer the study of Man, your leaning will be towards physiology and psychology. And those whose interest lies in the knowledge of God, - you will be inclined towards metaphysics. Whichever line of thought each of you favours, I hope you will feel encourage to pursue your individual and particular interests - - and share your insights and discoveries with us at future Conventicles. In this way the knowledge of the collectivity of the Lodge will be raised.

Tonight we will take a break from the arduous topics that have held our attention over recent Conventicles and focus on one of our respected brothers of the past. He was one of the twelve members who formed the first Supreme Council of our Order under Papus, and was the Grand Master of the Qabalistic Order of the Rose+Croix. His name was Stanislas de Guaita. This dearly loved brother gave the following address to a group of SS.II at a Third Degree Conventicle, in June, 1889, at Paris. His message is as vital and valid today as it was then. We can all profit greatly by giving it our close attention, - and I crave your indulgence:

(NOTE TO MASTER: PAUSE WHENEVER YOU CONSIDER APPROPRIATE FOR QUESTIONS/COMMENTS/ EMPHASIS).

"My Brothers: you have been invested successively with the three hierarchal degrees of our Order. We salute you as S:. I:. , and after you have transcribed and meditated upon our discourses you will in turn become an Initiator. Into your loyal hands we will then entrust an important mission: it will be your duty as well as honour to form a group of which you will become, before your own conscience and before Divine Mankind, the intellectual Father and, when necessary, the spiritual Tutor.

"It is out of question here to impose upon you any dogmatic convictions. It does not really matter whether you believe yourself to be a materialist, a spiritualist, or an idealist, - - whether you profess Christianity or Buddhism or proclaim yourself a complete skeptic or free-thinker. We are not going to hurt your feelings by molesting your mind with problems that can only be solved by yourselves, in the quietness of self.

con'd

con'd

"Provided that you are kindled with genuine love towards all Mankind, that you never attempt to sever the ties of solidarity that bind you so closely with the Human Kingdom, considered in its synthesis, you will go on belonging to a supreme and truly universal religion because this it is that manifests and imposes itself (multiform, it is true, but essentially identical with itself) under the veils of all the exoteric cults of the West and East.

"As a psychologist, name this feeling just as you like: LOVE, SOLIDARITY, ALTRUISM, BROTHERHOOD, CHARITY. As an ecconomist, or philosopher, call it: TENDENCY TOWARDS SOCIALISM, or, if you wish, towards COLLECTIVISM, COMMUNALISM, ... Names mean nothing ! Honour it, as a MYSTIC under the names of DIVINE MOTHER or HOLY GHOST.

"But whatever you may be, never forget that in all really true and profound religions, that are founded on Esotericism, the primary or essential percept of this Esotericism, is to carry that feeling into effect.

"A sincere and unselfish pursuit after Truth - - - this is what your Mind owes to yourself. A fraternal kindness towards other men, - - that is what your Heart owes to your fellow men. With the exception of these two duties our Order does not pretend to prescribe any others - - at least not in an imperative manner.

"No philosophic or religious dogma is forced upon you. As to the doctrine which we outlined for you in its essential principles, we only ask you to meditate upon it in your spare time, keeping an open mind. It is through its own persuasion that the traditional Truth must win you over to its cause !

"We broke the seals of the Book for you, - but it is for you to study the letter of its message first, and then to fathom the spirit of the mysteries contained therein.

"We started you on the Path, and the role of your Initiators should be confined to that. If you attain by yourself the knowledge of the Arcana, you will earn the name of Adept. However, be well aware of this: the most learned masters would try in vain to reveal to you the supreme formulae of Science and Magical Power: THE OCCULT TRUTH CANNOT BE TRANSMITTED IN A DISCOURSE. EVERYONE HAS TO EVOKE, CREATE AND DEVELOP IT WITHIN ONESELF.

"YOU ARE INITIATUS - - - ONE WHOM OTHERS HAVE PUT ON THE PATH. STRIVE TO BECOME ADEPTUS, - - - ONE WHO HAS MASTERED SCIENCE BY HIMSELF, IN OTHER WORDS, A SELF-MADE NEW MAN.

"Our Order, as I told you before, limits its expectations to the hope of fecundating good soil by sowing good grain everywhere; the instruction of the S:. I:. is precise but elementary. Whether this humble programme will satisfy your spiritual ambition or whether your destiny will lead you, one day, to the threshold of the mysterious temple, in which shines since many centuries the the luminous landmark of Occidental Esotericism, listen to the last words of your unknown Brothers and may these words germinate in your mind and bear fruit in your soul. I swear to you that you may find there the infallible

con'd

con'd

criterion of Occultism and that the keystone of esoteric synthesis is there and nowhere else. But why should I insist if you understand and wish to believe. If you do not, what could be gained from insisting further? You are quite free to accept what remains for me to say, as a mystical allegory, or literary fable without import, - - or even as an imprudent fraud.

"It is up to you, - - - but LISTEN: Whether you let the grain germinate or rot, I am going to sow !

"IN PRINCIPLE, AT THE ROOT OF BEING, IS THE ABSOLUTE. THE ABSOLUTE, WHICH RELIGIONS CALL GOD CANNOT BE CONCEIVED OF AND HE WHO PRETENDS TO DEFINE IT, ONLY DISTORTS ITS NOTION BY GIVING IT LIMITS. "A God defined is a finite God", or in another version: "A God defined is a God defiled" - said Eliphas Levi. '(Un Dieu défini est un Dieu fini)'.

"From this unfathomable Absolute springs eternally, the Androgynous Dyad, formed by two indissolubly united principles: the Vivifying sulphur of Spirit ☥ and the Universal Living Soul ☿ or Mercury. The mystery of their union constitutes the Grand Arcanum of the Word.

"Now, the word is collective man considered in his divine synthesis before differentiation. It is the Celestial Adam before his fall, before this Universal Being became modalised through the passing from Unity to Number, . . . from the Absolute to the Relative, . . . from Collectivity to Individualism, . . . from Infinity to Space, . . . and from Eternity to Time.

"Here are some elements of the traditional teachings concerning the fall of Adam: - Incited by an inner motive whose essential nature we must conceal here, which Moses terms נ ח ש NAHASH, and which we will define as an egoistic thirst for individual existence, a great number of the fragmentary Words, potential "consciousnesses" vaguely awakened under the form of emanations in the bosom of the Absolute Word, detached themselves from this Word that contained them.

"They detached themselves - smallest of subdivisions - from the Unity-Mother that begot them. Simple rays of this occult sun, they darted endlessly into the darkness their newly-born individuality which they wished to be independent from the anterior principle, in one word: autonomous.

"They fell into matter, illusion of substance in a frenzy of objectivity, into matter which is to Non-being as mind is to Being. They descended to the elementary existence, down to the animal, the vegetable, the mineral. Thus was born matter immediately issued from Spirit, and the concrete Universe began an ascending existence, rising from stone craving for crystallisation to Man, capable of thought, or prayer, of surrendering to reason and able to sacrifice himself for his fellowmen !

con'd

con'd

"Contempory Science discovers the existence of this sensitive reaction of the captive Spirit, sublimating the progressive forms of matter and Life in an effort to leave its prison, and studies it under the name of: EVOLUTION.

"EVOLUTION IS THE UNIVERSAL REDEMPTION OF THE SPIRIT. WHEN EVOLVING, THE SPIRIT RE-ASCENDS.

"But before re-ascending, Spirit had come downwards and this is what we call INVOLUTION.

"How did the verbal sub-divisions stop at a given point of its fall? What force permitted him to retrace its steps? How has the dim realisation of its collective divinity been finally awakened within itself under the still imperfect form of Sociability? These deep mysteries cannot even be touched upon here but, if Providence is with you, you will know how to acquire knowledge of them.

"I shall stop now, we have led you far enough on the path and you are now provided with an occult compass that, though it may not prevent you from going astray, will at least bring you back on the right path.

"These few ideas on the vast problems ('grand affairs' of Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin) of human destiny are concise and with you rests the onus of deducing the rest and finding the right solution. But understand this well, my Brother, I adjure you for the third and last time: that Altruism is the only Path that leads to the unique and ultimate goal. That is to say the re-integration of the sub-divisions into the Divine Unity; - the sole doctrine that may provide the means thereof and which represents the liberation from material shackles to enable the ascention through the superior hierarchies, towards the central luminary of re-generation and peace.

"Never forget that Universal Adam is a homogeneous whole, a living Being of which we are the organic atoms and constituent cells. We all live one with another and one by another and, should we be redeemed individually (to use Christian language) we should not cease to suffer and struggle till all of our Brothers are redeemed with us !

"Intelligent egotism then reaches the same conclusion as does traditional Science: UNIVERSAL FRATERNITY IS NOT A MYTH BUT A FACTUAL REALITY. He who labours for other labours for himself. He who kills or injures his neighbour, degrades himself. Let not such mystical terms frighten you; transcendental doctrine is never arbitrary. We are the mathematicians of ontology, the algebraists of metaphysics.

"Bear in mind, O Son of the Earth, that your great ambition should be to regain possession of the zodiacal Eden, from where you should never have come down, and to re-enter, finally, that Ineffable Unity - away from which you are nothing - and in whose bosom, after much labour and trial, you shall find that Celestial Peace, that conscious sleep, which Hindus know under the name of NIRVANA, the supreme bliss of Omniscience, in God."

STANISLAS DE GUAITA S∴I∴

con'd

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 90-100

LIBER #95

Personal & Confidential TENTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

A:: L:: G:: D:: יהשוה G:: A:: D:: L:: U::

S:: L:: A:: du Phil... Inc... N:: V:: M::

Personal & Confidential

THE BYZANTINE ORDER

CLASSIFIED

DISCOURSE AT THE RECEPTION TO THE FIRST DEGREE

Sir

The transmission of occult teachings which is an important goal of our venerable Order, is not spiritually justified if it is not conditioned by a valid doctrine. And if esoteric knowledge was the appanage of Primordial Man, it was so only within the parameters of a perfect inner harmony.

This is why, before undertaking this particular initiation into the higher sciences, it is important that you understand the doctrine that justifies it. This doctrine was codified and transmitted by our illustrious founding masters, such as Martines de PASQUALLY, and his two essential disciples, Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin, called "The Unknown Philosopher", and Jean-Baptiste Willermoz. In turn, we are going to attempt to define this doctrine to you, taking into full consideration the requirements of our time and free of all dogmatic suggestions from any church.

- o -

An absolutely perfect being is one to whom nothing is missing. If God found the need to create the World, it is because He was missing something. Let us thus conclude:

A/ Either He was not absolutely perfect before creating this world, and that He became so only because he created it, and at the moment He created it. From then, this God is no longer immutable and He is subjected to time. And this, for a God, is unthinkable.

B/ Either the world, or the worlds, (meaning the successive "Creations") is or are in all eternity, associated with the divine existence. And this justifies one of the attributes given to God: that of being All-Powerful. Since this condition must be exercised throughout eternity, this in turn implies that in all eternity there would necessarily be Creations and Created beings.

- o -

CLASSIFIED

Also, a conscious being is one who has acquired the notion of his individual existence by noticing a relationship between himself and something outside of himself. If God created the world in a fragment of eternity, it is that before this world came into manifestation, God existed alone. At that time, He was not conscious of this existence. He only became conscious of it from the moment He created the world. In this case, God is not immutable, since He can go from the state of non-creator to that of creator and He thus depends on something: this obligation that He had to become the creation. This again, for a God, is something unthinkable. Hence God did not create only this world, and the creations are, in all eternity, following each other, being associated with the divine work, even to the very existence of God.

-o-

If God created only one universe, he necessarily had to give it an end, and when this universe would have disappeared, God would no longer be an absolutely perfect being because He would have nothing upon which to exercise His Omniscience. He would stop being a conscious being because the necessary element between Himself and something outside of Himself, would be missing. If that was the case, God would not be immutable ... and this would be unthinkable.

Or, more logically, God did not create only one universe, and the creations succeed other creations, just as creatures succeed other creatures and only their temporary nature distinguishes them from God, who is the only permanent Being existing in Himself by His own volition.

If on the other hand, God created only this world, or he gave in to a necessity, He would thus not have been All-Powerful since there would be something over Him which would dominate and direct Him ... and this is not God. Or He had not given in to a necessity and hence God can desire something that is not absolutely necessary. And a God who is given to whim is no longer a God.

Let us thus conclude that the chain of creations, within eternity, is associated with the divine existence, and it is the very manifestation of God, because it is first of all: LIFE.

-o-

We say that one thing is exterior to another when it does not have a common contact with that other thing. Thus, if God is exterior to the world, there is no point of contact with Him. If this were so, God would not be omnipresent. Or, on the contrary, He is not outside the world, He is one with it and the imperfections of this world would then mingle with His divine perfections. And this is nonsense.

CLASSIFIED

Let us thus conclude that the contact between God and the world is realized by an intermediary element, a kind of "pattern" of communication between the two correspondents, and this Mediator is the sum total of the spiritual beings, meaning a permanent universe which is distinct from the others.

-o-

It is unthinkable, however, that God be associated with a collectivity, that the divine unicite (this is the word in the French text, I cannot find an equivalent word in English - Translator) be doubled, for all eternity, by a plurality which is benefiting from the same ontological privileges.

Let us thus conclude that only this collectivity is permanent, but in its wholeness and its principle, and that its constituting elements, the spiritual beings, are temporary and this fallible and by this very fact, mutable. This justifies the first postulate of our master Martines de Pasqually in his famous Treatise of the Reintegration of Beings:

"Before Time, God emanated spiritual beings for his own glory, in his divine immensity..."

Before Time, meaning before birth of this present creation, we could say "in the night of the eternities", since the sacred writers of Judaism and Buddhism have accustomed us to the plurality of the word, so as to better define eternity itself.

"God emanated", (meaning he projected outside of His essence), certain conceptions which, in order to be individualized and liberated, lost the perfection which was inherent in them while previously integrated in Him.

"For his own glory", meaning in order to manifest this Omnipotence which is one of His principle attributes, and without which God would not be absolutely perfect.

"In his divine immensity", since it is very evident that all is in God, although all is not God.

-o-

Let us continue with the reading of the teachings of Martines de Pasqually:

"These beings had to exercise a cult, within which the Divinity had fixed them (i.e. the beings) by laws, precepts, and eternal commandments..."

We observe that the word 'cult' as used by Martines de Pasqually has many meanings in latin:

CLASSIFIED

cultello means to flatten or smooth something to ground level, or to measure a plot of land, cultus means agricultural cultivation, intellectual or spiritual cultivation, taking good care of the body, a rite of veneration or adoration.

We could even retain the definition given in Scottish Rite Freemasonry: "ORDO AB CHAO", as the work reserved for spiritual entities. In a word, they were intelligent intermediaries, the responsible tools of Divinity, in the elaboration of successive creations. It was there the collection of demiurgi.

Also, the emanation made them free beings, endowed with moral responsibility. They were in effect, according to the beautiful expression of Martinez de Pasqually: "emancipated". It was there, on the part of God, a manifestation of His infinite love for all creatures, for, what mother or father would prefer to cuddle and love a purely mechanical robot, in place of a child endowed with an independent soul? What robot, even if it was perfectly made, could take the place of a loved one, even if the latter had faults?

We can thus consider as a divine error the fact of having wanted free and responsible creatures. But this advantage had in itself an inconvenience: its opposite.

-o-

These beings thus "emancipated" and left to make their own choice in matters of action, only become secondary causes, to participate, at their level and according to the initial impulse, in the organization and conduct of the new universe in which they were participating.

Some of them had let surface from within, the desire to become in turn, beings and creators of 3rd and 4th causes; they conceived of a plan to limit the Divine essence in its creative operation, in order to reserve this domain for themselves. They desired in their pride to see created from themselves new spiritual beings, which would depend solely upon them, as they (themselves) depended upon their Creator.

It is then that a degradation was produced, which consisted of a crystallization relative to their essence, and to which was associated the limitation of their domain, which they could do nothing about. These latter, in effect, were an integral part of their own nature, and their ontological faculties could not be modified. But a certain densification of their domain limited their action. And thus came into being the present universe, full of imperfections and evils.

CLASSIFIED

These beings thus integrated in the present creation, having freely manifested themselves by their acts by a sort of self determination ... will, when the end of this creation comes, remain fixed in the final state which they have attained. And it is a sort of mysterious fire which fixes them, hardens them, and soaks them for the role they will have to play in the following universe.

Thus fixed in evil, they will remain, in the new creation, instruments of temptation, corruption and destruction, just as those entities who remain fixed in goodness, will constitute the elements of purification, of liberation, in the organization and evolution of this same new universe.

-o-

It is thus to conduct the regeneration of these fallen spiritual essences that the Supreme God emanated Man, which the Judeo-Christian tradition called Adam, a Hebrew word meaning at the same time: entire humanity, or humanity as a whole, the Archetypal Man, his image, the color red, a precious red stone. Thus the word Adam does not designate a carnal being, as the exoteric religions affirm, but a collectivity. The first man, in his wholeness, was a collectivity, and the central spirit of this collectivity was the true Adam, the animating cell. (For the economy of this lecture, we will use this word to designate the collectivity of the new divine emanation.)

-o-

Just as the spiritual entities he was charged to look after, guide, and illuminate, Adam was at first showered with potential faculties as well as a multiplicity of knowledge and again, for the same reasons, he was given free will.

And the same temptation which caused the first spiritual beings to fall, again, surfaced in the mind of the first man (Adam). Like them, he wanted to create independently of the divine source, and sullied by this perverse desire, the form which issued forth from the creative will of Adam was an imperfect form, without any of the initial perfections of his creator.

Parallely, as this rebellious ill will was born in Primordial Man, a strange ecstasy was developing in the collectivity which formed his being: the desire to know what was under, the desire to know, not only good but also evil. The desire for experiences even at the cost of a degradation.

And this was the explosion of the human egregor, the dispersion of this collectivity, its corruption, analogous in spiritual mode with that of bodily death. And since in this case we are talking about a fall caused by a free will, a descent in the corresponding planes of existences followed, meaning less inferior planes by the effect of a progressive matierialization leading towards a beastiality and beyond.

CLASSIFIED

Here is an image which will make the process of the fall and reintegration more understandable:

If we imagine a necklace we will observe that it is never called anything else; we say "the necklace". We break the string. The pearls scatter, they fall on the ground in all directions. Now it is no longer a necklace, we speak of finding the "pearls".

Some of them will be lost under the furniture, in the obscure corners of the room. We would have to wait a long time before finding them, in spite of our looking for them. Others would be quickly found, because they have never gone too far from the point of the fall, nor the eyesight, of the owner of the necklace.

Each one of the pearls carries within itself its own destiny and this destiny was programmed at their individual creation. In the same way, the preexisting souls in the human collectivity carry their destiny by the effect of a mysterious predestination.

When the owner of the pearls has found them all, he will restring them on a new thread, in the initial order of their first placement which was a function of their size and their orientation. And when this reconstitution is finished, we will then talk again of a "necklace", we would no longer speak about "pearls".

If there are any missing ones, the absence would be due to the imperfection of the means used to look for them. But if the owner was a perfect being, if he has all the necessary means to look for his pearls, and if he has all the time in the world to do so, and no impatience, he would find all of them.

If we replace pearls with souls, necklace with TOTAL MAN, and the owner by Providence, all the problems of the final reintegration is resolved, the Apocatastasis is thus justified.

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

CLASSIFIED

Q: D... y... k... S...?
A: I k...w t..e U...n P...r, I r...d ...e c...r, t...e C..k a...d t...e M...k.

Q: From your response, I guess you are a Martinist. Why did you become one?
A: To work towards universal reunification.

Q: What do you mean by that?
A: A universal republic and a universal religion.

Q: Is that all?
A: Equally to the reintegration of man in his initial spiritual faculties.

Q: What do you mean by that?
A: The privileges that were those of universal man, at the dawn of time.

Q: What do you mean by that? What is Universal Man?
A: Universal Man, or Primordial Man, in all the initiatic traditions, is an egregor, a collectivity made up of the totality of the souls.

Q: This is thus a collectivity, and not an individuality?
A: It is by degrading himself, and by fractioning himself, that this collectivity gave birth to the individualities.

Q: What were the privileges of primordial man?
A: A complete science, without any shadow of error in his collective intelligence, original justice, all the virtues of this collective soul, as in his heart, the absolute empire of the collective soul upon the collective form, and the absolute empire over all creatures inferior to primordial man.

Q: Is that all?
A: To this was added the principle of immortality, the absence of suffering, since the collective soul protected the universal form from all evil, and itself could not be thwarted in any way.

Q: What do you mean by beings inferior to primordial man? Are you referring to the animals?
A: In this term is contained all the intelligences constituting the world of essence and as far as the animals evoked by the exoteric traditions we are talking of their archetypes and not of their earthly, carnal individualities.

Q: In what consisted this primitive degradation to which you refer?
A: One of the essential privileges of primordial man was his total freedom, he was free in his actions and his choice.

Primordial man let surface in this egregor of whom he was the collectivity, the desire to free himself of all guardianship and to become creator in turn, according to his own views. Accepting a mysterious suggestion, prisoner of a strange ecstasy, he let surface in all his constituent faculties, an anarchic selfishness and his spiritual privileges gave in to their opposites.

CLASSIFIED

Q: What does the black cloth which covers the altar in this degree signify?
A: It is the collectivity of primordial man, meaning faith, hidden knowledge, modesty, the disdain of honours, inflexibility, the spirit of self-effacement and sacrifice, discretion.

Q: Is that all?
A: Hebrew, the sacred language in our tradition, has three similar letters to refer to the colour black, the aurora and dawn. Punctuated differently, the letters "shin", "heh" and "ruach" give indifferently the word "shâar" meaning black, and "shar" meaning aurora, morning.

Q: Does black then signify the dawn of time?
A: Most exactly, since darkness preceded Light and to refer to God in his absolute unknowability. We speak in the scriptures of the "Divine Darkness", black is thus synonymous of "generation."

Q: What does the pentagram with the point up signify?
A: It signifies primordial man in all the powers of his free will, capable of mastering his passions when his intelligence dominates his instincts, and the perfectly equilibrated separation between his head and each of his four members shows him as ruling the universe in a balanced way.

Q: What does the sacred book which must be on the Martinist Altar symbolize?
A: The moral law without which, and in all religion, there is no reintegration possible.

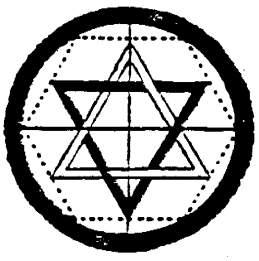
Q: What do the three luminaries signify?
A: In the divine plane: "Wisdom", "Strength", "Beauty". In the human plane: "Knowledge", "Sapience", "Perfection". In the material plane, "Sulphur", "Mercury", "Salt".

Q: What does the sword placed on the sacred book signify?
A: It reminds us of the advice of King David: "Let the high praises of God be in their mouth and a two edged sword in their hand!" (Psalm 149:6).

Q: What do you mean to say by thus quoting the Psalmist?
A: To recall the teaching of our Master, the Unknown Philosopher: "Purify yourself, ask, receive and act since the whole work is in these four modes..."

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

A:: L:: G:: D:: יהשוה G:: A:: D:: L:: U::



S:: L:: A:: du Phil... Inc... N:: V:: M::

Personal & Confidential

CLASSIFIED

THE BYZANTINE ORDER

DISCOURSE AT THE RECEPTION OF THE SECOND DEGREE

My Brother

When you joined us as an Associate, we told you: "The transmission of occult teachings which is an important goal of our venerable Order, is not conceived nor spiritually justified if it is not conditioned by a valid doctrine and in effect, if esoteric knowledge was the appanage of Primordial Man, it was thus so in the frame of a perfect inner harmony..."

In concluding that starting principle, we exposed the doctrine to you. Today, before going further into other degrees, the ultimate esoteric warehouse of our Order, we have to give you the keys to the perfect return to this inner harmony. And to do that, we go back again to our Master, the Unknown Philosopher, to whom we shall turn and hear the echo of his voice regardless of the numerous years that separate us from him.

In spite of all the beauties described in the temporal creation, we agree, he tells us, that we only see the laws of rigor and violence, of facts that are not free, and which does not show any intelligence in the agents who operate them, although there is necessarily one of these agents, who commands them in all their acts, since these acts are executed with order and regularity.

It would then be in vain to look for, in matter, true and permanent images of the principle of life, from which we are unfortunately separated; and if man did not have any other sign than material objects to find the knowledge of this principle, divine justice would have very little to ask of him.

And we have already noticed that, in man, however corrupt he may be, there would always be traces of virtue in faculties which would be foreign to all material nature: we have seen that, in all the centuries, in all peoples, the ideas of goodness and virtue were known, although they have so often distorted them, and they have even applied respectable names to criminal objects.

CLASSIFIED

Even more, while considering his bodily force, man could prove to himself that he possesses virtues that are even more active than those to which we have just referred. We could say, in effect, that he bears upon himself living signs of all the worlds and of all the universes. And if we consider intellectually three of the principle organs of which his head is endowed, we can see why the organ of audition is absolutely passive, receiving impressions, but really doing nothing outside of itself. Why is the organ of vision both passive and active at the same time, expressing without the interior affections and communicating in the inner heart of hearts the impressions of exterior objects? Lastly, why is the tongue an absolutely active organ having the double privilege of painting and expressing with the same faculty the operations of thought, or reasoning, and the movements or passions of the soul?

We could even bring our intellectual observations to the invisible center which animates these three organs, up to the hidden sojourn of the thought of man, which has its see inside the head, just as the supreme Divinity has put his in an impenetrable sanctuary, although his attributes manifest the existence and action to all beings.

And we will find in this invisible man the number of the faculties of the divine Principle which constitute the type of all beings. Although they only act in us by a slow and arduous succession, they are absolutely invisible, as they are in the Divinity. Thus they should have had the same object, and if man did not have the fatal privilege to loose himself by the sole power of his will, they would be those who would not recognize his difference from his model...

In the words of our master, the Unknown Philosopher, we easily find, my brother, the basis of his own doctrine, this technique of the inner way which must bring us to the Supreme Cause of all, so that, according to the words of scripture:

"...et Lucifer oriatur in cordibus vestris." (II Peter, I:19)
"...and the morning star rises in your hearts."

This technique of the inner way, is, in four words, the perfect mastery of self, geared towards a goal which is perfectly understood and assimilated.

Only in this Degree of Martinist Initiate will we give you the keys to this perfect mastery of yourself, because the goal, if it was briefly exposed to you in the Degree of Associate, could only be understandable to you according to your own evolution...

CLASSIFIED

And, the supreme science of the initiates of all time has always been Alchemy. We are not dealing here, my brother, with turning lead into gold, although this process is at the same time the criterion and the schemata which directs all inner alchemy... and a perfect knowledge of physical alchemy would always be the best means of control of spiritual alchemy.

In one as in the other, the theme is the same. A luminous principle was separated in his first ontological habitat, and because of a mysterious "descent" in planes which are more and more heavy and dense, this luminous principle found itself engulfed in thick darkness. The goal is then to liberate it from this matrix to give it back its primordial liberty and its primordial luminescence, so that in turn, it becomes the liberating agent of the other particles of light which are still in darkness.

This matrix, which imprisons you with psychic scales so dense that it makes you forget your primordial nature, has to be broken and dissolved. This is a painful operation, heart wrenching and depressing, but an operation which is nevertheless indispensable. It is called Putrefactio. The medieval Hermeticists gave as a symbol for this the skull as well as the raven. What is involved here is a true relinquishing, caused by the action of a painful acid, called V.I.T.R.I.O.L., which must be extracted from yourself, my Brother...

At all times, it is important to remember that, physically, or spiritually, alchemy knows two opposing paths which eventually merge. The humid path and the dry path. And each one requires the preparation of their particular Vitriol. The Vitriol of the humid path is not obtained like that of the dry path. In the domain of spiritual alchemy, our venerable Order, returning to the basic principles which were elaborated upon by our old Masters the Rose+Croix, only follows one path, the dry path, leaving to all the diverging mystics the road of the humid path.

This latter is based on Water, the dry Path is based on Fire. "Igne natura, renovateur integra..." says the old rosicrucian adage! It is by Fire, my Brother, that our present nature must be renewed, and it is by Fire that you will obtain this interior Vitriol we spoke to you about. Be careful however not to mix these two techniques... because if suddenly placed in the presence of the other, there are here two Elements whose reactions are generally brutal! It is just the same with the two "Baptisms". Baptism of Water and Baptism of Fire are each at the beginning of their respective paths. One must know how to choose.

The technique which we intend to transmit to you is expressed in symbols and by analogies with the chime aurigère; it consists of:

CLASSIFIED

1° destroy the gross covers we call "scales", which heredity, the physical and material profane life and self indulgence, have accumulated throughout profane life; it is there we perform the Work with the Black, Putrefactio. (Putrefaction).

2° purify, enlighten, ventilate, the Inner Man, in the outer porch, his sanctuary, his holy of holies, so that in this same Inner Man is released the silhouette of a Perfect Temple: meaning the Work with the White, my Brother.

3° in this sublimated prima materia, make the Divine descend, insert in it a spark coming from another plane, just as the soul inserts itself in the embryo, just as the ferment aurigère is associated to the matter which is prepared for the final Great Work. This is the Work with the Red, my Brother.

In effect, the central problem of the Gnosis is the problem of Evil, of the Evil which comes out of Matter, its most essential doctrine must necessarily be that of salvation. But Hermeticism, meaning the collectivity of doctrines and sciences attributed to Hermes Trismagistus, does not know any saviour in the Christian sense of the term, as does the Kabalah, by the way. The Nous is not condensed down here to "retrieve" its "elect". Without a doubt salvation is a grace, a gift from the Divinity, but an initial gift and not an ulterior one. All human souls, according to the Hermetic Tradition, receive, before being incorporated in carnal forms, the gift of intellect. But once descended down here all these souls do not necessarily present themselves as immutable and capable of using this intellect. They can only accomplish this by meeting two conditions: they have to have received the revelation of the Gnosis, meaning to have learned, either from Divinity itself, during an ecstasy, that it is itself a part of God and must return to him. Once this revelation is understood, they must have the strength to convert, but in the complete sense of the word, the Greek metanoia, meaning to turn one's back to the present goals, in order to contemplate their opposites.

This dual reception, of firstly the Gnostic revelation, and second the moral strength in order to put it into practice, is the effect of a dual grace: firstly of a "grace of light" which is initiation, secondly of a "grace of strength" which is its consequence.

Those who show themselves to be well "oriented", (this term speaks, my Brother), are henceforth assisted, according to the same Hermetic Tradition, by a daïmon paredros, of an associate spirit, of a familiar genie, of a guardian angel for the Christians. Let us not forget that the Latin familiaris also means intimus, its synonym, meaning that which is narrowly united, where is found in the greatest depth, in this same "interior Temple", that we just taught you how to build within yourself.

CLASSIFIED

This entity which inserts itself in man, is a spark of the Divine Plurality. And a day will come, where this divine intellect will substitute itself, in the faithful of the Gnosis, to the "me" of the same faithful. The moral being, who was imprisoned by the seven vices of Astral Matter, is replaced by the Divine Word, by the Platonic Logos, the Eternal Architect installs himself in him, and the Hermeticist becomes a "new man", who is made divine down here because his transelementation is accomplished.

It would be unreasonable and it would be in vain to read to you in their details the keys of the "technique of the Inner Way", they will be given to you physically, and it will be up to you, my Brother, to put them into practice. The construction of the Interior Temple is the work of Spiritual Masonry, and the Tools of the Builders will be presented to you and the ways of working them will be taught to you at another time.

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

CATECHISM OF THE SECOND DEGREE

Q: Are you a Martinist Associate?
A: I wore the white sash from the left shoulder to the right hip.

Q: Are you a Martinist Initiate?
A: I wear the white sash from the right shoulder to the left hip.

Q: What do these arrangements mean? Why this variation?
A: The white sash from the left shoulder to the right hip was masking the Liver. The white sash from the right shoulder to the left hip masks the Heart.

Q: What do these organs mean in our symbolism?
A: Heart and Liver are opposed to each other just as the brain and sexual organs are contraries. Thus man is a cross inscribed in a pentagram.

Q: What does the Heart and the Liver signify?
A: By covering the Liver with this white sash, the Martinist Associate renounces selfishness, hypocrisy and intolerance. By later on covering his Heart with the same sash the Martinist Initiate renounces pride, cruelty and despotism.

CLASSIFIED

Q: What were the consequences of the initial fall of Primordial Man which you mentioned in the first degree catechism?
A: The virtues of Prudence, Temperance, Justice, Firmness, Charity, Hope, Faith, Intelligence, Sapience, were subjugated by their contraries. And Primordial Man, who exploded into immeasurable individualities, Avarice, Gluttony, Lust, Laziness, Envy, Anger, Pride, Blindness, and Error became preeminent.

Q: Are these all the consequences of this initial degradation?
A: The descent of the world of essence into the world of substance, which implied the loss of immortality, contact with suffering, and the suffocating of one's intelligence in a degrading bestiality, were the immediate consequences of this Fall.

Q: What does the b...k and w...e a...r c...h of the second degree mean?
A: Hebrew, which is the sacred language of our tradition, has three similar letters used to denote the symbols which are mysteriously associated to one another. Thus the three letters Lamed, Beth, and Nun punctuated differently meant at the same time, by the word Labân: white being, to make bricks, dry being, death, to be dehydrated and leprosy.

Q: The word Labân, white in Hebrew, thus signifies a state of degradation?
A: It even signifies death, since the entrance to the tombs were painted white and from this we get the expression "whitened sepulchres", the shrouds were white in all the ancient world, the robe of the initiates was white, meaning death to the world.

Q: Is that all?
A: Deriving from the Hebrew Labân, we find in the same language lêhbânaa, which referred to the bricks (symbol of the enslavement of Israel in Egypt, and of fallen man in matter), and which is also the name of the Moon, and of the lunar light in particular.

Q: What do you conclude from this?
A: The Moon is the symbol of error, since it does not have light of itself, it only reflects that of the Sun. It is also one of the images of death, since the word Camar in Arabic is the name of the moon, and the word Camardé means death in the same language.

Q: What does the black part of the a...r c...h symbolize?
A: It is to recall the primitive state of this aurora of time which saw the glory and the power of the Universal Man to which this present degradation followed.

Q: Does this two coloured a...r c...h suggest an idea of condemnation?
A: They suggest this idea to the Present and to the Past, by their comparison. But the red border which frames the Pentagram is synonymous of hope in a future regeneration.

CLASSIFIED

Q: Do you then know the symbolism of the colour red?
A: I don't know it but I think I can guess it.

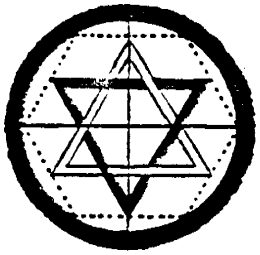
Q: What does the Pentagram signify?
A: The Pentagram with its five points seems to destroy the harmony of the quaternary, it breaks the divine name of four letters. And thus the number five becomes a symbol of the Fall, of Death, of Ruin after its corruption and the putrefaction which results.

Q: If Man has broken the link which attached him to the Divine, if he is separated from his creator, if he has generated a double-binary by degrading the divine quaternary, how can one hope for regeneration?
A: By introducing the letter Schin between the term Yod-Heh and the term Vau-Heh the harmony of the essential divine name is thus established, since the Hebrew name Iéowah becomes Iéoschouah, and that from "Being-of-Beings", we make "Divine Succor".

Q: What does the second Pentacle placed upon the altar and veiled with a violet cloth signify?
A: The veil allows me to see only a silhouette and I can only guess that there is a superior teaching associated with this symbol.

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

A:: L:: G:: D:: יהשוה G:: A:: D:: L:: U::



S:: L:: A:: du Phil... Inc... N:: V:: M::

Personal & Confidential

CLASSIFIED

THE BYZANTINE ORDER

DISCOURSE OF RECEPTION TO THE THIRD DEGREE

My Brother,

Today you are going to be received in the second class of our venerable Order, that of Supérieurs Inconnus, initiates and initiators, the first being that of the Associés and the Initiés.

Already I can tell you that this word Supérieur Inconnu designates principles and not individualities. As a Supérieur Inconnu, you will only be the vehicle, the hypothesis, the medium of an entity which is, itself, and itself alone, the holder of this title and its responsibilities.

In the course of the study of the doctrine of our Master, the "Unknown Philosopher", you were brought to realize the necessity which has come about among men of visible Signs, of substantial Agents, and of true Beings, clothed like ourselves, of sentient forms, but at the same time Beings who were the depositories of these first Powers that Primordial Man had lost, that he was constantly looking about him and he could only see feeble indices, powerless, in the face of everything about him, although subdivided, would have to be represented to man with their primitive characters.

It is very possible that, among these Signs, among these Agents, there have been those who have existed and still exist among men, without those who are ignorant or corrupt suspecting anything. Their action, their walk, cannot be discovered except by those who are pure enough to understand them, and they are almost always without meaning for the others ... just as all intellectual acts are unknown to the matter from which our bodies are formed. And this is what causes or brings so much obscurity or incertitude, on the existence of these Signs and these Agents.

However, this interior cult should not be hidden to you and these sentient means, transmitted to man by these pure Agents, command on its part a very vigilant attention, an invincible firmness, a very strict discernment, in order not to confuse the true actions which must love this cult, with the false actions which continually tend to disfigure it, and that are always ready to lead men astray, be it visibly or invisibly.

These are the teachings of our Master, the "Unknown Philosopher".

-o-o-o-o-o-o-

CLASSIFIED

CATECHISM OF THE THIRD DEGREE

Q: Are you an Unknown Superior of Martinism?
A: I've worn the white sash from the left shoulder to the right hip, then from the right shoulder to the left hip, successively as an Associate and an Initiate of Martinism; and now they are both crossed on my chest, as a collar.

Q: What does this disposition mean?
A: That neither the Liver nor the Heart need to be protected any longer, since having renounced selfishness , hypocrisy, intolerance, then pride, cruelty, and despotism, I have awakened in myself contrary qualities, or at least I am making an effort to do so every day.

Q: What are the qualities that an Unknown Superior worthy of that name must practice?
A: First prudence, patience, moderation, simplicity, charity towards all beings, and liberalism.

Q: Is that all the meaning of the collar?
A: Descending towards the roots of the androphorous cross, it shows the necessity to discipline the most inferior instincts coming from the sex organs, this pole which is opposed to the brain. Moreover by placing the protective pentacle at the level of the epigastrium, it reminds the Unknown Superior that the qualities coming from the Heart (simplicity, charity, liberalism), must not be weakened in their deviations: laziness, sensuality, and indifference.

Q: What does the red a...r c...h of this degree signify?
A: Hebrew, sacred language of our tradition here again has three letters to express the word Red. Punctuated differently, the three letters Aleph, Daleth, and Mem, mean successively: Adam: Red being, to become red, to appear red,
Adâm: Man, Humanity,
Adêm: a precious stone with a bright red colour.

CLASSIFIED

Q: How do you associate these diverse meanings?
A: Red is also a symbol of Man, of the first Collectivity, and of a mysterious and regenerative stone, since the Philosopher's Stone of the alchemists is presented as a red powder with crystals of the color of ruby.

Q: Thus Primordial Man constituted, in the Bosom of the Universe, the equivalent of the Philosophers Stone in the metallic world?
A: Exactly, since he was emanated to work towards the regeneration of fallen intelligences.

Q: The order of disposition of the altar cloths upon the Martinist a...r is then emblematic of the Great Hermetic Work?
A: Here we are talking about a second symbolism which is just as traditional as the first one, which lays upon the Hebrew meaning of the three colours.

Q: Can you give the alchemical correspondences of the three colours and the essential steps of the Great Work?
A: The black is equivalent to Putrefactio, to the Head of the Raven, to the Skull. The white is equivalent to the Silver Moon, to the Stone to the White. The red is equivalent to the Philosophical Sun, to the Stone to the Red.

Q: Why are the Hebrew names of the three symbolic colours made up of three letters each, having nine letters in all?
A: The number nine, according to our Master the "Unknown Philosopher", symbolizes "the crushing of all bodies, and the virtue of all bodies", be it to the destruction of individuality, to the good of the collectivity. Lastly, this number comes right before the number 10, which is a divine number, of the return, reintegration is symbolized by the number nine.

Q: What does the hexagramatic Pentacle, occult symbol of Martinism mean?
A: It is a symbol upon which to lean containing by its composition all the doctrine of our Order.

CLASSIFIED

Q: Break down the symbol.
A: It comprises of exactly ten traits and ~~six geometric elements~~.

Q: Name them.
A: The Center, the Circumference, the equal armed Cross, the two diametrically opposed triangles, and the hexagon which surrounds them.

Q: What do the geometrical elements signify?
A: The center is the symbol of the First Cause. The circumference is the image of the Permanent Universal Creation. The equal armed Cross, symbol of the quaternary, is the image of the First Man. The triangle with its point upward is a symbol of the world of Essence, the triangle with its point downward is that of the world of Substance. The hexagon which surrounds it is symbolic of the six rhythmic periods, the genesis of the Universe.

Q: Apply these meanings to our doctrine.
A: Upon the white page, nothing. This is the image of the Abysmal God, the Infinite, the Eternal One in himself. Let us pose the central dot, this is here his aspect as the Creator God. However, he is both at the same time, he would not have become Creator because this would imply a variation of his essence. Thus, God has always created, and there have always been universes. Since then, the circumference has always been issued from the permanent Center. This being done, God created Space. Removing from his essence, some of the imperfections, the successive creations appear, with them, the inevitable imperfection. But to organize the substance of each new universe, God has to separate the two terms of the inevitable binary, "Heaven" from the "Earth", "Light" from "Darkness". Then appears the horizontal diameter, which is but the stretching of the central dot in two opposing directions. To repeat in each half (substance and essence), the apparition of the inevitable bi-polarity, source of all creation, then appears the vertical diameter. This equal armed cross is the symbol of the number four, image of Man. This latter is going to continue the divine work, and the Center removes itself or gives its place to him. In the plane of realization, at the level of secondary causes, Primordial Man is going to reedit the separation of the world of Essence to that of Substance. Thus appears the two opposing triangles. At the same time they appear, inevitably their angles are going to unite by the appearance of the surrounding hexagon, this being the six phases of all new creation. The Pentacle is thus constituted, summarizing thus the whole Martinist doctrine.

CLASSIFIED

Q: Has this transcendent figure ever been altered?
A: When Primordial Man was tempted to free himself from the Creator, meaning from the Center, he distanced himself. At the same instant the Center reappeared. God took over the place of the one to whom he had given the role of looking after Creation. And at the same time, two new diameters appeared, which signify the new one who was sent to replace him. (i.e. The Repairer - Ed).

Q: Why is the Martinist's Robe black?
A: To recall the necessity to find the virtues of Primordial Man, meaning: Faith, Occult Knowledge, Modesty, Inflexibility, the Spirit of Sacrifice, Silence.

Q: Why is the c...r Black?
A: Symbol of the fraternal chain, it symbolizes the Order which must remain faithful, secret, sapient, inflexible, silent.

Q: Why is the sash and the collar white?
A: To remind us of the state of corruption from which the Martinist initiate liberates himself, and also to indicate the other virtues to acquire: regeneration through light, purity, loyalty, and also the frailty of these Virtues down here.

Q: Why is the c...k red?
A: To recall the power of Primordial Man, since red is the colour of primacy, and also to remind its wearer that he represents down here the image of the First Adam, and, like the Philosopher's Stone, a transmutive element of all beings.

Q: Why does the Martinist initiate wear white gloves?
A: Gloves are symbolic of righteousness and faith. But it is also a reminder of the disappearance of one's individuality, since henceforth his acts must remain anonymous, he must no longer bear finger prints, and this anonymity thus becomes the image of the collective action. Because the action of an isolated member should be the same as that which the whole Order would do, thus the glove, anonymous and immaculate, shows the unanimity of action of all the affiliates.

Q: Why does the Martinist initiate carry a sword?
A: So as to remind him that when he entered the Order, he accepted to participate in a constant battle, and to despise cowardice and maintain his virility.

CLASSIFIED

Q: Do you pretend that the Martinist ~~initiation carries~~ a sacrament of knighthood?
A: Very much so, because those who established its mode of transmission all had this quality, they all belonged to an Order of Knighthood and kept as a mode of initiatic transmission the traditional dubbing with the sword. The white Collar is also symbolic of the Knight's sash, which was traditionally white.

Q: How was it worn?
A: Horizontally, by the bachelors, (low knights), as a bandolier by the knights, and generally as a collar by the commanders.

Q: Was it conferred to women?
A: There were Orders of female knights although it was rare, and they were exclusively for women. Many famous Orders notably that of the Temple, possessed a female organization. But the "Dames" of the Order were not dubbed, they only wore the ritualistic regalia.

Q: If our Order carries the sacrament of knighthood, what is its source?
A: The Order of Teutonic Knights, by the Strict Templar Observance, and The Order of Knights of the Holy City, The Order of the Temple, The Order of Dagger Bearers, and The Order of Saint Andrew of Russia, and also The Order of Saint Andrew of Scotland, which came out of the The Order of the Temple, and which was the knightly source of The Order of Elus-Cohen founded by Martines de Pasqually.

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

NOTE ON THE PAST MASTER'S CANDLE

The use of this candle was borrowed from the ceremonial of the first Emperors of Byzantium which in their public appearances had placed at their right upon a cathedra of honor, the open Gospel upon which was placed a candelabra with a lit candle and this candle represented the Glorious Christ.

CLASSIFIED

This usage came straight out of traditional magic.

Still today, the gypsies keep this custom of lighting a beeswax candle upon the tomb of a dead one on All Soul's night, next to food brought as offerings. Attracted by the light and the heat and by these foods, the inferior soul of the deceased one inserts itself in the beeswax candle which is a good captivator of occult fluids, true necromantic vault. This candle only has to be brought while still lit into the gypsy camp so that it may be used as an active agent for diverse purposes. In some branches of the M:: O:: the Past Master's Candle is placed upon a c...k of the Order which is placed on a chair at the right of the Lodge Master. We find an aspect of this usage with the lighting and extinguishing of the nine luminaries of the Order, during the dubbing ceremony of the "Knight of the Temple" (Strict Templar Observance and of the Knights Beneficent of the Holy City [rectified Scottish Rite]). Within the Order of Elus-Cohen of Martines Pasquales, certain beeswax candles were placed upon certain areas of the operative circles which also served as vaults for the condensation of the entities invoked, for the Réaux-Croix of the ultimate degree. The use of these particular candles is frequent in the true esoteric cenacles of 18th century Europe.

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 90-100

LIBER #96

Personal & Confidential TENTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

MARTINIST ORDER OF THE WEST INDIES

Dear Brothers & Sisters

WHAT IS MAN

We read in the very first chapter of Genesis that man is made "in the image of God." What does this mean? That YOU have an infinite potential! A casual observation of the world around you will disclose that Man stands at the pinnacle of creation. He has developed capabilities far and beyond all other creatures. How has he attained this enviable position? Through the creative use of his MIND! And yet it is scientifically known we use less than 10% of our MIND power! Learning how to use your mind creatively is the key to unlocking the door to your infinite potential.

THE CONSCIOUS & SUBCONSCIOUS MIND

Although we generally speak of the conscious and subconscious mind (and even of the superconscious mind), it is more or less given that the conscious and subconscious are but two phases of one mind.

The conscious mind. In your everyday life you direct your actions. You do so through your conscious mind. It is the seat of your will power. It enables you to interpret and understand what you are reading; it is capable of reasoning .... both inductively and deductively; and it is able to analyse and make judgments about what is right or wrong. The conscious mind controls your five physical senses: seeing, feeling, hearing, tasting and smelling. It directs your central nervous system and enables you to implement all the conscious acts and decisions you make. Through the use of your conscious mind you voluntarily decide what is possible or what is impossible for you to do ... consequently, the limitations in your life are limitations based on your conscious mind's critical appraisal of experience. For example: a person tells himself he would like to be able to assert himself, but he tells himself he "can't" ... so he doesn't. The conscious mind, as powerful and wonderful as it is, is nevertheless the most limited part of you.

The conscious mind possesses a "critical faculty". The "critical faculty" is your power of evaluation and discernment. The conscious mind stands as the "guardian at the door" of the subconscious mind and only lets through to subconsciousness what it decides to let pass.

The subconscious mind. The subconscious mind, conversely, does not possess a "critical faculty", it is unable to evaluate, analyze, or to make judgments. It is devoid of the ability to reason .. which means it can only carry out the ideas and messages given it. The subconscious does not know what is right or wrong, or what is true or false. It does not know the difference between actuality and fantasy. The subconscious mind is the faithful servant who carries out exactly and to the letter, the instructions given it by the conscious mind. It is the powerhouse of the body. The subconscious controls memory and the autonomic nervous system --that part of you which sees after the beating of your heart, digestion and repair of the body's cells, the healing of wounds and so on. The subconscious is a vast reservoir of all the experiences you acquire in your lifetime. It is capable of symbolic interpretation. The subconscious is a creature of habit, the source of instinct, urges, impulsions and compulsions. All your experiences, learnings, needs, motivations, drives and the manner in which you interact with the world and all your automatic responses as expressed in your behavior each day ... are all evidence of subconscious functionings. Metaphysicians think of the subconscious as being the part that survives bodily death, carrying with it the memory record into the non-physical realm. In short, your subconscious indicates the real you.

Whereas the conscious mind is limited, THE SUBCONSCIOUS MIND IS UNLIMITED. ITS POTENTIAL IS INFINITE. Your conscious mind by no means reflects the vast power-potential locked within your subconscious. Notice we said "locked within" because while you can, to a reasonable extent, control and direct your conscious mind ... in the NORMAL state of consciousness one is NOT able to get in touch with or control the subconscious, to change it in any way, or draw from its vast, untapped power.

Let us notice what is in the subconscious:

Knowledge beyond imagination is stored there.

Memories are stored there, many intact from earliest childhood.

The largest computer in the world does not have the ability to sort out, compare, digest, combine or bring forth into your conscious mind a fraction as much information as your subconscious can.

Your subconscious mind contains power unlimited. It contains the power to repair, create and to heal without the aid of medical assistance or drugs.

It has a built-in self-protective mechanism which can save your life if called upon to do so -- witness the case of the 123 lb. woman who lifted a one-ton car off her son who was trapped beneath it -- and the man who had spent 10 years as an invalid in a wheel chair who suddenly got up and ran away to flee his burning house.

All instances of ESP, mental telepathy, pre-cognitive danger signals, all cases of so-called 'magic' ... are functions of the subconscious.

The subconscious is a vast storehouse and a giant generator all in one.

Most people, all their life, have been sending both positive and negative suggestions to their subconscious and the net result has been frustration.

Will power is an attribute of the conscious mind. Imagination and emotion are attributes of the subconscious mind. Wherever and whenever there is a conflict between the will (quality of the conscious mind) and the imaginative idea (quality of the subconscious mind), the imaginative idea invariably wins. The goal therefore, is to have both the conscious and subconscious mind focused on the same ideal.

THE BRAIN WAVES

In the 1920's a brilliant German researcher by the name of Hans Berger placed electrodes on a man's scalp and found that the brain was generating electrical waves. He spent years studying these waves and from his work and the work of other scientists who followed these brain waves, a list was made in which the waves were catalogued in four basic groups, identified by the pattern their frequencies produced on an electronic analyzer and by the conscious and mental state of the person experiencing them.

Beta waves have the fastest cycle occurring 14 - 30 times per second. Beta waves are common in the fully alert or aware state. They are associated with logical reasoning as well as with fear, excitement, tension, anxiety and most normal activity. Beta waves, then, are associated with being fully awake, with mental alertness, with thinking and talking.

The next group of waves are the most exciting to researchers, they are the Alpha waves occurring at speeds of 8 - 13 times per second and appear to be predominant in the state of consciousness that occurs at the borderline between sleep and wakefulness, when you are passively aware of what's happening, when you are relaxed and capable of day-dreams. Alpha waves are almost always present during periods of unusual creativity.

The third type of waves are Theta waves at 4 - 7 c.p.s.. When these predominate you're usually in a state of drowsiness, deeply relaxed and perhaps even dreaming.

Slowest of all are the Delta waves which are from 0.5 - 3.5 c.p.s. and these are associated with deep sleep.

When you are fully awake there is a mixture of brain waves in ever-changing patterns. One moment the Beta may predominate and the next Alpha. These waves fluctuate randomly -- often dozens of times per minute. It is during the time when the Alpha dominates that you are the most likely to have flashes of ESP or perhaps even come up with a brilliant idea or remember some long forgotten fact, or experience, or something like that.

Alpha waves are generally associated with a relaxed, yet alert mental state. The alpha state has been described as 'waking sleep' or 'passive alertness' and also as an "altered state of consciousness". IT IS WHEN YOU ARE IN THE ALPHA STATE THAT YOU HAVE ACCESS TO YOUR SUBCONSCIOUS MIND. While in the alpha state the way is not blocked by the daily stresses and tensions we have become conditioned to live with .... as while in the Beta state. SINCE THE SUBCONSCIOUS MIND IS THE POWERHOUSE IN YOUR BODY, LEARNING HOW TO ENTER THE ALPHA STATE AT WILL AND HOW TO DIRECT YOUR SUBCONSCIOUS MIND TO ACHIEVE YOUR DESIRES, IS THE ESSENTIAL FIRST STEP IN ANY PROGRAM TO CHANGE YOUR LIFE FOR THE BETTER.

THE LEVELS OF CONSCIOUSNESS

Meditation, mental creation, progressive relaxation, Bio-feedback, active imagination, Alpha Dynamics, hypnosis, self-hypnosis, pathworking, mesmerism, neuro - linguistic programming, auto-suggestion, prayer, guided fantasy, etc .... are all names for an "altered state of consciousness", they are all flowers on the same tree, they are all related, the difference being in the method of employing the "alpha state". An altered state of consciousness or 'trance' is described as "a state of passively focused inner awareness". Mosby's Medical Encyclopedia describes ASC as "any state of awareness that differs from the normal aware state" then goes on to say "most people are able to enter altered states of consciousness. These states can be used to improve health and help fight disease." Mosby's definition of the "normal aware state" would be the Beta level of consciousness, so when one goes from Beta to Alpha (for example) one would be in an "altered state of consciousness." You go into an ASC or a "trance" and you are "hypnotized" dozens of times a day ... everytime you try to recall something from memory, everytime you 'daydream', everytime you pray, etc. ... you go into an 'altered state of consciousness' or 'the alpha state' or a 'trance'. If you were in Alpha at around 8 c.p.s. you would be in a 'deeper' trance than if you were say at 12 c.p.s. That is why if you were engrossed in reading a good book and someone came in the room and spoke to you --- you may not hear them, whereas if you were reading but not so engrossed, in other words if you were in a "light" trance -- you would hear them. You can easily spot the characteristic signs of a 'trance' .... the eyes are defocused and the face has a blank expression. Next time you go to church or attend a lecture where people are giving their rapt attention ... look around ... you'll see many of them in a "trance" or "in an altered state of consciousness". In these days of close up T.V., have a look at the audience on the screen ... and by the way ... have a look at yourself too ... for you go into a "trance" whenever you watch T.V.

Be sure you understand this: your whole existence, which is the whole of your conscious and unconscious experience, occurs between a brain wave pattern of 0.5 - 30 c.p.s.. You are either fully awake as in Beta, which is a conscious state; or sound asleep as in Delta, which is an unconscious state ... or somewhere in between. There is no where else to be!

CONSCIOUS	SUB-CONSCIOUS	UNCONSCIOUS
CPS 30 BETA 14	13 ALPHA 8 7 THETA 4	3.5 DELTA
ACTION SENSE REASONING TENSION STRESS	RELAXATION TRANCE MEDITATION HYPNOSIS THOUGHT EMOTION INSTINCT URGES INTUITION INSPIRATION ESP SPIRITUAL AWAKENING	DEEP SLEEP

THE FIVE PRINCIPLES OF CONVINCING THE SUBCONSCIOUS

1. The slow, hard way to reach and convince the subconscious is through: repetition. Very few people have the tenacity to stick to this discipline long enough to obtain satisfactory results. Radio and television advertising successfully uses repetition to plant ideas in the subconscious. Have you ever found yourself trying a new product because of constant advertising?

2. Identification with group or parent: If you are Irish, you may have a subconscious desire to show off your so-called "Irish temper," which is merely an accepted idea because you are a member of that group. Or, you may have been told "You're just like your father" often enough to have accepted some of his habits as your own. This is subconscious programming by identification.

3. Ideas presented by authority figures are usually accepted as absolute truths by the subconscious. Someone you deeply admire and trust can often change your subconscious beliefs, although this occurs more often during childhood than in adult years. Friendly advice from such a person is unlikely to convince your subconscious that you are going to quit smoking, however. For that, it takes the advice of esteemed scientists concerning the role of cigarettes in lung cancer and heart disease. A combination of an authority figure and fear has a greater influence on the subconscious.

A good example of an authority figure altering an adult's subconscious belief is the case of the hospitalized patient hovering between life and death for two days. Being well along in years, he had resigned himself to dying and had asked that his relatives be brought in for last good-byes. A wise doctor who understood mental processes told the old man's wife, in a voice loud enough for the patient to hear, that he had finally gotten hold of a new wonder drug that would have the illness licked by morning. He then gave the old man two aspirin tablets. The following morning the patient was sitting up in bed, and he made a full recovery in the next few days. A subconscious belief had been changed.

4. Intense emotion opens up the corridor to the subconscious because the conscious mind is inhibited by emotion. If a child is badly frightened by a dog, he may fear dogs for the rest of his life, despite his conscious reasoning that most dogs are not only harmless but friendly.

Gil Boyne, a Los Angeles hypnotherapist, tells of an interesting case history in which a Mr Rowe (not his real name) was referred to him by a doctor because marital difficulties were affecting his health. During therapy sessions, Mr Rowe complained that his wife could not be convinced he loved her, no matter what he said or did. After some questioning under hypnosis, he recalled that during an argument on their honeymoon eighteen years before, he had foolishly told her he was sorry he ever married her. Because she was in the heat of anger at the time, her subconscious mind accepted the idea as true. Thereafter, although her reasoning, conscious mind could understand that his every word and act proved her husband loved her, she still retained this subconscious conviction that he did not. Now, hear the surprise treatment!

Boyne explained that since the false idea had been accepted by his wife while she was in the grip of intense emotion, it could be negated by replacing it with a conflicting idea during another intense emotional situation. He suggested that Mr Rowe whisper, "I'm glad I married you" in his wife's ear during her next orgasm. Mr Rowe followed this advice and both his problem and his wife's were solved. The subconscious was reached and convinced during intense emotion.

5. The fifth way to subconscious change is by autosuggestion while in the Alpha state and this is much more practical and effective than any other. Auto-suggestion while in the Alpha state is the fastest and shortest route to the subconscious. You learn how to enter the Alpha state, you tell your subconscious what to do, then sit back and let it work for you.

HOW TO STRUCTURE YOUR SUGGESTION

By its very nature, the subconscious mind must obey suggestions as though they were orders. During the trance state while the conscious mind is in abeyance, it is possible to by pass it and reach the subconscious with suggestions, or orders, without their being influenced by conscious interpretations of related and fixed ideas.

When approaching the subconscious without the benefit of conscious reasoning, you must remember that because the subconscious only reasons deductively, you must follow certain rules in the wording of your suggestions. By structuring suggestions correctly, you can put this great source of energy to work for you, carrying out your orders without the use of will-power or conscious effort of any sort. Your subconscious is better at regulating your behavior than your conscious mind, because nature intended that as its function. Most of your behavior is on a subconscious level and any interference by your conscious mind is usually rather frustrating. Just try not to think of lions. Think of anything else, but don't think of lions. The more you think "Don't think of lions," the more sure you are to think of them. This is the law of reverse effect. The harder you try consciously to do something your subconscious is programmed to do, the less chance you have to succeed. The insomniac can sleep only when he stops trying and lets it happen. Here is the way to structure your suggestions:

1. The motivating desire must be strong. If you enter the alpha state and tell your subconscious to make you dig a hole six feet deep on a hot day, you won't get much cooperation because it knows you don't have a real desire to work in the hot sun. However, if you tell your subconscious you want to earn more money, and mean it, it will work day and night, even while you sleep, to grant your wish.

Before you start to write your suggestion, choose a reason or a number of reasons why you want your suggestion carried out. This must be a counter-emotional motivator to replace the behavior pattern you intend to eliminate. If you overeat, your present emotional motivator may be the enjoyment you derive from tasting certain foods. The motivations that might be chosen to replace this habit are a desire for better health, a more attractive appearance, or an improved relationship with someone you love.

Start your suggestion with your motivating desire: "Because I have a strong desire to have an attractive, slim figure," or "Because I want to feel physically fit and enjoy vibrant health, etc."

2. Be positive. If you say "I will stop eating too much" you are reminding the subconscious that you eat too much, thereby suggesting the very idea you want to eliminate. If you say "My headache will be gone when I come out of meditation" you are suggesting a headache.

To frame these thoughts positively, you should say, "I am always well satisfied with a small meal. I enjoy eating only at mealtimes, and after I have eaten food amounting to approximately four hundred calories, I push my plate away and say "that's enough." I get up from the table feeling entirely satisfied and enjoy the resulting loss of weight." If you wish to suggest that your headache will go away you should say, "My head feels better and better. It is clear and relaxed. My head feels good. It will continue to feel good after I come out of meditation because all of the nerves and muscles are rested, relaxed, and normal."

96 07

Never mention the negative idea you intend to eliminate. Repeat and emphasize the positive idea you are replacing it with.

"What is expected tends to be realized." This is the law of mental expectancy. If you expect to toss and turn instead of going to sleep at bedtime, you will do just that. If you expect to feel terrible the next morning, you will get what you expect. Job, the hard-luck figure of Biblical times, stated it correctly: "For the thing which I so greatly feared is come upon me, and that which I was afraid of is come unto me." Every time you say, "I have trouble going to sleep at night," you reinforce an already fixed idea in your subconscious mind. You are playing the role of the person who can't go to sleep. Luckily, you have the ability to change the script, but be certain that your suggestion does not include your present image of yourself. The subconscious can only respond to mental images, and the idea is to form new mental images. Think of yourself acting in a more satisfactory way, whether it is awakening in the morning feeling good or sleeping comfortably at bedtime. Again: Never mention or think about the idea you are eliminating. Self-hypnosis is positive thinking in its most practical form.

3. Always use the present tense. Never say, "Tomorrow I will feel good," but rather, "Tomorrow I feel good." This may seem strange to your reasoning mind because you have learned to speak of the future in the future tense. But since your subconscious is an emotional feeling mind it responds to the present only.

When you read your suggestion, don't just say the words you have written: think them, imagine them, and see yourself acting out the suggestion. If your goal is to eliminate stage fright, feel yourself standing before a large crowd, speaking with poise and confidence. When you use your imagination you are in direct contact with the subconscious, and that is what you are trying to influence. Your self-image has a great deal to do with your success or failure in life. If you want to be a success and you visualize yourself as a person who can't get anywhere in life, you will fail. Even if you don't use autosuggestion, your self-image will determine your future; but with autosuggestion you can accelerate the change to any self-image you wish to imagine. See yourself as you want to be or visualize your goal as already accomplished, and then enter the trance state. The saying "Wishing will make it so" is scientifically correct in this case, if you follow the ground rules.

It should now be clear why you must always use the present tense in all of your suggestions. Imagine what you are suggesting is true, not sometime in the future, but now! This is the only kind of communication your subconscious mind will understand and act upon.

4. Set a time limit. Although you must picture your goal as having already been reached when dealing with the subconscious, your conscious mind, which can reason, knows you can't do some things overnight. If you fracture your leg, it won't mend in ten minutes, although all pain may be eliminated by hypnosis. If you want to become an expert bowler even your subconscious can't grant your wish immediately. So you must set a realistic time limit. Find out how long it usually takes a leg with a similar fracture to heal. Set your time at one-half that amount and let your subconscious go to work. Or let an expert show you how to bowl, and imagine yourself, in your suggestion, while in alpha, doing exactly as he tells you to do. You will be amazed at the results! Remember, your subconscious is a goal-striving mechanism - once programmed toward a goal, it never stops until it achieves it. Set a realistic time limit, and you'll find you reach your goal well before the time you set!

5. Suggest action, not ability to act. Don't say. "I have the ability to dance well," but rather, "I dance well, with ease and grace."

6. Be specific. Choose a self-improvement suggestion you are anxious to carry out, and work with that one suggestion until it is accepted. Don't suggest a number of things at once. You may alternate suggestions at different meditation sessions, but never work on more than two or three at once, and never more than one during a session. While learning, it is best to start with suggestions that are easier to carry out so that you can see more immediate results.

7. Keep your language simple. Speak as though your subconscious were a bright ten-year-old. Use words the average ten-year-old would understand.

8. Exaggerate and emotionalize. Remember, your subconscious is the seat of the emotions, and exciting, powerful words will influence it. Use descriptive words such as wonderful, beautiful, exciting, great, thrilling, joyous, gorgeous, tremendous! Say or think these words with feeling.

9. Use repetition. When writing your suggestion, repeat it, enlarge upon it, and repeat it again in different words. Embellish it with convincing adjectives. When you are satisfied that your suggestion is attractive and influential, repeat it as often as necessary during the alpha state.

10. Reinforcement. Attain the Alpha state twice a day and give your suggestion each time. The best times are on mornings soon after you awaken or at night just before going to sleep, but anytime of the day or night is also suitable. The first time a suggestion is given to your subconscious the effect lasts for a few hours. The next time the effect stays a few more hours. The effects of suggestions are cumulative and the more the suggestion is given the longer the duration of the effect. You can go into alpha and give yourself suggestions while in that state as often as you want ... you can't 'over dose'. It takes at least 30 days for a suggestion to become established as a habit. Remember that as long as you live there will be goals to strive after. When you have been practicing attaining the alpha state for a little while you will find you can easily and effortlessly go into a deep trance. In fact ... give yourself that suggestion!

Let self-hypnosis (or whatever name you prefer) become a part of your life ... a Way of Life if you will. There are few, if any, other practices that will bring you more bountiful rewards.

96 09

EXAMPLE OF A FINISHED SUGGESTION

First you select a goal. In this case we will assume you have difficulty going to sleep at bedtime and want to relieve the condition. The first thing you must do is choose a positive motivating desire, which of course would be the desire to get a good night's sleep and a desire to awaken in the morning feeling refreshed and rested. So you start your suggestion:

"Because I want to get a full night's sleep, and because I want to awaken in the morning feeling completely refreshed, rested, and full of pep and energy, each night as I retire, I relax every muscle in my body by taking three deep breaths. After each breath I say 'relax now' and let every muscle and nerve go loose and limp. After the third breath I am so completely relaxed I immediately drift off into a deep, restful slumber which remains unbroken until morning. Only an emergency awakens me, and if this happens I return to bed after attending to it and go to sleep because I expect to sleep. Throughout my sleep, I am contented and pleasantly relaxed.

I always relax completely upon taking three deep breaths, and at bedtime I always go to sleep as I relax. I sleep soundly and comfortably and without effort. Throughout my sleep I feel calm, contented, and relaxed, and I carry this calm, contented sense of relaxation over into my waking state. I always awaken at my usual rising time and feel wonderful! Completely rested, alert, and cheerful! I thoroughly enjoy my deep, restful sleep. At bedtime I just take three deep breaths and think 'sleep now' after each one, and I go to sleep automatically. All of these thoughts come to me when in alpha when I think of the code word 'bedtime'.

Now observe how this follows the nine principles of suggestion.

1. First, it gives a reason: Your desire to sleep at bedtime. "Because I want to get a full night's sleep, and I want to awaken in the morning feeling refreshed".

2. All thoughts are positive. Sleepless nights, insomnia, or staying awake are not mentioned. Only sleep, rest, and comfort are emphasized.

3. The present tense is used throughout. Even the future is treated as the present.

4. A time limit is set. "After the third breath I immediately drift off into deep, restful slumber".

5. A type of action is suggested, that of going to sleep. "I can go to sleep" is not used, but rather "I go to sleep."

6. The suggestion is specific and to the point.

7. The language is simple enough for a ten-year-old child to understand.

8. Exaggeration is used, as well as emotion-bearing words. "Completely relaxed," "every muscle in my body," "wonderful," "contented," "without effort," "thoroughly enjoy," "completely rested."

9. Repetition is used generously.

HOW TO PASS SUGGESTIONS TO YOUR SUBCONSCIOUS MIND

The two simplest ways of passing your suggestions to your subconscious mind are through the use of a tape recorder or by means of a symbol.

1. Using a tape recorder. If you have access to a tape recorder, dictate your suggestion into the recorder. Tape your message using the word "you" so that when you play it back it will be as though someone was speaking to you. After having recorded your message, attain the Alpha level of consciousness, start the tape recorder, and while remaining at the Alpha level, listen to the message.

2. If you do not use a recording device which will give you the suggestion verbally while in trance, you must symbolize your suggestion. Note that the example suggestion ended with the code word "bedtime". This could be changed to "deep slumber," "sleep," or some other word or phrase which symbolizes the content and feeling of the suggestion to you. The symbol must create a mental image or a strong feeling of your actively carrying out the suggestion - in this case the taking of three deep breaths, relaxing every muscle and nerve in your body, and going to sleep. Choose the symbol which represents these things to you.

If you are overcoming faulty concentration, you might use the code words "think sharp," "free mind," or even "concentrate." If you want to lose weight, you might symbolize your suggestion with "size nine" or "physically fit." It is important that the symbol reminds you of the suggestion.

The reason you must use a symbol to represent your suggestion is that while in meditation, the conscious mind is dormant, this condition is necessary to reach and arouse your subconscious. If, then, you use your conscious mind to detail the suggestion to your subconscious, you arouse it from its inhibited state and defeat your purpose. Trance differs from sleep in that the conscious mind is under your control, even though it is dormant, and you can think of a code phrase or symbol without disturbing your trance.

THE TECHNIQUE

1. If you are using a tape recorder, write out your suggestion following the nine principles outlined earlier and tape record your message. Enter the Alpha state, then turn on the machine.

2. If you are using the symbol method, have your suggestion written out and choose a symbol that best describes or represents the suggestion to you. Then read it aloud at least three times. Read it slowly and with feeling. Concentrate on its meaning. If you are in a place where you cannot read it aloud, read it four or five times to yourself. Now you are ready to enter the Alpha state.

As soon as you feel the deep relaxation of hypnosis, think the symbol, and the symbol only, and then let your mind relax and drift. Don't try to think of the wording of the suggestion. Let your subconscious absorb it in its own way. A few phrases from your suggestion may float through your mind, or you may just feel a sense of your suggestion being an accepted truth. Allow visions of yourself with your suggestions as being a reality to enter your imagination, but without conscious effort. Impressing the suggestion upon your nervous system by reading it aloud several times has turned on the ignition. Thinking the symbol has activated the starter and set the wheels rolling. Hypnotizing yourself has opened your subconscious to suggestion.

Some find it helpful to hold the written suggestion in one hand while in meditation, or if they are inclined to drop it when in the relaxed state, tape it to the hand. This serves as a reminder, while in trance, that the suggestion is to be considered to the exclusion of all other matters.

SUPPLEMENTARY SUGGESTIONS

There are a few suggestions which should be incorporated in every meditation session until they become fixed habits:

"I awaken immediately in case of any emergency, alert and completely normal in every way. I automatically achieve the proper balance between the conscious and the subconscious, so that all my suggestions are readily accepted. I go into hypnosis more quickly and easily every time I practice it. I stay completely free of hypnosis while driving a motor vehicle or operating dangerous machinery. I waken in exactly fifteen minutes (or set your own limit)."

HOW TO ATTAIN THE ALPHA STATE

Sit comfortably. Focus your eyes on a spot where the ceiling meets the wall. Relax your body while taking three very deep breaths and exhaling slowly and completely each time. Then close your eyes. Begin the relaxation exercise by starting from the top of your head and going down to your toes, completely relaxing each muscle group and limb. In the beginning take seven minutes or more to accomplish this exercise. Then begin to count down slowly from 15 - 1, giving yourself suggestions between numbers that you are relaxing more and more and going deeper and deeper into relaxation. If you have done this exercise properly you will now be at the Alpha level of consciousness and this is where and when you can give yourself the suggestions you wish ... either to overcome some habit, or to implement a new one, or to develop an attribute, or establish some characteristic or goal you wish to achieve .... or whatever.

THE AWAKENING TECHNIQUE

If you use a recorder, you can record the awakening at the close of your recording. If you do not use a recorder, either memorize the following in the first person or use your own language with a similar message:

"Now it is time for you to return to normal consciousness. You feel wonderfully rested. I will count to five, and as I do, you feel vitality and energy surging through your body. You are wide awake at the count of five. One. You are waking up now. When you awaken, you feel full of pep and energy. Two. More and more awake! More and more awake! You feel refreshed and perfect from head to foot, normal in every way. Three. You feel as though your eyes had just been bathed in cool spring water. You feel physically perfect and emotionally serene. Four. You feel wonderful in every way! Refreshed and full of vigour, but perfectly relaxed and calm. You feel good all over! Five. Eyes open! Wide awake now. Take a deep breath, stretch, and feel good!"

If a recording is used, the induction should be in a slow monotone. The suggestion should be given in a crisp, businesslike tone, and the awakening should be louder and spoken forcefully and with enthusiasm. A gradual transition should be made between the induction and the suggestion so as not to startle yourself out of the trance.

For clarification: if you use a tape recorder, when recording your suggestion use the word 'you', say "you are satisfied eating less food"; "you will awaken feeling wonderfully refreshed," etc... In other words, record your message as if someone were speaking to you. If you are not using a recorder and are speaking to yourself, you will of course speak to yourself in the first person "I am healthy and happy", "I feel better now", etc..

FURTHER WAYS TO INFLUENCING YOUR SUBCONSCIOUS

"AFFIRMATIONS" & "SELF-TALK"

A FEW KEYS TO REMEMBER

Whereas dreaming is an automatic form of internal self-talk, self-hypnosis is a consciously controlled form of the same thing.

The subconscious mind responds to ideas and to images.

The mind and the body are not separate, they are an integrated whole.

The use of imagery - or a mental picture - is one of the easiest ways to awaken the slumbering giant that is your subconscious mind.

Negative mental imagery is powerful. Some of its well-known manifestation are: ulcers, asthma, hypertension, migraines and insomnia. It is the imagery or expectation of a situation that creates stress and causes an ulcer -- not the actual hardship or failure. Likewise, it is low self-esteem that causes overeating, not the other way around.

You literally ARE what you believe yourself to be on the subconscious level.

Your subconscious holds the answers to what appear in your conscious mind as problems. Problems are nothing more than opportunities that have yet to be realized.

The central nervous system, including the brain, does not recognize the difference between deep-seated mental programming for an activity and the actual physical event.

THE ROAD TO SUCCESS

You were made in the image of God and your potential is infinite! Your subconscious mind is called the 'Holy Spirit' in some places and the 'Astral Light' in others. Christians speak of Heaven Worlds (2 (Cor. 12:2); mystics speak of the Astral Planes; psychologists speak of the mind. Your subconscious mind is the powerhouse within and without your body. It is the willing servant who carries out faithfully and to the letter, the suggestions you give it. The constructive use of your subconscious mind is your key to achieving all you want and to becoming the person you want to be.

A long time ago a very wise man said "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." If King Solomon were to write that statement today he would phrase it "As a man thinketh in his subconscious mind, so is he." It simply means that what you think about becomes you, or to say it another way: what you think about, you become.

Many people have tried to 'meditate', have failed and have given up. The reason for their failure is simply because they either did not attain the Alpha state before getting into their work, or they did not know how to structure and transmit their suggestions to their subconscious correctly. The use of meditation, hypnosis, alpha dynamics, auto-suggestion, or whatever name you prefer, is easy to learn and it is a technique that may be used for a myriad of purposes -- to program your subconscious, to receive inspiration from the Universal Consciousness, to transmit thoughts, to direct the flow of healing energy .....

The Alpha state of consciousness has been employed throughout the history of mankind. The great healer in the Bible was a hypnotist and used hypnotic techniques. (Notice it was not until the nineteenth century that the words 'hypnotism' and 'hypnosis' came into usage. It was the British surgeon James Braid who coined these words from the Greek word 'hypnos', meaning sleep, to describe the alpha state. On his first observation Braid noticed that persons in the alpha state seemed to be asleep but later found out this was not the case at all, for while in the alpha state one is a thousand times more alert than in the Delta or sleep state. Braid then attempted to change the word 'hypnosis' to 'monoideism' but the latter did not stick and the word 'hypnosis', which is actually a misnomer, remained. Unfortunately hypnosis has been abused throughout the years by stage performers, film and T.V. shows and there is more misinformation than truth in the public's mind about what hypnosis is and what it is not. In 1955 hypnosis was accepted as a legitimate healing and therapeutic modality by the British Medical Association and in 1958 by the American Medical Association. Nowadays hypnosis has been restored to its proper place and the alpha state is widely employed by psychotherapists and hypnotherapists to achieve remarkable cures.)

Regarding the alpha state, remember you don't have to be at home sitting in your favourite chair in order to access this creative and intuitive level of consciousness! Neither do you have to have your eyes closed! You can access and enter the alpha state at a business meeting, while giving a speech, while saying the Mass (if you're a Priest), when painting, writing, playing music, or jogging, or wherever..... You should adit the alpha level of consciousness whenever you wish inspiration, to receive pure thoughts, to be creative, be psychically aware .....

Last but not least, you enter the alpha state every night when you go to sleep and every morning when you awaken. It is that peaceful bliss, that 'twilight zone', that lethargic state that occurs at the borderline between sleep and wakefulness. This is a naturally occurring opportunity to picture in mind the idea you wish to have accomplished. Translate your idea or desire into a visual image and hold the picture in your mind. Build as much actuality into your picture as possible. Try to see, hear, feel, taste and smell it as intensely as you can. Hold the picture as you want it to be. Do not try to analyze how it is going to happen, do not bring your conscious reasoning to bear. Simply hold and live the picture.

In conclusion, let us say that the great secret possessed by the great men of all ages was their ability to contact and release the powers of their subconscious mind. You can do the same. We have done our part .... it remains only for you to do yours! YOU HAVE BEEN GIVEN THE KEY -- USE IT!

-0-0-0-0-0-0-0-0-

Suggested reading

The Power of Your Subconscious Mind - Dr. Joseph Murphy
The Dynamic Laws of Prosperity - Catherine Ponder
Hypnotism & Meditation - Ormand McGill
Creative Visualization - Phillips & Denning.
Beyond Hypnosis - Lee Pulos

10 RULES OF THE MIND

I) EVERY THOUGHT OR ACTION RESULTS IN A PHYSICAL REACTION.

II) WHAT IS EXPECTED TENDS TO BE REALIZED.

III) IMAGINATION IS MORE POWERFUL THAN REASON.

IV) SUBCONSCIOUSNESS DOES NOT DISTINGUISH BETWEEN A STATEMENT THAT HAS BEEN PROVEN OR ESTABLISHED AS TRUE AND ONE THAT IS STATED "AS IF" IT IS TRUE. THE CENTRAL NERVOUS SYSTEM DOES NOT RECOGNIZE THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN DEEP-SEATED MENTAL PROGRAMMING FOR AN ACTIVITY AND THE ACTUAL PHYSICAL EVENT.

V) THE MIND CAN ONLY GIVE CONCENTRATED ATTENTION TO ONE PARTICULAR MATTER AT A TIME.

VI) WHEN THE MIND IS CONCENTRATED ON ONE PARTICULAR MATTER, SUGGESTIONS RECEIVED WHICH ARE NOT RELATED TO THAT PARTICULAR MATTER ARE NOT SUBJECTED AS MUCH TO THE REASONING PROCESS ... AND THEY ARE TRANSMITTED MORE READILY TO SUBCONSCIOUSNESS.

VII) ONCE AN IDEA HAS BEEN ACCEPTED AT A SUBCONSCIOUS LEVEL, IT REMAINS THERE AND GOVERNS THE BEHAVIOUR IN THAT AREA OF OUR EXPRESSION FROM THAT TIME FORWARD UNTIL IT IS REPLACED BY A NEW IDEA OR IS ALTERED OR AMENDED. Companion rule: THE LONGER THE IDEA REMAINS, THE MORE DIFFICULT IT IS TO REPLACE IT WITH A NEW IDEA.

VIII) AN EMOTIONALLY INDUCED SYMPTOM PRODUCES ORGANIC CHANGE WHEN PERSISTED IN LONG ENOUGH.

IX) A SUGGESTION ONCE ACCEPTED LESSENS RESISTANCE TO ADDITIONAL SUGGESTIONS AND THE REASONING PROCESS BECOMES MORE PASSIVE BECAUSE OF ITS ACCEPTANCE.

X) WHEN DEALING WITH THE SUBCONSCIOUS MIND, THE GREATER THE CONSCIOUS EFFORT, THE LESS THE SUBCONSCIOUS RESPONSE.

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 90-100

LIBER $_{97}^{#}$

Personal & Confidential TENTH DEGREE

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

ORDRE MARTINISTE
DES
ELUS COHEN
***

SOUVERAIN GRAND
MAGISTÈRE DE L'ORDRE
****

Personal & Confidential

PART I

THE QUINTESSENCE

CLASSIFIED

1. Ordinary prayer is passive. Theurgy is prayer in action. THEURGY IS THE ART OF EFFECTIVE WORSHIP.

2. The Great Teacher mentioned that everything we ask for in His Name will be granted by the Father. You can easily note the spirit of this statement when going through all the theurgic formulas. Prayer can do everything is the motto of theurgy.

3. Theurgical operations are performed either by individuals acting alone, or in groups.

4. All operations of theurgy are directed to the One Source. It is the Supreme Being, the absolute ruling and creative power which we call 'God'. There is no need for long deliberation about this fact: that without a living faith in this deciding factor, which alone can fulfil the entreaties of the theurgist, no action whatever is possible. The most punctiliously performed ritual and exact form of prayer will be useless and without any wings if the operator has no faith in the power which he strives to invoke.

   This means that a living faith is an essential condition for any successful theurgic action.

5. Briefly, if you wish to be a theurgist, you must first of all have faith in the omnipotent, supreme power, which alone can answer your prayers and striving.

GENERAL INFORMATION

6. The Christian mass is of purely theurgic origin, and so are its purposes.

7. Theurgical operations are done for a wide variety of purposes. assistance for the departed; exorcisms; defence against inimical forces; healing operations; blessing of places, homes, animals, food; in cases of obsession; for help; etc. etc.

8. The supreme problem posed for everyone is: Does God exist? And it cannot be solved by any empiric philosophy or logic. It cannot be proved or disproved. Hence theurgy requires spiritual certainty which is faith.

9. Real faith has nothing in common with such popular sayings as "Yes, I believe in God" which is usually only the verbalization of a well-known theme. There is no deeper sense in it and therefore no realizable power, as is always the case with any truism: for faith is one of the chief powers.

10. A cardinal point of discrimination is the difference between faith and belief, a difference which is too often disregarded. Faith and belief are incompatible, yet the one gets confused with the other.

11. Every belief must have an object as its basis, no matter in which realm it is found -- physical, emotional or mental. It is not a power but an attitude usually connected with the play of imagination. Such is unnecessary and not desirable for theurgic action. Faith operates on a much higher level: true faith being one of the corner-stones of the art of effective prayer. It seems that no other conception has been more misunderstood, confused and abused than that of faith.

12. In other words, belief cannot stand alone, it requires that one have something to believe in. Faith, on the other hand, is a power, an inner conviction, a spiritual certainty. Faith stands on its own.

13. The most striking and at the same time perhaps the most mysterious definition of faith's attributes was given to us by Christ: "if you have faith as a grain of mustard seed, you shall say to this mountain: Remove from hence hither, and it shall remove..."

14. From those few who have possessed faith and have been able to lift a small corner of this great mystery, we can see that rather, it is more a state than an experience. This is because true faith cannot be lost. It is a permanent state of an advanced human being and belongs to his innermost treasure. If someone tells you he 'had faith but later lost it' it simply means one thing: he NEVER DID possess faith.

15. Faith is a POWER, which possesses all the attributes we ascribe to that aspect of power and force which we know acts in this world, but which, at the same time, infinitely transcends both of them. Gravity, magnetic forces, inertia, the power in atoms, light, electric currents, and so on, - are to a certain limited degree - comparable with the power of faith. And it is through this comparison that may be conveyed the idea of one of the dynamic manifestations of faith.

16. If faith belonged to the realm of mind's consciousness, then it could be successfully translated into mind's main sphere: that of human speech. But this is not so ... and here lies the whole difficulty. Whoever thinks otherwise simply does not understand the position.

17. Which brings us now to the most difficult problem: that of giving a definition of faith. Its true definition lies above the capacity of language ... therefore one must sense on the higher level exactly what it is.

18. "Faith begins where knowledge ends." - Sâr Péladan.

19. Faith is a force far beyond all physical ones: we know that martyrs, animated by it, completely disregarded their bodies and all their physical relationships, fearlessly allowing themselves to be destroyed (often in a dreadful way while still living), in order not to betray by even the slightest word or movement, the Lord in whom they had their true faith. We know from history, that in most cases where Christian proselytes were condemned to be thrown to wild animals or tortured to death, the only thing that was required of them in order to avoid such a fate was to burn a little incense before the Emperor's statue. And yet they refused.

20. There is another mysterious power which can equally be likened to faith: it is, of course, - love. And all that has been said about faith, can also be applied to love. This is because both of them are usually found together, and those who are fortunate enough to have faith in God, also have love for Him.

21. In conclusion this strange fact must be noted: two men in whom faith is developed will always recognize one another, even without much talking. Sometimes just a few words will suffice for them to know.

22. The motto is: If you want to be a theurgist, you should have faith in the power you want to implore. This is only logical, but how many will forget this and try to perform the impossible feat of being successful in theurgy without FAITH IN THEIR HEARTS?

23. Rest assured that the best sons of humanity have accepted both the following postulates:

    (A) The existence of a supreme central consciousness - Spirit, which possesses full power over Its manifestations in matter.

    (B) The possibility for us to approach this Power in the way shown by theurgy.

    By meditation on (A) and (B) you will support your faith and so obtain peace of mind.

24. The principle condition for any theurgic work is the proper tuning of the operator's consciousness, which thus allows him to attract the superior powers and benefit from their grace and assistance. The traditional way for such attainment is by the use of suitable texts, (passages of scripture), which may bring the same blessed results to you, that they brought your predecessors. Moreover, in any theurgic action one has to establish one's own position, that is, to know where one stands and what one wants.

25. Drugs such as alcohol, marijuna, cocaine and other mind-altering drugs have a deleterious effect on one's psychic abilities. Perception and control drop markedly even after the absorption of a very small amount of alcohol. Before you have had enough alcohol to become relaxed, you have had enough to affect your psychic perception. No mind-altering drugs may be used as long as you aspire to theurgic work. Certain drugs like LSD can force psychic centers to open, thereby causing harmful effects that may last for years. The ability to alter and to experience altered states of consciousness meaningfully is an important attribute for all persons dealing in areas that involve psychic influences. This ability should be developed with care so that it can be used effectively and reliably ... as it will be if the aspiring theurgist follows the rules. Those who are serious about developing their psychic aptitudes are strongly admonished to be very wary of drugs of any kind.

26. Psychic development and spiritual development are two completely different things but BOTH grow and increase naturally through participating in theurgic work. Awareness of the 'invisible world' usually comes first (though not always) through the channel of feeling. The faculties of spiritual and psychic sight and hearing usually (though not always) follow the opening of the channel of feeling.

27. Psychic development has to do with the ability to discern, perceive and be sensitive to what have variously been called 'the astral worlds', 'the heaven worlds', etc., and with the finer, rarefied matter which is, generally speaking, considered to belong to the physical world, even though it is beyond the range of detection (at the present time) by present-day instrumentation. But such finer matter, variously called 'astral matter', 'psychic energy', etc., can sometimes be readily perceived when the conditions are right, even by persons whose 'psychic sight' is not very well developed. Spiritual development has to do with qualities considered to be Godlike, such as love, compassion, selflessness, humility, and a high conception of ethics, decorum, etc.. Perhaps it could also be said that spiritual development has to do with one's conscious awareness of God, His nature and Kingdom and with striving to live a life characterized by Godliness. The point is: a person who is 'psychic' is not necessarily 'spiritual'! Psychic qualities are often possessed by persons of the grossest type who have no inclination towards spirituality. To be 'psychic' is to be aware (through the channels of seeing, hearing, feeling, tasting, smelling) of a level of creation which the average person is not cognizant of, simply because his receptor channels to these levels are dormant or undeveloped. This may simply be because in our 'official educational system' no attention is given to such development. (In fact there even seems to be a remnant of superstition still surrounding this very normal human faculty)! Spirituality, on the other hand, has to do with living a life of the highest order, spirituality has to do with manifesting in one's life all those qualities one associates with God. By the way, intuition is generally regarded to be a spiritual, rather than a psychic faculty.

28. Among theurgic groups, the group's work reflects on the members and influences them, promoting their inner enlightenment and raising their moral and mental standards. The first signs of enlightenment come in the form of inner peace, serenity, lack of fear of death or relapses into the limitations of personal life. Mental anxiety fades away, and with it the thirst for putting innumerable questions, which, after all, belong purely to the realm of mind. This is because intuition, so far superior to mental cognition, gradually takes the place of mental deliberations and thoughts. This attitude can be expressed by having full confidence in the Almighty, and certainty of the fact that - HE KNOWS! What more can be said?

29. Once your theurgic group has been formed, is working, and has 'settled down', a certain rapport develops. When this harmony has been established, care must be taken in admitting new members to the group who may cause a change in its personality and possibly disrupt its cohesion. Make sure all potential members are serious about theurgic work, and well informed. Quizz them on the principles outlined in this monograph.

30. After the operation there should be a period of rest, sitting quietly at peace with eyes closed and try not to think of any trivial matters.

31. It is not the number of words pronounced in prayers and meditations which is the deciding factor in theurgic operations and which really matter, but the quality of the performance by the aspirant, resulting from his devotion, intelligence, power of concentration and endurance. Those who are initiated know that a few well-performed inspiring sentences in prayers may perfectly well suffice for a lifetime's attainment.

32. Theurgy consists of invocations and prayers. What are they really? They are channels into which is directed the living force of the operator. When using them you are no longer a plaything of your mind's moods, you proceed directly to the goal you have set for yourself. They are the right means whereby to attract the attention of the Highest Power, which can dispense the boons and assistance for which you pray. This is because, so far, that Power has directed your evolution until here and now ... instead of a semi-conscious wandering through superstition and falsehood, you have started to turn to the SOURCE. The statement: the right channel leads to right attainment is important, for the Supreme responds when approached.

33. So then what IS prayer? Certainly not an occasional turning to God, merely when we are assaulted by a variety of miseries or disasters, or even in the case of lesser needs. Such behaviour would only indicate the absence of the basic qualities so necessary for positive results in every turning to the Supreme power for help and grace. Here is a brilliant comment on prayer taken from the works of the famous French theurgist - Abbé Julio:

"What is prayer? For a rationalist it is an incomprehensible thing; for a mystic - it is the simplest thing in the world to realize, because prayer is a mystical act 'par excellence'.

"Prayer, that is, true prayer, is an elation of the heart through which one raises oneself to God with love. This does not require any effort. When the mystic thinks about God, he cannot suppress his emotion and his confidence, just as a child on seeing its mother again after a short separation, cannot restrain itself from rushing into her arms.

"And then something happens that is very little known.

"Just as the mother opens her arms and runs ahead to embrace her child, so God comes to meet the one who turns to Him with love, as if to enfold him in His arms, if I am permitted to speak about the 'arms of God'. But this anthropomorphism is necessary in order to be understood."

34. Some people seem uncertain about what is right and proper to pray for. If you have a spiritual attitude you can ask for anything, for you will be in harmony with the Source from which everything flows.

35. A spontaneous prayer is one that comes suddenly from the heart, fortified by a firm confidence in God's goodness and wisdom and the knowledge that He wants nothing for us but our happiness; but that He does require His creature to become perfect. A spontaneous prayer is one where we speak to God as to a person for whom we have the greatest affection. In such a prayer one confesses to God one's most secret things, asks Him for advice, spiritual grace and even temporal advantages, and lets Him know one's smallest joys and troubles, while thanking Him for what has already been obtained. Of course, even without our confessions God has perfect knowledge of the most intimate corners of the human heart, but it is just that effort of opening up our most hidden inner life to Him that counts. This process is extremely beneficial, because it purifies a man and makes offences against God less probable.

36. "There is nothing worse than a bad prayer" said Louis-Caude de Saint-Martin. Good prayers are always like the sowing of valuable seeds: they will grow, but the time they take is dependent upon circumstances too numerous to mention since they are connected to man's inner contents, which differ in every human being. Some plants grow quickly, but, for example, fruit trees which produce the most valuable crops usually require a longer period for growth and bearing. Happiness lies only in God and no prayer is ever made in vain. A man who loves God will do good deeds and whoever is established in justice will possess wisdom.

37. "What is truth?" In such a question man confesses his ignorance of the cardinal wisdom, which he so desperately needs and cannot find. In theurgy, truth can never be found in something 'apart', or as something to be looked at: Truth can only be realized and lived, and bring us the Light of its dispenser - the Holy Spirit. Now you know Whom a theurgist addresses when seeking truth.

38. The prayer of a trained theurgist is like the majestic flow of a large river; but an ignorant and weak person can produce only something similar to an irregular trickle from a half-clogged tap.

39. The invocation to the Holy Spirit is a very powerful force in theurgy and is used in many operations.

40. A theurgist should be a man (or woman) of impeccable character, ethically moral and virtuous. To pose as a Man of God and to live the life of the profane is hypocritical. "An hypocrite shall not come before the Lord". To hold grudges against others, to be guilty of false judgement, to engage in calumny and slander ... is to hold a mirror before your face and poison yourself with your own venom.

41. The Almighty and Most Merciful Lord cannot accept prayers that come from an insincere heart filled with hatred. It is only the foolish black magician who operates because of hatred and envy. And he always receives his terrible reward.

42. Theurgists operate in the worlds where there are no material veils. Our physical body, which belongs to the material plane, performs on that plane according to its ability, power, state of health and so on. Exactly the same happens when the theurgist operates in the two subtle worlds -- those of the astral (feelings) and the mental (thought). The stronger the theurgist is and the more able to concentrate his efforts in these two realms, the better and more enduring will be the result of his action.

43. The use of ritual and certain paraphernalia are NOT essential for the success of an operation however THEY DO serve as a means of assuring solemnity and concentration which benefits the operator and all present. And there is also another very important factor: Everything that happens in the physical world has its unavoidable repercussion on the invisible part of the universe, in this case, the astral counterpart of the earth, which has its own population and forces acting upon it. Both are closely connected at every moment and in every place. Our activities attract or repel the desirable or undesirable beings from the 'other side'. Now you will understand the aim and purpose of theurgic ritual. The wise person takes every opportunity to get as much help as he can, in order to reach the aim with more certainty.

44. IT IS UNTHINKABLE THAT THERE CAN BE AN EFFECT WITHOUT A CAUSE. There are powers ruling over the incalculable and uncontrollable elements in human lives. If we look on theurgic operations from this point of view, we then recognize that ultimately, and in plain language, they are attempts to influence the deciding factors in human life.

45. Electric light, (especially from flourescent tubes), emanations from power lines, radio and TV frequencies, microwaves, etc. are disturbing the atmosphere.

46. Do not fear karmic retribution regarding action against non-human enemies, such as evil spirits and phantoms, for theurgy teaches that our Lord did not die in order also to redeem the astral scum, which do evil purely because they like doing evil.

47. Theurgy does not deal with any theoretical deliberations, but with real facts and the use of its methods. Whether you conceive of God as an absolutely perfect and impersonal being, as an immensely powerful and merciful Father in heaven full of goodness who graciously deigns to hear his simple but sincere worship, or whether you conceive of Him as a mighty Spirit residing within and without the creation..... whatever conception you may have is no obstacle to achievement of the aims of your operation.

48. Creation, in which we each play our modest rôles, is a living organism and not a dead, motionless and changeless casting. Everywhere forces are at work, every moment causes are born and followed by their results. By introducing immaterial, but most effective forces, like prayers, in a direct appeal to tne Highest we influence the macrocosm, the whole of creation, which is necessarily reflected on the microcosms, that is, the human beings like ourselves. This Law annihilates the untruth of the idea of the alleged unavoidable and inexorable destiny, promoted by some false prophets and misanthropes. Briefly, we can and we are entitled to act, since we are conscious actors and not merely dancing dolls.

49. The existence or non-existence of the Supreme factor (often called God) cannot be proved or disproved. Theurgy does not claim that it can prove the existence of God. But it teaches that it can offer a means and a method for obtaining what man asks for from that Power. In simple language ... is it not again the influencing of causes in order to obtain definite results? A taxi-driver is not necessarily supposed to possess all the knowledge of the engineers who constructed his vehicle; but he can still fully use it even without much theoretical knowledge. Similarly, and what matters from the practical point of view, is that used in the way prescribed and under the right conditions, THEURGIC OPERATIONS DO WORK and yield clear-cut results.

50. Every incarnate being forges its own destiny by its deeds, feelings and thoughts. For an occultist there is nothing new in this conception. But let us look deeper.

Our behaviour prepares our reward, in accordance with another law: that of cause & effect. As a result, all of us have full 'stores' of events and conditions, in which we live and through which we will have to live when the time is ripe. In brief, this can all be expressed by the well-known and generally accepted term of 'Karma', which comes from our Eastern brethren and their occult philosophy.

So we have before us our human karma, that part which is to be paid or rewarded in this incarnation. It is the cup we have to drain in this life.

Does this mean that everything is firmly predestined for us, and that nothing can change it, and therefore even theurgic influence would seem useless?

Fortunately it is not so. Some masters in theurgy, like the mysterious M. Andréas (as presented by Paul Sedir) and Mâitre Philippe de Lyons, tell us that human intervention, directed to the Supreme, may have response in the form of alleviation of suffering from which we pray for delivery. In his own words and style M. Andréas tells us: "Heaven may alter the form of punishment".

This is a very ponderous axiom and I would strongly recommend every earnest theurgist, mystic and occultist to think deeply about it, for on it is based every human hope for the best, amidst the troubles and sufferings of earthly life.

+

+ +

+

SOME BASIC REQUIREMENTS FOR THEURGIC OPERATIONS

51. The essential requirements for success in theurgy are, as mentioned before: sincerity, faith, the devotion of the operator (and of members of the group, if Group work is being undertaken); the solemnity of the intention of the operator to operate theurgically, and concentration in order to give a clear and trouble-free performance.

52. Mentally and emotionally forgive all your 'real' and supposed enemies before you engage yourself in prayer for yourself or others. Worship, or theurgic operations performed when at the bottom of your heart there remain hidden hatreds or fears, is useless, for then it does not have any ascending power and can even be dangerous, since it can attract forces which are quite different from the desired good ones.

53. Never act immediately after meals. The best time would be after two hours have elapsed since food was taken. The same refers to illegal drugs, alcohol or tobacco, if you are unfortunate enough to still use them. Apart from undermining your physical strength, their greatest harm lies in the weakening of your will-power. When he is obedient to such physical habits, a man allows himself to commit something which he knows (if he is intelligent enough) to be nonsense from the common sense point of view.

54. The standard rules of hygiene, diet and exercise must be observed by all theurgists. So far as you are still an incarnate being, your body is somewhat a part of you and its condition does affect your consciousness.

55. Immediately before assembling for the operation, the operator and all group members should first wash and dry their hands.

56. The robes worn should be freshly laundered. Certainly they should not be worn since having last been washed and pressed. And they must be made from natural fibre material (cotton or linen).

57. All participants should be devoid of metal. (Jewelry, money, metal rimmed eye-glasses, pins, clasps, etc.)

58. If there is to be a major personal, or group invocation, tradition recommends at least seven hours of absolute fasting beforehand.

59. Sexual relations are also proscribed for at least a seven hour period prior to operations.

60. Not too bright light is recommended. (Non-electric light is best, i.e. candles or oil lamps.)

61. If you are a member of a theurgic group, unswervingly follow the words of the leader when he is acting. Listen to his directives in whatever you have to do during every moment of the operation, whilst in the circle.

62. If you happen to lack a solemn, dignified attitude towards the operation about to be performed, or if you have some mental doubts about it, do not start at all. If you are a participant, quietly leave the room. If you are the operator it is better to delay and wait until you are in a more desirable frame of mind than spoil the results, reap disappointment and so bear the responsibility for frustration of the effort of your brother theurgists.

63. When the group has assembled there should be no chatting among the members. A quiet attitude and silence is best.

64. Whenever you meditate or pray and decide to do so with closed eyes, turn your eye-balls upwards as high as you can, and keep them in that position throughout the course of your action. The more you practice this simple rule, the more you will appreciate its effectiveness. Greater inspiration and less distracting earthly thoughts will result.

    Some people practise turning up the eye-balls even with the eyes open (naturally when they are alone) and in certain theurgic groups members find this rule indispensable for their work ... personal as well as collective.

65. It is inconceivable that you will accept even the most insignificant material reward for your spiritual action in helping others. Even in a magic operation of a high degree, the acceptance of any money or other payment is strictly forbidden. In theurgy there is absolutely no exemption from this rule. No matter whether the help is of a minor or major character, everything must be unselfish and devoid of any thought of reward.

66. Intense and very ardent worship & operations can be accompanied by bowing and genuflections. In the Christian methods of ritual both are essential from the traditional point of view.

67. No sick person should take an active part in the circle of a group operation, even if it is performed for his/her benefit. Some theurgists allow the patient to be present in the room, but outside the circle. Generally speaking it is better when the patient is apart and praying in his own home, just at the time when he knows that the group is acting on his behalf. (we are not refering here to the Blessing of a Sick Person).

68. Finally, take note of this stern warning: Never engage in any theurgic ritual merely to satisfy your curiosity, and without due respect to the powers involved, or for a so-called "test". In the best of cases under such circumstances the result will be nil. Otherwise, it can bring swift retribution from the offended forces, which are infinitely superior to all human resources.

+
+ + +
+

SOME WELL-KNOWN THEURGISTS THROUGHOUT HISTORY

Among the known theurgists from ancient times to the present day it is worth mentioning a few of the prominent ones.

All the leading priests in ancient Egypt performed theurgic operations of many kinds, while in the Graeco-Roman tradition, Pythagoras, in his school, was the first to teach about theurgic methods of communication with the spiritual powers which he called 'gods'. Plotinus was well acquainted with this science, although, in the writings of his intellectual master - Plato, there was nothing divulged concerning the theurgic traditions the latter undoubtedly learned during his training in Egypt. The same applies to Socrates, who likewise must have known a good deal about the matter. Also the famous Apollonius of Tyana excelled in both high magic and theurgy. And when Christianity in the first centuries after Christ took over esotericism and mysticism from the pagan world, many of its saints followed the tradition of worship, fortified by devotion based on deep spiritual wisdom, which often manifested itself in miraculous cures, and so on.

Of course, the leading theurgist of the old testament was Moses, followed by some of the prophets. He took the tradition from his native land of Egypt and adapted it to suit his own great purpose of creating a framework for the idea of the One God and thereby preparing for the coming of the Messiah.

In medieval times Paracelsus possessed vast knowledge of theurgy and its theory, giving proof of this fact in his works. And before him, the elite Knights Templars' Order widely used theurgic methods, sometimes mixing them with magic. Their faith in the Supreme Being was so strong, that even in the time of the decline and ensuing destruction of their Order, the last Grand Master - Jacobus Burgundus de Molay - was able, by his powerful invocation when being burnt to death at the stake, to call both of the destroyers of his Order (the French King Philip IV and Pope Clement V) before God's tribunal, that is, to die shortly after himself, which events occurred even before the predicted time.

The French theurgist Martines de Pasqually, head of the Order of Elus-Cohen and the theurgist/mystic Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin (the Unknown Philosopher) were prominent at the end of the eighteenth century. These were followed in the middle of the nineteenth century by the famous French occultist - Eliphas Lévi (Abbé Alphonse Constant), who greatly contributed to the renascence of theurgy - as well as of magic - in Europe. Then at the end of the nineteenth century his disciples - Papus (Dr. Gérard Encausse) and the Marquis Stanislas de Guaita popularized theurgic ideas. F. Barlet and P. Sédir were the spiritual children of the last known French theurgist of great calibre, the 'Maitre Philippe' of Lyons (1849-1905), - otherwise M. Philippe Nazier, whose astonishing and miraculous practices were known far beyond his native land.

Another important theurgist was Abbé Julio (M. Houssay), who performed a great service in the history of theurgy. He collected and edited a multitude of traditional Christian theurgic texts concerning invocations, prayers, exorcisms and rituals for different purposes and conditions, which before that time had been dispersed (often in distorted form) throughout numerous publications and manuscripts.

Jean Sempé should also be mentioned, as it was he who inspired Abbé Julio by his saintly life, which was dedicated to theurgic cures and assistance. Abbé Schenebelin of France and the Russian priest John of Kronstadt (near St. Petersburg, now Leningrad), who died shortly before the beginning of World War I also belong to the same category of theurgists as Abbé Julio.

Another prominent theurgist, who was also an occultist, was Prof. G. O. Mebes of the Imperial St. Petersburg University, who died in 1918. He was the head of a group of Russian intellectuals and mystics in the period prior to the Russian Revolution of 1917. The well-known Russian novelist Kuprin dedicated one of his stories to his spiritual master, which is striking by its realistic narration and the strange facts given in it, which lift a small corner of the veil that hides the mystery of human death. Although the real name of the 'master' was not given by Kuprin, anyone acquainted with the occultism of the twentieth century cannot fail to recognize Professor Mebes himself.

Among the German occultists connected with theurgy, mention must be made of the following: Gustav Meyrink, who died in 1935, wrote about the intellectual concepts of theurgy in the form of a novel; while Dr. Alfred Strauss, G. W. Surya, H. Wilms, B. Ahhorn, J. Goerres, G. Heinzelmann and K. Reinhardt were also authors of works connected directly or indirectly with theurgic science.

English-language theurgic writers of note include James Hastings, William Ralph Inge, Thomas Whittaker and Alexander Wilder (translator only).

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

GROUP LEADER'S TEST QUESTIONS

(I) Potential group members should be thoroughly tested and passed for comprehension before being admitted to group work.

(II) It is a good idea to have regular group meetings at which the following (and other) questions on theurgy are asked. Replies given to questions spark off interesting debates.

+ + + + + + +

1. What is theurgy?
   1. 44.

2. What is the difference between theurgy and regular prayer?
   1.

3. For what purposes are theurgic operations done?
   7.

4. Basically, what is the difference between ordinary prayer and theurgy?

   Ordinary prayer is passive.
   Theurgy is active and intense. Theurgic rituals enable one to achieve a greater degree of concentration.

5. What is faith?
   8. 15. 19.

6. What is prayer?
   32. 33. 35. 36.

7. To what may the prayer of a trained theurgist be likened?
   38.

8. What sort of persons should be theurgists?
   40.

9. What qualities are necessary for one to be a theurgist?
   4. 5. 22. 24.

10. What is a black magician?
    One who attempts to dominate another (by various means) in order to control him, usually for his own self aggrandizement. What is the fate of a black magician?

11. Describe some of the basic preparations for a theurgic ritual.
    51 - 68.

12. There is a particular invocation which is a very powerful force in theurgy, what is it?
    39.

13. What is a 'spontaneous prayer'?
35.

14. What have 'good prayers' been alluded to?
36.

15. What effects do drugs have on the theurgist?
25. 53.

16. What is the difference between psychic development and spiritual development, or being 'psychic' and 'spiritual'?
27.

17. What is the principle condition required for theurgic work?
24.

18. What is the effect of theurgic work upon one's spiritual and psychic development?
26.

19. What effect does the performance of theurgic work have upon the operators?
26. 28.

20. What is the difference between faith and belief?
11. 12.

21. Can the existence of God be proved?
8. 49.

22. Is one's karma predestined? Can one's karma be altered?
50.

23. Can one give a verbal definition of 'faith'?
16. 17.

24. To whom are theurgic operations directed?
4.

25. Does one's personal concept of God have any effect on theurgic operations?
47.

26. What are the mechanics behind a theurgic operation. In other words, what do theurgic operations do?
They set CAUSES in motion (44).

27. In which kabalistic world does the theurgist operate?
In Briah - the world of creation.

28. What is the well-known Christian Theurgic operation and what is its purpose?
6.

29. What is the aim and purpose of ritual?
43.

30. What do M:: rituals accomplish?

31. When a M:: visualizes his regalia upon himself, or upon another person, what is he doing and what happens?
He invokes the power and protection of the M:: Egregore.

32. What particular quality of the theurgist ensures better and more enduring results?
42.

33. What is the motto of theurgy?
2.

34. Is it possible to "loose faith"?
14.

35. After the theurgic operation is over, what should be done?
30.

36. What essential qualities are needed during theurgic operations?
31.

37. Name one of the chief powers ... and one every theurgist MUST HAVE.
9.

38. There are two important postulates which Adepts have accepted. Name them.
23.

39. "Faith begins where knowledge ends." Who said that?
18.

40. What karmic retribution should one fear in theurgic operations undertaken against evil spirits and phantoms?
46.

41. Are faith and belief compatible?
10.

42. Is the quality of faith discernible in a person?
21.

43. Does theurgy have to do with theoretical postulations?
47.

44. What is 'truth' from the theurgical perspective?
37.

45. Why should care be taken in admitting new members to a theurgic group?
29.

46. What striking and mysterious illustration did Christ give concerning 'faith'?
13.

47. What is the deciding factor in theurgic operations?
31.

48. Name some well known theurgists.

49. There is a particular and strong warning given in regard to embarking on the theurgic path. What is it?
68.

50. What should the theurgist do if someone offers him a material reward for his service?
65.

- + -

The above Test Questions have been formulated mainly on Aphorisms 1 - 50. Very few have been formulated on Aphorisms 51 - 68. The Group Leader should proceed to this.

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

ORDRE MARTINISTE
DES
ELUS COHEN
***

SOUVERAIN GRAND
MAGISTERE DE L'ORDRE
****

Personal & Confidential

CLASSIFIED

THEURGY
Part II

In Part I certain rules were given under the heading Theurgic Aphorisms. Before continuing the following important points will be reiterated.

Although a few eminent theurgists undoubtedly possessed quite wide and truly philosophical conceptions of God as an absolute and impersonal being, [Pythagoras, Iamblichus, Plotinus, Paracelcus, Pasquales, Claude de Saint-Martin, Eliphas Lévi, Papus, Philip of Lyons, etc.] the majority had and still have rather anthropomorphic ideas about the Almighty. The important point is: whatever one's conception of God may be IT IS NOT AN OBSTACLE TO ACHIEVEMENT OF THE AIMS OF THEURGIC OPERATIONS.

The theurgist should not be too proud if, in his imagination, he conceives God as an abstract and absolutely perfect and attributeless being; nor should he be abashed if he cannot raise his mind beyond the concept of an immensely powerful and merciful Father in heaven, who is full of goodness and who graciously deigns to hear his simple but sincere worship.

Let it be stated again then, that whatever one's intellectual conception of the Supreme power may be ... it does not play any deciding rôle in the success of theurgic actions.

All religions assert that every life is possible only in God and every birth of life, its endurance in time, transformation and dissolution, are within His law. In other words we live and move and have our being in Him. So while not knowing what is impossible to know (God) ... we can be aware of His laws and then act according to them. This is all that is needed to produce the desired results. Perhaps you will now be able to realize what is in the heart of theurgic methods, conjurations, exorcisms and prayers: these are the applications of the laws known to theurgic science .

Although God is beyond all attributes, nevertheless when we worship and pray, using theurgic formulas, tuning to the illimitable goodness, mercy, wisdom, omnipresence, justice, love and power, He still embraces everything we can imagine or create in our hearts and minds, in the matter of the highest qualities, as we conceive them. Just as a small bay, which is part of the great ocean, cannot hope to enclose the wholeness of that ocean, so the ocean cannot be confined to a bay. This is what you have to realize fully ... and then your invocations and prayers will have the attribute of wisdom, which penetrates theurgic practices. You will then operate with faith and confidence in Him and thereby obtain results beyond all expectation.

One of seventeen

97
018

You already know that simple repetition of even the most powerful theurgic invocations is of little avail, if faith, sincerity and confidence in the Supreme are absent in the operator. Why is there such a condition? Realize that everything in the manifested worlds is conditioned, that is, subject to certain laws. Can you tell why such powers as gravitation, magnetism and vibration exist? WHY, (not HOW!) rays of light produce certain chemical reactions on your retina, and why they are transformed into nervous energy which affects — in a mysterious way — your consciousness, so that you are able to read these lines now before your eyes? This 'WHY' belongs to the CAUSE of these phenomena, not to their technicalities and effects. There is only one answer: SUCH IS THE LAW. And with this our knowledge ends. We do not know 'WHY', but only 'HOW'.

And so ... theurgy is based on the axiom that God exists and rules. It does not deal with theoretical deliberations but with real facts and the use of its methods. Since the existence of God cannot be proved, theurgy simply teaches the means and methods whereby we may influence the outcome of things. In simple language, theurgy is the influencing of causes in order to obtain results. Used in the way prescribed and under the right conditions, theurgic operations DO WORK and yield clear-cut results. That is all we need to know and all we need to concern ourselves with.

Let us return to certain preparations and prerequisites required for theurgic work. During an exorcism, or indeed for any theurgic operation — whether it be a service for the sick; the blessing of an animal, of food and drink, a dwelling house or whatever — it is important that the conditions for the free flow of psychic energy are ensured.

Psychic energy can flow freely through fabrics made of natural fibres. Your alb should therefore be made of cotton or linen. Psychic energy does not flow through man-made materials such as plastic, polyester, acrylic and nylon. (Wool and leather are conductors of psychic energy but these materials are NEVER USED in our work.) Leather, wool, synthetic materials or blends such as cotton-polyester should never be used for making garments for theurgical or ecclesiastical use. Even the wearing of underclothing made of synthetic materials will interfere with the flow of energy. Cotton socks, or sandals made from sisal may be worn, but bare feet are even better. Also, since metal collects energy, no jewelry can be worn, no metal fasteners, zips, pins, etc. are allowed.

About psychic energy: All living things have, and exude, psychic energy. You are affected by your own psychic energy, by other people's psychic energy and by the psychic energy of your environment. Psychic energy is transferred from one person to another and among all living things. All of us constantly exchange this energy with each other and with nature. We are profoundly affected by this fundamental exchange, although it is usually subtle. Psychic energy vibrates to different frequencies, carrying emotions and other information. Every person is made up of a range of frequencies that make up his unique vibration. Sometimes the various frequencies of energy with which you come into contact are distracting or incompatible with your own. Psychic cleaning is therefore an important prerequisite to attend to before every theurgic operation. One way of removing psychic dirt is to take a bath under running water (a shower) ... running water removes both 'visible' and 'invisible' dirt. This should be done as close to the time of the operation as is possible. And this is why your alb must be washed and carefully put away after every operation and not worn again until it's time to use it.

Psychic energy is the same substance called 'prana' by the yogis and 'bio-energy' by therapists. One's psychic body (also called astral body or energy body) corresponds in shape and size to the physical body and extends approximately an inch outside it. The psychic body has a complex structure, similar to the physical body of which it forms a part. The aura is energy exuded by the psychic body. All work that involves the use of the psychic body is made easier by the proper use of the entire psychic body. The paths that energy follows as it flows through the psychic body (energy body, astral body) are termed channels. As the energy-body is used for different tasks (as in theurgic work) it develops channels suited to those tasks. Psychic energy is generated by all living things and is transferred between them. This transferal forms the basis for all psychic events and is part of all human communication. Psychic energy is a physical substance, a flexible medium which is light and diffuse, but it can be compacted and moulded and then it becomes readily perceptible by the physical senses. It will frequently be seen as sparks, as a ball of light or as a cloud. A tremendous amount of psychic energy is generated during a theurgic operation, especially at a group operation, that is why it is important that all channels be open and that there be no impediments to choke the free flow of energy.

Theurgic operations involve two levels of energy: psychic and spiritual. Spiritual energy is not hampered by mundane conditions but psychic energy is. It is the free circulation of psychic energy during the operation that promotes the unification of shared experience -- feelings, emotions, realizations, etc.. If the free circulation of psychic energy is impeded, the group's work is retarded ... the group will not be "in tune".

The object of these monographs is to give operating theurgists as much information as possible so let's mention another matter: on occasion one or more of the group's members may suffer some discomfort due to the generation of excess energy or to energy drain. A person whose channels have been overloaded, or blocked by foreign energy, or whose channels have collapsed due to energy drain ... may experience feelings of fatigue, lethargy, irritability or depression. These symptoms spring from the same cause ... often what is experienced as a lack of energy is caused by impaired energy flow. If one of the members of the operating group becomes lightheaded during an operation it is probable that excess energy has gathered in his head. One should not do any psychic work if they are feeling lightheaded. Should lightheadedness be experienced during an operation, quietly retire and walk around for a few minutes. At such times it is necessary to consciously draw the energy into the lower parts of the body. To do this, visualize the energy flowing down from your head and into your feet. Another way of normalizing the discomforts mentioned above is to drink a glass of water ... then sit down and "tune" yourself: choose a colour that you feel at harmony with, visualize and see yourself gradually becoming that colour all through your body. Start with your toes and slowly progress up your body, returning each part of yourself to your chosen colour. Take your time. When you get home take a shower. The best cure for psychic overwork or overstimulation however, is physical exercise, this moves the energy into the channels which are specific for that activity and allows the energy-body to relax and the channels to return to their normal elasticity. Another good way to balance and tune yourself (which should be a regular exercise) is to stand bare footed on the grass and place the palms of your hands on a tree. Use your conscious awareness to feel the inflow of energy coming in through the soles of your feet. Stop the exercise when you feel sufficently charged and polarized.

Notice that discomfort due to excess energy or energy drain is more an annoyance than it is serious matter ... and one soon recovers. However, if the information given here and in PART I, THEURGIC APHORISMS, is observed ... there will seldom be any problem. Also, EE and ED are not isolated to persons doing theurgic work ... it may happen to persons who are studying intently, doing concentrated mental work, to Priests saying the Mass (if they are doing it correctly), etc. etc..

Let us reiterate once more: psychic dirt should be washed off in preparation for every theurgic operation, this may be accomplished by taking a shower before the operation. There must be no metal on the persons participating in the operation. No metal should be touched during the operation. If the hilt of the sword, or the spoon used to convey incense are made of metal, these should be insulated. Members' albs must be made of natural fibre material (cotton or linen), they must be freshly washed prior to the operation and carefully set aside so they do not become contaminated, i.e. not stored in a closet with other clothes and not worn until the time of the operation. White cotton socks or sandals made of sisal are to be worn, or better still — bare feet. No material made of leather or wool is to be used.

Let us now turn our attention to other matters. Some operations of theurgy have to do with action against evil spirits. Such operations should only be performed by well-trained theurgists, who lead pure lives, and who are able to resist the temptations and invultuations coming from the 'other side'. Where an exorcism is done for someone, such as against the attacks of incubi and succubi, such assistance must be utterly unselfish. No payment is allowed, for in such case the result will be nil, and, moreover, the attacks may increase in strength and frequency. An unworthy operator may himself easily become the target of similar attacks by the same demons and suffer the fate of the patient.

You should know that invisible evil beings do possess intelligence and abilities, often superior to those of the average man and they have the advantage of being indefatigable and not perceptible to the physical eye, unless they choose to become visible and materialize in some kind of body.

Our thoughts and feelings are also not a mystery to them, so they can perfectly well 'see' what kind of adversary they have against them. They will flee from a saint, a virtuous man, a great mystic or a powerful white occultist, it is true; but average people can seldom resist evil spirits, if their destiny or (karma) allows them to be targets for the dark forces from the astral world.

If the prospective operator cannot dominate fear of those whom he has to conquer and expel, or if he is only a half-hearted believer in theurgy, then the best thing by far would be for no operation whatsoever to be undertaken by such a person. This applies even more if he considers himself to be an 'agnostic' and is only curious about theurgic operations and not a sincere adept, or if he 'would like to make only an interesting experiment.' Then in such a case he will invariably be defeated, harmed himself ... and if he has tried to undertake an exorcism on behalf of someone ... the state of the sufferer will be made considerably worse.

The fact that one does not believe in the forces one attempts to contact has no meaning as regards the consequences of an unwise action. Ignorance of the law does not save a culprit from due punishment. A 'non-believer' in the existence of jails will not prevent him from being locked up, if he breaks the law.

DISCRIMINATING BETWEEN GOOD AND EVIL SPIRITS.

There should be no need to emphasize to the theurgist the importance of right and immediate discrimination should some forces from the invisible worlds be encountered. Here are the traditional rules and rites which have been held partly in secrecy. This information has formerly been guarded, what is being revealed here are those parts that cannot harm, even in inexperienced or wrong hands.

97
022

The gift of discrimination between good and inimical forces is not a common one, but rather a rare grace, given to only a few. Nevertheless, apart from first-hand knowledge, there are certain signs and details of apparitions, which allow us to classify them with the minimum probability of error.

It cannot be denied, that under certain circumstances the souls of departed human beings can return, that is, find a means of communication with people living on 'this side' and manifest their presence in many different ways.

There is no doubt about the 'returning' of saintly souls, in fact there are even unmistakable statements in the scriptures. We read, for example, that the prophet Samuel appeared to King Saul, while Saint Gregory gives many proofs of it in his Dialogues. It is likewise with angels ... as the scriptures mention in a number of places.

But, just as good beings come from the other side to help and enlighten, so too do evil ones come in order to test, deceive or to punish us.

Because they are malicious and deceitful, it is necessary to know their type of frauds and methods of conduct, for they often try (and unfortunately often succeed) to assume the appearance of forces of the light in order to deceive and confuse us.

But it has been said that only those who like to be deceived — are deceived.

Good spirits, who know very well about the dangers which come from the dark powers, never try to avoid our measures of control, which every reasonable man cannot dispense with under any conditions.

To begin with, if the apparition produces frightening noises and is accompanied by various forms of trouble, and so on, we should be very careful and our suspicions will be justified. Then we have to behave ourselves as if in the presence of a demon and use the means of self-defence given below. An abundant source of useful information referring to the recognition of evil spirits (and malicious spirits on the other side) can be found in the statements of St. Antonin in Chapter XVIII of his work about the life of St. Athanse.

Here are the infallible signs denoting the presence of an evil spirit or a perverted soul:

1. If they are frightened and fly when confronted by holy things, or signs made by men: the cross, sacred sword, blessed water, the name of Christ, the Virgin Mary, or any Saint or Archangel, holy relic, Agnus Dei, blessed candles, the stole or cordelier of a priest, or any other object which the Christian Tradition uses against demonic maliciousness. Also if such apparition mocks at or turns aside from these words or objects.

97
023

2. If they give a false or perverted reason for their appearance.

3. If they say anything against the faith or general doctrine of the Christian Tradition, or advise practices which are opposite to good behaviour and the common sense of honest people.

4. If they try to create in us thoughts of pride, egotism, vanity and the desire for homage, despair and everything that is opposite to the accepted rules of morality and honesty.

5. If they try to prevent us reporting these apparitions to our spiritual guide or confessor.

6. If they appear in the hideous outer form of an inferior being, or disappear in stench, disorder, fear or uproar.

7. If they come again despite the fact that they may have obtained for humans the required assistance or fulfillment of their desires: (this is because good spirits and souls, having once helped do not return again to disturb men.)

8. If their coming seems to be pleasant, but their departure brings only sadness, desolation, trouble for the soul, darkness in heart and mind, and similar negative impressions: for good spirits and souls bring solace and light, peace and consolation, but never any trouble or evil.

When, in spite of our careful investigation and checking, we are still not in a position to define beyond all reasonable doubt, whether or not the visitors from the other side come for good or evil, it then remains for us to use one of the potent exorcisms in the arsenal of theurgy and await the results. The good ones will not be affected by the formulas or curses against evil spirits but the latter will invariably show their displeasure, anger, fear and then flee.

-o-o-o-o-o-

Having become familiar with the foregoing one is left to wonder whether or not there are evil spirits incarnated in the bodies of men, since one sometimes gets to know of persons who display the above mentioned traits.

-o-o-o-o-o-o-

Two theurgic operations will now be given. These have been chosen because of their usefulness. Take care that you notice and observe all that is given concerning them.

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

97
024

BLESSING OF A SICK PERSON

Provided that the Operators and the sick person have faith, a cure or considerable improvement is assured. Prayer and faith almost enforce the Almighty to descend towards us and then we have the case of a miracle. The greatness of the healing power's obtaining of grace is the direct cause of the degree of our faith. Family members or friends of the sick person may be present... (if such is the case the service may be opened and closed with the singing of a hymn, if desired. [This is optional]).

Paraphernalia: two lighted candles placed on a table so that they are visible to the sick person (who will be sitting comfortably or lying upon a bed). A Crucifix made of wood (i.e. a cross with the figure of the Crucified One upon it, or a Red Rose). A container with burning incense -- either incense upon lighted coals or a good quality stick incense. A small porcelain bowl of fresh, clean water to which has been added a pinch of salt. A small glass container (or a small chalice) containing about one-half teaspoon of wine (dry, red), and a small plate upon which is placed a single wafer or a small cube of whole wheat bread.

This Healing Operation is done with the help of an assistant. The operator and assistant will be wearing albs. They will be quite familiar with all the prerequisites as set forth in Part I THEURGIC APHORISMS and in the foregoing preamble. The operation may also be done by a single person if an assistant is not available, in which case the operator conducts the entire service by himself.

Notice: whenever this sign + is observed, the sign of the Cross is made twice - once on one's self, from the forehead to navel, then from one shoulder to the other, then over the object or person being blessed. For theurgic purposes there is no essential difference as to whether you put your hand first to the right or left shoulder (eastern Orthodox and western Roman Catholic traditions respectively). But it is accepted that you bow slightly every time you cross yourself. Whether making the cross on yourself, or in the direction of the object(s) being blessed, in all cases the sign must be made rather slowly, with the dignity inherent in this powerful theurgic means, using a broad movement of the right hand, as if in a square with eighteen inch sides.

The sprinkling of blessed water should be done in the likeness of a cross with an energetic, fast movement of the hand, so that the water will reach its aim. (A saturated brush may be employed, if desired.)

Genuflections and bowing are very much a part of the Christian Tradition and may be employed during the service at the discretion of the Operator.

The operator is standing before the paraphernalia. The ritual begins with the Operator lighting the candles and incense. The Operator must keep his mind firmly concentrated on what he is doing and saying and not allow his attention to wander.

OPERATOR: (facing the sick person)
Our defence is in the name of the Lord,
Who created heaven and earth.
Lord, hear our prayer,
and let our cry ascend to Thee!

Operator turns and blesses the paraphernalia:

OPERATOR: O God, in whose light all our actions and even the smallest thoughts are sanctified! We beseech Thee to extend Thy blessing + on these creatures (name the items of paraphernalia) and make them worthy channels for the expression of Thy perfect Love, Light, Health and Strength. May Thy servant (your name) use them with thoughtfulness, according to Thy will and Thy law, who alone, in Thy goodness, can grant it. Through the invocation of Thy most Holy Spirit, grant health of body, salvation of soul, and everything necessary for this life, which we beseech with devotion and faith. Through Jesus Christ, our Lord! Amen.

OPERATOR: Peace be on this home!

ASSISTANT: And on all its dwellers!

Operator lightly sprinkles water on the sick person, the bed, the whole room and all present while saying:

Asperges me hyssopo - mundabor!
Lavabis me aqua - et super nivem dealbabor!

Operator is standing on one side of the bed, the Assistant is on the other side. Assistant now reads the Operator's choice of either Psalm 6, 31, 37, 50 or 90.

OPERATOR: + Lord, have mercy,
Christ, have mercy,
Lord have mercy!

All now say the Lord's Prayer.

Let us pray:

Lord Jesus Christ, let Thy peace and mercy enter into this home together with my humble person; let every malice of demons fly away from this place; and let the angels of peace descend here! Let all discordance and prejudice abandon this home!

O Lord, make the grandeur and sanctity of Thy name shine for us; Bless our requests: Thou who art holy and merciful, who lives eternally with the Father, and Holy Spirit, through the ages of ages. Amen.

Look, O Lord, at Thy servant (name of sick person) who is suffering from bodily infirmities and renew his/her soul, the soul which Thou created: make it improve through this trial and let him (her) feel permanently saved through Thy mercy.
+ Through Jesus Christ, Our Lord. Amen.

Let us pray.

O Lord, the merciful consoler of the faithful, we implore Thy immense goodness so that in the moment of the coming of my humble person, Thou also deigns to enter, and to visit -- just as Thou visited Simon's mother-in-law -- Thy servant (name of sick person), prostrated on this bed of suffering; be propitious to him, O Lord, so that after having recovered his former health, he will be able to go himself into Thy Church for thanksgiving to Thee, my God, who lives and reigns through all the ages of ages. Amen.

Let us pray.

O God, who alone possesses the wholeness of mercy, accept our prayers: may we and Thy servant (name of sick person) bound by the chains of sins, be fully delivered from them through Thy infinite mercy!. Through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

Let us pray

O God, the only succour in our human infirmities, prove the power of Thy aid in relation to this sick servant of Thine: let him, supported by Thy helpful mercy, be able to appear in Thy holy Church, in good health. + Through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

O Lord God, we implore Thee, grant to Thy servant (Name of sick person) the joy of permanent health for his soul as well as body; and through the glorious intercession of the Blessed Mary, eternally virgin, deliverance from his present sadness and give him the enjoyment of eternal happiness. Through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

ASSISTANT reads Psalm 5 and then the Gospel of Saint John 5:1-9.

ASSISTANT now takes the Crucifix and holds it, the base is in the palm of his left hand, at waist height. The Assistant is standing on one side of the bed and the Operator is on the other side.

OPERATOR: O Jesus, may the power of the Father, wisdom of the Son, and virtue of the Holy Spirit cure this sickness (name the sickness) in our dear Brother (Name...).

O Jesus, our Lord Jesus Christ, we believe that in the night of that holy Thursday, at the holy Last Supper, after having washed the feet of Thy disciples, Thou took the bread in Thy most holy hands, blessed it, broke and distributed it among Thy apostles, saying: accept it and eat, for this is my body. Similarly, Thou took the chalice in Thy most holy hands, rendered thanksgiving and gave it to them saying: accept it and drink, for this is my blood of the new alliance, which will be shed for many, for the remission of sins: every time that you will do the same, do it in my memory. We beg Thee, Lord and Saviour, that through these most saintly words, through their virtue and through the merit of Thy most holy passion, this malady will be cured and this evil depart from our dear Brother (name of sick person). O Jesus! In the name + of the Father, the + Son and the + Holy Spirit. Amen.

OPERATOR takes the container/chalice in one hand and the wafer/cube in the other. He returns to the bed side, holding the wafer between thumb and forefinger, dips the wafer in the wine, makes the sign of the cross with it and places it on the tongue of the sick person. Operator replaces the chalice on the table and returns to the bed side.

OPERATOR now extends his hands over the sick person and the Assistant says the following prayer:

ASSISTANT: + They will impose their hands over the sick, and they will have their health improved. May Jesus, the son of Mary, salvation of the world and our Lord and Saviour, always be clement and propitious to you (name of sick person), through the intercession of the apostles Saint Peter and Saint John. Amen.

OPERATOR retracts his hands.

ASSISTANT reads from the Gospel of Saint John 1:1-12.

OPERATOR blesses the sick person thus: The blessings of + God the Father, + God the Son and + God the Holy Spirit come down upon you and keep watch over you, now, and for evermore. Amen.

OPERATOR turns to any persons in the room who were participants in the service, goes to each person and traces a small cross over each one's heart. Extinguishes the candles and incense.

END OF SERVICE

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

97
028

OPERATION AGAINST INIMICAL FORCES

Under no circumstances should this ritual be undertaken unless the Operator is very familiar with all that has been set forth in Part I — Theurgic Aphorisms — and in the preamble above. This important Operation is carried out for defense against one's personal enemies, against misfortune and sickness, and against Satanic forces. The Operator may operate alone or members of one's theurgic group may be present; also any family members or friends who understand the seriousness and intent of theurgic work, in other words persons who are not cynically disposed or of a derogatory attitude which will adversely affect you and the others, may be present. ALWAYS HEED THE ADVICE YOU HAVE BEEN GIVEN: 'DO NOT CAST PEARLS BEFORE SWINE.' LET THIS MAXIM GUIDE YOU IN ALL YOUR THEURGIC UNDERTAKINGS WHERE OTHER PEOPLE ARE INVOLVED.

This ceremony may be done once a month, or oftener, as the Operator wishes.

The following paraphernalia is required:

A small wooden table, preferably (but not essentially) round, covered with a clean white cloth going down to about six inches from the floor. This table is placed in the center of the room. If there are going to be witnesses/participants, chairs are placed around the table in a circle. The Operator and the table will be in the center of the circle of chairs. Upon it are:

Two candlesticks with lighted candles.
A Crucifix made of wood. (With a figure, or a red rose).
Incense burner with incense.
A small porcelain bowl with fresh water, to which has been added a pinch of salt.

THE RITUAL

The rite is begun by lighting the candles and the incense.
If other people are present a hymn may be sung to open the works, if the Operator is working alone he may omit the hymn. The Operator must keep his attention firmly concentrated on what he is doing and saying and not allow his mind to wander.

CONGREGATION STANDS

OPERATOR: + In the name of the Father, and Son, and Holy Spirit!

Our aid is in the name of the Lord,
Who created heaven and earth,
O Lord, listen to my prayer,
And let our cry ascend unto Thee!

O God, in whose light all our actions and even the smallest thoughts are sanctified! We beseech Thee to extend Thy blessing + on these creatures (name the items of paraphernalia) and make them worthy channels for the expression of Thy perfect Love, Light, Health and Strength. May Thy servant (your name) use them with thoughtfulness, according to Thy will and Thy law, who alone, in Thy goodness, can grant it. Through the invocation of Thy most Holy Spirit, grant health of body, salvation of soul, and everything necessary for this life, which we beseech with devotion and faith. Through Jesus Christ, our Lord! Amen.

OPERATOR: + O Saint Michael, Archangel, guardian of Paradise,
AND CONGREGATION come to help God's people and be pleased to defend us against the demon. Defend us also against our powerful enemies; come to lead us finally into God's presence, into the abode of the blissful.
My Lord God, we shall sing your glory in the presence of your angels! We will make to Thee our humblest homage in Thy holy temple and we shall proclaim the greatness of Thy name!
'And Jesus passed between them and walked away...! May Jesus, our Lord, be blessed now and forever. Because He is our Saviour, He will lead us happily into ways which He has marked for us.

O Jesus, as a raging tiger is kept locked away to protect the society, so let darkness surround and restrict our enemies until they repent in their hearts and turn to goodness and love. Guard us against those who raise themselves on all sides, who would delight in seeing us perish. Deliver us from those who are committing evil, who would seek to spill our blood, who would desire to take our life, our honour and our property, so that we may be allowed to pass.

+ God is our defence against the unchained beasts who fight against us; His hand is a shield against the arrows of our enemies. We shall be fearless when we see even a hundred thousand arrayed against us: God has put His arms around us so we shall not perish, we shall not disappear under His guidance!

O great God, cure our imperfections, our bodily ailments, our mental torment and deliver us from those who would hurt us and do us wrong. +

Glory be to the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit, from the beginning and through the whole of eternity, today and forever, through the ages of ages! Amen.

Let us pray:

O Omnipotent Lord, Logos of God the Father, Christ Jesus, who gave Thy apostles the power to stamp on serpents and scorpions and to annihilate every effort of the enemy; Thou, whose power defeated Satan himself and made him fall from heaven faster than does a thunderbolt: trembling and imploring I invoke Thy name, in order that Thou will forgive me (Name...) ("and those present" if there are witnesses), Thy unworthy servant(s) my/our sins, and give me the faith and force necessary to attack the powerful dragon, Satan, under the shelter of Thy all-powerful hand! + Thou, who lives and reigns with the Father, in unity with the Holy Spirit. Amen.

Let us pray.

O God, omnipotent and eternal, before whom trembles heaven, mountains melt like wax, the earth shudders and trembles, the abysses open and hell is terrified: I make this humble prayer to Thee.

With the invocation of Thy name may our souls be freed from every vexation and made pure and luminous. Let every discord and stench be dissipated and replaced by the sweet aromas of the Holy Spirit, so that all temptations that have distracted us will be removed, thereby enabling us to follow our Saviour and Master, our Lord Jesus Christ, and live the life He demonstrated, to the greater glory of mankind. + Blessed be the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit. Let them be exalted and praised through all the ages of ages. Amen.

Let us pray.

O God, omnipotent and eternal, who grants to Thy servants the grace to profess the true faith, because they recognize Thy eternal and glorious trinity, adoring Thy unity in the omnipotence of Thy Majesty. We implore Thee to fortify that faith in us now, and to defend us from all our enemies. Through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

Operator now reads from the Gospel of Saint-John 12:31-36.

THE EXORCISM

OPERATOR: I exorcise thee, impure spirit, you and all your legions, + through the Father + through the Son and through the + Holy Spirit. Go away from around us and away from this neighbourhood, and stop tormenting the Children of God who wish no part of you or your dirty works.

Listen thou, accursed Satan, I adjure thee through the name of the Eternal God, our saviour Jesus Christ, to go away, defeated in thy hatred, go away with fear and howling: in me and in those around me. There is nothing here belonging to thee. Render homage to the Holy Spirit who comes now and who deigns to descend from high heaven in order to break the snares, to complete the purification of the temple, our dwelling, and to deliver us, Children of God, completely from thy vexation.

Impure spirit, fly from us and do not presume to return. You spirit of the most black perversions, enemy of the human race, seller of the dead, thief of life, offender of justice, source of all evil, seducer of men, exciter of hatred, cause of discordance, father of lies, dread of Him, who was sacrificed in Isaac, sold in Joseph, killed as a lamb, crucified as a man, who defeated hell and went out glorious ... retire NOW in the name + of the Father and + Son, + and Holy Spirit. Go away from us, from this neighbourhood, and cease to tempt and torment the Children of God. By virtue of Jesus Christ who commands thee, and who orders thee, and who comes to purify this world by fire. Amen.

The exorcising theurgist now takes the cross, holds it up in his right hand and says: (Notice: the sign of the cross is made with the right hand which is holding the crucifix).

Here is the wood of + the most holy cross:
Fly enemies!
He was triumphant over you and the world,
our Lord Jesus Christ, Son of God, and sovereign emperor, lion of the tribe of Judah, descendant of the race of David.

The Operator kisses the Crucifix, then says:

We adore Thee, O Christ, we bless Thee, because it is through Thy holy cross that Thou hast redeemed the world. O Lord, have mercy; Christ, have mercy; Lord, have mercy!

Operator now takes the Crucifix to all others present, who kiss it. The Operator returns the Crucifix to the table, and says:

May we dare say:

O & C: Our Father, Who art in heaven, ... etc.

OPERATOR: Here God arises and His enemies immediately take flight!
And those who hate him - fly from His sight!
Save Thy servants, O Lord, who have no other hope than in Thee!

May the enemy gain no power over us, and the son of iniquity not harm us!
Be for us, O Lord, listen to our prayer,
And let our cry ascend unto Thee!

OPERATOR: The Lord be with you!

RESPONSE: And also with you!

OPERATOR: AND CONGREGATION O God, whom every sin offends, whom every repentance appeases, look favourably on the humble prayers of Thy people and turn aside the punishment of Thy just anger, which we create by our errors!

O God omnipotent and eternal!
Eternal salvation for the faithful, hear us now as we pray for all those who are in distress and for whom we implore Thy merciful goodness in restoring good health. Resume in them full strength and fortify their minds, thus allowing them to return to Thy Church with thanks for Thy blessed grace!

We implore Thee, O Lord, to crush the pride of our enemies and may the force of Thy hand abate their stubborn opposition.

O God, who does not like the complaint of a repentant heart and who does not reject the love of those who are afflicted; agree with our imploring, which we renew in the midst of our suffering. May Thou listen to it in Thy goodness, so that all evils which are directed against us, the diabolical maliciousness or human hatred, become as nothing, broken by the aid of Thy mercy. May no adversity befall us, and full of joy and recognition may we render to Thee grace for Thy goodness. Through our Lord, Jesus Christ. Amen.

O God, who has instructed the hearts of Thy faithful through the light of the Holy Spirit: grant us through the same spirit the knowledge and love of everything just, that we will be able to enjoy His consolation. Through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

Grant to Thy servants, as we implore Thee, O our Lord and God, the grace of perpetual health of spirit and body; and through the intercession of the blessed Virgin Mary grant us deliverance from present sadness and the possession of eternal joys. Through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

The Operator now announces a hymn if other persons are present. (Optional if he is working alone). During the singing he sprinkles the blessed water on all present and around the room. When the hymn is finished:

OPERATOR: May the blessing of God the omnipotent + Father + Son and + Holy Spirit descend on you all and remain with you forever. Amen.

END OF CEREMONY

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

It is hoped that since you have come this far you will feel the urge to utilize what you have been given and will not relegate this information and these operations to obscurity by filing these papers away among your many books.

Do not be ashamed or fearful to offer your services to persons who are sick. As far as the Operation Against Inimical Forces is concerned ... you cannot do it too often and we all know that every effort to dispel the Dark Forces is sorely needed at this time in the history of the world.

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

97
034

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 90-100

LIBER #98

Personal & Confidential TENTH DEGREE

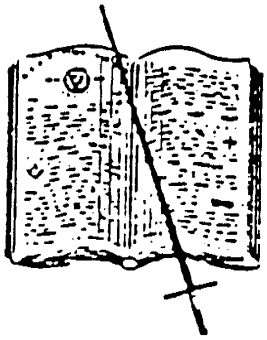
The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

I.C.E.S.

International College of Esoteric Studies



Incorporated as a non-profit educational institution devoted to the advancement and mystical enlightenment of Man.

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

1991

In the Last Days

TO ALL COMPANIONS ON THE PATH -

In this Degree we have sought to present material principally from our Martinist heritage and this Liber is no exception! Herein you will find The Theosophy of Louis-Claude de Saint Martin and also the paper What is Martinism.

The discourse: The Theosophy of LC-d-SM is the clearest and most useful presentation of Saint-Martin's teachings ever given in English, as of this date.

These two discourses, presented together, compose a most valuable dossier of information ... information every Martinist should have. WE KNOW THIS LIBER WILL BECOME AN ESSENTIAL ITEM OF STUDY FOR INDIVIDUAL MARTINISTS ... AND BY MARTINIST GROUPS ALL OVER THE ENGLISH-SPEAKING WORLD.

We wish to express our thanks to the Martinist Order of the West Indies, who gave this discourse for inclusion here. The Martinist Order of the West Indies is by far the most progressive and vibrant of the Martinist Orders operating in English-speaking countries ... they have gone to great lengths and expense to have Martinist material translated and made available in English ... and their willingness to share what they have with others, especially with fellow Martinists, is testimony to their spirit of fraternal love and goodwill.

Those of us here at I.C.E.S. who have worked so painstakingly to select and present from among the vast archive of material at our disposal, as wide and balanced a curriculum as possible, feel particularly gratified that the material we have shared on Martinism has been so well received and appreciated by all Companions. Our whole-hearted and genuine thanks to all of you who have written expressing your delight.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

Sincerely,

Soeur

98 01

A·L·G·D· יהשוה S·A·D·M·

Sous Les auspices

du Phil. Inc. N V M

MARTINIST ORDER OF THE WEST INDIES

"SEDIR ARISE" - -

THE THEOSOPHY OF LOUIS-CLAUDE DE SAINT-MARTIN

By Robert Amadou

Translated by Sâr Asunta.

This work is in seven sections:

I. DESIRE OF MAN: The Unknown Philosopher 3; Verbalizing 3.

II. BOOKS AND NATURE: Divinism is a Humanism 5; Signs, Forms, Numbers 7; The Treasures of Asia 11.

III. ORIGIN AND DESTINY OF MAN: Emanation 13; Reintegration 14; Metempsychosis 15; Apocatastasis 15.

IV. THE SECRET PATH: Full action 16; Will 17; Rebirth 18.

V. THE REPAIRER: God-Man 19; Man-God 22.

VI. DIVINE WISDOM: Sophia 25; The Mystery of the Sacrifice 26; The Church Excluded 29; C-H-R 32.

VII. DESIRE OF GOD: Pisces 35; Aquarius 39.

- + - + - + - + - + - + -

DESIRE OF MAN

THE UNKNOWN PHILOSOPHER

"Joy, peace, salvation to him who hears me,
My brothers,

...The first principle of science that we cultivate is desire. In no temporal art has any craftsman ever succeeded without assiduity, work and a continuity of effort in knowing the various parts of the art which he intends to take up. It would therefore be pointless to think that one can achieve wisdom without desire, because the fundamental basis of that wisdom is only a desire to know it, which makes one overcome all the obstacles which present themselves to close the way; and it should not seem surprising that this desire is necessary, because it is positively the thought contrary to this desire which has led away from it all those who seek to enter into it.

Now, to get back to it, one must go along the path according to the distance one is away from it. One who is still very far away thinks he has reached it and one who has only one step more to take thinks he is far away: which must show that the first step one must take must be along the path of humility, patience and charity."

That is how Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin, at the age of about thirty, began the first of a series of instructions to men of desire like himself enrolled by the mystagogue Martines de Pasqually.

His last book, published in 1801, two years before his call to God, 'Man, his True Nature and Ministry', extols the divine desire in the soul of man. For desire is the principle of all movement; movement and desire are therefore proportional, and have been since the first being, which since it is the first desire, desire 'one' or universal desire, is also in that way the driving force of movement itself, down to the stone which is without movement because it is without desire.

Desire is the current name of man, Sedir makes the name of current man par excellence. Sedir, the man of desire is at the same time sorrowful painful through affliction and holy through renewal. Regeneration requires the bread of suffering daily.

From one state comes the other, the apostrophe of the Unknown to Sedir, in 'Le Crocodile', exhorts in the passage: "Sedir, rise up." Yes, bring the soul out of sleep and darkness, overcome the psychic inertia which prevents the spiritual. With such words, did not Jesus-Christ and the apostles heal paralytics and did they not bring back the dead? Let us get to work.

"Sedir, rise up." Saint Paul explains: "That is why it is said: Rise up, you who sleep, rise up from amongst the dead. Christ will light the way for you." To consciousness, therefore.

And to love: "My beloved speaks and says to me: Rise up, my friend, my dove, and come!"

Saint-Martin is very much Sedir.

VERBALIZING

The ministry of the man-spirit has nothing of that of a courtesan. Before following, see if you feel the courage and the strength to unite your voice to mine, I mean to that of Saint-Martin that I am echoing, together to deplore all the ills which are common to us.

"Fight against me as Jacob against the Angel until I have blessed you." A strange prayer by Saint-Martin for himself. The idea, indeed, seems manifest: sorrows must encourage one to bless God; man, nonetheless, is so weak that there is cause to force him to do so and for God to redouble his blows so that the broken man gives thanks and benefits instead of groaning or cursing.

But the image used by Saint-Martin unconsciously bears other suggestions. It is the fight between Jacob and the Angel (in Hebrew the man) which represents God. In Genesis, Jacob wrests from God his blessing. Now, here Saint-Martin seems to compare himself to the man-God who is to bless Jacob-God... With its disparate transformations, the image expresses the always alternating relation of Saint-Martin with God, the angel-man and Jacob-Israel, who are his partners and who are him, in misfortune and in glory.

Saint-Martin had moments of cheerfulness, but the basis of his character was sadness because of the enormity of evil; he even proclaims himself the Jeremiah of universality. But, if his soul was in sorrow, his spirit was in joy. He only had the hope for death and consoled himself constantly with this.

Saint-Martin experiences, and he wants us to share, the feeling that we are displaced here below, out of alignment: "That long burial which is called life"... And he would like God to remove him from this world, not tomorrow but soon.

Ill-endowed with astral, with a puny body, sensitive to the extreme, gentle and dreaming, looking out for signs, ready to pass as mad and as a visionary, on the condition that it be in good part, that is because of God, the vanity of earthly things was naturally obvious to him, he cultivated detachment from them and he prescribes this to all men of desire.

His certainty and the certainty of his vocation did not yield him to the feeling of his weakness; he was accused of pride, not without some reason; he complained at having been misunderstood, not without some reason.

By practicing and recommending passive virtues, Saint-Martin does not lapse more into masochism than his very gnostic experience of evil leads him to manicheism. He takes the Beatitudes seriously, to the letter.

The medicine of bitterness must absorb into the corporeal, the spiritual and the divine; and, if faith is the new man himself, humility is really his nourishment. We must "remove ourselves from the earth". But it is with a view to gaining freedom, by escaping from the mechanical, which Saint-Martin is afraid of. The main thing is not to follow one's heart but to break it - rather than to break one's head - and to put one's will to the service of desire.

Once more, desire serves as a motor. For whom do I need apart from God? Desire has God as its object (as well as its subject, under a mutual relationship); let us clarify: the desire to unite with God; the desire to do his will. Our will has separated us from the principle: our will must bring us back to this principle.

as the anguish voluntary than fatherhood fertile — spiritualism which — not

Saint-Martin defines his true work as the anguish and grammar of generation". What is more voluntary than fatherhood? What is more desirable?

Cry, but in order to make yourself fertile spiritualism but divinism; otherwise spiritualism which [illegible] not only speculative but active. In short, it is not enough to speak, one must verbalize. The word is that word conceived in us before any word expresses it; it is the emanation of the soul, and the soul is the name of God. Man is born to verbalize always. One must verbalize: God is basically the desire of man.

BOOKS AND NATURE

DIVINISM IS A HUMANISM

When he puts an epigraph of the preceding work in each of his main works, Saint-Martin wishes to mark the continuity of his thought as much as of his work. That is not an artifice; Saint-Martin grew, he did not contradict himself, except to correct for perfection. And the growth of the thinking and of the work, for a man in constant moral progress, brings complements which clarify and depths which become established. The more the tree grows tall, the more it branches out and the more it takes from its own roots.

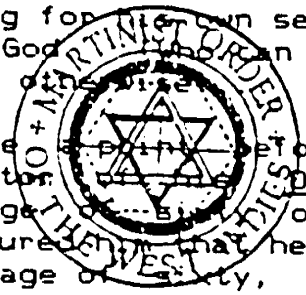
Very generally, theory and practice being inseparable, there is a doctrine of Saint-Martin. He instilled it into himself in developing it and spread it as if out of a need to.

'The Art of Knowing Oneself', according to Jacques Abadie, edited in 1692, was without doubt the first moment of Saint-Martin's asceticism, because the adolescent (although in his fifth year, he had already suffered for His name), had found there the death and the misery of man. He also found the past and future grandeur of that same man which is the key to his desire.

Saint-Martin was born a second time, aged twenty two and a half, when he met Martines de Pasqually. But, like the Sedir of the 'Crocodile', he left this Eleazar to become attached to the only Unknown who commanded him to rise up, to the only Master.

Jacob Boehme, that rare chosen one who reaped what the Holy Spirit had sown in the apostles, reinforced the interiorization of piety.

After 'The Ministry', Saint-Martin aspired to obscurity. It seemed to him that his work of regeneration had to come before everything else, so much so that in working for his own service, he knows how to work for the service of God [illegible] guess that?) Supreme Wisdom, however, can decide otherwise.



On 23 January 1803, Saint-Martin made a point before his grand cousin Tournyer, the future editor of the 'Oeuvres posthumes'. He had just reached the age of sixty on 18th January, and Martines de Pasqually had assured him that he could consider himself fortunate if, at the age of sixty, he had reached the end. That same year, on 14th October, he died.

Now, Saint-Martin wrote to Nicolas Tournyer: "The editing of my detached thoughts has not yet begun, I was not able to get in touch with the bookseller, and then I am taking advantage of my availability, since the publication of the 'Ministry' to dedicate myself to my own advancement, for I can only do one thing at a time. Thanks to God, my way is made delightfully along the path in this way. Although I often receive precious things along my route, I do not note anything. I let it grow stronger on its stalk so as not to cut my corn on the blade. But I have the feeling that before long, there will be enough of it ripe for me to think of reaping several more harvests; and I might even have begun already if I were not convinced that I would not lose anything by waiting. It would be a question of nothing less than to deal with what could be called the analytical functions of eternity in time, not that I have yet firmly decided on this title; and I cannot tell you everything that this vast mine has already offered to my mind. This subject is infinitely more vast than that of the 'Ministry' which includes man in particular, whereas the other includes in particular the eternal principle in its various actions on the circle of temporal and spiritual things. Pray to God, dear cousin, that I may only do what I have to do on that."

Saint-Martin did not write the 'Fonctions analytiques de l'eternite dans le temps' - a curious title, if it had been intended to remain temporary; so he was not to write the last book he had planned.

But the plan was indeed that of a synthesis. Already, the 'Esprit des choses' dealt with the universality of things physical and scientific as well as spiritually divine and the eternal Spirit breathes in the whole of the work of Saint-Martin, who tried to find in time the analytical functions without the letter, but in the numbers of letters.

Our original rights and our pitiful condition, the consolations which remain for us and the hope of becoming again the worker of the Lord: constant themes, not from elsewhere, but in correlation.

for his own service
God who can guess decide other wise made a point before editor of the Oeuvres age of sixty assured him that he of sixty

The Robinson of spirituality is also a cultivator of the divine philosophy; the unofficial defender of Providence has something of the doctor and the bishop and his happiness is to do something good without making a noise.

In the introduction to the final 'Ministry', the method is declared once more in terms analogous to the subject of the author's reflections which implies their renewed form: "Descartes did an essential service to natural sciences by applying algebra to material geometry. I do not know if I would also have done an essential service to thought, by applying man, as I have done in all my writings, to that kind of living and divine geometry which includes everything and of which I consider the Man-spirit as being the true algebra, and the universal analytical tool; it would be a source of satisfaction to me that I dare not hope for, however, I will allow myself to desire it. But such a comparison with this famous geometrist, in the use of our faculties, would be an additional conformity to add to those ~~to those~~ which he and I already have, in a less important order, and amongst which I will only mention one, which is to have received both in the beautiful country known by the name of garden of France."

Did the method not blossom in the 'Fonctions analytiques de l'eternite dans le temps', these functions which are present everywhere, which Saint-Martin always described, finally calculated and calculated as mathematical analysis requires, on the notions of limit and continuity? Man is the book, man-spirit is the place of the functions.

The last book printed, the last epigraph: "Man is the word of all enigmas." We have come full circle; would it not be better to say that the centre did not change? The inner learns everything and preserves some of everything. How the attraction to spiritual things makes those of here below half-hearted. Here below, for all that, you are not in your place.

SIGNS, FORMS, NUMBERS

Doctors describe nature; only sages explain it. But what is nature? It is not what we see around us nor in the universe: it is really the law and the living essence which comes to inform and direct all that has been created. The physical world is only a symbol, the great destiny of nature is to be the image and likeness of the spirit.

The incredulous and the atheists place the eternal spirit in matter, the truth recognizes it outside of matter; nature is not God, but God is himself his divine nature and he is at the same time the principle of visible nature. All the visible beings express the faculties and the designs of God.

A single science: metaphysics, because it alone offers fixed and universal principles. But the exploration of nature leads towards metaphysics, to the double condition that it goes hand in cultivation of the Providence has happiness is to do the method is of the

MARTINIST ORDER + WESTERN INDIES

hand with inner illumination and that it follows that course to take down the mechanism without killing the machine which is never quite one, or to describe physical objects; to establish the relations of these objects to the principles which produce them, metaphysical as well as physical; finally, using these great laws, to raise oneself to the spiritual.

Everything is a world; everything looks alike and nothing is equal. What is external is the sign and the indication of internal properties; the thing referred to will be these inner properties. The sign is the representation or the indication of a separate thing or one which is hidden from us; this link can be either accidental or inherent.

Everything is communicated to our senses and to our intelligence - that is to our intelligence by means of the senses - via the external properties: these therefore have to be penetrated and broken down to reach the internal properties.

From the viewpoint of intelligent beings, man has the eminent right to impose the sign or the idea; but from their viewpoint only.

So are these ideas innate or made up from sensations? Saint-Martin reconciles the two systems, both of which he rejects: the intelligence of man is a cut off table rather than a tabula rasa, the roots of which exist and only wait for the right reaction to germinate. There as elsewhere, everywhere; action and reaction.

Everything which is sensitive is only the representation of what is not sensitive and every action which is manifest is the expression of the properties of the hidden principle to which it belongs.

Every action is a form of magism. But there is magism and magism: nature is in somnambulism, it is up to man to awaken it from its artificial sleep; nature is sick, it is up to man to take care of it; nature is dying, it is up to man to save it from death. Man is the vicar of God in the universe. Provided that he becomes the king that he was and of which he has kept the vocation to be.

Men have in them the repetition of all the astral spheres: it is the basis of the correspondences which astrology uses. Moreover, the correspondences are universal - the beautiful lesson which song 83 of the 'Crocodile' gives! - and if men have a power which is superior to that of the stars whereas the latter sometimes fail in their own conspiracy, certain astrological oracles could possibly only be given by men who have succeeded in transmuting themselves by joining with another light.

Once more the cosmology and the cosmogony, the cosmosophy of Saint-Martin, which depends on Martines de Pasqually and Jacob Boehme, would become clear and would increase in veracity if it course to machine which is to establish which these were compared with the theology-theosophy of the Church of the Orient: for the Unknown Philosopher, too, nature is no longer what it was, and it is up to man to make this silent logos speak. Perhaps, however, Saint-Martin would be more fully in agreement with the Fathers on the transparency of nature than on its solidity.

The theosophical understanding of nature is its "explanation" opposed to its mere description; it articulates on the knowledge of man; the latter alone remains necessary. Saint-Martin criticizes the proofs of the existence of God drawn from the existence or order of nature: Leibniz, Newton, Nieuwentyt, Crouzas... All resources drawn from the Cosmos are precarious and fragile. Since this world is only the envelope of the other world, which is the true one, let us know, in the last natural analysis, and even in making the saving of a natural account, that this other world is closer to us than the physical world and even than nature, which includes the sensitive with its principles. All men are in the other world, in this earthly life, but it is preferable to be amongst those who know it. It is preferable to everything to watch over the maintenance of our essential being and over the culture and the development of our superior and regular faculties.

The incident which, from nature, led us to signs and to ideas, was welcomed. Nature also offers us to reflect on forms and numbers. We will none the less return to man and to inner man.

Forms in nature have a role which is at the same time one of deprivation and of preservation, indeed one of a stimulant. The world produces forms of manifestation, of glory and of virtues, forms of restoration, forms of punishment and of deprivation, and forms of prestiges, of illusion and of lies. The corporeal, temporal and visible state in which man is will not conceal from us that there exist eternal forms and that all forms manifest workings of the spirit; that thus it is there that all will end. For now, the object and the spirit of forms are to increase strength by their contraction and to make the power flow with more splendour, whereas the pure spirit and the supreme region are in their shelter. From forms to thoughts.

In God himself, it is love which gives form to science. It is love which produced science, and it is not science which produced love. That is why our thoughts alone cannot exist without an image, whereas our heart or our love do not need them and do not form any; because their food is unity itself, and divine unity has no image. No man has ever seen God, but man and the spirits, in contrast to God, can be represented by forms and can only be represented in this way.

The sensitive does not only come from the senses of form and the physical is not confused with the material. But nothing is really important but what absolutely is: The One who is informal by essence. With the need for forms, superior forms.

church of the
is no longer silent logos speak in agreement than on its

Those men who still desire natural forms to ensure their faith are therefore not on the true path. If they began by establishing in them the simple faith which they could have, in the nature of their being and in its relation with the source, they would soon obtain pure forms, if they needed them, or an inner dwelling so intense that it would keep them above the need and the region of forms.

The number is not a sign; it expresses the property of each being, the numbers manifest the properties of beings. Not the style, but the inner natural language, an abridged translation, or concise language of the truths and laws, the text and the ideas of which are in God, man and nature. The number is the limit and the expression of the properties of beings; their wisdom, thanks to which they do not become mad. Universal is the symbolic book with ten pages where each number expresses a law, either divine or spiritual, good or bad, or elemental. And from the number ten, outcome of the number four, all numbers come, all symbolic and more than symbolic, all sophianic. Because the numbers represent inseparably some basic ideas, man will not detach them from their basis of activity. Instead of falling into the way of proud speculation, our arithmology will also be active because it will be the wisdom of numbers, or arithmosophy.

Of science itself, Saint-Martin announced the impending revolution and he counted discovery, right at the end of the XVIII century, in organized bodies, as an "elective attraction". The expression must lead us a long way: this term from ancient chemistry indeed meant the force which causes a simple body to determine the decomposition of a binary compound. Thus two universal laws unite. First, chemical affinity: nature, the spirit and the Repairer are the different fixed alkalis which are given to us for our reunion with God, for our first crime made us into a heterogeneous substance for the supreme principle; secondly, the universal law of attraction which is in operation everywhere through affinity and analogy: all beings of whatever kind tend towards their centre or to the source which creates them, and it is therefore only after the separation of these principles from their envelope that they can unite themselves with the principle which is equal or even superior to them, because, as long as the slightest vestiges of this mass remain, they always tend towards their particular centre, as if to ask it for life and thus retard its union called reintegration.

A return to man, a return to me, a return to God in relation to man, in relation to me. It was done by a detour of nature and of its proper use. But its use is optional. We include, in effect, by privilege, all the antecedent properties which are to be found between the supreme point of the universal line of things and us; we include them and it is our privilege over all sensitive things and nature itself. It is the key of nature which is given to us with life and that is how we have the power to include all the degrees of the series and everything sensitive which manifests itself in its various degrees, whereas sensitive things and matter itself only include part of this great scale.

+ MARTINIST ORDER + THE WEST INDIES

to envisage its various only include

Nature? Those who lean on it to attack truth, but also to defend it, are unwise and cause mistakes to be made if they have not analyzed man beforehand. This analysis is in any case unavoidable.

THE TREASURES OF ASIA

Scientific revolution and revelation of Asia: on the second of modern axes of spiritual thought, too traditional by definition to remain itself in succumbing to modernism, Saint-Martin also advanced a little, without more imprudence than on the first.

Martines de Pasqually seems to demand a journey to China, and China occupies an important place in the appeal of Saint-Martin to the sacred and non-biblical writings. It is true that sinology had been started, in the preceding century, by the Jesuits who were there. Enlightenment of a Madman, Pythagoras' theorem Chinese style, Tcheou-pey... Saint-Martin finds in the Empire of the milieu, in its handed down traditions, magnificent knowledge. One thinks of the Soufi allegory: Egypt is the domain of evil, China that of the spiritual. But the Egypt of the illuminist XVIII Century is of perfect ambivalence.

For memory, Saint-Martin ignored neither the Turks nor the Arabs, including the Egyptians. Nor the Hebrews, who are his fathers, this goes without saying. And he quotes the Zend-Avesta attributed to Zoroastre and translated by Anquetil-Duperron.

It is to Anquetil-Duperron and to the society of Calcutta, as well as to several English authors, that Saint-Martin, like everybody, owes having glimpsed the treasures of the re-emerging Asia, understand those of India. The metempsychosis amongst the Bramans and their astrology, according to Bailly, the Bhagavat-Gita of Wilkins went before. But see how, shortly before leaving his body, the Unknown Philosopher marvelled at the Mahabharata and the Upanishads, as well as at the Vedas that he had already glimpsed.

The relations between oriental opinions, particularly Indian ones, and those of the West on the most important points strike him and he wishes his reader to be moved by them. Comparison will show the correspondence of the languages through the alphabets, the inscriptions and the monuments; the bases of the legendary theogony of the Egyptians, the Greeks and the Romans will suddenly appear. Above all, in this way, the writings of the Unknown Philosopher will appear less obscure and less repugnant; in this way the universal tradition of which European theosophers, to which he had certain similarities, expounded the dogmas and rites is confirmed by other branches.

Apart from the very general concepts of divinity, of salvation, of religion, on what points did Saint-Martin find the most profound truth amongst the Indians? These points, it seems to me: the analogical equivalence of above and below; transmigration, of which the Martinist interpretation reinvents purgatory; the creative magic of nature which binds all individual beings; the all-powerfulness of the sacrifice under more and more spiritualized species; finally, that successive approach which Mircea Eliade speaks of, to the final revelation of divine identity which Saint-Martin corrects to reintegration, but which consists, with him as in India, in passing from non-being into being (in a certain way), from darkness to light, from death to immortality.

The East is the place where allegorical language has been in greatest use. It is there that the spirit of man has conceived the greatest and most numerous symbols. The reason Saint-Martin gives for that is that this place is also that of the greatest and most numerous spiritual realities, either in natural facts or in spiritual facts. Prophetic poetry was born there, the only really powerful one capable of satisfying all the legitimate needs of the spirit. (Europe has only known epic poetry.) What is surprising about that, for it is the patrimony of prophets and visionaries?

It is in Asia that all the great religions were born, all the famous religions which have had a great influence in the world. Does the latter observation mean that Christianity is not a religion in the common sense, or that it is the perfect religion amongst the other religions which were born in Asia? In any case, Christianity is not a religion like the others, it is not to be put on an equal footing with the others in spite of the points of contact.

The study of the theosophical wealth of Asia will bring useful light and, due to a lack of time, Saint-Martin did not gain all the benefits he promised himself from it and that he promised his readers. But the study of the Indian Scriptures cannot, any more than other books, take man beyond speculative spiritualism.

The Holy Bible itself, notwithstanding its superiority, confirms rather than initiates (is it not a first deficiency of Saint-Martin's Christianity?): there is only the radical development of our personal essence which can lead us to active spiritualism. It is the basis of all the works of the theosopher, the basis of the inner life to which he invites us.

The task of Saint-Martin in this world having been to lead the spirit of man by a natural path to the supernatural things which rightfully belong to him, but of which he has totally lost the idea either by his degradation or by the false instruction of his teachers, let us first of all see the theory, according to Saint-Martin, in his works.

THE ORIGIN AND THE DESTINY OF MAN

The first depositions of man relate to his divine origin, his original existence and the degradation freely committed. Man is a thought of God: it is the beginning and the end. Thought and desire. Desire, too, because man is not a God-thought, and that is why the desire of God will go with the desire of man.

THE EMANATION

To grasp the destination, go back to the origin. We come from God and we are going to God. Let us qualify this. Man emanated from the supreme principle. The type of emanation is a mystery for ever. Any material analogy would lead astray. But the divine origin of man gives to his eminent activities a character analogous to the activity of God himself.

God does not undergo any loss, even though he never stops emanating beings, which are signs and expressions of himself. Nothing equals the gentleness nor the magnificence of this eternal generation in which all beings succeed one another in peace and in an imperceptible way.

Amongst these beings, these virtues, these agents, which Saint-Martin borrowed from Martines, with the concept, the taxonomy, the pneumatonymy, amongst these spirits: man. Man, the last emanated, hence his name: "minor"; minor, but superior to all other spirits with respect to his mission and to his power. Of the evil spirits which had attempted to equal God, man has the mission and power to be the jailer and the reeducator, imprisoned as they are in the world of matter created for them, not emanated, by the spirits which remained faithful. Man had power over these, too, since his emanation, which however, compared to the principle, did not give equality, but implied subordination.

Adam, emancipated as a vicar, sinned in his turn similarly to the guilty spirits. What was his sin? Only observe what air the human specie breathes. Is not the contemplation of himself the universal motive of humans? So that was the first origin of the first distraction. We live like fish in the element which formed us. Because of this, the otner human souls are sullied, but not guilty.

To emanation is attached reminiscence, in a sense near to that of Plato: we do not learn, we remember. But our earthly body obscures the memory of our previous life; in our future extra-terrestrial life we will remember this one. Human souls emanated from God exist before the generation of the body of matter into which they are to be cast.

A single sigh from the human soul, our 'spleen', our 'Heimweh', is enough to prove our horrifying transmigration.

divine origin committed

REINTEGRATION

Emanation had deified our dignity; reintegration will deify our immortality, which our possession of the word, the seed of life, sufficiently guaranteed. But deification, with Saint-Martin, then entirely orthodox, excludes pantheism: it denotes Christ and implies deification. The just will be 'one' with God, they will never be what God is, even if one goes as far as to stammer out that they will be God.

In earthly life, the only earthly life which is given to each person, we have to buy our entrance ticket to the upper regions. It is best not to wait for the last minute and, in any case, the time lost here will be recovered there.

The fall corresponds to an incorporization, an ascent, therefore, to a dematerialization. If man followed the law of his true nature, death, that is the separation of the soul and the body, would take place as if by itself. Saint-Martin evokes the image of the fruit which naturally leaves its husk.

Death should only be seen as a coaching house on our journey. The wise man is convinced that this world is only an expression of the invisible world: how will he not rejoice, in spite of the frights of his sensitivity, at the time he finds the text again?

To be with God, you have to be pure. Rare are those who acquire purity in this world; they will undergo in other circles the rest of their purification. Thus they will await this reintegration, consoled in their afflictions and assured of their final reintegration. For the first man, strictly speaking, Adam, nor any of his posterity will be integrated into the divine circle from which the Eternal emanated them in the supracelestial, then emancipated them in the celestial, before they were cast into the terrestrial, no man, then, will be reintegrated before the great fight in which the demons will be conquered. The waiting place, which serves as a ladder to the supracelestial circles, is the celestial circle of Saturn, philosophically called the rational circle according to Martines.

In hell and in purgatory, several dwellings, but everyone will be punished there for their sins. There are also several eternal or celestial dwellings: everywhere, after the action comes the reaction, balance and compensation.

The just will cooperate in tormenting the perverse being and one of the tasks of man is to help in the purification of the dead, to be baptized for them.

The main thing is to remember that there is only one life outside of and beyond death, and that the number of times which man must undergo to accomplish his work is proportional to the number of degrees below which he has fallen.

METEMPSYCHOSIS

Metempsychosis, or reincarnation in its modern name. Saint-Martin, no more than Martines or Jacob Boehme, does not defend the system. But he interprets it. It is, he says, a mask of purgatory. For each man, a single earthly life, a single death; between death and reintegration, which reconciliation precedes (because reintegration can only be general), hell or purgatory, the happy wait, next, where very few enter straight away. Metempsychosis depicts the extra-terrestrial stages.

The return of the great chosen ones could have passed for a sort of metempsychosis. Incorrectly, even though this return is a fact of holy history.

Finally, a single case of real metempsychosis or reincarnation: it occurs in the case of diabolical souls and animals' bodies.

Saint-Martin therefore showed which truth the error of metempsychosis disguises and to express this truth the word "transmigration" seems the least inadequate, in any case the least disconcerting.

APOCATASTASIS

Apocatastasis, in the vocabulary of the patristic and the theology-theosophy of the Christian East, is the final restoration; in short, a truly universal reintegration. Is that reintegration according to Saint-Martin?

Saint-Martin announces the final day which must finish the circle of things. After the great fight and the shattering dissolution, a state will be instituted which the new heaven and the new earth suggest. Everything there will be homogenous and synaesthesia will reign there. A single voice will be heard for ever which will repeat in multiples of seven times, that is to infinity: "The Eternal".

Two decisive questions: the resurrection of bodies and the repentance of demons.

I admit my perplexity on the resurrection of the flesh where Saint-Martin is concerned. "No hope for the flesh" writes Saint-Martin. How should it be understood? Can one save the subject?

According to Martines, one of the superb reasons for which man has been created is to bring back the perverse being. Apocastasis, with the return of Satan, Saint-Martin seems to tremble before this mystery, but also to hope for it, to expect it. Apocastasis does not seem to him to be proven, it seems to him to be worthy of the divine plan.

name Saint not

Let us not claim to probe the mystery of the movement engendered by the divine pair of love and of anger. Let us also fear that in infringing this metaphysical prohibition, we do not also demoralize ourselves in an abusive tranquility. For these sufferings to have some purifying effects from here below, they have to appear eternal. Let them appear, writes Saint-Martin...

Moreover, Saint-Martin with Jacob Boehme, as he emphasized it, ended up by understanding that he would never know and that it is not right for him to ever know on this earth. He no longer seeks and he works. Can we do better?

THE SECRET PATH

FULL ACTION

Just like the supreme book, man is the supreme reader. But man has two doors, the heart and the spirit. Now the first door is a great deal more preferable than the other, but is must not be exclusive, mainly when one has to speak to people who hardly only have the door of the spirit open.

Therefore, man is the active sign of the total axiom, that man is a thought of God, and we have to hear this universal witness of the universal truth. We have listened, let us go on to the act.

Man is destined to enjoy the light of the eternal principle and to be at the same time his first agent and the king of the universe. It is at the point of the dual secret: the heart of man is the only passage by which the poisoned snake can raise its head and the only passage by which the faithful soul which unites with each minor, imprisoned with them and his minister of Christian action, may reach the light.

Active spiritualism consists of the inner life; fullness of action is there, can only be there and must be there. And works will be the currency of our enlightenment. For example, it is at the same time a duty and a pleasure to pray for our friends, because we can only do it as much as we are brought to do it by some rays of immortal and inexhaustible charity.

Let us summarize in advance: all beings depend on their own root and on the fermentation of their own root all beings must await their development: Saint-Martin mentions Baltasar Gracian in his 'Homme universel'. He adds: if this root does not perform in us this vegetative act of light, it carries out its own destruction devouring itself. Thus we keep our life or our death. Saint-Martin remembers that it is written: "He who would like to arrange his life will lose it".

There is only one thing necessary, and no truth is more useful to tell humans than this one: Renew yourselves from head to foot. Would one not believe from an echo of the injunction to Sedir that he is rising up?

Malebranche wanted us to see everything in God. Saint-Martin, whom some confuse at first glance with Malebranche, on the other hand, considers that we really see God in everything, and that in fact we would not see anything in whatever thing it may be if the principle of all the qualities, that is if God were not operating actively in them, either through himself or through his powers. Let us apply this on the level of the inner life: one must make use of the Word, because the Word only seeks to unite itself with us and to fill us with itself. For full action, for active spiritualism or divinism. For a complete renewal.

The copy tends to be like the image which resembles the model. It is true in ceremonial theurgy; it is true in the case of central and divine initiation, which Saint-Martin favours.

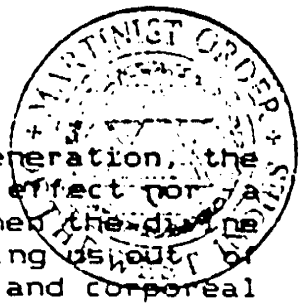
Of course, theurgy is not sorcery, nor magic which would be vulgar in its supposed mechanism. Martines de Pasqually, the first, warned that the precision of the ceremony is not enough, that there must also be an exactness and a godliness of life in the person who leads circles of intellectual adoption and that he must have a spiritual preparation made through prayer, retreat and mortification. A ceremony to be able to invoke the Eternal is accompanied by a rule of life. But the danger of external initiations, without prejudice to their efforts towards a spiritualization, is to give ourselves over to the violent spirits of the world and to capacitate, in fact and to our loss, borrowed forms.

Thus Saint-Martin recommends the secret way, the personal process, the inner life: the one who is removed from the centre has no other resource than to find the centre; the only universal virtue is central. The interior or the centre is the principle of everything. Full action, we said with Saint-Martin: life is still the centre and the heart of God; it prospers by the opening and the development of our being, of our heart and of our reunited centre.

THE WILL

The way is to unite our will with the will of God, our will with God. How? Through the firm and constant resolution of those who desire the work, through persevering use of a pure will, less through works and practice of all the virtues, augmented by prayers, so that divine grace may come to help our weakness and bring us to the end of our regeneration. A will for everything, a will against everything: in the exercise of our will, we perfect it and reinforce it, we specialize it and the veil will disappear.

truth is more yourselves from head injunction to



Let us be careful of the originality of regeneration, the idea and the event: it is not a simple mystical effect nor a simple metaphysical operation which occurs in us when the divine Word regenerates us and calls us by our name to bring us out of our grave. It is a living work, and our spiritual and corporeal being physically experiences the sensation, since this word is life and activity.

But also beware of perceptible manifestations: they are possible and even permitted, they are not desirable. All their virtue comes from the centre, even though it may be indirectly, because the centre does not produce of itself any physical form, but the Word in us activates secondary, tertiary etc. powers. The crown that Saint-Martin saw and the voice which he heard procure a beautiful subject for a lesson on this theme; but the theme is only important because of the inherent dangers and because in dealing with it, one provokes subjects which are fundamental in a different way, the theme at the centre. The rest pertains to the astral, and the difference is not blatant.

The centre, on the other hand, produces inner movements which are delightful, sweet intelligences, joys and consolations.

THE REBIRTH

Here is the table of the steps by which, according to Saint-Martin, the new man can climb to the throne of glory: his corporeal being is maintained in activity and in harmony by the elements, the elements are activated by their powers, their powers are directed by the spirits of the regions, the spirits of the regions are stimulated to their work by the sensitive and desiring soul of the new man, his sensitive and desiring soul is activated by the holy spirit. There, the divine soul of the new man receives an exuberant impetus which is the stimulus of fire and of truth; from there it reaches the respect and the love of the son, from where it rises to the godly fear of the father who keeps it whole in wisdom, zeal and vigilant action, until it is reintegrated in undivided unity, where it will only know love which is the basic and universal character of what is divine.

The working of the Word, the imitation of Christ, regeneration now depends on it; but what rebirth would be possible if the Repairer had not completed the supreme work of conquering death? Everything in Saint-Martin revolves around Christ. Christ is at the centre of everything; consequently, in the centre of the doctrine of Saint-Martin, concerned by the only centre, the only inner one; Saint John, Saint Paul, the Apocalypse are, coincidentally or through influence, the sources of Saint-Martin's theosophy. By returning to them, we will better understand Martinism in spirit and in truth, without omitting to discriminate the commonplace, however sublime, uncertain or incomplete it may be and help in form or in content.

regeneration, the effect nor a when the divine us out of corporeal

Rebirth is possible as of now, and it is the vegetation of the body and of the spirit which Paul speaks of to the Corinthians. Saint-Martin, taking together martinesism and Christian mysticism - nothing there which is against nature, in the very pertinent terms of Boehme, distinguishes the material vegetable earth from the fields of our earth; the vegetable spirituous earth, which is the pure element; the spiritual vegetable earth, which is Sophia, or divine Wisdom; finally the divine vegetable earth: the Holy Spirit and the Holy Ternary.

Gardener's helps, which we will call virtues, sometimes busy themselves. But one single gardener, one great single gardener, says Saint-Martin, is Jesus-Christ, the only light.

Let us sum up: Man has no other right choice than to unite with his principle; to come closer to it in the name of "initiation". Now, the only initiation Saint-Martin preaches and which he sought with all the ardour of his soul, is that by which we can enter into the heart of God and let the heart of God enter into us to make an indissoluble union which makes us into the friend, the brother and the spouse of our divine Repairer. There is no other mystery to reach our divine Repairer. There is no other mystery to attain this holy initiation than to plunge deeper and deeper into the depths of our being and not to let go until we have succeeded in feeling its living and vivifying root, because then all the fruits which we were to bear, according to our specie, are produced naturally in us and outside of us as we see that it happens to our earthly trees, because they belong to their individual root and they do not cease soaking up its sap. Man is the tree, God is the sap.

THE REPAIRER

GOD-MAN

"He explained an even more important truth, in that it is the complement of all truths. He made it understood that all partial favours granted by the Divinity to guilty men and to men in the grip of death would have been useless to them if he had not sent the great Repairer to remove them from the precipice to which their crime had thrown them; that there not being anything between God and man, the individual who came to redeem by the sacrifice of his love had to have in him the nature and the perfect image of this Divinity, without which he would not have offered us the true model on which we were formed originally and we would not have been able to restore our likeness to him. That is the divine sun, the rays of which penetrate all the pages of the holy Books and prophesies; that is the individual who possesses the key of David, that key which opens and nobody vegetation of

of to the martinesism, and nature in the material vegetable

closes, which closes and nobody opens; it is he at whose name every knee must bend in heaven, on earth and in hell; finally it is he who has given us the precept and the example of all the virtues that we must love and practice by uniting with him if we wish to regenerate ourselves. Works have represented this powerful individual, the only Saviour, the only Repairer, the only Sanctifier, under the name of this active and intelligent Cause which, through its creative, temporal power, produces and governs all of nature and through its divine and sacred power transmits life into gentle, peaceful souls who seek it with confidence and humility."

Saint-Martin refers to his own works in this magnificent hymn to Christ which flows from them.

Martines de Pasqually. He is more Jewish than Christian, this Judeo-Christian (whereas it is the reverse with Saint-Martin), and for him, Christ appeared in different epochs, under different names and in different forms. Typically Judeo-Christian in the historical sense, is his use of the vocabulary of angeology in order to refer to Christ and the Holy Spirit; Saint-Martin turns to this too, just as, in the book 'Des Erreurs et de la Verite", he gives as a pivot of his spiritualism which is speculative and active at the same time, Christ under the name of active and intelligent Cause. Again, Saint-Martin practiced, without joy, the theurgy of Martines de Pasqually, before giving himself over totally to the truly secret path which is inner. But his faith in Christ, from infancy to death, that faith that a gnosis was to crown, did not change. The main thing is in the profession of faith and of preceding gnosis. Let us explain in detail.

Jesus-Christ is regarded as a prophet, a knowing man, a superior being, a divinity. All those who maintain this are correct, but none totally: Jesus-Christ is all of this and more. He is the universal Agent responsible for the great work of the regeneration of all the powers, who passes on his powers in the very centre of all temporal things. He appeared in the middle of time in a quaternary epoch. He is the universal head of all spiritual initiators of the pure and sacred cult. The previous chosen ones had instituted a cult of justice and stringency; Jesus-Christ instituted a cult of glory, light and mercy.

The Agent necessary to restore humanity had to be greater than man; having more than the virtues of man, he can thus have nothing less than the virtues of God, because there is nothing between God and man. There is nothing, except, at present, a false way of being, and it is in order to remove it and to restore the original unity, for the restoration of man, that Jesus-Christ approached, is approaching us.

A certain demand for formal secret and a certain skill combined with a certain taste for discretion had dictated to Saint-Martin the use of the expression "active and intelligent

at hell with him if we represented

Cause". But with the thread of his work, Christ, whom he however rarely names Jesus-Christ, bears many synonyms which are so many titles: Repairer (the word comes from Martines), Repairer God-man, Universal Repairer, Divine Repairer, Universal Regenerator, Liberator, Universal Agent, Universal Key, Saviour, Mediator, Grand Master and our Divine Master. Etc.

He who had come from above and who was the way, the truth and the life, is indeed the sovereign Repairer of the ills and misfortunes which have been afflicting this unhappy posterity of man since his first degradation; it is he who is the only support, the only strength and the only hope of man, this real and physical being "who has two names", as he is at the same time active and intelligent and as his action extends over the four numbers. 8 is his number, 4 is that of man. The science of numbers is not a fossil science.

Man, in his original state, had, for his fights, a spear made of four metals which burned like fire itself. This spear is none other than the great name of God made up of four Hebrew letters. It is the extract of this name which constitutes the essence of man; that is why we are formed in the image and likeness of God, and this quaternary that we bear and which distinguishes us so clearly from all the other beings of nature is the instrument and the mark of that famous cross in which Boehme depicted the eternal divine generation and the natural generation of everything which receives life, be it in this world or in the other.

To go from 4 to 9 is to fall from spirit to matter; or, in the vocabulary of Jacob Boehme, from the second principle, which is love and life, into the first, which is anguish and darkness. A terrible law, which man has undergone, But a fearsome, dreadful law is that of 56; Saint-Martin had received light on it in Lyon around 1774 and, twenty years later, he was to combine it, as usual, with a point of boehmism. 56 prescribes their state to the perverse being - Satan, undoubtedly - and to the damned, whereas the purified and the just will reach 64, which is unity. However, those who expose themselves to the law of 56 can only reach 64 after having undergone it, too, in all its severity. Now, it stems from the knowledge of the projections and progressions of 8; otherwise the holy eight which has performed everything, which is for ever the universal Sanctifier and thanks to whom, his sublimity not having feared passing through the nine, supreme Unity will return to the world again. A diagram in the 'Tableau naturel des rapports qui existent entre Dieu, l'homme et l'univers' demonstrates, in a similar way, the enclosing of the human 4 and how the one is written with it with the fortunate result that we know, the work of the human-divine eight:

This recourse to Coen symbolism which uses the numbers in the most traditional way in the world (hence the legitimacy of the parallels with Boehme that Saint-Martin draws), could never whom he are so many Repairer God

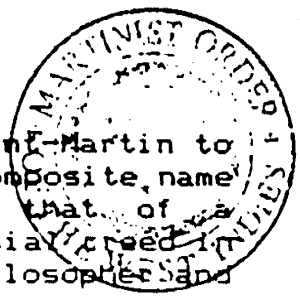
Regeneration
Mediator



conceal the conformity of the 'christology' of Saint-Martin to orthodox dogma. The rare allusion just now to the composite name of Jesus-Christ has suggested this faith, albeit that of a gnostic, but of a gnostic in the true sense; the initial creed in 1784 summed up the first two books of the unknown Philosopher and was a sign of the framework of all the others.

Saint-Martin believes in the Incarnation and he reflects on it. We were not flesh in the beginning because the Word became flesh to deliver us from flesh and blood. We are now spirit and flesh, because the Word was made flesh to become like us. A trace of dualism embarrasses Saint-Martin before the communication of the idioms (that is the rule of language according to which one can attribute to the person of Jesus-Christ that which belongs either to the nature of God or to human nature). Worse, while accepting that Christ has suffered all the tests, except sin, as says the epistle to the Hebrews, he refuses to accept that he was tempted in his senses and in his matter, because his body, he says, was formed of pure elements. But arianism is condemned and all forms of subordinationism.

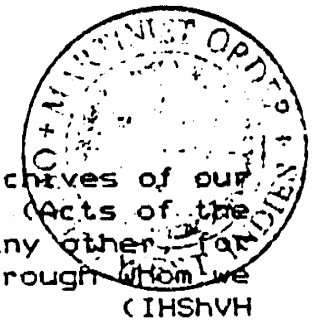
Rousseau had the courage, which Saint-Martin acclaims, to defend the divinity of Jesus-Christ. This divinity must be taught, this deity, to be exact, without too much seeking the composition of the God-man, unlike Jean-Baptiste Willermoz. (When the emulator of Saint-Martin deals with the two natures of Jesus-Christ, in the at first strict and then quite free mobility of Martinez, he makes use of a truly esoteric doctrine of the tripartite man, and he is right). Man-God and divine, the Holy one brought us the Trinity and Swedenborg is mistaken in believing that it is us who gave it to him.

Jesus-Christ was announced by the prophets, who were the agents of God, but Jesus-Christ himself only acts through his apostles. Similarly, all agents other than Christ showed and can still show isolated, temporal, passing virtues; he alone laid the necessary basis of an all active and all intelligent cause.

MAN-GOD

Martines de Pasqually only partially knew the truth of the Great Name of God. He knew the tetragramme and that it marks man. If the Great name consisted - the past tense is imperative, we will see why - of four letters: (IHVH), it is because it was spiritual divine and influenced the metaphysically and morally sensitive but not the materially sensitive which has its own agents. When the time of intelligence arrived, then a powerful letter came down and was incorporated into the Great name to complete its price and value. This letter bears 21 in the Hebrew alphabet, it is triple in its form: (shin = sh). It came to join the superior intelligence to the sensitive law which the Hebrews had enjoyed; it spiritualized everything, because, 21 or 3, it fully manifested the septenary double power by uniting doubly to the quaternary. It is again unity which reunites man who was cut off from it.

that of a initial creed IN philosopher and



The holy Scriptures, which are the faithful archives of our titles and of our destinies, tell us of the Repairer (Acts of the Apostles IV, 12): "There is no salvation through any other, for no other name under heaven has been given to man through whom we must be saved." The Great Name is henceforth (IHShVH =Iehoshuah): Jesus, the Christ, in the spelling of the new alliance.

The prophets sowed; before them, the patriarchs opened up the meaning of life; the Saviour, afterwards and last of all, gave the meaning of life, through his teaching and through his sacrifice. His victories gave life to men, living and dead, because he is the only author of life; because inexhaustible is the universal love and universal the power of him who conquered life for us.

Let us therefore raise ourselves to this universal unity which dominates and vivifies all beings: the depositary Agent of this unity, having within him life and light, can produce in you the strength and peace which are his own, for the most beautiful of his virtues is the desire to share them with us.

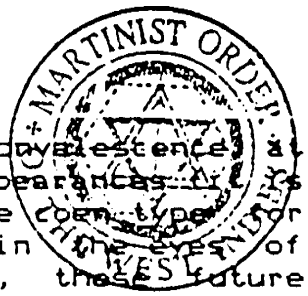
The Liberator is God: he can therefore give me back my life; being the root of my being, by uniting me with him, he returns me to my root. By spreading his virtues here below, the divine Repairer has communicated to us the reflections of the gifts and the knowledge of the supreme Agent.

Let us follow his steps and when we arrive in the regions of light, one will say of us: There is the image and likeness of our God, there is the sign and the witness of the eternal principle of beings, there is the living manifestation of the universal axiom. 'Ecce homo', the thought of God.

If we had the fortune of uniting ourselves with the spirit of Jesus-Christ, we would have all the activities and effectivenesses which we could desire, for it is in him that are all the numbers. Martines do Pasqually set down, according to the abbot Pierre Fournie, that each man can equal Christ. Saint-Martin went further: man can go further than Christ. The gospel according to John had already recorded from the very mouth of the Repairer: "He who believes in me will also do the works that I do; and he will even do greater things because I am going to the Father." Saint-Martin clarifies: to go further, to do even greater works, 'of the kind which is specific to each one', and he holds that his own was that of intelligence.

To 'remove oneself from the earth' is to say too little, one must 'become more Christian', and then the whole of life appears, while we effectively incorporate ourselves in the mystical body and while, like the works which are the outcome of our knowledge, the participation in the new Adam puts charity into circulation.

other, for whom we



The Repairer brought man to the state of convalescence at the time of his first appearance. His future appearances (it is not a question of particular appearances, of the coen type for example, although several of these presented, in the eyes of Saint-Martin, all the signs of the Repairer), these future apparitions will bring perfect health and the complement of the paths of love.

Two domains of action benefitted from the Repairer: the surface of the earth where he was sacrificed; the higher regions to which he rose and where, from within a pure form, he confirmed the choosing of the apostles and sent the Holy-Spirit. Thus it is all the universal history of man, as humankind and as a human person, that the Repairer presents. By the very real dual effect of an anticipation and of a virtual reality, let us admire: the Lord spoke, his voice triumphs and prevails over the powers of crime; all the points of the universe are transformed into living languages. We now relate this supreme moment to its Agent.

At the end of time, Christ will manifest himself under simple unity and it is then that he will appear in his glory, and that the ungodly can no longer stand the sight of him as they stood it when he only appeared in their eyes as temporal numbers and frames.

Christ in the work of regeneration, confides Saint-Martin, is certainly very dear and very precious to me; what will then become of Christ triumphant and reintegrated in his glory? It is this latter Christ, towards whom all the faculties of his being were continually directed; and he always felt that there was only the former which could fill it, whereas only the hard-working Christ should occupy us during our passage.

The new man is the vocation of man. He is only the image of the Repairer and through the Repairer alone we can be instructed on the progress of beings and on their various progressive laws to return towards the light. From the Annunciation to the Resurrection, Saint-Martin analyses the stages of the 'New Man'. Let us remember one.

When Jesus said, before the tomb: "Lazarus, rise up", it is to you, human soul that he was addressing the words even more than to this body which was only the symbol of the true rebirth, and it is again there that we will find a new line of this general picture of which we are the subject and which includes all things. "Lazarus, rise up" was only said to you so that you would repeat in your turn freely to all your sleeping faculties "Lazarus, rise up" and so that this word would circulate continually in all the parts of your being. And the new man, through the ministry of the spirit-man, will become a repairer in his turn.

convalescence at appearances — is coen type for the eyes of

DIVINE WISDOM

SOPHIA

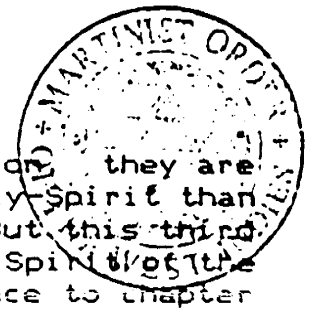
It would be just as pernicious to be wrong about Sophia or Sophie, as it is unfortunate to forget it: it is the duty of the theosopher, through his tenure, to know it exactly. Is it not defined as a friend of God and of wisdom, that is of God and of his Wisdom?

For Christians as for Jews, Sophie goes back to Hokhma of the Old Testament and of the Hebrew schools of wisdom. A symbol of gnosis, its almost fascinating esoterism will only be exploited by the theosophers that one will accuse of abuse or of improper solicitation of a legacy. (But heresy threatens it, there, all the more).

In the history of oriental theology-theosophy, Wisdom was first of all identified with Christ, then it was compared with the Mother of God, finally it appears in the icons as the angel of fire of the creation. In all three cases, it expresses the outpouring of divine energy and the transparency of the Earth to this energy. Some people, and some western theosophers, have pursued the individualization, indeed the personalization of Wisdom. In all hypotheses, Sophie could never be a divine hypostasis. Nor is she the Virgin Mary, warns Saint-Martin. The Virgin has had her share of Sophie and let us be content when she comes to kneel down beside us in prayer. The Virgin Mary is a receptacle: her heart is the soul of man, her spirit is that of man. She did not give birth to the Word but to Christ, she is therefore incapable of giving birth to the Word in us. (Of course, neither the Virgin Mary nor Divine Wisdom are the spirit of the earth, no matter what some may say; but signs, numbers and forms in nature fall within its province to different degrees.

With Saint-Martin, let us advance in the knowledge of Sophia. When too many ills afflict us, let us ask Christ for the wisdom to dissipate it. But we can also ask Wisdom to put its thought, its will and its action in the place of ours, word for word, in order to renew our being.

Divine Wisdom uses virtues to make the Word heard within us. But (contrary to Pordage) Sophie is not the precursor of the Word: they come together in the soul. It is in divine Wisdom, indeed, that the Word has enveloped itself to be incorporated in the pure element, and from there to come down into the region of mixed, perishable elements, or into the breast of Mary, then to be able, through this death that we direct onto ourselves, to remove with it the purified and regenerated human soul in its divine life. Sophie is the preserver of forms of spirits, as the air is the preserver of all material forms.



Wisdom and God are inseparable in their union, they are distinct in their nature. Sophie is no more the Holy-Spirit than she is the Repairer himself or the Holy Trinity. But this third thing, the Spirit of God, the Spirit of Christ, the Spirit of the Repairer, says Saint-Martin in an explicit reference to chapter VIII of the epistle to the Romans, is God as the Repairer is God, in the unity of the Father.

Christ saved us "not because of the works of justice we may have done, but according to his mercy, through the baptism of regeneration and the renewal of the Holy-Spirit". The thinking of Saint-Martin agrees, without him quoting them, with these words of Paul to Titus (III, 5).

The great work, according to Saint-Martin, is to renew ourselves (Martines also partially succeeded in this, too). 'Consummatum est' cried Christ dying on the cross; there is no other task for man than to enter into this consummation and to remove from him everything which could prevent him from taking all the advantages of it. Similarly, at an incomparably lower level, Christ, in his works of the mount of Olives, which already have something of the nature of the Passion, offered to his father a little earth which he held in his hands to obtain the purification of forms.

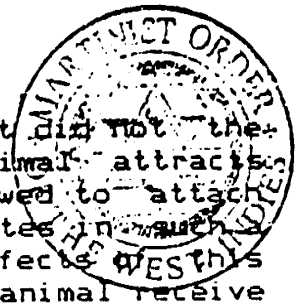
Wisdom is the price of sacrifices and not sacrifices the price of Wisdom. And it is these sacrifices which lead us to feel the necessity of a general and particular Repairer, of that lamb without either inner or outer defect, whose favours raise us so strongly above our nature that we can no longer find any language to express them nor ears which can hear us.

It is not at all surprising that, in accordance with all the previous revelations, this one has come to us through a man, since it had man as its subject; but what eminently distinguishes it from all the others is that it was preached, proven and accomplished entirely in a man-God and in a God-man, whereas, amongst the others there is not one which has this universal nature.

THE MYSTERY OF THE SACRIFICE

This God-man and this man-God is a Repairer, the Repairer, and he overwhelms us with the mystery of the sacrifice. Christ is the great Sacrificer, through whom the sacred fire is always lit and who has established his abode on the altar of sacrifices, to be always ready to receive the gifts and to bless them.

The universality of sacrifices stems from their source. Alas, they have been changed.



The Indians place some spirits in blood, but did not the Hebrews do the same? Very generally, the pure animal attracts the disordered action that man would have allowed to attach itself to him. But, so that this attraction operates in such a way as not to prolong the consequences and the effects of this disordered action, the blood must be shed and the animal receive a preserving action.

From the natural to the supernatural, from the material to the spiritual; from the universal religion to the perfect religion, where the sacrifice remains central. The usefulness of blood applied to the exterior as pulling out all of the corruption has been recognized. On the other hand, taken from inside, it increases this corruption even more. That explains to us why, since the great sickness of humankind, bloodshed was necessary, how much that of the blood of the Repairer was useful and at the same time why his words were spirit and life when he said to eat of his flesh and drink his blood, this sacrifice, like all sacrifices, bringing about the appropriate transpositions.

By means of these transpositions, it being a question of the Repairer, the shedding of blood progressively gives man his freedom, whereas blood, since the crime, was a barrier and prison to him.

The sacrifice of the Repairer, who was almighty, has made all others superfluous. The victim himself sacrificed himself without it being suicide and the blind sacrificers believing they were sacrificing a guilty person, gave to the world without knowing it the universal electra, says Saint-Martin and this term from ancient chemistry refers to a very precious alloy of gold and of silver, which was to bring about its rebirth. 'The man of desire' has shown that the blood of this victim was spirit and life and that the Jews thus, by asking that it fall back down onto them and their children, could not separate the mercy that was there united with justice; 'Man his True Nature and Ministry' will remind us of these consoling and profound truths, which the spirit of man could not too much render present.

Every law, however, for regeneration must initiate a higher and consecutive law. All the laws preparatory and relative to the blood, the passion of Christ himself therefore have as their aim to bring man to a free and voluntary sacrifice.

Man, by sacrificing himself perpetually, is always humble and trembling before God, because the secret of God is only revealed to those who fear him. Jesus-Christ is the model of all perfections. The Incarnation and the Sacrifice, followed by the Passover and Pentecost, are to be imitated, and they made the imitation possible and fruitful. In particular, the crucifixion of the Repairer was necessary to the human family, but without the individual crucifixion of every man, that of the Repairer does not bear fruit in him. The cross imposes tribulations and painful efforts, but no, no, the cross is not a suffering, it is the eternal root of the eternal light.

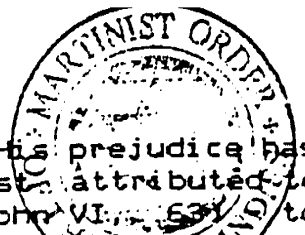
The cross of Ezekiel, this archaic cruciform 'Tav' prepared for the "receptacle +", that is the cross of Calvary. It gets the sympathetic seal of reconciliation granted to contrite hearts, moaning over the iniquities of Jerusalem. Saint-Martin, still attentive to signs, adds that the advantage of the sign of Christians is that one cannot draw it without marking the thing or the individual thus signed with the double power of our divine Repairer. Thus the cross is the regular symbolic representation of all perfection, 4 of God, 4 of man.

The cross, finally, on the mount of the Skull, was to rise up so high to show to all regions the deliverance of the captives and the triumph of the power which was to spread a universal splendour. The Repairer made no books, he who was the way, but he went high up on the cross in order to attract, and to attract everything to him.

The aim of bloody sacrifices is to develop different pure and regular actions which, uniting with man, can help him to get out of his abyss and to raise him up towards the region of order and regularity. (Prohibition or the anathema goes in the opposite direction, but tends towards the same objective.)

That is therefore the transition, to perfect or to restore. Blood is related to regular actions, regular actions are related to superior actions. Thus man or the chosen people could benefit from the sacrificial ceremonies relative to their deliverance and to their progressive advancement towards the end of their true freedom. Such is the principle of sacrifices, but the time has passed of the sacrifice of Abraham, when it was the responsibility of the patriarch to chase the birds - the birds, Saint-Martin emphasizes - which were trying to swoop down on the dead animals.

In the Communion which commemorates the death and the resurrection of the Repairer, it would indeed be essential for the operator to constantly repeat to the congregation these words of the originator: "Flesh and blood serve nothing, my words are spirit and life." For how many spirits has the letter of other words killed! In the operator, as in us, the idea and the word of flesh and of blood must be abolished, that is we must, like the Repairer, rise again to the region of the pure element which was our original body and which encloses within it the eternal Sophie, the two tinctures, the spirit and the word. It is only at this price that the things which happen in the kingdom of God can also happen in us, the religious ceremony becoming in us, in reality, a production, an emanation, a creation, a regeneration or a universal resurrection.



Saint-Martin is wrong about the Church. His prejudice has even led him to falsify the oracle which he just attributed to the originator - no "blood" in the original (John VI, 63) to support a purely spiritual concept of the sacrament of the Eucharist; in truth, the oracle condemns a carnal exegesis, that is unintelligent and therefore false, of the communion just previously prescribed, which would result in a totally material concept, for example, but which is also totally disembodied.

Let us love Saint-Martin, but let us love the truth even more.

THE CHURCH EXCLUDED

"The Church of Christ", wrote Martines de Pasqually about the Roman Catholic Church to which he professed to belong. This is not the place to try to penetrate the arcanes of Martinesist ecclesiology, and it is deliberate that we use this latter very incongruous term. Let us not put into doubt the sincerity of Martines, let us have no illusions about his capabilities as a Christian theologian. Let us just remember the respect of the institution and that of its title, God knows how he understood it and even if he was a very long time in understanding it.

The observation of Saint-Martin is less reassuring, it is also less superficial: It is the Church which ought to be the priest, but it is the priest who wanted to be the Church. And to conclude: That is the source of all ills.

The historic foundation is not deniable: the Western Christian Church has not ceased to divert, particularly since the Early Middle Ages, and organized itself around the feudal phenomenon which is papacy. It is a pity that Saint-Martin, at the same time as he reflects the priest of the Church of a certain era and of a certain region, eliminates at the same time the priesthood and the visible structure of the community of believers and knowers, with his sacramental ministry.

In a vision which was granted to him, Saint-Martin was celebrating the Mass at an altar; another person, an official priest no doubt, was celebrating at a neighbouring altar. The latter ended up going, followed by his congregation, to the altar of the Unknown Philosopher. The interpretation is obvious: if there is only one cult which is right and good, that is the one which is directed by the active and intelligent Cause - Saint-Martin maintains this from the time of his first book in 1775 - the cult of Jesus-Christ is only spirit and life.

The priests had a mission to teach all things about the word. Now, we have reached papology. What is a priesthood incapable of miracles and ignorant of gnosis? Indeed, to know the mysteries of the kingdom of God, to heal, to perform the eucharist and to absolve, such were the four main functions of the first priests, that is of the apostles, and their successors failed in following their example: they have kept the two invisible functions and demand a blind faith, whereas the manifestation of the two visible functions commanded the [illegible] nations, through the repercussions of a sacerdotal [illegible] partially shared. Saint-Martin the reformer...

To the priests, to the Roman Catholics who proclaim the well established Church, Saint-Martin replies: Yes, it is well established, without which there would be no mediation between the supreme love and the crime of the earth. It is established, but it is in order to one day file against those of its ministers who have not been faithful to it, to serve as judgement and sentencing of them. Some ministers, nevertheless, follow the tracks of the true prophets, faithful to their choice.

Now what Church is it a question of? Would it not be an inner Church distinguished from the Church divinely instituted by Jesus-Christ? This distinction could not be accepted, as long as it turns to opposition and substitution. It can only mean and praise the inner aspect, of pure spirituality, inherent in the Church of Christ. The depreciation or even the abandonment of the esoteric, distressing as they may be, do not succeed in disqualifying the successors of the apostles, materially in keeping, nor to deprive the sacraments, which serve as a vehicle for divine energies, of their normally irreplaceable value and, consequently, of their necessity.

The so-called symbol of Nicea-Constantinople, developed by the first two ecumenical councils, always and everywhere received by the believers, describes the Church as one, holy, universal (or catholic) and apostolic. The images of the Church in the New Testament: the Kingdom of God, the Temple, Zion, the Spouse of Christ, the Body of Christ. The models of the Church in its own tradition: People of God or New Israel, social reality, institutionally structured with variants ("perfect" society, said Bellarmin, that is which is sufficient unto itself), communion and fidelity, mystery and sacrament which join a unique relation to God and to the world.

The Church is not a voluntary association of believing individuals. Neither an institution nor a community, basically, but life. "The Church is a living organism, the divine-human organism in which reciprocal effects of the divinity and of humanity are constantly achieved." (Nicolas Berdiaev.). It is the new creation in progress, and "no Church without love", recalls saint Jean de Cronstadt.

The Church is invisible, inner, because it perpetuates the divine-human life and because it is the mystical body; because invisible is the grace of the Holy-Spirit; because the dead are invisible. But the Church is also visible, outer. Like every social unit, it has as its vocation to form itself into an icon of the Holy Trinity, but further, the Holy-Spirit has its structure in the unit.

Through the ministry of the Church and of its institutions, divine powers enter the follower; they also enter the cosmos. The whole world thus becomes a Church and the history of the world becomes the history of the Church and of the Kingdom of God. This divinisation tends to the renewal and the transfiguration of each and everyone, of everything. The mysteries, called sacraments in the West, of which it would be presumptuous to determine the number, dispense grace with these powers, these energies. That is why the spiritual life of the Christian is not only personal and intimate, it is ecclesial, sacramental or liturgical, evangelical or scriptural.

Saint-Martin despises the Grand Inquisitor and his degenerate Church. Alas, Saint-Martin did not know the Church of Dostoevsky, with its religion which is orthodox Christianity and, at the same time, initiatic. Saint-Martin is an unofficial Aliocha.

Saint-Martin is a christian mystic. A mystic because he cultivates with God an intimate and personal, indeed inter-personal relationship; a christian mystic, because Jesus-Christ, Lord and Saviour, is for him the only necessary and sufficient means of this relationship. The deepening of christianity and assimilation to Jesus-Christ make of Saint-Martin a theosopher: knowledge combines with love, for a mysticism sometimes said to be speculative, in the Wisdom which Saint-Martin pays court to as much deep down inside himself (where it is to be found in strength as it is deep down inside every man) as within nature and with God, particularly with the Son.

By omitting the whole Church which he disfigured, Saint-Martin is therefore twice unofficial: as a christian mystic, because the Christian is essentially the member of an ecclesiastic institution and because the sacraments which it distributes irrigate the life of the mystic; as a theosopher, because theosophy in exalting divine Wisdom implies the Church of which Sophie is also the type and that, if the inner Church makes a favourite theme of the theosophers, it reconciles, of necessity, with the institutional Church , as the typology of Wisdom demonstrates.

Everything that Saint-Martin teaches us of the baptism and of communion, everything that he grants to the church is true, good and beautiful, what Christian would not benefit from it! But this benefit and the very entrenchment of the truth, of the goodness and of the beauty of the precepts and words of Saint-Martin stem from a taking into account of the ecclesiastic reality: the rites of baptism and of the eucharist are - usually, let us repeat - basic to the baptism and the eucharist; the visible Church and the institutional priesthood are normally basic to the visible Church and to mystical priesthood.

Nevertheless, the visible church is constantly called on today more than ever - let us recapture for ourselves the words of Saint-Martin under the revolution - to surpass its necessary historical limitations, without losing its historical nature either in the past, or in the present, or in the future. Let us have recognition for Saint-Martin when he reminds us to make room for the Spirit, which will never be sufficiently overabundant.

C-H-R.

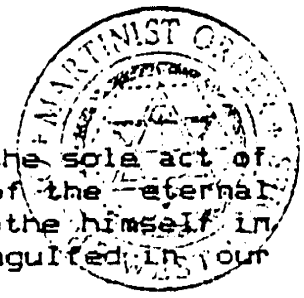
Under the preceding reservations, which were necessary and which one will remember from now on every time Saint-Martin compares Christianity and Catholicism (misunderstanding the Christian essence of Catholicism and the Catholic essence of Christianity, in short, the Church, on the grounds of the partial deformities and masks of the latter) all in all free from now on to receive esoterism without excluding exoterism, and to be at the same time of the visible Church and of the inner Church, because there can only be a single Christian Church, let us taste the intoxication of the profound lines that "the wisest, the most educated and the most elegant of modern theosophers" (how can one escape the final judgement of Joseph de Maistre?) dedicates to the secret path in Jesus-Christ, with him and through him, to the inner life which is Christ himself. Man is fallen, it is a fact. But, then, everything begins more than it begins again.

"There was only this creative principle, living and vivifying, which could be his true liberator, because the voluntary shedding of his blood to which no blood on earth could be compared, could alone bring about the total transposition of the strange substances which floated in man's blood.

"There was only this divine principle which, after this process, could draw the human soul outside of its abyss and, so to speak, identify itself with it, in order to make it taste the delights of its true nature; he was the only one who, being the depositary of the key of David, could on the one hand close the abyss and on the other open the realm of light and return to man the position which he should always have occupied.

"Thus, it is to know nothing of this Repairer to only consider him in his outer, temporal colours, without going up, by progressions of the mind, to the divine centre to which he belongs. Let us therefore draw from the diversity of characters which he took on, some means of appropriation to our feeble knowledge his spiritual 'homification' which greatly preceded his corporeal 'homification'.

"Being the eternal principle of love, he had to take on the character of the immaterial man who was his son; and in order to carry out such a work, it was sufficient for him to gaze upon himself in the mirror of the eternal Virgin, or of SOPHIE, in which his thought has engraved eternally the example of all beings.



"After having become an 'immaterial man' by the sole act of the contemplation of his thought in the mirror of the eternal Virgin or SOPHIE, it was necessary for him to clothe himself in the pure element, which is that glorious body engulfed in our matter since the sin.

"After having clothed himself in the pure element, he had to become the principle of corporeal life, by uniting himself with the spirit of the great world or of the universe.

"After having become the principle of corporeal life, he had to become a terrestrial element, by uniting himself with the elemental region; and from there he had to become flesh in the bosom of an earthly virgin, enveloping himself in the flesh which came from the prevarication of the first man, because it was from flesh, from the elements and from the spirit of the great world that he came to deliver us." Then Saint-Martin refers to Jacob Boehme.

The indispensable and exclusive necessity of our regeneration and of our reunion and close alliance with the Word of God made man: Saint-Martin never wanted, taught or preached anything else, either verbally or in writing. For only in that way can we obtain the kingdom of life and reach it. Only in that way is it neither mad nor blasphemous to envisage that man, on this path of regeneration, rises, from this life, to levels to which Christ only rose after his death. But the condition is, according to the adage of Tertullian, that the Christian be another Christ.

Saint-Martin had not yet read Jacob Boehme, he was practicing somewhat against his will but with success, ceremonial theurgy, when he already wrote, according to his heart and according to the heart of God: "Although this ineffable individual, the key to nature, the love and joy of the simple, the flame of the sages and even the secret support of the blind, does not cease to support man in all of his steps, as he supports and directs all acts in the universe, yet the Name which would make him the best known, would be sufficient, if I uttered it, so that the greatest number deigns to add faith to its virtues and mistrusts all of my doctrine; thus to define it more clearly, would be to remove the aim that I had of making it be honoured. Therefore I prefer to rely on the perception of my readers. Very much convinced that, in spite of the envelopes with which I covered the truth, intelligent men can understand it, true men can taste it, and even corrupt men cannot prevent themselves from at least feeling it, for all men are C-H-R. "C-H-R: this is the last word of the essential book "Des Erreurs et de la Verite" before the conclusion in the chapter titled "Clef du chiffre universel". Saint-Martin quite quickly ended up not being afraid to write this word out in letters, seeing the change of circumstances and the progress of the observer.

All men are Christs, they must and can be so, because Jesus Christ came. The new man is the course of another Christ.

He is a universal medicine in keeping with the spirit of things: the divine pain we must experience to merit the position of 'brother of Christ'. Nevertheless the ambition remains too short or too implicit: how to become the adopted son of God without becoming another Christ. Since the aim is to become God (if not what God is), the course of another Christ is essential.

The union of the model with the copy supplies the key to ceremonial theurgy, with its sacred names, its signs, its characters of spirits; it is also the key to levitical sacrifices; finally it is the key to our central and divine initiation, through which, by presenting to God, as pure as we are able, the soul he has given us and which is his image, we must attract the model to ourselves and in that way form the most sublime union which ever was able to do any theurgical operation or mysterious ceremony of which all other initiations are filled. An echo, this time unconscious, of the Oriental Church: the image has remained, the likeness (Saint-Martin called it image) is to be recovered. Saint-Martin approves of the metaphor of the mirror - our soul, what shall I say, our whole self - so pure that the image and the object merge.

From one theurgy the other, and the quality differs. Theurgy uses elementary nature; our true theurgism, says Saint-Martin, needs no other flame than our desire, no other light than that of our purity. He adds that that does not preclude very profound knowledge.

"The person who wishes to understand the words of Christ must seek to model his whole life on his", advises 'L'imitation de Jesus-Christ.' Saint-Martin: On earth, we only need the virtue of strength. Science does not save us from anything. With the spirit of strength, we have everything, because we only have it by being linked to Him who has everything and because, from then on we have something to face all events and all circumstances, that is that, through this virtue of strength which is nothing other than living, active faith, we not only have something to protect ourselves from all personal and individual wrongs, but we can prevent all the wrongs of our fellow men, to the point that we will never be in the situation of having nothing to reproach them with, or of needing indulgence with respect to them. What did Jesus-Christ insist on the most, concludes Saint-Martin? On faith and humility.

Faith and knowledge, science and charity: in the game of our God, whoever loses wins.

DESIRE OF GOD

PISCES

Only think of death, it is your only plenary hope; think always of life, of full action: it demands to be undertaken as of now.

Death is ambiguous, so is life. Saint-Martin experienced in his psychism, in the temporal circumstances of his earthly existence, the tragedy of impending engulfment; he experienced, in the spiritual, the drama of the seed which dies to germinate and this drama alone spared him from the fatal end of individual tragedy. Cain in town, Abel in the fields: the crocodile swallows; the soul marries Sophie; it unites itself with Jesus-Christ. (But there is nothing in common between the marriage with Sophie and the begetting of the Word with which to assimilate ourselves, in the theosophy of Saint-Martin, and on the other hand we do not know the phantasmagoria in which a pseudo-archetype of the Mother would act positively).

The family of Saint-Martin, which more than once evaded natural marriage (except to project onto a fashionable virago and one who had reading, the fantasy of the initiating woman), was spiritual and he did not conceive of the Church otherwise. Always the internal and the invisible, without any other, without more. Is it a family, is it a Church, is it a company of initiation, this society of independents or of solitary people, unknown by men, founded by Jesus-Christ himself, the symbolic jeweller, the husband of Mrs. Faith, which made to Sedir in 'le Crocodile' the speech of an Unknown, with the final words "Rise up"? Not only does this association bear no resemblance to any other known society, but also everyone has it within himself and Saint-Martin is the grand cousin of his cosmopolitan Mother, who lives everywhere under different names and functions. The Society of Independents or of Solitary people (one could also say of Unknown people and even better, of the Unknown one) extends, indeed, to all parts of the earth; it is the only real image of divine society.

"Do not let yourself be called Master, for only one is your master and you are all brothers". Saint-Martin illustrates throughout his work the maxim mentioned by Matthew in his gospel. Unique is the authority of Jesus-Christ founded on his own person.

The Old Testament narrates the facts and the story of the prophets. The difference from their emulators in the New Testament is that the latter teach nothing new, but the secret hidden wisdom of God...

But why must Saint-Martin evade the ecclesial, the sacramental context? The most serious heterodox gnostics, to begin with the disciples of Valentine, conserved, in the early centuries, the ecclesial institution with its hierarchy and its main sacraments.

Let us be careful about false prophets and false wonders. The bait of marvels diverted Cagliostro, this tall, dry man whom Saint-Martin describes ironically, but the latter, I fear, allowed himself in his turn to be deceived by appearances. The principle does not for all that lose its validity. To Martines de Pasqually himself Saint-Martin directs two reproaches: he wanted to concentrate spirit in contexts and in schools, he loved show. Now, the more man shows himself, the more God distances himself.

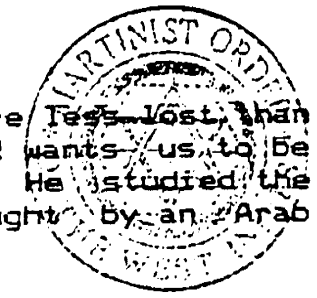
Our spirit which Saint-Martin curiously refers to as animical, let us say our spirit, is of such a high order that it is superior to that of the angels, but our animal spirit is united with it. In its way, the animal spirit needs our care as much as our animical spirit. Or the risk would be to confuse. There are visionaries so-called or reputed to be so, who are only possessed people, for example by Python; the numbing of the senses has opened them to all the regions which present themselves and it is not to the renaissance of our true senses that they owe their illusory knowledge. The ideas of marvelous and secret causes which fill the heads of so many people are a strange thing with no relation to true knowledge.

Saint-Martin's psychological terminology, in the widest sense, has somewhat floated around his constant thought. Let us sketch a canvas. The animical spirit, the spirit, is our true soul. But soul means everything which has life; hence the need to distinguish between the reasonable or true soul, the sensitive soul and the vegetative soul. The heart is the sensitive faculty of the reasonable soul and almost the essence of the sensitive soul, the seat of the vices, virtues and passions. Passion comes under the sensitive soul, but it is not alien to the reasonable soul which is linked to the sensitive soul. Affection, on the other hand, depends above all on the reasonable soul and reason is the property of the reasonable soul. Understanding is a faculty of reason, but let us not take it for inner sense or moral sense, which is superior to it. Intelligence, in relation to moral sense, goes beyond and genius goes still further. However, it is not enough that the truth is an intelligence in us, however high it be; it is even not enough that it becomes a feeling in us; it must become in us a universal power and resistance.

Nowadays, spiritual science has been lost, say Martines de Pasqually and Saint-Martin in unison, destroyed at times by materialism and at times by 'fideism'(1), to the point that

---

1) Doctrine according to which absolute truth is founded on revelation, on faith; doctrine acknowledging truths of faith, as opposed to rationalism.



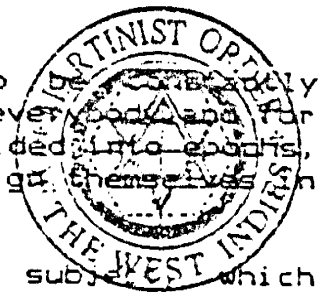
savage nations which do not have our sciences are less lost than we are. Saint-Martin is interested in Asia and wants us to be interested in it too, as well as in nature. He studied the natural sciences and Eleazar-Martines was taught by an Arab scholar in spite of his undeniable judaism.

Three religions par excellence, these three completed monotheisms; but of Judaism and of Islam, the true esoterism is Christianity. Now, Saint-Martin, a pioneer of eurasianism, does not stop before China, indeed Japan with its ecclesiastic emperor. As for India, which retains it in itself, will one forget that it has not ceased being influenced by platoism and neo-platoism, such that Alexandria sheltered some buddhist communities, of which it remains to explain that the doctrine has certain similarities to that of Pythagoras? Conversely, and through neo-platoism which it influenced in return, India stimulated the hellenic patristic as far as Saint Gregoire Palamas. Of other than Abrahamic religions, the hidden name is also derived from the Nazareen Messiah.

Astronomy, an eminent natural science, discovers for us, with its instruments, wonders which attract our admiration. What do we do with this admiration? And when the powerful sources which animate all the celestial bodies as well as the space in which they float, seem to call us to bring closer to them, as much as it is in us, these even more powerful sources from which they are separated, what do we do? Instead of using our zeal to restore their old alliance, we crown their sadness by saying that they would be wrong to sigh after another state: we say to them, after having convinced ourselves of it, that there is no God. To the blasphemy, we add sacrilege by mutilating man of his ministry in nature.

Beware of the imaginative! The opinion of Saint-Martin will dissipate the contemporary 'imaginal' and 'imaginary'. The imaginative has two parts, a rational and judicial part and a sensitive part which can spill into the sensory and the conventional. An auxiliary of the poets, the imaginative is not the inner man (whose culture demands the aspiring true poets). The most surprising knowledge, however, is the inexhaustible love of the central source. The way is again shown.

Some friends of God, including Martines de Pasqually and Boehme according to Saint-Martin, and, I believe, as the Unknown Philosopher himself believed deep down (but also, I believe, as Cagliostro did not believe), in super-angelic and universal powers, recall for us and again give to us concern for our soul,. These chosen ones, says Saint-Martin, exist in order to manifest, by their wisdom and the grace of God who sends them, the divine virtues. (The modern notion of 'great initiates' would be applicable, provided that those with a true mission and false prophets are not included under this heading, and of course that Christ, Jesus-Christ, is without parallel and beyond compare).



The chosen ones prepare for the new era, to be constantly renewed, constantly prepared for, for each and every God and for humanity; without prejudice to history being divided into epochs, each threshold of which is crucial and which align themselves in a spiral until a final time limit.

The theosophy of Saint-Martin is our subject which encompasses the highest subjects, for the higher understanding of all subjects: the great matter of "the reintegration of created beings (understand, in the case in point, emanated beings as well as possibly detached ones) in their original divine spiritual properties, virtues and powers).

Saint-Martin wrote and spoke according to his mission; sometimes he shared the anguish of men of desire, he shared their wishes for the happiness of the human family; let us add: and of the world. Dare I also add: and of God? He protested that he had only principles to offer, but also dreamed that his readers sensed a little the depth of his principles and the aim to which he invited the human specie (and that would be easy for them, he noted with some sadness, towards the end of his earthly existence, because for a long time I have been deafening their ears with it and dazzling their eyes), they would pass easily over the defects of the form, through which, he again considered, his writings often erred. (This latter judgement does not lack humility but it does lack equity.)

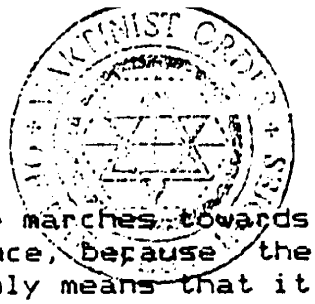
The widow's mite which Saint-Martin offers us, and for which we will give thanks to God, is of genuine worth. "Fight against me..." asked Saint-Martin of God in being assimilated to Jacob. Now, Israel means as much, if not more "God fights" than "fighting against God"; as much if not more, "God is strong". The Eternal was strong against Saint-Martin, and Saint-Martin blessed him in obedience. It is not compulsory that a chosen one be a saint or a hero; Saint-Martin was neither one nor the other, but he was a chosen one. The power of God strikes us and can enlighten us through him.

The end of the Church and of traditional doctors, whose lack of knowledge and mistakes serve as the reflection of the pride of the philosopher who sees their inability: we now know how to modulate the oracle of Saint-Martin and how in our turn not to burn the wheat with the chaff, it is of the Church that I am speaking.

Saint-Martin announces the new era. How opportune at the time of the 1789 revolution and the following years! The mould of time will be broken before time itself is broken and the break will begin with France. What breaks, the partial nature of which will not obliterate the nature of breaks nor the preparatory nature which is as typical as truly preparatory!

Balzac, who was a Martinist in his way and in the style of his time, not ritually, but in spirit and in truth, in 'Ursule Mirouet', wanted Dr Despleins to have as a benefactor, exemplary, it seems to me, friends of God, a bearer of water...

"Always dream of life" says Saint-Martin again.



AQUARIUS

From stormy desires to desired storms. Time marches towards its old age, the age of the spirit must advance, because the wonders performed by the supreme power are the only means that it has to use today to make itself recognized and respected by mortals. May storms rise with Sedir; may they rise through desire!

The eschatological truth is at the same time personal and collective, temporal and eternal, temporary and permanent. The heavens and earth constantly renew themselves until the new heaven and the new earth come into being. There is no doubt, however, that the period of Saint-Martin and our own are privileged.

The era of the personal aquarius, at the approaching time of the collective era of Aquarius: "Who is this man carrying a pitcher of water? It is the precursor of the holy alliance which can only be contracted after the perfect purification. What is this high chamber where the passover must be celebrated? It is the thought of man who is endowed with the privilege to show himself amongst the nations as the most sublime region of the immortal temple in which the Holy-Spirit intended to dwell. What is this master who sends to ask where the place is where he will eat the passover with his disciples? It is the spirit of the new man himself, who comes to visit the human soul to give him back his life and light, but which, knowing that this human soul is a free being, only wants to live with it with its own consent, in spite of all the property and riches he comes to favour it with."

Between bigotedness and impiety, it was difficult to accept Saint-Martin, and almost nobody, to his regret, understood him. Even the XIX century remembered of him, as well as of his emulators who were authentic or apocryphal in illuminism, only an awareness as well as the rationalism of philosophers. But apart from history, there is the permanent or eternity. Saint-Martin dared to define the sublime: the sublime is God and everything which puts us into contact with God. The words of the Unknown to Sedir is a call for the sublime and the theosophy of Saint-Martin is sublime. Let us grant his wish to pass over the defects of his books to retain their substance and let us leave them there. Praise of admiration, defense of religion, exaltation of prayer.

The final aim of the mystery of nature is to raise us by the discovery of the law of physical things to knowledge of the higher laws and powers by which they are governed. The final aim of the mystery of divine and spiritual things, which is linked with the mystery of our being, is to move us and to stimulate in us the feeling of admiration, tenderness of love and of recognition The mystery of divine spiritual things must therefore be able to penetrate right into our fundamental being itself, without which this dual mystery which links us with divine things and which links divine things with us, would miss all their effect. Intelligence above all there, and admiration above all here. Admiration prevails.

MARTINIST ORDER

We have an abundant treasure in our hand and we neglect it too often. It is a simple truth, common in appearance, the value of which has not been considered enough: the soul of man can only live on admiration. Admiration is the source of happiness in knowledge and in love. Admiration, unless it is vain, which it cannot be because of the laws of nature, always postulates a superior object to admire above us. The source of objects of admiration is none other than God himself. Man is the only being susceptible to admiration amongst all beings of nature; the reason for this must be sought in its analogy with the universal source of admiration. And the eternal source finds analogy in man, enough so that we can and ought to become cooperators with God, in the development of his wonders and the expansion of his admiration. If admiration is lacking today, God is innocent of it. Let us therefore praise and exercise admiration which petitions against atheism.

Religion consists in passing on objects of admiration; it is the salutary balm to soothe the infirmities of the human soul. Why must it be that, through the ignorance and ill will of those who everywhere took possession of it, religion was transformed into a corrosive poison or a soporific mortifier? The purpose of the word "religion" was only to draw from our eyes tears of joy and felicity, instead of the rains of blood and bitterness with which it has flooded the globe. Let us defend religion.

Prayer is the principle religion. Indeed, it links our heart to our spirit. It consists of a vegetation, that is of a laborious, progressive and continual development of all the powers and of all the divine spiritual and natural, temporal, glorious properties of man, which were all turned upside down and swallowed up by sin. In the final analysis, God himself will pray in us, a perfect prayer, and ourselves a praying machine.

It is in our souls that one must read and write, read and write without respite. Man is everywhere, in everything, called upon to administer, not to lay down the law. May he learn the laws, obey them and enlarge and make firm their kingdom! May everything be 'deocratic' in man, and around him, because he must play the role of universal improver!

Man is not only the farmer of God, as ancient Mesopotamia and the Hebrews knew. The physical universe shared in the fall and in the redemption; it will share in the final glory. Man is the priest of the Eternal in the universe. Saint-Martin did not taste any sweeter natural delights than country walks and music...

The ministry of spirit man embraces nature, or the universe, man, who must be man, and God, the Word. How will man administer the word right down to nature? Through prayer and action. How will he administer his Word to his fellow-men? Through prayer and action. Now, these are illustrated in poetry. Man is the supreme book, and the book of nature begins or furnishes his instruction. But if the Holy Scripture converges, a wound, which is all in all salutary, threatens to dissolve the writings of man's hand. Yet Saint-Martin is instilled by the old idea, for example cabalistic, that language is an operator endowed with an ontological value. Written down or oral, would it not be able, in contrast to all books, which are all useless in the end, to lead to what Mallarme decided the world would lead to: a Book, the Book?

At least Saint-Martin situated poetry at the top, when, faithful to itself, has something of the nature of the sublime. Nothing, observes Saint-Martin, to do with the custom of writing in verse; nothing in common, as we saw earlier, with the exclusive use of the imaginative, which does not know the living reality. Prophetic poetry is the only kind worthy of this name and the true object of poetry is the pictures of supreme facts, which, by the analogy of their principle with the substance which activates them, can develop in us the divine fire which is contained and concentrated in them, and put our thought in the position to make the ray reflect on the least of the objects which surround us.

Poetry in return illustrates the word. But in any spiritual meeting, the man-spirit will manifest these qualities: intelligence, deference, generosity, seriousness, sobriety, constant progress, vigilance. Every word is the fruit of a thought, every thought is the fruit of an alliance. Through our alliance, we will have thoughts and consequently divine words. But let us take care: prayer and action (poetry is a form of them) take precedence, because they proceed from the Word and are divine words to perfection.

Saint-Martin fought against Garat, professor of human understanding in teachers' training colleges and spokesman for ideology, against sensualism, against materialism, but with originality. He insists on the existence, generally misunderstood even by spiritualists, of a specific moral sense.

This moral sense, restored to its true elements, will convince man, through his own experience and without a miracle, that the word was necessary for the institution of the word (and as a consequence, that matter does not think at all), because it is an irrevocable law that each thing does its own revelation. Man, this supreme book, is even more than the early tradition of God; he is the original text of all divine thoughts. The revelation will be analogous to the thing.

But to reveal is to serve as a mirror, it is to exercise magism, it is a superior form of imagination. (At least in the true order, for there are some accidental imitations of these universal factors: broken or dirty mirrors, magism reduced to imaginative or mad somnambulism of the abode; evil being inevitable outside the line or in reverse on the line). And the will controls and serves the desire which is expressed later and is realized in the revelation, magically, through images which are icons. The psychography of the 'Crocodile' provides the tools for iconography; the revelation of man will be analogous to man, provided that it moves from a right to a fact.

An obligation and a right to work to extend our existence, our knowledge and our happiness, by bringing back and vivifying the original relations we have with the God-source, and which are as if they were buried and concentrated in us through causes that we could also know and which it would be impossible for us to deny, that, in any case, is the purpose of our ministry, and man is a ministry in any case. His desire attests to it and defines the ministry.

This divine desire which makes itself felt in the human soul, has indeed the aim of establishing a balance between it and God, because a desire comes from a separation of analogous substances which need to be united; now, this balance is not a dead and inert effect, but an active development of the divine properties which constitute the soul of man, inasmuch as it is a divine universal extract. Hence the role of man as the man-God of the earth, as well as of himself, of his fellow men and of all spirits. A man of desire and a spiritual ministry, man is the demiurge of universal reintegration. That is set out...

"It is no longer a question of whether you are convinced of the spiritual nature of your being; of your essential connections with your principle; of your degradation through a voluntary original separation/break; from this ardent love of your generating source which engaged it, at the time of your fall and which still engages it every day to come and sort you out from amongst the most disgusting refuse; (a wonder that the man of the stream, who does not turn round, could not understand, although he senses it, as the child who has a fall feels the hand which picks him up, but cannot see it without turning round;) finally, of the vastness of the testimonies of all kinds which are set down in favour of these fundamental truths and proven by themselves; it is no longer a question of stopping at all these points, as I said, without which I had warned you not to go further, and without which, consequently, you would probably not have come as far as this.

"But it is a question of seeing whether you have purged your being of all the secondary refuse which we have all been amassing since the fall or at least if you sense the ardour to deliver yourself from it at whatever price, and to revive in yourself this life which was extinguished by the original crime, without which you can neither be the servant of God nor the consoler of the universe.

"Even try to perhaps feel that the only science there would be to study would be to become without sin; for if man had reached that point, it would be possible for him to naturally manifest all the sciences and all knowledge."

Such is the desire of God corresponding to the desire of man, and if God is the desire of man, man is completely the desire of God.

WHAT IS "MARTINISM"?

Robert Amadou has founded the International Center for Martinist Research and Studies, — in French: Centre Internationale de Recherches et d'Etudes Martinistes (C.I.R.E.M.) to gather and make information available on "Martinism" in particular and the "Western Initiatic Tradition" in general.

According to Amadou, the word "Martinism" is defined in many different ways and it is necessary to arrive at accepted definitions so as to avoid confusion.

1. The word "Martinism" first refers to the theosophical system composed by Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin which is published in his works. A Martinist is one who receives this system in order to study and practice it. Louis-Sebastian Mercier in his Tableau de Paris attests that Saint-Martin himself uses this term in this context at least once in 1798. Naturally, the meaning of "Martinism" will be enlarged in the direction marked by the present definition and could designate certain uncertain quasi-religious mystical practices, sweet and sensitive, that the temperament of Saint-Martin sometimes manifests, and which is also found in some of his works. It is from his pre-romantic side that romanticism sprang, although at the price of the counter sense. It is this type of Martinism that went to Sainte-Beuve.

2. "Martinism" also designates the doctrine of Martines de Pasqually and the "Martinists" then become, by corollary, Elus Cohens. The juxtaposition of this sense to the preceding one, is explained notably by the partial homonymic sounds of "Saint-Martin" and "Martines" and by the personal, doctrinal and social links, whether real or imaginary, of these two Illumined men. In this second sense, "Martinezism" and "Martinezist" forbid the equivocal.

3. "Martinism" also designates the Ordre des Chevaliers Bienfaisants de la Cite Saint (Order of Knights Beneficent of the Holy City) and, more generally, the Rectified Scottish Rite ... and "Martinist" designates the members of these organizations, because Willermoz had placed them in the Martinist movement and many, especially those around and because of Willermoz ... were Elus Cohens.

Also, in this new direction, the meaning of the word "Martinism" has taken on a broader meaning. Willermoz, The Martinist, meaning the Elus Cohen and emulator of Saint-Martin, and voice of the Martinezist sect, brought this movement to the Masonic Convention at Wilhelmsbad and had it formally recognized as the Martinist Reform - that which is inspired by Martinezism, in the Rite of Strict Templar Observance. Thus, it came that all the French Illuminati, as well as all the Mystical Masons of France, were qualified as "Martinists".

4. "Martinism" also refers to the MARTINIST ORDER instituted by Papus or to the Martinist Orders deriving from this original one. A "Martinist" then, can also be someone who is a member of a Martinist Order. The particular meaning of the word "Martinist" in this case now depends on the definition that the particular "Martinist Order" adapts for its own, and since they all claim to go back to Saint-Martin and revendicate, although very obscurely, a Cohen Filiation. (Papus never really separated the teachings of Martines and Saint-Martin).

From the above definitions, we see the traditional, philosophical and literary space occupied by the definition of "Martinism". Because of this, the need is felt for the creation of a research structure devoted only to it. C.I.R.E.M. has thus been constituted around the following orientations:

To study the Works of Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin and Martines de Pasqually more generally than that which is directly or indirectly attached to what falls under the general term "Martinism".

To make available to researchers and students, the existing mass of documents and information on this subject.

To support, whether methodological or logistical, those who are trying to work with Martinism.

To publish articles, studies and other types of works.

To constitute a "Saint-Martin Library".

To sponsor conventions, colloquia and symposia...

Let us also make it very clear here and now that C.I.R.E.M. is not a Martinist Order and that it is solely a center for research of an historical and universatarian type. C.I.R.E.M. is keeping a close relationship of a cultural and scientific nature, with those who head the recognized Martinist Orders throughout the world, as well as other traditional, cultural and academic structures.

C.I.R.E.M. has three types of members:

THE FOUNDERS. These are the specialists and historians who make up the permanent Research Council. It is this Council which defines the priorities in matters of research and publication. The members of the Administrative Council of C.I.R.E.M. are chosen from among themselves. They collaborate in putting together the magazine L'esprit des Choses (The Spirit of Things).

THE RESEARCHERS. Persons who wish to pursue a research project under the direction of one of the specialists of the Center may submit his/her research proposal. After examining the proposal, the permanent Council bestows upon that person the quality of researcher.

THE READERS. They simply benefit from what the Center publishes. They receive the magazine and participate in the cultural activities.

Robert Amadou

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES

ORDER OF THE GRAIL

PLANE III COMPANION 90-100

LIBER # 99 THE MOMENT OF TRUTH

Personal & Confidential TENTH DEGREE

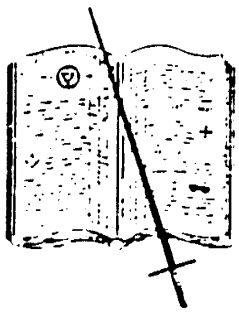
The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

Custodes
Morum
Sacrorum

I.C.E.S.

International College of Esoteric Studies



Incorporated as a non-profit educational institution devoted to the advancement and mystical enlightenment of Man.

Worthing 31W
Barbados
West Indies

12.03 p.m.

Dear Companion on the Path

Here we are in the courtyard of the Castle. It is just past High Noon, the sun has slipped behind one of the battlements and you are standing in the shadow, face to face with the imposing structure. The atmosphere is cool and slightly damp. It is very quiet. There is a noticeable air of awe and mystery. Perhaps a slight feeling of loneliness too. We have brought you as far as we can! It is for you now, on your own, to take the remaining steps, to pass between the columns that flank the entrance - step into the parvis - and make your way inside the castle. May God be with you.

With this Liber you have come to the end of the course! There is a little feeling of sadness I must admit. For many moons we have travelled together. On some days the going was rough, on others it was easy. Sometimes there was enthusiasm and hope; sometimes doubt, even despair. Many days the mood was introspective, at other times extroverted ... with the group singing, laughing, and making merry.

Cast your mind back to the turn of the twentieth century, to the late 1800's and early 1900's. Imagine the social environment of that time. People were going about their lives just as they do these days. But life was somewhat different ... it was not as hectic ... the job situation was not as demanding, there was no T.V., no VCR's or home entertainment systems. Few people had motor cars, telephones, or even electric light. Continuing education classes (which many people must take these days just to hold their jobs), gyms (which many people spend time in to counteract the circumstances of today's living), sports & games and other activities that are part of the present-day landscape ... were not as organized ... in fact, most of them did not exist! So, after the work day was over ... what was a prime activity, especially for men? It was association with a fraternal Order. And there were many, especially in Europe. Although all were based on the Golden Rule and taught the virtues of ethics, morality, brotherhood and charity, some were socially oriented, while others were principally philosophic/esoteric.

With the outbreak of World War II great destruction followed. Fraternal work was disrupted. Many of the Orders and Brotherhoods became defunct. Then came the late '40's & '50's and a period of rebuilding. And on into our present day and age, in which developments in technology and instrumentation have brought a revolution to the way of life. And the life style continues, ever more rapidly, to change and change.

And change! Let's deviate slightly and talk a little about 'truth'. No one knows absolute truth. Each of us experiences reality, but reality is a personal experience to the particular individual and it may not even have a counterpart in actuality or fact. Why we are here? If we are here simply because we are here, or because of a divinely ordained reason; whether there is an ordained purpose to life; whether the Universe was created for a particular purpose; how one should live their life, if reincarnation is a fact ... and so on ... are questions the individual units of mankind called people have been asking for millions of years. (And continue to ask). And no one knows the answer. At least there is no universal answer. Of course everybody has their own idea. But each person's idea is only their reality. Some people feel their opinions, concepts and ideas are right, "the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth" ... and everybody else should accept their view!

Great volumes of philosophical concepts, esoteric teaching, metaphysical education and scientific information are available today. Insights that some of our illustrious predecessors have had, have become the foundation stones of religious systems, many of which have become worldwide organizations. But remember: they were religions, philosophic views and tenets to live by ... that were great truths in their day ... that have been blown away by the winds of time, like a speck of dust, leaving no trace. And the much vaunted wisdom of today, will, not so far from now, be looked upon, by those coming, with the same expression of dismay, as we look upon stone age man... So: IS there an answer? Could it be that there IS NO reality, no actuality, and the things we think we know ... only SEEM to be?

In the meanwhile however, the search goes on and effort to rend the veil that obscures 'absolute truth' continues. Slowly, as the days pass, clearer and clearer light is being glimpsed. Shall there ever come a day when the full face of truth will be seen? I leave you to answer that.

The esoteric fraternities that were situated around the Mediterranean basin when the Second World War broke out had much valuable information. In 1982, this writer, "questing for truth" in Europe, was privileged to receive from several sources which shall remain anonymous, archives of lectures and knowledge papers that had been used by some of these Brotherhoods. Starting first as the ICOMS around 1986 to make some information on 'Martinism' available, the organization went on to become I.C.E.S. ... to a wider curriculum ... and to do what it has done. We feel somewhat awed that our effort has been so enthusiastically embraced and supported ... associates now number in the thousands and are situated around the world ... from Alaska to Australia and many points in between.

It is possible the I.C.E.S. may seem to those who are separated from us geographically, to be a much bigger operation than it really is. These are the facts that are being disclosed to you: there are three of us who do it all, who have supported it (and support it), and made, and make it possible ... by putting our hands in our own pockets to make up the short-fall ... since the "dues" do not carry it. Yes, there are the three of us, an office about fifteen feet square, lots of shelves, a photocopier, a typewriter and some filing cabinets. That's it! And it gets done in "spare time". So maybe you can understand now why letters aren't answered as promptly, as properly, or as neatly, as some would like.

We have so much more material in our archives than we have given out! And there are now volumes of wonderful and truly enlightening lectures and essays that associates have sent in. But there is no way we can undertake to do more. We are doing the best we can.

We sometimes give our imagination free rein and think how nice it would be, to somehow be able to make available all the material we have. And then we wonder too, if there is any point just going on and on, giving out information, much of which is generally obtainable these days?

Yes, historical information is interesting, even useful ... there's no denying that. And the traditional esoteric teachings as they were given by those who carried the banner in times before ours, do have worth. But knowledge evolves! New discoveries are being made! Old concepts are giving way to new insights! What we are seeing these days is: the realm of the psychic has been embraced and incorporated into mainstream science! Nowadays, subjects such as the nature of consciousness, its possible survival independently of the body, "out-of-the-body" experiences, the aura, etc., ... things that were once strictly in the domain of the 'esoteric' ... are now being studied in the Universities of the world! And because of the enormous facilities these institutions have, a great deal of new information, new 'truth', is being uncovered. Much solid, valid, vital and practical information that should be studied, known and used by mystics, can now be found in the fields of clinical psychotherapy, psychology, parapsychology, neuro-linguistics, psychiatry, biogenetics and so on. (Let us take this opportunity to strongly recommend you get a hold of ANY BOOK written by or about Milton Erickson and read it ... and you will see what we are talking about.)

We share with you this insight: there is a wave, it is moving across the ocean of time AND YOU ARE IN IT. RIDE THE CREST OF THIS WAVE! THE PRESENT IS THE POINT OF POWER! BE IN THE HERE AND NOW! Not in the backwater! To be in the eddies, the currents, the tides and the foam ... is to be drowning in the wash of yesterday. TAKE FROM YESTERDAY WHAT IS GOOD, USEFUL AND VALUABLE ... BUT DON'T GET STUCK IN THE MUD. DON'T GET LOST IN THE SAUCE!

We have shared with you a fairly broad panorama of traditional information. You need to take this information and extract from it what you can use and turn it into knowledge. INFORMATION IS NOT KNOWLEDGE! A head full of information is not of much use. You've got to KNOW*! And you've got to open your eyes to the produce of modern research as well ... and take from it what's useful ... AND DO THE SAME THING! 'Truth' is Universal! It's not confined or isolated to one group or person!*

There was a time when 'esoteric instruction' was not readily available. You had to belong to an "esoteric group", lodge or Order if you wanted "certain information." This is not the case these days. Since around the 1960's occult/esoteric bookstores have been opening in almost every city and town. And nowadays you can go there and buy a book and find out whatever you want to know about.

And this brings me to speak about esoteric fraternities. What is the value of an esoteric fraternity these days? There was a time when 'esoteric information' was not available to the public. Some time ago you would even have been branded a 'witch' and executed if 'the authorities' suspected you dared contemplate esoteric ideas! Those days are gone. You no longer have to become a member of a "secret Order" or an esoteric lodge and climb stairs lugging suitcases of paraphernalia, set up a temple, don regalia, go through a ritual, and sit down to hear an 'esoteric lecture' ... you can go to a book store and buy a book and read the same thing presented in a much more twenty-first century sort of way ... which is clearer and more up-to-date!

Does this mean, then, that the death knell has sounded for esoteric fraternities. The answer is: CERTAINLY NOT. What it does mean is: esoteric fraternities must now concentrate on ceremonial and ritual activity; on theurgic work and group meditations; on forging the bonds of brotherhood; on mystical activities which are rendered more powerful and effective when there are a number of people ..... on SPIRITUAL UPLIFTMENT AND SPIRITUAL DEVELOPMENT. The 'intellectual stuff'... the teaching of metaphysical and philosophical principles and study of the history of their particular organization ... can be accomplished at informally held study-group meetings and through individual study ... and by the way, we here at headquarters feel a sense of gratification that the lectures we are sending out in the Libers ... which (by and large) are lectures formerly used by many esoteric Orders ... are being used today as foundational material by many present-day groups.

I want to talk to you now about the future of I.C.E.S.. We are operating under very trying circumstances. We know the material we are making available is solid and we know it is well appreciated by the membership. And we have just as much in our vault as we have sent out! We know what we have done, and what we are doing, is shining a Light into the world and is a tremendous potential for good. It is making a difference and, along with the other organizations who are working for the upliftment of Mankind, we are helping to dispel the shadows of darkness. And we also know we have what it takes to build a top-class worldwide organization.

THE EXAM

DOCTOR OF DIVINITY

We have an arrangement with the Ecclesia Gnostica Apostolica Catholica, who grant the Degree. You send the exam to us, we pass it on to them, they correct it and issue the Certificate. The exam and all the requirements are nothing to do with I.C.E.S.. All we do is receive it from you, pass it to them, they sit on it, pass it back to us ... and we pass it back to you.

Here are the requirements: The work you submit must be your own but you can quote from any source, provided you indicate the source of your quotations. Your paper must be type-written, double spaced, on letter-size paper, using one side of the paper only and be a minimum of one hundred pages long.

Your submission must be accompanied with a payment of fifty dollars which is required by the E.G.A.C. to defray their costs in assaying and certification.

And now the subject matter: you are to write a dissertation on any aspect of Religion and/or God ... i.e. about any religion, ancient or present day, about God, beliefs in God ... or a combination of these ... and/or on similar topics, historical and factual, or speculative. Including any historical religious/spiritual personality(s). You can write on orthodox or on mystical concepts. In other words, your dissertation must be to do with spirituality, with God, with man's search for God and so on. The parameters are broad, do not feel confined to narrow boundaries.

No attempt is being made to influence you but you may find such subjects as the Essenes, the Gnostics, (especially since the 'Dead Sea Scrolls' and 'Nag Hammadi library' have been found), to be fruitful and interesting areas to research and write about.

The field is wide open and there are no restrictions, you have full rein to write about whatever you please, within the basic parameter given. All work submitted becomes the property of the E.G.A.C.. Be sure you keep a copy of your submission and make sure your full name and address is included.

-o-o-o-o-o-

And so dear friend, we bid you farewell but not good bye.

May the road rise up the meet you,

May the wind be always at your back,

May the sun shine warm upon your face,

The rain fall softly on your fields,

And until we meet again -

May God hold you in the palm of His hand.

Ever in Service to the Light

Saoca

99 06

We also know to build a top-class worldwide organization from our present geographical position is difficult, given the high costs and particular problems inherent in operating from a small island in the Atlantic, thousands of miles from the major English-speaking cities of the world. For example, as we write this there are no 4x9 envelopes available on the island!

We want to say to you right now ... we are willing to hand over what we have to anyone, in another country where operating circumstances are more viable, who would be willing to take it ... provided we can be assured of the sincerity of such person and of their means to be able to develop it into the organization it has the potential to become.

As we have just said, we know the usefulness of this operation. We know the great difference it is making in the lives of very many people all over the world and we will carry on as long as we can. But we also know the world needs all the Light it can get. And if an opportunity comes that can allow the Light of this organization to shine from a taller mast, we are willing to hand over what we have started, to pass it on ... just as the material we are using was received by another and passed on to us ... so it can go from strength to strength. If you, dear Companion, are the person to receive this torch, please communicate with us about it, without delay.

Well, let's talk a little about the future as far as we can actually see it. As we have intimated, our hands are very full and we cannot extend the curriculum of Libers any further. We would like to hope, however, that perhaps we can publish some useful books from time to time, material and information you will appreciate. So we would like to keep in touch with you. We are going to place your name in the Graduate's Ledger so we can send you notices from time to time, but we will miss hearing from you and receiving your little notes and comments. Would you please drop us a few lines whenever you have the chance? Just to receive a post card from you would be wonderful and encouraging. We will always answer, according to our ability to do so and if you don't get an answer to every note you send, you'll know why and say a prayer for us. Also, if you change your address please remember to send us the new one! And although this sounds rather mundane, we do appreciate any financial help you can send us occasionally. Whenever you write, kindly write 'Graduate' after your name ... this will help us to find you in our records! We do not have a computer and a button to press! We have to look through many pages.

Now two other matters. As you go along you may meet other students who may tell you "Oh I finished the course". We thought we would institute a test question that you can use to determine if this is so or not. If you ever meet someone who says they finished the course you can ask them: "How many steps are there to the castle?" The official answer is "One hundred less one." If they can't give you that exact answer you'll know they never did complete the course! And now to the exam, Doctor of Divinity - - -

Dear Graduate — this will be the last official report. We ask that you set forth your thoughts on your journey with us. Wishing to make the Libers as interesting and as useful as possible, we would appreciate knowing what subjects interested you most. Also, share whatever thoughts, ideas or suggestions you may have, which will enable us to improve.