The Beginning

FIRST CHARGE

Respected Apprentice:

Welcome to the INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF ESOTERIC STUDIES and greetings at the portal of Plane I! Your application for membership has been accepted and you will receive our Libers in accordance with the terms expressed on the cover of each one. Please read these terms carefully. The Libers are loaned to you, and they are for your personal and private study. They are for your eyes only, and are not to be shown to others.

The ICES is devoted to the advancement and mystical enlightenment of mankind. We exist for no other purpose. We are not a profit-making organization nor do we have any salaried Directorate or share-holders. We are the custodians of a certain esoteric library which contains the traditional and genuine Initiatic teachings articulated throughout the ages by the Alchemists, Gnostics, Qabalists, Martinists, and Rose + Croix. Much of these teachings are in French, and our particular task is to translate them and make them available in English to all sincere seekers. Having the opportunity to study the teachings enunciated by these different agencies will give you a much broader perspective than if your researches were limited to one camp only! Your membership in the ICES therefore presents you with a wide and unusual opportunity, as most other "schools" have a much narrower course.

CURRICULUM AND CERTIFICATES

You will be given the opportunity to gain two certificates: Master of Sacred Science (exam given at Liber 53) and Doctor of Divinity (exam given at Liber 100). Liber 100 is the end of our curriculum.

In a world engulfed in materialism, you will find our teachings rare and priceless. We have arranged the lectures in a graded sequence, so if you are taking your first steps towards the Greater Light, your path will be both natural and easy. On the other hand, if you have travelled a little way before finding us, you will not be bored while travelling with the neophytes for, unlike the volumes of sheer verbiage that many other "schools" issue , each of our Libers is crammed with vital information and you will not have to read through endless pages to find a few morsels.

WHAT IS SPIRITUAL DEVELOPMENT?

Now, what do you understand spiritual development to be? All aspirants on the Path desire "spiritual growth"; they want to know they are growing spiritually and they often reach out for reassurance. The problem is: almost none of them understands what spiritual growth really is. It is not, as some think, a matter of being good little boys and girls, and as a sort of reward, being made an Adept Spiritual Growth is the product of an expanded consciousness and this is achieved by becoming more aware. "More aware of what?" you might ask. More aware of your feelings, your motivations, your habit patterns, your attitudes. Spiritual growth requires effort. It calls for work that must be done on yourself, by yourself, it is work you must undertake to do for yourself. Nobody can do it for you. Just reading about it won't do it. Spiritual work calls for practices and routines which must be followed sincerely. Teachers can only point the way. The only person you can fool is yourself.

The thing that really holds us back in being more aware of our attitudes is the fear of what we will see if we truly look at ourselves. Yet this revealing view must come about as a part of the unfolding process. When you do become aware of your feelings, your motivations, your habit patterns, your attitudes and so on, you have the option of expressing them, or not. When you are not aware of them, you express them unconsciously, and then wonder why you make such a mess of your life.

If you don't see your own patterns clearly, you won't see the patterns of others, and then you have to handle the critical feelings that arise from this, which is not only energy consuming, but depressing.

THE EVOLUTIONARY JOURNEY

The whole evolutionary journey is from vagueness to full self-conscious awareness and certainty. In short, you are to become more conscious. More conscious and more aware. In the beginning, more conscious and more aware of your attitudes, your habit patterns, your opinions and your disposition, but eventually more aware of your whole environment -everything. The evolutionary journey is traversed with the aid of a certain routine, as follows:

THE MYSTIC'S LADDER

There are four "exercises" which, together, are called The Mystic's Ladder. The first is the practice of daily retrospection. This exercise, (exercise #1), is given in this Liber. When practicing this exercise, do not look for the negatives only; look also for positives, for when you narrow the range on one end of your awareness, you narrow the range on the other side also.

The second is exercise #2, Single Awareness, in Liber 2; this exercise has far-reaching effects which you will discover in due time.

The third is exercise #3, The Stimulator, in Liber 4. You will quickly notice the effects of this exercise.

NOTE BOOK

The fourth exercise is "X", the practice of the presence of God, and is given in this Liber. You will begin immediately with exercise "X" and #1, then add numbers 2 & 3 when you receive them. At that time you will obtain a note book and head up a page "THE MYSTIC'S LADDER" and write the four exercises down. These are to become for you a routine of daily activities which you are to practice daily, until the end of your days on earth. Even if you should drop out of the College after reading Liber 4, persist with these four exercises for the rest of your days. The benefits you will derive are impossible to set down so we will not even try. In your note book you will also note particular points that you wish to keep before you, also the Liber and page number of the other exercises that follow. You will also note down the impressions and ideas that come to you in meditation and in dreams. Your note book is your personal diary and it is not to be shown to others.

EXPERIENCE ESSENTIAL FOR DEVELOPMENT

I just wish I could speak to you in such a way that you will never forget these words. Many people start off on the Spiritual Quest and quickly get distracted by the intellectual aspect of the Work and neglect the "exercises". You must never allow this to happen to you. The intellectual aspect of the teachings are interesting, they open windows to many new vistas, but all teachings and instructions that come to you via books, monographs, discourses, lectures, video presentations, discussions, etc. are all in the category of information. You can know nothing until you experience it yourself. Until you experience the thing itself, it remains for you only a possibility.

ARRANGING YOUR DAY

It is essential that you set aside a short period of your day, every day, for study and exercise. You have to realize that just as you devote a part of the 24 hour cycle to eating, sleeping, exercise, professional work, interacting with family, etc., so too must you also devote a portion of time to study and meditation. Give some of your time to yourself. Tell your family you wish ten minutes of privacy a day. Unplug the phone. Close your door. This is the most important work of your life. Life is lived from the inside out and not the other way around. You will soon find out that as you meditate on the principles that will be shared with you, as you learn to look fearlessly at yourself, as you turn your thoughts within and look into your own being, as you strive to put noble ideas and ideals to work in your life, a change for the better will take place within you, your whole life will be uplifted, you will experience a greater degree of happiness, health, attainment and peace of mind and "miracles" will happen in your life that you never thought possible. Such things do not happen to those who read the Libers like a newspaper and make no effort to uplift their consciousness.

"EXERCISES" ARE PRINCIPLES TO BE LIVED

Now about the four exercises that, together, make up the practice called The Mystic's Ladder. The Mystic's Ladder, reinforced later on with The Mystic's Menu, constitutes the most powerful formula for attaining spiritual and physical excellence known to Western mystics. (You are living in the West and you should follow a Western system.) You were just told that the four exercises known as The Mystic's Ladder must be worked on an ongoing basis.

Other exercises will be given as you go along and there will come a time when you will have at your disposal more exercises than you will seem to have time for. A note about this. Exercises do not all have to be done in your study or in your Oratory! There are some that you will wish to do there, but "exercises" are also principles to be applied in daily life; you will find opportunities to do many of them while riding on the bus, while sitting at your desk or out shopping. It is a good idea to work with some of the exercises for a time, then drop them and work with others, then come back to the first lot again. All the exercises work to develop the total self, they all work to the same end. It is rather like eating carrots, cabbages, oranges and pears - these are different foods but they all provide nutrients and nourish the body.

THE CAUSE OF DIFFERENCES

Much more will be said about this as we go along; however, it should not be difficult for you to see that Mankind is in a fallen state. If you understand the atomic theory, you know that, while we give everything a name, and diamonds do seem different than doughnuts, the difference between all things, from solid matter, through liquids and gases, to cosmic rays, is caused by the difference in the rate of vibration of the primal energy from which all things are made. The difference in the rate of vibration causes each individual thing to manifest and appear as it does. Consciousness is also vibratory and the difference between people is the difference in their thoughts and awareness (of their level of consciousness, if you will) both individually and collectively. Such differences even show in the colors of one's aura, which go up and down the color spectrum as one 's thoughts change.

Understanding the "atomic theory" then, it is easy to follow how the physical universe came about through a "fall" or a lowering of the vibratory rate of the primordial energy. (All these subjects which are now only being touched upon generally will be gone into in depth later on.) In fact, if you wish to have Biblical support for this, read Genesis 1:3. The first creation was Light. This was not the light of day, for the sun was not yet in existence. This Light was the primordial energy from which the rest of the creation was made.

THE FALL

The physical Fall of Man is also pictorially described in Genesis as the "putting on of different coats of skin", but Man did not only fall physically, he also fell in consciousness. The destiny of Man, then, is to "return" to God on every level.

INVOCATION OF THE HOLY NAME

In striving for conscious attunement with God, you will find it especially beneficial to invoke His Name as well. Most of the time you will invoke the Name silently, but you may also invoke It softly at appropriate times. The Name we will use for the time being is IAO, and it is pronounced "EE-AH-OH"; this should be drawn out over several seconds: "EEEE-AHHH-OHHH". Other Holy Names may also be invoked and we will consider some of them later on.

In Greek, the work for "drawing near" is prosevki, which in the Bible, has been translated as prayer". The invocation of a Holy Name is indeed a prayer, both inward and outward, and without question a very effective means of drawing near to, and entering into union with God.

If you find yourself forgetting to dwell upon God and to call upon His Holy Name (and this is perfectly natural in the beginning, especially since you have spent many lifetimes not using this key), use a gimmick to remind you. Tie a piece of string around your finger or buy a special ring, the very sight of which will be a constant reminder to cast your thoughts on God and to act in a Godly way.

As the sun lights up the whole world upon its arising, in the same way, God, rising in your consciousness and in your heart, lights up your whole mind. Wake up in the morning thinking about God and invoking His Holy Name and go to sleep doing the same. Especially invoke Him by calling His Holy Name whenever you feel low, whenever you need inspiration, whenever you feel in any danger, whenever you feel threatened, whenever you see or hear about a sad situation.

Dwelling on the thought of God and invoking His Holy Name is to pray without ceasing. This is the Inner Way of which you will hear much more later.

A CAUTION

Now a few words of caution. Do not get the notion that acting in a Godly way means making yourself a doormat for other people to trample upon. Do not believe that being a Godly person or living a Godly life means to become a hermit or an anchorite, or a buffoon for others to take advantage of. Among the many things that God is, is justice. Learn how to discriminate justly and remember that self-preservation is the first law of life.

THE ROUTINE

You will begin right away to practice exercises "X" and #1, which you will find on the following pages. Add the two other exercises that go to make up The Mystic's Ladder when you come to them, and then, a little later, when you receive The Mystic's Menu, incorporate it in your routine as well. This is the road to mastery, and you are on it!

THE JOURNEY

Shortly we will be embarking on a journey of high adventure that is to take us across the sea to a strange land. We will have many experiences as we sojourn together towards the Mysterious Castle.

This Liber begins with two lectures given to two groups in two different parts of the world. These will form a nice beginning and a good base on which to build. The techniques we will share with you work, if you work them! Put into practice the principles which will be given you. Again we caution you, do not let your enthusiasm for the intellectual content of the lectures assume a greater importance than doing the practical work. For, it is not what you know, but what you are that matters.

We are speaking to you as an adult who can understand, we are speaking to you frankly. We do not wish to become nauseating by constantly repeating the same thing throughout the Libers, therefore we require that you reread this very First Charge every month because (1) It contains the Keys to Mastery, and (2) it will not be repeated again in the upcoming Libers.

This is great day in your life, my Brother. You have placed your feet upon a path which, if you follow it, will lead you to glory. O happy day! We greet you, we salute you, we embrace you. If you persist you will find that Door for which many have searched but only a few have found.

Sincerely yours in the Work,

Principal

Here are some questions by which you should test your understanding of the preceding material:

1. What is the ultimate destiny of Man?
2. What comprises "spiritual development"?
3. From what and to what is the evolutionary journey?
4. What is the first law of life?
5. Describe Exercise "X".
6. What is "The Mystic's Ladder"?
7. How many Libers comprise our course?
8. What is the real difference between people?
9. How would you define an "exercise"?
10. "It is not what we know, but rather what we are, that matters." Explain.

LIBER OVERVIEW

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

The remainder of this Liber follows the general outline which will characterize all the Libers of this Plane. Although each Liber has a unifying theme, there is still considerable diversity within that theme, so you will find a range of material to make your study more interesting.

Each Liber begins with one or more Lectures, which comprise the largest part of the formal teaching in the Liber. Please devote serious attention to the Lectures, re-reading them as necessary until you achieve familiarity with the material. Most Lectures contain one or more quizzes. These are to allow you to verify for yourself that you understand the material. If you can't answer the questions, you probably need to re-read the Lecture. This Liber has two introductory Lectures on "Beginning the Work".

Following the Lectures may be one or more Exercises. These are at least as important as the Lectures. Follow the instructions given with the Exercises. Practice them frequently. You are given two very important Exercises in Liber 1.

Next are one or more Essays. These give you more insight into application of the principles set forth in the Lectures. In Liber 1, we give you an Essay on self-discovery.

Lastly, Libers often contain Optional material. These documents are fruitful for study and contemplation, but may be of a more specialized interest than the rest of the Liber. Liber 1 includes an Optional article on the history of Martinism and the Martinist Order.

LECTURE
Beginning the Work (1)

Brethren:

Having been admitted recently to our Order, surely you have already asked yourself: "Where does the way, now being indicated to me, lead me?" Look around - a world of a confusing variety of things offers itself to you. Every day presents you with something new, and brings you both light and dark hours.

Modern man likes to say that he stands in the struggle for existence, that he must fight for his livelihood, and one often hears that the whole of life is only trouble, that one has no chance to think, that one must succumb to the whirl of happenings, and the course of events threatens to roll over people like a tidal wave. It also seems as if man today was only a piece of driftwood in the play of the waves of fate. More and more, man allows himself to be pulled into the haste and unconscious fear of a mechanism that gets itself increasingly involved, more and more, he lapses into an uncanny vortex of diversions and sensations which only lead him away from himself

Ask yourself: Do you really feel well in all this activity and in your present attitude towards the events around you? Are you really satisfied with your position in life? Are you sometimes faced with the fearsome questions: "Is this to be the crown and fulfillment of my life? A life in which I am propelled by the hustle and bustle and the circumstances of the average day? Where are the experiences which make me really happy and carry me in my life, which bring me light and fulfillment?"

All these are questions which show us with frightening clarity that there is an abyss in the life of many people which seems unbridgeable to the individual, a gap separating us from harmony, joy and fulfillment.

Is it true that this gap cannot be bridged? Should humans continue to be driven and finally swallowed entirely by a sucking whirlpool?

Sooner or later everybody encounters these questions and finds himself placed before a decision which will determine his future life.

It is so often said in the old traditions "And he began a new life." One hears of the hero or saint that from one day to another he gave away his goods and left his family. That from now on he fed only on greens and berries and avoided the company of his previous friends.

All that sounds beautiful and impressive, but would the great majority of us western people be able to go this way? We might create more unhappiness than good to ourselves and our contemporaries.

Our place has been allotted to us on this earth, not to flee this earth, but to stand up in the limits of this earth and fulfill the task allotted to us so that we come into harmony with ourselves, with our surroundings, and ultimately also with that which is higher.

We want to experience this life given to us fully, and consciously, and make real the possible experience. Only the realization of the possible, the experience, will give us inner satisfaction and joy. Only on the way to realization do we fulfill our human task.

The various "schools" and "communities" which are open to the seeker today like to boast of being the ones which indicate "the only true and correct way" and the teachings thus propagated are therefore not seldom unique in their absurdity.

There is only one truth, but there are many ways to it. We respect every genuine and honest search, but we do not want to forget that to go several different ways simultaneously makes no sense. We are a small circle of Initiates who guard and cultivate the spiritual values of an ancient Tradition without thinking in antiquated forms. Our task is in the Here and Now. We are not keen to become a mass organization and what we have inherited and achieved we wish to entrust only to sincere and worthy people.

We attempt to walk the path of greatest harmony. This means the extending of the arch of the royal hall above its pillars and crowning it with an endstone. Only out of the reconciliation and harmony of right and left, below and above, can man elevate himself to that which is higher.

Religion and science seem to drift further and further apart. At the outset, religion generally demands the unshakable belief in a spiritual fact, the truth of a religious tradition, briefly, it poses a dogma. Beyond that it requires the faithful to lead a good and pure life under certain prescriptions, that they do good.

Profane science is independent of such demands. It merely asks that one investigate things without prejudice to gain knowledge and understanding.

The alleged gap between science and religion also mirrors the conflict between rational thinking and inspiration. It is often said that they are opposites, and yet they ought to be our helpers walking hand in hand: reason as a control of inspiration where it threatens to fly away into vague distances; and inspiration as an impulse for new methods of rational investigation and research.

Unlike many a school or order, we seek to unite both ways in the spirit of the old Initiates. We investigate with the means of science as far as its facilities reach, but we are also not afraid of applying those traditions which are not, or not yet, in the grasp of orthodox methods.

We are not out to preach from a pulpit. We are a community of friends, of spiritual brethren who work in small circles for the precious things leading us to genuine experience.

Certainly, the younger ones will be instructed whenever it is necessary, by the more experienced brethren and the older ones will always assist the seeking ones on their way, but the essential thing: the work on oneself cannot be taken over by anyone else. The seeker is guided, but not carried. That is the rule in all Orders of Initiates. Anyone who walks the way indicated by us must himself be ready to work honestly and seriously, because only what a man accomplishes by his own work becomes real to him.

To facilitate your progress, we give you, in accordance with the old tradition, some instruction. These lectures, which in the past were passed on only from mouth to ear, are accessible in part today in the form of written lectures. The traditional arcana are, as before, communicated at the given time only orally.

After being accepted into our Order, you first receive a series of introductory information of different kinds. However, besides this, and simultaneously, the practical work must begin as well. This means the practice of meditation and certain 'exercises'.

You can call our work the labor at the rough stone. That means, we want to ennoble and refine the profane man who resembles an untrimmed stone… by the work with ourselves, until this rough stone becomes a well-shaped, clear and shining crystal. This is an old simile also used by the alchemists. Only if we grind away the roughness, only if we remove the impure from ourselves, only through unrelenting labor on ourselves, can we become a conscious vessel of the Greater Light.

A further simile may illustrate this work to you. You certainly know that two evenly tuned strings of a musical instrument vibrate simultaneously if one strikes or pulls only one string. Man can come into similar resonance with the transcendent being. But man must also, like the string, be able to vibrate freely. He must free himself from restrictive dogmatism, negative thinking, fear and hatred, ignorance and intolerance, to mention only a few obstacles. This is just as the string cannot have a pure tone if it is embedded in rubbish. Just as the string requires a certain tension to sound an even and right note, it is also necessary for man to be tuned for a corresponding affinity, to be tensed upwards to attain something higher.

You will now ask how this labor is to proceed. Certainly you have already found out for yourself that it is not sufficient just to read through whole libraries and store up a maximum amount of knowledge, although knowledge surely is required. You must know how the stone is to be shaped if you want to trim it, and the image of the perfected stone must, so to speak, stand before your eyes. But you also have to work on the stone itself

Studying truly has a formative influence unsuspected by many, but, in addition to studying, there must be something else to perfect the work. This something else consists of "exercises" and "practice in meditation" to which I have already called your attention. There are exercises in concentration, in silence and in identification which are necessary to transform knowledge into experience.

At this time I would like to clarify some concepts, because, just in the field of their own expert language, many groups have allowed themselves to become engulfed by a kind of Babylonian confusion of tongues!

What is the meaning of the word "esoteric"?

It is derived from the Greek eso (inside), as distinct from exo (outside), and is meant as a word of the mystery tradition to denote the internal teaching which is meant only for initiates. In a wider sense, it is the teaching of usages intended to show the still uninitiated the way to his true goal (telos in Greek) in order to introduce him on this way to his goal and also into the meaning and sense of life.

Humans are thus to learn from whence they came, why they are here, and what their destination is. If the word "esoteric" has been abused in the last hundred years or so by all kinds of pseudo-rosicrucians, spiritists, sectarian mystics and such like, for their vague aims, this must not confuse us. Such secretive spook, as often practised today, has little to do with genuine esotericism in our sense.

And now two other concepts: Initiation and Mysticism.

Initiation, derived from the Latin initium (beginning). It means introduction and inauguration. The seeker is equipped with teachings and impulses by the initiation which are to bring him on the new path. Initiation is work in the sense of a royal art, and as work it is an active factor. On the other side, the complex of mysticism is a passive attitude according to modern, predominately Christian usage of the word. It is, as the word says: a closing of the eyes, a looking inward, derived from the Greek word myein. Mysticism seeks the path of grace in opposition to the path of active approach. In the antique application of the word, "mysticism" also means "belonging to the mysteries" and thereby includes happenings of initiation. The relation of the word to its context thus requires attention.

A short while ago I also used the word "identification". This means to make equal, to put into agreement, to create a unity of being. By identification one can get into touch with a realm which, at first related to consciousness, lies outside the immediately human limitations. This realm belongs to a trans-human, transcendent sphere. We may call it, following Rudolph Otto: the realm of the numinous or the "numen". This whole complex again belongs to the realm of esotericism, the realm of the teachings and traditions about sense and purpose of life.

If a person puts itself into relation to the existence placed before it, extended into the superhuman, numinous realm: namely the realm of potential man, (Jurgen Rausch calls it to get into relation with the "whole"), this person will also inevitably feel a relation between the whole and itself. It is then possible to say that this person finds itself in the field of being. It no longer stands alone, it does no longer stand against the world, but it stands in its field. The starting point or viewpoint of conscious observation of the world and understanding the world has changed for this person. It is placed thereby in a conscious relationship with, and made intent upon a development inspiring and satisfying to itself. And in this is also the sense of initiation. Man is led to something by the initiation, directed to a target, namely: the possibility given to him. He is shown—not so, but so. This signifies the initiation of a process guiding man to really being man. In this we see our task.

It is clear that man cannot think of his redemption and reintegration as a solution, of his perfection as an end, but only as a beginning and start of something not to be determined by him in advance, but then determining everything.

There is a need for renewing and change, an augmentation of being and rebirth. Man must overcome himself and enter a phase of change. He must accomplish this change of which he cannot know the exact result in advance. This result is based on experience, it cannot be determined scientifically, it cannot be calculated or analyzed. It is an experience he may be able to sense but which he cannot know in advance. Here is something that we certainly can call the human adventure.

You have knocked at the door of the Order. Make it clear to yourself that you have now really undertaken an innermost venture because you step on a path which you do not know at all. There will be moments on this path in which you will ask much of yourself, in which courage is required of you. You will have to prove to yourself that you are more than an average citizen of the world and that your being admitted into this circle was justified.

It is essential that you give some regularity to your work, your studies, and your practicing. Remember that just in performing or participating in our various rituals you can benefit exceedingly and be lead to important realizations when they are carried out in full consciousness of their import and meaning.

Let us therefore start with the Work. Fit a time into your daily schedule for your Work and be careful to maintain it. If you start to skip, or begin to postpone your practices, you have already given up a part of your effort. It is one of the first (not easy, but nonetheless important) tests you must give yourself

You must occupy yourself intensively, without exception, and repeatedly, with the exercises given to you. They are all-important and directed to the Great Aim, even if this is not always clearly recognizable at the beginning. They also contain more than is obvious at first glance. Take them seriously.

Beginning the Work (2)

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

You should know at the outset that Martinism is another term for Christian Mysticism. It seeks to set Man once more on the Path to Re-integration and Re-generation. It has no other aims; it has no other objectives. Our Order and its activities will be of interest only to those persons who are capable of embracing and nurturing mystical ideas and principles of the most sublime kind. Many are called to its table of refreshment, but only those will be chosen to remain who have sufficiently advanced to be grateful for the spiritual fare offered.

Let me first say something about how Martinism came to be. Its fundamentals are those promulgated by Martinez Pasquales about the middle of the 18th century, but its name honors the pupil of Pasquales: Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin.

The fundamentals of the teachings of Pasquales were given orally to groups he organized and instructed. These were mainly made up of men who were Freemasons. Freemasonry was in a stage of transition at the time and the experience was somewhat confusing. There was a conflict between the older traditions of esotericism and the newer ideas of liberal fraternalism. Pasquales, Cagliostro and the Count Saint-Germain were casting their weight among Freemasons on the side of the genuine mysticism of the older tradition.

Had the teachings of Pasquales been fully accepted and developed, the whole character of France might have been different. As it was, Pasquales was called away from his work inopportunely, and there were none left among his successors capable of accomplishing the transmutation.

Jean Baptiste Willermoz and Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin continued to perpetuate the Work Pasquales had initiated but both of these had dissimilar views of what their teacher sought to accomplish; they therefore began to work in different spheres. Willermoz worked to compress the ideas of Pasquales to the pattern of Freemasonry and limit its activities entirely to men. Saint-Martin on the other hand grew disinterested in theurgic practices and felt drawn more to the mystical, or inner way, teaching both men and women whose spiritual readiness was apparent.

In 1890 the moving spirit among Martinists was Dr. Gerard Encausse, who is better known by the name Papus. To him largely, is due the credit for shaping the Order as we know it. Today, therefore, our Order owes as much to Papus as it does to either Pasquales or Saint-Martin. A comprehensive history of our Order will be given in due time.

We assemble, not alone to enjoy our mutual association, not alone to express mere thankfulness for such opportunities as life may afford us during this earthly span of our existence; but also to become craftsmen so that we may participate in what may rightly be termed a gigantic construction project.

That the Divine Architect of the Universe has conceived and executed a magnificent plan must be evident to all. As human beings, we are, each one of us, a segment of this plan. We fit into it some way; how: most of us are not quite sure. We know, however, that we cannot completely separate ourselves from it. This plan requires us to be agents of the Divine Architect and as His agents to be actively at work here on earth.

As Martinists, then, we are associated with each other for the purpose of discovering those truths which are fundamental to the Divine Plan and which may help us bridge the gap existing between science and religion.

In antiquity, science and religion were but separate aspects of the same study. Today, we find science and religion broken apart so completely that they seem not only independent of each other, but also in some respects hostile. They are like two great engineering concerns with the common task of constructing a bridge across a river. Both have construction crews and equipment on opposite banks, but they cannot agree on the principles of construction and the method of procedure. They occupy themselves futilely and to no purpose in argument, leaving the river unbridged with no possibility of routing traffic across it.

Science has made only feeble attempts in comparison to what it should have done to restore man to his rightful place in nature. Relatively, it has just begun to reduce a portion of the great Architect's plan to a form which man can understand and use in daily life. It concerns itself only with certain aspects of the Divine Architect's plan. The immaterial aspects, those qualities that are commonly referred to as 'spiritual' or 'psychic' are casually dealt with, or not at all. First Causes, or what are generally known as metaphysical propositions, such as, "Why are we here?" and "What are the ends which man should attain in life?" are held not to be within its scope.

Religion, on the other hand, in its declarations, dogmas, rites and practices, has often held it to be beneath the dignity of its traditions to make inquiry into Divine Causes. This leaves man in a position where he is obliged to have blind faith in many matters, or to accept only those things which materialistically inclined science is capable of demonstrating.

It is plain, therefore, that our duty is to become the middle builders. First, we must prepare ourselves here in our Lodge for the Great Work we are to undertake. Before we can really attain any worthwhile objective, we must train ourselves thoroughly. We must become familiar with the tools we shall need to use. We must become skilled craftsmen. We must make no blunders. The 'trial and error' system is one we cannot countenance. Before we begin any procedure, it must have a probability of fulfillment. It must appear plausible by certain tried rules of understanding. Furthermore, we are not going to discard any useful fact, idea, or object of knowledge simply because it did not originate with us. Whatever has been found applicable to situations at hand, we shall use.

Those who seek admission into our Order are known as "Supplicants" and as such are brought by a responsible Brother or Sister to face an interrogation by a representative or a committee of the Order. When asked questions based upon the traditional requirements of effective membership, we may well wonder what the purpose of this interrogation really is. The first Degree of our Venerable Order is designed to clear the ground for building, or perhaps rebuilding, our symbolic temple. So, before the Lodge M:: places a supplicant's name before the membership for ballot, they must look for signs that the supplicant displays a dedicated purpose. It will likewise be well for all to review those questions before seeking the test of the Second Degree, which completes the pronaos, or introduction, of Martinism.

Each Initiate must find within himself the confirmation of the rightness of Spiritual Truths and must not fancy that the exoteric writings of any person can become an infallible guide to truth. This is true even of the writings of those whom we honor as Venerable M::: of our Order. What they wrote for public eyes is neither the whole nor the best of Martinism. True Martinism is to be found only in our Lodges, in our rituals and ceremonies.

Esoteric Orders with the Keys of Initiation make full use of symbols.

Much profound and useful knowledge is expressed in the form of symbols. Since symbols will become our working tools, it behooves us to begin our training by a study of some of them.

Just what is a symbol? A symbol is a sign by which something is known. We find in general two types of symbols: The first we call natural symbols; the second artificial symbols. Natural symbols give evidence of things which exist in nature. That is, they are not merely in the mind, existing as a concept or an idea. They have an actual connection with one another in nature, wholly apart from man and his mind. For instance: smoke may be said to be a symbol or sign of fire since it always exists where fire is or has been. Constant association of the two has made one a symbol for the other.

The other type of symbol, as I have said, is artificial, and artificial symbols are created by man by social agreement, that is, by a group of people who agree on the meaning proposed. Whereas natural signs can only exist under the conditions which produce them, artificial signs can be used whenever required. Examples of artificial signs are languages and alphabets, traffic signs, etc.

There is yet a third type: mystical symbols. These can be taken from Natural symbols, Artificial symbols or a combination of both.

How is this combination accomplished? In this way: Inquiring minds look out upon nature. They study and observe. These inquiring minds learn that, when certain things happen time after time, the same conditions prevail with each happening. These uniform conditions of manifestation and action man has called Law. Laws, therefore, are irrevocable truths. As far as the consciousness of man is concerned they are immutable.

Let us examine a few mystical symbols which early man knew and which mean the same today as they did then. Avery old symbol is that of the simple dot, or period. In itself, a dot may be said to be amorphous (shapeless). It is vague and carries no idea of definite form. Anything looked at from a distance becomes such an indistinct dot. It might be a ship at sea or a camel in the desert; but to the eye, it is vague and formless. As it draws nearer, the dot grows until we perceive it as an identifiable object. So, to the ancients, the dot suggested potentiality, the formless condition out of which something could become. In other words: that out of which things could take form. Accordingly, to them, the dot was a mystical symbol meaning beginning.

The circle is yet another meaningful symbol. One has only to attempt to visualize something without beginning or end to discover that the circle is the only perfect way to represent it. A straight line could never carry such an abstract conception, for however far extended, a straight line would still have a beginning and an end. Mystically (and logically) therefore, only a circle can serve as a symbol of that which has neither beginning nor end.

These are but a few examples of mystical symbols but you may easily find a multitude of others, for the mystic has always made use of them. Another very important symbol and one we will make considerable use of in our Work is called The Tree of Life. Oftentimes, some symbols are so complex that their intended meaning becomes obscure. In such cases, look first for the simple fundamentals of which the symbol is made, and then, from the understanding of the simple elements, proceed to that of the more complex. Another example of composite symbols is the set of Tarot cards. A study of the symbolism and meaning of these cards will be very fruitful. Perhaps at this time I may be permitted to draw the attention of Brethren to our Martinist Pentacle, this will provide a rich source for contemplation until such time as the full explanation can be unfolded.

Symbolism will be more easily understood when we ourselves become careful observers of nature and her methods of operation. The first acquisition of the Martinist must be Self-Knowledge. As we learn to read the Book of Nature, and later the Book of Man, we have the experience ourselves of discovering laws which become symbolized by our own observation and reflection. We shall find that we then begin to acquire the necessary working tools with which to deal understandingly with life. At the very outset then: start to become more observant and begin to pay attention to the signs that are all around you.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

Retrospection

1) On retiring, before falling asleep, go over in retrospect the events of the day. Begin always with the events just before retiring and work back toward the beginning of the day.

2) As you consider each event, weigh it carefully, judge yourself, your attitude at the time the event occurred and at the time you are concentrating upon it.

3) Decide the right or wrong of your position and if you find yourself to have been wrong, make it your imperative duty on the following day, to rectify that wrong so far as it lies in your power to do so.

4) By so doing you will in large measure assimilate the experience it is the purpose of your present incarnation to acquire, and further, you will prevent the accumulation of Karma which might require another incarnation to discharge.

After you have reviewed your day's activities and perhaps devoted some thoughts to your plans for the next day, dismiss everything that might still tie you to the past day and all worries burdening you. Turn your last thoughts to the things really giving you inner joy. If you wish, read a few lines or verses of poetry or scripture. The last thought should always tend towards a greater harmony, a higher attunement.

It sounds quite easy to do this but you will often find that you have entirely neglected this exercise one evening or another. Or you will try, so to speak, to file away at night all disagreeable and unpleasant thoughts, but just then they will return for a stronger attack and torture you. Simply imagine the thoughts as servants who have been dismissed for the night and turn to more enjoyable thoughts, which may then be dismissed as well. This little way round may prove to be the simpler way.

EXERCISE "X"
The Practice of the Presence of God

How is the return to God to be done? The first step is to strive after the acquisition of God Consciousness by attuning with and aligning our consciousness with God's through "Exercise X", The Practice of the Presence of God, which is:

- Constantly dwelling on the thought of God.
- Constantly dwelling on what you consider God to be.
- Constantly dwelling on the attributes of God: beauty, purity, love,
- Constantly striving to manifest in your life these attributes and all that you understand "God qualities" to be.

SPIRITUALITY MUST BE MANIFESTED

It is not what we know, but rather what we are that matters. Spirituality, if it is to be of any value at all, must be manifested on the physical plane. The characteristics we attribute to God (dignity, nobility, loftiness of character, moral excellence, honesty, integrity, charity, uprightness, grace, etc.) must be incorporated in your life. You must become them. These are the qualities that must become actualized and manifested in you. These God-qualities must be made evident in your attitude and in your relations with others. They must be evident in your speech, in the way you express yourself; in your actions, in your opinions, in your manner. This "exercise", as you can see, cannot therefore be a five minute routine to be thought about first thing in the morning, like brushing your teeth, and then forgotten until the following day. This "exercise" must become a way of life for you, a principle to live by, a habit.

ESSAY
Self-discovery

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

In our world today, so many people seem empty. Many do not know what they want or even what they feel. One may talk fluently about what he should want to complete an education, to get a job, to be involved in the affairs of the day, to go to church, or to make something out of his life, but this is usually a response to the prodding of others. It is what his parents, teachers, employers, or friends expect out of his, rather than what he himself wants. As one person put it, "I am just a collection of mirrors, reflecting what everyone else expects of me."

The psychological reason for emptiness is the feeling of powerlessness to do anything effective about one's life or the world one lives in. But, a quest into new insights, as you are now undertaking, leads us to the Truth that man does have within him the capacity for self-mastery.

The launching of this kind of inquiry is disturbing to settled opinions and attitudes. But the most important thing in all of life is a true consciousness of self.

You have no doubt seen the technique used in advertising in which a well known personality takes on various wardrobes and expressions and make-ups to change his appearance and attract attention. Oddly enough, this is quite true in real life as well. We all take on many different selves in one day, to our family, our friends, our employers, etc. The real question is, which one of these is really you? Are you the person you show the world to be? As a person, ask yourself, "Who am I?" and "What is the potential of my life?"

Maybe the only definition of what a man is, is that a man is what he can be. What is an acorn? It is an oak tree. What is an egg? It is a bird. What is a caterpillar? Why, it's a butterfly. What is man? It is an expression of God. Man is Christ, the son of the living God. This is what he can be, and this is what he ultimately must be.

Obviously, we don't readily see this divine potential in the bodies or the affairs of men. it's difficult to find our true self because we're confronted with so many shadow truths, such as: "That man is a criminal," or "It's a fact that everybody grows old and dies." Shadow truths such as these obscure reality.

The problem is that we try to live in the circumference of being, in the perimeter of senses, and thus we lose sight of the deep, inner, divine center around which all other things revolve. We are constantly attempting to understand ourselves and others in terns of worldly relationships and creature comforts.

We are, in addition, habitual escapists, though we have no idea what we are flying to escape from or to. We spend money, time, and effort in seeking ways to avoid life's less desirable experiences. When it's hot we escape to the seashore. In winter's cold, northerners try to get south. When boredom sets in, we seek diversion through entertainment or social functions. Many are running from emotional bondage and turn to alcohol, overeating, or drug addiction.

The sad thing is that if you try to help the chronic escapist to understand these insights, his remark will be something like, "Oh, you're a complete idealist, always trying to escape from the realities of life." Here is a great paradox. The person who has found the answer to life, who has touched life at a deep dimension, has achieved this not by escaping from reality, but by coming to reality.

Sometime, at the close of the day, take a good look at yourself in the mirror. Ask yourself, "Who am I?" The person you see in the mirror, except for your head, is mostly garments which conceal the real you. When you disrobe for bed, you see only the physical body, a maze of intricate mechanisms concealed by the skin. But, let a surgeon or physiologist search as he will, he will never find the real you. Parts of the body can be removed, but you are still you! The body is yours, but your body is not you!

As a child, you may have prayed, "Now I lay me down to sleep." Who is the "I" who lays "Me" down to sleep? Jesus called that "I" the Father within. Paul called it the Christ. Other teachers call it "the Self", "the Monad", "the Âme" , "the Ego", Yechidah", etc. (These are all names for the Highest or Innermost part of yourself).

What people call "I" is only that which removes the garments of me-ness. Even Jesus had to contend with me-ness: "Why callest thou me good? None is good save God."

Every one of us is a perfectly, divinely created child of God, wonderfully endowed. John infers that the me of personality must decrease so that the I may increase. This is the great need of life: the journey of self-discovery. If we are to succeed in life, above the limitations of sense and time and trouble, we must come to a larger and more complete understanding of what we are. No man can know his capacities, his potential, until he knows what he is; then he opens up a whole new dimension of life.

Self discovery is the most essential thing in the world. What good is it if we split the atom or journey to the moon if we have no true understanding of what we are? Jesus asks, "What doth it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his soul?"

Self discovery consists of getting back of the body, back of the mind which forms the body, back to the divine reality. When Jesus said, "I and my Father. are one," people didn't understand him and thought he was uttering blasphemy. But what Jesus proclaimed is true of you and me. The true self of us is one with the Father. It is the Father. It never knows sickness, fear, or failure. It is serene with the serenity of the great Universal Self, not about to be touched, as the ancients would say, by fire or flood. It is that center of man's being which is ever the same, yesterday as today, and even forevermore.

When we find the self, we find God, for self is but a dimension of God. Herein lies the explanation of Jesus' words, "And in that day, ye shall know beyond a shadow of a doubt, that I as in the Father and the Father is in me." You can really never be separated from your God or from your good. This is a great truth to know, because with it, you can escape to reality. In moments of anxiety or despair or fear or worry, it will be the grand safeguard and defender. You will come to know that the real you cannot be sick or poor or unjustly treated, you will know that you can never come to the end of your rope or be inadequate. Remember, though, that to "know thyself" does not lessen one's vigorous pursuit of knowledge. It is not an escape. Self-knowledge would never have interfered with space pioneers, nor would it interfere with any legitimate pursuit of business or finance or the arts. Self-knowledge is no Pollyanna approach, it is no happy idealism. Self-knowledge adds zest to inquiry. It adds strength and enthusiasm to discovery; effectiveness and true success to life.

Some will say that this kind of self-knowledge will take you out of the world of common affairs and make you an impractical visionary. But consider this: it doesn't make your automobile less useful for you to know that it has a full tank of gas, or an efficient motor. It will certainly not, then, make a person less effective in the world if he is capable of contemplating his reality, his inner divinity, and to lay hold of tremendous inner resources. On the contrary, self-knowledge helps you to become a real person for the first time. In the absence of self-knowledge. man concludes that sickness is as natural as health, that poverty and harmfulness are a part of life. And how persistently have we argued for the necessity of death even though Jesus said, "If a man believe in me (in the Christ in himself) he shall never see death." If you hold to this truth, you will never see failure. If you come to the end of something, you will always find the means to keep on, to press on. to do more and have more and be more. This is the great reward that comes along the way of the search for the self.

OPTIONAL MATERIAL
A Short History Of Martinism And The Martinist Orders

First of all, What is Martinism?

"ANCIENT" MARTINISM

Martinism is a system of philosophic thought, essentially Christian in outlook and tradition, which is chiefly based on the doctrinal tenets of a work called: Treatise on the Re-Integration of Beings in their Original Virtues. Powers and Qualities, by a Frenchman of Spanish extraction named Martinez Pasquales. This work gives a particular interpretation of Creation, of the Hierarchy of Beings, the Fall of Man and of the way for Man to regain his original status in the scheme of things, so as to be re-established in his initial privileges. Martinez Pasquales considers Man to be in exile in this earthly existence, deprived of his real powers.

Man's main aim must be, therefore, to work at becoming restored to the condition that was his originally. This he can achieve by following a certain technique which constitutes the secret part of Martinez' doctrine. This technique was taught by him in the Temples of a secret society founded by him: the Order of Elus-Cohen, or Elect Priests, from the ranks of high-degree freemasons. Two members of this Order were to play an important part in the development of Martinism: Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin and Jean-Baptiste Willermoz.

Saint-Martin in particular was to create a modified version of Martinism of a more contemplative character than that of Pasquales, whose secretary he was for a time. Saint-Martin was for many years an ardent Elus-Cohen. However he gradually moved away from the technique used by his Brothers to achieve their re-integration, a technique which involved certain theurgic practices (ceremonial magic.) His personal preferences turned to a search for a more spiritual means to achieve the same result. He thus developed what is known in Martinist terminology as the "Inner Way" of Reintegration. Eventually, Saint-Martin left the Elus-Cohen to follow his own path. He came under other influences. Progressively, he became a teacher, having followers or disciples to whom, he taught the "Inner Way." While an active Elus-Cohen, he had published several works under the pen-name of the "Unknown Philosopher." A loose organization built itself around him, formed of people who had received a special Initiation from him. After his death, his disciples carried on the transmission of this Initiation, on a person-to-person basis.

Jean-Baptiste Willermoz was a keen freemason. He became the leader of the Elus-Cohen of Lyons. At the death of Martinez Pasquales, the Order of Elus-Cohen slowly began to disintegrate. Sensing this, Willermoz decided to save what he could of the Martinist Tradition by incorporating it in the more viable freemasonic fraternity. He was instrumental in the reformation of French Templar Masonry, an off-shoot of the German "Order of Strict Observance". This reformed rite of masonry took the name "Ordre des Chevaliers Bienfaisants de La Cite Sainte" (Order of Knights, Beneficient, of the Holy City,) generally known in short as "C∴ B∴ C∴ S∴". Willermoz received authority to introduce two secret degrees, summarizing the teachings of Martinez into the Order. The French Revolution was to thwart him. The "Knights Beneficient" have survived to this day in the Scottish Rectified Rite of France and Switzerland and in the Martinist Grand Priory and Priories. Meanwhile, the Temples of the Elus-Cohen had fallen into inactivity although small groups continued to operate privately.

We thus come to the end of what we could call "Ancient" Martinism. The similarity of names between Martinez and Saint-Martin has led to much confusion as to whose followers were, and still are Martinists. The answer is quite simple: both. Their respective followers share the same doctrinal concept, the Divine Glory of Man's Origins, and the same aim: to regain that glorious Divinity. Only their methods differ, some following the technique of evocations, the others that of inner Guidance and illumination (The Inner Way.)

MODERN MARTINISM

We may consider that Modern Martinism dates from the creation of the Martinist Order in its present form by Papus, shortly before 1890. We said that Saint-Martin's followers were loosely grouped in a flexible organization and carded on the transmission of the Initiation which descended through Saint-Martin. This organization was known under different names but more generally as the "Societe des Inities.'

Now, among many others, Saint-Martin had Initiated the Abbé de Lanoue and Chaptal, Comte de Chanteloup. These two Brothers in turn transmitted the Initiation, creating two lines of Initiatic Succession leading, one to Dr. Gerard Encausse, (Papus), and the other to P. Augustin Chaboseau. These two Brothers were in the habit of lunching with friends in Paris and, in the course of discussions they discovered each other as Initiates of Saint-Martin. Papus then decided to create an organization which would group the Initiates of Saint-Martin and promote the study of Martinist philosophy. For reasons which we shall study later, Papus and Augustin Chaboseau exchanged their Initiations. Papus then proceeded with Initiating the future members of the organization he had in mind. In 1884, the Constitution of that organization was drafted and it was given the name "Ordre Martiniste". By 1890, the work of establishing the Order was so well advanced that it was decided to give it a ruling body of twelve members, to be known as the Supreme Council. Papus, as Grand Master of the Order, was President of this Supreme Council. In 1893, the Ordre Martiniste received the archives and records of Willermoz and the Cohen Temple of Lyons.

Under Papus' lead, the Martinist Order spread rapidly in France and in other countries, even in Russia where a Martinist Lodge operated at the Court of the Czar Nicholas II. By 1916, when Papus died, there were 160 active Lodges in existence. During the lifetime of Papus, other Martinist lines of succession had been claimed. Thus, in the United States, Dr. Edward Blitz claimed descent from the Elus-Cohen and contacted Papus. He was appointed head of the Martinist Order for the United States, until his Charter was withdrawn because he was altering the spirit of the Order. He was replaced by Sister Margaret B. Peeke, who was appointed "Inspectrice Generale" for the U.S.A. She died in 1908.

Papus died in 1916 and with the absence of his enlightened guidance. the Martinist Order was soon to become divided. Papus was succeeded by Bro::: Charles Detre, better known as Teder Because of the war, the activity of the Order was somewhat curtailed. Teder was assisted by Bro::: Victor Blanchard, Deputy Grand-Master. Teder was a keen freemason of the Memphis-Mizraim Rites. Under his Grand-Mastership the Order began to acquire a Masonic outlook. Teder died in 1918, leaving Bro::: Blanchard as Grand-Master designate. Because of the Masonic tendencies of which he disapproved, Bro::: Blanchard declined the Grand-Mastership and Bro::: Jean Bricaud was duly appointed to office. Bro::: Bricaud considered that the Martinist Order would gain in stability by being organized on a Masonic basis. He altered the Constitutions of the Order and decided to admit as Martinists only Masons of the Third Degree (Master Mason) of any Rite. The headquarters of the Order were transferred to Lyons.

This departure from the original Constitution was not accepted by all Martinists, particularly as the Masonic requirement kept the Sisters out of the Order. Those who did not approve of Bricaud's directions carried on with the work in the spirit of the original constitution, acting as "Free Initiators." They remained unorganized for a time but eventually Bro::: Victor Blanchard, Deputy Grand Master under Teder, decided to gather all those Martinists who adhered to the original Constitution into a new organization which would not impose the Masonic prerequisite for membership. He became the Grand Master of this branch of the Martinist Order, sometimes referred to as the "free" branch, as distinct from the "masonic" branch.

In 1934, an International Convention of Martinists was held at Brussels. Bro. Blanchard was unanimously elected Universal Sovereign Grand Master and it was decided the Order would be known as the "Ordre Martiniste et Synarchique" to distinguish it from the Masonic "Ordre Martiniste" whose headquarters were in Lyons. In 1934 also, a federation of esoteric societies was created under the name of the F.U.D.O.S.I.. Bro. Blanchard was one of the first three Heads or "Imperators" of that organization.

Unfortunately, there arose a conflict of personalities; some Martinists, of which Augustin Chaboseau was one, did not want to support Bro. Blanchard. They formed yet another Order, the

"Ordre Martiniste Traditionnel" of which Bro. V. E. Micholet was first Grand Master. He was succeeded by Bro. Augustin Chaboseau. Bro. Chaboseau was also to succeed Bro. Blanchard as Imperator in the F.U.D.O.S.I. when the latter withdrew. The situation was to remain unchanged until the Second World War. There were now, to sum up, three branches of the Martinist Order:

1) The "Ordre Martiniste ", headed by Bro. Chevillion who succeeded Bro. Bricaud in 1934. This branch admitted Master Masons only and became generally known as "Ordre Martiniste de Lyon" because its headquarters were in Lyons.

2) The "Ordre Martiniste et Synarchique", headed by Bro. Victor Blanchard, of Paris, not very numerous in France, but well established in Switzerland.

3) The "Ordre Martin iste Traditionnel", headed by Bro. Augustin Chaboseau, well established in France.

During the war, the Nazis persecuted Masonic and similar organizations. Bro. Chevillon, Sovereign Grand Master of the "Ordre Martiniste de Lyon" was assassinated in 1944. When the war ended, he was succeeded by Bro. Henri Dupont. With the return of peace, the Martinist Orders once again sprang into activity. In 1946, Augustin Chaboseau, Grand Master of the "Ordre Martiniste Traditionnel", died. The Grand Master designate, Jean Chaboseau, Augustin's son, was not confirmed in his appointment by the Supreme Council of that Order. Controversy arose and many members resigned from the Supreme Council of the "Ordre Martiniste Traditionnel". Jean Chaboseau then pronounced the dissolution of this Order and withdrew from Martinism in 1947. Some members tried to hold the Order together and the Grand Mastership was held in abeyance by an interim committee of the F.U.D.O.S.I. called the "Regency Council". The Order had disintegrated however and when the F.U.D.O.S.I. dissolved itself in 1951, its interim committee disappeared and with it the Orcfre Martiniste Traditionnel, with its Supreme Council, ceased to exist. There was left, however, a branch in the U.S.A. where Bro. Lewis had been appointed Regional Grand Master for "California and the United States of America" (sic). This branch has survived and functions under the wing of a California rosicrucian correspondence school. Unfortunately, it resorts to practices such as "postal initiation" which is repugnant to tradition and which practice impairs the regularity of its membership in the eyes of Martinists everywhere, who have shut it out.

In 1948, Bro. Jules Boucher, one of the members of Augustin Chaboseau's Supreme Council attempted to gather surviving members of the Ordre Martiniste Traditionnel in another Order, which he called "Ordre Martiniste Rectifie". His success was limited and when he died in 1955, he was not succeeded as Grand Master of that Order.

With the disappearance of the Ordre Martiniste Traditionnel and the limited success of the Ordre Martiniste Rectifie, there were a large number of unattached Martinists in France. It is then that Dr. Philipe Encausse, the son of Papus, decided to revive the "Ordre Martiniste" according to the constitution of Papus. In 1951, this Order became officially active with a Supreme Council headed by Bro. Phillipe Encausse as Sovereign Grand Master. Its development continues to progress well and it is at present (1985) the largest of the Martinist Orders in existence. Bro. Phillipe Encausse died in 1984 and the Order is presently headed by Bro. Emilo Lorenzo.

On March 14th, 1953, Bro. Victor Blanchard, Sovereign Universal Grand Master of the Ordre Martiniste et Synarchique died in Paris, aged 75. He was succeeded by Sâr Alkmaion (Dr. Edward Bertholet) of Switzerland. It was from him that the present Grand Master of the Britannic Grand Lodge (Grand Lodge of England), received his Charter as Sovereign Delegate General for Britain and the Commonwealth.

In 1985, Bro. Henri Dupont, Sovereign Grand Master of the "Ordre Martiniste de Lyon"; Bro. Phillipe Encausse, Sovereign Grand Master of the "Ordre Martiniste"; and Bro. Robert Ambelain, Sovereign Grand Master of the "Ordre Martiniste des Elus-Cohen," a Martinist organization of a slightly different nature perpetuating the Elu-Cohen tradition through a line descended from Willermoz via the "Knights Beneficient of the Holy City" (C ^ B ^ C ^ S ^), formed a federation called the "Union des Ordres Martinistes" with its See in Paris. France. The purpose of this Federation was to reunite the various branches of the Martinist Order which have remained faithful to Tradition into a flexible organization that leaves their entire freedom of operation to the member-Orders, while forging ever stronger links between them. Upon the creation of this Federation, the "Ordre Martiniste de Lyon" changed its name to "Ordre Martiniste-Martineziste."

In September 1959, the Britannic Grand Lodge of the Ordre Martiniste et Synarchique established fraternal relations with the Union des Ordres Martinistes and some 12 months later it officially joined the Federation. While retaining its autonomy of operation, the Britannic Grand Lodge entered into full communion with the other Orders of the "Union" which it officially represents in the territories of Great Britain and the Commonwealth.

In the night of lst/2nd October, 1960, Bro. Henri Dupont, Sovereign Grand Master of the Ordre Martiniste-Martineziste (formerly Ordre Martiniste de Lyon), passed away. He had previously taken steps to leave his succession to Bro. Phillipe Encausse. Two Martinist Orders were thus placed under the common Sovereign Grand Mastership of Bro. Encausse and a further step was taken on the way to Martinist Unity.

On the 6th October 1960, Sâr Gulion, Grand Master of the Britannic Grand Lodge was Ordained by Bro. Robert Ambelain into the Ordre Martiniste des Elu-Cohen to the Degrees of:

Grand-Master Cohen, Ap:: Réau +
Chevalier d'Orient, C:: Réau +
Commandeur d'Orient, M:: Réau +

On 30th November 1960 Sär Gulion was made Delegate General of the Elus-Cohen for Great Britain.

In September 1982, a Brother, journeying from Barbados, West Indies, was received in London and on the 8th day of that month was Initiated into the Martinist Order by Sär Gulion and ordained as an Unknown Philosopher. This Brother, Sâr Inspirator Lucis, was given a patent empowering him "to found and rule and control, on the Isle of Barbados in the West Indies, Lodges and Heptads of the Martinist Order that have been regularly authorized and warranted by the Sovereign Tribunal of the Britannic Grand Lodge." On the 12th day of November, 1982, Lodge Empress was inaugurated in Barbados and thus the Light reached the English-speaking West Indies.

Returning to London in September 1985, Sär Inspirator Lucis was again received by Sflr Gulion who conferred upon him the Ordinations of the Elu-Cohen which he had himself received. To mark this occasion Sär Inspirator Lucis changed his Nomen Mysticum to Sâr Savitar, on September 25th 1985. At this time discussions were held about the erection of the present Provincial Lodge of Barbados to the status of Sovereign Grand Lodge. This date has been fixed for Easter, 1986.

A more detailed history of the Order will be given in serial form later. Such is the position this 26th day of October, 1985.

What it is . . .

ICES is a non—profit organization operated by volunteer workers.
ICES is a COLLEGE, NOT a Usecret Order".

ICES is a source distributing lectures from the traditional initiatic stream. Many of these lectures were originally in a foreign language and required translation into English. Many of the lectures were once the knowledge—papers given in the particular fraternities. Many of the fraternities are now defunct thanks to the consequences of World War II. Most of the lectures ICES distributes are no longer available from their original source.

ICES has no teachings of its own, it is not the author of the material it circulates. It is simply doing a service for the Light. As an organization, at. the head level it has no opinion of its own, it is absolutely impartial and has no favourites. At the membership level, individual members are free to accept or reject any of the ideas expressed in the lectures.

ICES is pleased to share its heritage of esoteric teachings with all sincere aspirants who hunger and thirst for spiritual enlightenment, who seek to live a life of purpose, happiness, meaning and success.

Each lecture in each Liber carries an identification indicating its origin.

ICES first started as the ICOM, which, at the time, was established to disseminate Martinist teachings. Later it broadened its curriculum to include material from Alchemy, Freemasonry, Gnosticism, the Grail, the Hermetica, the Kabala, the Rosicrucian's, etc. (It was because of this expansion that the name was changed from International College of Martinist Studies to International College of Esoteric Studies, to more accurately identify itself.)

ICES is an independent and sovereign organization. It is not "sponsored" by another organization. ICES exists and operates on the dues and donations given by members. (Notice the emphasis on the latter.)

From where did ICES get the lectures it disseminates? Some were given by a European Grand Master, some came from a Gnostic Bishop, some from a certain Imperator, some from a source which shall remain nameless, and some from particular esoteric fraternities who have given their material for distribution.

When ICES began to operate in 1985 the majority of members came from the ranks of "no previous esoteric study". Since 1988 about 93% of the

OVERVIEW

In this Liber we begin the study of the important concept of Symbolism. You will need to have a good grasp of Symbolism - of numbers, words, and diagrams - to appreciate the riches of much esoteric writing. Three Lectures will introduce you to Symbolism of Numbers. An important Exercise, Single Awareness, will help you raise your consciousness. Then you will find two Essays you will certainly find helpful. Lastly is Part 1 of an Optional article on "The Ancient Mysteries and Secret Societies" (to be concluded in Liber 3).

By the way, don't forget to review the First Charge in Liber 1!

LECTURE
The Symbolism of Numbers (1)

My Brothers and Sisters:

There are many systems of counting, apart from the universal one based on nine distinct numerals and a cipher (zero). Some primitive peoples cannot write more than two symbols for numbers and must repeat these in a rather complicated manner in signifying even small quantities. Our own system which developed among Arabian philosophers under the name of "algebra" (from Al Jebr, meaning the resetting of things which have been separated) is known as the Base 10 System and probably owes its origin to the ten digits of our hands.

Before we consider the 10 Emanations of Omneity numerologically, we must understand the Martinist teaching of theosophic reduction and theosophic addition. This is rather like a fascinating game!

Please write down the figures 1, 4 and 7. You have a number which is called one hundred and forty-seven. Theosophic reduction is an operation that reduces a number made up of more than one numeral, to a single digit. To do it we add together the numerals of the number: 1 + 4 + 7 = 12 and 1 + 2 = 3, so the theosophic reduction of 147 = 3. Does everybody understand? Let us try again with the number 2350: 2 + 3 + 5 + 0 = 10, which in turn reduces to 1. So the theosophic reduction of 2350 = 1. Theosophic reduction is a very simple exercise, perhaps you have met it already.

If you have, you have probably noticed that the addition of nines can never alter the ultimate answer when reduced to a single figure. It is almost as if 9 is a non-entity. Let us have an example: We will take the number 13. This reduces to 4. Now let us take the number 139. This adds to 13 which reduces again to 4, so we see the addition of the 9 did not affect the end result. Write down these numbers: 9 + 81 + 126 + 7. Straightaway we can reduce this to 7 because 81 and 126 both add to 9 and as we have noticed, nines do not alter the end result

While on the subject of the number 9 you will notice also that any number multiplied by 9, when reduced, returns to 9. Try it!

The other operation which Martinists use in numerology is theosophic addition. This process is applied to only one number at a time and it should be mentioned that the theosophic addition of a number is not always reduced to one digit. Theosophic addition is done by adding all the numbers below the selected number to the selected number itself. For example, if we wished to have the theosophic addition of the number 4, we would proceed by adding all the numbers from 4 down to 1, thus: 4 + 3 + 2 + 1 = 10. The theosophic addition of 8 would be 8 + 7 + 6 + 5 + 4 + 3 + 2 + 1 = 36. Is this clear? Let us notice, remembering the number 9, that when theosophically added, 9 = 45 and this reduces to 9... thus we can see how 9 returns to itself. This will be significant when you learn to analyze the manifested world outside yourself and learn to read the Book of Nature.

Our Venerated Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin was a keen student of Numbers as you will discover if you read Theosophic Correspondence a book of letters written between him and Baron Von Liebistorf of Switzerland during the years of the French Revolution. We recommend this book to all our members as a good background study of our Ven. M

In an earlier conventicle we learned about the Mystical Alphabet of symbols, which is an outward reflection of mankind's interior knowledge. By now, you, as a young member of our Order, should be forming, your own conception of how your mind works in order to express truths which are universal, and so, rooted in the Divine Nature of our First Estate. We endeavor to express these inner unconscious urges in terms of ideas collected from the external world, as perceived by one or more of our five physical senses.

This brings us to the Martinist Doctrines of Divine Emanations.

The innermost, or, if you prefer it, the highest sphere of Being is known as Omneity, the Perfect Totality of Existence. Since all forms of life unite in this changeless, unmanifested point, which has no beginning because it is timeless, and no position because it is everywhere, it then contains no separate parts which would of necessity be relatively less than perfect.

It also follows, that we, as apparently separate persons, can have no consciousness of such a state.

> Without separate consciousness there can be no differences.
> Without differences or contrasts there is no choice.
> Without choice, no Will can be exerted.

To study the so-called Fall of Man from Perfect Unity into a lesser Divine state of diversity, we make use of symbols which are common to all Orders of Initiation, namely: numbers. This measure of common ground with other esoteric Fraternities was foreshadowed at an earlier conventicle. In clearing the ground for the successful sowing of Spiritual seed, and the correct building of the Spiritual Temple, let us remember that Omneity is not just represented by the number One, for Omneity is both immanent and transcendent. It (or God, if you prefer) is both above manifestation and within it.

One is the Martinist's abstract symbol for Omneity — which is not a separate One because it is All, and yet it is not conditioned or limited to All Manifestation because it remains also Above and Beyond All.

This is the first metaphysical point which our Order presents to those who seek the Divine Gnosis or Spiritual illumination.

(THERE IS A GREAT DEAL HERE FOR STUDY AND MEDITATION. DO NOT PASS OVER THIS WITH SCANT REGARD.)

Having commenced our search by recognizing that there is a Source which cannot be consciously known until we return there, we shall discuss and meditate upon the concept of the Number One as a symbol of the First Emanation or Common Point of Emanation of the Cosmos.

Tradition holds that the most highly evolved Beings are aware of Ten Emanations or Planes of Existence, descending through which we have reached our present troubled state in the seeming freedom of the Forest of Errors. Through these same Ten must we return to Omneity, consciously now[1], and forever aware that true freedom is the Liberation of the Spirit of Mankind.

Our Free Will to choose this Path was evolved at a price, namely: The Fall of Man. On the Path of Return we have to direct our hard-won consciousness into harmony with the Divine Emanations.

Shall we so use our Will?

If so, how?

Questions for your own edification:

1) What is the theosophical addition of the number 12?

2) What is the theosophical reduction of the number 191?

3) Give .the meanings of the words "Theosophy", "Omneity" "Immanent" and "Transcendent".

4) What do you understand by The Fall of Man?

5) Can we, as individual human beings, know God?

6) What is a symbol?

7) Explain the meaning of a Divine Law, or Universal Law.

8) Does God intervene
   (a) in the workings of the Universe?
   (b) in the affairs of Man?

[1] "consciously now" i.e. by a conscious effort. On the Path of Descent there was no option of free will (we had no alternative); but the Path of Return (Ascent) demands of us first a decision In full consciousness, following the awakening of the will to return.

Dear Bro ∴ and S ∴

At our last conventicle, we stated that numbers are universal symbols. We studied the symbolism of One, the Monad, the Absolute. Tonight we will continue with our study of numbers and then touch upon another subject of especial interest to all Martinists.

To begin, let us clarify an important point regarding numbers. You have heard it said that some numbers are benefic in the sense that they exercise a good influence; and that others are malefic exercising a bad influence. We must avoid at all times falling into superstition.

Numbers have a good or bad character only in so far as they symbolize good or bad things, or let us say: positive or negative thoughts. Let us emphasize that Numbers have no magical influence in themselves. They are nothing but arbitrary signs by which we frame a certain concept. There can therefore be no good or evil numbers — but only good or evil thoughts in our minds.

The number 2 stands for division; duality as opposed to unity; passivity as opposed to activity; and in general, opposition. We shall recognize here the principles of the Binary Law and of polarity. We shall not delve into the symbolism of "2" at this point, as it will be studied at length later on.

The number 3 symbolizes manifestation. The Triangle, which is another way of expressing the same meaning, is the first figure of geometry. Only when there are three points, can we, by linking them with lines, draw a figure that has a form of substance in the sense that it has surface area.

One is a concept that cannot be exactly represented, because even the tiniest dot still has width. From a metaphysical point of view One can therefore only be conceived of mentally. Two only describes one dimension, — as the line, without width that unites 2 points. But since even the finest line still has width, Two also cannot be exactly represented. Only Three can be expressed geometrically as a figure and this is why we select it to symbolize manifestation.

We shall study in some detail the Law of the Triangle and the Symbolism of Three in the time ahead. Before moving on to our next point, let us dwell awhile on what we have studied so far tonight and then discuss any point that is not quite clear yet, or that needs enlarging.

Let us now begin a study of the Triad which is symbolized by the number 3 or by the Triangle:

Martinism constitutes a system of philosophy aimed at the reconciliation of Man with Nature and with God — and divides Being into three Planes or Worlds.

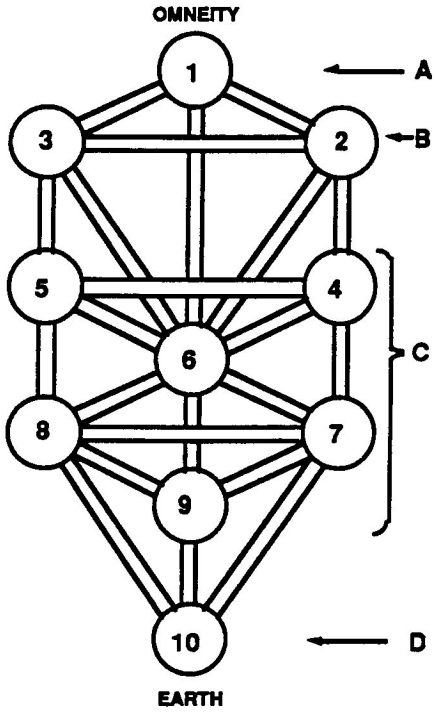
These Three Worlds correspond with the Hierarchy of Light as symbolized by the Altar Cloth. They also correspond with: The Three Kingdoms of Earth; the Three parts of the Human Body; and the Three parts of Man.

In order to get full benefit from our Martinist studies, it is important that we should master the following points:

There are three Worlds: The Empyrean World; The World of Orbs and the Elemental World.

These correspond in Man to the three stages of consciousness: The Perfect or Christ Consciousness; The Emotional or Intermediate Consciousness; and the Instinctive or Automatic Consciousness.

Man is divided into three parts: His Head; his Chest and his Stomach. These equate with his Âme;[2] his Plastic Envelope and his Physical Body. And correspond with the three Kingdoms of Earth: The Animal; the Vegetable and the Mineral. With the three colors of the Altar Cloth: The White; the Red and the Black[3] indicating the three types of Men: The Children of the Light; the Men of Desire and the Men of the Stream.



We may also note that the Qabalists refer to the triple Planes of Consciousness which they call "worlds above our own." If you will observe the Tree of Life (shown at right) you will find our world, — the material universe — represented by Sephirah #10 ("D"). The Qabalists' "worlds above our own" are indicated by Sephiroth 1 ("A"); 2 & 3 ("B"); and 4 through 9("C").

So that there can be no opportunity for error let us simply observe at this point that the Empyrean World; the World of Orbs and the Elemental World can be represented on the Tree of Life but they do not follow the demarcation of the previous paragraph. Where these Worlds fall on the "Tree" will be taken up in the series of lectures on the Qabala.

Now what concerns us at this point is the three stages of consciousness, so let us give our full attention to this matter. As we have said, there are three stages of consciousness

1) the Instinctive or Automatic Consciousness,
2) the Emotional or Intermediate Consciousness, and
3) the Perfect or Christ Consciousness.

Very few people ever achieve the third stage of consciousness and only the most evolved Adepts can

[2] Âme (pronounced Ahm) is a French word we have retained because its meaning cannot be easily approximated by any English word. It may be said to represent the spiritual properties of man, or the principle of life. In reality, it is the component part of man which is immortal. Perhaps the English word "Spirit" would come closest Plastic Envelope equates with "astral body" - a term used in other schools.

[3] The Symbolism of Light is taken from nature. The total absence of Light is darkness. In nature, in the absence of light, all is black. Black symbolizes passivity, rest; ignorance (because ignorance is the absence of the light of knowledge). Black is therefore not an active symbol. The fire of desire, however, generates heat, which at first begins to glow a dull red. As the heat increases, the color turns through several shades of red, finally reaching a brilliant white light. Red is the color of desire, action, energy, blood, battle, sacrifice. It also symbolizes courage and the battlefield of life where one struggles to transmute the elements of Nature. White symbolizes the Light of Wisdom, purity, and those evolved Beings (Masters and Adepts, the "Children of the Light") who traditionally wear white.

reach it at will. Very few people even attain the Intermediate stage of consciousness which is that of self-knowledge, not because it is difficult to attain, but simply because people do not know of its existence.

In other words, people live instinctively, automatically, without being fully conscious of Being while they live. If we examine the things we did today, we will soon realize that we did them all, or almost all, in an entirely instinctive way, by habit or by need. While we were thus engaged, we never were conscious of being.

All stages of consciousness are progressive and we have no hope of ever achieving Illumination, or should I say Controlled Illumination, which is Christ Consciousness, without having mastered the art of attaining and of maintaining the Intermediate Consciousness.

We shall therefore endeavor to do so, and we have already begun our work in this direction through our efforts at metastasis (Exercise #1). In order to succeed, we must fully understand that the stage of consciousness in which we normally live in the waking state is instinctive consciousness. If we think we normally live in a state of self-knowledge we shall misdirect our efforts and achieve nothing.

Exercise 2, which is included in this Liber, will allow us to raise our consciousness from the level of Instinctive Consciousness to that of Intermediate Consciousness (which is self-knowledge). Do not neglect performing Exercise 2 according to instructions.

Brethren, let us not forget that our first achievement towards reintegration must be directed towards self-knowledge and self-realization. Let us recall the words of our V::: M::: Saint-Martin who wrote:

> "At the frst glance which man directs upon himself; he will perceive without difficulty that there must be a science or an evident law for his own nature, since there is one for all beings, though it is not universally in all, and since even in the midst of our weakness, our ignorance, and humiliation, we are employed only in the search after truth and light
> Albeit, therefore, the efforts which man makes daily to attain the end of his researches are so rarely successful, it must not be considered on this account that the road is imaginary, but only that man is deceived as to the road which leads thereto, and is hence in the greatest of privations, since he does not even know the way in which he should walk.
> The overwhelming misfortune of man is not that he is ignorant of the existence of truth, but that he misconstrues its nature. What errors, and what suffering would have been spared us if, far from seeking truth in the phenomena of material nature, we had resolved to descend into ourselves, and had sought to explain material things by man, and not man by material things; if, fortified by courage and patience, we had preserved in the calm of our imagination the discovery of this light which we desire, all of us, with so much ardor."

In other words, Brethren, it is through the study of Man alone, by getting deeper and deeper into the problem and reflecting repeatedly on the terms of that problem, that one may reach a solution. Again, our V:: M:: wrote:

> "He who knows himself will be able to know the universe and other beings. But the knowledge of self will be found only in self. It is in Man's mind that we must look for the Laws that have presided at his origin."

Man, who is the enigma, is therefore also the key to that enigma.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

A few questions to test your comprehension:

1. What number signifies separation?
2. Can the number One be exactly represented?
3. What number symbolizes Omneity?
4. Name the three parts of Man.
5. On the Tree of Life, what number represents the Earth?
6. What is our first achievement on the Path to Reintegration?
7. Why is this?

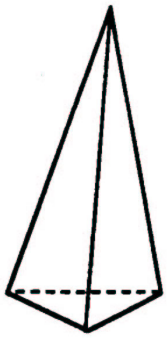
The Symbolism of Numbers (3)

Let us now extend our study of the science of numbers, the one science to which all others are related. The beginning of mathematics is lost in antiquity and most nations of the ancient civilizations had a workable system of mathematics. To demonstrate a truth however, the science of numbers depends on axioms, which are purely intellectual demonstrations of a Truth that is elusive, because it is entirely independent of the senses, and of matter. Let us not lose sight of the fact that the characters and signs which we call figures, are Symbols of numbers. Numbers, in their turn, represent Eternal Principles and such Principles are immutable qualities or Emanations that belong to Omneity. In this way, numbers form a concise language of Truths, Laws and Emanations the original material of the Two Books of Martinism (the Book of Nature and the Book of Man), which we shall study later.

From among the philosophers of antiquity, there is one whose name is always connected with the science of numbers: Pythagoras. He and his followers, called Pythagoreans, conceived numbers as a multiplicity of forms of Being. Numbers were the things which were first separated from an impartial union. This unity broke into two kinds of realities: Numbers and Unlimited Space, and by these two factors Being is manifested.

Like the Martinists, the Pythagoreans placed great emphasis on the Number 4 or Tetrad. By theosophic addition 4 = 10. This is represented by what Pythagoras called the Divine Tetractys. According to the Pythagoreans, it contains all the harmonious ratios.

To Martinists, the Tetrad is the symbol of permanent foundation. Geometrically, it is the minimum number of points that can encompass a solid. Just as ONE exists only as a concept; TWO as a line in a one-dimensional world; THREE, as a surface in a two-dimensional world; so FOUR is a volume in a three-dimensional world, - which is a type of world in which we live. The symbol of FOUR would then be a three-sided pyramid, the simplest form of a three-dimensional figure. Mystically, FOUR represents the 4 letters of the Divine Name Yod-He-Vau-He (usually translated Jehovah). It is the number of Fire and as such, is symbolic of intellectual illumination.



To Martinists, the Tetrad is the symbol of permanent foundation. Geometrically, it is the minimum number of points that can encompass a solid. Just as ONE exists only as a concept; TWO as a line in a one-dimensional world; THREE, as a surface in a two-dimensional world; so FOUR is a volume in a three-dimensional world, - which is a type of world in which we live. The symbol of FOUR would then be a three-sided pyramid, the simplest form of a three-dimensional figure. Mystically, FOUR represents the 4 letters of the Divine Name Yod-He-Vau-He (usually translated Jehovah). It is the number of Fire and as such, is symbolical of intellectual illumination.

Moving on we come to the number FIVE called the Pentad. It is symbolical of the principle of evil. It represents Humanity in its exiled state. It represents the limiting principle of the World and of humanity. By virtue of the Law of Duality, there is, however, another aspect to the number "5", we will take this up later.

As we have just said, the mention of the number five brings us to say that, in Martinism, it is often taken as a symbol of evil. This raises an immediate problem: What is Evil? Also, by continuity of thought: What is Good?

Since the dawn of conscience in Man, mankind has been bewildered by the apparently two opposed principles of Good & Evil. An almost indistinguishable mixture of Good & Evil - Light & Darkness - Right & Wrong - Harmony & Discord - seems to disturb and cloud the brightest rays of light which man feels he might perceive throughout the Universe and within himself. In his endeavors to explain this contradiction and clarify this confusion, Man may adopt dangerous opinions. In the past, he considered at times that Good and Evil were two principles equal in strength and rivals in power. Evil was some-times considered as being inferior to Good. Did Good & Evil have the same origin? If so, The Creator would be at the same time Father and Tyrant. Is he? Eventually, two basic beliefs came to be accepted:

> (a) The World was created by a Great Being, absolute in Power, Wisdom and Goodness, and the World has always remained under His Divine guidance.
> (b) A belief that Evil is an ugly fact, not a mere illusion, and that it has an individual existence.

Are these two basic beliefs true or false? And are there other explanations?

If we logically examine the respective power of Good & Evil we cannot fail to realize that Good, when it reigns in the thoughts, or when it is present in the actions, causes Evil to disappear. We may liken this to the light in a darkened room. As soon as the light is turned on, the darkness vanishes. In other words, as Good manifests, Evil regresses. We can say therefore that Evil is the absence of Good. Furthermore, the presence of evil never eliminates completely the concept of Good. Evil is, by nature, implacable and bent on destruction. If evil had power it would destroy good. But when evil reigns in a society, the aspirations of a part of that society immediately become centered on Good. The oppressed, the suffering, and others too aspire for the Return Of Good. When Good and Harmony reign, however, evil does not inspire people. In conclusion let us observe that as in nature all the darkness in the world cannot extinguish the flame of one small candle, similarly we can say that evil has no power of its own.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

Some questions for your consideration:

What is evil?

How does evil arise? (From the misuse of our Free Will.)

Could there be Good if there was no Evil?

Is Evil inferior to Good?, if so, why?

How do you define "good"?

Does Evil have an individual existence?

Is the Plastic Envelope immortal?

What part of Man's anatomy corresponds to the Intermediate or Emotional Consciousness?

(Each student should have a personal notebook to jot down their individual impressions. As a start,divide a page into three columns and enter information concerning the Triad. In addition, record our own observations in the notebook.)

Some Vocabulary Terms:

What is "Martinism"?
(See Liber 1) In addition "Martinisim" is understood to mean the writings of Martinez Pasquales andLouis-Claude de Saint-Martin.

What is the "Traditional Esoteric Arcana"?
This refers to the body of knowledge expressed by the Rose+Croix, in Hermeticism, Alchemy, theQabalah and esoteric Christianity... all of which is also known as the Western Esoteric Tradition. "Martinism" is of course a part of this stream.

Single Awareness

Here is an exercise that will allow you to raise your consciousness from the level of instinctive consciousness to that of Intermediate Consciousness, which is that of Self-Knowledge.

You are to meditate, and in the period of meditation, simply avoid any mental or intellectual concentration or effort whatever and only try to feel yourself living. Sit comfortably and let your consciousness penetrate your entire Being, simply observe in your mind the fact that you are yourself. Avoid analyzing your feelings, as the slightest intellectual effort will bring you back to a stage of Instinctive Consciousness.

As we mentioned in Liber 1, this exercise is part of The Mystic's Ladder, which is to become part of your daily routine.

ESSAY
Three Ways to Perfect Your Character

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

Poets of old held that the summum bonum of all existence was happiness, and certainly this belief is widely held to this day. We look forward to retirement as a time to engage in recreations which we think will finally bring us to true happiness.

There is a great misunderstanding about the true meaning of happiness. God did not create man to sit and idle away his time indulging his appetite. Jesus said: "I came not to send peace but a sword," intending us to be stirred by the need for self-conquest, self-mastery, self-discipline. In the usual meaning of the word "happiness" this is not a joyous prospect. L. B. Jack writes in his autobiography, "I think we should be well advised to get rid of all this botheration about happiness, both in our philosophical exercises and in our daily life." Happiness should not be an end in itself, but rather a reward for achievement, especially when that achievement is the result not only of what we have done, but of what we are.

Our subject is drawn from a statement of Austin Phelps: "In the destiny of every mortal being there is an objective more worthy of God than happiness. It is character, and the grand aim of man's creation is the development of a grand character."

God has created you and me with the power and potential to become good persons, with the ultimate aim that we become perfect persons. Jesus requests, "Be ye perfect, even as your Father in heaven is perfect." Joshua Liebman said some years ago: "The human self is not a gift, it is an achievement; not a static reality, but a painfully passed reality — past lions in the way, a triumph over ogres, real and imaginary." The attainment of one's best self is a running battle, a never-ending process. The grand aim of it all is character — not just in terms of a man's reputation, but what he truly is within himself. I would like to suggest here three character-building techniques:

1. THE DISCIPLINE OF PUTTING FIRST THINGS FIRST.

Our problem today is not really indolence or indifference, but preoccupation. In our busy lives we become so absorbed in trivia that we lose sight of higher objectives. You need only listen in on the average lunch-break or bus stand conversation to see the crowding out of things that matter by things that don't count for much. Multitudes are living lives that are not so much bad lives, as frittered away.

Reading is a good example of what I mean. At one time, educators had to plead with people to expose themselves to books in order to expand their intelligence. Today there is so such reading matter all around us that we must select very carefully what is important. Too willingly, we fill our minds with casual trash.

Some businessmen and women become so occupied in pursuing success that it consumes their lives.

They think they cannot help the fact that they have insufficient time for their families or for their spiritual pursuits. Actually, they have made a decision that one is more important than the other. There is an old Greek proverb which says, "Zeus frowns on the overbusy."

Man's true character, how well he fulfills the grand aim of his creation, is not determined so much by his achievements or the fortune he has amassed as much as by what he has become as a person —as a spiritual, radiating center—and by what he achieves in inward peace and contentment. As Jesus said, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his soul?"

2. THE DISCIPLINE OF "RIGHT PLANTING" IN THE FIELD OF POSSIBILITIES.

There is a legend about a man who dreamed of himself standing in a field with no boundaries. He asked an approaching stranger, "What is this field called?" He was answered, 'Why, it's the field of possibilities, so called because it is possible for all things to grow in it. There is no evil so terrible, no good so great that cannot be grown here; no sorrow so cruel, no joy so entrancing that cannot be harvested from this field; no poverty so overwhelming, no riches so grand but have been garnered here." Looking around him, the man saw men and women. Some were burdened by great sorrows and troubles; others were free and joyous. Some suffered from dreadful pain; others were radiant with health. The man asked, "Why is it that some gather good from this field, and others evil?" The reply was: "Each reaps according to the seed he has planted. Each seed yields a harvest after its own kind. This field, called the field of possibilities, is also called the field of life."

All about us there lies this field of life. It has unlimited possibilities. Our life is always in the process of bearing harvest. Life is energy, it is power~ it must yield, it must produce. We are immersed in it and we cannot prevent it from producing, but we can determine by our actions what it will bring forth: good or evil, joy or sorrow, life or death. That is God's privilege conferred upon us m the statement "Concerning the work of my hands, command ye me."

A pencil may be used to draw a figure that is ugly or it ma be used to draw a figure that is beautiful; it is merely a question of how the pencil is used. So we are called to the discipline of right thinking and right speaking, the right use of the law of mind at all times, to call forth the positive out of the field of infinite possibilities.

3. LISTENING TO THE "STILL", SMALL VOICE OF GOD".

Emerson refers to the idea that there is guidance for all people and that by lowly listening we shall hear the right word. Character does not grow by chance, nor by resolutions to do better. There must be a developing desire to improve one's self, which is really God inspiring us with a splendid idea. He who supplies us with that idea and gives us the power to carry it out is really God at the center of our being. Desire to change is God tapping at the door of consciousness, leaning us in the way of growth.

F. L. Rossen once wrote: "If the weathervane points north it does not bring the north wind; it is a sign that the wind is already blowing." In the same way, a man's praying does not bring God's action; it is proof that God is already moving in and through us. The very act of prayer is the activity of God. Prayer is simply letting God be God in you. God's orders take the form of inspirations and aspirations. Listen. Pray. Then, as the Quakers say, When you pray, move your feet" The Twenty-third Psalm, which begins, "The Lord is my shepherd..." is interpreted by many people to mean, "The Lord is my bellhop." God does not obey us, He inspires us. But he does not compel us to accept His inspiration. We have free will. We should be still, so that the activity of God can move us and set us on that path of success that is the perfect path for us.

The purpose of life is not to have but to be, to continue to fulfill our aim of the Infinite creative process. We must discipline ourselves to put first things first and never allow ourselves to become preoccupied with trivia, so that we miss the finer, more important things. We must discipline ourselves in righteousness, right thinking, and right planning in the field of possibilities. We must discipline ourselves to constantly need the still, small voice, and to take time to be still and to humbly listen to the process that is moving through us, expressing as us, in the outworking of our own imprisoned splendor.

ESSAY
Spiritual Vision

We are living today in an age of progress, an age of uncertainty, an age of constant challenges. Many people cry out, 'What is the world coming to?" Well, actually, it is coming to itself, though the road may be long and slow and arduous. Of course, we are in troubled times, but from a human standpoint we have always been in troubled times. (When have we had times of peace and prosperity?) We have had periods of lethargy and indifference, which are also troubled times in a more serious way. Troubled times are times of opportunity, times of discovery, times of growth. In times of crisis we have always girded ourselves for battle, whether it be for personal problems or for international relations. And yet history has invariably demonstrated that it has been light rather than might that has always achieved the ultimate victory.

We need men of vision and foresight who will follow the lead of the Psalmist when he says, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help." And we can pray after an election that the leaders that have been chosen on all levels of government will actually rise to the best that is in them and express the vision of true greatness. Vision is the Aladdin's lamp of the soul. It is the Divine spark that lights the lamp of progress.

During political campaigns you occasionally will find a large picture of a candidate pasted on a store window, and if you go inside the store you most likely won't see the back of the candidate's head, but the same face looking in at you that looked out at you -- literally, a two-faced creature. In this sense we are all two-faced; one face looking outward and the other looking inward. We are all endowed with both outer vision and inner vision. The one is physical sight, the other is insight; the one beholds appearances, the other sees in perspective; the one walks by sight, the other walks by faith; the one learns through tuition, the other by intuition.

We all begin life in this world with an inner vision of perfection. But as the child grows to adulthood, the exercise of inner vision is neglected as the individual becomes engrossed in outer things and experiences. In time, the inner vision faculty becomes virtually atrophied through nonuse. So, it was with inescapable logic that Jesus insisted that no one could enter the kingdom except by becoming as a little child, recovering the inner vision which beholds the Father in all things.

Jesus constantly exercised the inner vision. He often referred to His use of the inner vision, but never more clearly than the occasion of His healing of the invalid by the pool of Siloam. Remember, after being assailed by the Pharisees for doing healing work on the Sabbath, He replied: "The son can do nothing of himself but what he seeth the Father doing; for what things soever He doeth, these things the son also doeth in like manner, for the Father loveth the son and showeth him all things that Himself doeth." By this He inferred that nothing could be done unless it were possible, and that which is possible exists as already done in God. And He said: "All things are possible to God." So it follows that if there is anything that man desires to do, if he turns within he will behold the Father doing that thing. This inner vision is the fountain out of which all things become possible to man.

It is interesting that the word that is translated as "eye" or "vision" in the Old Testament comes from a word that means "fountain" in the original Greek. Someone has said that Jesus did not come into the world to set it right but to see it right. The same holds true for each of us. The great need, in spite of apparent disorder and confusion, is not to set things right, but to see them rightly. Through inner or spiritual vision, we look above and beyond the illusion or the confusion and we see the Truth, and this seeing becomes the fountain out of which comes the good.

So often we say, "Well, that's all well and good, but facts are facts and seeing is believing!" It is true that physical sight is a matter of impressions registered on the optical nerve that report appearances to the brain. But there is another way of seeing, the Christ way, through spiritual seeing, or insight. This kind of seeing is not an impression we see, but an expression radiating. And Jesus said, "Let your light shine." This kind of seeing is like a searchlight that dispels the darkness and reveals the Truth, the life, the way. When Jesus was faced with a condition of lack and the disciples wanted to go to town to procure supplies to feed the hungry multitudes, the key to that seeming miracle which followed was in right seeing. It is recorded that Jesus "lifted up His eyes to heaven," which simply means that He looked inward to the consciousness of all-sufficiency; then, with substance pouring out through the fountain of this spiritual vision, He proceeded to break the bread and fish, and there was abundance.

Believing is seeing with the inner vision. You cannot really "pray, believing.." when your sight is fixed on the mountain to be removed, the empty cupboard to be filled, or the crippled hand to be healed. You must lift up your eyes and see with the inward vision, and then you perceive the Divine possibilities. You will see the Father doing the thing and you will find the victory.

On one occasion Jesus said to his disciples: "Say not ye there are yet four months and then cometh the harvest; behold, I say unto thee, lift up your eyes and look on the fields, that they are white already unto harvest." This is the vision to see the flower in the seed, to see the wheat in the grain, to see the healthy body in the lame and afflicted, to see the Divinity in the person. This is the key to Jesus' great miracle-working power. He simply lifted up His eyes and, through spiritual vision, saw the individual not as blind or lame or deaf. He saw him in the Father and the Father in him. This seeing became a fountain, a wellspring out of which came this healing life which worked the wonders of transformation.

Following "the Christ way" does not mean that we should become a race of dreamers, walking with our heads in the clouds. Certainly, the physical eyes are placed in front of our heads for the purpose of seeing our way in the world. A traveler through a rugged country asked his Indian guide one night: "How are you able to pick your way over these jagged peaks by treacherous trails, without ever losing your direction?" The guide answered: "I have the near look and the far vision. With the one I see what is directly ahead of me, and with the other I guide my course by the stars." This is a beautiful thought The near look and the far vision; the merging of inner and outer vision.

Certainly, we have to see with our physical eye. Certainly, we must face facts. But we can and we must be selective about what we fix our faith upon. We must decide if we are going to look upon the dark places of life, — the sickness, the poverty, the hardships, the chaos — or whether we are going to look upon that which is good — the light and life, the pleasant and constructive. It is an inescapable truth that whatever we look upon will draw us toward it. Of course, there are times when we come face to face with a crisis of health, lack, or inharmony. But in these moments we must lift up our eyes to see the fields already white with harvest. This is the dawn of faith, the faith that can truly remove mountains.

A famous skin specialist, remarking how negative thinking is a contributing cause of skin irritations, stressed the idea that we should always keep outside the problems of life. Now, this is an important thing, of course. When we accept the appearances as real; when we think that things and people can take our good from us, then we get lost in the midst of experiences. Then we actually find ourselves resisting and resenting; we lose our perspective and we are invariably swallowed up in negation. But if, when we are confronted by the dark appearances that threaten us, we declare, "None of these things move me," and we determinedly stand still and "lift up our eyes," turn within and see the Father within this thing and this thing in the Father, then surely we will find help and healing. And when we have this sense of oneness, this sense of the near look that is selective and the far vision that is dedicated, then we are on the threshold of a new kind of living: abundant, happy, victorious living. Spiritual vision is the birth of faith, and faith is the victory that overcomes the world.

OPTIONAL

When confronted with a problem involving the use of the reasoning faculties, individuals of strong intellect keep their poise, and seek to reach a solution by obtaining facts bearing upon the question. Those of immature mentality, on the other hand, when similarly confronted, are overwhelmed. While the former may be qualified to solve the riddle of their own destiny, the latter must be led like a flock of sheep and taught in simple language. They depend almost entirely upon the ministrations of the shepherd. The Apostle Paul said that these little ones must be fed with milk, but that meat is the food of strong men. Thoughtlessness is almost synonymous with childishness, while thoughtfulness is symbolic of maturity.

There are, however, but few mature minds in the world; and thus it was that the philosophic/religious doctrines of the pagans were divided to meet the needs of these two fundamental groups of human intellect - one philosophic, the other incapable of appreciating the deeper mysteries of life. To the discerning few were revealed the esoteric, or spiritual, teachings, while the unqualified many received only the literal, or exoteric, interpretations. In order to make simple the great truths on Nature and the abstract principles of natural law, the vital forces of the universe were personified, becoming the gods and goddesses of the ancient mythologies. While the ignorant multitudes brought their offerings to the altars of Priapus and Pan (deities representing the procreative energies) the wise recognized in these marble statues only symbolic concretions of great abstract truths.

From Montfaucon's Antiquities

A FEMALE HJEROPHANT OF THE MYSTERIES

This illustration shows Cybele, here called the Syrian Goddess, in the robes of a hierophant. Montfaucon describes the figure as follows: "Upon her head is an episcopal mitre, adorned on the lower part with towers and pinnacles; over the gate of the city is a crescent, and beneath the circuit of the walls a crown of rays. The Goddess wears a sort of surplice, exactly like the surplice of a priest or bishop; and upon the surplice a tunic, which falls down to the legs; and over all an episcopal cape, with the twelve signs of the Zodiac wrought on the borders. The figure hath a lion on each side, and holds in its left hand a Tympanium, a Sistrum, an Distaff, a Caduceus, and another instrument. In her right hand she hold with her middle finger a thunderbolt, and upon the same arm animals, insects, and, as far as we may guess, flowers and fruit, a bow, a quiver, a torch, and a scythe." The whereabouts of the statue is unknown, the copy reproduced by Montfaucon being from drawings by Pirro Ligurio.

In all cities of the ancient world were temples for public worship and offering. In every community also were philosophers and mystics, deeply versed in Nature's lore. These individuals were usually banded together, forming seclusive philosophic and religious schools. The more important of these groups were known as the Mysteries. Many of the great minds of antiquity were initiated into these secret fraternities by strange and mysterious rites, some of which were extremely cruel. Alexander Wilder defines the Mysteries as "sacred dramas performed at stated periods. The most celebrated were those of Isis, Sabazius, Cybele, and Eleusis." After being admitted, the initiates were instructed in the secret wisdom which had been preserved for ages. Plato, an initiate of one of these sacred orders, was severely criticized because in his writings he revealed to the public many of the secret philosophic principles of the Mysteries.

Every pagan nation had (and has) not only its state religion, but another into which the philosophic elect alone have gained entrance. Many of these ancient cults vanished from the earth without revealing their secrets, but a few have survived the test of ages and their mysterious symbols are still preserved. Much of the ritualism of Freemasonry is based on the trials to which candidates were subjected by the ancient hierophants before the keys of wisdom were entrusted to them.
Few realize the extent to which the ancient secret schools influenced contemporary intellects and, through those minds, posterity. Robert Macoy, 33 °, in his General History of Freemasonry, pays a magnificent tribute to the part played by the ancient Mysteries in the rearing of the edifice of human culture. He says, in part:

> "It appears that all the perfection of civilization, and all the advancement made in philosophy, science, and art among the ancients are due to these institutions which, under the veil of mystery, sought to illustrate the sublimest truths of religion, morality, and virtue, and impress them on the hearts of their disciples... Their chief object was to teach the doctrine of one God, the resurrection of man to eternal life, the dignity on the human soul, and to lead the people to see the shadow of the deity, in the beauty, magnificence, and splendor of the universe"

With the decline of virtue, which has preceded the destruction of every nation of history, the Mysteries became perverted. Sorcery took the place of the divine magic. Indescribable practices (such as the Bacchanalia) were introduced, and perversion ruled supreme, for no institution can be any better than the members of which it is composed. In despair, the few who were true sought to preserve the secret doctrines from oblivion. In some cases they succeeded, but more often the arcanum was lost and only the empty shell of the Mysteries remained.

Thomas Taylor has written, "Man is naturally a religious animal." From the earliest dawning of his consciousness, man has worshiped and revered things as symbolic of the invisible, omnipresent, indescribable Thing, concerning which he could discover practically nothing. The pagan Mysteries opposed the Christians during the early centuries of their church, declaring that the new faith (Christianity) did not demand virtue and integrity as requisites for salvation. Celsus expressed himself on the subject in the following caustic terms:

> "That I do not, however, accuse the Christians more bitterly than truth compels, may be conjectured from hence, that the cryers who call men to other mysteries proclaim as follows: 'Let him approach whose hands are pure, and whose words are wise.' And again others proclaim: 'Let him approach who is pure from all wickedness, whose soul is not conscious of any evil, and who leads a just and upright life.' And these things are proclaimed by those who promise a purification from error. Let us now hear who those are that are called to the Christian mysteries: Whoever is a sinner, whoever is unwise, whoever is a fool, and whoever, in short, is miserable, him the kingdom of God will receive. Do you not, therefore, call a sinner, an unjust man, a thief, a housebreaker, a wizard, one who is sacrilegious, and a robber of sepulchres? What other persons would the cryer nominate, who should call robbers together?"

It was not the true faith of the early Christian mystics that Celsus attacked, but the false forms that were creeping in even during his day. The ideals of early Christianity were based upon the high moral standards of the pagan Mysteries, and the first Christians who met under the city of Rome used as their places of worship the subterranean temples on Mithras, from whose cult has been borrowed much of the sacerdotalism of the modem church.

The ancient philosophers believed that no man could live intelligently who did not have a fundamental knowledge of Nature and her laws. Before man can obey, he must understand, and the Mysteries were devoted to instructing man concerning the operation of divine law in the terrestrial sphere. Few of the early cults actually worshiped anthropomorphic deities, although their symbolism might lead one to believe they did. They were moralistic rather than religionistic; philosophic rather than theologic. They taught man to use his faculties more intelligently, to be patient in the face of adversity, to be courageous when confronted by danger, to be true in the midst of temptation, and, most of all, to view a worthy life as the most acceptable sacrifice to God, and his body as an altar sacred to the Deity.

Sun worship played an important part in nearly all the early pagan Mysteries. This indicated the probability of their Atlantean origin, for the people of Atlantis were sun worshipers. The Solar Deity was usually personified as a beautiful youth, with long golden hair to symbolize the rays of the sun. This golden Sun God was slain by wicked ruffians, who personified the evil principle of the universe. By means of certain rituals and ceremonies, symbolic of purification and regeneration, this wonderful God of Good was brought back to life and became the Savior of His people. The secret processes whereby He was resurrected symbolized these cultures by means of which man is able to overcome his lower nature, master his appetites, and give expression to the higher side of himself. The Mysteries were organized for the purpose of assisting the struggling human creature to reawaken the spiritual powers which, surrounded by the flaming ring of dust and degeneracy, lay asleep within his soul In other words, man was offered a way by which he could regain his lost estate (See Wagner's Siegfried.)

In the ancient world, nearly all the secret societies were philosophic and religious. During the medieval centuries, they were chiefly religious and political, although a few philosophic schools remained. In modern times, secret societies, in the Occidental countries, are largely political or fraternal, although in a few of them, as in Masonry, the ancient religious and philosophic principles still survive.

Space prohibits a detailed discussion of the secret schools. There were literally scores of these ancient cults, with branches in all parts of the Eastern and Western worlds. Some, such as those of Pythagoras and the Hermetists, show a decided Oriental influence, while the Rosicrucians, according to their own proclamations, gained much of their wisdom from Arabian mystics. Although the Mystery schools are usually associated with civilization, there is evidence that the most uncivilized peoples of prehistoric times had a knowledge of them. Natives of distant islands, many in the lowest forms of savagery, have mystic rituals and secret practices which, although primitive, are of a decided Masonic tinge.

THE DRUIDIC MYSTERIES OF BRITAIN AND GAUL

> "The original and primitive inhabitants of Britain, at some remote period, revived and reformed their national institutes. Their priest, or instructor, had hitherto been simply named Gwydd, but it was considered to have become necessary to divide this office between the national, or superior, priest and another whose influence [would] be more limited. From henceforth the former became Der-Wydd (Druid), or superior instructor, and [the latter] Go-Wydd, or O-Vydd (Ovate), subordinate instructor; and both went by the general name of Beirdd (Bards),or teachers of wisdom. As the system matured and augmented, the Bardic Order consisted of three classes, the Druids, Beirdd Braint, or privileged Bards, and Ovates." (See Samuel Meyrick and Charles Smith, The Costume of the Original Inhabitants of The British Islands.)

The origin of the word Druid is under dispute. Max Muller believes that, like the Irish word Drui, it means "the men of the oak trees." He further draws attention to the fact that the forest gods and tree deities of the Greeks were called dryades. Some believe the word to be of Teutonic origin; others ascribe it to the Welsh. A few trace it to the Gaelic druidh, which means "a wise man" or "a sorcerer." In Sanskrit, the word dru means "timber."

At the time of the Roman conquest, the Druids were thoroughly ensconced in Britain and Gaul. Their power over the people was unquestioned, and there were instances in which armies, about to attack each other, sheathed their swords when ordered to by the white-robed Druids. No undertaking of great importance was started without the assistance of these patriarchs, who stood as mediators between the gods and men. The Druidic Order is deservedly credited with having had a deep understanding of Nature and her laws. The Encyclopedia Britannica states that geography, physical sciences, natural theology, and astrology were their favorite studies. The Druids had a fundamental knowledge of medicine, especially the use of herbs and simples. Crude surgical instruments also have been found in England and Ireland. An old treatise on early British medicine states that every practitioner was expected to have a garden or back yard for the growing of certain herbs necessary to his profession

From Wellcome's Ancient Cymric Medicine

THE ARCH-DRUID IN HIS CEREMONIAL ROBES

The most striking adornment of the Arch-Druid was the iodhan moran, or breastplate of judgement, which possessed the mysterious power of strangling anyone who made an untrue statement while wearing it. Godfrey Higgins states that this breastplate was put on the necks of witnesses to test the veracity of their evidence. The Druidic tiara, or anguinum, its front embossed with a number of points to represent the sun's rays, indicated that the priest was a personification of the rising sun. On the front of his belt the Arch-Druid wore the Iiath meisicith a magic broach, or buckle, in the center of which was a large white stone. Ta this was attributed the power of drawing the fire of the gods down from heaven at the priest's command. This specially cut stone was a burning glass, by which the sun s rays were concentrated to light the altar fires. The Druids also had other symbolic implements, such as the peculiarly shaped golden sickle with which they cut the mistletoe from the oak, and the corman, or scepter, in the form of a crescent, symbolic of the sixth day of the increasing moan and also of the Ark of Noah. An early initiate of the Druidic Mysteries related that admission to their midnight ceremonies was gained by means of a glass boat, called Cwrwg Gwydrin. This boat, symbolized the moon, which, floating upon the waters of eternity, preserved the seeds of living creatures within its boat-like crescent

Eliphas Levi, the celebrated transcendentalist, makes the following statement:

> "The Druids were priests and physicians, curing by magnetism and charging amylets with their fluidic influence. Their universal remedies were mistletoe and serpents' eggs, because these substances attract the astral light in a special manner. The solemnity with which mistletoe was cut down drew upon this plant the popular confidence and rendered it powerfully magnetic…The properties of magnetism > will some day reveal to us the absorbing properties of mistletoe. We shall then understand the secret of those spongy growths which drew the unused virtues of plants and become surcharged with tinctures and savors. Mushrooms, truffles, gall on trees, and the different kinds of mistletoe will be employed with understanding by a medical science, which will be new because it is old.... But one must not move quicker than science, which recedes that it may advance the further. (See A History of Magic.)

Not only was the mistletoe sacred as symbolic of the universal medicine, or panacea, but also because of the fact that it grew upon the oak tree. Through the symbol of the oak, the Druids worshiped the Supreme Deity therefore, anything growing upon that tree was sacred to Him. At certain seasons, according to the positions of the sun, moon, and stars, the Arch-Druid climbed the oak tree and cut the mistletoe with a golden sickle consecrated for that service. The parasitic growth was caught in white cloths provided for the purpose, lest it touch the earth and be polluted by terrestrial vibrations. Usually a sacrifice of a white bull was made under the tree.

The Druids were initiates of a secret school that existed in their midst. This school, which closely resembled the Bacchic and Eleusinian Mysteries of Greece or the Egyptian rites of Isis and Osiris, is justly designated the Druidic Mysteries. There has been much speculation concerning the secret wisdom that the Druids claimed to possess. Their secret teachings were never written, but were communicated orally to specially prepared candidates. Robert Brown, 32 º, is of the opinion that the British priests secured their information from Tyrian and Phoenician navigators who, thousands of years before the Christian Era, established colonies in Britain and Gaul while searching for tin. Thomas Maurice, in his Indian Antiquities, discourses at length on Phoenician, Carthaginian, and Greek expeditions to the British Isles for the purpose of procuring tin. Others are of the opinion that the Mysteries as celebrated by the Druids were of Oriental origin, possibly Buddhistic.

The proximity of the British Isles to the lost Atlantis may account for the sun worship which plays an important part in the rituals of Druidism. According to Artemidorus, Ceres and Persephone were worshiped on an island close to Britain with rites and ceremonies similar to those of Samothrace. There is no doubt that the Druidic Pantheon includes a large number of Greek and Roman deities. This greatly amazed Caesar during his conquest of Britain and Gaul, and caused him to affirm that these tribes adored Mercury, Apollo, Mars, and Jupiter, in a manner similar to that of the Latin countries. It is almost certain that the Druidic Mysteries were not indigenous to Britain or Gaul, but migrated from one of the more ancient civilizations.

The school of the Druids was divided into three distinct parts, and the secret teachings embodied therein are practically the same as the mysteries concealed under the allegories of the Blue Lodge Masonry. The lowest of the three divisions was that of Ovate (Ovydd). This was an honorary degree, requiring no special purification or preparation. The Ovates dressed in green, the Druidic color of learning, and were expected to know something about medicine, astronomy, poetry if possible, and sometimes music. An Ovate was an individual admitted to the Druidic Order because of his general excellence and superior knowledge concerning the problems of life.

The second division was that of Bard (Beirdd). Its members were robed in sky-blue, to represent harmony and truth, and to them was assigned the labor of memorizing, at least in part, the twenty thousand verses of Druidic sacred poetry. They were often pictured with the primitive British or Irish harp - an instrument strung with human hair, and having as many strings as there were ribs on one side of the human body. These Bards were often chosen as teachers of candidates seeking entrance into the Druidic Mysteries. Neophytes wore striped robes of blue, green, and white, these being the three sacred colors of the Druidic Order.

The third division was that of Druid (Derwyddon). Its particular labor was to minister to the religious need of the people. To reach this dignity, the candidate must first become a Bard Braint. The Druids always dressed in white — symbolic of their purity, and the color used by them to symbolize the sun.

In order to reach the exalted position of Arch-Druid, or spiritual head of the organization, it was necessary for a priest to pass through the six successive degrees of the Druidic Order. (The members of the different degrees were differentiated by the colors of their sashes, for all of them wore robes of white.) Some writers are of the opinion that the title of Arch-Druid was hereditary, descending from father to son, but it is more probable that the honor was conferred by ballot election. Its recipient was chosen for his virtues and integrity from the most learned members of the highest Druidic degrees.

According to James Gardner, there were usually two Arch-Druids on Britain, one residing on the Isle of Anglesea and the other on the Isle of Man. Presumably there were others in Gaul. These dignitaries generally carried golden scepters and were crowned with wreaths of oak leaves, symbolic of their authority. The younger members of the Druidic Order were clean-shaven and modestly dressed, but the more aged had long gray beards and wore magnificent golden ornaments. The educational system of the Druids in Britain was superior to that of their colleagues on the Continent, and consequently many of the Gallic youths were sent to the Druidic colleges in Britain for their philosophical instruction and training.

Eliphas Levi states that the Druids lived in strict abstinence, studied the natural sciences, preserved the deepest secrecy, and admitted new members only after long probationary periods. Many of the priests of the order lived in buildings not unlike the monasteries of the modem world. They were associated in groups like ascetics of the Far East. Although celibacy was not demanded of them, few married. Many of the Druids retired from the world and lived as recluses in caves, in rough-stone houses, or in little shacks built in the depths of a forest. Here they prayed and meditated, emerging only to perform their religious duties.

> 'The Druids believed in three worlds and in transmigration from one to the other: In a world above this, in which happiness predominated; a world below, of misery; and in this present state. This transmigration was to punish and reward and also to purify the soul. In the present world, said they, Good and Evil are so exactly balanced that man has the utmost freedom and is able to choose or reject either. The Welsh Triads tell us there are three objects of metempsychosis: to collect into the soul the properties of all being, to acquire a knowledge of all things, and to get power to conquer evil. There are also, they say, three kinds of knowledge: knowledge of the nature of each thing, of its cause, and its influence. There are three things which continually grow less: darkness, falsehood, and death. There are three which constantly increase: light, life, and truth."

Like nearly all schools of the Mysteries, the teachings of the Druids were divided into two distinct sections. The simpler, a moral code, was taught to all the people, while the deeper, esoteric doctrine was given only to initiated priests. To be admitted to the order, a candidate was required to be of good family and of high moral character. No important secrets were entrusted to him until he had been tempted in many ways and his strength of character severely tried. The Druids taught the people of Britain and Gaul concerning the immortality of the soul. They believed in transmigration and apparently in reincarnation. They borrowed in one life, promising to pay back in the next. They believed in a purgatorial type of hell where they would be purged of their sins, afterward passing on to the happiness of unity with the gods. The Druids taught that all men would be saved, but that some must return to earth many times to learn the lessons of human life and to overcome the inherent evil of their own natures.

Before a candidate was entrusted with the secret doctrines of the Druids, he was bound with a vow of secrecy. These doctrines were imparted only in the depths of forests and in the darkness of caves. In these places, far from the haunts of men, the neophyte was instructed concerning the creation of the universe, the personalities of the gods, the laws of Nature, the secrets of occult medicine, the mysteries of the celestial bodies, and the rudiments of magic and sorcery. The Druids had a great number of feast days. The new and full moon and the sixth day of the moon were sacred periods. It is believed that initiations took place only at the two solstices and the two equinoxes. At dawn of the 25th day of December, the birth of the Sun God was celebrated.

The secret teachings of the Druids are said by some to be tinctured with Pythagorean philosophy. The Druids had a Madonna, or Virgin Mother, with a Child in her arms, who was sacred to their Mysteries; and their Sun God was resurrected at the time of the year corresponding to that at which modern Christians celebrate Easter.

From Maurice's Indian Antiquities

THE GROUND PLAN OF STONEHENGE

The Druid temples or places of religious worship were not patterned after those of other nations. Most of their ceremonies were performed at night, either in thick groves of Oak trees or around open-air altars built of great uncut stones. How these masses of rock were moved has not been satisfactorily explained. The most famous of these altars, a great ring of rocks, is Stonehenge, in Southwestern England. This structure, laid out on an astronomical basis, still stands, a wonder of antiquity.

Both the cross and the serpent were sacred to the Druids, who made the former by removing all the branches of an oak tree and fastening one to the main trunk in the form of the letter T. This oaken cross became symbolic of their superior Deity. They also worshiped the sun, moon, and stars. The moon received their special veneration. Caesar stated that Mercury was one of the chief deities of the Gauls. The Druids are believed to have worshiped Mercury under the similitude of a stone cube. They also had great veneration for the Nature spirits (fairies, gnomes, and undines), little creatures of the forests and rivers to whom many offerings were made. Describing the temples of the Druids, Charles Heckethorn, in The Secret Societies of All Ages & Countries, says:

> "Their temples wherein the sacred fire was preserved were generally situated on eminences and in dense groves of oak, and assumed various forms — circular, because a circle was the emblem of the universe; oval, in allusion to the mundane egg, from which issued, according to the traditions of many nations, the universe, or, according to others, our first parents; serpentine, because a serpent was the symbol of Hu, the Druidic Osiris; cruciform, because a cross is an emblem of regeneration; or winged, to represent the motion of the Divine Spirit.... Their chief deities were reducible to two — a male and a female, the great father an mother — Hu and Ceridwen, distinguished by the same characteristics as belong to Osiris and Isis, Bacchus and Ceres, or any other supreme god and goddess representing the two principles of all Being."

Godfrey Higgins states that Hu, the Mighty, came from a place which the Welsh Triads call the Summer Country, the present site of Constantinople. Albert Pike says that the Lost Word of Masonry is concealed in the name of the Druid god Hu. The meager information extant concerning the secret initiations of the Druids indicates a decided similarity between their Mystery school and the schools of Greece and Egypt Hu, the Sun God, was murdered and, after a number of strange ordeals and mystic rituals, was restored to life.

There were three degrees of the Druidic Mysteries, but few successfully passed them all. The candidate was buried in a coffin, as symbolic of the death of the Sun God. The supreme test, however, was being sent out to sea in an open boat. While undergoing this ordeal, many lost their lives. Taliesin, an ancient scholar, who passed through the Mysteries, describes the initiation of the open boat in Faber's Pagan Idolatry. The few who passed this third degree were said to have been "born again," and were instructed in the secret and hidden truths which the Druid priests had preserved from antiquity. From these initiates were chosen many of the dignitaries of the British religious and political world. (For further details, see Faber's Pagan Idolatry, Albert Pike's Morals and Dogma, and Godfrey Higgins' Celtic Druids.)

THE RITES OF MIITHRAS

When the Persian Mysteries immigrated into Southern Europe, they were quickly assimilated by the Latin mind. The cult grew rapidly, especially among the Roman soldiery, and during the Roman wars of conquest the teachings were carried by the legionanes to nearly all parts of Europe. So powerful did the cult of Mithras become that at least one Roman Emperor was initiated into the order, which met in caverns under the city of Rome. Concerning the spread of this Mystery school through different parts of Europe, C.W. King, in his Gnostics and Their Remains, says:

> "Mithraic bas-reliefs cut on the faces of rocks or on stone tablets still abound in the countries formerly the western provinces of the Roman Empire; many exist in Germany, still more in France, and in this island (Britain) they have often been discovered on the line of the Picts' Wall and the noted one at Bath."

Alexander Wilder, in his Philosophy and Ethics of the Zoroasters, states that Mithras is the Zend title for the sun, and he is supposed to dwell within that shining orb. Mithras has a male and a female aspect, though not himself androgynous. As Mithras, he is the lord of the sun, powerful and radiant, and most magnificent of the Yazatas (Izads, or Genii, of the sun). As Mithra, this deity represents the feminine principle; the mundane universe is recognized as her symbol. She represents Nature as receptive and terrestrial, and as fruitful only when bathed in the glory of the solar orb. The Mithraic cult is a simplification of the more elaborate teachings of Zarathustra (Zoroaster), the Persian fire magician.

According to the Persians, there coexisted in eternity two principles. The first of there, Ahura Mazda, or Ormuzd, was the Spirit of Good. From Ormuzd came forth a number of hierarchies of good and beautiful spirits (angels and archangels). The second of these eternally existing principles was called Ahriman. He was also a pure and beautiful spirit, but he later rebelled against Ormuzd, being jealous of his power. This did not occur, however, until Ormuzd had created light, for previously Ahriman had not been conscious of the existence of Ormuzd. Because of his jealousy and rebellion, Ahriman became the Spirit of Evil. From himself he individualized a host of destructive creatures to injure Ormuzd.

When Ormuzd created the earth, Ahriman entered into its grosser elements. Whenever Ormuzd did a good deed, Ahriman placed the principle of evil within it. At last when Ormuzd created the human race, Ahriman became incarnate in the lower nature of man so that in each personality the Spirit of Good and the Spirit of Evil struggle for control. For 3,000 years Ormuzd ruled the celestial world with light and goodness. Then he created man. For another 3,000 years Ormuzd he ruled man with wisdom and integrity. Then the power of Ahriman began, and the struggle for the soul of man continues through the next period of 3,000 years. During the fourth period of 3,000 years, the power of Ahriman will be destroyed. Good will return to the world again, evil and death will be vanquished, and at last the Spirit of Evil will bow humbly before the throne of Ormuzd. While Ormuzd and Ahriman are struggling for control of the human soul and for supremacy in Nature, Mithras, God of Intelligence, stands as mediator between the two. Many authors have noted the similarity between mercury and Mithras. As the chemical mercury acts as a solvent (according to alchemists), so Mithras seeks to harmonize the two celestial opposites.

There are many points of resemblance between Christianity and the cult of Mithras. One of the reasons for this probably is that the Persian mystics invaded Italy during the first century after Christ and the early history of both cults was closely interwoven. The Encyclopedia Britannica makes the following statement concerning the Mithraic and Christian Mysteries:

From Lundy's Monumental Christianity

M1THRAS SLAYING THE BULL

The most famous sculpturings and reliefs of this protokos show Mithras kneeling upon the recumbent form of a great bull, into whose throat he is driving a sword. The slaying of the bull signifies that the rays of the sun, symbolized by the sword, release at the vernal equinox the vital essences of the earth — the blood of the bull—which, pouring from the wound made by the Sun God, fertilize the seeds of living things. Dogs were held sacred to the cult of Mithras, being symbolic of sincerity and trustworthiness. The Mithraics used the serpent as an emblem of Ahriman, the Spirit of Evil, and water rats were held sacred to him. The bull is esoterically the Constellation of Taurus; the serpent, its opposite in the zodiac, Scorpio; the Sun, Mithras, entering into the side of the bull, slays the celestial creature and nourishes the universe with its blood.

> "The fraternal and democratic spirit of the first communities and their humble origin; the identification of the object of adoration with light and the sun; the legends of the shepherds with their gifts and adoration, the flood, and the ark the representation in art of the fiery chariot, the drawing of water from the rock; the use of sanctification of Sunday and of the 25th of December; the insistence on moral conduct, the emphasis placed on abstinence and self-control; the doctrine of heaven and hell, of primitive revelation, of the mediation of the Logos emanating from the divine, the atoning sacrifice, the constant warfare between good and evil, and the final triumph of the former, the immortality of the soul, the destruction of the universe - [these] are some of the resemblances which, whether real or only apparent, enabled Mithraism to prolong its resistance to Christianity."

The rites of Mithras were performed in caves. Porphyry, in his Cave of the Nymphs, states that Zarathustra (Zoroaster) was the first to consecrate a cave to the worship of God, because a cavern was symbolic of the earth, or the lower world of darkness. John P Lundy, in his Monumental Christianity, describes the cave of Mithras as follows:

> "But this cave was adorned with the signs of the zodiac, Cancer and Capricorn. The summer and winter solstices were chiefly conspicuous, as the gates of souls descending into this life, or passing out of it in their ascent to the Gods; Cancer being the gate of descent, and Capricorn of ascent. These are the two avenues of the immortals passing up and down from earth to heaven, and from heaven to earth."

The so-called chair of St. Peter, in Rome, was believed to have been used in one of the pagan Mysteries, possibly that of Mithras, in whose subterranean grottoes the votaries of the Christian Mysteries met in the early days of their faith. In Anacalypsis, Godfrey Higgins writes that in 1662, while cleaning this sacred chair of Bar-Jonas, the Twelve Labors of Hercules were discovered upon it, and that later the French discovered upon the same chair the Mohammedan confession of faith, written in Arabic.

THE BIRTH OF MITHRAS

Mithras was born out of a rock, which, breaking open, permitted him to emerge. This occurred in the darkness of a subterranean chamber. The Church of the Nativity at Bethlehem confirms the theory that Jesus was born in a grotto, or cave. According to Dupuis, Mithras was put to death by crucifixion and rose again on the third day.

Initiation into the rites of Mithras, like initiation into many other ancient schools of philosophy, apparently consisted of three important degrees. Preparation for these degrees consisted of self-purification, the building up of intellectual powers, and the control of the animal nature. In the first degree the candidate was given a crown upon the point of a sword and instructed in the mysteries of Mithras' hidden power. Probably he was taught that the golden crown represented his own spiritual nature, which must be objectified and unfolded before he could truly glorify Mithras; for Mithras was his own soul, standing as mediator between Ormuzd, his spirit, and Ahriman, his animal nature.

In the second degree he was given the armor of intelligence and purity and sent into the darkness of subterranean pits to fight the beasts of lust, passion, and degeneracy. In the third degree he was given a cape, upon which were drawn or woven the signs of the zodiac and other astronomical symbols. After his initiations were over, he was hailed as one who had risen from the dead, was instructed in the secret teachings of the Persian mystics, and became a full-fledged member of the order. Candidates who successfully passed the Mithraic initiations were called Lions, and were marked upon their foreheads with the Egyptian cross. Mithras himself is often pictured with the head of a lion and two pairs of wings. Throughout the entire ritual were repeated references to the birth of Mithras as the Sun God, his sacrifice for man, his death that men might have eternal life, and lastly, his resurrection and the saving of all humanity by his intercession before the throne of Ormuzd. (See Heckethorn.)

While the cult of Mithras did not reach the philosophic heights attained by Zarathustra, its effect upon the civilization of the Western world was far-reaching, for at one time nearly all Europe was converted to its doctrines. Rome, in her intercourse with other nations, inoculated them with her religious principles; and many later institutions have exhibited Mithraic culture. The reference to the "Lion" and the "Grip of the Lion's Paw" in the Master Mason's degree have a strong Mithraic tinge and may easily have originated from this cult. A ladder of seven rungs appears in the Mithraic initiation. Faber is of the opinion that this ladder was originally a pyramid of seven steps. It is possible that the Masonic ladder with seven rungs had its origin in this Mithraic symbol. Women were never permitted to enter the Mithraic Order, but children of the male sex were initiates long before they reached maturity. The refusal to permit women to join the Masonic Order may be based on the esoteric reason given in the secret instructions of the Mithraics. This cult is another excellent example of those secret societies whose legends are largely symbolic representations of the sun and his journey through the houses of the heavens. Mithras, rising from a stone, is merely the sun rising over the horizon, or, as the ancients supposed, out of the horizon, at the vernal equinox.

John O'Neill disputes the theory that Mithras was intended as a solar deity. In The Night of the Gods he writes: "The Avescan Mithra, the yazata of light, has '10,000 eyes, high, with full knowledge (perethuvacdayana), strong, sleepless and ever awake (jaghaurvaunghem),' The supreme god Ahura Mazda also has one Eye, or else it is said that 'with his eyes, the sun, moon and stars, he sees everything.' The theory that Mithra was originally a title of the supreme heavens — god — putting the sun out of court — is the only one that answers all requirements. It will be evident that here we have origins in abundance for the Freemason's Eye and its 'nonquam dormio."' The reader must not confuse the Persian Mithra with the Vedic Mitra. According to Alexander Wilder, "The Mithraic rites superseded the Mysteries of Bacchus, and became the foundation of the Gnostic system, which for many centuries prevailed in Asia, Egypt, and even the remote West."

Symbolism, Part 2

INTRODUCTION

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

Greetings! This morning the clan is gathering and just after noon we will have roll call. In but a short time the sails will be set and our journey shall begin. The first tests will be those of the sea and land.

On looking through our registrations we notice we can divide our group in two: some of you have undertaken mystical studies before and some have never considered the higher teachings. It will therefore be necessary to begin at an easy pace and go steadily forward. You know what happens if someone is asleep and you turn on a bright light in the dead of night; we must avoid that situation at all costs.

These early Libers are general and introductory. They have been chosen to provide an overview. For those new in this work, do not be too concerned if you feel you cannot grasp all the ideas completely at first. Libers that follow throw light on the earlier ones and when you revise your views (and you must revise them), what you did not entirely understand the first time will be clearly seen a little later.

Now I know many of you are particularly interested in the Martinist teachings. These will be examined in detail after we have passed through the general introductions. It would be folly to attempt to study the Martinist Works before a basic foundation is laid down.

One of the most unfortunate things that can happen to us in this life is that of falling into boredom. We may become ill, financially bankrupt, or deserted by our friends. These are all conditions, when rightly understood, spur us on to correct our inadequacies and to betterment. But when we lose interest and enthusiasm, become gripped by the forces of boredom and inertia, Lord help us! For monotony leads to stagnation and to stop moving is to die.

Well! What has all this to do with matters at hand, you may ask. We would just like to say a little something about how we are attempting to compile the Libers. Obviously, to deal properly with any topic it must take on the quality of a main theme, this is necessary so it can be developed. But to keep the Libers fresh you will notice we try to add a little ancillary material to give it a nice balance; or we incorporate a variety of subject matter. The reason we do this, you guessed it, is to stave off boredom!!!

Let us take this opportunity to remind you that our curriculum is being, arranged on a graded scale. Some of the brethren are taking their first steps towards the higher science, whereas some have been sojourning for a while before being, led to our portals. Some have rudiments to learn, and quite a few have much to unlearn. Remember that while we have all been emanated from the same place, and we all are working our way back (the story of the Prodigal Son in The Bible), we do not all exist on the same level of spiritual attainment, development and comprehension. (For this reason we must hold in reverence all religions and denominations. Each and every one serves a worthy purpose on one of the many roads to the Beginning. None may lay a claim to having all of the TRUTH, yet each has some of it.)

So we must all spend a little time together and consolidate our group, and get to know each other. Later, when we have arrived at a uniform understanding, then we can weigh anchor and set sail for deeper waters. This will be soon enough. Let us proceed one step at a time.

The lectures being shared with you are shorn of useless verbiage. Do not judge these Libers by the amount of pages they contain! We take it that our members are adult and mature and do not need to be taken round and round in circles like children at kindergarten. We know of some "schools" who charge four times and more the subscription we ask send out reams of material, which, if it was reduced to its essence, could almost be put on a single sheet We are not of that ilk! Judge our material by its quality. Also, do not compare our Libers to a magazine or a newspaper which is designed to be skimmed though and set aside until the next one comes along! The Libers must be studied and the more you revise the more you will discover. They contain gold, but you must dig for it! That is how it should be, for that is the Law.

In an effort to keep the lessons as fresh and interesting as possible we try to present a variety of topics in each Liber. You will find later, however, that what seemed to be "diversity" was in fact only branches of the same tree! We greatly value your comments, words of appreciation and encouragement Brothers & Sisters all: we salute you again. May that Peace which passes all human understanding abide with you always.

Sincerely yours in the Work,

LIBER OVERVIEW

In Liber 3, we continue our study of Symbolism. First, we complete our look at Numbers with two Lectures. This is followed by studies of the Symbolism of Letters and of the Martinist Pentacle. Then, we have two Essays; one on life and death, and the other on health. Lastly, we have the completion of the Optional article on "The Ancient Mysteries and Secret Societies".

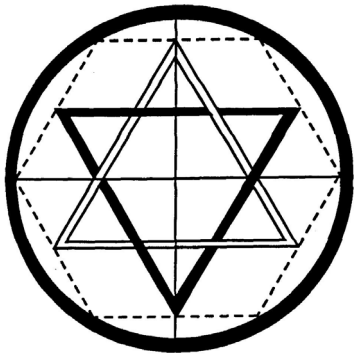
LECTURE
The Symbolism of Numbers (4)

My Brothers & Sisters:

Let us begin by recalling our last Conventicle in which we reached the Associate members stage of symbolism connected with the number FIVE. This subject brought us to the consideration of Good & Evil. If you have thought carefully about this endless metaphysical problem, from the Martinist presentation, you will know that the Good which is above all Creation, in an Absolute sense, is still in the hiddenness of Omneity; that is to say, it is occult. Anything on a lower level is "less good" and therefore relatively evil. All that we can perceive or conceive is this relativity which we can only interpret from our own personal standpoint Let us take a blunt example: A cannibal might say that a piece of human flesh is good to eat, whereas we would disagree. Free-will, freedom of thought, is therefore in the picture.

(Think carefully about the above. Consider the relativity of Evil. Not everyone sees things in the same way. Question: Can 'evil' be described as something that is "less good"?)



The number FIVE is the turning point of human destiny. The Divine Spirit which is fundamental to all Being has become crucified on the cross of matter. The number FOUR has an addition at the center. Observe the equal-armed cross in our Pentacle. At its crucial point the Christ Spirit must manifest in all who tread the Path of Return. We have five physical senses. We have the free-will to spend our life merely satisfying these senses, or we may direct our will-power towards using these same senses to read the two Books of the Martinist. These are The Book of Nature and The Book of Man, which teach us the way out of the Forest of Errors, which particular Work will engage our attention in due time.

As explained at the outset, you are now being provided with the alphabet and tools of Martinism. Simultaneously, you are being given some simple exercises for training the mind to concentrate within itself Animals use the Instinctive Mind almost entirely. Human beings, however, are more self-conscious, they can reflect. (As in Exercise #1). CONSCIENCE is an early development, an inner "feeling" as to which is the best or truest way to proceed.

But the human mind is not so far removed from the animal nature as to be free from animal instincts. Discipline of the mind is essential for those who seek the way out of the Forest of Errors and onto the Path of Return. However, even conscience can become conditioned by conventions, or warped by limitations of the senses. Ultimately, only a universal knowledge and Love can solve mankind's problems of Good & Evil. Therefore, let us travel one step at a time, conscientiously practicing our Martinist work daily.

Before we leave the subject of free-will for the present, it may be well to introduce the esoteric doctrine of Reincarnation & Karma. Just as all Nature renews itself in cycles, so do mystics understand the Soul, which we know as the Plastic Envelope, (and which carries our identity with it), to be subject also to the Universal Law of cyclic manifestation. That is to say, it reincarnates at intervals. Each new human body has a new brain and is therefore without memory to start with. Hence we do not recall our former existences with our normal consciousness. This is a later development when Soul Memory becomes conscious in the body. Our concern, however, at the moment, is with the Law of Cause & Effect, Karma, on the material Plane.

Free will is simply the ability of man to choose when and how he will act Free will is a function of brain activity while our prime state of consciousness is on that level, so we can only choose our attitude to circumstances while we are incarnating. Thus, as we return to Earth at each rebirth, we can only resume where we left off as far as advancement on the Path of Return is concerned. From this we can see that we cannot avoid our destiny, we can only delay it. We can wander in the Forest of Errors indefinitely if we so wish. Paradoxically, this is why Man is blest above all other creatures: by being privileged to know the Way of Enlightenment.

Let us pause for a few moments to collect our thoughts and ask ourselves a few questions:

What is the value of conscience?

Give some illustrations of the way Nature renews itself in cycles.

The lecture speaks of the Law of Cause & Effect, can you recall the meaning or definition of a Universal Law?

Do we recall former existences with our normal consciousness?

How do we become aware of our former lives?

In what way is Man blest above all other creatures?

What is the essential prerequisite for those who seek the way out of the Forest of Errors?

Brothers & Sisters, our universal language of numbers has shown us how our existence as conscious beings can be represented in stages or emanations from Omneity. At Number FIVE we found ourselves immersed in matter with its four dimensions. From the fifth point we have the sharpest focus of Consciousness in the physical world and we can use our objective discernment for positive or negative purposes. In other words, we may apply our will towards the Path of Return, or not, just as we choose. FIVE therefore depicts the turning point of humanity, we understand that perfect Good is only in Omneity, that all parts of the Divine Whole cannot be complete in themselves and thus all stages of evolution are relative to each other. FIVE symbolizes the infusion of the four mundane stages by the Fifth Essence, or Quintessence, or Holy Spirit. Seen from below or in Nature, we have risen from the kingdoms of Mineral, Plant and Animal life, to our Human State. Viewed from above or from the Spiritual World, it may be described as the crucifixion of the Spirit upon the Cross of Matter. The Human Personality, which has evolved out of the interactions of preceding forces, has acquired a sense of individuality. It has gradually Learned of its freedom to choose its course of action.

It is recognized that certain free choices are better than others, so the choices we make are relatively 'good' or fortunate, others are relatively "evil' or unfortunate. Let us bear in mind the Martinist teaching at Initiation about the sacrifice of the self, the petty self, for the good of the collectivity. Then we may begin to see the real significance of the Number 5 at the center of the Cross. The essential freedom of choice which objective consciousness gives us, can be used to the glory of the Sovereign Architect of the Universe, or otherwise. The Human Personality can become the Divine Personality. We can choose quite freely to discipline ourselves and our consciousness so as to attain the Christ or Perfect Consciousness. It is the final Gateway from this world on the Path of Return to Omneity. The alternative is to wallow indefinitely among the Men of the Stream, or be lost in the Forest of Errors.

This, then, is the inherent Evil or Abomination attributed to the Number 5. It stands between 1 and 9 and signifies the turning point of human destiny. We can choose which way we wish to go. The soul of man is able to rise above the illusions of trying to satisfy the five material senses. Instead of striving after effects, Man is free to seek their Cause.

Let me quote our Ven::: M::: Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin:

> 'The only Initiation which I preach and seek with all the ardors of my soul, is that by which we may enter into the heart of God and make God's heart enter into us, there to form an indissoluble marriage, which will make us the friend, brother, and spouse of our divine Redeemer. There is no other mystery, to arrive at this holy Initiation, than to descend deeper and deeper into the depths of our being, and not desist until we can bring forth the living vivifying root, because then all the fruit which we ought to bear, according to our kind, will be produced within us and without us, naturally; as we see is the case with our earthly trees, because they are adherent to their own roots, and incessantly draw in their sap, And such is the advantage of this precious truth, that we may make it run from one end of the world to the other, and cause it to sound in every ear, without those who hear it being able to do anything with it but profit from it, or leave it alone……."

If we strive by every means in our power to move harmoniously forward to the Number SIX, we arrive at a balanced interpenetration of the Physical and Astral Planes, and we become conscious of a higher world or dimension.

This is symbolized in our Pentacle by the Interlaced Triangles. One Triangle points upwards from the corporeal world of the brother in white with his mind held in order by his will; while the dark Triangle of the Unknown and seeming Chaos points downwards, offering fulfillment of destiny to all who are duly prepared for the great sacrifice necessary to attain this state of expanded, and less personal, consciousness.

Let us pause for a moment and check our Theosophic addition and reduction. 3, the number of the Triangle, when theosophically added, gives 3 + 2 + 1 = 6 (a Golden Number). 6, when added, gives 6 + 5 + 4 + 3 + 2 + 1 = 21, which reduces to 3 (another Perfect Manifestation).

Before we close, let us again look at the sacred Pentacle of our Order. You will notice the regular hexagon just within the circle. This refers to the Six Days of Creation. It would be unwise to relate this concept to Time as is normally understood however, because Creation is going on all the Time, although we are conscious only at intervals. The 6 then symbolizes the balanced interpenetration of the Physical and Astral Planes when man becomes conscious of a higher World. This is the union of the microcosm and the macrocosm represented by our Pentacle with its interlaced triangles. Six, the HEXAD, is thus the symbol of coordinated Man and of the principle "As Above, so Below".

Brothers and Sisters, please continue to practice Exercises X, 1, and 2 daily.

LECTURE
The Symbolism of Numbers (5)

Dear Brothers & Sisters:
Greetings!

We now come to the Number which has been regarded in all ages as the most sacred of all numbers, namely: SEVEN. This symbol, or mental working tool, completes a series in the mystical alphabet and represents the last attainment of the Human Master as an individual on this Earth. Following the laws of correspondence between things of the physical world and the higher worlds, Martinists convene within a Heptad which consists of seven officers who collectively focus their aspirations in order to invoke the Divine Power.

Brothers and Sisters can interest themselves in calling to mind the man examples of the Number SEVEN in the Book of Nature. Immediately we think of the seven colors of the rainbow; the seven principle notes in the musical scale; the seven periods of creation called "days" when ancient teachers expounded them to primitive peoples; the seven Elohim—gods, or sons of God; the seven sacraments; rulers of the seven planets; the seven Spirits before the Throne; etc. Do you recall any other examples of seven?

Pythagoreans consider 7 as the perfect number or Number of Perfection because it combines 3 and 4; three signifying the attributes of the soul and four the material body, thus composing the harmony of the complete body. For Martinists, SEVEN symbolizes the highest attainment of Individual Man on Earth.

This is sufficient for Brethren to remember at this step, for we do not want our intellectual approach to go too far ahead of our understanding. A spiritual brotherhood is dedicated to the task of helping one another to find the living font of knowledge which is hidden within each one of us. Many organizations offer untold quantities of information, but in this they only continue to blind the Eye of the Soul. This All-Seeing Eye can only be opened by the careful practice of meditation exercises which are designed to still the racing intellect, so as to redirect its focus towards its Origin. In this Way, or Path, we intuitively learn the purpose of Creation and our destiny in it.

QUESTIONS / DISCUSSION

What is the inherent Evil or Abomination which is symbolized by the Number FIVE?

Name the Number of Perfection.

Let us now turn to the Number EIGHT. Eight is called the Ogdoad and stands for equilibrium. Nichomachus of Gerasa, who wrote a treatise on arithmetic and harmony during the First Century A.D. considers EIGHT to be the number of Universal Harmony because musical ratios are distinguishable by it. To Martinists, EIGHT implies the Cosmic Christ, the realm of the Master who has finished his work on Earth as an individual, and whose influence, apart from that transmitted to his disciples, is active on a much higher Plane of Being. In Christian Gnosticism, the rebirth in Christ is called "the change unto the Ogdoad." Seen from above, to use a metaphor, 8 is the Third Number down from the Apex or 1 and is therefore the Divine Sonship. (Students will kindly refer to the "Tree of Life" in Liber 2. We are presently at 10, so that counting up the Tree, eight going up puts us at the Number 3. This important point will be taken up in detail later.)

We find this Ogdoad, which is hidden from the material world, represented in our Oratory by an eighth chair unoccupied by any corporeal body. In Oriental Works of the Day, we hear of the Eightfold Path of Equilibrium (the Middle Way) taught by the Buddha. We will examine this from the Martinist viewpoint when we come round to this subject again.

The works of this day will complete for the time being our study of the universal language of Numbers. The final stages of the Return to Omneity are symbolized by the Numbers NINE and TEN.

NINE is called the Ennead and signifies limitation. It is the last single digit and in our theosophical reduction we have noticed that it adds nothing to nothing! It almost seems to be a nonentity. Let us refresh our minds with an example or two: 5 + 9 = 14 which equals 5 again! 1 = 9 = 10 = 1 again! NINE is therefore a negative influence. Let us take the Supreme Triangle on the Tree of Life represented by Numbers 1, 2 and 3 which represents the Holy Upper Trinity. (This Triangle is above the two interlaced in our Pentacle.) If we place 10 at the Apex of the Triangle, we may then place 9 and 8 at the base points (9 in place of 2; and 8 in place of 3). NINE is then seen as a kind of negative recipient of the First Emanation of Omneity, which does not manifest completely until it encounters EIGHT, the Realm of the Divine Sons of Light (the Elohim). We can thus obtain some brief and very limited glimpse of the Fiat Lux of the Sovereign Architect.

Lastly we have the Number TEN. 10, which is sometimes described as the Decad Out Of Nothing (NO THING), symbolizes the re-absorption into the Absolute. Theosophic numbering gives 10 = 1. It is also the sum total of the Heptad (7) and the Holy Upper Trinity.

BRIEF REVIEW OF THE TEN NUMBERS AND THEIR MEANINGS

1 is called the MONAD. It is considered to stand alone and to be independent of all other Numbers. It is Unity, and Unity is never called a Number although all Numbers emanate from it and it contains them all.

Number 2 is the DUAD. It is the first principle denoting separation from Unity. It stands for opposition, the passivity which is the opposite of activity.

Number 3 is the TRIAD. It is universally taken to represent manifestation. In the immaterial world, it represents the Trinity composing Omneity. In the material world, it stands for the three kingdoms of nature: mineral, vegetable and animal. (Question: How is the triad represented in Man?)

Number 4 is the TETRAD. It is the universal number of material perfection. It is the tetragrammaton or four-letter name of power of Omneity YOD-HE-VAU-HE). It is also the "divine tetractys" of Pythagoras' school. For Martinists it suggests the great Quaternary Law (to be studied later). Architecture provides its main structures with four principal walls. The mystical student sees '4' in the ancient classification: Air, Earth, Fire and Water, represented in modem physics as Gases, Solids, Radiant Energy and Liquids. FOUR is represented by the equal-armed cross of matter in our Martinist Pentacle. This sacred emblem, the equilateral cross, also depicts positive action by its upright line, just as in Nature living things grow upwards; and negative passivity by its horizontal line, also shown in Nature by tranquil water or sleeping creatures lying flat.

Number 5 is the PENTAD. It denote the principle of Evil. It symbolizes humanity in its exiled state, and suggests the five leaves in the Book of Nature (to be studied in due time).

Number 6 is the HEAD, symbolical of the six acts of creation manifesting in the material world. It depicts Solomon's Seal as the interlaced triangles, interlocking the higher and lower worlds. It denotes a balanced interpenetration of the physical and astral Planes and we become conscious of a higher world or dimension.

Number 7 is the HEPTAD, the most sacred of all Numbers. It symbolizes divine power. It is the Number of Perfection. For Martinists, SEVEN denotes the highest attainment of Individual Man on Earth.

Number 8 is the OGDOAD, expressive of the equilibrium of force. It symbolizes the realm of the Master who has finished his work on Earth as an individual and whose influence is active on a much higher Plane of Being.

Number 10 is the DECAD. It is symbolic of the union of the heptad and the triad. It symbolizes re-absorption into the Absolute.

Brothers & Sisters, we have now seen the symbolical value of Numbers to the mystical student. Meditation will unfold them even further. The Martinist is not superstitious on these matters. Mystical Symbols are a combination of Natural Symbols from the Book of Nature, and artificial symbols used by Man in Exile. This combination enshrines a heritage of knowledge belonging to the collectivity of Mankind and represents a pattern wherein the Collective Consciousness of Man evolves, degree by degree for each person from Time to Eternity.

None of the Numbers is Good or Evil in itself, but each helps us to understand relative states of progress on the Path. There are 10 such Numbers, the tenth one being a point within the Circle, the beginning and end of our Pentacle. Moreover, when we conceive the pattern on each Plane or in each World, the tenth always stands as the first of the next stage. Perhaps this is stepping a little too far forward for now. We will return to this interesting study in the Grand Tradition of the West which is known as the Qabala, when we shall hear of the Decad Out Of Nothing. Let us therefore prepare to absorb the remaining tools of the Martinist, and become able to meditate properly by the time we open the Book of Man.

It is hoped that all Brothers & Sisters are continuing the exercises, especially the one for disciplining the Mind with Single Awareness (Exercise 2). This is particularly designed to keep the attention from hypnotic sleep, in that actions followed are not solely repetitive. The mind should cease to drift but remain at the command of the will.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

LECTURE
The Symbolism of Letters

My Brothers & Sisters:

In our recent discussions of the science and symbolism of Numbers, we have seen that Numbers can be used as a language to express certain mystical and philosophic ideas. This should suggest to us a closer relationship between numbers and language than we have been aware of. In other words, both Language and Numbers must have had a common origin. Both are means of communication.

Martinists hold that once there was an interior or super-sensible language, a means of communication not dependent upon outward signs or sounds. However this may be, it is true that when communication became an outward and external thing, disparity began to exist. What had been an Enochian tongue, or angelic language, was known to few and communication between men was limited like everything else on the Earth Plane.

Martinists, however, have not lost hope of Man's recovering his right to use the angelic language, and part of our study has been devoted to the languages of Man in order to recover those secret and interior elements of the tongue of the spiritual world.

Of living languages today, the Chinese is the most ancient. Sanskrit, Hebrew and Egyptian are likewise very old; but with the possible exception of Hebrew, they are no longer in use. Nevertheless, a careful examination of the structure of these tongues will give some indication of the original force of language and will show that in the beginning its powers were greater than they are today.

In Hebrew, especially, one can see something of the original force inhering in the very letters of the alphabet. In themselves, they have a meaning and purpose, a fundamental characteristic, which they carry over in the words they form. First of all, they are divided into three classifications: There are three first or fundamental elements called mothers, — Aleph, Mem and Shin: א, מ, ש (Note: Hebrew characters are read from right to left.

In the Sepher Yetzirah[1] or "Book of Creation", said to be the first Hebrew metaphysical essay, it is written: "The three fundamental letters, א, מ, ש signify, as מ (Mem) is mute like the water and ש (Shin) hissing like the fire, there is א (Aleph) among them, a breath of air which reconciles them." Next there are seven double letters, so called because they have two pronunciations. Lastly, there are twelve simple letters.

These 22 letters were established and appointed by God, according to the Sepher Yetzirah: "He combined, weighed and changed them, and formed by them all beings which are in existence, and all those which will be formed in all time to come."

[1] Note: The Sepher Yetzirah is spelled variously: with a "Y", "J" or "I". Martinists prefer to spell it Ietzirah. This is a small, inexpensive work, and every student should obtain a copy and study it! Also: Kabala is variously spelled — Kabala, Kaballah, Cabala, Qabalah, etc.. Martinists prefer to spell it Qabala as this is closer to the Hebrew.

It is in the Dogmatic Qabala that one finds the metaphysical system developed from these Hebrew letters. In our later study of it, we shall discover the source of much that is fundamental to all true mystical teaching; and we shall, as well, bring ourselves nearer to an understanding of the strength and beauty which must have characterized the angelic tongue.

Whatever the exact nature of that spiritual tongue may have been, we must recognize the fact that, hampered as he is in his state of exile, man still struggles to speak it even though it may be but a syllable, and that imperfectly uttered. The memory of it fills his moments of aspiration and prompts him to make some effort to communicate it to others. If he must use words, they are full of beauty and vibrant with the subtle overtones of meaning. If he is an artist, his colors blend in higher hues of scintillating light. If a musician, then his chords strike deep into the soul consciousness and awaken it to recognition of infinite harmony.

Poetry, music, painting—what are these but faint echoes of that angelic tongue by which man communicated with his fellows when in his First Estate? These are no small amusements or ideal occupations as the mystic knows them. They are the remnants of a divine speech which momentarily break through the fog of ignorance which surround man in his exile in the Forest of Errors and inspire him with memories of that life he once knew and may know again.

Poetry comes not from corruption, nor is it born in frivolity. It is one of the most sublime among the gifts of Men. It expresses something which recalls man's lost language and First Estate and lifts him from the sordid thoughts in which he has engulfed himself. This is why so many mystics in times past expressed their most sublime thoughts in poetic form.

The same is true of painting and music. Painting is the science of mystical sight. Viewing sensible objects in nature, the true mystical painter transcends them to find subjects in the realm of spiritual imagination. Even in copying what is seen, the painter strives to see that which is real and lasting and to prefigure the values and dimensions of the higher world. He is never content to limit his work to reproducing only what the physical eye beholds; it strives to infuse into his creation something of the eternal principles toward which man aspires, which are invariable.

Music has ever been related to what the mystic terms the harmony of the spheres. Pythagoras worked equally with music and number to disengage man from the bondage of earth. Because of music's effect upon the subtle faculties of Man in helping him recall the experience of his First Estate, Pythagoras recommended its daily use among his disciples. He expounded the theory of the harmony of the spheres, explaining that the seven planets were comparable to the seven strings of a harp, which it is said he invented. Each planet has its individual note, all blending to make a great music within the universe itself.

Too little is known even now of the mystical stimulus evoked by chants, mantras and vowel sounds, and of the effect which such things have on the different parts of the body. When musicians become mystics, or when mystics turn to music to express themselves, the whole moral and ethical tone of their life is elevated. A definite purification takes place within the Plastic Envelope and man's reintegration and regeneration are thereby advanced. According to Plato, it is through music that man can be most quickly attuned to the realm of the Archetypes.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

Some questions for your consideration:

In what way is Poetry, Painting and Music related to our First Estate?

What is the name of the treatise which is said to be the oldest Hebrew metaphysical essay?

Why are the seven Hebrew “double letters” called “double letters”?

What effect do music, chants and mantras have on the Plastic Envelope?

How are language and numbers related?

What are the names of the three mother letters of the Hebrew alphabet?

How many letters compose the Hebrew alphabet?

What are the divisions of the Hebrew alphabet?

What Number is known as the Ogdoad, and what does it represent?

Why is NINE a symbol for limitation?

What particular message did Saint-Martin’s books carry?

Describe what is meant by ‘reincarnation’.

Does the physical body reincarnate?

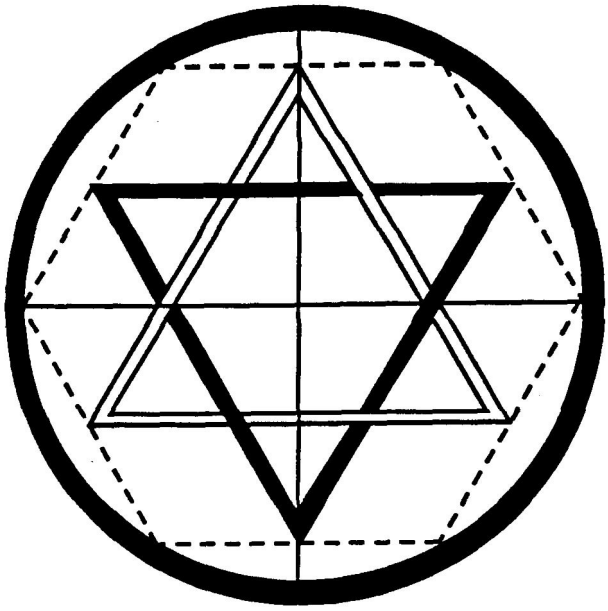
The Symbolism of The Martinist Pentacle

On all documents of the Martinist Order, the Universal Pentacle (pictured at right) is imprinted, and it constantly puzzles the profane who, too often, confuse it with the Star of David.



God, the First Principle of the Universe, is represented by a circle, the symbol of eternity. The action of eternity, passing from latent power to action, is symbolized by the mystic relation from Center to Circumference; it is the Ray projected six times inside the Circle, which produces the hexagon, emblematic of the six periods of creation.

The center Point forms the Seventh Period, that of Rest. It is between these creative emanations (eons), that Nature evolves by its two great currents of Involution (descending triangle, black) and Evolution (ascending triangle, white).

Let us observe that Nature, symbolized by the Seal of Solomon, does not reach God, but only the creative forces emanating from Him. From the Center of the Universe to God Himself (Circle), man's power takes birth, uniting the effects of Divinity to the fatalism of Nature in the Unity of his Free Will symbolized by a quaternary (the cross). This cross, the image of man, unites the center of the universe (the Human Soul) to God Himself. It expresses the opposition of the dual forces which gives birth to the quintessence. It is the image of the action of the active over the passive, of spirit over matter.

The vertical bar symbolizes the Active; the horizontal bar represents the Passive. The triangle pointing up represents all that ascends, it is particularly the symbol of Fire, of heat. The one with the point down represents all that descends, it is especially the symbol of Water, of humidity. The union of the two triangles represents the combination of heat and humidity; of the sun and the moon. It symbolizes the principle of creation, the circulation from heaven to earth. This figure (the Seal of Solomon), gives the explanation of Hermes' words in the Emerald Tablet: "It goes up from the earth to heaven and, vice versa, it goes down to earth and receives the force of superior and inferior things."

Such, concluded Papus about the Martinist Pentacle, is the explanation of the most complete synthetic figure that the genius of Man had ever discovered. It reveals all the mysteries of nature. It is true in physics as well as in metaphysics, in the natural sciences as well as in theology. It is the Seal that unites reason to faith, materialism to spiritualism, religion to science. As for Solomon's Seal, or the Six Pointed Star, which is an integral part of the Martinist Pentacle, it is explained by Papus and Teder as follows:

> "Solomon's Seal represents the universe and its two ternaries, God & Nature. For this reason, it is called the "sign of the macrocosm" or "Grand World", in opposition to the Five Pointed Star which is the sign of the "microcosm" or "small world" or "man". The Seal of Solomon is composed of two triangles: that which has the head facing up and represents all that goes up. It symbolizes fire and heat. Psychically, it corresponds to the aspirations of man ascending towards his creator, materially it represents the evolution of psychic forces from the center of the earth to our planetary system, the sun. In a word, it expresses the natural return of moral and psychic forces to the principle from which they emanate. The triangle that points downwards represents all that descends; it is the hermetic symbol of water and humidity. In the spiritual world, it symbolizes the action of the Divinity upon its creatures; in the physical world, it represents the current of involution coming from the sun, center of our planetary system and going to the center of the earth. Combined, these two triangles express not only the law of equilibrium but also the eternal activity of God and the Universe. They represent the perpetual movement, the constant generation and regeneration by fire and water. In other words, the "putrefaction" term used in the past instead of the more scientific one of "fermentation".

Solomon's Seal is then the perfect image of creation and according to Papus & Teder, it is with this significance that Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin enclosed it in his Universal Pentacle.

ESSAY
Life and Death

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

Life is for living! But what about the experience we call death? The reason the passing of a loved one is such a shattering experience is that our frame of reference is too small. It is like living in the flat world of pre-Columbus times. There is a point "out there" where the journeyer falls off into oblivion.

Unless we have a view of life that transcends or at least includes death, we will experience fear and bereavement. Some persons are so unnerved at the passing of a loved one that their faith is shattered. This indicates they were trying to understand God through their experiences, indicating a very limited concept of God. The need is to begin with God as the underlying principle, and then to look at trouble from this transcendent perspective. Looking at death through the consciousness of God is to see, not void, but another dimension of life.

Some persons think it is negative to talk about death. However, fear of dealing with the subject indicates a subconscious bondage to it. It may suggest that our faith does not include the wholeness of life that transcends death. When we get the realization of wholeness and allness, then we see death, when it comes, as a part of that wholeness, and not a deviation from it.

There is an interesting parallel between the movement of the ocean waves and the flow of life. Is a wave a body of water? Watch a piece of flotsam. If the water is moving, the flotsam moves with it. When the wave crashes on the shore, where is the water that first formed it? It has returned to the deep, as indicated by the fact that the piece of flotsam is still out there.

Life that appears to begin with birth and end with death is like one instant in the movement of the wave. In one instant the wave is a particular body of water. In this moment, life for you is your body. But life is not limited to your body! When the body is laid aside at death, it is not the end of you or the flow of life projected through you; the wave moves on!

Shakespeare says: "All the world's a stage, and all of us are actors on it." In our life-time we play many parts. You may have identified with one, and thus become self-typed. You may have accepted a self-image of limitation, such as failure, or incompetence, etc., because of some experience back there in your early life. But you are not the same person that your memory sees in one frame in early years. It is a mark left in passing, but why let it be your final grade? You are always growing, and that is life! And the purpose of the flow of life is the ceaseless longing of the infinite to evolve through you that which is involved in you. Wherever you are in life's ongoing, there is always within you the unborn possibility of wholeness, and yours is always the privilege of giving birth to it.

But again: what about death? Is this process limited to the proverbial three-score-years-and-ten? Are we to believe that at birth a brand-new product comes forth from some celestial soul-factory to play its little part for a few years and then to be swept up in the dustpan of oblivion? Life would make little sense, and it would seem at times to be unjust.

Jesus said: "Be ye perfect as your heavenly father is perfect." It is a clear command, and an ultimate goal. But how is this to be reached in seventy-five or even one hundred years? Especially when we start at different levels? The only logical answer is that, even as life is not finished at death, life has not just begun at birth. What appears to be the beginning is but the other side of what appears to be the ending. Even as there are many different levels of consciousness and experiences at death, so there must be many different levels of beginning at birth.

Death, then, is not a goal or a final experience. It never really settles anything. Unfinished business must be carried over, unsolved problems must eventually be worked out. And spiritual development, or "treasures in heaven" cannot be lost. Plato says: "Knowledge easily acquired is that which the enduring self had in an earlier life, so that it flows back easily."

Here we have the concept of reincarnation, which we will not delve into at this time, but would challenge you to look up and see beyond the artificial barriers of birth and death. As the wave passes, where is the water that was the wave but has not yet returned to the placid ocean? "The only place to find the wave that was, is in the wave that is. The life you once lived can only be found in the life you now express." (From The Sleeping Prophet, Jess Stem's best selling book).

The Psalmist says: "A day is as a thousand years and a thousand years is as a day in the sight of God." Imagine life between birth and death as one day of livingness. You rise in the morning, launch into the day, experience its problems and blessings, and then, even if you are not satisfied with the day, you eventually relax into a night's sleep. And what is night? It is the "brief shadow through which we pass from sunlight to sunlight." It brings rest and renewal. And the morning cometh, and beginning again.

So what is death? Jesus said of the girl: "She is not dead, but sleepeth." Death is no more a reality or finality than sleep. Get this thought into your consciousness of the eternal flow of life that transcends death, and you will be free from the fear of death, free from the burdens of worry over the passing of time or grief over the passing of a loved one.

Then you can get on with the business of living life from within-out! You can resolve to live each day as if it were the only day there is, which in fact it is! "Look upward to eternal life, to the fearless and deathless, the everlasting, to the stars." In its complete sense, life simply is. Let us accept it, live it, and rejoice in it!

The Books of Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin

Saint Paul has written, "The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life." Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin gave the surest evidence of that spirit as the years passed and more and more seekers turned to him. In the books he wrote, as well as in the guidance he offered, the truths of the system of Martinez Pasquales were clarified and strengthened.

Saint-Martin's books became immensely popular among the cultivated of France and elsewhere. They appealed for a consideration of the principles of true knowledge. They were published under a pseudonym, "The Unknown Philosopher". They made no attempt to turn their readers toward a personal teaching. Their message was everywhere the same:

Look within for that which is of Truth.

Saint-Martin wrote, "Books are the windows of Truth, but they are not the Door; they point out things to men, but they do not impart them." And again, by way of emphasizing that man must seek Truth not from another, but from within his own self, he wrote, not without some humor, "The works which I have composed have no other end than to persuade my readers to abandon all books, including my own."

From this, it is plain that Saint-Martin understood Truth to be inward, rather than outward. Man can only discover it by searching within, never by looking into outward things for it. The only help anyone can offer another in his search is to provide in the simplest way possible the aids by which he can enter into the depths of his own being.

This, briefly, sets forth the reasons for the respect and veneration our Order holds for Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin. In his search for Truth, his exposition of it, and his exemplary way of life, he has become the symbol of the true Mystic and Martinist.

Listen to the salutation of the dawn:
Look to this day, for it is life, the very life of life.
In its brief course lie all the possibilities and rarities of your existence: the bliss of growth, the glory of action, the splendor of beauty.
For yesterday is already a dream, and tomorrow, only a vision.
But today well lived makes every yesterday a dream of happiness and every tomorrow a vision of hope.
Look well, therefore, to this day.
Such is the Salutation of the Dawn.

The Revelation of Health

The greatest creation of God, which far surpasses anything ever invented, is the human body. Unfortunately, man has not appreciated this gift; he constantly misuses it and deprecates it in thought.

A physician recently described some of the rigors of his professional life. He told of having to drink a great deal of coffee to stay awake during his late nights at the hospital; because he then couldn't sleep, sleeping pills before bed; because he felt so drugged in the morning, wake-up pills. No wonder the quip has evolved: "There's a new wonder pill so powerful that you can't take it unless you are in perfect health." The concept of a "pill culture" has led to expression in ways that are saddening and destructive, especially with regards to our young people.

The medical profession is, however, slowly coming to know that there is more to a person than his physical body, and that in treating the body exclusively, they are giving only partial treatment, or sometimes no treatment at all. This realization first prompted the acceptance of psychiatry, which is a step in the right direction, but which still most often fails to deal with the whole person.

Dr. Rolf Alexander, in his book, The Doctor Alone Can't Cure You, tells that as a young man, he began his quest to solve the riddle of why the same drug could have different effects on different patients, and why some people die of comparatively minor afflictions while others, riddled with disease, cling to life for years. He concluded that there is, within every person, a vital core, or soul, that is the initiator and regulator of every mental and physical process of the body, and that with the exception of two factors, the work of the soul maintains perfect health. The two factors are nutritional deficiencies and emotional imbalance. He says that every mental and emotion reaction, whether mild or severe, has immediate repercussions in every cell, tissue, and function of the body.

Dr. Grantly Dick Read, in Childbirth Without Fear. says: "For my part, after thirty years of close association with physical and mental derangements of health, I am persuaded without a shadow of a doubt that with the exception of unforeseen accidents, the origin of every form of disease, both surgical and medical, whether hereditary or not, can be traced by careful investigation of the influence of fear upon the human mechanism."

Isn't it interesting that two thousand years ago, Jesus contended that all sickness was the result of disturbed states of mind? When man removes the blocks in his own consciousness, the healing principle can do its perfect work; as the Old Testament puts it, "health would spring forth speedily. Modern medical people are restating Jesus' thesis in their own language and are endeavoring to correct these disturbed mental states which are the fundamental cause of sickness.

Jesus taught the true nature of man. He taught that man is not a worm of the dust, born in sin and condemned by a disapproving God, and that he is not doomed to a life of misery in a hostile world, waiting only to sigh with relief as death releases him to eternal bliss. Jesus taught that man is a child of God, an expression of Infinite life, substance, and intelligence, and that man is a master of his circumstances, even though he has been hypnotized into considering himself a slave. Jesus also taught that man can be fettered by the chains of his own making, but that there is ever present the privilege of standing up and throwing off his shackles.

Notwithstanding that we are children of God, people do get sick and people do die. But the mistake in treating sickness is that we diagnose and treat only the physical manifestation of a deeper in-harmony. We see the symptoms in the flesh, so we treat the flesh. But, as Paul said, "Now we see in part, When that which is perfect shall come, that which is imperfect shall be done away." When we cease to focus on the imperfection and begin instead to identify with the perfect pattern of the perfect man, in the God-idea that is involved within each of us, then the way is open for health and healing.

We are told that "the free gift of God is eternal life," and by this we can see that life does not get sick, life does not grow old, and life does not die. Life is eternally acting; it is a principle given to every person as the regenerating and restoring power of his body. But because of man's freedom of will, he has the choice of setting into operation the spiritual principles that indwell him according to his consciousness. Through his use or misuse of the life principle, he either invites health or he invites sickness.

Healing, like gravity, is no respecter of persons; it acts for all alike, and goes instantly into operation. The principle does not act because of any particular virtue within the person. A prayer for healing is not dependent on special wording, nor on piety, nor on Divine coercion. The sun doesn't come from behind a cloud by some special bidding. With respect to us, it doesn't move or change at all. It is the cloud that moves, revealing the sun as just as bright and warm as ever. Just so, healing is not getting God to do our bidding, and it is not trying to get the healing principle to become to a greater degree what we have always been: children of God. As one doctor has put it, sickness is "struggling health"; it is but a temporary repression of the health that is always there.

Healing is not essentially a process; it is a revelation. As Paul said, "...the earnest expectation of the Creation awaited the revealing of the sons of God." When you really know that you are a child of God, that you have inherited perfect life and health as your Divine inheritance, then you will be healed, no matter what the prognosis.

This was the case with Myrtle Fillmore, back in the early days of Unity. She got that realization despite the fact that physicians had given her only six months to live because of an advanced state of tuberculosis. She realized that she was a child of God and did not inherit sickness. This opened up a whole new consciousness for her, preparing the way and furnishing the conditions for the law of life to act.

The work of healing has nothing to do with what type of distorted physical condition we might experience; it has only to do with our thoughts. Spiritual healing is not a way to make things happen; rather, it is a way to let things happen, to provide within ourselves an avenue for them to happen. We must ourselves furnish the conditions that invite health and wholeness, through what we eat, see, think, and talk about. These factors constitute invitation to ill health or radiant vitality. Obviously, some of us are going to have to change the way we talk about ourselves; daily "organ recitals" about which part of our body huts today will have to go. Ella Wheeler Wilcox states this thought poetically:

> "Talk health. The dreary, never-ending tale /Of mortal maladies is more than stale;
> You cannot charm or interest or please /By harping on that minor chord, disease.
> Say you are well, or all is well with you, /And God shall hear your words and make them true."

Talking health permits life to function. This potential of man for a full and complete and healthy life is totally limitless in you because you are a spiritual being. Your perfect expression of wholeness is your Divine inheritance, for you are created in God's image and likeness. God's will can be done.

The most famous of the ancient religious Mysteries were the Eleusinian, whose rites were celebrated every five years in the city of Eleusis to honor Ceres (Demeter, Rhea, or Isis) and her daughter, Persephone. The initiates of the Eleusinian School were famous throughout Greece for the beauty of their philosophic concepts and the high standards of morality which they demonstrated in their daily lives. Because of their excellence, these Mysteries spread to Rome and Britain, and later the initiations were given in both these countries. The Eleusinian Mysteries, named for the community in Attica where the sacred dramas were first presented, are generally believed to have been founded by Eumolpos about fourteen hundred years before the birth of Christ, and through the Platonic system of philosophy their principles have been preserved to modern times.

The rites of Eleusius, with their mystic interpretations of Nature's most precious secrets, overshadowed the civilizations of their time and gradually absorbed many smaller schools, incorporating into their own system whatever valuable information these lesser institutions possessed. Heckethorn sees in the Mysteries of Ceres and Bacchus a metamorphosis of the rites of Isis and Osiris, and there is every reason to believe that all so-called secret schools of the ancient world were branches from one philosophic tree which, with its root in heaven and its branches on the earth, is - like the spirit of man - an invisible but ever-present cause of the objectified vehicles that give it expression. The Mysteries were the channels through which this one philosophic light was disseminated; and their initiates, resplendent with intellectual and spiritual understanding, were the perfect fruitage of the divine tree, bearing witness before the material world of the recondite source of all Light and Truth.

The rites of Eleusis were divided into what were called the Lesser and the Greater Mysteries. According to James Gardner, the Lesser Mysteries were celebrated in the spring (probably at the time of the vernal equinox) in the town of Agrae, and the Greater, in the fall (the time of the autumnal equinox) at Eleusis or Athens. It is supposed that the former were given annually and the latter every five years. The rituals of the Eleusians were highly involved, and to understand them required a deep study of Greek mythology, which they interpreted in its esoteric light with the aid of their secret keys.

The Lesser Mysteries were dedicated to Persephone. In his Eleusin Ian and Bacchic Mysteries, Thomas Taylor sums up their purpose as follows: "The Lesser Mysteries were designed by the ancient theologists, their founders, to signify occultly the condition of the unpurified soul invested with an earthly body, and enveloped in a material and physical nature."

From Thomassin's Recueil des Fugures, Groupes, Thermes, Fontaines, Vases et autres Ornements.

THE RAPE OF PERSEPHONE

Pluto, the lord of the underworld, represents the body intelligence of man; and the rape of Persephone is symbolic of the divine nature assaulted and defiled by the animal soul and dragged downward into the somber darkness of Hades, which is here used as a synonym for the material, or objective, sphere of consciousness.

In his Disquisitions upon the Painted Greek Vases, James Christie presents Meursius' version of the occurrences taking place during the nine days required for the enactment of the Greater Eleusinian Rites. The first day was that of general meeting, during which those to be initiated were questioned concerning their several qualifications. The second day was spent in a procession to the sea, possibly for the submerging of an image of the presiding goddess. This third day was opened by the sacrifice of a mullett. On the fourth day the mystic basket containing certain sacred symbols was brought to Eleusis, accompanied by a number of female devotees carrying smaller baskets. On the evening of the fifth day there was a torch race, on the sixth a procession led by a statue of Iacchus, and on the seventh an athletic contest. The eighth day was devoted to a repetition of the previous ceremonial for the benefit of any who might have been prevented from attending sooner. The ninth and last day was devoted to the deepest philosophical issues of the Eleusinia, during which an urn or jar - the symbol of Bacchus . was exhibited as an emblem of supreme importance.

The legend used in the Lesser rites is that of the abduction of the goddess Persephone, the daughter of Ceres, by Pluto, the lord of the underworld, or Hades. While Persephone is picking flowers in a beautiful meadow, the earth suddenly opens and the gloomy lord of death, riding in a magnificent chariot, emerges from its somber depths and, grasping her in his arms, carries the screaming and struggling goddess to his subterranean palace, where he forces her to become his queen.

It is doubtful whether many of the initiates themselves understood the mystic meaning of this allegory, for most of them apparently believed that it referred solely to the succession of the seasons. It is difficult to obtain satisfactory information concerning the Mysteries, for the candidates were bound by inviolable oaths. never to reveal their inner secrets to the profane. At the beginning of the ceremony of initiation, the candidate stood upon the skins of animals sacrificed for the purpose, and vowed that death should seal his lips before he would divulge the sacred truths which were about to be communicated to him. Through indirect channels, however, some of their secrets have been preserved. The teachings given to the neophytes were substantially as follows:

The soul of man — often called Psyche, and in the Eleusinian Mysteries symbolized by Persephone — is essentially a spiritual thing. Its true home is in the higher worlds, where, free from the bondage of material form and material concepts, it is said to be truly alive and self-expressive. The human, or physical, nature of man, according to this doctrine, is a tomb, a quagmire, a false and impermanent thing, the source of all sorrow and suffering. Plato describes the body as the sepulcher of the soul; and by this he means not only the human form but also the human nature.

The gloom and depression of the Lesser Mysteries represented the agony of the spiritual soul unable to express itself because it has accepted the limitations and illusions of the human environment. The crux of the Eleusinian argument was that man is neither better nor wiser after death than during life. If he does not rise above ignorance during his sojourn here, man goes at death into eternity to wander about forever, making the same mistakes which he made here. If he does not outgrow the desire for material possessions here, he will carry it with him into the invisible world, where, because he can never gratify the desire, he will continue in endless agony. Dante's Inferno is symbolically representative of the sufferings of those who never freed their spiritual natures from the cravings, habits, viewpoints, and limitations of their Plutonic personalities. Those who made no endeavor to improve themselves (whose souls have slept) during their physical lives, passed at death into Hades, where, lying in rows, they slept through all eternity as they had slept through life.

To the Eleusinian philosophers, birth into the physical world was death in the fullest sense of the word, and the only true birth was that of the spiritual soul of man rising out of the womb of his own fleshly nature. "The soul is dead that slumbers," says Longfellow, and in this he strikes the keynote of the Eleusinian Mysteries. Just as Narcissus, gazing at himself in the water (the ancients used this mobile element to symbolize the transitory, illusionary, material universe) lost his life trying to embrace a reflection, so man, gazing into the mirror of Nature and accepting as his real self the senseless clay that he sees reflected, loses the opportunity afforded by physical life to unfold his immortal, invisible Self.

An ancient initiate once said that the living are ruled by the dead. Only those conversant with the Eleusinian concept of life could understand that statement. It mean that the majority of people are not ruled by their living spirits but by their senseless (hence dead) animal personalities. Transmigration and reincarnation were taught in these Mysteries, but in a somewhat unusual manner. It was believed that at midnight the invisible worlds were closest to the terrestrial sphere and that souls coming into material existence slipped in during the midnight hour. For this reason many of the Eleusinian ceremonies were performed at midnight Some of those sleeping spirits who had failed to awaken their higher natures during the earth life and who now floated around in the invisible worlds, surrounded by a darkness of their own making, occasionally slipped through at this hour and assumed the forms of various creatures.

The mystics of Eleusis also laid stress upon the evil of suicide, explaining that there was a profound mystery concerning this crime of which they could not speak, but warning their disciples that a great sorrow comes to all who take their own lives. This, in substance, constitutes the esoteric doctrine given to the initiated of the Lesser Mysteries. As the degree dealt largely with the miseries of those who failed to make the best use of their philosophic opportunities, the chambers of initiation were subterranean and the horrors of Hades were vividly depicted in a complicated ritualistic drama. After passing successfully through the tortuous passageways, with their trials and dangers, the candidate received the honorary title of Mystes. This meant one who saw through a veil or had a clouded vision. It also signified that the candidate had been brought up to the veil, which would be torn away in the higher degree. The modern word mystic, as referring to a seeker after truth according to the dictates of the heart along the path of faith, is probably derived from this ancient word, for faith is belief in the reality of things unseen or veiled.

The Greater Mysteries (into which the candidate was admitted only after he had successfully passed through the ordeals of the Lesser, and not always then) were sacred to Ceres, the mother of Persephone, and represent her as wandering through the world in quest of her abducted daughter. Ceres carried two torches, intuition and reason, to aid her in the search for her lost child (the soul). At last she found Persephone not far from Eleusis, and out of gratitude taught the people there to cultivate corn, which is sacred to her. She also founded the Mysteries. Ceres appeared before Pluto, god of the souls of the dead, and pleaded with him to allow Persephone to return to her home. This the god at first refused to do, because Persephone had eaten of the pomegranate, the fruit of mortality. At last, however, he compromised and agreed to permit Persephone to live in the upper world half of the year if she would stay with him in the darkness of Hades for the remaining half.

CERES, THE PATRON OF THE MYSTERIES

Ceres. or Demeter, was the daughter of Kronos and Rhea, and by Zeus the mother of Persephone. Some believe her to be the goddess of the earth, but more correctly she is the deity protecting agriculture in general, and corn in particular. The poppy is sacred to Ceres and she is often shown carrying or ornamented by a garland of these flowers. In the Mysteries, Ceres is represented riding in a chariot drawn by winged serpents.

The Greeks believed that Persephone was a manifestation of the solar energy, which in the winter months lived under the earth with Pluto, but in the summer returned again with the goddess of productiveness. There is a legend that the flowers loved Persephone and that every year when she left for the dark realms of Pluto, the plants and shrubs would die of grief. While the profane and uninitiated had their own opinions on these subjects, the truths of the Greek allegories remained safely concealed by the priests, who alone recognized the sublimity of these great philosophic and religious parables.

Thomas Taylor epitomizes the doctrines of the Greater Mysteries in the following statement: “The Greater (Mysteries) obscurely intimated, by mystic and splendid visions, the felicity of the soul both here and hereafter when purified from the defilement of a material nature, and constantly elevated to the realities of intellectual (spiritual) vision."

Just as the Lesser Mysteries discussed the prenatal epoch of man when the consciousness in its nine days (embryologically, months) was descending into the realm of illusion and assuming the veil of unreality, so the Greater Mysteries discussed the principles of spiritual regeneration and revealed to initiates not only the simplest but also the most direct and complete method of liberating their higher natures from the bondage of material ignorance. Like Prometheus chained to the top of Mount Caucasus, man's higher nature is chained to his inadequate personality. The nine days of initiation were also symbolic of the nine spheres through which the human soul descends during the process of assuming a terrestrial form. The secret exercises for spiritual unfoldment given to disciples of the higher degrees are unknown, but there is every reason to believe that they were similar to the Brahmanic Mysteries, since it is known that the Eleusinian ceremonies were closed with the Sanskrit words "Konx Om Pax."

That part of the allegory referring to the two six-month periods during one of which Persephone must remain with Pluto, while during the other she may revisit the upper world, offers material for much consideration. It is probable that the Eleusinians realized that the soul left the body during sleep, or at least was made capable of leaving by the special training which undoubtedly they were in a position to give. Thus Persephone would remain as the queen of Pluto's realm during the waking hours, but would ascend to the spiritual worlds during the periods of sleep. The initiate was taught how to intercede with Pluto to permit Persephone (the initiate's soul) to ascend from the darkness of his material nature into the light of understanding. When thus freed from the shackles of clay and crystallized concepts, the initiate was liberated not only for the period of his life but for all eternity, for never thereafter was he divested of those soul qualities which after death were his vehicles for manifestation and expression in the so-called heaven world.

In contrast to the idea of Hades as a state of darkness below, the gods were said to inhabit the tops of mountains, a well-known example being Mount Olympus, where the twelve deities of the Greek pantheon were said to dwell together. In his initiatory wanderings the neophyte therefore entered chambers of ever-increasing brilliancy to portray the ascent of the spirit from the lower worlds into the realms of bliss. As the climax to such wanderings he entered a great vaulted room, in the center of which stood a brilliantly illumined statue of the goddess Ceres. Here, in the presence of the hierophant and surrounded by priests in magnificent robes, he was instructed in the highest of the secret mysteries of the Eleusis. At the conclusion of this ceremony he was hailed as an Epoptes, which means one who has beheld or seen directly. For this reason also, initiation was termed autopsy. The Epoptes was then given certain sacred books, probably written in cipher, together with tablets of stone on which secret instructions were engraved.

In The Obelisk in Freemasonry, John A. Weisse describes the officiating personages of the Eleusinian Mysteries as consisting of a male and a female hierophant who directed the initiations; a male and a female torchbearer, a male herald; and a male and a female altar attendant. There were also numerous minor officials. He states that, according to Porphyry, the hierophant represents Plato's Demiurgus, or Creator of the world; the torchbearer, the Sun; the altar man, the Moon; the herald, Hermes, or Mercury; and the other officials, minor stars.

From the records available, a number of strange and apparently supernatural phenomena accompanied the rituals. Many initiates claim to have actually seen the living gods themselves. Whether this was the result of religious ecstasy or the actual cooperation of invisible powers with the visible priests must remain a mystery. In The Metamorphosis, or Golden Ass, Apuleius thus describes what in all probability is his initiation into the Eleusinian Mysteries:

> "I approached to the confines of death, and having trod on the threshold of Persephone, I returned from it, being carried through all the elements. At midnight I saw the sun shining with a splendid light; and I manifestly drew near to the gods beneath, and the gods above, and proximately adored them."

Women and children were admitted to the Eleusinian Mysteries, and at one time there were literally thousands of initiates. Because this vast host was not prepared for the highest spiritual and mystical doctrines, a division necessarily took place within the society itself. The higher teachings were given to only a limited number of initiates who, because of superior mentality, showed a comprehensive grasp of their underlying philosophical concepts. Socrates refused to be initiated into the Eleusinian Mysteries, for knowing its principles without being a member of the order he realized that membership would seal his tongue. That the Mysteries of Eleusis were based upon great and eternal truths is attested by the veneration in which they were held by the great minds of the ancient world. M. Ouvaroff asks, "Would Pindar, Plato, Cicero, Epictetus, have spoken of them with such admiration, if the hierophant had satisfied himself with loudly proclaiming his own opinions, or those of his order?"

The garments in which candidates were initiated were preserved for many years and were believed to possess almost sacred properties. Just as the soul can have no covering save wisdom and virtue, so the candidates - being as yet without true knowledge - were presented to the Mysteries unclothed, being first given the skin of an animal and later a consecrated robe to symbolize the philosophical teachings received by the initiate. During the course of initiation the candidate passed through two gates. The first led downward into the lower worlds and symbolized his birth into ignorance. The second led upward into a room brilliantly lighted by unseen lamps, in which was the statue of Ceres and which symbolized the upper world, or the abode of Light and Truth. Strabe states that the great temple of Eleusis would hold between twenty and thirty thousand people. The caves dedicated by Zarathustra also had these two doors, symbolizing the avenues of birth and death.

> "God being a luminous principle, residing in the midst of the most subtile fire, he remains forever invisible to the eyes of those who do not elevate themselves above material life: on this account, the sight of transparent bodies, such as crystal, Parian marble, and even ivory, recalls the idea of divine light; as the sight of gold excites an idea of its purity, for gold cannot be sullied. Some have thought by a blackstone was signified the invisibility of the divine essence. To express supreme reason, the Divinity was represented under the human form — and beautiful, for God is the source of beauty; of different ages, and in various attitudes, sitting or upright; of one or the other sex, as a virgin or a young man, a husband of a bride, that all the shades and gradations might be marked. Every thing luminous was subsequently attributed to the gods; the sphere, and all that is spherical, to the universe, to the sun and the moon — sometimes to Fortune and to Hope. The circle, and all circular figures, to eternity — to the celestial movements, to the circles and zones of the heavens. The section of circles, to the phases of the moon; and pyramids and obelisks, to the igneous principle, and through that to the gods of Heaven. A cone expresses the sun; a cylinder the earth; the phallus and triangle (a symbol of the matrix) designate generation." (From Essay on the Mysteries of Eleusis by M. Ouvaroff.)

The Eleusinian Mysteries, according to Heckethorn, survived all others and did not cease to exist as an institution until nearly four hundred years after Christ, when they were finally suppressed by Theodosius (styled the Great) who cruelly destroyed all who did not accept the Christian faith. Of this greatest of all philosophical institutions Cicero said that it taught men not only how to live but also how to die.

THE ORPHIC MYSTERIES

Orpheus; the Thracian bard, the great initiator of the Greeks, ceased to be known as a man and was celebrated as a divinity several centuries before the Christian Era. "As to Orpheus himself...," writes Thomas Taylor, "scarcely a vestige of his life is to be found amongst the immense ruins of time. For who has ever been able to affirm any thing with certainty of his origin, his age, his country, and condition? This alone may be depended on, from general assent, that there formerly lived a person named Orpheus, who was the founder of theology among the Greeks' the institutor of their lives and morals; the first of prophets, and the prince of poets; himself the offspring of a Muse; who taught the Greeks their sacred rites and mysteries, and from whose wisdom, as from a perennial and abundant fountain, the divine muse of Homer and the sublime theology of Pythagoras and Plato flowed." (See The Mystical Hymns of Orpheus.)

Orpheus was founder of the Grecian mythological system which he used as the medium for the promulgation of his philosophical doctrines. The origin of his philosophy is uncertain. He may have got it from the Brahmins, there being legends to the effect that he was a Hindu, his name possible being derived from orfyaiow, meaning "dark." Orpheus was initiated into the Egyptian Mysteries, from which he secured extensive knowledge of magic, astrology, sorcery, and medicine. The Mysteries of the Cabin at Samothrace were also conferred upon him, and these undoubtedly contributed to his knowledge of medicine and music.

The romance of Orpheus and Eurydice is one of the tragic episodes of Greek mythology and apparently constitutes the outstanding feature of the Orphic Rite. Eurydice, in her attempt to escape from a villain seeking to seduce her, died from the venom of a poisonous serpent which stung her in the heel. Orpheus, penetrating to the very heart of the underworld, so charmed Pluto and Persephone with the beauty of his music that they agreed to permit Eurydice to return to life if Orpheus could lead her back to the sphere of the living without once looking around to see if she were following. So great was his fear, however, that she would stray from him that he turned his head, and Eurydice with a heartbroken cry was swept back into the land of death.

Orpheus wandered the earth for a while disconsolate, and there are several conflicting accounts of the manner of his death. Some declare that he was slain by a bolt of lightning; others, that failing to save his beloved Eurydice, he committed suicide. The generally accepted version of his death, however, is that he was torn to pieces by Ciconian women whose advances he had spurned. In the tenth book of Plato's Republic it is declared that, because of his sad fate at the hands of women, the soul that had once been Orpheus, upon being destined to live again in the physical world, chose rather to return in the body of a swan that be born of woman. The head of Orpheus, after being torn from his body, was cast with his lyre into the river Hebrus, down which it floated to the sea, where, wedging in a cleft in a rock, it gave oracles for many years. The lyre, after being stolen from its shrine and working the destruction of the thief, was picked up by the gods and fashioned into a constellation.

Orpheus has long been sung as the patron of music. On his seven-stringed lyre he played such perfect harmonies that the gods themselves were moved to acclaim his power. When he touched the strings of his instrument the birds and beasts gathered about him, and as he wandered through the forests his enchanting melodies caused even the ancient trees with mighty effort to draw their gnarled roots from out the earth and follow him. Orpheus is one of the many Immortals who have sacrificed themselves that mankind might have the wisdom of the gods. By the symbolism of his music he communicated the divine secrets to humanity, and several authors have declared that the gods, though loving him, feared that he would overthrow their kingdom and therefore reluctantly encompassed his destruction.

As time passed on the historical Orpheus became hopelessly confounded with the doctrine he represented and eventually became the symbol of the Greek school of the ancient wisdom. Thus Orpheus was declared to be the son of Apollo, the divine and perfect truth, and Calliope, the Muse of harmony and rhythm. In other words, Orpheus is the secret doctrine (Apollo) revealed through music (Calliope). Eurydice is humanity dead from the sting of the serpent of false knowledge and imprisoned in the underworld of ignorance. In this allegory Orpheus signifies theology, which wins her from the king of the dead but fails to accomplish her resurrection because it falsely estimates and mistrusts the innate understanding within the human soul. The Ciconian women who tore Orpheus limb from limb symbolize the various contending theological factions which destroy the body of Truth. They cannot accomplish this, however, until their discordant cries drown out the harmony drawn by Orpheus from his magic lyre. The head of Orpheus signifies the esoteric doctrines of his cult. These doctrines continue to live and speak even after his body (the cult) has been destroyed. The lyre is the secret teaching of Orpheus; the seven strings are the seven divine truths which are the keys to universal knowledge. The differing accounts of his death represent the various means used to destroy the secret teachings: wisdom can die in many ways at the same time. The allegory of Orpheus incarnating in the white swan merely signifies that the spiritual truths he promulgated will continue and will be taught by the illumined initiates of all future ages. The swan is the symbol of the initiates of the Mysteries; it is a symbol also of the divine power which is the progenitor of the world.

THE BACCHIC AND DIONYSIAC RITES

The Bacchic Rite centers around the allegory of the youthful Bacchus (Dionysos or Zagreus) being torn to pieces by the Titans. These giants accomplished the destruction of Bacchus by causing him to become fascinated by his own image in a mirror. After dismembering him, the Titans first boiled the pieces in water and afterwards roasted them. Pallas rescued the heart of the murdered god, and by this precaution Bacchus (Dionysos) was enabled to spring forth again in all his former glory. Jupiter, the Demiurgus, beholding the crime of the Titans, hurled his thunderbolts and slew them, burning their bodies to ashes with heavenly fire. Out of the ashes of the Titans — which also contained a portion of the flesh of Bacchus, whose body they had partly devoured, the human race was created. Thus the mundane life of every man was said to contain a portion of the Bacchic life.

For this reason, the Greek Mysteries warned against suicide. He who attempts to destroy himself raises his hand against the nature of Bacchus within him, since Man's body is indirectly the tomb of this god and consequently must be preserved with the greatest care.

Bacchus (Dionysos) represents the rational soul of the inferior world. He is the chief of the Titans — the artificers of the mundane spheres. The Pythagoreans called him the Titanic monad. Thus Bacchus is the all-inclusive idea of the Titanic sphere and the Titans — or gods of the fragments — the active agencies by means of which universal substance is fashioned into the pattern of this idea. The Bacchic state signifies the unity of the rational soul which, being scattered throughout creation, loses the consciousness of its own essential one-ness. The mirror into which Bacchus gazes and which is the cause of his fall is the great sea of illusion - the lower world fashioned by the Titans. Bacchus (the mundane rational soul), seeing his image before him, accepts the image as a likeness of himself and ensouls the likeness; that is, the rational idea ensouls its reflection - the irrational universe. By ensouling the irrational image, it implements in it the urge to become like its source, the rational image. Therefore the ancients said that man does not know the gods by logic or by reason but rather by realizing the presence of the gods within himself.

After Bacchus gazed into the mirror and followed his own reflection into matter, the rational soul of the world was broken up and distributed by the Titans throughout the mundane sphere of which it is the essential nature, but the heart, or source, of it they could not scatter. The Titans took the dismembered body of Bacchus and boiled it in water — symbol of immersion in the material universe — which represents the incorporation of the Bacchic principle in form. The pieces were afterwards roasted to signify the subsequent ascension of the spiritual nature out of form.

When Jupiter, the father of Bacchus and the Demiurgus of the universe, saw that the Titans were hopelessly involving the rational or divine idea by scattering its members through the constituent parts of the lower world, he slew the Titans in order that the divine idea might not be entirely lost. From the ashes of the Titans he formed mankind, whose purpose of existence was to preserve and eventually to release the Bacchic idea, or rational soul, from the Titanic fabrication. Jupiter, being the Demiurgus and fabricator of the material universe, is the third person of the Creative Triad, consequently the Lord of Death, for death exists only in the lower sphere of being over which he presides. Disintegration takes place so that reintegration may follow upon a higher level of form or intelligence. The thunderbolts of Jupiter are emblematic of his disintegrative power they reveal the purpose of death, which is to rescue the rational soul from the devouring power of the irrational nature.

Man is a composite creature, his lower nature consisting of the fragments of the Titans and his higher nature the sacred, immortal flesh (life) of Bacchus. Therefore man is capable of either a Titanic (irrational) or a Bacchic (rational) existence. The Titans of Hesiod, who were twelve in number, are probably analogous to the celestial zodiac, whereas the Titans who murdered and dismembered Bacchus represent the zodiacal powers distorted by their involvement in the material world. Thus Bacchus represents the sun who is dismembered by the signs of the zodiac and from whose body the universe is formed. When the terrestrial forms were created from the various parts of his body the sense of wholeness was lost and the sense of separateness established. The heart of Bacchus, which was saved by Pallas, or Minerva, was lifted out of the four elements symbolized by his dismembered body and placed in the ether. The heart of Bacchus is the immortal center of the rational soul.

After the rational, soul had been distributed throughout creation and the nature of man, the Bacchic Mysteries were instituted for the purpose of disentangling it from the irrational Titanic nature. This disentanglement was the process of lifting the soul out of the state of separateness into that of unity. The various parts and members of Bacchus were collected from the different corners of the earth. When all the rational parts are gathered Bacchus is resurrected.

The Rites of Dionysos were very similar to those of Bacchus, and by many these two gods are considered as one. Statues of Dionysos were carried in the Eleusinian Mysteries, especially the lesser degree. Bacchus, representing the soul of the mundane sphere, was capable of an infinite multiplicity of form and designations. Dionysos apparently was his solar aspect.

The Dionysiac Architects constituted an ancient society, in principles and doctrines much like the modern Freemasonic Order. They were an organization of builders bound together by their secret knowledge of the relationship between the earthly and the divine sciences of architectonics. They were supposedly employed by King Solomon in the building of his Temple, although they were not Jews, nor did they worship the God of the Jews, being followers of Bacchus and Dionysos. The Dionysiac Architects erected many of the great monuments of antiquity. They possessed a secret language and a system of marking their stones. They had annual convocations and sacred feasts. The exact nature of their doctrines is unknown. It is believed that Hiram Abiff was an initiate of this society.

From Ovid's Metamorphosis

THE PROCESSIONAL OF THE BACCHIC RIIES

In the initiation of the Bacchic Mysteries, the role of Bacchus is played by the candidate who, set upon by priests in the guise of the Titans, is slain and finally restored to life amidst great rejoicing. The Bacchic Mysteries were given every three years, and like the Eleusinian Mysteries, were divided into two degrees The initiates were crowned with myrtle and ivy, plants which were sacred to Bacchus.

In the Anacalypsis, Godfrey Higgins conclusively establishes Bacchus (Dionysis) as one of the early pagan forms of the Christos myth: "The birthplace of Bacchus, called Sabazius or Sabaoth, was claimed by several places in Greece; but on Mount Zelmisus, in Thrace, his worship seems to have been chiefly celebrated. He was born of a virgin on the 25th of December; he performed great miracles for the good of mankind; particularly one in which he changed water into wine; he rode in a triumphal procession on an ass; he was put to death by the Titans, and rose again from the dead on the 25th of March; he was always called the Saviour. In his mysteries, he was shown to the people, as an infant is by the Christians at this day, on Christmas Day morning in Rome."

While Apollo most generally represents the sun, Bacchus is also a form of solar energy, for his resurrection was accomplished with the assistance of Apollo. The resurrection of Bacchus signifies merely the extraction or disentanglement of the various parts of the Bacchic constitution from the Titanic constitution of the world. This is symbolized by the smoke or soot rising from the burned bodies of the Titans. The soul is symbolized by smoke because it is extracted by the fire of the Mysteries. Smoke signifies the ascension of the soul, for evolution is the process of the soul rising, like smoke, from the divinely consumed material mass. At one time the Bacchic Rites were of a high order, but later they became much degraded. The Bacchinalia, or orgies of Bacchus are famous in literature.

Martinist Philosophy and Practice, Part 1

LIBER OVERVIEW

With this Liber, we begin our study of Martinist teachings with two Lectures and an Essay on the human will. These are accompanied by a Lecture on the importance (although that may not be a strong enough term) and nature of Fraternity. The fourth Lecture will tell you how to set up your own Oratory. You are next given a very important Exercise, "The Stimulator". An Essay entitled "The Door is Always Open" will help you understand and respond to those times when seeming adversity presents itself to you. Lastly, you will find an Optional article on "Occultism and Spiritualism", which you should find helpful. An information-packed Liber!

LECTURE
Free Will and Man's Descent

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

It must be plain from what we have learned so far, that what has come to be called free will is simply: man's ability to decide for himself when and how he should act, so as to maintain his strength and his independence. We should at all times act in conformity with the law of our innermost nature, but there are obstacles which tend to prevent our acting in the way we should. Clear knowledge of how we should act, and a strong will, are therefore two important attributes which every Martinist should acquire.

The fact that philosophers still ask about will and how it operates indicates that the average person has little idea of what it is. Will is simply the governing power within man's nature.

We could ask: Why is it that man has failed to recognize and fully use his inherent potential liberty? In part, the cause of this may be attributed to the negative aspects of various philosophies which he has formulated. We might mention as examples the ideas of predestination and fatalism. These suppose that there is a map of affairs governing each individual's life at birth and the believer thinks he cannot escape this plan; consequently, he resigns himself to the ebb and flow of life's circumstances whatever happens to him he says that it is "God's will."

The gross error in such unfortunate thinking is the denying of our divinely endowed faculties. We have within us an infusion of the universal intelligence which we can consult, call it intuition or psychic sight as, you please. Furthermore we have the faculty of reason, imagination and the ability to choose and the free will to implement our choices.

If some extraneous power continually manipulated our lives, it would make us nothing more than puppets. If such were intended why were we given the mental powers we have and which each of us, as individuals, can exercise? We note that by making wise choices we are able to master our lives and our environment. There would be no such function as mastery, if our lives were inexorably predetermined for us.

This is not to deny, however, that there are external forces over which we have no control. We cannot change the inherent structure of the universe, nor the causes that bring its forces into play, but we can harness these forces! We can attune ourselves with them and we can alter or control their ultimate effect upon us. Man can enjoy a great deal more mastership over his environment, and over himself, than he presently does. He needs only the knowledge and the determination. We can arrange the affairs of our life so that we can use the forces of life as our allies. Like the sailor trimming his sails to the wind, we can harness the forces of our environment. We can do this because we are free to choose and free to act and free to implement our choices.

Free will is somewhat limited, however. Although we do have the power to determine our own actions, we cannot control all the other influences in the world around us. In addition, our free will is diminished by our karma which ensures that the ordering of our daily lives shall be in accord with the rate and measure of progress to which we are entitled, as a result of our merit or demerit. Further, free will is also reduced by the lack of harmony within the constitution of man himself, for the man who is not physically, mentally and spiritually progressive will not even seek the freedom which free will can bring.

Indeed, the blind, frivolous person without ideals, who is guided solely by his senses, judges things by what they seem to be and not by what they really are. It would be futile to present to such a man truths opposed to errors, for he would compare them with his own dark and false ideas and find in truth only guilt and contradiction. Being muddled in his perceptions, he would choose to follow the dead and obscure law of his animal nature.

When the will is right, however, the rest of the constitution of man falls into harmony. The power of the will, then, commands all that which approaches the fortress of physical man; and through its exercise, all actions which have been limited through ill-usage are liberated.

Questions for your consideration

What about fatalism and predestination; do they exist?

Define Free Will.

What is the position where a person has had a ‘dream’ about something and it later happened exactly the way it was foreseen. Is this predestination?

It was the faculty of Free Will which caused man’s descent from his First Estate. Being at one time higher than the angels, he existed in a veritable paradise of delight. He was endowed with many faculties. He was a potent Being. He ruled such intermediary agents of creation as Principalities, Powers, Virtues, Dominions, Thrones, Cherubim and Seraphim. He was high in the current of emanations of Omneity.

Intermediary agents of creation were known to the Egyptians, Qabalists, Gnostics and early Christians. A Hierarchy of such terrestrial and heavenly Beings has been said to exist from the very highest spiritual plane to the lowest and densest state of physical matter. In general, man has lost the possibility of ruling over, or even communicating with, these Great Beings of the ultra-mundane sphere. However, by turning his spiritual eyes upward in preparation for his return to his Original Home, he will greatly revive within himself his power over and communication with such Beings.

No origin of spiritual life surpasses that of man for there is no older Being in nature. The origin of man is God, but the origin of the human race on earth is man’s coming down into matter. Naturally, man has lost and sacrificed much this we can readily see, for the physical life of man is in most cases a privation and a struggle.

During periods of aspiration, man faintly recalls his Higher Estate. This longing, this yearning, this indefinite remembrance of a fuller, more ideal existence, unconsciously drives him ever onward in the search for happiness.

Man now lives in the darkness and comprehends it not. His real element of life is light. The corporeal, physical body is subject to a most humiliating end; but man possesses an immaterial body that is glorious and perfect, through which he may enjoy all the rights of immortality.

Where else could there be an estate or condition which possesses all the perfections the opposite of which man now endures if not in the infinite knowledge and presence of Omneity? Man's limitations are due to nothing more than his separation from Omneity, the Supreme Principle of Good, which is the true light and only support of all creation.

The average man does not regard himself as the same Being he was at one time. He knows his limitations and he is striving to know his destiny. This destiny is, that as a result of our struggles in the material world, we may, through our own efforts, overcome the obstacles in our way and regain our early and Original Status and also rise to a higher state than we have heretofore enjoyed. The realization of our destiny, as well as the search for our many incomparable faculties, has caused us to be busy since first arriving upon this earth.

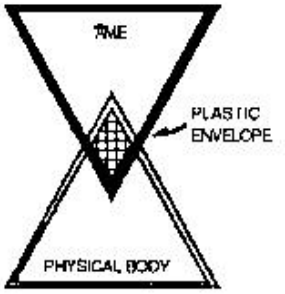
Our ascent back to the Realm of Onmeity necessitates that we approach the various emanations from below. Therefore, we must develop certain powers in our ascent that were different from our descent. In treading our way back to our First Estate through the Forest of Errors, we are given many helps and aids, the proportion and degree depending on our own work and effort. As we try to understand the Absolute and bring about a reintegration within ourselves; we will be assisted by Beings on this earth, as well as by invisible ones.

A Martinists hold that man is made up of three principles: the Âme, the Plastic Envelope and the Corporeal Body. As has been said already, the word Âme has been retained because its meaning in French cannot be easily approximated by any English word. It represents the spiritual properties of man, or the principle of life. In reality it is the component part of man which is Immortal.

The Plastic middle, or Fluid Envelope, serves as a connecting link between the Âme and the corruptible, or physical body. It also gives rise to those activities within us which we attribute to the emotions. Mystics of all ages have been aware that there is this general division of man's body, which possesses a vital and responsive quality. This intermediary body, or Plastic Envelope, or Astral Body (call it as you wish) is sufficiently spiritual in make-up to be influenced by spirit, yet it is physical enough in nature to influence the physical body.

We are so constructed as to be protected and safeguarded against the dangers that surround us. This protection is in the nature of the corruptible envelope or physical body, which gives us a vehicle for undergoing certain experiences while we are on earth. It is a channel through which our senses bring us knowledge. Thus, by the promptness and rightness of our reason, the quickness of our senses, and the implementation of our Free Will we can prevent ourselves from falling into grave errors on our Return to our Ideal State of existence.

Our connecting relationship between spirit and nature can be illustrated by two slightly overlapping equilateral triangles. The triangle with its point down represents our spiritual properties The triangle with its point up represents the mundane, or physical, side of our nature. Where the points of the two triangles overlap is the Plastic Envelope, as denoted in the Martinist teachings.



Therefore: we retain the Âme, the superior possession of which we were fully aware in our early Estate, even while subjected to a corporeal, sensual body. We are at the same time: large and small, mortal and immortal, physical and spiritual, possessed of potential freedom but bound to the physical world as a result of our will. In other words we are composed primarily of two natures opposed to each other. They meet and are somewhat blended in what Martinists know as the Plastic Envelope or Astral Body. By understanding our fundamental construction, we can direct our will constructively towards reintegration and regeneration.

At our next Conventicle we will take up the subject of Will again and advance our understanding of this most important topic.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

"No vision, and you perish, no ideal and you're lost,
Your heart must ever cherish some faith at any cost.
Some hope, some dream to cling to, some rainbow in the sky,
Some melody to sing to, some service that is high."

Students: Please write these definitions down in your notebooks:

PSYCHE — the totality of one's self.

THE WILL — the expression of personal autonomy and integrity; it is the focused energies of the self which enable the personality to function freely according to its own intrinsic nature, rather than under the compulsion of external forces.

THE EGO is where the essence of the Divine, or the Spark of God, resides.

THE SELF (spelled with a capital 'S') is the Ego in the person.

LECTURE
What is the Will?

My Brothers and Sisters:

At our last Conventicle we discussed the subject of Free Will. We noted that Man is free to choose and free to act and free to implement his choices. Tonight we will go a step further and consider what the Will is.

The Will is the focused energies of the Âme. These focused energies can activate, coordinate and direct all the other functions of the psyche which controls the behavior of the organism.

As such, the Will is neither a great deal of raw energy, nor a blind determination to do what one wants to do at any cost: Rather, like the Director of a play, the Will focuses, directs and utilizes all the energies and resources of the psyche and of a person's sub-personalities, in a harmonious way, to achieve the goals and objectives that are focused upon and desired.

More than a physical or bio-psychic energy, the Will is a psycho-spiritual energy the energy and life of the Self working through the mind and the biological organism, to realize and accomplish a person's objectives and desires. The Self, or Ego, endows one with individuality and abilities. Individuality is the nuance or the shade of difference that causes the variation in personal actions.

As such, there is hardly anything that an individual can do physically, mentally, emotionally, spiritually or imaginatively which does not require the proper focusing and use of the Will. A strong, healthy, properly developed and skillful Will is, therefore, absolutely indispensable to achieve anything worthwhile.

It is the function of "willing" which determines whether one can say "yes" or "no" to oneself and to others in everyday life. It is "willing" which enables a person to resist his own bio-psychic drives, passions, and irrational impulses and desires, as well as the wishes and aims of other persons who are seeking their own self-interest.

It is "willing" which enables a person to persevere and to be successful in the pursuit of his goals and objectives in spite of all the obstacles and difficulties which may arise and bar the way.

Finally, it is the Will that energizes and directs the psychic energies of a person toward behavior, feelings, thinking, imagining, and intuition as well as toward observation and the regulation of the bio-psychic drives. It is the Will that coordinates the various resources, functions, and sub-personalities of a person, to help that person live according to his ideals and to implement his life's objectives.

The Will can best be compared to an electrical battery; it can be charged or discharged by our various attitudes and activities.

Whenever we truly know what we want and then go ahead and achieve it in spite of all the obstacles that may bar the way, we charge and strengthen our will.

When we know clearly what we do NOT want and we avoid it and do not give in to it, in spite of all the temptations and inducements to do so, we strengthen and charge our will.

On the other hand, if we truly do not know what we want and let ourselves be swayed by external agents, or circumstances, or other people, or even by the cravings and desires of our being, we weaken and discharge our will.

By now, Brethren, you should be able to see that the will is the fundamental expression of personal autonomy and integrity, the capacity of a person to function freely according to his own intrinsic nature rather than under the compulsion of external forces or inner unconscious forces.

We give the name of "will" to the evolutionary development of being truly and freely able to choose bearing the full responsibility of self-determination.

At times we are all dramatically confronted with situations that invite us to use our will. If we do so, then our psychic voltage rises and we move on to greater freedom. If we do not, then more and more, we lose our will and autonomy and are crushed by the circumstances of life.

Once we have discovered our will, and learn to use it properly, a chain reaction is set into motion it enables us to perform further acts of will. Like a bank account that grows with accrued interest, the reservoir of our will-energies can grow, establishing a positive circle. Will generates and increases the ability to will, and it is by using it, that we discover and intensify it.

The real function of the will is to direct, not to impose: hence, the central aspect of working with the will consists in being fully conscious of what we want and how we are going to get it. In this process there are four key stages in the exercise and expression of the will which are:

Deliberation: Setting goals and objectives that provide adequate motivation.

Decision: Making a choice and commitment to one goal and objective to be realized.

Planning: Organizing the best means and the ways to achieve this goal.

Execution: The actual implementation and realization of these goals and objectives.

To conclude, Brethren, let us observe that the will is a capacity which is eminently human: the power to choose. By selecting the right goals and objectives and then realizing them progressively, we can simplify, beautify, and turn our lives into a real work of art!

Brothers & Sisters, the right use of our freedom to choose, our freedom to act and our freedom to implement our choices is perhaps the most serious problem which each person must deal, for the whole tenure of our lives will be determined on our ability to choose wisely. Many brilliant and inspired thinkers have reflected and analyzed the central problem of human becoming and realization from different angles, and with different images and insights. I would like to share with you some beautiful insights which provide a rich soil and batch of seeds for meditation and contemplation.

Robert de Ropp: "It is our privilege to live either as Warriors or slaves. A Warrior is the master of his fate. No matter what fate throws at him, fame or infamy, health or sickness, poverty or riches, he uses the situation for his inner development. He takes his motto from Nietzsche, "That which does not destroy me strengthens me." The slave on the other hand is completely at the mercy of external events, If fortune smiles on him, he struts and boasts and attributes her favors to his own power and wisdom which, as often as not, has nothing to do with it. If fortune frowns, he weeps and grovels, putting blame for his sufferings on everything and everybody but himself. I learned that all life-games can be played either in the spirit of the Warrior or in the spirit of the slave!"

Castanada had Don Juan state: "The basic difference between an ordinary man and a warrior is that the warrior takes everything as a challenge, while an ordinary man takes everything either as a blessing or a curse.

de Ropp concludes: "It has been stated by Thomas Szasz that what people really need and demand from life is not wealth, comfort or esteem, but games worth playing (ideals or basic objectives to realize). He who cannot find a game worth playing is apt to fall prey to accidie, defined by the Fathers of the Church as one of the Deadly Sins, but now regarded as a symptom of sickness. Accidie is a paralysis of the will, a failure of the appetite, a condition of generalized boredom, total disenchantment "God, oh God, how weary, stale, flat and unprofitable seem to me all the uses of the world!" Such a state of mind, Szasz tells us, is a prelude to what is loosely called "mental illness", which, though Szasz defines this illness as a myth, nevertheless fills half the beds in hospitals and makes multitudes of people a burden to themselves and to society. Seek above all, for a game worth playing. (Look for a high ideal or purpose to which to consecrate your life and energies.) Such is the advice of the oracle to modern man. Having found the game, play it with intensity, play it as if your life and sanity depended upon it."

Follow the example of the French Existentialists and flourish a banner bearing the word engagement". Though nothing means anything and all the roads are marked "no exit", yet move as if your movements had some purpose. If life does not seem to offer a game worth playing, then invent one."

William James: "the greatest discovery of my generation is that human beings can alter their lives by altering their attitude of mind."

Marcus Aurelius: "a man's life is what his thoughts make of it."

Finally, Albert Einstein, when asked what he considered to be the greatest problem of our age, replied: "Men simply don't think".

Let us now draw together all that we have discussed this evening: In this life there is indeed, one truly fundamental choice — to be free and in charge of one's being and destiny to have autonomy and integrity, or to be a slave, to remain a creature of circumstances. To be free and successful means to do what one really wants to do and what one has chosen consciously and deliberately. And here success breeds success, as failure engenders further failure. The central difference is that between knowing where one is going (having developed one's will) or not. Take the analogy of a ship. Think of a ship leaving harbor with a crew, a captain, and a definite destination or goal to reach. Sooner or later, even if the ship encounters rough seas or other obstacles, it will reach its predetermined destination. Now take another ship just like the first, but with no captain at the helm and with no set destination or goal, with no aiming point. Then get the crew to start the engine and get the ship going. If it gets out of the harbor at all, it will either sink, wander aimlessly about, or wind up derelict on some deserted beach. This ship cannot possibly go anywhere because it has no set course or destination. Exactly the same is true of a human being who has no basic set of objectives to pursue or high ideals to realize.

A human being's character and life are what his thoughts make him, because we literally become and fashion our personality by what we think about, behold and contemplate. This is the central and most important (yet so simple) psychological and spiritual truth. It is the truth which literally holds the future, integrity, and autonomy of our being and life in its power, provided that we act as though what we think and behold inwardly is real, so as to make it real and incarnate it in the outer world. Also we must be careful to really want what we focus upon and not adulterate it with contradictory thoughts and desires which end up by cancelling each other out.

Why do we become what we think about? Because thoughts and images have a "motor element" in them that leads them to objectify and materialize themselves on the emotional and physical planes. To use an inspiring image and analogy: the mind can be compared to a good and fertile plot of land. On this plot, a farmer can plant what he chooses, the decision is up to him, the land does not care in the least! Thus he can plant sugar cane or peanuts, just as well as weeds or poisonous plants; the land will simply "grow" whatever is seeded and multiply it many times. The human psyche is exactly Like this plot of land and operates with precisely the same laws even though it is far more complex and fertile and functioning on different levels of being than the former; it will grow and multiply whatever we plant in it.

Brethren, you must learn to understand, emotionally as well as intellectually, that you literally become what you think, and that you do indeed "reap what you have sown.

Let us now sit in silence for a few minutes and reflect on what we have learned tonight and endeavor henceforth to use our will constructively.

LECTURE
Fraternity - What is it?

My Brothers & Sisters:
Greetings and Salutations!

There is a word which has enriched current vocabularies for a long time, which has even been adored by political parties, which is written on the walls of our public monuments and yet which is not well understood and which is put into practice with increasing rarity. That word is Fraternity.

What is fraternity? It is the feeling which every elevated person should have in their heart and which leads one to consider all beings as the members of one family to which one owes love and protection.

It is the lack of this spirit of fraternity which engenders, first, envy and then jealousy, malicious gossip, hatred and finally, violence.

Among peoples whose religion teaches successive reincarnations in different human bodies, there is much more true fraternity, free from envy and jealousy, because each believer knows that his current life is only a passage, a sort of training period, that his conditions are the punishment or the reward (put simply) for his previous lives, that it prepares one for another future existence, happy or unhappy, which will be the fruit of the present experience.

Thus, it has to be remembered that, in living, all men are experiencing a moment of their development; that all men are at a different stage of their development, and that all are aiming for a more or less distant perfection. All are pupils in a large school, more or less adaptable, more or less quick in their studies. In understanding this, a big step will already be taken towards the true spirit of fraternity.

As I wrote the other day, what is poisoning our era is that, very often, we judge people by their material success, by the size of their bank account, by the possessions they have acquired, and not at all by their spiritual and moral worth. But moral worth the only worth that counts, has any true value, and endures. Jealousy, envy, intolerance, are not only bad, but also dangerous feelings. So too are rash judgment, unfavorable prejudice (so prevalent in our era) and the spreading of dreaded, malicious gossip. You have to know little about magic and its forces to ignore what is called "backlash" or "return shock."

Just as good thoughts attract to useful and good forces to us, so too do low thoughts result in the activation of evil forces. There are probably fewer bad thoughts which can accumulate over our heads as many storms and tempests as can envy and lack of fraternity.

There are, of course, some places where this spirit of fraternity is particularly revered and often developed to a high level. These are the Initiatic Centers where one tries to develop the spirituality of the members by teaching them to practice the high virtues, of which fraternity is one of the first.

That is one reason, then, why we are here.

I know that there are spots on the sun and that, there as elsewhere, one sometimes disguises with a beautiful cover-up, thoughts of envy or of personal ambition. That is nonetheless the case of the minority.

There is everyday life, this daily life in the ant's nest of a world where each of us rubs shoulders with a neighbor, a colleague, an associate. If we take on the relatively easy habit of considering our neighbor, colleague or associate not merely as such, but first and foremost as a brother, who is obeying the same laws of evolution as we do, how things that would develop would then be easier and daily life would be more pleasant for everyone.

In every job, in every profession, one sees all too often this tendency to make one's neighbor look small, in order to flatter oneself or even with the idea of taking his place! Is not humanity sometimes, even in times of peace, the true image of a jungle?

Brotherliness has been called a "vigilant hatred". One which always sees the splinter in the eye of another and never the beam in his own. Let us first seek our own beam to make our eyes see clearly!

Rather, we should consider that we each have a mission, or perhaps several missions.

We have to establish, or at least seek to establish, a great fraternity in the world. And how can we do this, if we do not first have peace within ourselves, in our hearts, and if we do not remove from ourselves the negative feelings of envy, jealousy and hatred?

We have to create around ourselves, in our day-to-day life, in our daily existence, an atmosphere of serenity, benevolence, and patience which are the basis of the fraternal spirit.

Treating everyone, if not as a friend, at least as a brother, whatever his mistakes in behavior. We must consider that, though his path may be winding and difficult, ours has been too, or it may be so tomorrow; and that the brother in difficulty is more worthy of our compassion than another. At least let us try to understand him. For if we always made an effort to understand another person, how much less ruthless, scornful or indifferent we would be! Even towards another's faults, which are the burdens of his difficult way. Let us then make a rule for ourselves: before trying to see the defects or faults of another, why not work at discovering their qualities, virtues, good feelings, everything that can bring us closer to them, everything about them that can be used and developed. How much more fruitful this would be than to always think first of what can separate.

In the same way, in a group, whether it be a family, an association or society itself, when some members have faults or weaknesses, it is the weaknesses which have to be destroyed, not the members! Therefore, instead of condemning, chasing away and fighting, would it not be better to try by persuasion and by example, above all by a healthy atmosphere to destroy the undesirable aspects in a natural manner.

Unfortunately, we have our imperfections, and nobody is exempt from them. Let us try to correct them before we try to pose as correctors of the wrongs of others. That would be the right attitude and would work well. In consciously trying to correct our faults we would automatically be the tutors of others and everyone can only gain from it. If we do not allow ourselves any indulgences, our minds always following the correct path, we will acquire that moral serenity which opens the heart to intuition and to understanding others.

One of the great laws of spiritualism is that one must be the most severe judge of oneself, and the most understanding friend to others. 'This does not imply blind and guilty complicity in indulgence. but careful and gentle vigilance to guide a blind person. Even if we think our fellow man is not completely blind, let us not forget that if he really did have complete knowledge, he would not make all those mistakes which annoy us and which we condemn.

As for those who seem to run about as they wish on a golden carpet, let us make sure we do not envy them or harbor grudges. Life, in all its meanderings, has so many pitfalls even for those who appear to be the best equipped!!! Never envy the destiny of others. We do not know what cruel trials may await them tomorrow which maybe we will never know about. Often we do not know either, when we judge too easily, what difficulties a brother better off than ourselves has been through in the past, or what silent sorrows are hidden behind appearances that have been too quickly interpreted.

We should avoid envy just as we should avoid condemnation, we should make the best possible use of the tools life gives us; and we should spread positive and elevated thoughts around us and throughout the world - these thoughts which have so much power and over which we never keep a close enough watch.

Finally, we should also think that we have the highest mission, within our capabilities, to help the spiritual development of all our Brothers, without exception. We have not yet found better tools for this work than kindness, charity, and Fraternity.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

LECTURE
The Oratory

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

If it is at all possible that you can set up a small Oratory in your home, the benefits to be derived will be enormous. It is in fact a very simple matter if you have a little space available in your bedroom or some suitable part of your house. You will need a little shelf or a small table. On it you can spread a suitable cloth. Above, on the wall you may hang a picture, such as a scenery or something with a religious flavor if you prefer. On the table you can place a pair of candlesticks and an incense burner. A small vase with flowers is always nice. If you wish, you can keep there a sacred volume. You can make your Oratory as simple or as ornate as you wish. A comfortable chair makes it complete.

Here is a point to be observed and emphasized. In the daily routine you will find just about everyone quite willing to devote time to their occupation/profession; to eat and drink; for exercise and recreation and for sleep. They do this because they recognize the necessity of earning a living; of nourishing and restoring the physical body. What most people do not seem to realize, however, it that it is equally necessary to devote sufficient time, daily, to prayer and meditation! Ten to fifteen minutes spent in prayer and meditation daily, helps maintain harmony and equilibrium and assists the free passage of energy throughout the psyche. Whereas beginning students of the esoteric sense this, the reasons will become clear as we progress in our studies.

Your Oratory is the ideal place to study your Libers! It is also a good place to do your exercises. If, however, your present domestic situation does not allow you to set up an Oratory in the way described, there is no need to worry. Find a suitable place where you can sit and be alone for a little while, either early on mornings before the rest of the household rises, or after everybody has left for work, or at night, etc.. On the other hand, somewhere out of doors, especially among trees, is a wonderful place to sit, study and think.

Here is a suggested way to open your personal conventicle: First, wash your hands in clean water. Then light a little incense in your thurible. Standing before your Altar, say:

"Eternal One, thy Thy Light shall we see Light; Thou, who art the True Light that Lighteth every creature." Light the right candle.

"0 Thou, Who dwellest in the abodes of Light, keep far from us all evil thoughts and passions. Cleanse our hearts and sanctify our lives, that in Thy glorious Light we may dwell in Truth, Righteousness and Peace." Light the left candle. Then be seated and remain in silence for a short while, attune yourself with all those who, that very moment in different parts of the world, are devoting themselves to similar uplifting work. There is but one Universal Brotherhood, and truly we can say, "Behold how good and how pleasant it is to dwell together in unity." After this short attunement, turn up the profane lighting and commence with your study.

When you have completed your Work, close your conventicle as follows: Extinguish the candles extinguish them with a snuffer or quickly pinch the wick with moistened fingers. (Do not "blow out" the candles). Sit in silence for a brief period and then say: "As the Rays of Light continually flow from Omneity, stretching to the confines of space, and as all the stars and planets of our solar system reflect the light and luminosity of the Sovereign Architect of the Universe, so may I, as a member of the International College of Esoteric Studies, strive to reflect the Light of Wisdom that I have received in my Work this evening. Velat Lux."

Brethren who are not able to set up an Oratory should visualize the foregoing procedures.

EXERCISE 3
The Stimulator

In our Martinist Work we utilize comparatively few exercises but those we do use and recommend are effective and potent. This exercise, THE STIMULATOR, is certainly no exception to the rule. Regular practice of this exercise will bring noticeable benefits in a short time. It has salutary effects on many levels.

Sit comfortably, or lie flat on your back. Separate your hands and your feet. In other words: do not cross your feet or legs, or clasp your hands. If you are sitting, let your feet be flat on the floor and let your hands rest comfortably in your lap. This exercise stimulates the cell and psychic consciousness on several levels. You begin at the soles of your feet and work upwards, part by part, to the top of your head.

Concentrate your full attention on the soles of your feet. Mentally "feel" them. Feel the blood coursing through the veins and arteries and capillaries just below and in the skin. Now shift your concentration to your toes, toe nails, then to your heels, instep, ankles, etc.. Go "inside" your foot to the muscles, flesh and bones. Gradually work up the legs to your knee, thighs, hips, groin not forgetting the internal organs, intestines, sacrum, buttocks, etc..

The important point is this: as you concentrate on each particular part, feel it living, feel it "come alive". Feel the bones, the marrow, the nerves, the tissues, the cells that go to make up the particular part. As you concentrate on the respective areas you will begin to feel them "tingling" or "vibrating".

Always start the exercise at the feet and work up to the head. After reaching the scalp and hair, if you wish you can start the exercise again and do it over. The more often you do this exercise the quicker you will be able to feel the "tingling" sensations which indicate an awakening of the cell consciousness. Ten minutes a day devoted to this exercise will be ten minutes very well spent. The beneficial effect on your health, for one thing, will be tremendous. In fact, if you have a condition such as "arthritis", or pains, sprains, cuts or whatever concentration on the area in the way described will greatly stimulate the natural healing processes.

After practicing this exercise for about a week, the following deep breathing measure should be added: Take a deep breath and hold it. Do not strain. First exhale slowly and naturally, then inhale through the nose until your lungs are full and hold the breath. Hold it only as long as is comfortable while concentrating on the particular part of the body. When you feel you must exhale, do so slowly and naturally. Do not hold the breath so long that when it is time to exhale you have to let it out with a gasp. Hold the breath only as long as is comfortable exhale and inhale naturally and deeply.

All the exercises given thus far should be persisted with for the rest of your life!

ESSAY
Aspects of Will

Brothers and Sisters:

A sublime moment in the Gospel story evidences the tremendous self-realization and self-mastery of Jesus. A leper had approached him seeking to be healed. Putting forth his hand, Jesus touched him, saying "I will, be thou clean." Immediately the sick man became well. In that emphatic statement, "I will", there was brought into focus all the God-power with which Jesus was endowed and of which he was so mightily conscious.

You might be surprised, as you study this new insight into Truth, at your tremendous potential as a spiritual being. It is certainly a wonderful thing to contemplate, but its realization is by no means automatic. Beyond developing understanding and faith and the executive power of mind is the question of will, which is the directional, formative power of the mind. Matthew Arnold said, "The seeds of Godlike power are in us still; gods we are, bards, saints, heroes, if we will." When a man stands up to life and says "I will", the true greatness of mankind is evidenced. Only in this way is power brought into fulfillment.

Sometimes people come to me desiring to get ahead in their work, asking for help in achieving this. I inform them that they can be helped and that I will pray with them and instruct them in new and positive concepts, but then I ask them how strongly they desire change. Arc they willing to work with these truths? Are they willing to follow through with practice and study and preparation every day? Are they willing to make personal adjustments and sacrifices to prepare for the greater good? Oftentimes I hear excuses and evasions. No matter how intense is your desire it is insufficient until you state unequivocally: "I will."

All desire must lead to will, or else it is mere wishing and dreaming. Had Jesus said to the leper, "I sure would like to help you; I want you to be well more than anything", there would have been no healing. Cleansing of the disease resulted from the statement, "1 will, be thou clean,"

Kahlil Gibran puts this beautifully: "O God, who art our winged self, it is thy will in us that willeth. It is thy desire in us that desireth. It is thy urge in us that would turn our nights, which are thine, into days which are thine also."

In truth, there is no isolated human will. The will is but one phase of man's consciousness; a product of the higher will of God. Though man seems to be an individual entity in the world, with freedom to come and go, destroy and create, he remains an expression of, and inexorably linked with, the active mind of God. Whatever his lack or difficulty, he can never be outside of God. In his "Fall" Man has only lost his direct awareness with Omneity.

Man is a creative expression of the divine will and is sustained by this will of the Highest, constantly seeking to perfect itself in all creation. Man is the will of God in action. Whereas you are free to act without dictation, and you are free to succeed or fail, to be healthy or sick, you can never really stray outside of the presence, the life, the substance and the will of God. Throughout your life you can choose to direct divine power in any direction, but it is still and always divine power. As Jesus says, "I of myself can do nothing."

A great Hungarian patriot of the nineteenth century, Kossuth, was refused permission to land in France after his exile, in spite of the fact that thousands of his admirers were lined up on the dock. One Frenchman, however, did not accept this and jumped into the bay, swam out a mile and climbed up a rope ladder to the deck of the ship, where he stood dripping in the presence of Kossuth. When asked how he had the strength to swim the great distance, the man replied, "There are no difficulties to him that wills." Kossuth replied, "Thank you for coming. That shall be my motto as well as my inspiration for all my life."

We all have times when we are in an exalted frame of mind, with a sudden feeling of power and at these times we resolve to do better and greater things. Usually, these feelings do not remain; after a while they are but a faint memory of the original desire and resolve. We must shift into action in these moments, turning desire into, "I will". As William James used to say, "Seize the very first possible opportunity to act on every resolution you make and on every emotional prompting you may experience in the direction of the habits you desire to gain."

We can do this by formulating an affirmation through which we can direct the dynamic force of will. Desiring to be strong, say "I will strength." Desiring sufficiency, "I am confident and capable." Desiring healing, "I am healed." This is the whole reason behind affirmation; your will is acting to let God's perfect will be done. You are greater than you know. When you will to be what you wish to be, you will so become, for the will is the man.

Paul teaches in Philippians, "It is God who works in us to will and to do His good pleasure." Some have considered this to mean that God is going to do whatever he wants with us and there is nothing we can do about it. But Paul is speaking in context of Jesus' statement, "It is the Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." The will of God is changeless, eternal, and fixed; since the Creation was good and very good, so you too are good and very good. You are a spiritual being ever in the process of becoming. His will is the ceaseless activity seeking to perfect you, his creation. Paul is saying that there is a dynamic force within you that is ceaselessly working for your good. As Gibran says, "Even before you desired prosperity, God desired it for you. Even before you desired to be healed, the life force in you was trying to manifest as health."

We have, unfortunately, a negative tradition of understanding God's will as capricious. A setback or tragedy evokes the comment, "Well, I guess it was God's will." Men think of death especially as God's will, even though this is a total misunderstanding of Jesus' teaching. He said, "It is not the will of your Father that one of these little ones should perish."

Dr. Hutschnecker, in his popular book, The Will To Live, points out that sickness often comes from a will to be sick, and that health must be preceded by a will to be well, to live, and to overcome. He says that sickness is often an unconscious or subconscious attempt to escape from life.

Charles Fillmore says, "The simple statement, "I will to be well', gathers the forces of the mind and body about the central idea of wholeness, and the will holds that center just as long as the 'I am' continues its affirmation." He goes on to say that no one ever died until he let go of his will to live, and that thousands live on through the force of a determined will.

Told by his physicians that they could not do more for him and that he must soon die, an English playwright retorted: "What! Leave a family of helpless children! I will not die! I will live!" He recovered his health to live for many years.

Prayer should never lead to resignation to some supposed act of fate; nor should it be an expression of our willfulness. Prayer must be, in the spirit of the Psalmist: "I delight to do thy will, O God; thy law is within my heart."

The important point of all this is: God will. Will you? You must say, "Yes, I will; I will to let the divine action manifest through me." Prayer, used rightly, must be a channel through which the executive power of the mind may function. Will to believe in yourself and in the forces of good in your world. Say yes to God!

May I share with you a wonderful poem by Ella Wheeler Wilcox entitled "Will"?

> There is no chance, no destiny, no fate,
> Can circumvent or hinder or control
> The firm resolve of a determined soul.
> Gifts count for nothing; will alone is great;
> All things give way before it, soon or late.
> What obstacle can stay the mighty force
> Of the sea-seeking river in its course,
> Or cause the ascending orb of day to wait?
> Each well-born soul must win what it deserves;
> Let the fool prate of luck. The fortunate
> Is he whose earnest purpose never swerves,
> Whose slightest action or inaction serves
> The one great aim. Why even death stands still,
> And waits an hour sometimes for such a will.

ESSAY
The Door is Always Open

It has been said that no door in life ever closes but that another door opens, and it is up to us to open that door. Sometimes we feel that when a certain door closes we shall never be happy again. An unhappy experience is not often thought of as a doorway to happiness. Certainly, a person in the throes of an unhappy love affair could hardly think of it as a blessing. Yet many persons can look back and see that this isn't true for them. Because of the good that has come from it, they are even able to think with gratitude of the experience that seemed so hard at the time.

Time alone is a great healer of heartaches, but we don't have to wait for time's slow healing. It is better to form attitudes of mind and heart that will protect and sustain us in time of need. The most essential attitude is one of trust in God, trust in tie Divine process, confidence in the activity of the Infinite working in and through us at all times. He who made the heart surely knows its needs and is capable of filling them.

A girl that I know was aware of this Truth. Unable to think of anything elaborate or poetic in a period of deep heartache, she would say over and over again, "God will not let me down; God will not let me down." And God did not let her down. Her faith kept the door of her heart open so that life could come in and flow through. And come it did, with blessings that superseded the ones that her heart was set upon. She had faith in the flow. She had trust in the process.

New blessings will always take the place of the ones we have hoped for if we will let them, for tie richness of life, the abundance of life, the prodigal goodness of life is never exhausted. We can close our heart and mind to life but life never closes its door to us, and that's a marvelous thought. We may think that life has closed its doors because the person who has made us most conscious of life and love and joy of living has chosen a way of life that doesn't include us. But the closed doors are an illusion created by our feeling of desolation.

It is sometimes difficult to understand the reasons for the changes that take place in the affections of men and women, but every action is an endeavor to satisfy some inner need of the soul. There may be an easier, better way, but a person can act only in accordance with his present understanding and ability. We must know that the needs of one person are never met at the cost of another's happiness: our faith that somehow things work together for good (even though the good seems obscure) will help us to accept with courage and grace what seem to be heartbreaking changes. Even though the love and encouragement we seem to need have been withdrawn from us, we must never let our loss destroy our peace of mind. Instead, we must know that when one door closes, another always opens.

It happens to many of us that things are going along just fine, just tie way we want them to go, and as we take each step on our smooth, unruffled path, we look down life's corridor and we see all the open doors ahead leading straight to our goal. It is a marvelous feeling. We are sure of ourselves, and feel a deep security because we know where we are going and how we are going to get there. And then "Bang!" The door just ahead of us closes, finally and firmly, and there appears to be no key, no device for opening that particular door again.

What do we do now? Well, some of us just stand there banging at the door, bruising our spirit as we rant and rave at our ill luck and dark fate. We cry out, "Why? What have I done to deserve this? It's not fair!" And what do we get for all of our raving, our bewailing, our self-pity? Does the closed door suddenly open, and do all animate and inanimate things rush to our cause to make up for the inconvenience and worry we suffered? Certainly, any closed door never opens because we rave. It may open again in the natural course of things. Or, through prayer, or by investigations of ways and means, or particular needed effort, we may find a solution that proves to be a key to that door. But very often, doors close permanently. Accumulating circumstances, sudden happenings, accidents, death, or natural processes often put blank walls where an open door once existed. And what do we do then . give up? Do we take the path of least resistance and declare that we must have meant to fail? No. We were meant to look for new doors to open. They are there always. The Creator of this wondrously complex Universe could not have so limited one of his creatures.

Milton's blindness shut a door but opened others to deeper sensitivity. Would Paradise Lost ever have been written otherwise? Lou Gehrig, called America's best loved ballplayer, certainly saw all his open doors ahead clear amid unobstructed, and then a mysterious paralysis struck him and a door was closed. Neither the most advanced medical knowledge nor the widespread sorrow of his fans could reopen the door. Did he give up? No, not even in the face of a very limited life span. Instead, he opened another door by taking a job in New York City as Parole Commissioner. With vast sympathy and astounding courage, his service to others not only helped him to walk with spirit upright through a new open door, but he was also privileged to help former convicts find new doors to better lives for themselves.

Mary Doyler was the contented wife of a well-to-do store executive. She was a busy mother, and her life door was opened wide to the well-marked corridor ahead. Then her husband became ill, and before he passed on, all the family resources had been spent. In a very short while, a physical condition developed that eventually left her voiceless. She tried working in a shop, but couldn't make enough to support herself and her three children. She found it necessary to look around for other doors and part of this looking around consisted in taking stock of herself: listing her experience, her capabilities, her talents. In this evaluation process, she recalled her interest and experience in speech therapy; she had taught remedial reading and speech years before. But now she had no voice at all. Was this another door closed for her? Intuitively, she felt that the speech therapy might be a glimmer of light from a possible door-opening. So she consulted her surgeon and learned of a special method of esophageal speech. She learned the method, and then got a job teaching others who had lost their voice boxes. As is so often the case, her new open door led to satisfied ways to open doors for others.

For everyone, there are always other doors. How do we find them? There are countess ways. Here are a few suggestions that might help. First of all, you can pray for guidance, giving in to what I call the Divine flow, knowing that it will be only good. Expect an answer. Second, you can turn away temporarily from your own private world. A seeing heart minors the need of others, and in serving, reveals new doors. Third, you can get outdoors. You can walk, or ride a bicycle, or take some form of exercise, or sit in the sunlight or the rain. And fourth, you can make a list of your talents, experiences, problems. Then list ways that come to mind (even the improbable ones) of how you may use what you have in order to find a way ahead. Do not force; just let go and let God. Trust the process.

I would like to share with you a favorite poem of mine, written by Hazel Thomas Wright, entitled, "The Door Is Open":

> "Be still and know whatever may betide,
> No door is closed but that another opens wide;
> A door that opens to a boundless view
> Of blessings rich in promise, vital, new,
> Blessings more wonderful than you have ever known;
> Dare to step through the door and claim your own.
> Keep clear your inner vision, thus to see
> The good awaiting you, and constant be;
> Face each new venture with a joyful song,
> Lift up your head and heart, be valiant, strong;
> With God as your protector, friend, and guide,
> No door is closed but that another opens wide."

In countless ways and places, life opens its doors to us. Our part is to enter in. We are travelers toward new horizons and ever-increasing good. And the person we are to become is much greater than the person we would have been if we had not had the experience that made us ask and seek and knock at the new doors of life.

OPTIONAL MATERIAL
Occultism and Spiritualism

What You Need To Know

The word 'occult' means 'hidden'. It derives from the Latin 'occultus', tie past participle of 'occulo', meaning "to conceal or to cover over." in a broad but true meaning, occult science includes academic science for the academic scientist is truly in every sense an occultist. The academic scientist is engaged through laboratory research in seeking out the invisible and hidden causes of visible phenomena. Newton, when he studied the reason which causes an apple to fall, was in reality an occultist, for lie sought the hidden cause of the fall. Modem scientists who seek the structure and analysis of the atom are occult scientists, for they are busy with the search for the hidden causes that constitute the very fundamentals of the cosmos.

The true occult scientist who fully measures up to the meaning of the term, not only seeks the hidden causes of natural phenomena. he also applies himself to the search for the truths of spiritual phenomena. The occult scientist accepts amid uses the laboratory methods as far as they go, but knowing their limitations, he does not limit himself accordingly. Instead, lie carries on his investigations on higher planes. "Occultism" is the term applied to the entire field of occult science. There is true occultism and false occultism.

True occultism consists of the methodical, rational study and investigation of the laws of nature, applying them ethically and physically in tie study of man, his origin, evolution, present status and future estate. True occultism consists in the methodical, rational and systematic study of man's invisible bodies, his psychic and spiritual organs and the inner states of consciousness, planes and worlds. True occultism is a science of the highest kind, which, when pursued with wisdom and caution, leads its devotees to higher states of consciousness which transcend the ordinary states of consciousness. When the states of higher consciousness prevail, man discerns planes of existence and entities inhabiting them of which ordinary humanity knows nothing. It is the sum total of supernormal experience of countess centuries, perceived with supernormal faculties developed in some people and recorded by the Initiates of the Occult Path. It forms the body of what is known as the teachings of occult science. The secrets of occult science, like the secrets of some higher arts and advanced scientific research, are reserved for those who are endowed with special abilities and for those who take the trouble to cultivate them.

True occultism takes up where psychology leaves off and provides its students with a philosophy of living and a way of life drawn from its experiences. This philosophy, when lived and applied to daily life, takes its students into the domain of revealed religion. This occurs because the seeker has penetrated, by way of the occult path, into the planes from whence comes all revelation. Thus, true occult science is not merely a study, but a way of life based on strict self-discipline and many tests of fitness.

"There is nothing covered that shall not be revealed, neither hid that shall not be known," Luke 12:2. It is the work of the occultist to reveal that which is now covered and know that which is now hidden.

The higher level of occult science embraces inner experience and entry into the unseen. This is accomplished through certain methods and practices, and, as already stated, by a way of life based on strict self-discipline and many tests of fitness. There is only one valid reason for entering the occult science path and that is the strongest kind of aspiration for light on the path of spiritual unfoldment that leads to Union with God.

The Initiate of the Right Hand Path of true occult science uses his knowledge solely for time purpose of bringing human consciousness to the reason of God. To the seeker who does not wholly accept explanations offered by science, philosophy and religion, occult science offers a rich mine of Eternal Wisdom to those willing to work for it.

FUNDAMENTALISM

A term for a religious belief-system characterized by dogmatic tenets, biblical literalism and biased doctrines, many of which are a pejorification of spiritual truth. Fundamentalists are extremely sensitive and vehemently oppose any historical or scientific revelation which could prove their beliefs wrong.

SATANISM

Satanism (or Devil Worship) has to do with the worship of Satan or deities having a demonic form. The worship of Satan or diabolism is spasmodic and occasionally epidemic. It dates from the early days of dualism and perhaps originated in the Persian dual system when the opposing deities Ormuzd and Ahriman symbolized the good and bad principles respectively.

"Satanism" is also a broad and general term for (a) black magic, sorcery, amid obeah, which are methods of the "left hand" path employed in an attempt to obtain one's wishes, usually for self-aggrandizement; and (b) to describe all sorts of evil, vulgar, diabolic and heinous acts that debase and degrade the human being, such as: taking hallucinatory and illegal drugs, orgies, all forms of perversion, debauchery, lewdness, profanity, etc., etc.

It should hardly be necessary to say that Occultism is opposed to Satanism, however the distinction is emphasized here for clarity because some persons whose business it is to deceive, sometimes do try to equate Occultism with Satanism. These detractors are often religious bigots who view any scientific system (such as Occultism) which strives to advance knowledge and enlightenment, as a threat to their very existence.

SPIRITUAL SCIENCE & SPIRITUALISM

'Spiritual' comes from the Latin 'Spiritus' meaning: breath, soul, life. According to the dictionary 'Spiritual' means "pertaining to or like the soul, or its affections, specifically as influenced by divine spirit. Hence: pure; holy; heavenly minded, as opposed to carnal. 'Spiritual' is the term applied to that which pertains to, or affects the inner immaterial nature of man.

No one questions that man is endowed with mind, yet mind is invisible, immaterial; therefore it is a spiritual quality of man. Consciousness is an invisible spiritual faculty. Multitudinous proofs through physical research, personal experiences and the highest scriptural teachings of all root religions of the world, testify to the persistence of consciousness beyond the abyss between so-called death and mortal life expression.

Science, according to the dictionary, is "knowledge gained and verified by exact observation and correct thinking, especially as methodically formulated and arranged in a rational system." Spiritual science, therefore, is knowledge of all that pertains to the inner, higher qualities of man, his invisible forces, potencies, his relationship to higher intelligence and to time Divine and inner worlds, planes and regions, gained and verified by exact observation amid correct thinking, methodically formulated and arranged in a rational system. 'Spiritualism' is the term applied both to a philosophy and to a cult. Applied to philosophy, it is a doctrine based upon reason, sentiment, or faith, that there are beings not cognizable by time senses, or characterized by the properties of matter, and are therefore spiritual, as distinguished from material. Again, 'spiritualism' is the doctrine that "man is an immortal spirit and holds mortal relations to God as a Spirit."

The term 'spiritualism' as applied to a cult, means "the belief that the spirits of time dead iii various ways communicate with and manifest their presence to men, usually through the agency of a person called a medium, also time doctrine and practices of so believing."

The study of true spiritual science does not stop with the mere investigation and observation of phenomena or laws that apply to the invisible principles of man and the universe; they profit little unless applied by the individual student - who must learn that lie is a little world (microcosm) of time great world (macrocosm) - that in him all nature's forces are epitomized, that lie is destined to become divine and be one with his Source. Such a realization will develop in the student a consciousness of his kinship to all that constitutes the world, organic and inorganic, visible and invisible. In everything about him, he beholds himself in past present, and to a conceivable extent, the future.

He peers into his future by a study of time supermen of all races, who as Messiahs have given him examples of exalted living with the definite assurance that the works they did, he will do, if lie lives the life that makes possible the exercise of spiritual powers of a high degree.

ADEPTSHIP

It has been said that Adeptship is possible to very few. Therefore, die student may feel his work to attain Initiation may be wasted effort. Some teachers say it takes three incarnations of dedicated effort to find the Path which leads to Initiation. However, even when we see no possibility of attaining Adeptship, we should be wise enough to make this life one of preparation for it, and one enriched by growing spiritual insight which conies to all those who earnestly try. Not everyone studying the piano will become a Chopin or a Paderewski, but everyone is able to attain to a considerable mastery and appreciation of music and thereby enrich their life.

Man cannot function on the planes, or in the regions he desires to enter and study until he prepares a vehicle appropriate to those planes or regions. The first step in the preparation of this vehicle is by "living the life" - the cultivation of selflessness and the elimination of egoism.

The student must strive to lessen all of his desires for personal pleasure or gain, replacing them with desires for the good of the whole, the good of all men without regard to their nationality, race, creed, culture, appearance, social or moral standing; also for the good of the whole universe, - the good of the spirits and angels as well as of animals, plants and of all creation. Think not that you are too insignificant for that, or that your powers can not be useful to angels or plants. When you find your feet placed upon the Path your powers will increase even beyond your present expectations. Each day you will be approaching ever nearer to God, and therefore you will be evermore participating in God's omniscience and omnipotence.

The consciousness of our intimate relationship to everything that we can see or know, develops in us an increased sense of personal responsibility toward all which constitutes our environment. This sense of personal responsibility expands with our growth to include several spheres of being and prompts us to serve, rather than to be served. In addition to the foregoing, the spiritual scientist, in his search of the higher mysteries, develops and uses the powers of prayer, meditation, and contemplation. Few students realize that after certain advanced states in their development are reached, they may penetrate far into the inner planes by means of meditation. It is by this method that a great amount of spiritual knowledge has been brought to the world.

Adeptship is attained when both of the pathways, the way of time occultist and the way of the mystic (that is, the occult and the spiritual) are properly balanced. The Martinist who works on the higher plane of thought, the spiritual, has ever in mind the command: "seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness". He is encouraged by the promise "and all these other things (which the occultist seeks) will be added unto you."

PRAYER, MEDITATION & THE MARTINIST

Prayer, meditation and contemplation are the chief tools of the Inner Way advocated by Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin, and these play a very important part in the life of the Martinist. However: the Martinist is well aware that the conventional prayers of uttering a lot of words, without realization of what they mean, without spirit, is useless. It is essential to remember that prayer without works, that is, a lot of words but not living the life is vain and dead.

To the Martinist, spirituality means above all things: intense and unselfish activity on behalf of his fellowmen and the world in general. The Martinist should not be a plodder in search of the mysteries and secrets of die inner world for the mere satisfaction that may come from discoveries of realms little known to the rest of humanity. If he attempts to work and progress with such motives he is doomed to failure and disappointment.

SPIRITUAL PERCEPTION

To the student of occult science there is an occult hidden or spiritual side to everything in the universe and it is the purpose of occultism to help him develop the power of apprehending the spiritual side of the world.

But training or developing spiritual powers and forces does not necessarily mean developing clairvoyance or other psychic faculties. These undoubtedly will come if the training has been the right sort along constructive lines, but they are worse than useless if they mean mere medium-ship which is dangerous and physically disastrous.

The clairvoyance and clairaudience of negative medium-ship is limited in scope and inaccurate in detail. True spiritual perception, whether of sight or hearing, developed along positive lines that are in alignment with the constructive principle of nature, is not only harmless but highly beneficial because without it man is limited far beyond what nature intended him to be. Not that this is nature's fault; far from it. The fact is, nature gave mankind a fair start. With his spiritual perceptions developed first, he lived in a spiritual environment high in the emanations of Omneity, but mankind surrendered these faculties for the pottage of sense gratification, and now he must work his way back by slow development to his original equilibrated status.

It is important to understand, therefore, that the development and cultivation of spiritual powers is of little practical value unless they also manifest in the daily and ethical life of the student. The strongest powers of clear vision will be valueless if they do not teach the individual to see the needs and requirements of his fellowmen and engender a desire to supply them. It is of little use to develop occult power unless that power brings with it not only the desire to see the unfolding future, but also to point out the "better way" to an unfortunate brother, to guide, console and empathize with him in a spirit of true brotherhood and in a manner substantially useful. Spiritual power that does not move us to go willingly and cheerfully out of our way to help and give unselfish service is not truly spiritual. It may be psychic, but it is not of the universal Holy Spirit.

The Martinist is admonished to study two books: The Book of Nature and the Book of Man. To a great extent, this is a personal study. If we set out to study the laws of nature let as make sure that it is because we sincerely desire to learn how to apply these laws for the improvement of nature's greatest product: humanity.

If we set out to develop spiritual power let us be sure it is because we sincerely desire to use such power for the alleviation of human suffering, misery, error and woe, and to bring sunshine to those in darkness. As we develop powers of concentration let us remember that our concentration is not to be selfishly devoted to self, but developed so that we may be able to serve.

Martinist Philosophy and Practice, Part 2

LIBER OVERVIEW

We have reached the halfway point in Plane I! In this Liber, we have two Lectures which deal with very important aspects of the Esoteric Tradition, namely, Reincarnation and the Three Parts of Man. A third Lecture will introduce you to a prayer which dates from the early days of Martinism. You are encouraged to make this prayer, "A Short Office of the Holy Spirit", a regular part of your life. In addition to the Lectures, you will find an Essay which answers questions raised about our work. Also, two Essays which discuss the importance of correct seeing and hearing.

LECTURE
The Doctrine of Reincarnation

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

Our introductory Works include a careful study of the Book of Nature, a fact which was made known to you previously. We will also study the principle of duality, for we need to achieve a balanced outlook on life. By the time you have completed these preliminary studies, you shall have formed some conception of what belongs to self in the human make-up, and what does not. In this way we gradually prepare ourselves for the ultimate study of the Book of Man.

'Nature' to most people means: the Plant Kingdom and the Animal Kingdom, the field of biology. A few people look up and see the stars and planets, which causes them to include the apparently inert Mineral Kingdom in the term "NATURE". However we regard the world around us, we cannot fail to observe that all Nature operates in cycles or periods with more or less regularity. All life, in fact, manifests in various kinds of changing phenomena. Some of these, like the stars, planets and satellites, seem to repeat their paths with little or no deviation over a long period of what we call "time". Indeed we measure this "time" from this very regularity. On the other hand, other forms of life change so rapidly that we may fail to notice the fact, such as the lifetime of a species of mayflies which lasts only a few hours.

Can you give some examples of any of the cycles or periods observable in Nature? (High & Low Tide; the changing seasons: Winter, Spring, Summer, Autumn; waxing and waning of the Moon, what else?)

It is not surprising, therefore, that mystics or spiritual students of Nature have come to the realization that Mankind must also progress in cycles. This is easily seen from history, but there is the more interesting individual cycle of life and consciousness which our Venerable Order teaches its members and which is part of the Esoteric Tradition in many Spiritual Brotherhoods. It is not given to you as a dogma which you are required to believe, but only as an explanation of what many of our predecessors have claimed to know as an inevitable Law. We shall now study this Tradition. discuss it, and preserve open minds so as to receive whatever enlightenment may be granted to us in our deeper meditations.

The doctrine of reincarnation is but an extension to the human Realm of the Cyclic Laws observed in all processes of evolution. Most of you have met this teaching already. It is not our purpose to go into details here, but to recognize that many millions of people in the East subscribe to this teaching, and some actually claim to know that there is something in us which is reborn in human form at intervals. That we do not readily recall former lives on this Earth is simply (hue to the fact that the physical brain is new at birth and is a clean "slate" without impressions from either the senses or the mind within. Consciousness of existence prior to birth is, however, sometimes carried over and remembered, as the following account tells us: members who are interested may care to read the book Edgar Cayce by Joseph Millard[1].

Edgar Cayce was born in Kentucky in 1877. Although very backward at school, he suddenly discovered the ability to memorize the contents of a book merely by sleeping with it under his pillow. Subsequently, he developed the faculty for going into a light hypnotic sleep, wherein he could diagnose in complex medical terminology the illnesses of many people, although provided only with their names and addresses. He prescribed thousands of cures in such cases, most of which worked. Later still, he recounted details of the past incarnations of men and women, showing how their present lives were conditioned by their past ones, for both good and bad destiny.

This self-created destiny is generally known as "Karma". Initiates will find it interesting to note that what is called the Law of Karma is also known as the Law of Equilibrium. To Edgar Cayce, all this was against his religion and it took him many years to uncontrolled psychic readings to convince him that he was not being "possessed by the devil". Among these "readings" was one concerning a distant cousin of his who was expecting a child. In his self-induced sleep, Cayce told listeners that the mother's life could not be saved, but medicines were prescribed which would keep her alive for a normal birth. The young woman readily followed her cousin's advice and remained alive for forty days and gave birth to a daughter.

A few years afterwards, Cayce happened to be in the town where the cousin had lived and went into a barber's shop. Another customer was in the chair and his little daughter was playing nearby. When Cayce sat down, the little girl scrambled into his lap and threw her arms around him. The man in the chair sat up and apologized saying, "I'm sorry mister, I don't know what got into her. She usually runs and hides if a stranger even smiles at her." Then to the child he said "Get down. honey, you mustn't bother the man; he isn't anyone you know." But the girl hugged Cayce even tighter and replied "He is so. He was with me at the river." The barber knew the father of the child and then introduced him to Cayce, and to Cayce's amazement, he was the widower of his dead cousin.

Let us now examine the Christian Scriptures in connection with the concept of Reincarnation. This is significant to us, because we are an Order of Christian Mystic Chivalry and our Mystic Degree relates to the Knights Benevolent of the Holy City, as some of you may know. Our V::: M::: Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin, wrote of the Master Jesus as the 'Light Itself' and our tradition tells us that the original Apostles spoke of the Great Master as Ieschouah, the Hebrew form of Jesus, which, in turn, comes more directly from the Greek Iesous, with a probable generic root in the Egyptian Isis. These thoughts may help us recognize the Path of Light in our meditations.

In the Book of St. Luke, Chapter 9, verses 7 & 8, we read as follows: "Now Herod, the Tetrarch, heard of all that was done by him (Jesus) and he was perplexed because it was said of some, that John was risen from the dead; and of some that Elias had appeared; and of others that one of the old prophets was risen again." This statement is one of several which clearly indicate that the people of those days were familiar with the concept of reincarnation and quite willing to accept the rebirth of previous personalities. An even more definite statement is recorded in the Book of St. Matthew, 17:10-13: " And his disciples asked him, saying, Why then say the scribes that Elias must first come? And Jesus answered and said unto them "Elias truly shall first come and restore all things. But, I say unto you, that Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed. Likewise shall also the Son of Man suffer of them." Then the disciples understood that He spoke unto them of John the Baptist." There are several other verses in the Bible which point quite reasonably to reincarnation, but most were eliminated during the several editings of the scriptures by various Church Councils for policy reasons, in particular the Second Council of Constantinople in 553 A.D.. To teach people that they would progress through many lifetimes in rounding out their spiritual personalities to attain Christ Consciousness, would have weakened the grip of the Church over the prevailing mentalities, which were conveniently superstitious at that period. This desire, by the way, to obtain a hold over the minds of other people still exists and those who seek material power will exploit any means to achieve it.

It is important to understand that with the concept of reincarnation, goes the so-called Law of Karma or Equilibrium, which signifies an all-embracing Justice covering all ages and all Planes of Consciousness. Once again we find support for this in the New Testament at the Book of Galatians 6:5 & 7 — "For every man shall bear his own burden." "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Nothing could be clearer than that!

The ancient doctrine which runs through all religions has always emanated from the East and the esoteric interpretation is that the balancing up of our thoughts, words and deeds, is quite impersonal and often beyond our finite comprehension, because it goes from incarnation to incarnation. We may thus be "our brother's keeper" in more ways than one.

Before we leave this interesting subject for the time being, let us see what the Illustrious Papus, who organized Martinism in its present form in 1890, has to say about it: In an extensive work entitled "La Reincarnation, La Metempsychose, L'Evolution Physique, Astrale et Spirituelle," Papus explains the cyclic life of the three principles in Man, namely the Physical, the Astral and the Spiritual. Dealing with the physical body he considers the separation of the cells at death and their return to the Mineral Kingdom. He holds the view that such cells or substances as have been employed in human evolution will eventually find themselves returning to help nourish other human bodies. The second principle, the Astral Body or Plastic Envelope, which is influenced by astrological patterns, carries the spiritual principle or Âme in the realm to which it is harmonized by the sum total of its Karma. Apparently, the Plastic Envelope does not finally disperse while the individual still requires to reincarnate. The spiritual principle (Âme) is the permanent part of man and of all Mankind. Full awareness of this is Christ Consciousness. It was the spiritual principle to which Saint-Martin referred when writing of those who were "united to their principle". Such is the Martinist Number 8 on the Path of Return, the Gnostic number for Christ, the change unto the Ogdoad.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

Here are some questions to allow you to test your understanding:

What part of Man is it that reincarnates?

When does the person cease to reincarnate?

What do you understand by "Karma"?

Can we equilibrate "bad' Karma by doing "Good" deeds?

When one has become fully aware of the Âme, what has he achieved?

At the conventicle a Sister asked a question about the cyclic pattern:

"Since we understand that our reincarnations follow a cyclic pattern, can you say what the length of time is between rebirths? I have heard it said that this is 144 years."

No, Martinism does not suggest any set time to the cycle of rebirth.

The 144 year figure is an idea that comes from another school. Let us remember that Martinism does not propose reincarnation in any dogmatic way, it simply asks members to examine it in the light of their own understanding as a working hypothesis, (it is no more illogical than the idea of heaven and hell!).

The cyclic patterns observable in Nature are rarely immutable. For example: one might say that the cycle of day and night is observable as 12 + 12 hours, but his does not really hold water - only on two days a year, and then in selected locations, are day and night of the same length! According to one's geographical location and the time of the year, the length of day may vary from 1 to 11 hours or so. At the North Pole you have in theory everlasting daylight.

As far as our Martinist teachings go, our suggestions about the cycle of reincarnations are far less assertive than some of the most dogmatic teachings proposed by some of these "modern day" "schools". There is first to be considered the nature of that which is, or may be, reincarnated, and which, in our eyes is of an extremely tenuous nature. Nothing like the whole "personality" much advocated in these other "schools".

There is even a doubt as to whether we ALL have something worth being reincarnated! Some teachers have thought that only that part of our spiritual being that we have developed and trained for that purpose will have the strength to resist the pull or suction of the abyss of death and float until finding another host. You see, the question is complex!

Let us remember never to be too dogmatic about anything, and always encourage the individual to meditate on the problem themself. Remember, Martinism is never dogmatic. It does not tell people what to believe, it only guides and suggests.

The Three Parts of Man

Greetings my Brothers & Sisters

My Brothers and Sisters, kindly remember that the Exercises you receive in this and other Libers are to be persisted with. They are not to be discontinued after a week or two of experiment Remember that "spiritual development" requires work, by yourself, on yourself! Reading about it won't accomplish it.

Let us continue our study of the Triadic Pattern and then continue the subject of numbers.

In our last Conventicles we saw that Martinism divides Being into three Worlds: The Empyrean World, The World of Orbs, and The World of Matter, (or Elemental World). It is essential at this point to avoid situating in our minds, these three Worlds as being separate and one on top of the other (like shelves on a book-case), so to speak. The symbolism of the Altar cloth is thus separated to indicate a progression in passing from one World, or stage, to another; but we must realize the three worlds interpenetrate each other, and that this principle applies to all patterns that correspond to the Triad. This can be more clearly understood if you consider radio waves, there are basically three kinds of radio waves; long waves, medium waves, and short waves. None of these waves is above the other, and although we may speak of high waves and low waves, they all inter-penetrate each other, they are all around us and can be received by any radio set which responds to them.

Accordingly, Man is divided into three parts: His Âme, his Plastic Envelope or Astral Body, (also called the Fluidic Envelope), and his Physical or Corporeal Body. The Âme is what we could generally call the Spirit in English; the Physical Body is that part of us which is, strictly speaking, material; and the Fluid or Plastic Envelope is that which unites in us the Âme to the Physical Body. In this instance it is a "go-between", like the plastic liner in the cover of a soft drink cap that stands between the cap and the bottle. It is the etheric condition that enables our Physical Body to become infused by our Spirit.

The Physical Body of man is generally divided in three parts: Head, Chest and Abdomen. Each part corresponds to one of the Worlds through its plane of Consciousness: The Head corresponds to the plane of Thought; the Chest, to the plane of Emotions and Feelings; and the Abdomen corresponds to the plane of Bodily Functions.

We see this all symbolized in the three colors of the Altar Cloth which are emblematic of the true principles of Hierarchy, that progressive order, or series of grades or stages, through which we develop.

In every organization, such a hierarchy must exist, for it is reasonable that those who have advanced have progressed beyond those who have just entered the Light. The colors white, red and black, represent the Hierarchy of Light.

Our search for a knowledge of the Absolute, God, Nature and Man begins in darkness, a state of comparative confusion, perhaps even in doubt and fear. This is symbolized by the black cloth and denotes that our hierarchical degree of ascent is still much in the shadow. The black cloth denotes the stomach and the body, and the Instinctive Consciousness, for these are the lowest in the hierarchical order of our being. Certainly, that man whose life is governed solely by his stomach and bodily appetites has not advanced far among men, nor even above animals. These are the Men of the Stream.

The red cloth represents the degree of penumbra. In art, penumbra is the blending of shadows into light, it is that point where shadows merge into color. Consequently, the red cloth above the black on the altar, symbolizes man rising out of abject darkness into the twilight of understanding. It also denotes the breast and life. Symbolically, the heart is the seat of the emotions and sentiments of man, and, further, it pumps the life blood through the body. Since it is located in the breast its interests are higher and exert a more refined influence upon man than those of his stomach or appetites. A man who is sensitive to his sentiments and emotions, and is transcending his lower nature, is emerging from darkness into light, consequently, the red cloth symbolizing these things, is above the black one. The color red will therefore indicate the Men of Desire.

The white cloth surmounting the altar represents pure light It denotes the manifestation of the head, thought, more particularly that level we call Perfect or Christ Consciousness. We depend upon thought for our understanding of the mystery of the triad of nature, man and God, as well as of the character of the Absolute. White therefore represents the Children of the Light.

In nature, as in man, the same hierarchy of three degrees will be seen: the three great divisions or kingdoms. What are they? The mineral, vegetable and animal. Again: there is a corresponding relationship between these three kingdoms of nature and the hierarchical order of man. To the uninitiated, each seems animated by a power peculiar to itself. It is the obligation of the Martinist to relate these three hierarchical manifestations of the Universe with Truth.

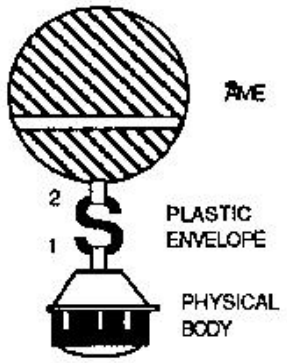
From our understanding so far, we should be in a position to penetrate the phenomenon called "death". We have said that Man is composed of the Physical Body, the Plastic Envelope and the Âme. Perhaps a good analogy can be drawn from a large observation balloon. You will see by the diagram that there are three separate and distinct divisions. These divisions make the figure analogous to the construction of the human being.



The wire basket containing the sand-bags represents the physical body. It is hooked to the Plastic Envelope at 1. The Plastic Envelope is in turn hooked to the balloon, representing the Âme, at 2. When the balloon is high enough, the wind, becoming rough, shakes off the heavy basket containing the sandbags. Further rocking of the balloon at a higher altitude dislodges the hooked piece of metal which represents the Plastic Envelope. The balloon, representing the Âme, which is the immortal part of us, then continues on, up out of sight.

We see in this figure a very simple explanation of death. In the ordinary state of health, all three principles are assembled together. When one becomes ill or death approaches, some of the sandbags are thrown out of the basket and the Âme is then able to exert a greater force than the body. The forces of the spiritual world begin to rock the balloon and the body is shaken off and left behind on earth. The true solvent of dead bodies being the earth, the body of man is decomposed and absorbed again into nature. The double-hooked rod is next shaken from its connection with the Âme. The Âme then soars to invisible heights.

LECTURE
A Short Office of the Holy Spirit

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

Let us pause for a moment and review a very important matter. You will remember in our very first Liber we pointed out that this thing called "spiritual development" calls for work done by oneself, on oneself and that teachers can only point the way. As we have been walking along together, certain principles have been explained and some techniques for aiding your spiritual unfoldment have been given. From the reports sent us, we know that quite a few of you have set up your oratory, and most of you have embarked on a daily program of prayer, meditation and contemplation. The preceding lecture now adds another dimension to your Work.

You will have heard of the Elus-Cohen. This was a very high spiritual Order which was founded by our V::: M::: Martinez Pasquales. The highest degrees of this Order were called the Reaux + Croix and there the brethren were expected to use certain prayers on certain days. The prayer, The Small Office of The Holy Spirit is included for you in this Liber. You will benefit greatly from using it. We would suggest that you detach them and put them in a plastic sleeve, or have it laminated, so as to preserve it from wear and tear. We would be glad to have your impressions on this prayer after you have incorporated it in your program, and after using it for a few weeks.

Regarding this prayer, it is our privilege to quote for you an excerpt of a letter he wrote to Bro ::: J. B. Willermoz:

> First, regarding material sustenance: "Concerning what you ought to do and the life you ought to lead to prepare yourself for your spiritual and temporal functions, I will only say that, looking at the temporal side, I forbid you to partake of the blood of any animal, to eat such food as tame pigeon, as also anything of the nature of kidneys, and the fat pertaining to meat. You will diligently fast during the seasons prescribed at each equinox."
> Now, with regard to devotions, "You will not fail each day to recite the Office of the Holy Spirit, neither will you omit to say the Miserere[2], and this you will do in the middle of your room, at night before going to be, your face turned towards the angle which looks towards the rising sun; you will conclude by saying the De Profundis[3], this is to be recited kneeling and bending forward till you head touches the ground. The Miserere is to be said while standing."
> With regard to clothing: "You will be dressed simply in vest and pants with black socks; there must be no metal on you, not even so much as a pin, and you must have no shoes on your feet."

And now, so that you may have something to meditate on (as if you haven't enough) here is a curious passage from one of his letters: "Our Order contains a real science; it is founded on pure and genuine truth. You possess all the emblems of this pure truth. Look, for instance, at your five unequal fingers and five unequal toes on each hand and foot — taking the hand, the middle finger represents the soul; the thumb, good sense; the first finger, good understanding; and the two other fingers, bad sense and a corrupt understanding; these being demoniacal properties. We shall understand easily by this figure that man while here below is always engaged in warfare with the powers of evil."

Recite every Thursday, but if possible every day.

SHORT OFFICE OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

> "Come Creative Spirit, visit the hearts of your followers, fill them with the Grace from Above: these hearts which you have created. You are called the Consoling Spirit, the gift of God Almighty, the source of Living Water, the Divine Fire, the Charity, the invisible Unction of Souls.
> "Come then, with your Seven Precious Gifts, You who are the finger of God, You who are the Supreme Subject of the Father's Promise, You who place His Word on our lips. Light up our Spirits with your Light, embrace our hearts with Your Love and, sanctify at all times our frail flesh.
> "Banish from us the Spirit of Temptation, fill us with unfailing peace, be Yourself our guide so that we may avoid that which would be prejudicial to our salvation. Teach us to understand the Father, teach us to understand the Son and Yourself, Spirit of the Father and of the Son, ever be the object of our Faith.

[2] The "Miserere" referred to is Psalm 51.
[3] The "De Profundis" is Psalm 130.

"That is why Glory in all cycles be to God the Father, to the Son, resurrected from among the Dead, and to the Holy Spirit. So be it. Lord, please send your Spirit and all will be created, and You will renew the face of the Earth.

"Oh God, who reads all hearts and who knows all troubles, Spirit of Light and of Love, pour down upon me, I beseech You, the fullness of Your gifts, for all are necessary to me and I cannot choose.

"Give me the Spirit of Wisdom, which makes me view things according to their true value and not according to the judgment of the world — but according to Yours, Lord. May I repeat with Solomon: Since my early years I have loved Wisdom and I have chosen it to be my companion in my life. I have preferred it above all that is most splendid in this world, and I thought that riches were nothing to the price of such a jewel. All good things have come with It, and in my pains and my sorrows, it has always been lily consolation and my joy. (Proverbs VIII)

"Give me also the Spirit of Intelligence which enlightens me in the knowledge of the Scriptures and of the great eternal truths. And that which attracts the Spirit of Intelligence into the Soul is faith and modesty. Faith which submits in order to understand better, and humility which readily recognizes its ignorance.

"Give me the Spirit of Counsel which lights up the way to Heaven and prevents me from getting lost like the foolish traveller taking an unknown road without a guide.

"Give me the Spirit of Knowledge which teaches me that the knowledge of salvation is the only necessary one, the only one that no human science can do without.

"Give me the Spirit of Strength which does not leave me so weak after the slightest effort, so feeble when I have to obey rather than do as I will, to work when I have not the slightest desire to do so, and to conquer myself when the Holy Rule of God orders me to.

"Give me the Spirit of Piety which gives my heart a filial attraction towards God, and which makes serving Him pleasant and easy.

"Give me the Spirit of Fear, filial fear which, mingled with respect and love, makes me carefully avoid everything which could displease God, our Father.

"Oh, precious Gifts, whose excellence I have learned to know, see how my soul calls You with confidence and opens itself to You with love. Holy Apostles who, on the day of Pentecost did receive the gifts of the Holy Spirit, grant us, with some of the same graces, a fidelity similar to that which was yours so that, believing all that you have received and passed on, practicing the works which were yours, living and dying within this Church which you have founded, we may share with you, O Holy Apostles, the blissful reward of Heaven.

So be it."

This Ritual of reading the Office of the Holy Spirit is mentioned in a letter from Martinez de Pasqually to Willermoz dated August 13th, 1768 and in that of September 2nd of the same year, as a daily ritual. He strongly recommended his Reaux + Croix to, say it every Thursday, but preferably every day. He called it the "Short Office of the Holy Spirit", which is, in fact, the invocation of the "Seven Spirits before the Throne" that is: the Seven Great Archangels, which are also The Angels of the seven Churches of which the Apocalypse (Revelations) speaks.

ESSAY
Martinism and the ICES — Answers to some questions

Dear Associate:

We certainly do appreciate the interest of our members, regarding both the lessons as well as our progress. We gladly respond here to several questions since the information will be useful generally.

There has existed since time immemorial an Initiatic Tradition involving the transmission of an Initiation from person to person. Martinez Pasquales and Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin were two of the Stewards of this Tradition in the 18th Century. These Brothers, as you know, were of French nationality and naturally their writings were in the French language.

Now, in 1890, Papus organized the Tradition in what became known as the Martinist Order for the purpose of preserving and promulgating the Initiatic Chain and the teachings enunciated by Pasquales and Saint- Martin. The Order became very well developed in French-speaking countries but, because of the "language barrier" there was not a parallel growth in English-speaking lands.

In the early 1980's, a Barbarian Brother, in circumstances which will not be related at this time, was drawn to the Order and this resulted in his journeying to England where he was Initiated into the Ordre Martiniste et Synarchique. (These details have already been outlined in Liber 2.) Busying himself with establishing the Order, our eminent Brother soon realized the necessity of having a "voice' in English to herald the Martinist message. just as there is a "voice" serving the French-speaking world, this being: L'Initition, the organ of the French Ordre Martiniste, a "revue fondée en 1888 par Papus"

The first step came with the publication of the book Five Christian Principals written in English by a French Brother. This was followed by the Martinist Digest, of which five issues were printed.

The appearance of these publications created an immediate interest in matters Martinist and letters began to come in from all over the world. We have never ceased to marvel at this response. But the Digest posed a problem! It was too expensive to print in small quantities, too expensive to mail by air, and difficult to market effectively, situated as we are, thousands of miles away from the major book distributors! It became clear, therefore, that a better way had to be found to bear the Light to English-speaking aspirants. To get to the point: that "better way" became the International College of Esoteric Studies!

The College has proved superior in every way. We are able to chart a graded system of instruction. something we could not achieve in a periodical and in addition, we are able to have direct and personal contact with you who are interested in the genuine Tradition. This, for us, is the greatest honor and privilege of all.

Now it is important that we stress, and that you understand that the I.C.E.S. is not the Martinist Order! Our College is concerned with making available information on the Martinist Order and Martinism, and the teachings of the Traditional Esoteric Arcana.

The Martinist Order, on the other hand, through the works of its various Lodges, confers The Initiation from person to person, and conducts the beautiful and inspiring rites and ceremonies which are the particular inheritance of the Order, and holds conventicles at which are presented lectures, theses and discourses similar to the ones which are to be found in our curriculum.

Brethren affiliated with our College, who would like to enter a Lodge, may write to us and we will give you, if we have it, the address of a Martinist Lodge in your area to which you may apply. If there is no Lodge m your area, you may be interested at a later date in considering the formation of a Circle, which is the forerunner of a Lodge. This is a matter that can be discussed individually later on with the Order. In the meantime it would be very desirable to affiliate with the Order if a Lodge is operating in your area.

Regarding the Martinist Digest, these will not be reprinted but some of the material be incorporated in the Libers. The book Five Christian Principals will be maintained as it is something of a classic. The information in this book, generally speaking, will not be duplicated in the Libers, so it would be to your decided advantage to obtain a copy of this book, since there is very important information there.

Let us address one more question: Yes, we certainly do appreciate the help of members in drawing the attention of our College to others who would be interested in our Work. In fact, we are most grateful for your assistance. We would like to dwell on this for a little while. As we have already indicated, we are a non-profit organization and we do not have a large operating account. We are unable to place frequent and large advertisements in the press! We deeply appreciate the efforts that many of you are making to bring the attention of the College to friends and interested people. We would greatly appreciate if you could inform your friends in other cities, countries and islands because in this way the Light will spread more widely. It is only by flooding the world with Light that the shadows can be dissipated. Please make a note of your key number which is on page one. If you will write your key number on the back of the registration forms you distribute, we will try to send you a token of our appreciation. We know many of you will say you are happy to help and seek no reward, however we feel it is the least we can do to show our appreciation. We are enclosing a registration form, if you can use more, please let us know and we will gladly send them. On the other hand it is quite O.K. to photocopy the form and use the photocopy.

Sincerely yours in the Work,

Principal

Here are a few questions to allow you to test your comprehension of the material you have encountered so far:

1. Of what use are symbols'?

2. What is the significance of the ideas expressed by the Number Six?

3. What are the implications of Mankind's being endowed with the attribute of Free Will?

4. Give your opinion on the truth or untruth of the doctrine of Reincarnation and Karma. In answering, state why you hold the views you do.

IMPORTANT BOOKS

MAN: HIS TRUE NATURE AND MINISTRY by Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin. This is the only one of Saint-Martin's books which have, to date, (1986) been translated into English. Mr. E. B. Penny, who was Saint-Martin's biographer and who translated this work in 1864, says this book was probably the last, "as it was the most important", of Saint-Martin's works. It was published in Paris, in 1802 and Saint-Martin died the following year. We hardly think it necessary to add anything more!

FIVE CHRISTIAN PRINCIPALS by Rene Cossey. This book contains important information on Martinez Pasquales; Saint-Martin; the Order of Elus-Cohen; the Martinist Order, as well as Thomas A Kempis; Jacob Boehme and Emanuel Swedenborg. As mentioned earlier, the information in this book, generally speaking, will not be duplicated in the Libers.

ESSAY
A Sense of Far Horizons

I would like to deal today with a most amazing Bible story that has tremendous import for all of us. It begins in the twelfth chapter of Genesis. Abram, later known as Abraham, was seventy-five years of age and the Lord spoke to him and said: "Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred and from thy father's house, unto the land that I will show thee, and I will make of thee a great nation." Now, we think of a person as pretty old at seventy-five, and here Abram was just beginning his work.

The key phrase here is, "Get thee out of thy country. "If we aspire to go to "a new land," which means to attain a higher experience of life, a higher level of understanding, we must be willing to leave the old, to relinquish that which is past. As the story unfolds, Abram and his wife and Lot, his brother's son, took all their possessions and journeyed into the land of Canaan, and there they became rich. But the herdsmen of Lot and Abram quarreled among themselves, and they had so many herds that the land wasn't able to support them. Abram was of a pretty generous nature, so he gave Lot his choice of land. Of course, Lot selected the fertile section, the plains around Sodom and Gomorrah. To Abram was left the hilly country near Hebron.

One day, Abram was feeling pretty low. He was sitting in his tent with the flap down; he was shrouded in gloom, probably saying to himself: "Oh me, my life has been a great failure. I sought to found a new nation, and here I am on a rocky hill and old age is upon me. My dream is gone and woe is me." Then, somehow, the voice of God invaded the gloom and bade the old man come outside. And God said: "Lift up now thine eyes and look from the place where thou art, northward and southward and eastward and westward; for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it and to thy seed forever." And suddenly Abram's manhood returned. He saw the stars; he saw that the world was bigger than the patch of ground on which his tent was pitched. He got a sense of far horizons. He soul revived. Turning his back on the grave, the old man went away and did found a new nation. And this is a vital message for all of us today". Lift up now thine eyes and look from the place from where thou art."

Sometimes we talk about the world closing in on us. What actually happens is that we are so obsessed with problems close at hand that we lose our perspective; we shut out the world; we simply stop seeing rightly. H. C. Phillips tells of visiting the shop of a native cobbler in the West Indies. It was a very small room, dingy and dirty. He asked the cobbler, "How do you stand this?" In response, the man pointed to an open window overlooking the beauty and the lure of the Caribbean, and he said, "That is why I stand it." What did he mean? Well, he meant that from his immediate situation there was an opening, a window that brought release for his spirit. Here was the little room, yonder was the vast ocean; here were impinging walls that confined, there were extending horizons that beckoned; here were immediate tasks, yonder was a sense of the ultimate, a sense of far horizons.

The word "horizon" means the boundary or limit of vision, which includes the limit of mental perception. So, our horizon is the limit of our world. When we live too preoccupied with little things, we fail to see life in true perspective. Our world is limited and circumscribed. As Margaret B. Runbeck once said, "Maybe we don't look from high enough out." We need a perspective; we need to get ourselves and our world and our work in right relation to life and to God. In a very real sense, this is what we do in inner prayer or meditation. We climb to the heights of spiritual consciousness. We get a larger perspective, a Cosmic vision.

Charles Fillmore once said: "Man can never discern more than a segment of the circle in which he moves. Although his powers and capacities are susceptible to infinite expansion, he discovers a faculty in himself and cultivates it until it opens out into a universe of God-related faculties. The further he goes into Mind, the wider its horizons, until he is forced to acknowledge that he is not the personal limited thing he appears but the focus of an infinite idea." In other words, it is not man's geographical or material horizons that have held him in bondage through the centuries, but the limited horizons of his mind. Man has seen himself as being born in sin, shaped in iniquity. He has thought of trouble and pain as inevitable. He has looked out to a limited horizon and has beheld a picture of evil and limitation and frustration, old age and the certainty of death.

So, the great message of Truth which Jesus brought changed all this. He said, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." You shall see with a wider viewpoint. You shall see more broadly. You shall see with a loftier insight. You shall see from the Cosmic perspective of Truth.

A horizon is not a fixed barrier. This is obvious to the traveler who has pushed back the distant horizon on his journey. But in practical experience, in meeting life's problems, our greatest challenge is that we tend to believe that horizons are walls, that they are fixed. For instance, here are a few of the typical problems that may be brought to our attention every day. One woman says, "My expenses are mounting beyond my income. Next month I have some very large bills to meet and there's just no way that I can meet them!" And a man says, "I have just been let out of my job and I can't find another. There doesn't seem to be any work for me."

In each of these cases, the person concerned speaks as if he believes the present situation is static, solid, unalterable; as if it represents all the substance that has been formed; as if the land that he can see between him and the horizon is all the land there is. Does this person believe that at some moment in the near future he will run out of supply, out of position in life with work to do, out of love, out of harmony? Let's take another look at the problems stated above. The woman does not actually believe that she would be without, does she? She knows that she will have something to eat, some clothes to wear, some kind of shelter. She doesn't have next week's supply now; she can't see it and feel it physically. But within her she knows that she will have it, and therefore she will get it just to the extent that she believes. And the man knows that he is not going to sit idle. He knows that he will be doing something, whether working at other jobs for which he will be paid little, or just puttering around the house. But he knows hell be doing something.

The point is, how can these people believe in little when none of it is visible yet? And, if they can believe in this much not yet visible, then why can't they believe in more? The more is no less visible than the little. We do get what we believe in, whether it is abundance or lack, love or inharmony, success or failure. Absolutely nothing else enters into this but what we believe.

We need to extend our horizons, to add to our faith with the positive knowledge that there is more good for us, that there is more good within us. And how do we do this? Long ago, the instruction was given. Isaiah put it this way: "A highway shall be there and a way, and it shall be called a way of holiness." Jesus was a pioneer in the way of holiness. It is the way of wholeness, the way of Truth, the way of the Cosmic perspective, the way of abundant living. Jesus went on ahead so that we could follow the path, showing us how we, too, can deal with certain fundamental spiritual laws. He said, "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."

Know the truth about yourself. Know that you are really a spiritual being, that there is an Infinite process, an Infinite potential of perfectibility within you. Know that you can do more, that you can go beyond what you have known. Knowing this immediately puts you beyond the personal horizon of self. You know that no horizon can limit you. You know that nothing can stop the unfoldment of your good, except your lack of faith, your lack of vision, your lack of perspective.

So, resolve to constantly lift your eyes and look from the place where you are, to expand your vision and to see reality in spite of appearances. As far as you can envision, as far as you can sense and imagine for yourself, if you can believe it as being true, this is that which God has given you. This is what life is giving you. So, look from where you are, and cultivate a sense of far horizons.

ESSAY
The Art of Inner Listening

In the conclusion of the twenty-sixth chapter of Job, there is found this passage: "And all this is the mere fringe of His force, the faintest whisper we hear of Him. Who knows, then, the full thunder of His power?" We also remember that Jesus said, "Having eyes, ye see not; and having ears, ye hear not."

This is the dilemma of man, for as Walter Pater proclaimed, "All life is a kind of listening." The darkness, fear, lack, and limitation we experience is evidence of our failure to be responsive to the limitlessness, abundance, and affluence of God all around us and within us.

We think of the ear when we speak of listening, but actually we listen with our mind. The very word "listen" connotes an inward response to outward stimuli, a sensitivity to vibration. And vibration is everywhere. Man can, and ultimately must, cultivate the ability to hear and to heed the message of the Infinite creative process; he must develop a sensitivity to good vibration.

The mental picture we form from the perceptions that come to us depends on our individual mental makeup. We are like radio receiving stations; with thousands of signals reaching us constantly, we chose which one to tune in. One may appreciate the sound of raindrops, or he can dread their sound. One may listen to the message of the great silent stars of the Universe with awe at their mystical grandeur, or he can simply be afraid of the dark. One may listen to joy or sorrow, success or failure, optimism or fear.

Every individual is equipped to hear from birth, but the faculty of hearing rightly and listening selectively must be cultivated. The radio, the television, and the newspapers all spread a wide range of information. What are you listening to? Your associations through the day express many and various opinions on many subjects. To what do you respond? What is the character of your response? To what are you sympathetic? To what are you most sensitive?

While hearing itself falls within the realm of the senses, true listening is actually extrasensory in nature. It is a feeling, a consciousness. A Beethoven symphony is being played, but by no means does every listener get the message. A priceless painting is viewed by many, but only a few truly appreciate its aesthetics. True listening is perception of ideas, appropriation of Truth, which commands concentration discrimination, humility, and flexibility. It requires open-mindedness, minimizing the prejudices we all have, evaluating objectively, and listening to what is being said rather than who is saying it.

Bennett Cerf once complained that listening is a lost art, and that nobody listens anymore. I wouldn't go that far, but I believe that never in history has there existed a greater need than today for creative listening. Selectivity is needed to cull the positive from the negative in the news and in advertising. This is vital for our mental health and for the peace and stability of the world.

You may have seen two people "talking," where one gets the head start and the other can't wait until the first one stops for a breath, so he can tell his side. When a patient's malady was diagnosed as a mild case of laryngitis, he insisted that the doctor give him something for it, saying, "But I have some important conversations coming up. What shall I do?" The doctor replied, "You can listen."

A wonderful poem by Edward Hersey Richards states:

> "A wise old owl sat on an oak,
> The more he saw the less he spoke;
> The less he spoke the more he heard;
> Why aren't we like that wise old bird?"

When we are attuned to the dimension of Truth, and when we take the time to listen with patience, it is amazing how many wonderful ideas will come to us from the ordinary conversation of those around us. But we must be really listening with humility and with love. Conversation with any person should commence with tuning in on the Divine level in yourself and in the other person. The Oriental expression "Namaskar" means, "I salute the Divinity in you." The Christian might say, "I behold the Christ in you." In this way, you can express from the depth within you, knowing that there is that in you which is harmonious with that in the other person. In this way, you will understand and be understood, no matter if what the other is saying happens to be poorly stated or is intended to be mean. Your creative listening will be a blessing to him, influencing him to express on a higher level. When on that level, you tend to draw out of him thoughts he will be proud of.

The statement, "I hear and heed the voice of God," means that one is responsive to the depth-level of Truth. It is good to start every day by hearing the good manifesting in all things and in all persons; by finding God's voice in all persons, conditions, and circumstances, whether they are sordid or uplifting, good or bad. It is my sincere conviction that guidance is ever within us and that, as Emerson says, "By lowly listening, we will hear the right word." The indecisive person who is always running about seeking advice is not a good listener.

A new school of psychiatric thought holds that men and women are born with a spiritual urge as strong as the urges for nourishment and sex. The forerunner of this approach is Dr. Viktor Frankl, a professor of neurology and psychiatry at The University of Vienna. He believes that while most have conquered bashfulness about their emotional drives, they remain deeply troubled by the repression of their inborn religious feelings. Dr. Frankl calls this "God-shyness," and advises people to achieve emotional health by overcoming the notion that religion and belief in God are not really needs and that it is unsophisticated to search for spiritual development.

Have you ever felt God-shy? Is this because you have used prayer as a device in which you talk and God listens? Prayer must, you see, be listening. It must be a receptivity to the deep creative forces within us. We must recognize that God blesses us through many channels and that our good, our inspiration may come through reading, or through other people, or just out of the silence, if we listen! Psychologically, it is assumed that the person who rarely listens, and is forever forcing his opinions on others, is a person who feels insecure and insufficient. If we overcome our God-shyness, we discover that God is forever speaking to us. We realize that the same Mind that is within the greatest of men is within us.

Cultivate your ability to listen and, in quiet meditation, know that you are being charged with the voice of power and wisdom. Then pray without ceasing to carry this listening attitude into your actual relationships with others. In this way, you will find wonderful things coming to you from perhaps unexpected sources. When becoming an artful listener, when practicing the presence of God, you will find guidance everywhere. You may not have dramatic experiences such as did Moses when God spoke to him through the burning bush, yet through cultivation of the art of listening, you will hear a small voice in every need. Tell yourself over and over, "I hear and heed the voice of God." At the beginning of the day, resolve to listen to inspiration, even from unpleasant things and discordant notes. Remember that you are one with God and that "the Father knoweth what things you have need of even before you ask Him." God knows and God is speaking. Are you listening?

Here's a technique for times when guidance is needed. Close your eyes, be still, and say softly, with assurance, "Father, I am listening." You will find marvelous guidance manifested in you; you will feel a sense of conviction, a sense of assurance and a sense of spontaneity. And you will be led. Jesus said: "Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come to him and will sup with him and he with me."

Your own guidance may come directly or it may come indirectly, perhaps in a conversation or through the inspiration of a piece of great music. It may even come in a dream. But it will come when you develop the art of listening.

Qabalism

LIBER OVERVIEW

This Liber we begin our study of the ancient teaching of Qabalism, which forms the basis of the entire Western Esoteric Tradition. Three Lectures, on the Sepher Ietzerah, Initiation, and the Tree of Life, will introduce you to this very important subject. In addition to the Lectures, you will find helpful "Notes to the Student" which will aid your understanding. Then follow two essays, which I think you will find of interest. The Liber closes with an Optional section on Mystic Christianity, with much material that is not available elsewhere in so compact a form.

LECTURE
Sepher Ietzerah

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

The Qabala is a body of esoteric teaching which has been passed down from ancient times mainly from "mouth to ear." It was the heart of the esoteric knowledge known to early Judaism and practiced by its Rabbis. Obeying the ancient injunction of not "casting pearls before swine" it remained for many centuries an oral tradition, for if certain Qabalistic knowledge should fall into unprepared hands, great harm can be done, especially to the person who attempts to misuse it. For this reason, the real secret arcana remains an oral tradition to this day.

The Qabala is the foundation stone of the Western Esoteric Tradition, just as the *Yoga Sutras, the Upanishads, the *Bhagavad Gita, the Stanzas of Dyzan and other holy works are the foundations of the Eastern Tradition. The Qabala, in its entirety, is the great body of philosophy and knowledge which is interwoven into the religious texts of the Jews. This includes the Old Testament, especially the Pentateuch (the first five books of the O.T.) the vast complex of astrological, alchemical and occult symbology, the teachings of the Rose + Croix, the Masonic myths and the Tarot.

According to tradition, the Qabala is the revelation of God received by man in the earliest times through the mediation of the great Archangel nearest to God: Metatron. Of the genuine Qabalistic texts, the Sepher Ietzirah, or Book of Formation, is considered to be the oldest treatise on Qabalistic philosophy. The spelling of "Ietzerah" may vary in English and one finds it being spelled with a "Y", a "J" or an "I". Martinists adopt the spelling of Ietzerah with an "I".

There is no single work, or single authority on the Qabala; it is such a vast subject it would take a person several lifetimes to unravel all its mysteries.

The tradition remained more or less a secret one, owing firstly to persecution by the Christian Church, and later to the derision and disinterest of materialistic science and thought. Because the Secret Tradition was forced to go underground, the West compares rather badly with the East when it comes to the documentation of its sacred wisdom. From about the 12th century some of it was written down and made available through the works of such translators as Picus de Mirandola, Knorr von Rosenrath, Cornelius Agrippa and others. But comparatively, very little was written, and what there was stood a good chance of being destroyed. We see the result of this today in that many, if not most of the students of mysticism in the West derive their learning and inspiration from Eastern sources, which were brought to the attention of the West largely through the efforts of Helena Petrovna Blavatsky. Valuable as the Eastern line of tradition is, students in the West usually feel more at home when given the opportunity to study their own native tradition - the Qabala.

The Hebrews learned the Qabalistic teachings when they were held captive in Egypt. The Chaldeans and Babylonians were aware of it and studied it. The Hebrews took the knowledge and incorporated it into Judaism, although the inner teachings were never given out to the flock.

It was the Qabalists who wrote the various texts which now comprise the various "books" of the Bible. Rabbi Jesus was a Qabalistic Initiate and Master. It is really strange that Christian exegesis has never sought the keys of the scriptures in the Qabala. The closing lines of the Lord's Prayer: "For Thine is the Kingdom, the Power and the Glory" is pure Qabalism, referring to certain Sephiroth on the Tree of Life. The first five verses of the Gospel of St. John are another example of Qabalistic doctrine.

Christianity had its esotericism in the Gnosis, which owed much to Greek and Egyptian thought. The exoteric, or outer state-organized section of the Christian Church persecuted and stamped out the esoteric, or inner Section, destroying every trace of its literature upon which it could lay its hands, in an attempt to eradicate every memory of a gnosis from human history. It is recorded that the baths and bake houses of Alexandria, Egypt, were fired for six months with the manuscripts of the Great Library which was located there. The loss of this library of esoteric writings has been described as the single most tragic loss and the greatest disaster ever to occur within recorded history. As an example of the value of this library if it existed today, it is said there is not enough money in the entire world, if it was all collected, that could purchase this library.

Let us now return to the Sepher Ietzirah. The Sepher Ietzirah presents the process whereby God created all that exists by means of the Hebrew letters. It explains the sacred symbolism of the Hebrew alphabet. Hebrew is the sacred language of Martinism because the Hebrew letters have a versatility of use that is not present in our modern alphabet. Rather than make this lecture too technical I will furnish you with some notes for your individual study. Please keep these notes carefully, study them, and do some additional research of your own.

The Sepher Ietzirah also explains the correspondences of the Hebrew letters to the varied forces that brought Man, Nature and the cycle of Time into existence. It is a small book comprising only six chapters and is recommended reading for Martinists and indeed for all students of the esoteric. I strongly urge each of you to obtain a copy of this inexpensive book and study it. You will find it to be a true friend on your journey through life.

According to the Sepher Ietzirah, God created the World in 32 mysterious paths of wisdom, symbolized by 10 Numbers and the 22 letters of the Hebrew alphabet. First there were the three Mothers: Aleph, Mem and Shin which represented the three primordial elements Air, Water and Fire. Creation then proceeded by the formation of seven forces endowed with a dual character and which produced the planets in the Universe and the seven major antitheses of life in man. Because of their duality these phases of creation are symbolized by seven letters which have two pronunciations: one hard and one soft. For this reason they are known as double letters. A further stage of creation is symbolized by the 12 single letters.

The seven double letters are: Beth, Gimel, Daleth, Kaph, Peh, Resh and Tau.

The oppositions are: Life/Death; Peace/War Wisdom/Foolishness; Wealth/Poverty; Beauty/Ugliness; Fertility/Sterility; Dominion/Dependence.

The work at our last conventicle introduced us to the cyclic pattern of nature and immediately made us consider the workings of reincarnation and karma, because these laws are responsible for the cyclic recurrence of man upon earth.

I wonder if you have thought about this phenomenon and how it fits in with our individual efforts toward reintegration?

In discussing the Martinist Order's teachings regarding eschatology (the doctrine of final things, as death, judgement, etc.) we refer to a statement made by our V::: M::: Martinez Pasquales, who said: "In the end all will come back to the beginning." This statement means that, by the process of reintegration, man will in the end achieve his long-lost unity with Omneity.

But the process of reintegration involves in principle these two fundamental doctrines of mysticism: Reincarnation & Karma. However obscure and unfamiliar these terms may seem, and however vaguely they may have been presented to the profane or to students of unauthenticated schools of mysticism, the Martinist teaching is straightforward and simple. A child in school is not able to evaluate his different studies properly, nor is he ordinarily aware of their purpose or where they are leading him. He judges them as hard or easy, interesting or boring and deals with them as his judgements dictate under the demands of the teacher. Oftentimes, he underestimates the worth of one study because he finds it easy and overvalues another because he finds it more difficult. He is willing to put forth extra effort at times in order to avoid having to repeat his work, should he fail to meet the requirements. The student is, moreover, to some degree, aware of the operation of justice, for he realizes that he need only accomplish the, lesson set for the day and that he will not be expected to know that which he has not had the opportunity to learn. It will also become evident after a time, that complete knowledge of any subject can neither be presented, nor assimilated in one day, and for that reason, the student each day is assigned only so much, and provided with an ample period of rest in order that each new day may find him sufficiently rested to grasp that day's new lesson.

In much the same way, man learns the lessons of life. Since complete knowledge of life, however, can never be gained in the short span of the usual human life, it is reasonable to believe that the justice of the Creator equals that of man and so does not pass final judgement on man on the basis of his incomplete experience, but allows him as many opportunities as are necessary to bring complete knowledge.

Such, in the simplest terms, is the teaching of reincarnation as Ma.rtinism expounds it. Since the time of our first emanation from the bosom of Omneity as individual cells, we have had numerous earthly experiences in different physical bodies as different personalities. Throughout these experiences, our Inner Self has been the same, and through the cycle of earthly existences the separate lessons and experiences of each lifetime have accumulated as added wisdom.

The final goal of this process is the perfection of Selfhood, to the point where earthly experience is no longer required because study and growth, as well as consistent efforts at reintegration has brought that person again to union with Omneity. We become "a pillar in the Temple of God and we go out no more." (Rev. 3:12). (For those brethren interested in esoteric Christianity, the parable of the Prodigal Son, who left his Father's home and journeyed forth to experience life, and then returned home, is the story of our Fall and Reintegration)

Logically and necessarily joined with the doctrine of reincarnation is the companion Law of Karma, or compensation. Karma is simply the carrying over of the basic physical laws of Cause & Effect into the personal, moral and spiritual realm. Simply put, it means that good thoughts and actions result in positive, similar consequences, whereas evil actions and thoughts will ultimately bring sorrow and suffering upon those who express them, plus the necessity for compensation. Karma is universal, divine justice in eternal operation. That which man sows, he will eventually reap; if not in this life, then in a succeeding one. There is no escaping the EFFECTS of the CAUSES we put into motion.

Reincarnation and Karma are immense topics, brethren, and their numerous subtleties and implications will be more fully explored at a later date, especially after you have attained the status of a fully qualified S:::I:::. In the meantime, reflect upon the substance of the laws as given — and note their inherent reasonableness — as well as their deep significance.

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION

Why did Omneity emanate the Creation? (Look for your answer in Liber 2, page 2)

What is the Qabala; is it a book?

Where did the Qabala come from?

Do we have a new "Inner Self" with each incarnation?

What is our "Inner Self?"

In the Christian New Testament, Luke 16:19-31, it is related that a certain rich man made wealth an occasion for personal indulgence. He lived luxuriously, dressed extravagantly, and denied himself nothing. Wealth was to him merely the means for personal gratification.

A beggar named Lazarus was known by this man to be in dire need. He was not only poor and hungry, but he was also diseased and unable to care for himself. Lazarus begged for food and was given crumbs from the rich man's table. He pleaded that something be done to rid him of his affliction but the dogs did more for him by licking his sores than the rich man did.

In time, the story tells us, both Lazarus and the rich man died. Lazarus, the beggar, was accorded treatment vastly different from his earthly experience, and the rich man was confined to a place of torment. Realizing their reversed positions, the rich man called for Lazarus to be sent to ease his torment; but he was told that "thou in thy lifetime received thy good things and likewise Lazarus evil things, but now he is comforted and thou art tormented."

The lesson intended is not that man's position later will be reversed, but rather that JUSTICE RULES and each must experience for himself the effects of whatever cause he initiates.

The rich man and Lazarus are also symbols of the pair of opposites, Wealth & Poverty, one pair of the seven major oppositions we encounter in life. Wealth is certainly not wicked, but it may lead to wickedness when it is made the means of selfish indulgence and allowed to blind the vision of the individual possessing it, to the responsibilities it imposes. Poverty, as depicted by the state of Lazarus, is unwholesome and undesirable, but it may serve to teach a valuable lesson if there is willingness to accept it.

As Plato taught: "Wealth is the parent of luxury and indolence; poverty of meanness and viciousness; and both of discontent." Neither is to be sought for. Both are to be avoided. If one has wealth he must rule it carefully and meet the obligations which fall to him as the possessor of it. If he is in poverty, he must strive to bear it with good grace and make every effort to lift himself out of it.

It must be seen too, that Wealth & Poverty are not of material things only. There can be spiritual wealth and spiritual poverty. And wealth of knowledge or poverty of ignorance. Whatever their nature both impose responsibilities and both teach lessons. As Men of Desire, it is our necessity to recognize these opposites and bring them into balance. If we have wealth, whether it consists of money, ideas or time, we must use it for the good of the collectivity. We must relieve distress, mental and physical. We must devote our time and our ideas to the purpose of humanity's upliftment.

On the other hand, if poverty is our experience, we must seek for the lesson to be found in it. We must dignify it by refusing to make of it the occasion for hatred, resentment, or bitterness. We must put as many limits on it as we can, never believing that poverty of material things makes necessary poverty of ideas and spiritual values as well.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

LECTURE
Initiation

Brothers & Sisters:

It has been the obligation of the true mystic Order to preserve and transmit fundamental truth. This is accomplished through Initiation and the use of symbols.

Initiation demonstrates certain universal laws, and symbols have been given to explain these laws. It is the universal and eternal nature of its elements that gives to Martinism its significance. Its symbols, being fundamental and truly mystic, contain almost endless application. The symbol of the Hierarchy of Light with which we became acquainted, well illustrates the triadic nature of all things, even the three great classifications or divisions of men. As there are three gradations of light; so are there three gradations of men. First, there is the commonality which dwells in the shadows: blind, ignorant, living largely for the satisfaction and gratification of the appetites. It is but vaguely aware that life has a purpose or that Light such as has been preserved throughout the ages may be had. It makes little or no effort to reach a higher level of living or acting than that which seems natural and is accomplished with the least effort. Its questions center always in the lowest realms of thought and its answers represent the greatest distortion of truth. In the Hierarchy of Light, the light of the majority of men is only darkness.

Above this gross level of society are those whose aspirations have been awakened, whose natures have been somewhat disciplined and whose desires have become spiritualized. They are no longer content with the shadows, for the presence of Light stirs a faint response in their minds and hearts.

They struggle to open themselves more fully to the Light, although, not knowing its true effulgence, they often fail to recognize its messengers. These dwellers in the penumbra we call Men of Desire; symbolically the initiate may be said to have achieved that classification at the end of the Associate Degree. In the Hierarchy of Light, the Men of Desire are represented by the dissipation of darkness to the degree of penumbra.

At the apex of the pyramid of men stand those truly advanced and perfected beings who are the true leaders and teachers of whose company we aspire to become a part. They are the Unknown Superior Ones who mark out our path in Martinism and shed their Light and their Love over our Conventicles.

Their number is small compared with those in the other two grades; yet by the rite of the mystic cordelier, all Men of Desire are linked to them. In the Hierarchy of Light, they are represented by pure white.

Thus we may trace the plan of man's spiritual evolution from gross ignorance to growing enlightenment, to a state of wisdom and attainment.

Our luminaries have taught us that truth is one even when coming from sources seemingly opposed and at variance with each other; so, in Martinism, we seek to discover this essential oneness, no matter where it is found, or what the channel through which it comes. In bridging the gap between the viewpoints of science and religion, we establish a way acceptable and agreeable to both.

To do this so as to lead most surely to the right understanding of fundamentals, while still allowing the utmost freedom in individual interpretation, our teachers have chosen to follow the traditional pattern of mystical instruction.

Such was the method used by Moses. He wrote of the beginning in words carefully chosen and capable of several levels of interpretation. This allowed men to be comforted and reassured... even when not wholly comprehending. The Light which veiled Moses' instruction was such that it could not be penetrated by the commonality of men; yet the Men of Desire walked surely by it and those of the highest grade were one with it.

We shall find our best approach to fundamental truth to be through a consideration of Moses' teachings. The mysteries of the early Hebrews (the Qabala) were closely guarded by the Sons of the Doctrine and many of their secrets were derived from Egypt and, later on, from Babylonia. We are told in Scripture that Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians (Acts 7:22) and that in the first five books of the Pentateuch he has esoterically laid down the principles of the Secret Doctrine. He initiated 70 elders into the mysteries (as recorded Numbers 11:24), which they in turn transmitted from "mouth to ear". Moses kept the Secret Law secretly and transmitted it to the elect. He also compiled the public, or exoteric law, for the multitudes or commonality. In our expositions, then, we shall have the help of those trained in Moses' school, and we can begin our work of reconciliation in confidence by teaming the true nature of creation and the birthright of every human being.

Once we know our birthright, we can the more easily determine the nature of our rightful place in the divine plan and the more intelligently act to make i_1. securely ours.

In this regard, our V::: M::: Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin has written: "At the first glance which Man directs upon himself, he will perceive without difficulty that there must be a science or an evident law for his own nature since there is one for all beings, though it is not universal in all, and since even in the midst of our weakness, our ignorance, and humiliation we are employed only in the search after truth and light. Albeit, therefore, that the efforts which man makes daily to attain the end of his researches are rarely successful, it must not be considered on this account that the end is imaginary. It is only that man is deceived as to the road which leads thereto and is hence in the greatest of privations since he does not even know the way in which he should walk. The overwhelming misfortune of man is not that he is ignorant of the existence of truth but that he misconstrues its nature. What errors and what sufferings would have been spared us if, far from seeking truth in the phenomena of material nature, we had resolved to descend into ourselves and had sought to explain material things by man, and not man by material things; if, fortified by courage and patience, we had preserved in the calm of our imagination the discovery of this light, which all of us desire with so much ardour."

Of the truth of the statement: "the overwhelming misfortune of man is not that he is ignorant of the existence of truth but that he misconstrues its nature," we have daily evidence. It is this fact which makes the corrective supplied by mystical teaching so valuable. Because man has become enslaved by his environment and no longer gives heed to his birthright, it is all the more necessary for mystic instruction to reawaken him.

Of the exact nature of God, mysticism forbears to speak, for the limited senses of man can never compass the Infinite, and to attempt it would but further confuse. It is better to consider the character of the Infinite as it manifests itself in creation and thereby learn by indirection that which in time will unfold into fuller comprehension.

Without attempting definition, Moses wrote simply: "In the beginning, God created the heaven and the earth." (Genesis 1:1)

The account then sets forth in detail the unfolding aspects of the Creator's nature, showing each stage of creation devoted to a particular kind of activity. In all, six stages, or "days", are recorded, with a final day or period in which Moses tells us God rested or returned to Himself.

The important ideas for us in this account are not necessarily the most obvious. Certainly, they are not those which have intrigued the minds of theologians.

First, it should be noted that creation was a continuing process, not accomplished instantaneously but occupying several stages called "days". In Moses' school, the descriptive word emanation was understood by the word day and this conveyed the thought of unfoldment. Scientifically, this might be compared to the process of condensation whereby a gas condenses to a liquid and a liquid to a solid. From the invisibility of utter infinity, visible things became manifest.

Out of the darkness of the void, the Invisible, Unmanifest and Unknowable Godhead moved upon the face of the waters: "And God said, Let there be light." (Genesis 1:3)

Thus, Light was the first creation, or emanation, of Omneity and became the first "day". (Note however that this Light is not what we know commonly as "daylight". Daylight is an emanation of the sun, and the sun and other luminaries were not emanated until later.) The heaven, or the firmament, was the second; the earth and its flora were the third, the luminaries the fourth; the fish of the sea and the fowl of the air the fifth; and cattle, living creatures and man the sixth. After six such active stages or days of emanation, there followed a seventh in which God returned to that impenetrability beyond man's comprehension from which He had first manifested Himself.

Into this realm of impenetrability, man could enter only in theory, and that in negative fashion. He expressed this as a trinity made up of the Not Limited, the Light of the Not Limited, and the Not Being Itself.

This trinity, together with the seven days of creation, produced by addition the number ten, referred to in earliest records of Moses' school as the decade. In fact, the Sepher Ietzirah uses this term in referring to creation's manifestation. There we read: "The decade of existence out of nothing has its end linked to its beginning and its beginning linked to its end, just as the flame is wedded to the live coal; because the Lord is one and there is not a second one, and before one what wilt thou count?"

Again, in that section of the Talmud called the Aggada, it is written: "The world was created on ten things: on wisdom, on understanding, and on knowledge, on strength, on reproof, and on courage, on justice and righteousness, on kindness and mercy."

As we shall later learn, this decade and the 22 letters of the Hebrew alphabet are rich in symbolic meaning and altogether essential to the complete esoteric understanding of what Moses wrote in the Book of Genesis.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

Notes for Students

1. The Martinist Order transmits its teachings by the intellectual method of analogy, in order to bring to comprehension the abstract principles of God, of Man and of Nature.

2. Every idea has form and motive, letter and spirit, an exoteric or outer and an esoteric or inner meaning.

3. Modern languages have evolved so far from their original conception, that they have become nothing but the vehicle of thoughts to which they are no longer directly related. The primitive language of man was that of symbols. These were the outer manifestations of the Angelic tongue of his First Estate. From these symbols were evolved languages in which the letters and words preserved the original symbolic form of the ideas they expressed. These ancient languages have become the sacred languages of the great religions.

4. Ancient Hebrew is the sacred language of Martinism. Each Hebrew letter had five different values:

(1) A phonetic value.
(2) A numerical value.
(3) A positive ideogramatic value when standing on its own. (An ideogram is a figure which suggests the meaning picture of hieroglyphic.
(4) A relative or comparative value when accompanied by other letters.
(5) An effective talismatic value combining the powers of thought, word and action.

5. Aleph, , is formed by 2 Yods (the 10th letter of the Hebrew alphabet) placed on either side of a Vau (the 6th letter). We thus have one letter formed out of 3 letters. This is symbolical of one Light arising out of 3 different luminaries and stands for the principle of UNITY arising from diversity. Aleph thus represents the three luminaries.

6. The Numerical Value of Aleph is ONE, it is the first letter of the Hebrew alphabet. However: being formed of 2 Yods and 1 Vau, it also has a value of 26. This figure is obtained by adding the value of the 2 Yods (10 + 10) to that of Vau (6). From our principles of Theosophic reduction, we remember 26 = 8. It can therefore be said that ALEPH has three numerical values: 1, 26 and 8.

Let us examine the meaning of each of these values:

26 is the value of the Divine Incommunicable Name: Yod-He-Vau-He. (10 + 5 + 6 + 5 = 26).

Eight, formed of 2 superimposed spheres (Heaven & Earth) is the symbol of the all-pervading Mind of God.

We can see therefore that the 3 numerical values of ALEPH refer to three aspects of the Divine: (a) Its absolute identity, (b) Its latent creative power expressed by the Word, (c) The Universality of God's presence in Whose Mind is all that exists.

7. A study of the Hebrew language would go beyond the scope of basic Martinist work and may even be beyond the abilities of most of us. We shall simply study the symbolism of those letters which bear directly on Martinism and leave each member to delve more deeply through his/her own study, if they have the interest. It would be useful, however, if you would practice copying the Hebrew alphabet so as to become familiar with the letters. Be guided by the chart provided in Liber Three. Also, it would be a great help for your own edification if you would read some introductory work on the Qabala. The Kaballah by Charles Ponce is usually readily available. Suggestion: In approaching the study of the Qabala it would be a good idea to go slowly. It is a recondite subject. Take it easy!

8. It was said that Hebrew is the sacred language of Martinism because of its affinity with the Primitive Language of Man: that of symbols. These symbols were the tools used by Man to communicate the principles and truths which he had brought down from his First Estate. Man occupied at one time a different place in the Divine Plan than the one in which he now finds himself. In that former place, his First Estate, Man had enjoyed faculties and privileges which he lost when he fell from that spiritual condition, into the world of matter where all is division and opposition.

9. When in his First Estate, Man knew what we could call the Angelic Tongue. At that time, Man had no need of symbols to communicate outwardly because the whole of Humanity had but One collective consciousness and all communications were effected inwardly. When Man fell, this common consciousness split into numerous individualities and each division lost the faculty of communicating inwardly with the others. Communications then required a vehicle that would carry the thought expressed to the individuals to whom it was addressed. Out of this necessity therefore, were born symbols and languages.

LECTURE
The Tree of Life

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

In the Lecture entitled "Initiation", certain ideas, drawn from the writings of Moses, were presented. As has been indicated, Moses' writings are couched in words capable of several interpretations. In fact they had a simple meaning, a symbolic meaning, and a sacred or hieratic meaning. The first two might be expressed by the spoken word; but the deepest or sacred hieratic meaning can only be read in the sign of the word itself. It is for this reason that it is quite impossible to penetrate the real intent of Moses' writings by reading an English translation.

Students of Moses' school were committed to guarding and exactly transmitting his teachings and since they were in every respect true to their obligation, that original sacred meaning is still preserved, but only in the original Hebrew in which it was written. It is designated "Received Wisdom" or Qabala; but not all readers of Hebrew, not even those who have so carefully preserved the ancient text, are able to speak correctly of that which they have guarded.

Since this is true, it may be understood how much less those outside the tradition itself have been able to penetrate the sacred text and know of a surety Moses' intent. In spite of this, countless religious dogmas have arisen on varying interpretations of the books of Moses, and endless disputes have been engendered because man has recognized the importance of the Bible's teaching even when that teaching is but imperfectly comprehended.

Both Jews and Christians have based their religions squarely upon the Bible, in most cases without knowledge of the hierarchic nature of Moses' writing and almost without any inkling of the highest or most important layer of meaning contained in it. Even our teachers in the Mystery Schools have often chosen to be obscure on such fundamental matters rather than disclose to immature or unready minds truth which would appear meaningless. For this reason, in our Martinist Order, we proceed slowly, counseling the Associate to prepare himself by meditation and contemplation for the explanations that will be gradually unfolded.

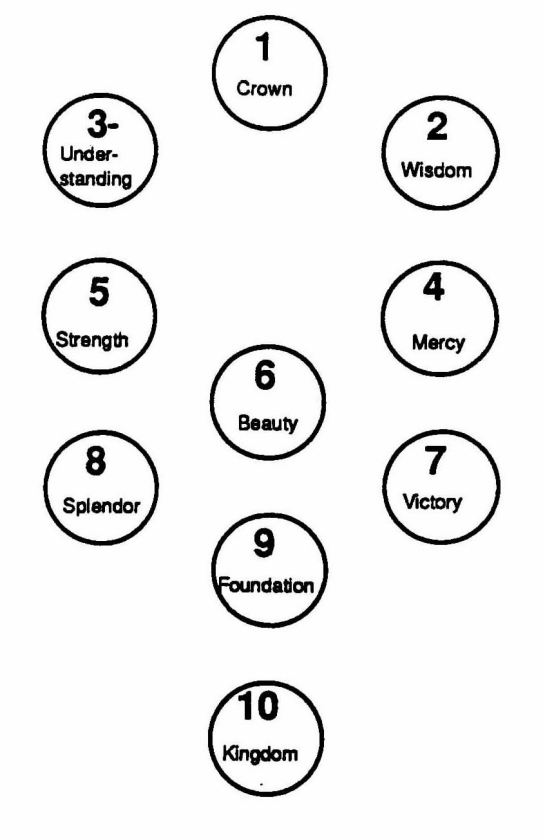
The time-honored questions of philosophy and religion could have been answered immediately if proper knowledge of Moses' teachings had been available. Endless speculation regarding the Fall Of Man, Free Will, the nature of Good & Evil, as well as man's purpose on earth, could have been avoided had the teachings reserved for the initiate been permitted to reach all.

That such procedure was not deemed the one to be followed has resulted in most of mankind's living by half-truths and false knowledge, and has obligated the candidate for the mysteries to unlearn much that he had previously accepted as true. It is for this reason that you were questioned thoroughly prior to your Initiation, to ascertain your readiness to accept new viewpoints and to re-examine the essentials of science, philosophy and religion.

In the Lecture entitled "Sepher Ietzerah", we approached the matter of creation as it shaped itself in the thought of Omneity, the pattern of which was seen to be a series of emanations of Infinity. The number of such emanations being ten, counted as a triunity, and a heptad comprising the seven days of creation. The name decade was chosen to suggest the completeness and invariability of the whole.

Following the explanations of the Qabalists (they of the Received Tradition) we shall find these ten emanations spoken of as Sephiroth. Although ten in number, these Sephiroth were still counted one, for all are/were but aspects of, and not separated from, the Infinity from which they came. As light seen through colored vessels is one light even though manifesting differently. so God exhibiting Himself under various aspects remains One. Or in Saint-Martin's words: "As all things in God are united by a universal communication, there is nothing separable in His nature. Each faculty is the universality of His faculties, and the universality of His faculties is found in each."

Let us consider, as the Qabalists did/do, these ten essential and unvarying facets of the Godhead called the Sephiroth, or divine decade. They are, in their proper order:(1) Crown, (2) Wisdom, (3) Intelligence or Understanding, (4) Mercy, (5) Strength or Force, (6) Beauty, (7) Victory, (8) Splendor, (9) Foundation, (10) Kingdom



These terms may seem to be without particular distinction. This is partly because their English translations do not carry their complete Hebrew significance and also, because the words themselves are too familiar to us to be associated in our thought with any esoteric meaning.

These Sephiroth constitute a representation of Infinity in action, giving us a picture of creation, outlining the path of creation's fall, and setting forth the pathway of man's ascent. They are also the basis for the mystic's conviction of the triadic pattern of things. This particular way in which the emanations are diagramed is known as The Tree Of Life.

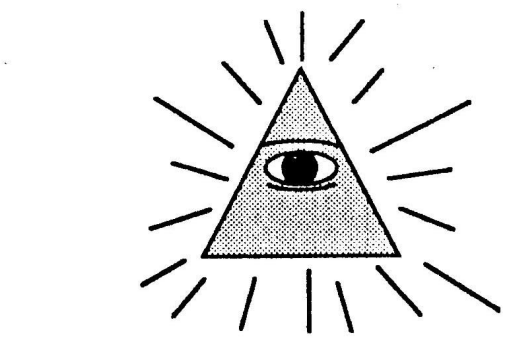
If we were to diagram the Sephiroth, we should do so by three triangles, one below the other, with a single dot below the third. The triangle farthest removed from our sphere of density is that made up of the first three Sephiroth: Crown, Wisdom, and Understanding. This, we must remember, embraces those aspects of God most difficult for man to comprehend. Their character is too near the boundaries of Infinity for man to do more than call them the Trinity. They do, in fact, in one school of thought, represent that which became for orthodox Christians the Father, Son and Holy Spirit although such terms are hardly adequate. Nonetheless, this Trinity has often been symbolized by an equilateral triangle with its apex pointing upward, containing within it the All-seeing eye and surrounded with a glory.

This matter of the representation of the Trinity Of Life will engage our attention when we enter into much more work in the future, for the Trinity can be represented in other ways which would be beyond the scope of our comprehension at this time.

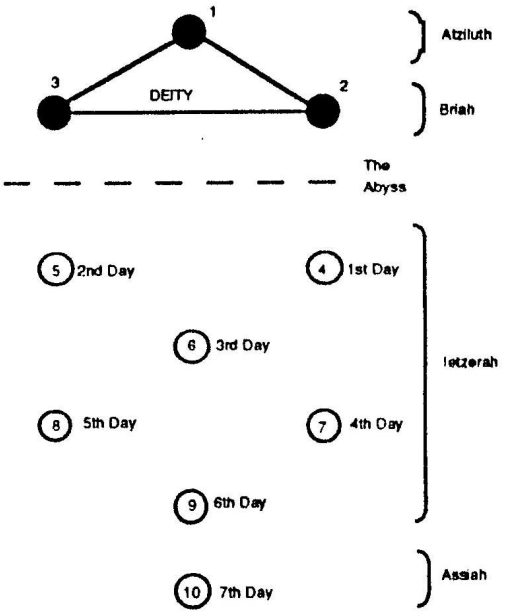
The world or realm of consciousness, inhabited or characterized by Crown, was called by the Qabalists Atziluth, or World of the Archetype. Please look up in your dictionary this word Archetype and have a clear understanding of its meaning. Atziluth is the realm of Seed ideas. It is, therefore, the germinal plane or stage of perfect intellection. The mother letter Shin, suggesting celestial fire, is assigned to Atziluth.

Next is the world or level of consciousness expressed by the two Sephiroth: Wisdom (2), and Understanding (3). This is Briah, the World of Creation. Out of the waters, creation took its rise. The mother letter Mem, governing the watery element, is assigned to Briah. Now, make this mental note: Duality begins in Briah.

The world or level of consciousness immediately above, or preceding, our earth is expressed by the Sephiroth: Mercy, Strength, Beauty, Victory, Splendor and Foundation. This is called the World of Formation, an airy plane of pure form called Ietzirah. it is suggested by the mother letter Aleph, for air is the breath of life and the animator of form. It is in the World of Formation that we find the "days of creation" thus:



DAY	SEPHIRAH	NAME
1	4	Mercy
2	5	Strength
3	6	Beauty
4	7	Victory
5	8	Splendor
6	9	Foundation



Below these three realms, or higher worlds, stands the one of tangible form which we call the earth. (Material creation, the universe). It is shadowed forth by the tenth Sephirah, named Kingdom, in the realm of Assiah. It is associated with the 7th day, marking, as it were, the farthest extension or greatest condensation of the ethereal stuff of the Godhead.

Seen from the standpoint of allegory, our earth is the farthest removed from the light, warmth, and beneficence of the Source of Light; and man, whose home it is, seems little better than an exile. Indeed, considering the gulf which stretches between the world into which man was introduced in the beginning, and that in which he finds himself imprisoned at the present time, "the exile" seems an apt characterization of man. (Kingdom, the 4th World, is in the Realm of Assiah)

Much of the writing of our V::: M::: Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin, was addressed "to man, the exile." To console man in his outcast state and to inspire him with faith in his right to return to those realms which once were his, became increasingly the labor of love to which Saint-Martin devoted himself. His books were widely read and his words of advice eagerly sought, not alone among the followers of Pasquales but among the profane of his own country and of the Continent and abroad.

Martinism seeks to exemplify this spirit of concern for the welfare of those searching for the path of return. It outlines, according to the ability of its teachers and the capacity of its initiates, not only the original powers, abilities, and possessions of man as the favorite creation of Omneity, but also the ways by which those powers, abilities, and possessions (now seemingly lost) may be recovered.

There will be little theory or idle speculation to occupy us in regard to these high matters, for Martinism is intent upon opening a way of understanding whereby man may repossess the inner abilities and reawaken the dormant faculties and commence his journey back to that which may rightly be called his lost heritage.

It will be necessary, however, to retell the story of those significant events in man's past which have often been slighted and whose importance to his spiritual progress have been altogether overlooked.

In our next Liber we shall continue our consideration of the writings of Moses in order that we may properly evaluate those fundamental problems with which man, the exile, is faced and which he must overcome.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

Notes for Students

1. An ideogram is a character, a symbol or figure which suggests the idea of the object, a hieroglyphic. In order that the idea could be expressed verbally, these symbols became associated with a sound expressing the same meaning. As the system developed, there came compound symbols, each part representing an idea and the sum of these ideas giving rise to another meaning. We can still find examples of this in the written languages of the Far East. Thus in one of the Eastern languages, a symbol depicting a woman when placed by the side of the symbol of a broom, gives, by association of ideas, the symbol of a home. As symbols, alphabets and languages .developed, they have gradually evolved so far away from their original conception that they have become nothing more than the vehicle of thoughts, to which they are no longer directly related. In other words, modern alphabets and languages have no ideogramatic value. This is why Hebrew is the sacred language of Martinism, because ancient Hebrew has an affinity with the primitive language of man, that of symbols.

2. Three important esoteric symbols are those of: The Mask; The Cloak; and The Two Columns or Pillars. To represent the Mask, we use the Hebrew letter Yod which has a numerical value of 10 and which also means thought, both human and divine. Scholars consider the Yod to be the foundation letter of the Hebrew alphabet. The Cloak is represented by the letter Tau, 22nd and last letter of the Hebrew alphabet, which symbolizes Truth, Knowledge, the Sun, and Perfect Man. The numerical value is 400. Lastly, the Columns are represented by Daleth which stands for Power, Strength and Immutability. Its numerical value is 4, which is the number of generation.

3. The Ten Numbers are the Ten Spheres of Creation called Sephiroth by Qabalists. The pattern of creation is expressed by a symbol which the Sepher Ietzirah calls "the decade out of nothing" and Qabalists designate "The Tree Of Life". The 22 letters of the Hebrew alphabet are called stamina and are divided into three groups: the three Mother Letters, or Primordial Elements; the seven double letters, signifying the major oppositions of life; and the 12 simple letters which refer to man's specific functioning and activity.

4. All students should have a copy of the Sepher Ietzirah. It is a small, inexpensive book which should not only be read, but re-read, studied, contemplated and meditated upon.

5. It has been argued that the conditions of savagery and fear of the unknown drove man to worship, in the same way that the elements drove him to seek shelter in caves. Mystics condemn this idea however and contend that the seeds of worship, which gave rise to religious systems, were in-born in man and were co-existent with his beginning on earth. In other words, it was there as a memory, carried over or brought down from his previous high estate.

Modern psychology has recognized that behind the unconscious awareness of both humans and animals, there is a driving force or instinctual energy called Id by Freud, and Libido by Jung. This raw energy surfaces from the unconscious or subconscious mind to the conscious, and manifests itself in what are known as the fundamental instincts. These are:

(1) The self-preservation instinct, or will to live.
(2) The sex instinct, or will to procreate.
(3) The herd instinct, or social urge.

Karl Gustav Jung, the famous Swiss psychiatrist recognized a fourth instinct which he called:

(4) The religious instinct.

According to Jung, the religious instinct is the balancing force that allows man to control and direct his more basic urges. It is also the underlying drive behind man's complex system of morality. Man's desire to discover the truths of nature, his need to define his relationships to the universe, and his belief in the existence of God are all expressions of the religious instinct. We must not, however, confuse the term 'religious instinct' with an actual drive in man towards what is known as organized religion; rather this instinct implies an awareness of a reality that extends beyond the physical world or the senses, to a world of nonphysical or spiritual substance, an awareness unsupported by material evidence but existing solely on the strength of intuition.

These intuitive flashes, these vague rememberings, mystics contend, were brought by man into his earthly experiences, obligations which he possessed in the world of his previous estate. There, it was his duty to have a perfect understanding of all that took place in the universe, to prevent the work of malefactors, to maintain peace and order, and to do everything to manifest the power and glory of Omneity. In this superior state, man had more accurate means for carrying out his religious duties, but in his present physical condition he must use sensible or physical means. As a result he is unable to carry out his religious duties with the same success as in his previous existence.

In all religions, two main factors are involved: worship and attunement. These were used by primitive peoples even before there was any highly developed system of ritual or doctrine. With these two principles, the humblest spot can become a temple. Without them even the most ornate shrine could never become a place of worship.

Mystics have always had their altars or Oratories in which they spend time daily in prayer and meditation. The primitives built their sanctums in the open, on a spot apart, and constructed them of the materials at hand. The sacred fire which served to bring the invisible and visible together, burned on the altar, and into the fire were sprinkled aromatic herbs, sweet-smelling spices or fragrant oils. The mysterious power of fire and the atmosphere created by the incense thus brought the mystic into a condition essential for true worship. The passage of time has not changed these basic requisites. Indeed, concurring with this, our V::: M::: Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin has said: "That altar is always surrounded with lamps which never go out and must always burn as long as the altar itself exists. Secondly, man always carries incense with him when he approaches the altar; thereby, he is able to enter into a state of devotion and thus bring about truer acts of his religion."

Today, although there are many religious sects, in essence they are one, just as we have seen that man himself, hiding behind the appearance of different races, is one. This should not surprise us for in his original First Estate, he was one there too. All religions speak of one living God. All state that every man possesses the germ of the Godhead. The spiritual exercises and practices of all religions, too, have a similar purpose: to bring man into attunement with the One.

It is not surprising therefore, to find that the sacred books of all religions are fundamentally alike. Atheistic writers contend that they have been copied one from the other, but such is not the case.

Each has been received as divine revelation, which rests on the solid and durable foundation of religious practices carried out in man's previous estate. It is well to remember that sacred and religious books have inner, esoteric meanings. Mysticism has been aware of this ever since the time of Origen, the great Church Father and Christian Mystic of the first century A.D., who tried desperately to maintain in the Christian religion the esoteric teachings which were being suppressed and expunged, as the early church shifted into an organization where expediency, power, politics and the control of people became more important than the perpetuation and teaching of spiritual truth.

ESSAY
Transcendence

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

We frequently hear the words "transcendental" and "transcendence" nowadays, and they are words that have some interesting connotations. They are words which, if we did not have them, we would have to invent others to use in their place. The word "transcend" has a dictionary meaning of "to rise above, to overleap, to surpass, to outstrip, to exceed, to excel." Someone has said that man is unique because he has the power of self-transcendence, the power to overcome, to rise above, to experience life on higher dimensions. The best illustration I can think of which illustrates the meaning of "transcendence" is contained in a book called Flatland by a man named Edwin A. Abbut. This book was published in England in 1926 and is probably out of print now. However: the author asks the reader to imagine existing in only two dimensions, that is - living in only a flat, level plane, There would be no ups or downs, no verticalness, no third dimension in other words. The reader is asked to imagine two-dimensional people living there, people who can move forward, backward or, sideways, but who have no up or down. Nor can they think up or down, for they themselves are two-dimensional creatures. Their houses would simply be lines drawn on the plane of their existence, i.e. squares, triangles, circles or some other shape with openings for doors and windows like an architectural floor plan for a house. Remember now, that these people cannot look up or down, only forwards or backwards or sideways; their entire life, thinking, feeling and sensing is operating in a flat, two-dimensional plane.

Now, suppose that you, a person living in three dimensions, looks down on that queer flatland with its little creatures skating about and who cannot jump over or duck under any obstacle in their way, involved as they are in a two-dimensional existence. Suppose that you reach down and pick up one of those two-dimensional people and lift him up above the two-dimensional plane and turn him sideways so that he could look down upon his world. What would be his reaction? For the first time, a creature from Flatland actually sees another dimension. What a mind-blowing experience that would be! Just imagine the perspective he would get for the first time. Now, his friends can't see him because they can't look up, they wouldn't have seen him go up, therefore he would have just simply vanished.

Further suppose that you placed him back down in his world after this experience. His friends would suddenly see him appear out of nowhere, and they would all flock around him and ask: "Where have you been?" He tries to tell them, but just imagine the difficulty of a two-dimensional creature trying to relate the idea of a third dimension when there would be no words, no symbols, no concepts, no means of defining it, no way to describe it. He can't say, "I was up there," because there is no word "up" in his language. He can only stammer and try to find two-dimensional analogies and metaphors to communicate with. Naturally, his friends would have no understanding of what he was trying to explain, and would probably think he was crazy and lock him up.

Can you think of similar situations involving people in our three-dimensional world who have had a fourth-dimensional experience? The first thing that comes to mind is the experience of mystics who try to tell people about the "Kingdom of God" or the "Kingdom of Heaven". Jesus, for example. was like a creature from Flatland trying to communicate something about another dimension, (perhaps a fourth dimension). Each of us is a three-dimensional creature and we have certain experiences in life that we take for granted. All the great mystical teachers of the ages, however, have told us of another dimension, a spiritual dimension, where, as Paul says, "we live and move and have our being."

How do you try to describe heaven? Jesus tried to describe heaven as being within, as a state of consciousness, and he described it as being a seed that grew and developed into tremendous proportions out of its small seed stature, or as leavened dough developing into a whole loaf of bread. He expressed it in many different ways, but he was talking, in other words, about another dimension.

The 91st Psalm is a beautiful meditation that deals with the transcendent experience of life, of things that come when we get into this consciousness of transcendence. It begins, "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most high shall abide under the shadow of the almighty." This "place" is not a place in space, but a level of consciousness. It is a secret state of mind, and when you get into this state then it says that you abide under a shadow; in other words, you abide under a cloud that shields you from the too hot rays of the sun. You are shielded from the harmful difficulties of life; you live, as someone has said, "in the charmed circle of God's love." All because you dwell in that secret place.

Now, what does that mean? It means, as Jesus once said, that you "live in the world, but you are not of it." You should keep your consciousness in the awareness that you are a whole creature. You may be expressing in part, you may be experiencing limitations in your life, but always you should have the awareness of the larger wholeness in which you live and move and have your being.

This is probably what Jesus had in mind when he said: "Judge ye not by appearances." Now, the appearance of things is basically centered within our three-dimensional perspective, and so if it seems that a situation is at the end of its rope, or a person is near the end of his endurance regarding a physical condition, and the doctors say he is incurable, in a three-dimensional perspective you might be tempted to say, "Well, that's how it is; what can one do?" But from a fourth-dimensional perspective what we see in the three-dimensional world is a partial, perhaps even a distorted, expression of something that is a whole, that is a real experience. Now, this is perhaps hard to understand and is rooted in faith.

How can you have faith that something is done, or that something can be done, when most people believe that something can't be done? Well, faith is rooted in this concept of the fourth dimension; faith is an attitude that is born out of this idea of transcendence, and the abilities of self-transcendence. Faith is, in the symbology of the disciples, the "key to the kingdom." Faith is a key into the world of transcendence, faith that there is more to life than that which is seen, faith that there is more to a person than that which is expressed. Any man has the ability to transcend himself when he develops the secret awareness.

This comes through prayer and meditation, through cultivating an introspective view of life. We need to close our eyes, close out the three-dimensional awareness of life, blot it Out entirely, not thinking in terms of limitations, and as Kalihl Gibran said in his definition of prayer, "...expanding yourself into the living ether." You get the sense that you are a part of the whole, and know then that you are rooted in wholeness. There is a whole self that has power and capacities beyond anything you have ever known. You just have to be still and know this. This is self-transcendence, and out of this awareness of the larger self of you, comes the confidence to do more than you have ever done, to go further than you have ever gone, to overcome challenges that have seemed totally limiting.

Well, I hope this has given you some kind of an insight into the word transcendence. Just get the realization that there is that of you that can rise above, surpass, and go beyond the three-dimensional world of yourself. You can get the higher sense, achieve the secret awareness to look beyond the appearances, to see beyond the horizon, to find the faith and the will to go forward and achieve.

ESSAY
Discovering Ourselves

When Solomon said, "As a man thinketh within himself, so is he," he pointed to the vital truth that a man is constantly being molded and shaped by the mental attitudes that he holds. Each of us is constantly shaping and molding his destiny, though we rationalize our state and station in life as being the result of inevitable events over which we have no control. The truth is that the experiences of life are important only in the attitudes we form about them.

Fundamental in our study of life is a right understanding about this something we call God. We must begin to turn away from the old concept of a God who is personal and sits in the heavens somewhere, to think of God as universal, as principle, as love, substance, life, power - the essence of all that comes forth in experience. We want to think of God not in a particular locality or as a personality, but as a force which is omnipresent. In considering such an approach to God you may. feel that you have lost the sense of the presence. "They have taken away my Lord," said one who came to "find Jesus." The personal God with which you experience fellowship and communion may seem to be lost. But this is not necessarily so when you get the whole picture.

God is Infinite Mind, and man is an idea in Mind. This idea is an activity in God, a part of God, it is no less than God. But this idea is a self-contained emanation out of Mind that is endowed with the power for unfoldment and expression. The idea forever remains one with Mind and forever has a close communion with Mind. Thus man, as an expression of Mind, is endowed with something of God which goes with him in all experience and has nothing to do but to work for his highest good. It is that something which Jesus referred to as "the Father in me who doeth the work." It is that something in us that is close, ever-personal, ever-nurturing, ever-loving. It is God imminent and active in man; God who knows our needs and whose good pleasure it is to fill these needs in all ways. God is the principle. Christ is the ideal of the principle as it is brought into creation. Man is that creation on its way to the perfect expression of the Christ. So, in a way, this is the Trinity. We have Mind: God, the universal; Idea: God the Father principle; Expression: man in the unfolding expression of God.

But it is important to know that man is not just the third person in the Trinity. Man is whole; man is being in miniature and all the powers of God are available to him. Man is the very activity of God expressing itself as man. Charles Fillmore says: "Man can never discern more than "a segment of the circle in which he moves, although his powers and capacities are susceptible of infinite expansion. He discovers a faculty within himself and cultivates it until it opens out into a universe of correlated faculties. The further he goes into Mind the wider its horizon, until he is forced to acknowledge that he is not the personal, limited being that he appears, but rather the focus of an infinite idea. That idea contains within itself inexhaustible possibilities. These possibilities are projected into man's consciousness as an image is reflected in a mirror, and thus man is the most important factor in creation. He is the will of God individualized." Fillmore goes on, "You are just as fully the son of God as was Jesus or any other Christ-like man who ever existed. The 'I AM' is the same in all men and all women; it is without limit in its capacity to express the potentialities of God."

The point is that man is forever answering the question, "Who am I?" by the manner of speech. He is saying, "I am this and that and the other." If he says, "I am weak and tired," he is using his potential of spiritual power by dragging it in the dust. If he says, "I am the Christ, the son of the living God," he is harnessing this Divine force within him and lifting himself to his highest potentiality. When the potential "I" is coupled with the all-sufficiency in God, it becomes the "I AM" which is the very name of God and the nature of man's true son-of -God self. So when Jesus said, "Before Abraham was, I am," He was not being facetious or ungrammatical; He was simply stating the truth that "I am the eternal son of God," and that this idea was the spiritual power in the life of Abraham even as it was in His own life and experience. When He said, "I am the way, the truth, and the light," He actually was saying, "I AM" is the way, the truth, and the light. This is the great realization that "I AM" is the way for you and for me. So we want to get away from the consciousness of, "I wish," "I hope," "I can't" and dwell in the "I AM," securing a new facet of being. Couple this "I AM" with whatever it is that you seek to manifest in your life and you harness yourself to tremendous power: "I am success." "I am life." "1 am wholeness." "I am love."

Remember, Fillmore says that you are "the focus of an infinite idea." This is a marvelous thought. The electric light bulb, in a way, is a focus of electrical energy producing light But men knew about electricity for a long time before they knew how to properly focus its potential. Man has known about spiritual things for a long time but without realizing how to give focus to his own innate spiritual power. Jesus said, "Ye are the light of the world, let your light shine." There is the same need in man of producing the focus for transforming the power of God into tangible and visible light and wisdom as there has been in harnessing great forces of the world.

God created man as a perfect idea in Mind and that idea is being projected as an image upon the screen of the soul nature. Man's role is to duplicate this process and to put this image of the Divine idea into the projector of his own consciousness. If you are showing films or slides and suddenly you get a blurred image on the screen you know that your picture is out of focus, so you adjust the focus until it becomes clear. The film picture was all right, but the projector was out of focus. The focus, you see, is our thought preoccupation. What are we seeing? How are we judging ourself and others? "Be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind," by getting your mind in focus, by recognizing consciously your oneness with God.

It is a great day in a man's life when he really begins to discover himself. You see, a person may own attractive land for years without knowing its value. And then he may suddenly strike oil on it; he may take water from the land; he may quarry stone to build buildings; he may cut down trees and use them for lumber. All the natural resources may be there, but first he has to discover and use them. Beneath the surface of every man there is a latent capacity greater than he has ever yet discovered. One discovery leads to another, until man finds the deep wealth of his many possibilities.

You can go to this Infinite Mind as you go to the library for information. This is the key to the control of every circumstance, the solution of every problem, the satisfaction of every right desire: "Be still and know that I am God." One reason for our lack of focus and our lack of effectiveness is that we look to good fortune for happiness and for security in the world around us. To us, the light within is the light intended to aid us in the search for something we have yet to find in time world. But it is not in the world, it is in yourself. Walt Whitman said, "I ask not good fortune; I myself am good fortune." Jesus said, "The kingdom of God is within."

Within ourselves is the potential to become all that in our heart of hearts we desire. Our tendency is to become centered in things, in outer conditions and circumstances. As the poet said, "We live too close to the circumference of our being." When our thoughts are centered in money and things and sense-consciousness, we think that we are merely using life, using substance, using ideas, rather than being the expression or the focus of life and substance and intelligence.

You can discover yourself and discover a new dimension to your life when you realize your oneness with the Infinite process and know that the kingdom of God is within you and all potentiality is yours. Live each day as if you had within you all that you need and seek in that day to give expression to that allness — by the way you think, by the faith that you express, by the way in which you relate to life, and by the way in which you constantly turn to the Almighty. Return within yourself, to relate yourself in oneness with God. "Be still and know that I am God."

Mystic Christianity

The true story of the life of Jesus of Nazareth has never been unfolded to the world, either in the accepted Gospels or in the Apochrypha, although a few stray hints may be found in some of the commentaries written by the ante-Nicene Fathers. The facts concerning His identity and mission are among the priceless mysteries preserved to this day in the secret vaults beneath the "Houses of the Brethren". To a few of the Knights Templars, who were initiated into the arcana of the Druses, Nazarenes, Essenes, Johannites, and other sects still inhabiting the remote and inaccessible fastnesses of the Holy Land, part of the strange story was told. The knowledge of the Templars concerning the early history of Christianity was undoubtedly one of the main reasons for their persecution and final annihilation. The discrepancies in the writings of the early Church Fathers not only are irreconcilable, but demonstrate beyond question that even during the first five centuries after Christ, these learned men had for the basis of their writings little more substantial than folklore and hearsay. To the easy believer everything is possible and there are no problems. The unemotional person in search of facts, however, is confronted by a host of problems with uncertain factors, of which the following are typical:

According to popular conception, Jesus was crucified during the thirty-third year of His life and in the third year of His ministry following His baptism. About A.D. 180, St. Irenaeus, Bishop of Lyons, one of the most eminent of the ante-Nicene theologians, wrote Against Heresies, an attack on the doctrines of the Gnostics. In this work Irenaeus declared upon the authority of the Apostles themselves that Jesus lived to old age. To quote: "They, however, that they may establish their false opinion regarding that which is written 'to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord.' maintain that He preached for one year only, and then suffered in the twelfth month. [In speaking thus], they are forgetful of their own disadvantage, destroying His whole work, and robbing Him of that age which is both more necessary and more honorable than any other; that more advanced age, I mean, during which also as a teacher He excelled all others. For how could He have had His disciples, if He did not teach? And how could He have taught unless He had reached the age of a Master? For when He came to be baptized, He had not yet completed His thirtieth year, but was beginning to be about thirty years of age (for thus Luke, who has mentioned His years, has expressed it: 'Now Jesus was, as it were, beginning to be thirty years old,' when He came to receive baptism); and (according to these men,) He preached only one year, reckoning from His baptism. On completing His thirtieth year He suffered, being in fact still a young man, and who had by no means attained to advanced age. Now, that the first stage of early life embraces thirty years, and that this extends onward to the fortieth year, every one will admit; but from the fortieth and fiftieth year a man begins to decline towards old age, which our Lord possessed while He still fulfilled the office of a Teacher, even as the Gospel and all the elders testify; those who were conversant in Asia with John, the disciple of the Lord, (affirming) that John conveyed to them that information. And he remained among them up to the time of Trajan. Some of them, moreover, saw not only John, but the other apostles also, and heard the very same account from them, and bear testimony as to the (validity of) the statement. Whom then should we rather believe? Whether such men as these, or Ptolemaeus, who never saw the apostles, and who never even in his dreams attained to the slightest trace of an apostle?"

Commenting on the foregoing passage, Godfrey Higgins remarks that it has fortunately escaped the hands of those destroyers who have attempted to render the Gospel narratives consistent by deleting all such statements. He also notes that the doctrine of the crucifixion was a vexata questio among Christians even during the second century. "The evidence of Irenaeus," he says, "cannot be touched. On every principle of sound criticism, and of the doctrine of probabilities, it is unimpeachable."

It should further be noted that Irenaeus prepared this statement to contradict another apparently current in his time to the effect that the ministry of Jesus lasted but one year. Of all the early Fathers, Irenaeus, writing within eighty years after the death of St. John the evangelist, should have had reasonably accurate information. If the disciples themselves related that Jesus lived to advanced age in the body, why has the mysterious number 33 been arbitrarily chosen to symbolize the duration of His life? Were the incidents in the life of Jesus purposely altered so that His actions would fit more closely into the pattern established by the numerous Savior-Gods who preceded Him?

From Jenning's The Rosicrucians, Their Rites, and Mysteries

THE ROUND TABLE OF KING ARTHUR

According to tradition, Arthur, when a boy of fifteen, was crowned King of Britain, in A. D. 516. Soon after his ascension to the throne he founded the Order of the Knights of the Round Table at Windsor. Thereafter the Knights met annually at Carleon, Winchester, or at Camelot, to celebrate Pentecost. From all parts of Europe came the brave and the bold, seeking admission into this noble order of British knighthood. Nobility, virtue, and valor were its requirements, and those possessing these qualities to a marked degree were welcomed to King Arthur's court at Camelot. Having gathered the bravest and noblest Knights of Europe about him, King Arthur chose twenty-four who excelled all others in daring and integrity and formed of them his Circle of the Round Table. According to legend, each of these Knights was so great in dignity and power that none could occupy a more exalted seat than another, so when they gathered at the table to celebrate the anniversary of their foundation, it was necessary to use a round table that all might occupy chairs of equal importance.

While it is probable that the Order of the Round Table had its distinctive rituals and symbols, the knowledge of them has not survived the ages. Elias Ashmole, in his volume on the Order of the Garter, inserted a double-page plate showing the insignia of all the orders of knighthhood. the block set aside for the symbol of the Round Table being left blank. The chief reason for the loss of the symbolism of the Round Table was the untimely death of King Arthur upon the field of Kamblan (A.D.542) in the forty-first year of his life. While he destroyed his bitter enemy, Mordred, in this famous battle, it cost him not only his own life but the lives of nearly all his Knights of the Round Table, who died defending their commander.

That these analogies were recognized and used as a perusal of the writings of Justin Martyr, another second-century authority. In his Apology, Justin addresses the pagans thus:

> "And when we say also that the Word, who is the first-birth of God, and that He, Jesus Christ, our Teacher, was crucified and died, and rose again, and ascended into heaven, we propound nothing different from what you believe regarding those whom you esteem sons of Jupiter. And if we assert that the Word of God was born of God in a peculiar manner, different from ordinary generation, let this, as said above, be no extraordinary thing to you, who say that Mercury is the angelic word of God. But if any one objects that He was crucified, in this also He is on a par with those reputed sons of Jupiter of yours, who suffered as we have now enumerated."

Commenting on the foregoing passage, Godfrey Higgins remarks that it has fortunately escaped the hands of those destroyers who have attempted to render the Gospel narratives consistent by deleting all such statements. He also notes that the doctrine of the crucifixion was a vexata questio among Christians even during the second century. "The evidence of Irenaeus," he says, "cannot be touched. On every principle of sound criticism, and of the doctrine of probabilities, it is unimpeachable."

It should further be noted that Irenaeus prepared this statement to contradict another apparently current in his time to the effect that the ministry of Jesus lasted but one year. Of all the early Fathers, Irenaeus, writing within eighty years after the death of St. John the evangelist, should have had reasonably accurate information. If the disciples themselves related that Jesus lived to advanced age in the body, why has the mysterious number 33 been arbitrarily chosen to symbolize the duration of His life? Were the incidents in the life of Jesus purposely altered so that His actions would fit more closely into the pattern established by the numerous Savior-Gods who preceded Him? That these analogies were recognized and used as a perusal of the writings of Justin Martyr, another second-century authority. In his Apology, Justin addresses the pagans thus:

> "And when we say also that the Word, who is the first-birth of God, and that He, Jesus Christ, our Teacher, was crucified and died, and rose again, and ascended into heaven, we propound nothing different from what you believe regarding those whom you esteem sons of Jupiter. And if we assert that the Word of God was born of God in a peculiar manner, different from ordinary generation, let this, as said above, be no extraordinary thing to you, who say that Mercury is the angelic word of God. But if any one objects that He was crucified, in this also He is on a par with those reputed Sons of Jupiter of yours, who suffered as we have now enumerated."

From this it is evident that the first missionaries of the Christian Church were far more willing to admit the similarities between their faith and the faiths of the pagans than were their successors in later centuries.

In an effort to solve some of the problems arising from any attempt to chronicle accurately the life of Jesus, it has been suggested that there may have lived in Syria at that time two or more religious teachers bearing the name Jesus, Jehoshua, or Joshua, and that the lives of these men may have been confused in the Gospel stories. In his Secret Sects of Syria and Lebanon, Bernard H. Springett, a Masonic author, quotes from an early book, the name of which he was not at liberty to disclose because of its connection with the ritual of a sect. The last part of his quotation is germane to the subject at hand:

> "But Jehovah prospered the seed of the Essenians, in holiness and love, for many generations. Then came the chief of the angels, according to the commandment of GOD, to raise up an heir to the Voice of Jehovah. And, in four generations more, an heir was born, and named Joshua, and he was the child of Joseph and Mary, devout worshippers of Jehovah, who stood aloof from all other people save the Essenians. And this Joshua, in Nazareth, reestablished Jehovah, and restored many of the lost rites and ceremonies. In the thirty-sixth year of his age he was stoned to death in Jerusalem."

Within the last century several books have published to supplement the meager descriptions in the Gospels of Jesus and His ministry. In some instances these narratives claim to be founded upon early manuscripts recently discovered; in others, upon direct spiritual revelation. Some of these writings are highly plausible, while others are incredible. There are persistent rumors that Jesus visited and studied in both Greece and Indian and that a coin struck in His honor in India during the first century has been discovered. Early Christian records are known to exist in Tibet, and the monks of a Buddhist monastery in Ceylon still preserve a record which indicates that Jesus sojourned with them and became conversant with their philosophy.

Although early Christianity shows every evidence of Oriental influence, this is a subject the modern church declines to discuss. If it is ever established beyond question that Jesus was an initiate of the pagan Greek or Asiatic Mysteries, the effect upon the more conservative members of the Christian faith is likely to be cataclysmic. If Jesus was God incarnate, as the solemn councils of the church discovered, why is He referred to in the New Testament as "called of God an high priest after the order of Melchizedek"? The words "after the order" make Jesus one of a line or order of which there must have been others of equal or even superior dignity. If the "Melchizedeks" were the divine or priestly rulers of the nations of the earth before the inauguration of the system of temporal rulers, then the statements attributed to St. Paul would indicate that Jesus either was one of these "philosophic elect" or was attempting to reestablish their system of government. It will be remembered that Melchizedek also performed the same ceremony of the drinking of wine and the breaking of bread as did Jesus at the Last Supper.

From Ashmole's Order of the Garter

THE GREAT GEORGE AND COLLAR OF THE GARTER

The Order of the Garter was probably formed by Edward III in imitation of King Arthur's Knights of the Round Table, which institution was hopelessly scattered after the battle of Kamblan. The popular story to the effect that the Countess of Salisbury's garter was the original inspiration for the foundation of the order is untenable. The motto of the Order of the Garter is "Honi soit qui mal y pense" (Shamed be he who thinks evil of it). St. George is looked upon as the patron of the order, for he typifies the higher nature of man overcoming the dragon of his own lower nature. While St. George is supposed to have lived during the third century, it is probable that he was a mythological personage borrowed from pagan mythology.

George Faber declares the original name of Jesus was Jescua Hammassiah. Godfrey Higgins has discovered two references, one in the Midrashjoleheleth and the other in the *Abodazara (early J*ewish commentaries on the Scriptures) to the effect that the surname of Joseph's family was Panther, for in both of these works it is stated that a man was healed "in the name of Jesus ben Panther." The name Panther establishes a direct connection between Jesus and Bacchus — who was nursed by panthers and is sometimes depicted riding either on one of these animals or in a chariot drawn by them. The skin of the panther was also sacred in certain of the Egyptian initiatory ceremonials. The Monogram IHS, now interpreted to mean Iesus Hominum Salvator (Jesus Savior of Men), is another direct link between the Christian and the Bacchic rites. IHS is derived from the Greek YHZ which, as its numerical value (608) signifies, is emblematic of the sun and constituted the sacred and concealed name of Bacchus. (See The Celtic Druids by Godfrey Higgins.) The question arises, was early Roman Christianity confused with the worship of Bacchus because of the numerous parallelisms in the two faiths? If the affirmative can be proved, many hitherto incomprehensible enigmas of the New Testament will be solved.

It is by no means improbable that Jesus Himself originally propounded as allegories the cosmic activities which were later confused with His own life. That the Xpiotoç, Christos represents the solar power reverenced by every nation of antiquity cannot be controverted. If Jesus revealed the nature and purpose of this solar power under the name and personality of Christos, thereby giving to this abstract power the attributes of a god-man, He but followed a precedent set by all previous World-Teachers. This god-man, thus endowed with all the qualities of Deity, signifies the latent divinity in every man. Mortal man achieves deification only through at-one-ment with this divine Self. Union with the immortal Self constitutes immortality, and he who finds his true Self is therefore "saved." This Christos, or divine man in man, is man's real hope of salvation — the living Mediator between abstract Deity and mortal humankind. As Atys, Adonis, Bacchus, and Orpheus in all likelihood were originally illumined men who later were confused with the symbolic personages whom they created as personifications of this divine power, so Jesus has been confused with the Christos, or god-man, whose wonders He preached. Since the Christos was the god-man imprisoned m every creature, it was the first duty of the initiate to liberate, or "resurrect" this Eternal One within himself. He who attained reunion with his Christos was consequently termed a Christian, or Christened, man.

One of the most profound doctrines of the pagan philosophers concerned the Universal Savior-God who lifted the souls of regenerated men to heaven through His own nature. This concept was unquestionably the inspiration for the words attributed to Jesus: "I am the way, the truth, and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me." In an effort to make a single person out of Jesus and His Christos, Christian writers have patched together a doctrine which must be resolved back into its original constituents if the true meaning of Christianity is to be rediscovered. In the Gospel narratives the Christos represents the perfect man who, having passed through the various stages of the "World Mystery" symbolized by the thirty-three years, ascends to the heaven sphere where he is reunited with his Eternal Father. The story of Jesus as now preserved is — like the Masonic story of Hiram Abiff — part of a secret initiatory ritualism belonging to the early Christian and pagan Mysteries.

During the centuries just prior to the Christian Era, the secrets of the pagan Mysteries had gradually fallen into the hands of the profane. To the student of comparative religion it is evident that these secrets, gathered by a small group of faithful philosophers and mystics, were reclothed in new symbolical garments and thus preserved for several centuries under the name of Mystic Christianity. It is generally supposed that the Essenes were the custodians of this knowledge and also the initiators and educators of Jesus. If so, Jesus was undoubtedly initiated in the same temple of Melchizedek where Pythagoras had studied six centuries before.

The Essenes — the most prominent of the early Syrian sects — were an order of pious men and women who lived lives of asceticism, spending their days in simple labor and their evenings in prayer. Josephus, the great Jewish historian, speaks of them in the highest terms. "They teach the immortality of the soul," he says, "and esteem that the rewards of righteousness are to be earnestly striven for." In another place he adds, "Yet is their course of life better than that of other men and they entirely addict themselves to husbandry." The name Essenes is supposed to be derived from an ancient Syrian work meaning "physician," and these kindly folk are believed to have held as their purpose of existence the healing of the sick in mind, soul, and body. According to Edouard Schure, they had two principal communities, or centers, one in Egypt on the banks of Lake Maoris, and other in Palestine at Engaddi, near the Dead Sea. Some authorities trace the Essenes back to the schools of Samuel the Prophet, but most agree on either an Egyptian or Oriental origin. Their methods of prayer, meditation, and fasting were not unlike those of the holy men of the Far East. Membership in the Essene Order was possible only after a year of probation. This Mystery School, like so many others, had three degrees, and only a few candidates passed successfully through all. The Essenes were divided into two distinct communities, one consisting of celibates and the other of members who were married.

The Essenes never became merchants or entered into the commercial life of cities, but maintained themselves by agriculture and the raising of sheep for wool; also by such crafts as pottery and carpentry. In the Gospels and Apochrypha, Joseph, the father of Jesus, is referred to as both a carpenter and a potter. In the Apochryphal Gospel of Thomas and also that of Pseudo-Matthew, the child Jesus is described as making sparrows out of clay which came to life and flew away when he clapped his hands. The Essenes were regarded as among the better educated class of Jews and there are accounts of their having been chosen as tutors for the children of Roman officers stationed in Syria. The fact that so many artificers were listed among their number is responsible for the order's being considered as a progenitor of modern Freemasonry. The symbols of the Essenes include a number of builders' tools, and they were secretly engaged in the erection of spiritual and philosophical temple to serve as a dwelling place for the living God.

JAKOB BOHME, THE TEUTONIC PHILOSOPHER

Jakob Böhme was born in the year 1575 in a village near Gorlitz. and died in Silesia in 1624. He had but little schooling and was apprenticed at an early age to a shoemaker. He later became a journeyman shoemaker, married and had four children. One day while tending his master's shoe shop, a mysterious stranger entered who, while he seemed to possess but little of this world's goods, appeared to be most wise and noble in spiritual attainment. The stranger asked the price of a pair of shoes, but young Böhme did not dare to name a figure. for fear that he would displease his master. The stranger insisted and Böhme finally placed a valuation which he felt was all that his master possibly could hope to secure for the shoes. The stranger immediately bought them and departed. A short distance down the street the mysterious stranger stopped and cried out in a loud voice, "Jakob, Jakob, come forth." In amazement and fright, Böhme ran out of the house. The strange man fixed his eyes on the youth - great eyes which sparkled and seemed filled with divine light. He took the boy's right hand and addressed him as follows: "Jakob, thou art little, but shalt be great, and become another Man, such a one as at whom the World shall wonder. Therefore be pious. fear God, and reverence His Word. Read diligently the Holy Scriptures. wherein you have Comfort and Instruction. For thou must endure much Misery and Poverty, and suffer Persecution, but be courageous and persevere, for God loves, and is gracious to thee." Deeply impressed by the prediction. Böhme became ever more intense in his search for truth. At last his labors were rewarded. For seven days he remained in a mysterious condition during which tune the mysteries of the invisible world were revealed to him. It has been said of Jakob Böhme that he revealed to all mankind the deepest secrets of alchemy. He died surrounded by his family, his last words being "Now I go hence into Paradise.'

Like the Gnostics, the Essenes were emanationists. One of their chief objects was the reinterpretation of the Mosaic Law according to certain secret spiritual keys preserved by them from the time of the founding of their order. It would thus follow that the Essenes were Qabalists and, like several other contemporary sects flourishing in Syria, were awaiting the advent of the Messiah promised in the early Biblical writings. Joseph and Mary, the parents of Jesus, are believed to have been members of the Essene Order. Joseph was many years the senior of Mary. According to The Protevangelium, he was a widower with grown sons, and in the Gospel of Pseudo-Matthew, he refers to Mary as a little child less in age than his own grandchildren.

In her infancy Mary was dedicated to the Lord, and the Apocryphal writings contain many accounts of miracles associated with her early childhood. When she was twelve years old, the priests held counsel as to the future of this child who had dedicated herself to the Lord, and the Jewish high priest, bearing the breastplate, entered into the Holy of Holies, where an angel appeared to him, saying, "Zacharias, go forth and summon the widowers of the people and let them take a rod apiece and she shall be the wife of him to whom the Lord shall show a sign." Going forth to meet the priests at the head of the widowers, Joseph collected the rods of all the other men and gave them into the keeping of the priests. Now Joseph's rod was but half as long as the others, and the priests on returning the rods to the widowers paid no attention to Joseph's but left it behind in the Holy of Holies. When all the other widowers had received back their wands, the priests awaited a sign from heaven, but none came. Joseph, because of his advanced age, did not ask for the return of his rod, for to him it was inconceivable that he should be chosen. But an angel appeared to the high priest, ordering him to give back the short rod which lay unnoticed in the Holy of Holies. As the high priest handed the rod to Joseph, a white dove flew from the end of it and rested upon the head of the aged carpenter, and to him was given the child.

The editor of The Sacred Books and Early Literature of the East calls attention to the peculiar spirit with which the childhood of Jesus is treated in most of the Apocryphal books on the New Testament, particularly in one work attributed to the doubting Thomas, the earliest known Greek version of which dates from about A.D. 200: "The child Christ is represented almost as an imp, cursing and destroying those who annoy him." This Apocryphal work, calculated to inspire its readers with fear and trembling, was popular during the Middle Ages because it was in full accord with the cruel and persecuting spirit of mediaeval Christianity. Like many other early sacred books, the book of Thomas was fabricated for two closely allied purposes: first, to outshine the pagans in miracle working, second, to inspire all unbelievers with the "fear of the Lord." Apocryphal writings of this sort have no possible basis in fact. At one time an asset, the "miracles" of Christianity have become its greatest liability. Supernatural phenomena, in a credulous age interpolated to impress the ignorant, in this century have only achieved the alienation of the intelligent.

In The Greek Gospel of Nicodemus, it is declared that when Jesus was brought into the presence of Pilate the standards borne by the Roman guards bowed their tops in homage to him in spite of every effort made by the soldiers to prevent it. In The Letters of Pilate the statement also appears that Caesar, being wroth at Pilate for executing a just man, ordered him to be decapitated. Praying for forgiveness, Pilate was visited by an angel of the Lord, who reassured the Roman governor by promising him that all Christendom should remember his name and that when Christ came the second time to judge His people he (Pilate) should come before Him as His witness.

Stories like the foregoing represent the incrustations that have attached themselves to the body of Christianity during the centuries. The popular mind itself has been the self-appointed guardian and perpetuator of these legends, bitterly opposing every effort to divest the faith of these questionable accumulations. While popular tradition often contains certain basic elements of truth, these elements are usually distorted out of all proportion. Thus, while the generalities of the story may be fundamentally true, the details are hopelessly erroneous. Of truth as of beauty it may be said that it is most adorned when unadorned. Through the mist of fantastic accounts which obscure the true foundation of the Christian faith is faintly visible to the discerning few a great and noble doctrine communicated to the world by a great and noble soul. Joseph and Mary, two devout and holy-minded souls, consecrated to the service of God and dreaming of the coming of a Messiah to serve Israel, obeyed the injunctions of the high priest of the Essenes to prepare a body for the coming of a great soul. Thus of an immaculate conception Jesus was born. By immaculate is meant clean, rather than supernatural.

Jesus was reared and educated by tile Essenes and later initiated into the most profound of their Mysteries. Like all great initiates, He must travel in an easterly direction, and the silent years of His life no doubt were spent in familiarizing Himself with that secret teaching later to be communicated by Him to the world. Having consummated the ascetic practices of His order, He attained to the Christening. Having thus reunited Himself with His own spiritual source, He then went forth in the name of time One who has been crucified since before the worlds were and, gathering about Him disciples and apostles, He instructed them in that secret teaching which had been lost — in part, at least — from the doctrines of Israel. His fate is unknown, but in all probability He suffered that persecution which is the lot of those who seek to reconstruct the ethical, philosophical, or religious systems of their day.

To the multitudes Jesus spoke in parables; to His disciples He also spoke in parables, though of a more exalted and philosophic nature. Voltaire said that Plato should have been canonized by the Christian Church. for, being the first propounder of the Christos mystery, he contributed more to its fundamental doctrines than any other single individual. Jesus discloses to His disciples that the lower world is under the control of a great spiritual being which had fashioned it according to the will of the Eternal Father. The mind of this great angel was both the mind of the world and also the worldly mind. So that men should not die of worldliness the Eternal Father sent unto creation the eldest and most exalted of His powers — the Divine Mind. This Divine Mind offered Itself as a living sacrifice and was broken up and eaten by the world. Having given Its spirit and Its body at a secret and sacred supper to the twelve manners of rational creatures, the Divine Mind became a part of every living thing. Man was thereby enabled to use this power as a bridge across which he might pass and attain immortality. He who lifted up his soul to this Divine Mind and served It was righteous and, having attained righteousness, liberated this Divine Mind, which thereupon returned again in glory to Its own divine source. And because He had brought to them his knowledge, the disciples said one to another: "Lo, He in Himself this Mind personified!"

THE ARTHURIAN CYCLE AND LEGEND OF THE HOLY GRAIL

According to legend, the body of the Christos (the Spiritual Law) was given into the keeping of two men, of whom the Gospels make but brief mention. These were Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathea, both devout men who, though not listed among the disciples or apostles of the Christos, were of all men chosen to be custodians of His sacred remains. Joseph of Arimathea was one of the initiated brethren and is called by A. E. Waite, in his A New Encyclopaedia of Freemasonry, "the first bishop of Christendom." Just as the temporal (or visible) power of the Holy See was established by St. Peter (?), so the spiritual (or invisible) body of the faith was entrusted to the "secret Church of the Holy Grail" through apostolic succession from Joseph of Arimathea, into whose keeping had been given the perpetual symbols of the covenant - the ever-flowing cup and the bleeding spear.

Presumably obeying instructions of St. Philip, Joseph of Arimathea, carrying the sacred relics, reached Britain after passing through many and varied hardships. Here a site was allotted to him for the erection of a church, and in this manner Glastonbury Abbey was founded. Joseph planted his staff in the earth and it took root, becoming a miraculous thorn bush which blossomed twice a year and which is now called the Glastonbury thorn. The end of the life of Joseph of Arimathea is unknown. By some it is believed that, like Enoch, he was translated; by others that he was buried in Glastonbury Abbey. Repeated attempts have been made to find the Holy Grail, which many believe to have been hidden in a crypt beneath the ancient abbey. The Glastonbury chalice recently discovered and by the devout supposed to be the original Sangreal can scarcely be accepted as genuine by the critical investigator. Beyond its inherent interest as a relic, like the famous Antioch chalice it actually proves nothing when it is realized that practically little more was known about the Christian Mysteries eighteen centuries ago than can be discovered today.

The origin of the Grail myth, as of nearly every other element in the great drama, is curiously elusive. Sufficient foundation for it may be found in the folklore of the British Isles, which contains many accounts of magic cauldrons, kettles, cups, and drinking horns. The earliest Grail legends describe the cup as a veritable horn of plenty. Its contents were inexhaustible and those who served it never hungered or thirsted. One account stated that no matter how desperately ill a person might be he could not die 'within eight days of beholding the cup. Some authorities believe the Holy Grail to be the holy cup used in the rites of Adonis and Atys. A communion cup or chalice was used in several of the ancient Mysteries, and the god Bacchus is frequently symbolized in the form of a vase, cup or urn. In Nature worship the ever-flowing Grail signifies the bounty of the harvest by which the life of man is sustained; like Mercury's bottomless pitcher, it is the inexhaustible fountain of natural resource. From the evidence at hand it would indeed be erroneous to ascribe a purely Christian origin to the Grail symbolism.

From Audsley s Handbook of Christian Symbolism

THE NIMBUS AND AUREOLE IN SYMBOLISM

The golden halos around the heads of pagan and Christian saints refer both to their being bathed in the glory of the sun and also to the fact that a spiritual sun within their own natures is radiating its glow-ray and surrounding them with celestial splendor. Whenever the nimbus is composed of straight radiant lines, it is solar in significance; whenever they are united, it symbolizes an harmonious blending of both principles. The circular nimbus is solar and masculine, while lozenge-shaped nimbus, or versica piscis, is lunar and feminine. The same symbolism is preserved in the circular and lozenge-shaped windows of cathedrals. There is a complete science contained in the shape, color, and adornments of the halos of saints and martyrs. A plain golden ring usually surrounds the head of a canonized saint, usually adorned with a St. George Cross, a flowered cross, or a hued cross, with only three of the arms visible.

In the Arthurian Cycle appears a strange and mysterious figure — Merlin, the magician. In one of the legends concerning him it is declared that when Jesus was sent to liberate the world from the bondage of evil, the Adversary determined to send an Antichrist to undo His labors. The Devil therefore in the form of a horrible dragon overshadowed a young woman who had taken refuge in sanctuary to escape the evil which had destroyed her family. When Merlin, her child, was born he partook of the characteristic of his human mother and demon father. Merlin, however, did not serve the powers of darkness but, being convened to the true light, retained only two of the supernatural powers inherited from his father: prophecy and miracle working. The story of Merlin's infernal father must really be considered as an allegorical allusion to the fact that he was a "philosophical son" of the serpent or dragon, a title applied to all initiates of the Mysteries, who thus acknowledge Nature as their mortal mother and wisdom in the form of the serpent or dragon as their immortal father. Confusion of the dragon and serpent with the powers of evil has resulted as an inevitable consequence from misinterpretation of the early chapters of Genesis.

Arthur while an infant was given into the keeping of Merlin, the Mage, and in his youth was instructed by him in the secret doctrine and probably initiated into the deepest secrets of natural magic. With Merlin's assistance, Arthur became the leading general of Britain, a degree of dignity which has been confused with kingship. After Arthur had drawn the sword of Branstock from the anvil and this established his divine right to leadership, Merlin further assisted him to secure from the Lady of the Lake the sacred sword Excalibur. After the establishment of the Round Table, having fulfilled his duty, Merlin disappeared, according to one account vanishing into the air, where he still exists as a shadow communicating at will with mortals; according to another, retiring of his own accord into a great stone vault which he sealed from within.

It is reasonably certain that many legends regarding Charlemagne were later associated with Arthur, who is most famous for establishing the Order of the Round Table at Winchester. Reliable information is not to be had concerning the ceremonies and initiatory rituals of the "Table Round". In one story the Table was endowed with the powers of expansion and contraction so that fifteen or fifteen hundred could be seated around it, according to whatever need might arise. The most common accounts fix the number of knights who could be seated at one time at the Round Table at either twelve or twenty-four. The twelve signified the signs of the zodiac and also the apostles of Jesus. The knights' names and also their heraldic arms were emblazoned upon their chairs. When twenty-four are shown seated at the Table, each of the twelve signs of the zodiac is divided into two parts — a light and a dark half — to signify the nocturnal and diurnal phases of each sign. As each sign of the zodiac is ascending for two hours every day, so the twenty-four knights represent the hours, the twenty-four elders before the throne in Revelation, and twenty-four Persian deities who represent the spirits of the divisions of the day. In the center of the Table was the symbolic rose of the Passion of Our Lord Jesus Christ, the symbol of resurrection in that he "rose" from the dead. There was also a mysterious empty seat called the Siege Perilous in which none might sit except he who was successful in his quest for the Holy Grail.

In the personality of Arthur is to be found a new form of the ever-recurrent cosmic myth. The prince of Britain is the sun, his knights are the zodiac, and his flashing sword may be the sun's ray with which he fights and vanquishes the dragons of darkness or it may represent the earth's axis. Arthur's Round Table is the universe; the Siege Perilous the throne of the perfect man. In its terrestrial sense, Arthur was the Grand Master of a secret Christian-Masonic brotherhood of philosophic mystics who termed themselves Knights. Arthur received the exalted position of Grand Master of these Knights because he had faithfully accomplished the withdrawal of the sword (spirit) from the anvil of the base metals (his lower nature). As invariably happens, the historical Arthur soon was confused with the allegories and myths of his order until now the two are inseparable. After Arthur's death on the field of Kamblan his Mysteries ceased, and esoterically he was borne away on a black barge, as is so beautifully described by Tennyson in his Morte d'Arthur. The great sword Excalibur was also cast back into the waters of eternity - all of which is a vivid portrayal of the descent of cosmic night at the end of the Day of Universal Manifestation. The body of the historical Arthur was probably interred at Galstonbury Abbey, a building closely identified with the mystic rites of both the Grail and the Arthurian Cycle.

The medieval Rosicrucians were undoubtedly in possession of the true secret of the Arthurian Cycle and the Grail legend, much of their symbolism having been incorporated into that order. Though the most obvious of all keys to the Christos mystery, the Grail legend has received the least consideration.

Hermeticism

INTRODUCTION

My Brothers & Sisters:

With our knowledge of the meaning of the Number Seven, what better time could there be to speak to you about this important point, than at Liber Seven 7.

What makes a person truly great? Is it "academic education"? If you analyze the lives of outstanding people you will notice their ability to stand tall in times of tribulation, you will be struck by their perception to know truth from error, if you knew them you would be disarmed by their humility. You will find they have a natural propensity to know what needs to be done, and the capacity to do it.

These are spiritual rather than academic qualities. And these abilities come from tapping the Fount of Wisdom with lies within us. It is this art that mystics have developed, and which must be one of the goals of every Martinist.

The technique of this art is simple. Let us be sure we understand this. So many people believe that for something to have any value it must be terribly complicated and difficult, and this has lead aspirants to reading endless volumes on "metaphysics" and "new thought" and such like. What usually happens here is that the aspirant ends up with a great amount of intellectual knowledge about things, but they are unable to utilize it. It is because theory and practice are two poles that must be harmonized. Reading all the books about music does not make one a musician!

Our instruction is designed to give just sufficient theoretical knowledge to make the point understandable, and then suggest the practical steps in order to benefit from it. The practical application and the development of your abilities must match and balance your intellectualizations. Never forget this!

Yours in the Work,

LIBER OVERVIEW

In this Liber, we bring you four Lectures dealing with Hermetic Sciences ("Hermetic" refers to the legendary Hermes Trismegistus).* You will learn about Concentration and Meditation, and you will be introduced to the principles of Duality and Polarity. We also offer three Essays for your enlightenment and inspiration. By the way, that is seven articles in Liber Seven!

Concentration

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

I should like to say at the very beginning that there are several types of concentration and meditation and we will consider just one aspect on this occasion.

The type of concentration that we will consider on this occasion is concentration on some mundane desire, physical object or yearning, for the purpose of "materializing" it, usually for our own comfort or success.

A second type of concentration, and the more difficult, is on a mental or spiritual aspiration, devoid of any aspects of selfishness. It is a concentration on spiritual, rather than on sensual things. This form of concentration operates on a vastly higher plane than the first and leaves no feeling of fatigue of any sort, which concentration on sensual things may do. It gradually awakens the dormant spiritual organs in Man.

Now, it is not for me to tell you what your desire should be, other than to point out that it should be legitimate and reasonable. As you have already learned, the mind, like fertile land, will "grow" whatever seed is implanted in it. We all have a certain latitude allowed us by our "free will" and depending on how we use it, we will enjoy the reward of good works, or reap the weeds of our misdeeds.

That person who entertains a specific desire based upon unworthy or improper motives, principles or ideals can succeed in realizing them, just the same as if the motive was noble, useful and exalted, but in the case of the former he works damnation to his own spiritual and mental qualities and destruction to himself for he is following which is called in occultism, the "Left-hand path", that of "black magic", and he shall not come out thence "until he has paid the uttermost farthing" of Karmic debt.

Now regarding the two types of concentration (mundane and spiritual), the underlying principles are the same; but the results differ. The results in the first case are mundane; the second spiritual.

Choose something that you wish to acquire or accomplish. If the desire or the ideal you have decided to hold above all others for realization is worthy, based upon lofty principles and ideals and calculated to ensure the good of others as well as yourself, then fix that idea in mind from now on, unchangeably.

If you really desire to succeed, you must develop the power of concentration to the point where you can fix your attention on one subject, undisturbed by any extraneous thoughts or impressions. (If you have been sincerely practicing the exercises already given you will be well on the way to mastering this ability.)

First you will fix the detail or desire in your mind so that it becomes of paramount importance to you in your waking hours; in doing this you unconsciously visualize it by the power of imagination, that is, you will have a perfect picture of it before your consciousness at all times.

Now note this academic definition of imagination, study it carefully and you will begin to realize something of the inherent and latent power you have: "Imagination is the act, process or power of imagining thought, the creative or constructive power of the mind." This dictionary definition gives a large amount of information on the subject which you are advised to read and study carefully. The imagination exalts, moves, creates and focuses all the units of a given group of facts or experiences into one.

Let us get to the point: with a power for constructive effort and activity like this, which you have within you, there is no reason under the sun why you should not be able to realize your ideal in human experience, if the power is applied. Most of us are prone to let it lay dormant, functioning only in poesy, fancy, dreams and impractical aspirations. The reason we usually fail to utilize it is, that ordinarily we do not know enough about it to put it to work.

The human imagination is exactly like a camera ground glass. The lens focuses the units of the landscape upon it in one concrete picture, but unless a sensitized film is inserted, the picture is not retained or preserved. Similarly, our consciousness, operating as the lens, focuses all the units of sense perception into an image received by our imagination, but unless the mind, sensitized and quickened by concentration, receives the image or visualization for a sufficient length of time to make the impression, no permanent picture is retained. We are all woefully conscious of this. How much we would like to recall in many ways, of many things that we cannot We cannot simply because, lacking concentration at the time, the mind was not sensitized or quickened to receive a sufficient impress of the image.

Psychology has tested this out in many ways. In a crowded city we pass thousands of faces each day, but how many of them can we remember? How many steps has the office building you enter daily? How many windows are there in the building in front of the bus stop you stand at every 'morning? You have seen them every day but you can't answer this question. WHY?

Because none of these things have interested you.

That is the secret of success. There must be an interest, a paramount interest, in the subject in order to give you a sustaining incentive to concentrate upon it.

How does the image of your desire become operative? The key is given in the SONG CELESTIAL, Bhagavad Gita, Chapter 13: "The elements, the conscious life, the mind, the unseen vital force, the nine strange gates of the body, and the five domains of sense: desire, dislike, pleasure, pain and thought, these are all wrought on matter by the Soul."

The principal factor in this quotation is: that all the effects noted are wrought on Matter which, on the mundane plane, is the medium through which largely we have to work. The five domains of sense are apparent. The "nine strange gates" are the nine orifices of the body: two nostrils, two ears, mouth, two mammary or breast orifices, the urethral and the anal orifices. These are the avenues of ingress and egress to and from the body.

As matter is the medium through which our mortal expressions are manifest, and as all the elements of what is called mortal life are "wrought on matter" by a force which we know to be mental, then our course is clear and obvious.

First we must have the definitely chosen object, subject and goal. Second, sufficient interest in it. Third, the power of concentration to hold it fixed in the mind and the imagination. Fourth, the power of imagination itself, developed and quickened into a constructive force.

The sort of concentration required for our present purpose, must be the vigorous, active, constructive kind that will be operative anywhere and under any conditions. So retire to your Oratory or place where you can be free from interruption. See that neither clothing, furniture or distraction causes you the least annoyance, fatigue or irritation. Having relaxed, close your eyes so as to shut out the consciousness of the immediate environment and the thoughts it inevitably causes. Wait until the body is in a state of relative calmness and the brain fairly quiet. Then form as complete a picture in your mind as possible, of your desire. Begin your concentration, not simply contemplating the picture in a passive manner, but by developing every detail of the picture. It makes no difference whether your desire be an abstract theorem or a physical need, develop the picture of it.

Develop the picture as clearly as possible bringing out by your fixed concentration every detail, angle of vision and possibility. When you feel that you have visualized as clearly as it can be made to appear, fix it by holding that visualization in your imagination for the next ten or fifteen minutes, extending the time each day until your entire period of silence approximates from twenty minutes to half an hour.

Do this twice each day. Bring up the picture so obtained the first thing each morning on awakening; first, however, holding the thought of harmony with the world, harmony with God and Nature. Repeat the process at night when retiring.

This process will make the picture a part of your subconsciousness so that it will be ever present, working on matter in the mundane world to ultimately accomplish the materialization of your desire.

You must not conceive the idea that the process outlined here neglects the spiritual aspect. That will be discussed soon. To be of value in mortal life, the spiritual qualities must become active for constructive good; in some instances the processes of effecting that activity are identical.

By the act and process of concentration I have outlined here, you will commence a line of causation that will gradually bring about the conditions created by the details of your visualization in the imagination. This is because your mental and spiritual powers attain a vibratory status that brings all your environment into rapport and harmony with their own, and ultimately creates the very conditions you desire to bring about.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

LECTURE
Meditation

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

Meditation is one of the most important essentials and a fundamental of all spiritual progress. In a preceding lecture you were taught how to shape your desire into a definite visualization. If you have performed this work your desire will now have become a definite, concrete thought form.

Your thought form is not a lifeless image or picture but an organic growth in the invisible world, a living growth. The original desire was the seed. Concentration shaped it upon the ground glass of the imagination which we compared to a camera.

Meditation supplies the power for growth. It quietly and gently, yet continuously, emanates from its source a stream of energy, that is absorbed by the growing thought-form organism, amplifying and expanding it to greater proportions.

The original idea or desire has been termed: the "seed". Everything grows from its seed whether in the visible or invisible worlds. Concentration shapes the thought organism growing forth from that seed, in the soils of the etheric and astral planes. (About which more will be said at the proper time.)

Meditation is really and essentially a function of the subconscious mentalism, and by it we can solve many problems with which the conscious mind (with its many inhibitions due to the excess of environmental impressions) cannot grapple in an isolated manner.

We read: "Meditate upon these things; give thyself wholly to them, that thy profiting may appear to all." (l.Tim 4:15) The importance of this advice is apparent: "meditate upon these things" (for instance, your subject, desire or ideal) "Give thyself wholly to them*,* that thy profiting (the working out in actual manifestation of your desire or ideal) may appear to all."

The Apostolic writer is here, of course, treating of spiritual things, but a reading of the entire chapter quoted will reveal to what extent mundane matters really are spiritual as to their essential basis, and the application, if true in one instance.. is equally true in all matters pertaining to human welfare.

Those of you who read metaphysical literature will not have to do very much outside reading to discover that it is an accepted Canon that everything in the physical or visible world is a counterpart of an archetype in the spiritual or invisible world. The mundane presentment may be, and usually is, only a rough materialization of the archetype.

All the important inventions known to us have had their origin in crude materializations of an original thought-form developed by the human mind from the invisible archetype in the invisible worlds, where developments of civilizations yet to come have been and are being perfected by those who have human evolution in charge.

These thoughts, when understood, will show you why it is so important to develop the specific thought-form of your constructive desire, which, if worthy, should redound not only to your own advantage, but also to that of all your fellow men. And it is true in a far greater sense, that just in the proportion to the unselfishness of your ideal or desire will be the success attending your efforts, since the beings previously referred to as having in charge the progress of human evolution, delight to assist those who delight in assisting others. Human cooperation is but a reflection of the higher and more potent spiritual cooperation.

You were given the four essentials in the process of attainment or progress toward illumination. Can any Brother or Sister recall these? (1st: the definitely chosen object; 2nd: Sufficient interest; 3rd: the power of concentration to hold it fixed in the mind and the imagination; 4th: the power of imagination itself, developed and quickened into a constructive force.) Meditation makes the fifth essential step or factor*,* and adds to the constructive work already underway, the capacity and actuality of growth.

It is meditation that you will now engage in while "in the silence" already referred to. And for practical results, you will soon meditate, not only in the silence, but out of it as well, for you will note that ere long, with no apparent effort of your own, thoughts definitely related to the subject of your serious meditation, will present themselves, even during the hours of occupation when the conscious mind is normally focused upon the ordinary details of everyday activity.

This is because the subconscious mentalism has taken hold of the subject and seeks to bring or force its development to the surface at every opportunity. Therefore strange experiences will be noted wherein thoughts will flit through the consciousness relating to serious spiritual subjects, even intruding on ordinary business affairs of the day. These thoughts will be found precious. They will develop instantly and must be recorded immediately for they will never recur in the same form again. It is a rule in occult science to record, either verbally or by writing, every thought that comes to an aspirant in this manner. If you wait until a convenient time, grope and search and ponder as you may, you will be unable to recall the specific thought in its original form and clarity. Put it down on a scrap of paper, memo pad or other convenience, or speak it aloud. The physical effort to speak it, or write it, will impress it on your memory. But if you fail to record it in some way, it will be lost to you forever. You may later on get other thoughts relating to the same subject but never again the original inspiration for that is what it really is.

There is an ethical factor involved in your progressional work which I must not fail to point out to you. There is what is known, especially in Hermetic science, as the Law of Polarity. Now while you are undergoing a specific cultural process toward the realization of a given desire or ideal, there is a certain amount of danger of becoming polarized toward all else. This is as fatal to true development as are the many abnormal practices enjoined upon students by alleged "occult societies", "Secret Orders" and cults whose name is legion. Those who do become polarized in this manner are known to the world as "Monomaniacs" or persons of one idea, fad, habit or penchant. Such persons are to be pitied, for ere long, the world about them soon discredits even what they actually may know of real value.

This can be avoided by one simple procedure: Seek and cultivate close association with successful and balanced people. This does not mean to shun the unfortunate or less successful people. Your duty to them and to all others remains the same. But you can not help them, unless you are up to normalcy and the best attainable degree of efficiency.

The explanation of this advice is simple: Successful people, in any department of life's activities, are those who in one way or another, have lived constructively. There may be much to criticize in a given individual's career as known to you or others; nevertheless, the elements of constructive energy are prominently active in the aura of that person, and by association, without ever allowing the purpose or your intent to become known to them, your own aura will receive according to the law of opposites, that which it may lack, or of which it may be depleted for a time.

On first thought, this advice may appear to you as an encouragement toward selfishness. Selfishness consists in concentrating solely on one's own desires to the exclusion of all else and regardless of the rights, comforts, needs, or happiness of others. But if your desire is worthy and it includes the essential element of thoughtfulness for others, and will result in placing you in a condition and position to be useful and helpful to others, then it is perfectly legitimate for you to use every possible means that will aid you in ATTAINING. But mark well: when you HAVE attained your desire and even while you are attaining it, do not ignore the claims of those who, like yourself, may be struggling along the Path and need what you can do for them, as much as you need what others can do for you.

In other words: we have brought the whole matter to the great requisite of all spiritual development and progress: Service. There is no higher phase of spiritual development or culture than Personal Service. Jesus said: "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." (John 5:17) and all the teachings of the Master were based on the fundamental of service and none of us are greater than our Master nor can we expect to perform the works that he did, in accordance with the assurance from him of our power to do so, unless we are willing to and DO conform to the provisions he made and the rules of life by which he was guided.

The "Master" of your Lodge is the Master-servant, and the Grand Master of our Order is the Grand Master-servant, all work is service of some sort and all work is noble. The two words, "Work" and "Service" must be the keywords of every aspirant to progress on the Path.

Meditation is truly the factor that will make for the growth of your thought-form. Concentration and imagination have sown the seed and developed the picture. Meditation will reveal the details of the picture and cause the thought-form to grow. Take any picture you please, a photograph or a color print. Look at it. The first impression gives you an idea of the whole picture. It may be pleasant or otherwise. Concentrate upon it and it will impress a permanent image upon your memory that may be recalled at any time. It will give you a visualization that the imagination can dwell upon at any time you desire.

Now meditate upon it. Patanjali defines meditation as "an unbroken flow of knowledge on a particular object". Little by little details are revealed that escaped even your most searching glance or scrutiny. Ideas of perspective, distance, dimension, utility and other values will stand out as your meditation continues. The subconscious mentalism will react upon it giving you ideas which the ordinary concentration would never have evoked.

Meditation is a process known and practiced by the ancients and valued by them to the point of making it a ritualistic custom. Indeed certain church rituals and those used in ceremonial magic precipitate one form of meditation because everything done in a magical ceremonial is intended to emphasize the central idea, or seed-thought, of the ritual. Concentration collects, at a center or focus, units of power. Thus, the ritual assists the Operator to focus his attention and concentrate the units of mental force, just as a convex lens will focus the rays of the sun and concentrate them to a point where they will kindle a piece of wood or paper (which does not occur when the rays pass through a pane of glass).

In Genesis 24:63, we find that Isaac went out to meditate in the field at eventide. This is a very appropriate time for meditation, when the mentalism is not disturbed by the activities of the day and the Patriarch well knew the value of isolation, for he went into the fields where presumably he could, and would, be alone. There he lifted up his eyes.

For the same reason, it has ever been an accepted practice for those who adopt the monastic life; and definite hours of the day, especially after sundown, are set apart and devoted to it. The result is that some of the finest revelations of illuminism have come down to us from those who have adopted the meditative life. But what the world needs now is not so much devotees of seclusion, as devotees of active service, in and for the world that needs them so badly.

Every aspirant can have as much seclusion as he desires without adopting any abnormal means of attaining or securing it. Your Oratory is the perfect place for those who have the opportunity to set one up. Jesus, when in the midst of his work, went apart into the "mountain" to pray. Geographically, there was no mountain existent in some of the places mentioned. He went into the mountain by retiring within himself. That is, he drew a "cloak" around himself and withdrew from the consciousness of the outer world wherever he might happen to be, and functioned mentally in the quiet and seclusion of the inner mental and spiritual world.

Every aspirant can do likewise and with a little experiment, he will find that it is possible to do so even in the busy office, or other place of industry, without attracting attention or causing comment. This is what is meant, in one sense, by being in the world but not of it. And just to the extent that we avail ourselves of this possibility of withdrawing from the outer world, will we find it possible to obtain a clearer view of our problems and solve many difficulties that otherwise seem insuperable. Study the last lecture in Liber 5 in conjunction with this one and begin the practical work. You will then be prepared for the further instruction to be presented in Libers 7 & 8.

LECTURE
The Principle of Duality

My Brothers & Sisters: Greetings!

In the porch of King Solomon's Temple, there stood two Pillars. You can read about them in I Kings, Chap. 7. The Pillar on the right was called Jachin, (pronounced Yah-kin) while the one on the left was called Boaz. Together they symbolized Strength & Weakness, the two fundamental opposite qualities.

These two Pillars constituted a monumental illustration of the antimony, or opposites, upon which depends the great Law of Creation. While these Pillars have become almost wholly associated with King Solomon's Temple, they are in fact much older. Their real significance is symbolic and it is in this symbolic sense that they have a very great importance in Martinism.

You have probably heard that in the Temples of esoteric Orders, these two Pillars are depicted and they are generally of two different colors. Usually they are either black & white, taking this symbolism from night & day, or they may be black & red, depicting the opposites: activity and passivity. The important point is that while they may be of two different colors, they are both made from the same material or substance.

The two Columns, then, known as Jachin & Boaz, represent the Universal Duality of Creation. Their opposite colors point to the great Law Of Duality, the law which supports the creation and without which creation could not exist. While they may be of different colors, they are made of the same material. They are identical, but they appear to be different.

All created things, and this means all things that we can perceive and conceive, are dual in character. By this is meant that each force or principle, presents itself to the mind of the observer as two different and distinct things which are in absolute opposition.

So strongly marked is this duality of appearance that most people accept each of the two aspects as being two separate and independent things.

The first concern of the man who seeks reintegration and reconciliation with the First Cause, is to see through the illusion of these oppositions and not only understand the inherent unity of each pair of opposites, but also to apply this knowledge and this understanding in order to master the duality of his emotions and of his personality. Like Nature, Man is made of a number of apparently opposed instincts and qualities. The Martinist, however, is pursuing Self-knowledge. This can only, come from self-inquiry and must lead to Unification. The qualified Associate of our Order has always been known as a Philosopher of Unity for he remembers the fruitful symbol of the three luminaries, separate lights from one Light. To have any practical value, the principles we study as Martinists must become tools with which to work on ourselves.

Remember that in the created world, duality exists. No condition is separate or independent or existing alone. "Drought" and "Flood" are not two disconnected events, they are the two opposite aspects of rainfall. Another example: "heavy" and "light" are two opposite conditions of weight. There could be no such condition as "heavy" if there were not one known as "light". We must learn to harmonize extremes by finding the third or middle term.

When speaking about the Oppositions that are manifest in life and in the whole of Nature, it must be kept clearly in mind that, like the Pillars that flank the entrance of the porch, which are identical in substance and composition, but appear to be different because of their color, all oppositions are only apparent and are in fact different aspects of the same thing, or shall we say, opposed polarities of the same thing.

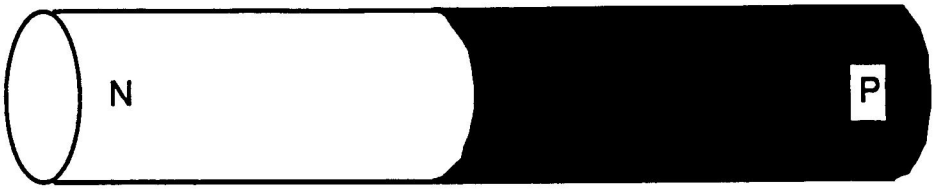
Let us turn to the method of analogy to illustrate this.

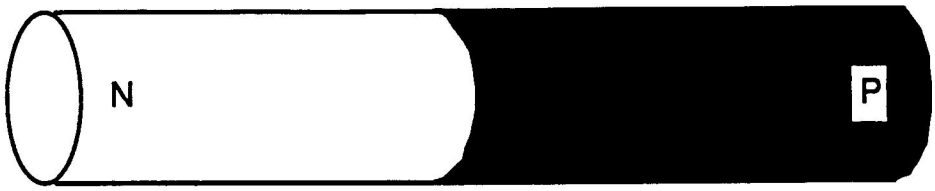


Let us think of a straight magnet. It is a bar of metal through which circulates a force called magnetism. One force, magnetism, permeates this bar of metal. According to which extremity we test, however, we find that this force manifests in two distinctive ways. This is the phenomenon of Polarity and the two aspects of this one force are classified as 'positive' and 'negative'.

Now let us apply this image to any pair of opposites, for this example let us use the pair Beauty & Ugliness. These antitheses could be said to be the two extremities of one principle called Endowment. (For the sake of this argument we will ignore the debatable and relative character of Beauty as we generally understand it). We can say that on one hand we have things endowed with absolute beauty; and on the other, things utterly lacking this quality and therefore absolutely ugly.

We can draw from this example the understanding that the antitheses of life are the two opposite poles of integral forces, laws or principles.

We will now examine our next all-important point: the relativity of all polarities. Let us return to our magnetized bar of iron.



We say that one extremity is 'positive' and on our diagram we have shaded this side. The other side is designated 'negative' and has been left white. Now if we were to cut off from, say, the positive end, a piece of metal about one inch long, we would immediately create a new magnet. The face of the first magnet, the longer one, is positive. The face of the smaller magnet just cut off, would become the negative pole of the magnet one inch long. Now the smaller magnet was cut off from the end of the larger magnet which was designated 'positive'. The question is: Where did the negative aspect of the smaller magnet come from?

PONDER THIS BEFORE PROCEEDING TO READ FURTHER!!!

Prior to the sawing operation, the point where the bar was to be cut had, within itself, a latent negative aspect existing in the positive end. At the point of the cut there was a positive excess of polarity, that is, a strong positive polarity that was dwarfing a minute negative polarity.

The lesson to be learned from this example is that the forces that manifest as antitheses are made of a mixture of these opposite tendencies varying between the abstract conceptions of absolute positive and absolute negative character.

Brethren, you must give your total attention to this point: In the created world, nothing is absolutely one thing or the other. Nothing is absolutely beautiful or absolutely ugly. Nothing is absolutely hot or absolutely cold. No one is absolutely good or absolutely bad; or absolutely wise or absolutely foolish, etc. etc. The absolute condition exists only in God. In the created world, relativity is very much in the picture. Let us think of temperature, for instance, where on the thermometer does cold end and hot begin? Likewise, where is the demarcation between long and short, between fast and slow?

Summarizing the above discussion, we see:

1) • In the created world, everything is relative.
• The Absolute condition does not exist in the created world.
• The Absolute condition exists only in God.

2) We should not take an extreme position. To do this places us in an unbalanced position. We should seek the "middle path" that passes between the two extremes, thus reconciling them.

3) Polarity is manifested by the Number 2, Two aspects of One Force.

4) We should be balancing opposites: We are referring here principally to inner resolutions, personal actions what is right & wrong; fortunate & unfortunate; etc. These are subjective decisions which each person must make for himself.

Brothers & Sisters: Our Martinist Order is not the only school to use the symbolism of the Columns. They have been, and still are, widely used in other schools and Orders. They are sometimes made to support an arch which symbolizes the uniting element. In some Martinist Temples that use the symbolism of the arch, the arch bears a golden Lyre to emphasize that the unity of the structure can only be realized by harmonizing the opposites.

To us however, the two Columns represent more particularly the 2 Qabalistic Pillars of Mercy and Seventy. The Pillar of Mercy has as its head the Sephirah Chokmah, which means absolute Wisdom. (Please refer to the Tree of Life diagram in the last lecture. Chokmah is Sephirah #2). The Pillar of Severity has as its head Binah, Sephirah #3, which means absolute Understanding. (Notice these are in the Upper World, before the "days of creation".) At the top of the central Pillar, the Pillar of Equilibrium, stands Kether, the absolute equilibrant or Crown. These three Sephiroth together are sometimes known as the Deity. They correspond to the Martinist World of God. More will be said on this at the proper time. In the meanwhile, think on these things, Brethren. THINK ON THESE THINGS.

LECTURE
The Principle of Polarity

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

Let us continue to develop our understanding of the great law of polarity. In 2 Cor. 4:8, we read: "We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed we are perplexed, but not in despair." There is a peculiar appropriateness in this particular statement of the Apostle Paul, for it applies with equal vigor to the many problems confronting the sincere student at the present day, even as it has to those students in intervening ages.

These problems relate for the most part to the apparent inconsistencies and incongruities between the seemingly visible facts presented by Nature, and the ethical teachings of philosophy and science. I hope to be able to show you in my address tonight, that these incongruities and inconsistencies are, after all, only apparent, in other words, not real, and that paradoxes may be reconciled through understanding that what usually seem so at variance with each other, are simply opposite polarities of the same thing.

Likes repel and unlikes attract. This is a law of electricity and magnetism that applies throughout all of Nature's domain. Because of it we have the phenomenon of cohesion, without which there would be no combination of ions and electrons into atoms, and atoms into molecules and masses. Therefore, the existence of two qualities, apparently unlike in any given state of Matter, and in Spirit as well, is absolutely necessary in order to make possible any form of tangible expression whatsoever. The principle of polarity gives us two fundamental and most important Laws, which may be applied with equal logic to every phase of manifest existence in all the four divisions of the Life Stream, and in worlds visible and invisible:

Everything manifest has two sides, phases, aspects, or extremities.

These phases will be found to be identical in nature, differing only in degree.

Thus, we speak of Attraction & Repulsion, Hot & Cold, Love & Hate, Hard & Soft, Weak & Strong, Magnetic & un-Magnetic, etc.

Yet the mercury in the thermometer tube registers all degrees within the same tube. As it drops from what we call "hot" to cooler, it merely registers degrees of less heat; as it rises, it merely registers degrees of less cold. Again, as it rises it indicates more heat, and as it drops it indicates just as unfailingly more cold. But nothing indicates just where heat or cold begins.

This illustration can be applied with equal clarity to any of the comparisons that might be offered. The difference between extremes or what are commonly called "both sides" to a matter, is a difference only of degrees of one extreme or side, more than the other, and both will be found on analysis to be identical in nature.

This fact proves the truth of the duality of all things manifest, and (so far as we can logically conceive) unmanifest. "Everything is dual; everything has poles; everything has its pairs of opposites; and like and unlike are the same; opposites are identical in nature, but different in degree; extremes meet; all truths are but half-truths; all paradoxes may be reconciled", says the Hermetic teaching.

In other words, the Hermetic teaching is that a seeming difference between things apparently diametrically opposed to each other, is a difference in degree only. Thesis and antithesis are identical in nature but different in degree, and this Principle of Polarity effects the "universal reconciliation of opposites."

We have met this truth before in our studies, but perhaps we have never before realized the Law underlying it. Thus we have often spoken of Spirit and Matter as though they were two completely different things, when in fact matter is crystallized Spirit and/or Spirit is sublimated or etherealized matter. In the same way I hope you can now see that the One and the Many are identical, differing only in the degree of manifestation.

In the illustration of the thermometer given earlier, in the range of degrees between the extreme hot and the extreme cold, we note such points as "warm, temperate, freezing and zero." These are simply descriptive names, or gauges, or indicators. So too in Love & Hate, there is no absolute line of demarcation and it is difficult to tell where one phase merges into the other. There too, we find gauges or indicators in terms such as "like, favor, dislike."

But while extremes of a given state are identical in nature, they can never change their nature or class. Thus red, of the spectrum scale, can never become east; nor heat become the note C of the musical scale.

These extremes and comparisons give us a clue to transmutation. It is easily within our scope of comprehension, in fact everyday knowledge, that dull things can be made sharp, cold things hot, weak and fearsome things strong and courageous, timid bold, etc.

This transmutation is simply a process of raising or lowering the vibrations. Thus: the hot substance becomes cooled or even cold, by lowering the vibrations, and a red hot metal attains the violet hues of incandescence by raising the vibrations. These illustrations are all on the physical plane; you may well ask: "Why is it then, that if given extremes cannot change their natures, that it is possible to transmute baser metals of the mineral kingdom, such as lead, into silver or gold?"

Such a question is perfectly logical. The answer is that transmutations in the instance given have all related to the physical plane alone, with the transmutative processes accomplished on the physical plane. But base metals have been raised to higher, the operation requiring not only processes on the physical plane, but elsewhere, and that elsewhere is the Mental Plane.

On the Physical Plane we can deal easily with the mass and the molecule, with more difficulty with the atom, and with great difficulty with the electron and the ion. But on the Mental Plane we can deal easily with the ion and the electron, but more difficultly with the molecule and mass. We know that Matter and Spirit are the same in essential nature and that all substance is homogeneous, and we know vastly more today about the nature of the omnipresent electric energy than formerly, but we still have much to learn.

The point is, that in knowing these essentials, both on the physical plane and the mental plane, we must attain to one thing more: The Key to all knowledge, and the ability to understand Omneity, for in studying to know Omneity, we are studying, incidentally, ourselves! Until we know ourselves, as we are repeatedly admonished in the Old Charges to do, we shall never find what we seek outside of us. The knowledge of the true nature of Omneity lies within us. This is something personal to each aspirant, and something which, when he finds it, he will not reveal it, because it is impossible to do so. Such sublime knowledge is impossible to verbalize.

It is important that we keep in mind the relative correspondences between extremities or poles. Action is positive to Inaction; Courage is positive to Timidity or Fear; Love is positive to Hate; Hot is positive to Cold. In effecting the process of transmutation, the first step is polarization.

Here is an example: in the pair of opposites Love & Hate, the student is instructed to cultivate dispassion, i.e. neither love nor hatred. Neither active nor inactive, but passive. When the student has truly attained a reasonable degree of genuine dispassion, he will then be able to begin the second stage of the transmutative process, that of raising the vibrations in a given instance to the requisite degree. And it should be noted, the process will always be one of raising vibrations rather than lowering them, which can be done with far greater facility. One makes for progress; the other is retrogression.

And while we may be able by careful study of physical aspects, to employ proper methods for procedure on the physical plane, a correct knowledge of the manipulations of mass and molecule; we shall, by attainment of dispassion, be able to operate on the mental plane, which is far more important and powerful.

The Initiate who has learned how to become an operator on the mental plane, will also acquire the power to induce similar vibrations in the mental forces of another human soul, and is thus armed with a power that no man-made law can control, but which is safely vested only in those who know how to use it rightly by virtue of the struggle to attain it.

We are told in Matt. 19:26 that with God all things are possible. True occult science teaches that every Ego is a God in-the-making. Paul, the Initiate, say: "know ye not that ye are Gods??" and again (Cor. 3:16) "know ye not that ye are the Temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you." Still further we are told (I Cor.4: 19) "What? Know ye not that your body is the Temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?"

It was the knowledge of the tremendous power and potency of the forces operative on the mental plane that made the apostolic writer say (I Cor. 2:7) "But we speak the Wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory." (11-12) "For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him. Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the Spirit which is of God, that we might know the things which are freely given us of God."

All students of genuine esoteric mystical Orders are instructed that, in his inquiries and reachings into the deep things of Nature, he should learn first to know what things he has within himself, 'before seeking into foreign matters outside of himself.[*] We have already a quotation on this subject in a previous lecture from our V::: M::: Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin. It is by the Divine Power within yourself to first heal yourself, and transmute your own soul that you may go on prosperously and seek with good success the mysteries and wonders of God in all natural things.

To do this, first take account of your personal stock, as it were. Make a list of all your personal attributes, temperament, inclinations, desires, ambitions, tastes, et cetera. Against each item write Positive or Negative according to the character of your response to the item in question.

Then begin the process of equilibration of all individual characteristics, by polarizing, or reversing the poles or extremities of each item. This is a process that may be collective in its application, inasmuch as several attributes may be grouped under one classification.

This is the first step toward finding what things you have within yourself, and having found them, the necessary further efforts will be apparent. When the process of polarization is well under way to accomplishment, then begin to raise the personal vibrations higher in each case as may be required, learning to respond to the higher vibrations called for, by the highest or ultimate aspect of any given attribute under consideration.

This is the process of healing one's own soul, or transmuting one's own soul, for by this process and the consequent mental attitude involved, one soon begins to develop the god-power within to a hitherto unrealized degree. No instant miracle will be accomplished, but intense satisfaction will ensue from the gradual realization of greater power, greater ability, greater vision, and the dawn of illumination.

Each of us has this power within. It may have lain dormant through your life thus far, but the least stimulus will awaken it into activity and begin your inner regeneration. This is the practice which each of you should begin at once. It is preparatory to the more detailed, scientific and individualized requirements of personal development of the higher psychical centers in our esoteric work. Your progress is in your own hands. I can only remind you of something you have been told many times: teachers can only point the way. The rest is up to you.

It is by the projection of the higher mental vibrations that we polarize the lower ones in a friend who has the "blues" or who for some reason is downcast. We may not realize the operation involved, but from long, common practice, we make it oftentimes effective. The same operation on more carefully planned lines is used, first inwardly on ourselves, then outwardly on others, to the welfare and assistance of those who need our ministrations.

Brothers and Sisters: In this lecture you have been given both scientific and philosophical facts. These constitute clues to a far more important consideration. That consideration is the spiritual aspect. Your work and your duty in connection with the information given you tonight, is to take the facts presented and meditate upon them from the purely spiritual standpoint. To the extent that you can develop them as spiritual factors will this lecture take on specific importance for you.

It may be interesting to apply these truths and facts to objectively material conditions and incidents, but that will constitute merely a psycho-intellectual development. The truly spiritual development is the real objective. The association of the ideas to be gained from this lecture with purely spiritual factors and concepts, especially of a personal nature, will mean true progress.

Concentrate upon the facts presented until you can interpret them in terms of spiritual values and 'you will have accomplished a most important task and one that will mark your actual progress on the Path to Attainment. When you can so interpret them, apply them to yourself personally and you will come to a realization of your personal values and learn where you fall short of measuring up to the requisite spiritual assets to enable you to make greater progress in the future.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

Three Steps in Finding Yourself

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

What would be life's most wonderful experience to you? What is the most exciting and satisfying experience that you can imagine for yourself? Getting a new house in the country? Perhaps a new job? Having a wonderful vacation? Perhaps being married or divorced? Whatever your answer, isn't it that these things have prominence on the horizon of your thoughts because you believe that their achievement will help you to find yourself? What is it that compels people to sail in little ships across oceans, to scale high mountain peaks or to set out into far off outer space to the moon? Essentially, it is man's ceaseless longing to know himself, to find that which makes life take on meaning. Of course, the average person like you and me doesn't do the spectacular in this respect, but we do devote a great deal of our lives to finding the right job, to find the right soul-mate, to find the right environment, to get our chance or lucky break. But we find that none of these things satisfy or even continue for the individual, because our chief goal is to find ourselves. And when we find ourselves, the world comes looking for us, right opportunities come our way, and things begin to work for our good. When we find ourselves, we find that spark that enables us to turn to good account everything that comes into our lives. In a time when the greatest problems that beset man are caused by people who are lost in the maze of their own negative thinking, we see that we can never create the better world that we all want until we promote the ideal of individual self-discovery.

I would like to talk to you tonight about three important steps that may be taken in finding yourself. This is an age of specialization, and in our highly advanced civilization it would seem that we don't have the time or the means to do all the things that should be done. So, the news of the day is digested for us by commentators, books are abridged and summarized for us so we hardly have to think for ourselves. We can simply subscribe to opinions already thought out. And in the field of religion, spiritual philosophies come in conveniently packaged form so that we can join a church accept our convictions custom made, and even pay the clergyman to settle up with God for us. The First Step, then, in finding ourselves, is to think for ourselves. The most profound Truth in all the facts concerning mankind consists of the fact that God gave man complete, unchallengeable right and prerogative over one thing, our own mind. By the simple process of exercising this prerogative over your own mind, you may lift yourself to great heights of achievement. Exercise of this prerogative is perhaps the only approach to the status known as genius. After all, a genius is simply one who as taken full possession of his mind and directed it to objectives of his own choosing, without permitting outside influences to discourage or mislead him. Thomas Edison learned to think his own thoughts. In his exercise of this privilege he uncovered and revealed to mankind more useful inventions than have been revealed during the entire period of civilization up to his time. He accomplished the things he did because he refused to accept the edict of a teacher who said he had an addled mind and couldn't take schooling. He took complete possession of that mind. Napoleon Hill once said, "When the ties that bind the human-mind are broken and a man is introduced to himself, the real self that has no limitations, I fancy the gates of Hell will shake with fear and the bells of Heaven ring with joy." And I say Amen to that.

Secondly, I suggest you work to create for yourself. Man is a creative creature, created in the image and likeness of the great Creative Genius that has brought forth all the wonders of the Universe. Man has instincts that long to create, that must create. And, again, in our age of specialization there is little necessity to create. In an interesting book of a few years ago, The Amazing Crusoes of Lonesome Lake, the hardy and lovable pioneer said of himself, "In that desolate and wild region we had nothing in the way of conveniences or equipment. All we had was a lot of sheer necessity." This is what we lack, sheer necessity. That is why we should never judge by appearances and say, "Oh, what a pity" when a child has to grow up in seeming poverty and hard times, and is forced to do a lot of things that most children do not do. Because faced with the overwhelming necessity, he may release his creative talents and thus be blessed with great inward peace and outward achievement Hal Boyle recently wrote, "It is better to write one poor poem than to memorize Shakespeare. It is better to play a musical saw yourself than merely be able to identify every melody in Beethoven. To own the smallest talent is greater than to be a cultural hanger-on." In a time when retirement at ever earlier ages is the growing trend, some of the greatest problems that have ever faced man lie before us in adjusting ourselves to leisure time.

I remember Grandma Moses started painting, without instruction, at age 78, and ultimately went on to become an American legend. A man who allows his work to become automatic and does not supplement it with some creative occupation or hobby or field of service, is a man who is walking on dangerous ground. Not only does he deny himself a means of joy and fulfillment when he is working, but he is walking into a terrible void beyond return. You can go a long way toward the happy experience of finding yourself through creative things. Don't frustrate your creative impulse. Don't let yourself be satisfied merely to appreciate the creative work of others. Resolve to sing, or play, or paint, or build, or carve, or sew for yourself.

Finally, and perhaps most importantly as a step in finding yourself, seek truth for yourself. Man's heart is ever restless until it finds repose in God. It is this that leads a man to seek out a religious philosophy, to pray, to take part in spiritual organizations. The trouble is, most people do not go far enough in finding God. Most people have fallen victim to the subtle religious propaganda that joining a church is finding God, or giving intellectual assent to a particular creed is finding God, or the emotional acceptance of Jesus Christ as his personal Saviour is finding God. In fact, we never find God until we find ourselves. And we never find ourselves until we search out our inmost self, dig within the mind and heart, and plumb the depths of the richest mine in the world. Our problem is that we just have not dug deeply enough. We have become discouraged and thus have sold ourselves out. We have allowed ourselves to get into positions where our entire spiritual life is in the hands of so-called "professionals." In this relationship we have little or no access to God ourselves. The clergy intercedes for us, the church becomes the worshiping medium and provides the way for our "salvation". And (you may be shocked about this) in what I call the hideous dogma of the vicarious atonement. Jesus Christ, in the popular propaganda atones for all our sins, and we are denied the joyous privilege, and it is a joy because overcoming is the greatest source of satisfaction in life, we are denied the joyous privilege of working out our own salvation.

In the futile rationalizations of day to day existence, man not only tends to lose himself, but he loses the means of finding his true personality, his true relationship to God. William Butler Yeats said "we have turned the table of values upside down and believe that the root of reality is not in the center, but somewhere in the whirling circumference." The "whirling circumference" refers to the material world of creature comforts. No one will deny that these things are important, but when things and creature comforts become the end, instead of the means to the end of finding ourselves in God, then we lose our freedom. So when Jesus said, "Enter into the inner chamber and close the door and pray to the Father in secret," he understood the tendency of circumference living. He .knew we must get into the center of our being, become God-centered, integrated, to become aware of the depth of us. We need to take the time occasionally to go apart. It is fine to pray in church, it is fine to sit in a worship service, this is a marvelous atmosphere. But take this atmosphere with you and go alone somewhere and be still and plumb the depths of your inmost self because you can only touch reality or touch God alone. And it is in this inward search for yourself that you will begin to make the most wonderful discovery, and to have life's most wonderful experience, that of really knowing yourself.

Facing the New Frontier

"Man, know thyself." These simple but profound words were the first of seven wise sayings inscribed on the Temple of Apollo at Delphi. Man has always been an inquisitive being, but his inquisitiveness has pertained mostly to things rather than to himself. Man has climbed the highest mountains, crossed the plains of the wilderness, risen out of the earth's atmosphere, and explored the frontiers of electronics, philosophy, astronomy, biochemistry, and so many other areas. I sometimes wonder whether the explorers and men of research are impelled entirely by inquisitiveness, or whether there might be a certain degree of escapism in the effort. It was said of old, "The heart is ever restless until it find repose in God." Failing to conquer the world within, to a great extent man s drive across the plains has been a restless drive, a kind of attempt to find in the world what one can only find in himself.

There is a new frontier: the world within every person. How long can we put off facing this frontier: the charting of the wilderness of our own mind, the conquest of self, the discovery of the soul, the hidden powers of the indwelling Spirit? What tremendous untapped resources lie within each one of us? What revelations lie ahead for those who truly seek to know themselves as spiritual beings?

The ancient command, "Know thyself," is an eternal call of the soul of man. It is a sad thing that most people wait until they are ancient themselves before they really take it seriously. When we recognize the Importance of the frontier of the mind and the soul, we are conscious of an inner potential that is greater than that revealed by all previous experience. In J. M. Barrie's interesting play, The Admirable Crichton, we have portrayed for us a man who served as a butler and was proud of his place, as such. He had never had much or done much in the world about him, but he had pushed back the unconquered frontiers of the world within, and thus was receptive to hidden reserves of inspiration and strength. So, when thrown on a desert island, with the well-being of his master s family dependent on his ingenuity and leadership, the butler became the master of the situation and took complete charge of the group. When put to the test, those who had everything in the worldly sense had nothing in the inner sense. And he who had little of worldly worth, but had attained a consciousness of his inner depth, became the leader of all.

How easy it is to become lost in the wilderness of despair and despondency when one has not previously charted the inner resources of one's mind. Faced by tragedy, loss, hardship, or injustice, we are so easily bogged down in the miry marshes of self-pity and helplessness. In Charles Fillmore's interesting Metaphysical Dictionary the word "wilderness" means "a multitude of undisciplined thoughts." Moses, in leading the children of Israel (man's spiritual nature) out of bondage to the intellect, into the "promised land" of spiritual consciousness, goes in circles for forty years in the wilderness, during which time all errant thoughts are being brought into captivity through a knowledge of Divine law. So, the wanderings of the children of Israel and the leadership 'of Moses have a metaphysical counterpart in terms of our own experience.

In the first chapter of Mark, we are told that even Jesus had this inner frontier to cross. It is said, "Jesus was led by the Spirit into the wilderness where for forty days He was tempted." Now, we might ask, "Led by the Spirit into temptation?" No. He was led into the wilderness of mind to gain the victory.

Many are the times when we go on to outward attainment and success, while allowing a large wilderness area of undisciplined thoughts to remain within. Of course, this always spells trouble in the long run. A man of considerable means who, retired, is living in frustration and despondency, sits on the veranda on a sunny afternoon as the gentle and refreshing breezes stir the leaves. He says, 'See the way the shadows chase themselves around under those trees? That is one of the few things which gives me comfort. They did it just like that under those same trees when I was a boy, and when I had a good time living." The trouble with this man is that shadows are chasing themselves around in his mind. He has become lost in the wilderness of his own undeveloped inner life. His need is to face this frontier, to launch forth to spend his time in that wilderness and to put the satanic influence of negative thoughts in their place. To probe the depths of himself means inner prayer and meditation.

It is unfortunate, but true, that a simple acceptance of religion or the joining of a church does not necessarily launch us across the new frontier into the conquest of our inner wilderness. This is a confusion that is sometimes foisted on us by the propaganda of religious institutions. I love this thought by Manly P. Hall in his book, The Mystical Christ: "We have been given a beautiful teaching, to which the better parts of our natures instinctively aspire. As never before, we need to live and to understand the original Christian code. We must cleanse our minds of the tendency to associate Jesus teachings with the false concepts that have circulated in His name." He then goes on to tell the story of a man who came to him seeking spiritual help, a man who was the picture of piety. He had convinced himself that he was a paragon of Christian virtue, and at the same time he was devoured by hate. He. loved everyone in general and hated everyone in particular. He suffered, and retaliated by making others suffer. And yet, he would have been highly insulted if anyone had suggested that he was not a fine Christian gentleman. He is typical of the incredible inconsistency of much of our Christianity. He constantly complained about an unprincipled world and yet he was without any real principle himself.

Crossing the frontier within ourselves, one important task we have is to find the Divinity of our own innate person, to find the Christ in ourselves. Christianity is a vital influence in our lives, but only to the degree that we find our way through the maze of our own negative thinking to the source of our abundant living, the Divinity within us. Of course, "finding" the Christ is a erroneous idea because the Christ isn't lost; the Christ is our greater self. Actually, it is we in human thought who are lost.

Paul tells of this inner perfection within the outer form. He refers to "the mystery which hath been hid for ages and generations; but now hath it been manifested to His saints, which is Christ in you, the hope of glory." This is probably the greatest statement in the Bible, which we need very much to understand: "Christ in you, the hope of glory." "Christ" refers to the Divine dimension of yourself. "The hope of glory" is the hope of righteousness, the hope of overcoming, the Hope of finding any kind of meaning or purpose or effectiveness in life.

In II Corinthians, the thirteenth chapter, Paul says: "Examine yourself, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates?" Now, he is using this "Jesus Christ" in a rather interesting way, because he is not speaking of Jesus as being in you, but what he calls, "the Jesus Christ consciousness," a level of awareness which he simply identifies as that being revealed by Jesus. He tells us to examine our inner selves to cross the inner frontiers, and to see if we can't find within ourselves this Divine level, this pattern of Divine sonship. And he unequivocally states that this Christ, or Divinity, is in us, "except ye be reprobates." The word "reprobate" means, among other things, "to disapprove with strong dislike; to refuse to sanction; to reject; to abandon as helplessly wicked." In other words, as long as man disapproves of his own inner self, as long as he has a strong dislike for the depth of himself and refuses to recognize its omnipresence and guidance, then his own man-made reprobate state of mind will remain the one and only barrier that keeps the Divine level of himself in a state of inertia.

So, the challenge is to launch into this wilderness of mind, to conquer this reprobate state of consciousness, that we may come to know and to experience the inner power of the Christ

The Upward Fall of Man

Every philosophy has a key idea, a fundamental concept from which all others evolve. In what we call this new insight in Truth, there is a need for a brief glimpse at the stories of the Creation and the Garden of Eden, found in Genesis.

A child could relate the stories simply: God created the world in seven days, then He created man and woman, who sinned by eating of the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil. God thereupon drove the pair out of the Garden, condemning them to live perpetually by pain and the sweat of their brows because of their original sin. Once a youngster in Sunday school drew a picture of a large limousine with a young couple in the back seat being driven by a man with a long, white beard. When asked to interpret it, the child said it was God driving Adam and Eve out of the Garden. This explanation makes just about as much sense as the story usually does, to many.

The first three chapters of the book of Genesis relate not one but two Creations, or two versions of the Creation. The confusion has arisen from telling it as one continuous story, leading to the doctrine of the Fall of Man and the need or Redemption, on which Judaism and Christianity are based. In this tradition, because Adam and Eve were said to have sinned in succumbing to the suggestion of the Serpent in the Garden to eat an apple from the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil, the process of sexual reproduction was to be held evil for all time. Thus are all men born in sin, and according to the Christian tradition, they are redeemed only by the saving grace of Jesus Christ. It is an interesting and seemingly logical concept, but it is one that has left mankind writhing in a constancy of guilt and sin and unworthiness. The story is in error, and its tradition has led to all sorts of false and damaging conclusions.

To reiterate, there are two stories of Creation. The first chapter of Genesis represents the involution of the Creation of Man. The second chapter represents the evolution, or the unfoldment of hidden inner potential. Before a thing can evolve there must be something involved. "First the blade and then the ear, then the full corn shall appear." The entire, fullsome result exists within the seed right from the beginning; it is involved, as the pattern from which the growth evolves. Man is created out of the dust of the ground, according to Genesis. This simply refers to the evolution of life from its most elemental form. The creation of Eve out of Adam's rib represents the awakening of the feeling nature — the essential aspect of the spiritual unfoldment. The Garden of Eden represents the concentration in man of all the ideas of God concerned in the process of unfolding man's soul and body.

At the center of the Garden grows the Tree of Life, the innermost perception of Spirit. The second description of the Tree, in which the fruit was forbidden, is the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil. The Serpent represents the life-principle in man in its most humble state of evolution. It is not evil in itself, but it must be uplifted and disciplined. Man's first awakening to consciousness is symbolized by the eating of the forbidden fruit; it is man's first discovery of cause and effect. The outcome appears to be evil: man suddenly sees himself by appearances, guilty and ashamed; he covers himself and eventually hides from God. But this is not a fall as much as it is an emergence from the ideal into the practical unfoldment of innate potentiality.

The philosopher Hegel refers to the Fall of Man as "the fall upward." Going back to Genesis I, after each stage of creation, the constant refrain is found, "And God saw that it was good." After the whole of Creation was finished, the phrase is again repeated: "God saw that all He had made was very, very good." God created man in His image ("In the image of God created He him"), and God blessed the man and saw that all He had made was very good. This is the ideal state, the involutionary state in man. This is what man was and is "in the beginning," which in the Bible was originally stated in Latin: "in principio," meaning "in principle."

This is the key idea of the new insight in Truth. This principle is involved and evolved in man, no matter what or where he may be! Man is a spiritual being, a whole creature. In the Biblical allegory, Adam and Eve were in hiding, and ultimately were driven from the Garden. But this was not because of any vindictiveness of God; it was because of the function of law. Adam and Eve had acquired a sense of unworthiness, and this is where they found themselves in consciousness. Consequently the entire Bible allegorically depicts man's quest for Truth, for a sense of wholeness, of meaning, of worth. Because we have assumed that it was God who judged and condemned Adam and Eve to live ever after in pain and hard work, and drove them from the Garden, we have attempted to placate God. All the many rituals of faith developed from a fearful worshiping of an angry God, with sacrifices of appeasement and pleas of mercy — all derived from misunderstanding. All the Garden of Eden allegory implies is that man emerged into consciousness and discovered the law of mind-action, which states: Where you are in experience is a certain and quite dependable reflection of all you happen to be in consciousness.

Wherever you are right now, whatever you are experiencing, you are in your rightful place. Perhaps it is not your true place, which is where you can be by reason of the God-man involved in you: perfect health, harmony, prosperity. But your right place is where you happen to be at a particular time, whether it is pleasing and acceptable or not. You are always in your right place, you are always in the place that corresponds to your mentality at the moment. It can be a place of growth in which there are great blessings. This was the discovery of Job. He wondered why he was where he was, but in time he realized that it was his right place, the only place where he could do the growing he needed to do to get into the experience that was his true place.

The Fall of Man was a fail in consciousness from a state which is absolute and ever-present within. In a sense it was a fall out into the world of experience, which then becomes the upward trail of growth through trial and error. The eternal dilemma of man was, is, and always will be that man does not know where he is. So, he is not quite certain of what his problem is. He circles around searching for a solution to his problem, whereas actually he is trying to find his problem — to discover it, to grasp its essence. When Job eventually found his problem, he discovered that he himself was it, and that as he changed his attitude toward himself, he changed everything. This was the lesson that God was trying to teach Adam. But Adam could not see himself as he really was, so he was hiding. In that consciousness, he would always project his faulty self-image, and thus would deal with people and situations from the lowest rung of the ladder of experience.

The rest of the world always accepts you at the level of your own self-evaluation. No matter where you are, you can find redemption through realizing your own indwelling potential, your own God-self. You can ask yourself, as God is asking you: "Where are you? What are you? How are you thinking? How are you viewing yourself? How are you identifying yourself? How are you 'evaluating yourself? How are you accepting yourself in relation to life and its experiences?"

God did not create two worlds, one good and the other evil. He made only one Creation - perfect and good. God did not thrust man out into a trying world because of his evil nature. Man has simply moved out in consciousness. And at any time, by coming to himself, with logic and spirit answering the question "What are you?" by knowing his own true nature, man can experience the state of health and prosperity.

What are you? You have a choice of affirming: "I am a perfect child of God; within me is the potential to be all that I want to be; and I will be, knowing who I am and that I AM."

Further Development

INTRODUCTION

Brothers & Sisters:

"Meditation" is a broad term used to describe several types of practice used in esoteric and mystical science. In previous Libers, we have used the term meditation in connection with the principles of Concentration & Visualization. These are specific techniques used for the purpose of bringing into manifestation some attribute, quality or thing that you may desire.

You are beginning to understand that "thought", "spirit" "the abstract" is one end of something we might call "existence" and at the other end there is "solidity", "matter", "dense material", etc. The object of Concentration & Visualization is to bring into manifestation concepts and ideas, which have first been formulated as unmanifest. In other words, Concentration & Visualization is a definite creative activity which the individual sets about to accomplish, after having decided what he desires, through the use of certain steps and procedures.

In this Liber, however, you are introduced to Exercise "M", which is also meditation, but in this case the object is not to bring about a previously conceived result, but rather to attune with our Inner Self, the great Fount of Wisdom within, in order to receive inspiration, information and enlightenment to a question which we have formulated. It would be well that we pause momentarily to identify these two aspects of the one activity we call "meditation".

I wish to remind you that the development of all skills, and I repeat: all skills, requires practice, time, patience and persistence. The race, in this case, is not for the swift, but for the sure and steady. You may as well set these lessons aside and read comic books if your only interest is intellectual diversion and curiosity!

You might be interested to know that the conception of our College and the transition from a "mere idea" to a tangible working reality was accomplished, step by step, through the utilization of these very meditative techniques.

These methods work, if you work them! But teachers can only point the way, the rest is up to you, Brothers & Sisters. This Liber contains a tremendous amount of vital information. Read parts of it every day during the month and be sure that you put the instruction to practical Use. You should be able to follow how "wrong thinking" brings all sorts of trouble into your life, and into the lives of everyone. Think about these things!

Sincerely yours in the Work

LIBER OVERVIEW

The process of inner growth takes place in stages. We encounter new experiences or information many times, at each exposure taking more into our selves, or rather, bringing more out of ourselves. This Liber furnishes you with three opportunities to develop your understanding and grasp of Reintegration, Thoughtform Generation, and Faith. To develop your inner skills, you will be given an Exercise on Meditation. Finally, we offer four essays which contain challenging concepts to help you grow in understanding and practice.

LECTURE
Symbolism and Correspondence in Genesis

My Brothers & Sisters:

The Martinist Doctrine has to do with the Fall of Man, his present state of privation and his Return, which we call Reintegration. This is a subject which will concern us more and more as we progress.

Since much useful knowledge is contained in the scriptures, it is necessary for us to understand something about the nature of the first book of Moses called Genesis, because it deals with the creation, as well as with the Fall.

The entire book of Genesis is symbolic. This fact must be understood from the start. It should never be considered as a literal or naive example of primitive cosmology. It is simply a statement by which creation came to be. Moses was thinking scientifically as well as mystically: manifested creation is but the result of the evolutionary operation of the first law. Moses had had the benefit of instruction, not only in the Mystery Schools of Egypt, but also in that school of which his father-in-law, Jethro, was a high priest. Therefore: he wrote as an Initiate for Initiates. Because of this, those who have attempted to explain his meanings without the benefit of similar mystical instruction have been like the profane, blind, ignorant and mistaught.

Such facts may startle the orthodox mind since they run counter to ideas promulgated by formal religion of all denominations. They are not introduced here to discredit religious ideas or deprecate the good intention of religious leaders; they are introduced only as necessary to that understanding of God and His Laws that will lift us above the fog of misconception and ignorance in which we are immersed.

Of the symbolic nature of the scriptures, Moses Maimonides, famous rabbi, Jewish theologian and historian, Talmudist, philosopher and physician (1135 - 1205 A.D.) wrote: "Every time that you find in our books a tale, the reality of which seems impossible, a story which is repugnant to both reason and common sense, then be sure that the tale contains a profound allegory veiling a deeply mysterious truth — and the greater the absurdity of the letter, the deeper the wisdom of the spirit."

It is not the province of mysticism to detail the sins of omission or commission perpetuated or permitted by orthodox channels of education and religion; nor does the ready Initiate expect it. He looks to mysticism only for those positive expositions or essentials which will enable him with growing certainty, to posit himself in truth, and demonstrate the rightness of his position.

Let us consider, then, those theological problems with which the Church has busied itself and which can only be resolved by the secret and hidden wisdom of Initiation. First, let us briefly examine the several aspects of what has been called man's fall, for we have been taught in an old couplet that: "In Adam's fall, we sinned all."

The familiar story of Adam & Eve and the Garden of Eden, with which religious instructors have convicted us all of sin, is nothing but the grossest misstatement or misconception of Moses' exposition in Genesis.

There was no garden of Eden; there was no serpent; there was, in fact, none of the childish elements made familiar by the Biblical account! What there was lay too deep in the realm of abstract ideas to be penetrated by unenlightened and overzealous religionists. It was at one and the same time: a scientific AND a philosophical ideation of man, his faculties, and the field of their activity.

What are the correspondences? The Garden of Eden was in actuality the field, or sphere, of activity in which man was to exercise and develop his faculties. The Hebrew word which has been translated garden, according to its root, simply means "enclosed space." Thus: "sphere" or "field" is the exact meaning. Unfortunately, Biblical scholars and translators either misread the intent, or deliberately chose to conceal the real meaning. Again, by error or design, they personalized man's faculties, calling them persons or things. So: the fable of the Garden of Eden with its inhabitants has given mankind an altogether mistaken and misleading notion of the underlying principle of creation. It has caused endless confusion, and has given rise to some of the most vain speculation that thinkers have ever permitted themselves.

Because of this fable, we as Martinists must even now give some attention to matters which, but for centuries of miss-teaching, need not have concerned us. The Fall of Man is one such. With it are bound up the problems of Good & Evil, Free Will and many other theological questions. All of them find their origin in a set of circumstances which never existed!

The scientific fact stated by Moses was simply that the faculties of the thing created find life or expression in a field of operation. No life can be expressed without movement. Movement cannot be initiated without impulse, or urge, and cannot be maintained without poles of attraction and counter-attraction. Finally: only an insipid and monotonous action can result where the forces of attraction and repulsion are evenly balanced and where no provision for variation is allowed.

A little thought will establish the intended correspondences:

- Adam is creation.
- Eve is the faculty of will or desire (volition).
- The Temptation is that which initiates activity, or sets the forces of attraction and repulsion in motion.
- The Positive & Negative aspects of force are the Good & Evil, and the possibility of variation by the excess of desire is Free Will.

The consequences of volition (the act of willing) can never be set down exactly, for the variation in the pattern may be endless. In the story as we know it, the first exercise of Free Will resulted in the loss of all that the Creator had bestowed upon His creation. This so-called "fall" deprived man of his perfection. In reality, it was only the necessary expansion of the field of operation to encompass the developing faculties of man as they eagerly sought the new experiences of growth. The shell which protects the maturing embryo must at a certain point be destroyed, or the chick will be stifled and its further growth and development made impossible.

Mistaking all things, profane men have never been able to penetrate the secret of creation and so know nothing of its true character. Imprisoned in the limited viewpoint, they have taken themselves further and further into the labyrinth of illusion, until at last they imagine themselves hopelessly outside the boundaries of Infinite Love and concern, lost to an estate once cherished and punished for sins their forefathers supposedly committed.

Therefore, it is a self-created dream state of exile in which man finds himself. He longs for the heaven from which he feels shut out, but he fails to find it, for he imagines it to be outside himself. Our V::: M::: Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin has written that in spite of this state, the only communication between God and man, who has declared himself separate, is by signs and emblems. By means of these, the Eternal indicates His love for corrupted creatures and gives evidence of His unceasing efforts "to remove the separation so contrary to their felicity."

Reintegration, then, is the Great Work, and it is accomplished "by restoring in our faculties the same law, the same order, the same regularity by which all beings are directed in nature."

"The object of man on earth is to employ all rights and powers of his being in rarefying as far as possible the intervening media between himself and the true Sun, so that, the opposition being practically none, there may be a free passage and the rays of light may reach him without refraction."

The first major error which mankind in general is prone to make repeatedly, is that he tends to depend too exclusively on the world of nature, or phenomena. Even the most casual contemplation of nature indicates the presence of law and order. Is it not then reasonable to expect that man, too, is patterned according to law? Many live in accordance with the laws of the world of phenomena, rather than in accordance with the Law of Man. The consciousness of that mystical light within can come only from an awareness of truth.

Since the law functions within mankind as surely and reasonably as it does in the world of nature, man must learn to contact his inner being to help him avoid error, then he may begin to realize that happiness depends on internal conditions and not on outward material circumstances.

It is therefore necessary that we learn to meditate and learn how to turn our thoughts inwardly so as to contact and communicate with the Source Of Truth which is within ourselves. This exercise is usually given at a later stage of our Work, but it is thought that by giving it now, some brethren will derive untold benefits. It will also enable us all to arrive at a common understanding of what we mean when we say: "Let us meditate."

Notes for Students

1. The entire Book of Genesis is symbolic. It should not be thought of as a literal or naive example of primitive cosmogony. Being symbolic, it is capable of interpretation on many levels.

2. On the subject of the symbolic nature of Genesis, F. J. Mayers in his book The Unknown God notes:

> "Genesis 2:4 These are the generations of the heaven and the earth when they were created. In the day that the Lord God made earth and heaven..." (Revised Version).
> The first thing we notice when we compare the above version with the original Hebrew Text, is that the later (the Hebrew Text) contains a word which is not translated at all in the English. It was also ignored in the Latin translation: The translators apparently did not know what to do with it. The Hebrew Text reads: 'aelleh THO-ledoth'. The little word 'tho', which the translators have passed over, denotes 'symbolic'. It may be applied to a book, a fable, a > hieroglyph, a discourse, or anything else which is of a 'symbolic' nature. The translators of the 'Septuagint' did not ignore the word but they 'by-passed' its real meaning, and translated it merely by the word 'book'; that avoided raising awkward questions. What the whole phrase really stated quite clearly was, that the generations' or 'productions' of the heavens and the earth, would be described in symbolic language. It is particularly illuminating that the writer of Genesis should himself tell us this in advance. He takes the ground from under the feet of those who are continually seeking to 'literalize' and 'dc-spiritualize' the Bible..."

3. Students of Moses' school were committed to guarding and exactly transmitting his teachings. That original meaning is still preserved but only in the original Hebrew in which it was written. Each Hebrew letter was an occult symbol, and, each letter was also a number. W. Wynn Westcott, a Martinist and a Hebrew scholar who translated many Hebrew works, wrote: "Attention must be called to the essential peculiarity of the Hebrew language, the inextricable and necessary association of numbers and letters; every letter suggesting a number, and every group of letters having a numerical signification, as vital as its literal meaning."

4. An example of the importance of this may be seen in the words: serpent and Messiah. In Hebrew, both of these words have a numerical value of 358. Whereas in their exoteric sense these words have different leanings, in the esoteric passages of gematria they refer to the same thing (Students may like to ponder on the fact that 358 reduces to 7).

5. Paul Case, another Qabalistic authority, has written: "In the esoteric language, words having the same number correspond in meaning also. Thus a word may be explained by a phrase, or a phrase by a word, if both add to the same number. Not all words and phrases having the same numeration have special adaptation to the esoteric language however; the trained occultist learns where and how to spot the special messages scattered through the Bible and sacred texts. The exoteric sense conveyed by the words of the Bible is by no means the true interpretation. Hence the real teaching of the Bible cannot be learned from a translation, however accurate."

6. The terms "good" and "evil" are but terms for the positive and negative aspects of the same force.

7. Father Origen is billed as "the greatest of the Church Fathers." He was born about 185 A.D. at Alexandria, Egypt, and died about 254 A.D.. He was considered to be an intellectual giant. He was the head of a catechetical school at Alexandria where he was studying under Clement, taking over from him when the later fled the persecution of the Christians in 202 A.D.. Origen was described as "a most shining light of learning, courage, sanctity, devotion, meekness and zeal, whose works remain as a gold mine wherein the student may dig for treasure of wisdom." Now, Origen was a student of St. Clement, and St. Clement was a student of Pantaenus. St. Clement speaks of Pantaenus as "preserving the tradition of the blessed doctrine derived directly from the Holy Apostles, Peter, James, John and Paul." Origen was therefore quite close to the beginnings of the Christine Movement and helped to formulate the early procedures.

Origen contended that every religious book is to be read on three planes — and that religionists are mostly in doubt about the third or highest interpretation. Few translators have been able to set forth correctly the deepest meanings of the Christian Bible; translators of languages have also to be interpreters as well, and languages do not easily translate from one tongue to another. Translators of arcane works, who do not have the esoteric keys, cannot penetrate into the heart of the works, however sincere they may be. Indeed their job is even made more difficult when they are expected to produce translations which concur with prevailing ideas. Saint-Martin recommended a commentary written by Origen, and certainly every Martinist, and indeed all students of mysticism, will find a knowledge of the history and development of the Bible useful, because it establishes the background and basis for his study. Nor should he limit his study to the Christian Scriptures; those of all religions are equally helpful.

In his book, De Principiis, Origen states that the scriptures are threefold, consisting of Body, Soul, and Spirit. He says that the body of the scriptures is made up of the outer words of the histories and the stories, and he does not hesitate to say these are not literally true, but only stories for the instruction of the ignorant. He even goes so far as to remark that statements are made in these stories that are obviously untrue, in order that the glaring contradictions that lie on the surface, may stir people up, to inquire as to the real meaning of these impossible relations. He says that so long as men are ignorant, the body of the scriptures is enough for them; it conveys teachings, it gives instructions, and they do not see the self-contradictions and impossibilities involved in the literal statements, and therefore they are not disturbed by them.

As the mind grows, as the intellect develops, these contradictions and impossibilities strike the attention, and bewilder the student; then he is stirred up to seek for a deeper meaning, and he begins to find the soul of the scriptures. That soul is the reward of the intelligent seeker, and he escapes from the bonds of "the letter that killeth." (2 Cor. 3:16 :the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life.), The spirit of the scriptures may only be seen by the spiritually enlightened man, he said; only those in whom the spirit is evolved can understand the spiritual meaning.

In De Principiis, Origen wrote further:

> "Where the Word found that these things done according to the history could be adapted to these mystical senses, he made use of them, concealing from the multitude the deeper meaning; but where in the narrative of the development of super-sensual things, there did not follow the performance of those certain events which were already indicated by the mystical meaning, the Scripture interwove in the history the account of some event that did not take place, sometimes what could not have happened; sometimes what could, but did not."

LECTURE
Thought-forms Attract Physical Manifestation

Brothers & Sisters:

In preceding lectures you have been instructed how to originate and develop a definite thought-form along constructive lines and to stimulate its growth by meditation. (Please look back and recall the definition of "meditation" as given by Patanjali.) Now this question will naturally occur to you: "how will this thought-form become operative for me, even when I have formulated and developed it?" The answer is: It will become operative through the Law of Attraction.

Thus far I have avoided the usual phraseology and technical explanations common to metaphysical treatises, in order to accomplish two purposes: to introduce you to the science without discouraging you by the use of a seemingly unintelligible vocabulary; and to make you an active worker from the beginning and not a mere theorist of which there are already too many, and most of whom accomplish very little.

As you already know, there is a law of physics that "opposites attract, and likes repel," meaning of course, "polarities," the term used to express opposites.

Universal, Primordial substance or Prima Materia, manifests the two polarities of Matter and Spirit. We observe and know that the law compels two opposites, Hydrogen and Oxygen, both of them invisible, to unite in affinity as water, a visible substance. The Law of Correspondence operates similarly to compel all other manifestations to be in accord with the same general principle.

In other words: formations in the invisible, spiritual world, seek their material manifestation in the visible world.

In this search for the material expression, Nature's forces generate and develop tremendous activity and this activity operates along the line of the Hermetic Principle of unity and is the cause of all action and reaction, urging and restraining, positive and negative, in the cosmos. It produces the phenomenon we ordinarily call "life." When Hydrogen and Oxygen unite in producing water, no new thing is created, there is simply a visible manifestation or expression of unity between these gasses.

The same principle holds true in regard to your thought-form. Thus far you have formulated and developed it on the inner, invisible, spiritual plane. But the activity you impart to it by meditation causes it to develop an inherent activity that manifests, by seeking material expression on the mundane plane.

In other words, the invisible thought-form which is the positive polarity, seeks the negative polarity or material expression of itself.

All that is visible in the mundane world about us is the expression of the activity of the invisible archetypes in the invisible or inner worlds; archetypes formulated either by higher entities in the invisible worlds, for the benefit of humanity whose welfare they are seeking, or by human entities in the visible world whose thought-forms thus assume an almost universal importance, inasmuch as they affect, both directly and indirectly, all humanity, as well as the individuals by whom they were formulated. This should give you a glimpse of your responsibility to all of your fellow men.

If you have ever watched frost crystals form on a window pane during cold weather, you will have noticed how the lines of crystallization radiate in very definite directions, always in geometrically correct proportions of balance and symmetry, a fine illustration of Nature's maintenance of equilibrium.

Your thought-form operates in exactly the same manner. In the case of the frost crystal, we see the lines of crystallization becoming clearly visible and these lines represent to us what are called the "lines of force," i.e., the direction taken by the operative force activity in crystallizing the moisture. Your thought-form does the same thing. You cannot see it visibly in just the same way as the frost crystals, but you can see it by observing carefully the various incidents in your daily life, which will become apparent to you as indicating just how conditions are shaping themselves toward the ultimate realization of your desire.

Little by little you will note how apparently insuperable obstacles are being eliminated, providing you with greater scope and opportunity and the way being made clearer for you to progress toward your goal.

The frost crystal does not spring into visible manifestation instantaneously; neither will the realization of your thought-form. The frost crystal is a manifestation wherein and whereof the constructive material is of the most attenuated character. Your thought-form is a complex of involving a vast array of constructive materials, and possibly also involving other individuals, and much time is necessarily required for the operative activities to bring all the elements together in visible realization.

But the realization will surely come, if you are patient and persistent and, above all, conscientious. Lines of force will radiate out from your growing thought-form just as the tiny roots radiate out from the fast growing plant or shrub. These roots radiate out in ever-widening areas in search of nourishment, and that nourishment consists of material substance which they can assimilate and expand from.

So too with your thought-form. The lines of force it sends out, like roots, are seeking nourishment of greater consistency than the purely spiritual planes offer, and as they are positive, and on the spiritual plane, in seeking that nourishment, they follow the law of opposites and by Attraction draw to themselves matter of greater consistency which they assimilate by "concretion" and so gradually build up, here and there, the elements necessary for the complete realization in visible form.

The length of time required for your thought-form to manifest will depend entirely upon the nature of the thought-form itself. If it is a simple one, you may note almost immediate results. Again, if it concerns yourself only and does not involve other entities, results may be obvious at an early period. But if, for instance, your thought-form involves the reconstruction of a life, or a work in which great crises have raised apparently insuperable obstacles, then you must reasonably expect that a correspondingly longer time may be required. Harmony must be restored and a new environment created in which the thought form can manifest.

Some shrubs will grow hardily in the most severe climates while others require hot-house nurture. And there is a great number of gradations between the two extremes. So too with thought-forms. Some will grow hardily in any environment, while others require an environment created artificially for them and until the active forces have created such an environment, visible manifestation is not to be expected.

There is nothing miraculous in this. Science teaches that all substance is, in the ultimate, homogeneous or identical. The thought-form, as a spiritual creation, works with primal substance, bringing it into visible manifestation in the perfectly natural method of crystallization outward just as Nature does, only in an accelerated form, for while Nature works along orderly processes of tremendous time duration, the thought-form directed in an equally orderly manner has back of it a guiding intelligence.

Nature also has an intelligence back of it, the Divine Intelligence, but that Intelligence directs for the evolution of the mass, while in the specific case of the individual, the thought-form is developed for immediate purpose concerning one individual's lifetime. It is therefore directed by that individual's intelligence for immediate results, and within the sphere of the operator's own auric environment.

In Hebrews 7:19 we read "For the law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did; by which we draw nigh unto God." This text throws a peculiarly valuable light on our subject. Note that is says: "the law made nothing perfect." There is no such thing as perfection. The word can only be used in a comparative sense. If we were perfect, we should be equal with Omneity and there would be no need for our existence. Such is unthinkable. The law does not make perfect, the law simply guides and directs, and if we follow it we succeed in our undertaking. If we do not follow it, we fail or fall into error and the penalty, even "the uttermost farthing" must be paid. This is Karma, the working of the law.

The Law of Attraction operates to attract or draw to. It furnishes the material and builds up. But it does not perfect or complete. Our text says: "but the bringing in of a better hope did." Hope is the process of looking forward with anticipation to a material or spiritual improvement in our individual, or the general environment. That is exactly what you are doing with your thought-form only using different words. For when you hope, you formulate the picture of that for which you hope and we all know how frequently things earnestly, persistently and sincerely hoped for, "come true." Our "hope" or thought-form does perfect, that is, comparatively speaking, and in the sense that it completes what it has brought to it through the Law of Attraction. And the Law of Attraction is a Divine Law, instituted by Divine Intelligence, and so, as we bring in our "better hope" or concreted thought-form, if it is worthy, we draw nigh unto God by being in harmony with His law. For The Master said: "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me. The realization of any worthy thought-form, ideal, or desire, is in itself an act of drawing nigh unto God.

"Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water." Hebrews 10:22. We are admonished to draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith. You must believe in your ideal or desire and consequently in your thought-form. You cannot "fly it out" as a mere experiment, for by so doing you insult the Divine Intelligence and failure confronts you from the very start. Remember further the words of the Master: "according to your faith be it unto you." We shall realize just in proportion to our faith.

How many of our friends have we seen start a business, a house or some enterprise, and then "get cold feet," to use an expressive colloquialism. You know what happens then. Also, how many have we seen succeed after being "thrown down" time after time. Persistence and faith in what you are doing is the necessity. It is a law as old as the hills and older, and no one can change it nor can any system get around it.

Now note another point: "having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience." If we are building a wrong thought-form on an unworthy basis as warned against at the start of these lessons, we shall find that we can indeed set in motion the forces and activities pertaining to our thought-form, and for a time, and to some extent, we may appear successful, but eventually the results will rebound upon and we shall merit ourselves all the harm that we may foolishly have sought for others. Such is the plight of the "black magician."

Why? because, again, it is the law.

In furthering your thought-form, do not doubt. In the first place you are dealing with cosmic force and cosmic substance; therefore with cosmic supply which is illimitable. It is a source that never fails. Who ever saw a doubter succeed? A thought-form started by a doubter is doomed to wither and disintegrate almost immediately after it is formulated, for doubt shatters the structure, and it is impossible to hold steadfastly in concentration or meditation, anything regarding which we hold even the shadow of doubt.

Concentrate and meditate securely entrenched in the consciousness of your power to win, and the ultimate success of your endeavor; but make sure that your conscience, that monitor against error, approves your work in every detail, for work resulting from an "evil conscience" or done in spite of the warnings of conscience will bring harm, sorrow and trouble to you in the end, no matter how much you may seemingly triumph for the time being.

Why should we have our bodies washed with pure water? This admonition formed part of the ancient code, wherein ablutions formed an actual physical part of all religious enterprise, plus a certain spiritual and mystic significance as well. But on the physical plane today, it should form a part of all our daily work, for a diseased mentalism seldom exists in a healthy physical organism, and never will a diseased organism afford a proper working vehicle for a healthy mind. The mind under such circumstances is obliged to work under a great handicap.

Do not attempt to limit your thought-form as it develops under your meditation, but also do not attempt to change or modify the original concept. You will find that it will amplify itself as you progress and as your powers of concentration and visualization become stronger and more penetrating. Make no effort at change on your part. Hold to the original concept, but let the thought-form itself grow as it will. There is a nice distinction to be noted here which words cannot adequately describe. It must be experienced in your actual personal consciousness as you progress, but with this admonition, you will realize that it is possible to hold to your original picture, letting further details appear continuously, as happens in the development of a sensitized photographic film.

Hold the original concept, visualization or picturization positively and firmly in your imagination, with no thought of failure or shadow of doubt. This process will make you an actual worker in the spiritual kingdom as few other methods will do. It is the purpose of these special lectures, as stated, to make you an actual worker right from the start, and not a mere reader, and I assume, as your teacher, that you entered upon this study with definite desires to progress in the Art of Spiritual Science. I shall therefore hold you first to the fundamental laws, bringing in the allegorical and symbolic considerations later on, although I shall not dwell extensively upon them in any particular series of lectures, for the great desideratum is Work and Service.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

LECTURE
To Believe — or to Know?

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

In the ultimate search for Truth to which I, in common with many others, have devoted a fair number of years, it is important at one stage to re-define our vocabulary and sweep aside a lot of verbiage to come to an honest understanding of basic terms and principles.

In common with several eminent Martinists, I have shied away for some time from sundry words and expressions, the most relevant to my purpose being the noun belief and the verb to believe. The more I listen to people around me using these words, the less I understand their meaning. If I may be permitted to give a string of examples ranging from the sublime to the ridiculous, I offer the following:

> "I believe in God", "I believe in the Bible", "I believe in my wife", "I believe in democracy", "I believe in modem medicine", "I believe in doing my own thing", "I believe in Santa Claus", "I believe in the weather forecast" "I believe in the Brotherhood of Man", I believe in corporal punishment", "I believe this (!) does me good", and so on ad infinitum.

What distinguishes every sentence beginning with "I believe," is the fact that, when you analyze it closely, it reveals a basic doubt. Thus, when someone states forcibly: "I believe in my husband", it is obvious that this declaration is motivated by the fact that the woman in question is trying to fight either an expressed slur on her husband's faithfulness, or profound doubt on the same point. There would be no point in the statement if there had been no DOUBT to motivate its formulation.

The same applies to the main statement of my string of examples: "I believe in God". Whenever I hear this expressed forcibly, I cannot but think: "Here is a person who is trying to persuade him-or-herself of the existence of something of which, deep down, he or she is far from certain."

To the Seeker After Truth, the expressions like "I believe," are truly meaningless. To be specific: either one knows or one does not. Everything in between is a matter for speculation.

But then, you may well ask: what does "to know" mean? and you should ask!

This is where I must admit that the English language, usually so rich and adaptable, is badly lacking. The original language of Martimsm, French, has two words where English has only one. "Le savoir" refers to knowledge in the sense of "acquired information", that is, what you have been told and taught, what you have gleaned from looking around you, that is basically: "knowledge that comes from outside".

The other word: "la connaissance", refers to knowledge that results from personal experience, and which, to a large extent, can never be communicated to others. To the first category belong all sciences acquired from teachers, books, and other external sources. For example, I know that the Earth is round because I accept the evidence supplied by mathematical calculations and photographs taken from the surface of the moon, among other factors. But, I have no such knowledge in the second meaning (personal experience) because I have not seen it with my own eyes, neither have I put my arms around it.

On the other hand there are things that I know (in the second meaning of the word) without ever been told of them. or reading about them in books. Long before I could read I knew that flames were hot! And that electricity shocks!

But, you may well ask again, what has all this linguistic speculation to do with anything in general, and Martinism in particular?

I remember, a long time ago, being asked "incidentally", in what I later on realized was a test, what was the purpose of my quest. This came completely out of the blue during a pleasant dinner party when my attention is normally, and forcibly, directed by my gastric juices to what is or is about to be placed on my plate! To my utter astonishment, my answer came pat as if the question had been expected and the reply well studied in advance, in what can only have been a flash of inspiration, or lunacy! "To experience through my senses of sight, of hearing, of smell, of taste, or of touch, the presence of God."

In the many decades since that day, and try as I may, I have never been able to improve on that definition.

Excerpts from the writings of Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin

"If man's God resembled him, I would soon become atheist."

"It is from experience that I can say that the daily food of the Man of Desire is a small piece of wood from the true cross soaked in the tears of a prophet. Woe betide him if a day passes when he does not partake of this food! He will not have eaten his daily bread."

"It is not enough to say to God: Thy will be done! You have to seek constantly to know what it is, for if we do not know what it is, then what are we, what can we do?"

EXERCISE
Exercise "M"

Meditation is either directed, or it is simply an exercise in Self-knowledge. When meditation is directed, in other words when we say: "Let us meditate on this," it is essential that the subject of meditation be entirely stripped of other factors, so that we formulate to ourselves as a single element of thought, the crucial point on which we wish to meditate. The first step of directed meditation is therefore: concentration. This presupposes the choice of a subject.

Let the subject be simple at first. Place yourself in whatever position you find comfortable. This is in order that no irritation or discomfort will come and interfere with the concentration. Having selected your subject or thought, let every ounce of your intellectual capacity be directed towards that single thought. Once you have shut out all other thought and have your mind clearly fixed on the single concept, stop concentrating and attempt to dwell on the second plane of consciousness, that of self-realization.

Let your consciousness sink into your being. If you achieve this Meditation on the plane of self-feeling, you will feel a wave of warmth submerge your whole being and, if you are able to keep it up, you will feel your being expand around you so that you will become conscious of things and beings that surround you. When we say you will become conscious, we mean that you will feel that you are part of them. Do not try and analyze your reactions! After a while, the thought you have implanted in your intellectual consciousness by concentration will initiate a train of reactions, of feelings that will eventually degenerate into a train of thought. You will then, if you are successful, have received an inner understanding of the subject of your meditation.

Meditation, or the engulfing of your consciousness by your being, may also be used for other purposes, from simple relaxation to more elaborate exercises. For the time being, we shall practice the form just described. Following the same technique, we shall all have a common base to examine our respective reactions.

Questions to ponder:

Basically, how many different kinds of meditation are there?

How does one prepare for meditation?

What is the next step?

And the third step?

Guidance from Within

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

Guidance is a common word in our day: child guidance, guidance for marital relationships, investment guidance, etc. And occasionally in public someone might suggest the idea of Divine Guidance. But unfortunately, he might well be thought of as being odd, because this kind of guidance is usually equated with the magical, mystical, or psychic, which, in the public eye, is often viewed as something weird. And yet, there is almost an instinctive feeling in every person that there is something beyond his personal prejudices, something beyond his worries and anxieties, and that this something can co be reached.

Unfortunately, the feeling for this "something" has been dealt with on the level of superstition. Thus, many persons look for guidance through a sign or leading, from the flip of a coin to consulting the stars or numbers, reading tea leaves or a crystal ball, and on to Indian guides and spirit readings. It is not for me to put any of these down, but to point to the fact that involvement in then may imply a put-down of one's own self.

We can see fantastic evidences of guidance in nature, such as in the flight of birds, the spawning of eels and salmon, and the homing instinct of mountain horses, and we say: "Isn't nature wonderful?" And yet, if someone evidences some kind of inner direction or direct knowing, why don't we say "Isn't God wonderful?" or even "Isn't the Spiritual nature of man wonderful?" No, we call it "good luck," or "ESP", or "psychic phenomenon." This denigrates the potential of man as a spiritual being, and implicitly denies the flow of guidance in man that is as natural as instinct in animals.

Why is it so hard to accept the Truth that "There is a spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth him understanding?" Perhaps it is that religion rarely deals with the whole person, preferring to deal with "God out there." We may be told in impassioned sermons that our need is to find God. Yet, God is not to be found, because God is not lost. It is not God's hiddenness, but our blindness that is the problem. We walk alone, unaware that we are all one. We live in a state of ceaseless guidance, in a field of infinite knowingness, but we are deaf to the process. As Emerson says: "There is a guidance for each of us, and by lowly listening we shall hear the right word."

Note how we admire people who have expressed great intelligence or creativity, and yet we do not realize that we live and have being in the same mind force. To "find" God, we need to expand our awareness to the realization of the Omnipresence of God, to know that the whole of Spirit is present at every point of space at the same time. There is no distance between God and man. There is nowhere to go to get guidance or inspiration or creativity. We are in it, all of it, all the time.

Walter Russell insists that the Universe does not bestow favors on the few whom it seeks out as interpreters. He says it is just the reverse, that the Universe gives to those who plug in, that mediocrity is self-inflicted and genius is self-bestowed. He says: "Knowledge is ours for the asking. We do not have to learn anything. All we need to do is recollect it."

The Bible refers to the "voice of God." This is a purely poetic expression. For instance at the burning bush: "God called to him out of the bush, Moses, Moses." This was an experience of direct knowing. In its tendency to overstatement, the Bible is saying, "It was as if God were actually talking to him." The bush was in bloom in a blaze of color, and Moses experienced a flow of inspiration and creativity. He "heard", "The ground on which you stand is holy ground." In actuality, this was an awakening within him of the transcendent realization that, "I am the burning bush, the source of creativity is within me."

Jesus said: "The Father knows what things you have need of even before you ask him." A fantastic concept. In other words, God is present, always, and in all ways. God knows. God knows in you. Knowing is, and it is at hand. It is now. The way out is at hand.

People rarely experience direct knowing in prayer because they usually have preconceived notions of what their answers should be. To have the mind centered on images or treasure maps and outlined goals, is to frustrate the process of direct knowing. The Knower will teach you and lead you into all Truth, if you are teachable.

The important thing to remember, no matter what your experience, is: Wherever you are, God is. The Holy Spirit (the whole of Spirit) is present in its entirety at every point in space at the same time. Spirit is present, as the Presence. All-knowing Mind is present. The answer to your dilemma is present, here and now. There is nowhere to go and nothing to reach for, no one to contact or to plead with, for that would imply "absence" and direct knowing comes through the Presence.

We need to have faith in the guidance process, the Knower that is always present, and "listen" to its inner leading. The Presence of God is always present. It is the "Father who knows your needs even before you ask," and whose "good pleasure it is to give you" the perfect answer.

'W. Frederick Keeler tells of some experiments that he conducted to show the remarkable evidence of the Spirit in man. A child from age four to seven is asked a one-pointed question so it can be answered by a simple "Yes" or "No". The child is told not to think or try to reason it out, and we should not be concerned whether he understands the Truth of the question or its answer. Keeler says from his tests, that if the child is allowed complete freedom and is not dominated or influenced by a parent or other person, if he is not given to play-acting and will simply answer what he feels, his answer will be a direct knowing from Spirit, and the questioner would do well to heed the answer.

It is important to realize that there are not really thousands of things to learn in life. There is only one thing to learn: to know the Knower, and to regularly "acknowledge Him in all your ways." This is to understand the super-conscious level of mind, to learn to get and keep in the flow of guidance. Wherever you are and whatever may be the urgency, you can be still and know that you are in the flow. You will experience an effusion of light in the form of creative ideas, unerring guidance, and "answers without ceasing."

What Life is All About

"What is life all about, anyway?" This could be the question of a researcher. Actually, it's the cry of a person facing injustice or tragedy. It reflects the shock of crisis or challenge. If you really want to know what life is all about, this could lead to the realization that life is not just minding our business; life is for living, for growing, for unfolding our greater potential.

One of the most hopeful developments of modern times is the tendency to break away from narrow deterministic theories of man, and to put new emphasis on human growth. As Bergson says, "An intelligent being contains within himself the wherewithal to surpass himself." This means that you always have within yourself the capacity to go beyond what or where you now are. And the growth process is what I would call the creative intention, the Divine will. We always grow unless we hamper the process.

Now, the real problem of life is the frustration of potentiality. In a sense, it is the only real sin. And the key to therapy is the reactivation of the process of growth. This is what life is all about. But, you see, growth can only come through change. What we call trouble may really be a misreading of this process. For instance, you lose your job. Of course you need your job, so this brings financial crisis to you. And there might be injustice in your dismissal. You may say, "But I have always done all that was expected of me!" But have you expected enough of yourself? Have you been growing in the job, or have you been frustrating your greater potential? So, now you have a choice. You may dwell in bitterness, and further frustrate your potential, or you may know that this experience is going to lead to growth and betterment for you.

What is life all about? Life is for living, for growing, for reaching for the highest — not just being superior to others, but being superior to your former self. Now, the reason we have misread life's experiences and have assumed our lot is hard is that we have tended to believe that the goal of life is ease and security. This has been the hallmark of the modern way of life: the worship of material success, the easy road, peace of mind; early retirement from work and worry, to a life of ease. And it could be that students of Truth have also tended to equate spiritual growth with the demonstration of things, and this is an unrealistic attitude toward life.

We all long for happiness, of course, but it can only come through "raising ourselves above ourselves," as Emerson would say. It calls for discipline, for growth and for overcoming — not just going through things, but actually growing through them. Right where you are, whatever you may be experiencing can be a blessing, an opportunity through which you can grow and go on to success, if you meet it in the right attitude. So, you must decide whether to say, "Well, that's life for you," and just go through it and make the best of it, or whether to dig deeper into your inner potential and draw on your limitless reserves of Spirit. It can, if you will it, be an unfolding experience that will work for your highest good.

You can never become anything that you do not have the potential for becoming, and the potential is in you even if you are mired in a ditch. The experience in the ditch may be the very best possible way to gain the growth that you need to reveal your next step in growth. Unfortunately, we tend to measure life by ditches, but life is an experience in livingness, a continuous opportunity to grow and to release your imprisoned splendor. Now, this doesn't mean that we must have problems or that God sends problems, but it means that when we are confronted by difficulties we should admit that they show a great need for growth. So, instead of asking, "Why do I have to go through this?" we need to ask, "How can I grow through this?"

Now, you may say, "But I started out to accomplish something, and I failed!" Have you really failed? You still want to succeed, you want to be healed, you want to overcome your sense of inadequacy. Your desire is a prophecy of that which you can become. As long as you desire, you have not failed. A researcher fails many times, and he keeps at his job with enthusiasm. Is he a failure? No. He is skilled in what I call "the art of successful failure," which is the art of creatively growing through experiences. You can learn a great deal from the researcher. In a way, to fail at something is a good sign. It indicates that you are reaching for something, and if you fail dismally it may mean that you were reaching very high. As long as you are reaching, you are growing.

One of the great contemporary problems is what I call the "success syndrome." We think of success as arrival at something, which comes at the end of a certain amount of effort. But success is not achievement, it is progression along a never ending road. It is not "getting there"; it is earning the right to be there, and the earning process is constant. The true "success" makes pursuit of inner growth a real activity of his life. The law on the road to success is: Grow or go. It is the basic law of life and living, especially in what we call "age." We do not "grow old." When we stop growing, we are old. As long as we grow through experiences, we will remain young. When we start just going through them, we become old. It has nothing to do with years; it has everything to do with attitude.

The energy of life is limitless, but we become bored and we stop mobilizing it. We look back; we fall victim to self-pity; we start looking at our troubles in a very negative sense, as if they are the "all in all" of life. And we say, "Well, when I was young, things were different. But now, at my age, life is getting increasingly difficult" We are just tired of having to grow through things and we want to get out of the classroom. We want to graduate into ease and security. And this is a very sure way to deteriorate into "old age" and senility.

So, the important key is to look up. If you are in the gutter, the only way to get out is to look up, to begin to stop thinking "gutter thoughts." And so it is with sickness and with prosperity. You have got to think success thoughts, prosperous thoughts. And you may say, "But how long must I keep picking myself out of the gutter?" or, "How often should I forgive my brother?" Remember, Jesus said, "Seventy times seven"; in other words, forever. You need the constant flow of love. Pick yourself up, because life is a constant process of getting up. This is what Homo sapiens is — the getting-up creature. This is what a spiritual being is -- always on the rise, always growing, always ascending. When a pilot earns his wings, he doesn't graduate from flying. Then, with his license, he flies all the time.

Remember that where you are is the best possible starting place to get to where you want to go. So, avoid looking for an escape by thinking, "Oh, if I just didn't have to meet this problem." Face the issue! See the problem from a more Cosmic aspect. Let the action of Divine law resolve it into the inherent good. To be a stronger person means that you must seek to release your own inner potential, and eventually, getting out of ditches will be no problem at all. It is in the effort to climb that you release your potential. One can never exhaust his ability; he can only exhaust his patience, by which he frustrates his own ability.

The problems that you now face may be something that you need to solve, but this is where you are, and where you are is the right place from which to grow to the point where you want to be. Determine to know that there is only good in all things, that you will find the ability to get through it and that you will grow in the process. Keep on, and keep on keeping on. Even when you seem not to be making progress, keep on — like trees in the winter, when there is no outward display and yet the greatest inner growth of the root systems is reaching out for moisture. The fruitage of spring comes not in spite of a difficult winter, but actually because of it.

The day will come when you will look back on your whole life and you will see that everything that happened and transpired was an unfolding pattern of your soul growth. And it will appear as if the way you came was the only way you could have reached the desired end. Every difficulty was the opportunity to do the growing that, at the time, you needed to achieve. This is not predestination. It is simply the result of the predisposition to grow through instead of just going through. The growth is what life is all about.

The One Great Need of Man

In the face of the many complex demands and problems of life, I would like to state here the truism that there is essentially only one problem in life, that man has only one need. Unless this need is met there is nothing that can help you or me or anyone else. If, on the other hand, we do have this, then there is nothing too difficult for us to achieve.

Now, what is this great need? Well, we can say it certainly is not knowing how to pile up a great fortune. We have seen all too many do this, only to lose it or to lack happiness and contentment. It is not knowing how to achieve perfect health or beauty. Many persons have this and yet are beset with negative conditions such as poverty, unhappiness, and complications in their affairs. On the other hand, many who have frail health or physical impairment live radiant, useful, self-supporting lives because in some way they have solved the one problem, they have filled this one great need. Is this great need learning how to follow great thinkers, how to comprehend the works of the scholars of the ages? No, because all around us the meek and the lowly, the uneducated and the disadvantaged, often display proof that they have solved the one problem; they know the meaning of life and how to live it.

This morning millions of people rose, dressed, ate breakfast, and settled into the other routines of everyday life, without the appearance of anything unusual. Some of this activity is carried on consciously; far more is subconscious in its work - breathing, circulation, muscle action, and so forth. Power pours through us and we go on our way, heedless of the miracle of life that is constantly being enacted in and through our physical body While this goes on, the same power is going on within all of creation, from the tiniest organism on the beach to possible life around the farthest star in the Universe. Just imagine yourself driving out into the country, where new life is bursting out all over. Flowers, birds, trees, grass, small animals seem to greet you to affirm: “We too are alive; the power that is at work within you is at work within us too.” From a secluded spot on the seashore hear the great waves chant the same refrain: “There is one power and we are part of it.”

Jesus talked about this. He said: “He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also. He that hath seen me hath seen the Father.” He meant that we too are simply channels for the same power, to use not for our glory, but, as He put it, “for His name’s sake.”

Nature automatically obeys and permits life to work in and through her every expression, from the least to the greatest, and so it has been down through the ages. Only man rebels, and he has from primitive times (when the chief of the tribe strutted with his big axe demanding obedience and praise) to the wars and unrest we are still experiencing today. Only man seems to need glory, adulation, reinforcement for his feelings of personal greatness. Does it not strike you how ignorant and foolish we have been?

We are told: “The earth is Jehovah’s and the fullness thereof, the world and they that dwell therein; for He hath founded it upon the seas and established it on the floods, who shall ascend unto the hill of Jehovah, who shall stand in His holy place!” And there is the answer to the one great need. It is a sense of union with the power that we call God. It is a realization that there is but one omnipresent power, that each of us is a channel through which this power manifests; that without it we can do nothing, and with it we can do everything and anything.

The one great need is the consciousness that comes with daily communion with God, the almighty transcendent power of life. Without this consciousness there is nothing that can help or heal you; with it there is nothing too difficult for you. This realization, this sense of union with the Infinite power, is the only foundation upon which we can hope to build a successful, happy life. Now, we may give intellectual assent to this great truth if we believe in any kind of religion, but observance of formal religion alone will not help us. We must have the Conviction that God is actually with us, that He is a presence; that He alone governs life — our life — and that He is the one and only source of health and prosperity and well-being. In other words, we must think of God not as a person off somewhere; not as an absentee landlord of the Universe; not as one to whom we must plead and beg and supplicate. We must know God as a presence, a presence that is present. We must know that we live in this presence and move in it and have our being in it, and that we cannot be separated from it. As Jesus said, and He said it of the totality of man, "I and the Father are one."

You and I have been taught that we are part of the wicked environment, and by this I mean that we have accepted hatred and selfishness and resentment and fear as a normal component of our thinking. Is it any wonder, then, that we have so far failed to find happiness? We have believed that we can think, act, and live in some way apart from this transcendence that we call God. We must begin to change our thinking and to recognize that we can think and act and live apart from wrong conditions, from all that makes for discord and unhappiness.

There is no mystery about oneness with God. It simply means that you are one with God, one with eternal life, one with love, one with omnipotent, omnipresent good. And all this is the opposite of fear and sickness and lack. You must not ally yourself with fear and sickness and lack if you expect health and prosperity. You cannot become one with the Divine if you think and act in opposition to the Divine. If we have a positive inward conviction that we can never be separated from the Infinite process that we call God, then we will be the activity of God, finding its focus and expression in us and as us. We can have a consciousness that is inseparable from this conviction. We can affirm: "I am one with the Infinite process of Mind, and I let that same Mind that was in Christ Jesus be in me."

Accepting this oneness with God in your thinking will mean to you that everything that is the opposite of God will disappear in thought and experience. God does not empower you to think, speak, or act on the wrong side; these belong to the habit of apartness from God. Your protection is to know, that you need not have a mind separate from Infinite Mind. If God made all things and made them good like Himself, if He is the only creator there is, then where do sin and disease and sorrow and worry and death and discord come from? They come from the sort of thinking that is outside of and separate from God-Mind. So why accept them in your life? If you accept your unity with God you cannot accept these things as having any reality of power, except the power you give them by your own thinking.

It is well every morning to remind yourself that there is nothing on earth or in heaven that can separate you from the consciousness of God's presence. This is the one great need of man: to know oneness, to know inseparability, to know that each of us is an individualization of the allness of God, a unique expression of God expressing Himself where we are and as what we are. There can be no separation except the thought of separation, and that's essentially what fear is. The thought of separation is the basis of anxiety and worry and self-limitation. Change your thought to the thought of oneness and you have a whole new concept, a whole new consciousness. Fear and worry and anxiety fade away into nothingness. This is precisely what worship is. But now, instead of being defined as a reverence for something outside of ourselves, it becomes an experience that I call "creative worthship."

In the ancient Sanskrit there is a definition for a word that means "prayer," and the definition goes like this: "judging oneself to be wondrously made." When we pray rightly, we get a new concept of ourselves; we judge ourselves as spiritual beings, one with God, inseparable. To know this is the one great need of man.

Don't be a Bigmouth

In a number of instances Jesus told people, after some miraculous demonstration of help or healing, "See thou tell no man." Why did He do this? Did He fear opposition from His enemies? Did He wish to avoid the publicity that broadcasting the news of these healings would bring to Him?

It certainly can't be true that Jesus was afraid, for we have the account of His going up to Jerusalem at Passover time when it was most likely He would be seen, even though it was well known that the Pharisees were planning to take Him and kill Him. He even went into the Temple, the most public place in the city, and taught openly. So it could not have been for fear that He imposed silence on people. Was it a wish to avoid publicity? Did He wish knowledge to be confined to only a few individuals? Apparently just the opposite was true, for we see Him moving voluntarily from place to place as if to reach as many people as possible.

No, Jesus did not fear for His safety nor did He wish to confine His message to only a few. The acceptable explanation of His mysterious request must be within the consciousness of the person helped.

The words we speak are creative. They create because they express thoughts, and it is the nature of mind to condense thoughts into form. Faith is also creative, and the more we believe in things, the more quickly and positively they will become visible in our lives.

Jesus knew the law of mind; it was the whole foundation of His teaching. The afflictions He dealt with were considered incurable; they were rooted deeply in the mind of the blind man and leper as well as in the minds of the populace. His warnings were safeguards to those whom He had healed. Too much talk about the healing would hold the attention of everyone on the old condition, and tend to hold the individual in bondage. When Jesus said to the blind man at the pool of Bethsaida, "Do not even enter into the village," His advice was meant to keep the man away from the emotional excitement of the crowd who believed more in the disease than in the Christ-power to overcome it.

When you have been praying for help or guidance or healing, and when a wonderful demonstration takes place, have you not found yourself happy and excited, wanting to shout it from the housetops? Here is a startling thought: Your very attitude of excitement is an evidence of your lack of faith; you didn't really believe it could happen. The healing has been of the grace of God, more in spite of your consciousness than because of it.

This is a sign that there is more work to be done to heal your personal consciousness and to accept the new, pure condition into being. During this period it is easy to slip back into the old attitude of sickness and want. To get all excited about an overcoming, to talk about it, may well start the old process again, and the outer effects of this negative speaking may appear as a return of the previous condition. We read: "Behold, thou art made whole; sin no more, lest a worst thing befall thee." Don't make the mistake of rehearsing the experience, for this is the sin of looking back. Stand still (don't be a bigmouth) in an attitude of gratitude and poise.

We need to work for a strong realization of what we have already received, so that when the answer comes we are grateful but emotionally unmoved. This was the case of the little boy who said, "Of course I found my dog. I prayed, didn't I?" We should become that childlike and expectant.

Does this mean that we are never to speak of the healings we have received? Not at all. Certainly, we should share our experience with those who have been praying with us. Together, we can share the joyous outworking of good. But we should share prayer results only with those who can handle it in consciousness.

When you feel the need for prayer, this is an even more important time to "see thou tell no man." The best way to compound your problem is to let all your friends know that you have a problem. Don't even ask everyone to pray for you; be selective. If you want to pray effectively, you must share this desire only with those who have sufficient understanding to be a lifting power.

Once I had a young assistant minister who led a prayer group during the week. During one of the meetings he found out that one of the members had taken ill that day. He openly invited all of the members to pray about it. After the meeting several of the members rushed up to make such comments as, "Isn't that a terrible thing? Oh, I'm so worried. I do hope he recovers." My assistant realized that he had broken an important link and had allowed for the dissipation of faith-power.

If you have a problem, find a counselor or a close friend whose consciousness you respect, and make a covenant, an agreement to hold to the Truth. Then, "See thou tell no man." This will conserve the power.

Consider a wheel with twenty pipes as spokes. At the center is a motor which you need for some important function, and at the end of each pipe is a powerful steam source. If you hook up only one of the spokes at the center, not only are you using just one-twentieth of the power, but the overwhelming balance of the power at your command is dissipated into the air. A steam boiler can generate an incredible amount of power, but for each small hole in the system its power is greatly reduced by waste. This is the type of dissipation that can happen to a strongly inspired idea.

We should carefully shield and conserve the embryonic ideas that come to us in prayer, and this is one of the most important implications of Jesus' statement. Did you ever have a wonderful idea and run around tirelessly telling people about it, only to find that your book or project or plan had lost its impetus and had "died a-borning?" You can kindle a fire by concentrating the sun's rays on a given point with a magnifying glass, but not if you move the glass around. Then you produce no heat at all. If you want to start an engine, you close all the outlets of the boiler and conserve the steam. A good, tight boiler can run a locomotive at fast speeds with great loads, but a boiler with cracks will make a spectacular show of steam with no movement whatsoever. The train won't even get started.

The time to talk about something you want to accomplish is when it is done and complete (of course, then you won't have to talk about it, for it will speak for itself). Certainly, share your idea with those necessary to help you complete it, but then you are sharing it in the context of action and mobilization of energy and wisdom, not dissipation. Often, ideas are passed on to committees for action. Here an idea is talked to death and nothing is ever done. The best way to destroy a project is to turn it over to a committee for action.

Talking about your plans before they have actually materialized is the surest way to destroy them. It is a Universal law of nature that the unborn child is protected from all contact with the world; in fact, this is the real function of motherhood. Inspiration that comes to you is your child; you are its mother, and nature intends that you should nourish and protect it up to the moment when it is ready to emerge upon the material plane. "And Mary kept all these things, pondering them in her heart." The temptation to tell people is great, but it is better to follow the advice in Ecclesiastes: "To every thing there is a season, and a time for every purpose under heaven, a time to keep silence, and a time to speak."

Some people claim that they never have any ideas, but this is like a steam boiler with cracks saying, "I never have any power." Conserve your power. It is impossible even for a saint to talk beyond a certain point without saying something unkind or erroneous. Limit your conversation to that which is constructive.

Often, a new student of Truth is so excited that he babbles all of his new-found conclusions to everyone he meets. "See thou tell no man" until you have converted your own mind, and then you won't have to tell people. What you are will articulate what you believe better than anything you could possibly say. One student was approached recently with the statement, "If what you believe helps you to be the kind of person you are, I wish you would tell it to me." Then, you can speak.

Martinist Philosophy and Practice - Part 3

LIBER OVERVIEW

Several important Martinist Lectures form the basis for this Liber. First, the Quarternary Law, which is a set of four inter-related principles on the Divine Emanations, is presented. This leads to the Philosophy of Three Worlds - Man, Nature, and the Spiritual Spheres. Lastly, the Plastic Envelope, and its relationship to the human body, is discussed. Then you will find three essays that cover: dreams and their interpretation, the "signs" that Jesus spoke of, and some thoughts on the religion of the future. We hope you will find much nourishment in this Liber!

LECTURE
The Quaternary Law

My Brothers & Sisters: Greetings!

Tonight we begin our preparation for our sojourn into deeper waters. We will study what we call the "Quaternary Law". I must ask for your close attention. Please give very careful perusal of this Liber.

As Martinists, we apply the name of "Law" to those Ruling Principles through which creation occurs and is perpetuated, that is: to the Divine Emanations.

The Primary Cause of all creation acts through the agency of Divine Laws, which, once established proceed to function independently, perpetuating the Divine Will that has set them in motion. These Divine Laws or Emanations are many and their interaction determines the nature, evolution and character of the forces, beings, and objects that come within their field of influence. In other words, the Primary Cause does not intervene in the evolution or destiny of each individual creature. It is through its Divine Laws that Omneity directs Its creation and it is only by the agency of such Laws that creatures evolve. Man has been given two attributes that permit him to influence his own destiny. What are they? One is reason or thought. The other is Free Will. Thus, through his reason, Man may come to know and understand the workings of Divine Laws and by his Free Will he may choose the Divine Law upon which to call in order to avoid his being simply a nutshell tossed about helplessly by the waves. It is therefore imperative that we study and understand well the principle Divine Laws. And we begin with a study of the Quaternary Law.

The Quaternary Law is thus called because it expresses in four axioms, Laws which are closely inter-related. I must advise each of you that you will be expected to know this Law by heart and to give examples when called upon. Let us now examine the Quaternary Law:

> (1) There is a continuous progression of characteristics and forces from the lowest material manifestation to the highest Spiritual Emanation.
> (2) There is a definite inverse proportion in all classifications: The more the Emanations and Classes become subdivided, the less powerful is the life or force in each division and the fewer the characteristics expressed.

(3) There is a definite correspondence between the kingdoms of the Material World, and the Emanations of the Spiritual World. As above, so below.

(4) All kingdoms of the Earth exist for the purpose of Evolution.

We should now be quite clear in our minds, as to the individual meaning of each one of the propositions. Let us now study an example of the workings of the first proposition, that of Progression.

If we examine the nature of the Minerals, Vegetables, Animals, and Man, we notice that as we rise from the lowest material form expressed by the Minerals, towards Man who is a much more evolved being, "created in the image of God", we find that the number of characteristics progresses from one class to the other.

Minerals are to a great extent inert matter and are limited in their manifestation to the Law of Atomic Cohesion. That is their only form of activity. They have their source in the ground, are apparently passive, and cannot reproduce themselves.

Vegetables, which are also subject to the Law of Atomic Cohesion, also possess an additional form of activity which expresses itself in life and growth. They can also reproduce and multiply themselves. They therefore have three characteristics: Cohesion, Life and Reproduction.

Animals are made of material components bound by cohesion, they have life and growth, and are able to reproduce. To this must be added freedom of movement. Also the animal gives evidence of a feeling nature, both of pleasure and pain, and of fear, desire and love. These latter attributes are not so noticeable in vegetables (plants), although they may exist rudimentarily. They are not sufficiently apparent however to be listed as a faculty. Because it demonstrates a greater number of characteristics, the animal kingdom stands above the vegetable.

Man has all the normal characteristics of animals with one significant addition: Thought and Consciousness. The abilities or powers possessed by Man are so far in advance of those possessed by the animal kingdom, that they virtually constitute Man as a kingdom in himself, above all the others.

If we now draw four columns, side by side and list in each of them the main characteristics of the species, we shall see that we have a definite progression of these, from the lowest plane upwards. (By the way, we also notice here the Number 4, represented by these four columns. Is this not interesting when we recall that one of the meanings of 4 is Material Perfection?)

MINERAL	VEGETABLE	ANIMAL	MAN
• Atomic Cohesion	• Atomic Cohesion	• Atomic Cohesion	• Atomic Cohesion
	• Life or Growth	• Life or Growth	• Life or Growth
	• Reproduction	• Reproduction	• Reproduction
		• Feelings	• Feelings
		• Freedom of Movement	• Freedom of Movement
			• Thought and Consciousness Reason/Discrimination Conscience

Proposition One states that there is a continuous progression of forces and characteristics from the lowest material manifestation to the highest Spiritual Emanation. Mystics have long possessed the knowledge that all kingdoms of nature are related, above and below, by progression or unbroken series. Between matter and the indefinable God, or Omneity, there are infinitesimal gradations of energy. Therefore, in the Universe there are no two things alike. Nature makes no duplicates.

Progression exists from the lowest to the highest without boundary or separation. Even the apparent gaps between kingdoms are found upon examination to be filled with a continuous series. It is impossible, however, to know exactly all the characteristics of any one of the terms or objects in this great stairway of progression, for such knowledge was lost when Man gave up his First Status. Because he has lost all contact with the first of all these sources, he does not know the source or root of any one of this numerical series.

This Law of Progression or continuity applies equally to Beings that are above material status. In fact, Beings in the Spiritual Spheres follow it with more exactness because they are not so far removed from the first term or division or progression.

Let us now examine the second proposition. The second axiom compliments the first and states that the more a class is subdivided, the less active is the force present in the subdivisions. This Law is self-evident and can be easily understood in general terms. To put it graphically, we could say "the further from the fire, the less heat one gets." Axiom two follows logically from Axiom One: since there is a continuous progression of characteristics from the lowest to the highest, it must be clear that as the characteristics multiply, the force decreases. In other words, the more a substance is subdivided, the less the subdivisions will exhibit the powers of the original root. This law applies solely to the involution or unfoldment of creation.

A simple illustration will picture this more clearly: The circle has long been a symbol of Omneity. Since a circle is made up of 360 degrees, let us say that Omneity has 360 attributes. If therefore we divide the circle in half, Omneity which was one, now becomes two, each half having only 180 attributes instead of the original 360. If we divide by 4 there are now four subdivisions or classifications, but each exhibits only 90 attributes instead of 360.

Therefore, the further we move from Omneity by these subdivisions, the more numerous they become, but the fewer attributes of the original they each possess. This is the rule of Inverse Proportion.

A point to consider: What is the position of Man since his Fall?

Axiom Three states that there is a definite correspondence between the Kingdoms of the Material World and the Emanations of the Spiritual World. This fundamental law of correspondences is known by all mystics. It is summed up in the familiar phrase "As above so below." This means that the visible world is but a reflection of the invisible and that the laws which operate there have their expressions here. Likewise, it means that things terrestrial are counterparts of things Divine. Consequently, the law of analogy is everywhere used to demonstrate this fact. By analogy, even things dissimilar may be made to serve as illustrations. Thus: the heart and brain are not similar, but in the doctrine of correspondences, they may be considered analogous, that is, in philosophic anatomy their functions are correspondent ones.

Lastly, we come to the Fourth Axiom: All the kingdoms of Earth exist for the purpose of evolution. In nature, it is clear that all the kingdoms of the material world grow, first, through involution; second, through evolution. That is to say, there is a path of descent from unity to multiplicity which might be termed disintegration; and there is one of ascent from multiplicity back to unity which we call reintegration.

In biology, the term involution is understood to mean retrograde development, degeneration. It is the opposite of that biological process called evolution, which is understood to mean the development of a series of lower forms into higher ones.

To us, the two terms imply fall and rise. By Man's fall, he moved from the center of Omneity in a series of descents, or downward progressions, which dissipated his original powers although multiplying his extensions. In his rise he will move from a multiplicity of weak and feeble actions through reintegration back to Omneity, his true center. This process of fall and rise, or involution and evolution, is a continuous one and embraces the four kingdoms, mineral, vegetable, animal and man. It operates by the Laws inherent in itself and does not concern Omneity directly.

Let us now recapitulate this very important subject:

There is a progression from the lowest to the highest, even in non-material beings. This can be seen from Propositions One and Three.

All Kingdoms of the Earth exist for the purpose of Evolution. This 4th Proposition refers to the Book of Nature which the Martinist studies with a great deal of attention because he knows, from Proposition Three that there is a correspondence between the material and Spiritual Realms, and, from Proposition 1 & 2 the relative strengthening of the Life Force coupled with a weakening of diversity, as one rises from the lowest to the highest.

The 4th Proposition concerning the evolution of all the Kingdoms of the Earth treats also of the principles of involution and evolution, that is, the departing from Unity towards Multiplicity during the period of involution and the re-merging of multiplicity into Unity in the period of evolution. These two great phases of Divine Breathing, in and out, which govern Creation, we shall study more closely in due time, as the dispersion of One into Ten and the reintegration of Ten into One.

We will now close with a quotation that is relevant to the subject studied at this conventicle:

> "Served and limited by organs, the Human Soul (Âme) depends on these organs to become cognizant of the things of the visible world. The body is a shell, proportional in density to the material world in which the Soul must sojourn. By restricting the action of the Soul, the body makes it more concentrated and capable of manifesting. Indeed, without a body, the Soul would be EVERYWHERE, but SO LITTLE EVERYWHERE that it could act NOWHERE. It would be lost in Infinity, absorbed and dissolved in God."

LECTURE
The Three Worlds

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

We should now be all quite clear on the precepts of the Quaternary Law which states that there is a continuous progression of forces and attributes from the lower states of matter to the higher expressions of the Spiritual Realm; that a law of inverse proportion exists between the multiplicity of divisions and the potency of the natural forces within these divisions, in other words: the farther one gets from Unity, the weaker one finds the power of the Original Emanation. We learned also of the correspondence existing between the higher and the lower Realms, "As Above, So Below", and of the evolutionary purpose of all the Kingdoms of the Earth. Nothing is today what it was yesterday. Everything is in the process of becoming something else, more advanced, more complex.

Tonight we shall examine the Martinist conception of the Worlds of Man, of Nature and of the Spiritual Spheres. Take note that we must not confuse these 3 divisions with the 4 groups of emanations of Omneity designated by another system (The Qabala). (This will be covered in the next Liber)

1. We are on Earth where there exists different gradations of Life that separates us human beings, from the minerals.

2. Above are dark bodies, lit only by the reflection from the sun. These planets and their satellites, and the sun, constitute our Solar System. There are an infinity of Solar Systems in the Universe.

3. There exists beyond the Universe, a Spiritual Realm.

Let us now return to 1: The Mineral, Vegetable and Animal Kingdoms constitute the Elemental World of the Solar System.

Number 2: The Earth and the other planets and satellites constitute the World of Orbs, the second division of the Solar System.

Number 3: Another Realm the Empyrean World, is more or less invisible.

> "As the body is a cloak loaned to us by the Earth, thus the Physical Universe is a garment for Omneity through which circulates all existence by rhythmic emanations."

We shall now examine in greater detail the 3 Worlds:

1) The Elemental World is divided in 3 kingdoms:

- The Mineral - which grows by cohesion, without changing place.
- The Vegetable - which grows upwards and downwards.
- The Animal - which has the ability to move.

Man -. who belongs to the animal kingdom, possesses a Living Light or Mystical Fire which the animals do not have, and which gives him an Intellectual and a Spiritual function. (Recall the previous lecture, on "The Quaternary Law".)

2) The World of Orbs we divide in a Planetary System consisting of 7 planets;
Moon, Mercury, Venus, Sun, Mars, Jupiter & Saturn.
There are also three additionals called Higher Octave Planets (Neptune, Uranus and Pluto), and a Zodiac, divided into 12 signs: Aries, Taurus, Gemini, Cancer, Leo, Virgo, Libra, Scorpio, Sagittarius, Capricorn, Aquarius and Pisces.

3) The Empyrean World. Beyond all motion, all changes and all dimensions of the World of Orbs exists the Realm of Eternal Peace which has been described figuratively as "a place of Pure Light, Love, Joy and Sweetness, a Divine Fire where live and move the Intermediary Agents of Creation."

You will remember, Brothers and Sisters, that we have already explained that we divide Man in 3 parts:

- The Âme or Spirit
- The Plastic Envelope, or Soul
- The Physical or Corporeal Body

From the Quaternary Law, we know that there is a correspondence between the Higher and Lower Realms of Existence, a correspondence that is accompanied by certain conditions of progression, inverse proportion and evolution.

We may therefore conclude that there is a correspondence between Man and the Universe, and this correspondence manifests more strongly in the corresponding divisions:

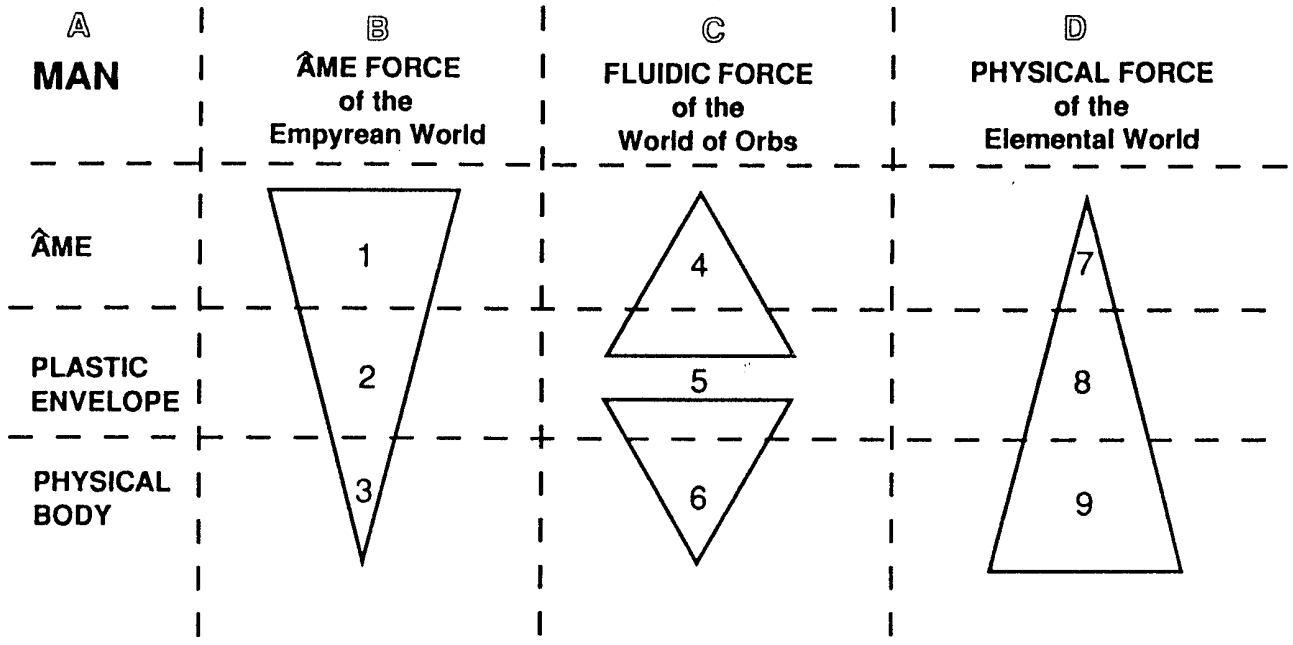
We may say that the Physical Body of Man belongs to the Elemental World of the Solar System, that his Plastic Envelope belongs to the World of Orbs and that his Âme is of the Empyrean World.

At "death" the physical body returns to the Elemental World, his Plastic Envelope (or Astral Body) lingers in the World of Orbs, then his Âme returns to the Empyrean World.

The 3 Worlds, being linked in sort to the 3 divisions of Man, exert an influence on these parts. The Empyrean World exerts an influence which we shall call the Âme Force on Man's Âme or Spirit, the World of Orbs exerts an influence which we may call the Fluidic Force over the Astral Body (or Plastic Envelope), and the Elemental World has an influence, the Physical Force, on Man's body.

It is essential that we understand perfectly that the divisions in man and the 3 different Worlds are not absolute but that they depend one on the other, The Âme , the Plastic Envelope and the Physical Body are not three strangers, they are interrelated in Man. The same with the Three Worlds.

The diagram shown below explains this fact very well. It is a conception which the Martinists share with the Pythagoreans and this diagram represents the intertwining of the three divisions. Please study it carefully. The width of the triangles and lozenge of forces represents the strength of the Force in each division. Notice that the forces attached to Man overlaps the other parts:



This is a profound chart. It graphically illustrates the influences of the three Forces on the three parts of Man. For example: Column B indicates that the force exerted by the Empyrean World, the Âme Force, influences greatly Man's Âme as indicated by the area marked "I", whereas this Âme Force does not influence Man's physical body to the same extent, as indicated by the size of the area marked "3". Study this chart well. So-called mystic writers have promulgated theories of the many bodies of which Man is composed, but they have confused subdivisions with main divisions. It is true that there are variations in each of the three main divisions illustrated on the chart, but there are only three main parts in the true constitution of Man.

(All students are requested to review "The Three Parts of Man" in Liber 5 in the light of this Lecture.)

Before we pass on, let us recall the three levels of consciousness:

- The automatic or instinctive consciousness;
- The intermediate or emotional consciousness;
- The Perfect or Christ Consciousness.

How would you relate these levels of consciousness with the foregoing?

Pythagoras, an Initiate of the ancient mystery schools, established a renowned school in Crotona, Italy and his teachings, in many cases, parallel those of our Martinist tradition.

Of the Âme, Plastic Envelope and Physical Body, each of these contributes to the formation of the other two. Before birth, the Ame gives the impetus to the Plastic Envelope, and the Plastic Envelope serves as the matrix for the physical or material body.

During terrestrial life, the reverse is the case: the physical body makes it possible for the Plastic or Fluidic Body and the Spiritual Body to function on the material plane. During life on Earth, the nine vibrations of these three bodies are ultimately bound together~ The joining of the physical and plastic envelopes produces a spark called life which lasts as long as man remains on earth. It is the same with the joining of the plastic envelope and the Âme, only in this case the spark, or the light, is somewhat more intense. The constitution of man is complete when all three parts function as a unit.

Those who believe this spark to be permanent cannot explain what happens to it before birth or after death. Physical life may be compared to the light produced by an electric current passing through two pieces of carbon. The electricity and the carbon contain potential light, but there will be no spark unless the carbons are brought close enough for the current to pass from one to the other.

Analogously, Pythagoras used numbers to illustrate the functioning of various principles in the body and in nature. Number is a general means of symbolism which can be applied to all forms which manifest on this earth plane, for without number there could be no measurement, weight or classification. Number plays an important part in all sensible action that man determines upon in pursuance of his liberation from this Forest of Errors.

If the great Hermetic Law of Correspondences which we have mentioned already: "That which is above is analogous to that which is below" is true, then we possess a definite key for studying the constitution of the human being. In general, we are able to affirm that the body of man is made in the image of God and that the truth is in man.

We have seen that there are three general divisions in the physical body: abdomen, chest and head, but we find other numbers represented besides three. There are seven openings in the head: two eyes, two nostrils, two ears and a mouth. We have 10 fingers — five on each hand — also 10 toes, and 12 pairs of ribs. Finally, the body is divided into two general parts - a right half and a left half.

In his use of numbers, Pythagoras was following the customary practice of earlier mystics whose conception of the significance of numbers is all but lost today. To them, numbers were symbols of manifested laws; they were expressions of the Absolute Unity or Omneity. The operations of numbers, then, were analogous to the Operations of the Laws of Omneity. Mystics attach great importance to the numbers: 1 - 3 - 4-7 & 10. A further examination of numbers at this time would tend more to confuse than to enlighten since we have not yet completed the fundamentals that would make them meaningful. Our V::: M::: Saint-Martin was a keen student of numbers as you know and his references to them in his Red Book are perplexing to many brethren.

Let me illustrate a comparison of the threefold division of man in Martinism with that of other philosophies. You will note all hold to the threefold division, only the terminology differs:

MARTINIST	SANSKRIT	HEBREW	HEBREW
Âme	Atman	Ruach	Ba
Plastic Envelope	Jiva	Neshemah	Ka
Physical Body	Rupa	Nephesh	Khat

The physical body in Sanskrit is represented by the word Rupa. That which corresponds to the Plastic Envelope is called Jiva, which means literally "garment" or "appearance" but signifies quickened life or vitality. Atman, as nearly as can be translated into English, stands for the Divine Soul's being incarnated. Hebrew philosophy uses the word Ruach for Âme; Neshemah for Plastic Envelope and Nephesh for the physical body.

It has been mentioned that the Plastic Envelope is a connecting link between the highest part of man's being: the Âme, and the lowest: the physical body. Many people believe that the Plastic Envelope, or Soul, is within the physical body, but this is only partially true. By its extremely tenuous nature, the Plastic Envelope extends outside of and surrounds the physical body. It is very closely allied to our breathing. As man is bound to his mother before birth by the umbilical cord, so is he bound after birth to the atmosphere of earth, by breath. By analogy with the umbilical cord, the cord of breath which binds him to the earth has been mystically referred to as the atmospheric cord, or, as in Ecclesiastes 12:6 "the silver cord." In fact, silver cord is the term most often used.

When the umbilical cord is severed at birth, man starts a new existence. In the same manner, when the silver cord is severed at death, man again enters upon a new existence.

It is the Plastic Envelope which animates the physical body of man. Its actual anatomical seat in the human body is the thoracic cavity, and its energy circulates through the sympathetic nervous system. We must always keep in mind that the Plastic Envelope serves both the Âme and the physical body. Its service to the body lies in presiding over organic or animal life, and to the Âme in furnishing the means of communicating intellectual knowledge.

During sleep or periods of unconsciousness, the relation between the Plastic Envelope and the physical body is interrupted. At such times it is said that the Plastic Envelope is disconnected from its corresponding physical seat.

The function of the Plastic Envelope is to provide human electricity or nervous force necessary to the action of spirit or to the interaction of the Ame and matter. From an organic point of view, the Plastic Envelope is really a universal tool used by both the body and the Spirit.

The Âme has very little contact with the physical body (refer to the Diagram given earlier in this Lecture). The Plastic Envelope, however, has one half of its qualities interlocked with the Âme. Thus, the Arne is able to function through the physical body by means of the Plastic Mediator.

All students should now have a good comprehension of the three divisions of the human body. The two lower divisions, the body and the Plastic Envelope, are responsible for reproduction and all the acts of life, but they cannot operate without a Superior and Intelligent Âme which commands the lower to make them act.

This is sufficient for tonight, brethren. In our next lecture we will continue our discussion of the Plastic Envelope and the importance of its functions. These observations will help make you wise and prudent and will prevent you from losing yourself on unknown trails from which you cannot return.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

LECTURE
The Plastic Envelope and the Human Body

Brothers & Sisters:

We have spoken of the location of the Plastic Envelope in the body. This brings us to the interesting question of the interrelationship of the Plastic Envelope and the physical body. When a man is deprived of one of his physical limbs, he seems to continue to have sensations apparently coming from the amputated member.

Modern-day medicine offers this explanation: All bodily sensation is interpreted in the brain, and various groups of brain cells are connected with nerve fibers from the feet, the hands, the hips, the shoulders, in fact from every area of the body. There are four ways by which nerves are stimulated:

(1) Electrically,
(2) Thermally, by applying excessive heat or excessive cold,
(3) Chemically, by applying a chemical substance to the nerve, and
(4) Mechanically, by applying a pressure which mashes or temporarily deforms the nerve ending.

If a person's leg is amputated at the knee, for example, the nerves going to the toe, heel, and different parts of the foot. as well as to the calf, are severed. When the stump is healed, these nerve endings again form a small a bulb and are capable of transmitting sensation to the brain. At various times, the stump of the amputation may be subjected to changes of temperature, as in changes of the weather; or the process of healing itself may produce a temporary pressure upon the nerves through the accumulation of fat deposits, contractions of muscles, or pressure exerted from the wearing of an artificial limb. Or, again, it is possible that the nerves may be stimulated by pressure exerted at various times by alteration in the amount of blood circulating through them.

All of these conditions stimulate the nerve endings which formerly came from the amputated member, and, according to the medical explanation, when these sensations arrive at the particular area of the brain, the consciousness immediately is stimulated and produces the sensation, which is illusory, that the amputated part is aching, or is too hot, or too cold, just as though the member itself were actually producing the pain, or were subjected to extremes of temperature.

Now if the Plastic Envelope could be divided like physical matter, as materialists infer, it is certain that, following the amputation of an arm or a leg, a man could never have any feeling in that part. This would be true because that part of the Plastic Envelope would have been separated at the same time as the limb. Still less explanation can we find in the amputated part itself, for it is obvious that from the time of the separation, the physical limb would have no more connection with its source and, therefore, could give no testimony of its sensibility. The amputated limb is nothing to the body from which it has been separated.

Therefore: the power of sensation exists for a man after amputation solely because the Plastic Envelope itself has not been cut off. It is beyond amputation. It remains, as always, a thin, tenuous, supra-physical substance. The loss of a physical arm or leg as a result of a serious mutilation will cause only the loss of the physical functioning of that arm or leg in relation to the surrounding material world.

A very interesting point worth mentioning at this time is that the circulation of the nervous force within man puts him in communication with the universe. In highly evolved mystics, there occurs what in occultism is sometimes called the circulation of astral images. These astral images generally appear to be coming from the back of the head. This is not altogether exact, but it will give an idea as to the nature of this phenomena. We must wait a little for a development of this thought, but at this point it can be said that the so-called "eye" of the Plastic Envelope is just level with the nape of the neck; that is: at the point where the back of the head and the neck meet. By concentrating upon, and seeing in imagination this physical spot, one can bring into activity the functions of this center more quickly. This will be important when we study the actions of the invisible world so important to every Martinist.

The phenomena of sleep are dependent upon the Plastic Envelope. During our waking hours, the human electricity of the Plastic Envelope flows toward the brain. The intellect and consciousness of man function then. After continuous activity, the reserves of the sympathetic nervous system are used up. Such is the case at the end of the day or after arduous work when we find ourselves tired and in need of rest. At such times, this nervous force no longer goes to the brain but to the spinal matter and the sympathetic ganglia. Then we begin to feel our head becoming heavy and we yawn. Yawning is always a sign of the changing of direction of this nervous force. People who yawn often are those whose nervous force changes direction easily.

The forces of nature, working through the human constitution, restore and re-supply this nervous force of the Plastic Envelope and cause a strong current of energy to go up again to the brain and we awaken. These are the two physiological states through which we ordinarily experience the influence of the nervous force of the Plastic Envelope.

Two other general conditions also bring about a depletion or slowing down of this nervous force, these are, first: disease or sickness, accident, apoplexy, fainting or sleeping sickness, the second is artificial sleep induced through the administration of drugs or a chemical anesthetic, or by hypnosis.

We have spoken of the position and general function of the Plastic Envelope, which some philosophies call the Astral Body. The fact that the circumstance of sleep is closely related to the Plastic Envelope and its functioning makes it necessary that we look more closely into its activities.

Sleep is everywhere exemplified in nature. The duality of positive and negative phases in nature is easily observed. The earth, turning on its axis, presents us alternately with the stimulating rays of the sun, and the calming, restful influence of the night. During the course of the day, the sun's positive rays urge us on to activity. However, the necessity of relaxing and strengthening the body and regenerating the nervous system brings on sleep, the negative condition of existence.

Sleep is as important to life as is work and activity. Proper sleep helps to maintain our physical existence and does much to repair the abnormalities of life due to disease and age. Sleep, then, is as necessary as food or air for the preservation of health.

Sleep is the state in which the Âme ceases to control the functions of the body through consciousness. It is a manifestation of fatigue when the body has more or less reached the limit of its physical activity for that day. Difficulty in concentration is one of the first signs of the approach of sleep. The individual finds that he closes his eyes, begins to yawn, places his body in an easy position, nods, and is soon asleep. We speak of such a person as being "dead to the world." His breathing becomes slower. His pulse slackens and his brain does not have so large a circulation of blood as when he is awake. The Spinal Nervous System yields to the Sympathetic Nervous System the control of all the faculties. During a dreamless sleep, even thought ceases and memory is held in abeyance because the brain, the organ of the mind has ceased to function and is inactive.

To an observer, a sleeping person seems absolutely passive and quiescent; but, by the strange faculty of the Plastic Envelope, the sleeper may be gazing upon the pyramids, scaling the heights of the Himalayas. ranging the Gobi desert. or struggling with a nightmare. In other words, during sleep. the Plastic Envelope and the Âme are in closer relation to invisible worlds. During sleep. the tension of the Plastic Envelope is loosened and it becomes more elastic. If this Plastic Envelope, or Silver Cord, should be severed or become permanently disconnected, death would result.

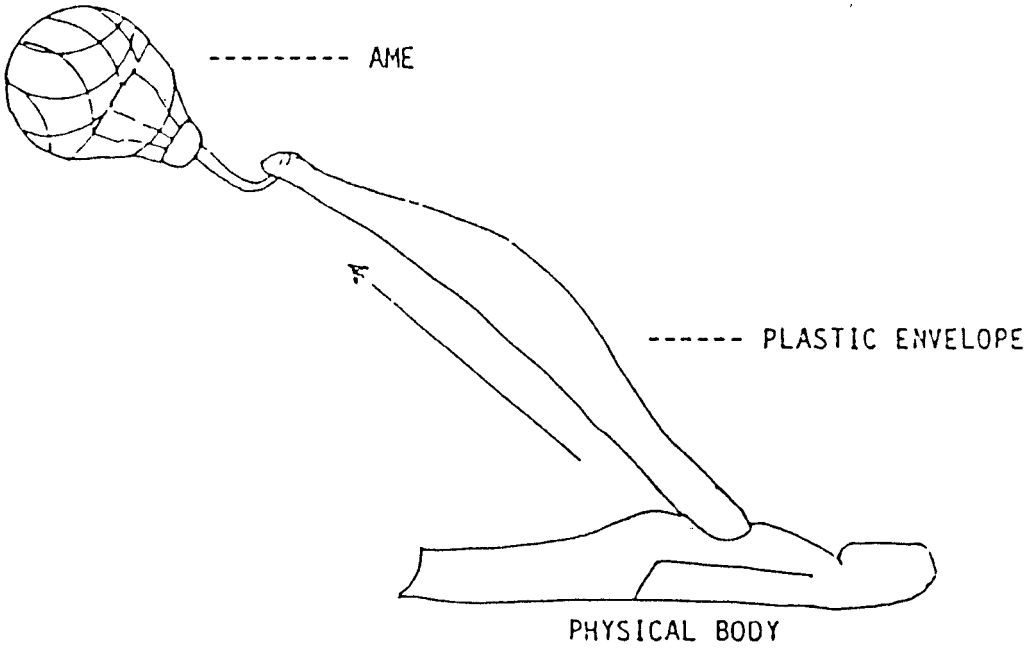
In Liber 5 you were given a diagram of an observation balloon which indicated, analogously, the three separate and distinct divisions in the makeup of the human being. The following diagram shows what occurs during sleep, when the Plastic Envelope stretches in any direction, depending upon the sleepers thoughts.



Dreams have been studied by men of all ages. History is replete with examples of prophetic dreams, from the Biblical Joseph, to Chaucer's time, and down to modern times through the work of Freud, Jung and their successors. The art of true dreaming and the ability to recall scenes and knowledge from dreams is all-important to the Martinist who wishes to speed up his process of regeneration. The sanest, as well as the most mystical method for obtaining a night of sleep and meaningful dreams is dependent upon more or less normal functions of the physical body.

Some exponents of Oriental schools go to extremes in their breathing exercises. They concentrate so much upon a single idea that not only does the flow of the association of ideas become dammed up, but the physical brain even becomes inflamed. Such conditions not only prohibit sound sleep but also give rise to distorted and exaggerated dreams.

On the other hand, a comfortable night is best prepared for by a calm mind and the presence of nothing but kindly thoughts toward all men. Thinking of things other than ourselves, preferably abstract ideas of beauty and harmony, will relax the tension of the Plastic Envelope on the physical body. Turning the eyeballs upward after closing the lids tends to disengage the consciousness from the physical body and center it on the Plastic Envelope.

The human heart lives on the plane on which it wishes to live. The things we think about in the daytime and which we desire will be the things to which we are attracted in sleep. In order to have true dreams, therefore, we must be constantly working within ourselves to transform the Man of Errors into the Man of Regeneration.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

ESSAY
Dreams — Their Nature and Significance

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

Man has tried to interpret his dreams ever since he became aware of them, believing that they contained some important, yet hidden message for him. Lacking the proper knowledge and perspective, he attributed supernatural or divine influence to most, if not all of them. Perhaps the dreams gave him his first ideas of a life after death. Perhaps those who started to interpret them, however primitively, originated that caste of privileged people that in time evolved into the priestly caste, claiming the exclusive right and ability to act as an intermediary between Mankind and that feared unknown, the "supernatural" world.

These are possible suppositions. What we do know well is that dreams became a source of numberless superstitions to which many people are still devoted slaves. Strangely, with our science now being able to interpret in proper light many of the dream-symbols, and explain them to the layman, some of these superstitions turn up to be only a very primitive way of expressing otherwise a profound understanding of them!

The Sages quite early segregated all dreams according to their sources. Their division goes back to the dawn of our civilization and seems to agree very well with the much publicized findings of modern science. Basically, there are two sources of our dreams:

(A) Man himself
(B) Unknown Agent, or God.

Today, we have acquired a better way to express our understanding of ourselves and we could suggest a three-fold division. This recognizes three different stimuli seemingly responsible for producing, or inducing dreams, with the explicit understanding that all of them contribute, in different proportions, to every dream.

There are dreams provoked by:

(A) Physiological and mechanical stimuli.
(B) Individual (or microcosmic) memory in man, (conscious or unconscious.)
(C) Collective (or macrocosmic) memory of Mankind and Universe.

Dreams provoked by (C) can truly be classified as the "prophetic" or "divine" dreams of the Ancients.

The mystic must pay more attention to his dreams as they allow us to know ourselves much better, the first step on the Path toward Reintegration. Martinists are well aware of this and that is why they make a special study of dreams and the levels of consciousness beyond them.

Perhaps it should be stressed here that only the dreamer himself is able to properly understand his dreams. Any outside help in their interpretation has, as aim, to direct the attention of the dreamer to the source and reason WHY the Inner Man has expressed himself in the particular way.

The recall, recording and interpretation of dreams is one of the easiest ways for an individual to tap his own subconscious without professional help. Your dreams can give you knowledge about yourself that you can learn of in no other way.

Many people will respond to the suggestion of studying their own dreams by saying, "But I never dream.", or "I know what I dream sometimes, but I never remember them." It has been proven scientifically that everybody dreams several times every night. It is apparently a necessary release of tension while the mind continues to process the events, thoughts and emotions of the day and the conflicts that are buried in the subconsciousness. In addition, dreams communicate to the dreamer information that is important to his health, welfare and soul growth, if he will but listen to them.

There are two simple rules which will facilitate dream recall if they are followed conscientiously:

(1) Place a pencil and paper. or a tape recorder by your bed when you retire. Right before you go to sleep say to yourself, "I will remember my dreams and I will write them down as soon as I wake up." Say this several times silently or out loud and mean it.

(2) Concentrate on the physical spot at the nape of the neck, that point where the back of the head joins the neck. See this spot in your imagination, visualize the spot as a glowing ball of light. This exercise should be done just before retiring.

All dreams must be recorded immediately upon awakening.

According to Dr. Ann Faraday, dreams can be interpreted on three levels and not all the levels appl to each dream.

First level dreams are those which clarify recent waking experiences, calling attention to facts which the conscious mind of the dreamer had overlooked or dismissed as less important than other issues he was attending to at the time. The first step in dream interpretation, therefore, is to examine the dream to see if it contains any helpful information about external current events in time life of time dreamer. Prophetic or precognitive dreams also fall into this first level category. The dreamer should examine all first level dreams for possible practical application amid determine what action, if any, he may wish to take in the light of the message brought by the dream

If no first level application seems to be applicable. Dr. Faraday' suggests that one should then turn to the next level. Second level dreams deal more with the dreamer's subjective feelings about people and situations in the external world, than with any objective truth about them. The first question to ask yourself is: Do the dream characters represent themselves (which is quite possible if the dreamer has been in recent contact with them), or do they symbolize someone or something with similar characteristics (which is more likely if there has been no recent contact with them in waking life). Second level dreams enable the dreamer to examine the inner attitudes and prejudices which are affecting his actions and experiences in the outer world, and if necessary to change them.

If either first or second level dream interpretation (or both) explains the dream to the dreamer's satisfaction, it may not be necessary to explore the dream any further. However, if neither method results in understanding the message of the dream (or if it seems that there may be more to the dream) then the third level should be explored. This is the one that Carl Jung emphasized and wrote about extensively, namely: to see if the dream contains information about the unconscious mind of the dreamer, his own inner problems and his inner resources of psychic energy.

In this level of interpretation one assumes that all people, objects and other symbols in the dream represent parts of the dreamer's own psyche, or total being, of which he is currently not aware. He may have repressed them, or never have become aware of them, or has simply forgotten them. For example: a man who was raised with a very masculine outlook on life, being told "big boys don't cry" and similar admonitions, may be entirely unaware that all men have a feminine side to their personality without which they could not be a whole person. A dream may then try to bring this to his attention with a feminine character or characters, which Jung called the "anima". Dreams of volcanoes or earthquakes may warn the dreamer that repressed anger or other emotion may result in an "explosion" or shaking of his apparently peaceful existence, if he does not do something about the repression.

Third level dreams also reach even deeper than the subconscious mind just described, and tap what Jung called "the collective unconscious." This includes instincts, drives, influences and knowledge from the rest of humanity, from the Universe, from current times and from all of history, recorded and unrecorded. Dr. Faraday emphasizes, however, that such Universal images have personal significance for the dreamer and may be interpreted in different ways by different dreamers.

Personally, I believe that there may even be a fourth level of dreams in which information (often precognitive) is conveyed to the dreamer by a spirit guide or teacher, or maybe directly from the Source. I should also mention that the dreams that I am referring to on this occasion are not of the type resulting from excursions of the Plastic Envelope which would be more properly classified as "projections."

> Dreams use symbolic language; they are very rarely literal in the message they give. Maybe this is because they are usually pictures; although words, when they are recalled, are generally especially significant.

It is important for the dreamer to explore the meaning of the symbol for himself and not to rely on a so-called "Dream Dictionary." It is his dream, and it is his own unconscious that has selected the symbols and therefore his own interpretation is much more likely to be correct than are those of other people. For example: one woman dreamed that she was trying to get milk from a steer (a male cow), and, of course, she could not do so. She interpreted this as showing her that she was frustrated because she was trying to obtain needed nourishment from her husband but he was inherently unable to provide this. This gave her a new and helpful understanding of their relationship. Dream books usually state that a bull or steer is a sexual symbol, but for her this interpretation made no sense, whereas her own explanation fitted the facts and was helpful.

I have found that the dreams of a very sick person are an invaluable tool in the search for the cause of the disease, which is so important to discover if the healing is to be permanent. This is especially true of people with long term illnesses, or so-called "incurable" diseases. Their dreams very often reveal hidden hostilities, angers, resentments, and other repressed emotions concerning specific individuals or the world in general. Other dreams indicate the need for a change in diet, a reduction of food or beverage intake and various types of guidance for the dreamer. Still others reveal what the dreamer is building with his waking thought patterns, which must sooner or later become manifested in the physical body. We shall have more to say about dreams in due time.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

ESSAY
Who Shall Carry the Signs?

> "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned. And these signs shall accompany them that believe: in my name shall they cast out demons; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents, and if they drink any deadly thing it shall in no-wise hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover. ..And they went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them and confirming the word by the signs that followed." (Mark 16:15-20)

In this controversial passage, to whom is the Master talking? Who is to go into the world and preach? Who shall preach everywhere and have the word confirmed by the signs that follow? On the surface, it would appear that Jesus was addressing the eleven disciples as He appeared to them following the resurrection. It seems to be a final commission to these men whom He had organized to carry on His work.

The Christian church has always believed that this was, through the disciples, the commission for the church. Thus it has seen the entire Gospel directed primarily toward the church rather than to the individual, and the Bible becomes more of a set of church bylaws than a Universal truth for application by all men. One variation on this theme is that man lives only for the church, and only by supporting it can he gain righteousness and salvation. Another variation has led missionaries to all the darkest corners of the world to face great hardships and sometimes brutal deaths.

The church has followed the idea of baptism to the letter, stressing the idea that unless a person is baptized, either by sprinkling or total immersion, he cannot be saved. The statement, "But he that disbelieveth shall be condemned," has been taken to be a command rather than a basic statement of cause and effect. Because of this, we have seen the most unchristian denunciations of those who do not "believe." Many religious sects, again misunderstanding the final commission, have literally sought to "babble in tongues," have made the handling of deadly snakes an initiation into belief, and have even drunk poison to prove their belief.

Now, an enlightened minority within Christianity, and certainly mystics and great thinkers throughout all time without organized religion, have believed that Jesus' commission was really a Universal challenge to all men everywhere. Jesus was not giving instructions for a church to follow. I do not believe that Jesus organized a "church" as such. As a matter of fact, many of the accepted practices and organizational ideals of modern churches are the very things Jesus condemned in the religious institutions in His day. Jesus organized a little band of disciples to convey His message of Truth, to carry on the teaching of the Truth that would make them free and would help them to find abundant life. His was an organization not of doctrine but of ideas.

When Jesus said, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to the whole creation," this refers to the world within. We can never be of any great influence in the world without until we have converted the world within Therefore, man's first job is to discipline his own thoughts, to bring every errant thought into captivity to the Divine process, and to preach the Gospel to every cell and organ of the body.

How the idea of baptism has been labored over in Christianity! We recall that John baptized people in the river Jordan, as did some of the disciples. This was an outward symbol of a spiritual ideal that Jesus merely tolerated. He said, "Suffer it to be so now." Jesus did not baptize people with outward symbols. The only form He ever used was when He breathed on His disciples the holy breath of Spirit.

The word "baptism" comes from the Greek word "baptisma," which is a wonderful and powerful word. The real meaning is: "To become overwhelmed completely by an element [any element] to the point of saturation." Jesus had in mind an immersion in Cosmic awareness; as Paul said, "In Him we live and move and have our being."

The "baptism of repentance unto the remission of sins," which the church has made into an outward form, is, in fact, a simple and beautiful matter of thought training. The Greek word from which we receive our word "repentance" is "metanoia." It has been interpreted as admonitions to God of sorrow for past sins and a resolve to be good in the future. In the sense of goodness, of course, the whole Christian world has failed, failed to discern the Christ teaching about mental laws. The true meaning of "metanoia" is to change one's mind. Jesus did not mean that we should condemn those who do not believe or repent. He was stating a law of Truth: "As a man thinketh, so is he." To believe in God is to make contact with the source of life, substance, and intelligence. It is the very key to living abundantly. To disbelieve, to close the mind, is to open the way to want and suffering. The disbeliever veritably condemns himself, as does a person who refuses to turn on a light switch, to walk in the darkness.

"And these signs shall accompany them that believe." Again, this is not a command to do something, but an indication of the law of cause and effect. The person who keeps conscious contact with God in faith will experience blessings.

"In my name shall they cast out demons." The word "demon" refers to a multitude of inner conflicts and complexes, states of consciousness that have been developed because the creative power of man has been used in an unwise or ignorant manner. There are demons in all of us, such as inferiority complexes, because in human consciousness we have become confused and filled with obsessions and mental aberrations. But when we lift our consciousness and work "in His name," we find that we can speak with authority and spiritual Truth, and the demon states will be cast out.

To "speak with tongues" actually means to have the spiritual ability to speak in harmony and understanding with people in all different states of consciousness. Jesus had that ability; He could translate his thoughts into everyone's language. This is one of the signs we carry when we truly believe.

"They shall take up serpents, and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall in no wise hurt them." We must remember that Jesus did not hold deadly serpents in His hands just to prove His power. He would not even turn stones to bread to prove this power. The serpent in the Scriptures always refers to elemental life. Jesus said, "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the son of man be lifted up." This refers to the lifting up of individual consciousness, from sense awareness to the consciousness of man's Divine nature. "Taking up serpents" represents lifting up consciousness without being hurt by sense reactions.

"They shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." We must remember that all these things are the signs that accompany those who believe and are elevated to spiritual consciousness. There can be no real healing in human consciousness; cure, yes, but no real healing. This has been the weakness in Christianity; it has tried to carry the signs as the Divine authority, and has laid on hands only through rituals and ceremonies. But you are the one that the signs must accompany. You must carry the signs; you must believe; you must be immersed in spiritual consciousness. You must go forth to preach the gospel, to heal the sick, and to cast out demons.

To "lay hands on the sick" is a figure of speech. It does not necessarily mean to make physical contact. It means rather to take the sick person into your consciousness and hold the person in your consciousness of the all-pervading life and love of God, in which there can be no imperfection.

We find a vital key to all this in the final phrase of this passage from Mark: "And they went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them and confirming the word by the signs that followed." Remember that "the word" in the Scriptures always means "the law." The law worked with them, then. It seems obvious, but it is easy to forget. The law is always working on our side when we are in the right consciousness, and it becomes our servant. When we speak the word of Truth, the law works with us and results in health, overcoming, and demonstrations of good. Remember that "all things are possible." You make the difference. You carry the signs!

ESSAY
The Religion of the Future

Man delights in looking forward and imagining the kind of world he will have in the future. In fiction and in the funny papers, he imagines cities of the future, space travel in the year 2000, and even computerized systems of education of an age to come. Man seems to know that the times change and that the world and all that is in it evolves. He has seen so many developments in just his own life span that he looks forward with an almost breathless anticipation, wondering "What's next?"

But it would seem that man has a blind spot, for he looks into the future except in the case of his religions. Traditionally, religions have looked backward to other times. We are urged to remember "the day God walked the earth," to find help and inspiration in the prophets of old. Generally, it is worship in retrospect. Or, if religion does look to the future, it looks beyond time and out of the world to a millennium which is really the fulfilling of a concept formulated in the religion of the past.

It has always seemed to me that one of the basic reasons for man's unbalance in the world, which gives rise to wars and to all manner of man's inhumanity to man, is that while man makes steady progress in knowledge of the Universe around him, he accepts dogmatic assertions that knowledge of the world within him stopped in some time in the revered past. Thus, while science and education are continually evolving, progress in religion comes slow, if at all. And these words might well cause some raised eyebrows among the "defenders of the faith." "Progress in religion?" it might be asked. "How can we progress beyond God's word, beyond eternal truths?" We can all agree that Truth cannot be surpassed. but I suggest that there may be a great disparity between absolute Truth and man's concept of Truth.

Some people were very much disturbed by the theologians who were crying a few years ago that "God is dead." Personally, I saw this as a good sign. It reflected modern man's unwillingness to accept custom-made convictions, and his inability to find help or inspiration from an ancient definition of God. Emerson once said, "When we have broken with our god of tradition, and ceased from our god of rhetoric, then may God fire the heart with His presence."

While today we talk of religious unity, and ecumenical movements are much in the news, why not speculate upon the religion of the future? If the religions of mankind succeed in putting away their swaddling clothes to the degree that science has matured in the past century, what can we expect to find in the next hundred years? Let me say that this view of the "religion of the future" is my very own, based on my insights and hopes and dreams. However, I am not giving a prophecy of which of the great religions of today will win out in a "survival of the fittest." I am thinking of "religion" not as a particular system of worship, but as mankind's general quest for Truth.

To the average individual, "religion" is something you join. You may be asked, as I was in the army, "Which are you: Catholic, Protestant, or Jew?" I was forced to give such a definition so they could put it on my dog tags. It seems to me that this will be the most startling distinction of the religion of the future: There will be many schools of thought concerning the spiritual way of life, and there may be many churches involved in the process of spiritual education; but there will be only one religion, one absolute science of Being.

The religion of the future will not be centered in churches, but in lives. It will not be a way of worship, but a way of life. Its purpose will not be to create great churches, but to produce good people. When we have good people at the bargaining table, good people in the councils of government, good people as teachers and policemen and parents, then the problems of the world will be easily resolved.

Oh, we will still have churches in the future. We may always need them, but as places of study and spiritual research, not as repositories of "final truths." The problem of retrospective religion is that it ends in the church. In the future, religion will only begin in the church. The great purpose of the church must be to teach, not preach; to set the individual free, not to bind him in chains to a creed. The Scottish preacher, Henry Drummond, once said, "The great purpose of the church is to help people to get along without it." The church must not center its efforts on converting people from one "ism" to another, but rather on helping them to be "transformed by the renewing of their minds."

The religion of the future will be focused on one great concept: unity. It will emphasize man's unity with the great creative force of God, which finds is outlet through man himself. Man will end for all time his speculation about God. He will realize that God is a presence and power which can only be apprehended and conceived of in terms of His manifestation. We may know God in and as the daisy of the field, the birds of the air, the sun, the moon, and the stars of the heavens. Or, we may know God in and as man. Thus, religious studies of the future will be studies of self-realization, using techniques of self-unfoldment.

The religion of the future will not only be compatible with science, it will realize the basic unity of all knowledge, so that you can't have one without the other. The fact that even today the great scientific minds are grasping this is exemplified by this prophecy of Charles Steinmetz: "The greatest discovery and development of the coining years will be along spiritual lines. Someday, the scientists of the world will turn their laboratories over to the study of God and the spiritual forces. When this day comes, the world will see more advancement in one generation than it has in the past four."

In the religion of the future, man will be taught that his body is not him, but only the instrument of self-expression. You do not need to be the victim of your body; you can and should be its master. To outgrow this tyranny of the body, occasionally leave your body behind. Let it drop out of your thoughts completely. Forget its demands for attention, its passions and appetites, its hungers and thirsts, its aches and pains. A freedom greater than any of us has ever known awaits us when we educate the body to do our will.

We are also subject to the tyranny of the intellect. No one knows less about real freedom than the man who lives strictly on an intellectual plane. As Bergson says, "There is a deeper than intellect in man." Slip away occasionally from the only guide to Truth you are accustomed to, and dare to go your own way into the unseen alone, feeling for the right pathway by intuition. Eventually, the intellect will follow and will be enlightened by the intuition.

Certainly, the religion of the future will accept the concept of the unity of all mankind. It will become obvious that when we know God, and know our true self as an activity of God, that we will know our basic unity with all which is of God. As Emerson says: "The heart and soul of all men being one, this bitterness of his and mine ceases. He is mine; I am my brother, and my brother is me." We have tried all manner of laws of social justice and of restraints and barriers for protection, but the key lies in the realization of unity.

Usually, we see in others only the things that separate us. But the religion of the future will condition us to turn resolutely away from all these surface expressions, realizing that they do not express the real person; we will be disciplined to hold the real self in them constantly before us. And this is the role of love. Love is the language of the Spirit and its harmonizing influence, through which we can see the Divine even in the human.

Above all, the religion of the future will not be a theology, neither reducible nor reduced to a doctrine, or written in a book. It will be a beckoning light to follow, and it will be a way of life. As Jesus said, "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another."

Special Summary Lecture

INTRODUCTION

Dear Associate:

PEACE BE WITH YOU!

Here we are at Liber 10! As you have learned, the numerical series 1 - 10 marks the completion of a cycle. In the onward march, a new cycle begins at 1 again, but on a higher level. Finding ourselves at this particular spot therefore, it is a most natural place to pause for refreshment. This we will do then, so we may review some of the important matters that concern us mutually, expand a little on what we have just touched on, and answer some questions.

We begin with the mundane! Our College, as we told you, is registered under the laws of our country as a non-profit Institution and is governed by a Board of Directors. Neither the Directors, nor the brethren who help produce and distribute the Libers are paid. They all give of their time willingly and freely. Regarding our monetary position, again, as we have already said, the stated monthly contribution alone is NOT sufficient to cover our expenses. We leave it to members who understand to help us with the occasional donation in addition to the fixed monthly due. Thankfully, many members respond and we are managing.

The greater number of members have been prompt in sending their contributions but a small number have been neglectful. We have sent these first 10 Libers, however, to almost everyone who has affiliated, irrespective of whether they have maintained an active status or not. We have done this because we know that some people coming into esoteric work for the first tune become frustrated. The ideas are new, sometimes they conflict with old beliefs and superstitions, more questions arise than they can find answers for, and the experience is bewildering. As a token of our understanding and encouragement we have therefore lent a helping hand to this point.

We say “to this point” because these 10 Libers comprise the First Phase of our curriculum, they contain 32 very excellent lectures which were specially chosen to convey both theoretical and practical steps. If this series is carefully studied, most of the questions which arise in the beginning can be answered reasonably well by the student himself, in the light of later lectures.

Regarding this question of finding answers. In our life we are confronted with issues and matters that constantly come up and in the world of philosophy and religion, it is much better to try to build an overall concept, and gradually “fill in” the details, than it is to try to settle each little question. Remember there is no answer that is going to resolve or settle a particular question “once and for all” as they say. Things change! And as you grow in wisdom and understanding, your horizon will widen, your conceptions enlarge, the clothes you wear today become outworn and outgrown tomorrow, so there must be a continual re-adjustment. Never be afraid to widen your perspective; it may cause some disconcertment at the time, but remember the chick in the egg - unless he breaks the shell his further growth will be choked, and yet he may wonder if he is doing the “right thing”, after all it is so comfortable and reassuring inside his little world, why should he break out - the shell will be destroyed, what will mother say?

So, from here onward we will have to proceed on strict principles. We live in a work-a-day world where everything costs money and our operation is not exempt! We have to pay for everything from paper clips and postage stamps to printing presses and electricity! This is the fact of life we have to face and deal with. As we move into the next Cycle therefore, we will send Libers only to members who have an active status. We deeply appreciate everyone's cooperation in maintaining their active status as much in advance as possible; having to send out reminders requires much extra time and 'work for your brethren who are giving their time freely FOR YOU and in addition is an added expense for the College.

We have been asked: "What is your biggest problem?" After the ever present one of "balancing the budget" we would probably say: Promotion. Getting the word of our existence and purpose out and about. There are many people looking for greater light who do not know where to find it! There are many people who do not even know that esoteric instruction is available! We are trying to reach as many as our resources allow; this is why we deeply appreciate the help we receive from brethren who continue to tell their friends and acquaintances about us. We have received many applications with brethrens' key numbers affixed. We graciously thank you all.

The letters we have received from members have been very encouraging and we thank you again. Yes, we know there are other "schools" who charge up to five times the monthly dues we ask and that their lessons are not as substantial as ours. However, all organizations endeavoring to push back the darkness are helping. Our main "beef" is that some of them make the most unfounded claims, irrational statements and dogmatic proclamations which insult the educated and intelligent mind and in so doing have, in the past, thrown a very dubious light on the whole metaphysical scene. Do we need to remind our members that chicanery, deception and fraud are to be found in every department of human endeavor and that there are as many charlatans and crooks to be found in the chambers and hallways of religion and philosophy, as there are to be found elsewhere? The advice we offer our students who read extraneous literature is: Learn to think for yourself! Do not be credulous or gullible! Learn to discriminate, and keep your feet on the ground!

"What about the lectures by Saint-Martin and the papers written in John Yarker's Notebook?" The lectures by Saint-Martin are far too deep to be presented as yet. Quite a lot of ground work still has to be laid down before they can be presented. The papers in John Yarker's Notebook: These range from the general to the specific and we can begin to use some of them. There is quite a lot of material which will be of great interest to our members who are also Freemasons. Beginning with the next Liber (#11) we will commence our study of the Book of Nature and shortly after that we will start the papers from the J. Y. Notebook. We have also been sent the prayers of the Elus Cohen, the original manuscripts of which are in the Jean-Baptiste Willermoz collection in the municipal library of Lyons, and these will be forthcoming shortly.

We would now like to invite your participation in these two projects:

(1) Monthly Report. If you can spare the time, we would like to receive from you a brief monthly report. We are not asking you to write us long letters! A very short note briefly jotting down what for you are the important points of the material you are receiving will be fine. Also any comments or questions. Your report will enable us to detect what the major interests of the brethren are and we in turn will be able to accentuate the areas of greatest interest in the up-coming Libers. Regarding questions, we are glad to answer questions, we endeavor to answer all the mail we receive, but questions you ask are probably in the minds of other students as well, and by answering them in the Libers, everyone benefits.

(2) Morning Attunement. The procedure is: on awakening, first say the Lord's Prayer, then send out thoughts of Peace, Brotherliness and Love to your fellow College students, and then to the world. This is a very simple exercise and one which we hope you will make a daily ritual.

Now, I have asked our Chancellor to address you at this significant point in your progress and he has gladly obliged. This address is of such importance and has such a tremendous amount of "food for thought" that I would like to exhort you to study it, daily, for the rest of this month.

In closing, I thank you for all your considerations and helps. God bless you, may He make His face to shine upon you and give you Peace. I salute you as a Postulant on the Path. Fear knocked, faith answered ... no one was there. Brothers & Sisters: Take Courage.

Sincerely yours in the Work,

LECTURE
Address by Chancellor

Dear Brethren of the International College of Martinists:

SALUTATIONS!

I welcome the invitation of your Principal, Sâr Saccas, to address you at this significant point in your progress. Generally speaking, I will confine my talk with you to points already touched upon, and perhaps see if I can shed a little more light in some areas.

For most people, death is a fearsome occurrence, a dark and seemingly unfathomable mystery. Every one knows that the end of all his efforts in this world will be the grave. Yet, I ask you: Isn't it strange that this hard and inexorable reality which confronts everyone without exception, makes only a few people ask, "Why is this so, Where do I go after the death of the body?"

Most people try to ignore the occurrence of death which for them is so fraught with fear and suffering, that they try to silence it. The majority would rather not speak about it. And yet, if they only knew: there is no death, at least not in an abrupt, definite end; for death in the physical world is at the same time birth in the "hereafter." Let us try to clarify this further.

There is indeed a "hereafter" (to use the popular term), with its numerous spheres, but these are not regions of eternal bliss or eternal doom. The realm of the "dead" belongs entirely to that part of the world known to us. It is simply the invisible half, the invisible reflection. That is why mystics often speak of the "reflection sphere" when referring to the "hereafter". Do see it clearly before you: this earth and the hereafter are the two halves of our field of existence. The etheric and astral regions of the hereafter are definitely not the Kingdom of Heaven, but the invisible half of our material world, and, just like the physical world, these regions are subject to the law of constant change. Therefore, on entering the "hereafter," one is definitely not entering the Eternal Home. Perhaps the accompanying diagrams will illustrate this even better than words. Please study them carefully.

Many people have an image of this world and think they know all about it, and about this life, but we are constantly forced to alter this image and our ideas to make them fit in with new scientific discoveries. Our world-image is therefore always changing, and in fact depends greatly on our age, our character and even our mood.

That is why so many ideologies exist, why there are so many religious, philosophical and political points of view. And everyone is convinced that the point of view he has chosen is the only right one!

These conflicting opinions alone make it, clear that what is being argued about cannot be anything imperishable, anything unchangeable. Only what is above this world and its laws can be Absolute and Unchangeable, and these things are above discussion and argument.

Let us not go too fast. Perhaps it will help to make matters more lucid if we use an analogy and observe the daily cycle of the sun. To us, the sun appears to rise in the east at dawn, to reach its zenith at noon, and to set in the west at night. If we applied this sequence to human life, then the death of the body, like the setting sun, would seem to be a definite end. Yet we know that the sun continues on its way during the night, that sunset in one place is sunrise somewhere else. By analogy, therefore, we can deduce that material death is not a real end. Just as the sun rises again at the end of the night and becomes visible once more as a logical consequence of its unseen, nocturnal journey, so too does human life not end with "death", but carries on unseen.

Death in the earthly sphere (the Elemental World) is at the same time birth in the "hereafter", the lower section of the World of Orbs to use the Martinist terminology, or the Realm of letzirah, or Formation, to say it Qabalistically. The day of human existence is followed by the night, and just as the night is followed by the day, so the sojourn of the human system, after sufficient time, is followed by a new physical birth in the earthly sphere. As a result of this re-birth, the human system has a new personality, but the Inner Self remains the same, and on it is engraved its fate, or karma, (both "good" & "bad") and the experiences that have to be lived through. This sequence of birth - maturity — decline death — and re-birth — takes place systematically and is inescapable. It is a Law of Nature.. All things in the physical world follow this sequence of birth, maturity, decline, death & rebirth, even Solar Systems and Galaxies conform to this pattern.

Now, as you know, Martinism divides the constitution of Man and the Universe into three main divisions, but you were told there are subdivisions. Let us examine the structure of the earth itself. It is known that a number of clearly defined spheres envelop our globe, including: the troposphere, the stratosphere, the ionosphere and. the atmosphere. These are all enclosed by the Van Allen belt.

Similarly, man is, himself, a miniature cosmos, a microcosm, and is composed in exactly the same way. He consists of various "bodies" and forces which, together, form a sphere. The body of flesh and blood is in fact only the visible part of the whole human system.

So, then, what really happens after the death of the physical body? At physical death, as we have already noted, the physical body begins to disintegrate and to dissolve into its basic elements. It becomes "dust" again, just like the fallen leaf. This dead body therefore remains in the physical sphere. The Plastic Envelope, with its various sub-divisions, eventually arrives in the so-called "heavenly" spheres, or the "hereafter", and there too they eventually dissolve, or almost completely dissolve, after a while. Nothing is left but the focal points of experience, the essence of the former personality, in the human system, and these constitute our karma. Memory becomes submerged in that part of the mind which psychologists call subconscious, subliminal, etc.

When our path of development in the "hereafter" has reached its lawful end, we, (the Inner Self, the Man, the microcosm, the Individual, the Ame, or whatever name you favor for the imperishable part of yourself), is compelled by Laws that govern this world, to again link our self with a new physical vehicle. In accordance with the all-embracing law of congruity, the reincarnating human system becomes linked with parents most closely in agreement with the forces of accumulated destiny. The new-born child will have to bear its own karma and the karma of all those who have inhabited its microcosm before it, and here we find the account for the diversity of mankind's predisposition, constitution, fate, "good luck" and "bad luck", for the fate of every human being is the fruit, the result of the karma accumulated by his/her microcosm, in keeping with the law of cause and effect, which we find expressed in scripture at Galatians 6: 5 & 7.

The Scriptures are replete with references to this law. The Master himself taught it and when you have time you may like to check these readings:

Matthew 5:18
Matthew 7:1 & 2.
John 9:1-3.

So, each new earthly life begins in total subjection to the earth and its laws of transience. The wheel of life, the wheel of birth and death begins a new rotation, and the road from the cradle to the grave is begun once again.

Eventually, however, after countless revolutions of the wheel of life, the nostalgia for true freedom wells up from the depths of one's Inner Being so intensely that this nostalgia manifests itself to the earthly consciousness as a concrete desire. Then one begins to want for an answer to the question posed at the beginning of my talk, and to others too, such as: "What is the true meaning of life?" "Does life really have a deeper meaning?" "How should we live our life?" etc. The answers one finds to these questions make one recognize the fact that man's fate on earth is the result of Natural Laws and this brings one logically to ask: "Can this cycle of continual rebirth be brought to a halt?" "Is it possible to free oneself from the wheel of birth and death?" And if so, "how"?

The Esoteric Arcana of the Ageless Wisdom, which is the heart of all true religions, teaches that liberation from this rotating cycle is only possible if we really fulfill the true reason for our material existence and resolve to return to the original Fatherland through the process of transfiguration, leading to Re-integration.

This means that we must change! And this so-essential change is not an automatic process; it requires active cooperation and participation!

As a result of the Divine Spark as yet latent within him, man has always been conscious, albeit vaguely, of the idea that life is in fact a mission, and he has always tried, in one way or another, to discover what that mission might be. As long as man has been on this earth he has sought true happiness and eternal freedom, without ever having been able to find them. And in fact he never will be able to achieve these aims, as long as he looks within this earthly nature, for here, in this earthly nature, they cannot be achieved! And that is why so many content themselves with the belief that the meaning of life is the preservation of the human race, while others devote themselves to humanitarian, political or theological ideals. The majority, however, simply follow the line of least resistance and habit, living automatically, living for the gratification of the senses, until death ends it all.

Yet there are some who seriously seek and strive for true and absolute fulfillment, who are never content with this state of affairs. They feel, time and time again, that something is lacking. These feelings, this longing, emanates from the mathematical center of the microcosmic system. This point is known by many names, including: "the Rose of the heart", "The Pearl of Great Price", "the Precious Jewel in the Lotus", "the Divine Spark", "the Philosopher's Stone", and so on. It is the last remnant of the original, divine Man.

Many, unaware of the true source of their longing, are drawn into church communities and the like, where they may try to "cam" their way back to the Lost Paradise by forcing themselves to do good deeds and by cultivation of their personalities.

There is but one way that Leads to Liberation, one possibility of return to our First Estate: transfiguration on the basis of the last remnant of the divine in man, leading to Re-generation and Re-integration! Although other methods may be very alluring, they cannot lead to liberation.

Let us look a little more closely. Legends have handed down to us the knowledge that part of mankind misused its freewill and thereby placed itself outside the divine world. In this way, out of the harmonious, unified divine man, a being came into existence that is tossed about between opposites, and thrust from one extreme to the other. In the Bible, this is described as "the expulsion from paradise." However, the paradise referred to in the Bible was already outside the divine world, although on a higher level than the world as we know it today.

Having once called forth the world of antitheses, or opposites, or what is sometimes also called the "world of dialectics", Adamic man sank further and further. As man has robbed forests of their trees, poisoned rivers and seas, and polluted the air with toxic gases, so has he tainted the originally pure ether of his thought-world with the filth of modern civilization. He has become the captive of his own ambitions.

The primary characteristic of dialectics is that nothing in it is permanent. In this world of opposites, every beginning inevitable and irrevocably leads to an ending, and every ending to a new beginning, in a never-ending and apparently inescapable cycle. This is true of the entire material creation and of all therein. As we are primarily concerned with Man in this talk, however, we must note that for countless ages, he has been coming and going in this dialectical world, fro birth to death and from death to birth and between these two poles of birth and death, he often goes through indescribable suffering with only comparatively brief moments of joy and rapture.

The great world religions teach that, in the beginning, man had a perfect tie with his Origin, with the Absolute, with God. When he lost this tie he became a twofold being who could neither live in this heart of man is restless until it rests in you, 0 God."

This has made many people think that behind everything that happens is a wrathful God who punishes. Many people expect to be punished after "death" for transgressions of divine laws, because from childhood on they are told after death they will be called to account for their deeds here on earth and that they will then receive their eternal reward or eternal punishment, depending on how God judges them.

Yet, what really happens in the "hereafter?" This region is certainly not the Fatherland, the original Kingdom of God! It is simply the other half of this world. Here, after the death of the dense physical body, man spends a certain amount of time, and here in this world which is popularly called the "hereafter", the subtle bodies themselves "die" and partially dissolve. These subtle bodies are not normally visible to the human eye but are nevertheless of an unmistakable material nature. Only when the subtle bodies have dissolved, or almost dissolved, is the microcosm able to take up a new personality through re-birth in the physical sphere.

In this world man goes through many painful experiences before he recognizes his true state of being. He lives, but in reality he merely exists in an emergency order which was created to make it possible for him to find, through experience, the way back to the divine House of the Father, his original field of life.

In his nature-born state, however, man is not able to find this way by himself, and that is why helpers come to him from the Divine Realm, where only one law applies: Love and service of God. And from time to time a teacher arises from among the helpers, a teacher who testifies to fallen mankind of the Kingdom not of this world, a world not inheritable by flesh and blood (i.e., material constituents) and who tells man what conditions he will need to fulfill if he is to be able to walk the Path of Return.

But you might well ask: Does mankind actually want to walk the Path of Return to the Father's House? Does man understand the necessity of doing so? For most of mankind the answer is undoubtedly no! Yet there are countless people who are experiencing an overwhelming inner disquiet, despite present day affluence, and are seeking fulfillment of their lives in all imaginable ways, and many of these, in their quest, arrive at schools such as ours, where they are given directions.

Let us turn our attention to what we mean when we speak of "man." Above the entrance to the Temple of the Greek Mysteries at Delphi are the words: "Man, know yourself." Man needs self-knowledge in order to restore the link with the Divine.

But what does man actually know of himself? Medical science can give us an exhaustive explanation of every organ in our body of flesh and blood, but there are other questions about our human state that it does not answer. Let me see if I can throw some light on this.

First of all, it needs to be said that when we speak of "man," we are referring to an entire system. Beyond the visible body, invisible bodies also exist. These bodies, which are sub-divisions of the Plastic Envelope, include the etheric body, which has varying degrees of density and diverse functions, and the astral body. In addition, there is a mental body which is still in the initial stage of its development. The entire spherical system is bounded by what mystics call the "aural field," which encloses the visible as well as the invisible bodies. The essence of all experiences, thoughts, and deeds of former periods of existence is etched into this aural field. The aural field could be compared with a star-encrusted night sky, with the focal points of experience forming the stars, and that is why mystics sometimes speak of an "aural firmament." As mentioned already, this is why one person's "fate" can be so different from another's. And since this "fate" is created by man himself, it is clear that man himself is responsible for his own fate and for that of his successors in the microcosm. Whatever he sows he will reap.

This is the Law of Karma, the law of Cause and Effect. Whatever one invokes makes itself felt in the whole system, so it is rather short-sighted to say: "What do I care about an afterlife? I will live my life now, and what comes afterwards doesn't interest me." Only an unknowing person speaks like that; someone who does not know how things are connected and sees his i5resent earthly life as a totality, as something that stands by itself.

When we examine the human system more closely, we are compelled to acknowledge that the physical body, which we perceive with our senses, is only a part of the whole system. The physical body is not just a lump of matter: it is animated, vivified. It is built up according to a deliberate plan and will continue to exist in its vivified state until death occurs. This vivification of the physical body is ensured by man's etheric body, also known as the vital body. It extends somewhat beyond the physical body, but at the same time it interpenetrates it.

Man, however, consists not only of animated matter, but in addition has inner perceptions, and is also able to think. For these activities he possesses two other bodies: the astral or desire body and the mental or thought body. The structure of the astral body is more tenuous than that of the etheric body, and the mental body, in turn, is even more tenuous still. These tenuous material bodies are sometimes called the "subtle bodies" and it is these that clairvoyants are able to see.

These tenuous material bodies naturally need to be fed by a tenuous material substance. We call this substance "ether." Four etheric forces are active in present-day mankind. These are: the chemical ether, the life ether, the light ether and the reflecting ether.

The chemical ether and the life ether are concerned with the maintenance and vivification of the material body; the light ether is necessary for the activity of the senses, and also for our feelings; the reflecting ether nourishes our thinking activity.

So, aided by the activity of the etheric body, let me try to explain its existence. I shall use an analogy drawn from natural science: we know from physics that an electromagnetic field is generated around a wire through which an electric current is passing. One of the practical effects of this phenomenon alongside each other if they are sheathed with insulating material, because the force-fields of the two is that two different electric cables, such as a lighting cable and a telephone cable, can only run alongside each other if they are sheathed with insulating material, because the force-fields of the two conductors would otherwise give rise to induction currents which would have an adverse effect on each other.

Medical science tells us that the nerve fibers in the human body closely resemble electric cables. The brain gives its commands via the nerves by means of minute electrical impulses. So it is logical that each of us is surrounded by a magnetic field, with our own attracting and repelling effects, which among other things, account for our feelings of sympathy and antipathy.

The existence of this magnetic field means that there is always a process of mutual give and take going on in human society, for the electromagnetic field assimilates and emits life-forces. Here, too, each human being is responsibility for shaping his or her own life becomes apparent. One attracts whatever corresponds to one's own electromagnetic system, and repels whatever is in disharmony with it.

"But who is conscious of these laws?" one might ask. And even more importantly: "Who is able say that only very few succeed in this. The inter-relationships of natural phenomena are generally consciously to direct these phenomena along the right lines within himself?" It is no exaggeration to not known to the "nature-born" human being, and that is why we are sometimes driven to actions that we really did not wish to do at all.

As we have observed, this world consists of "this side and the other side of the threshold." The "other side" is not in fact very far from us, but is in exactly the same place as the visible part, it is separated only by a difference in vibration. Recall the image of the earth given earlier, of the earth with its various spheres, the cosmos, so that we can carry our comparison with the human life-system (the microcosm), a little further.

You know that our planet is surrounded by various layers, each of which has its own special task. However, the atmosphere contains much more than these. Just as the air is polluted by chemical and industrial waste-gases, so our atmosphere is tainted with the thoughts, ideas and desires of human beings. It also contains concentrations of thoughts and desires which have collected together because they are similar in nature. For example: we can consider the field of technology, science and research. Many people are involved in these activities, and they are continually thinking and thereby using reflecting ether. So the used reflecting ether and its mental creations are also present in our atmosphere. We can find another example in the field of art. People engaged in the arts also think and feel. Streams of thoughts and feelings are produced and emitted into the atmosphere in various vibrations.

Etheric force is also necessary for feelings of love and hate, joy and sorrow, fear and desire, and this ethenc force, transmuted by the feelings, is also left behind in the atmosphere. There are religious feeling too, of course, thoughts about God, Christ, Buddha and so on, and the etheric "byproducts" of these also remain behind in the atmosphere.

The fact is: everything that is felt and thought is present in the tenuous material spheres, and even more than that. As stated earlier, everyone emits an electromagnetic radiation. And just as this applies to one individual, so it also applies to groups of people, which is radiated back in its totality to each individual, these individuals form a group. A group, then, also has an attracting and a repelling power.

So man is surrounded by a complex of forces, all of which influence him. In this way man lives, and is lived. He thinks he acts independently, but more often his actions are only reactions to the self-maintaining forces that surround and pervade him. Since people do not see, hear or perceive these forces, they think that they do not exist. One cannot see radio and television waves either, but one hears and sees their effects. It is just the same with man himself. He cannot see the forces that surround and pervade him, but their effects can certainly be perceived. Just pause for a moment and think, in this context, of how certain atmospheres and surroundings can and do shape the individual, and how in fact they surround and affect you!

It has been said we all live in one great prison, and this is true. Many, especially the young, cry out for freedom, but they do not know the primary reason. They do not know that their cry for freedom comes from one's innermost being, from the last remnant of the divine in man, as a cry for deliverance, for liberation from the iron grip of this world, a cry born out of an incense longing for another, better world. Yet so many are seeking their liberation within the framework of this world, with the help of innumerable ideals aimed at its improvement. They want to refine and improve this world, even though the Holy Language states quite clearly: "My Kingdom is not of this world."

The "nature-religious" person, on the other hand, sets his hopes on a life after death. He hopes he will be released from the chains of this world. But the physical body remains here in the visible sphere at death and disintegrates into its elemental constituents, and the tenuous material bodies remain in the regions of the "hereafter" and there they too undergo their dissolution, then the cycle of the re-birth of the Self begins again. Man is therefore imprisoned within a circular course. But there is a way to break out of this circular course and this will concern us in the time ahead, however I submit to you that the first step must be a return to an attitude of life which corresponds to the question: "Lord, what will you have me do? By setting aside the personal ego and all I-centeredness, we open the door to a higher state of consciousness, one in which all the glory of God's Wisdom comes to light again. Let us pause for some clarifying illustrations for one picture is worth ten thousand words.

> "In my Father's house are many mansions," said Jesus. (John 14:2). Our "Father's house" is the finite and infinite, the completeness of existence, and this is depicted by the symbol called the Tree of Life. The "mansions" are the spheres on the Tree called Sephiroth. (Sephirah, singular). The Sephiroth represent and depict many different things which we will study later, but at this point, think of them as Levels of Consciousness, or Planes of Being. Because of the limitations of a two dimensional drawing they must be shown as illustrated; however, one sphere is not in fact "above" or "below" the other, they all exist in the "same space"; the difference is frequency of vibration. Using an analogy, radio waves do not exist "above" or "below" each other, like shelves do in a bookcase. Long waves, short waves, medium waves, microwaves, low waves, high waves, TV waves, etc., all exist in the same "place" - their difference is their frequency of vibration.
> The Physical Plane is visible to the naked eye. The subtle Material Worlds are visible to clairvoyant sight.
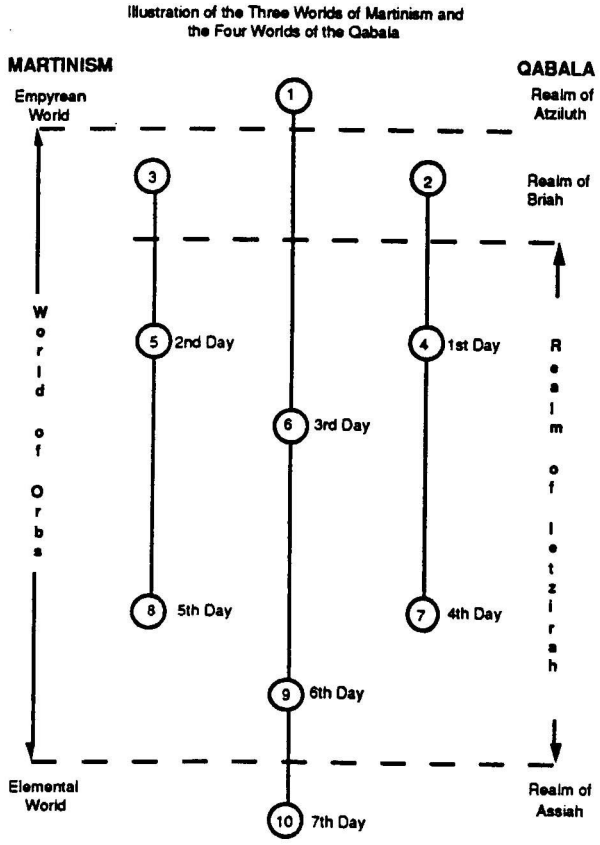
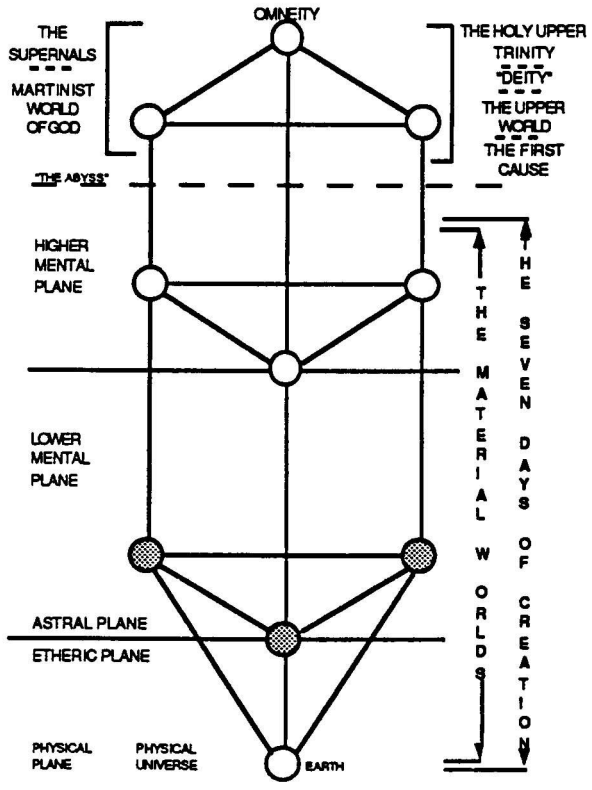
> "Days" 4, 5, & 6 which are in the Etheric and Astral Planes are the levels commonly called "the hereafter" and are the "other half" of this (physical) world. Students should meditate on where the "Kingdom of God" would be located on the Tree of Life.





Let me re-capitulate, are you ready? Let's go!

Man hunts after riches, fame, honor, health, happiness, power. Or, on a different level, for cultural, social, religious or scientific advantages, often with the noblest intentions. Yet it is of no use, for everything is transitory. Whatever man attempts meets with a determined end. The things he strives for are but shadows. They come, they go, they slip away. They loom up out of nothingness and they return to nothingness. Everything is subject to rising, shining and fading. This is the nature of things, and the nature of man himself. The result is that world and mankind remain imprisoned in darkness, sorrow and ignorance. Man is completely deprived of firsthand knowledge through direct perception and experience, of knowing the world of God, the world of one light, in which the ALL is contained (Sephiroth 1, 2 & 3 on the Tree).

Every seeker knows the state of helplessness and ignorance in which he finds himself when confronted by the great problems of life. He is tortured by all sorts of questions which force themselves upon him. Even though he may think he has found an answer, he discovers sooner or later that it can be contradicted by another. All his experiences show him that anything he tries to keep hold of, passes away and is replaced by something else, which in turn also passes away. In principle then, nothing of Eternity can be found in this world. Everything changes. Nothing is permanent.

"This world" i.e., the Material World, or the Seven Days of Creation, comprises a duality. One half we call the Physical World is visible, dense, tangible; the other half popularly called "the hereafter" is tenuous, ethereal and more or less invisible.

The Human System alternates between the visible and invisible spheres. At "death" in the visible sphere, the physical body decomposes and its elements remain in the physical sphere, and the Human System is "born" in the Hereafter. In due time it "dies" in the Hereafter, the elements composing the invisible bodies disintegrate likewise, and the Self is "born" in the visible realm once again, and the cycle continues.

The "Hereafter" which man enters at "death" are the invisible regions of this world, the "hereafter" is not the "Kingdom of God." The Kingdom of God exists beyond the boundary of the Circular Course.

The material realms (visible and invisible) are subject to impermanence and change. The Kingdom of God is not subject to change in the same way.

The Holy Language reminds us: "My Kingdom is not of this world." "Flesh and blood (physical elements) cannot inherit the Kingdom of God." etc..

Man's task is to free himself from the wheel of birth & rebirth in this world, and return to the Eternal Home, on the basis of the Spark of God within him, which is his True Self.

The Human System is composed of congeries of bodies: Physical, Etheric, Astral and Mental. The Physical is the most dense and the Mental is the most tenuous. Our True Self is not of the Material World, it sojourns in the Material Realms encapsulated in the material vestments we call "bodies", "vehicles", "garments" etc.

Man, for the most part, is lived. He acts automatically, unconsciously, instinctively. Although he possesses a degree of free-will, he does not possess the total freedom he longs for. In general, man does not know what he really is. Nor does he know how he is composed and constituted. Nor does he know his true condition. He is even unaware of his lack of real freedom.

Thinking, feeling, desiring and willing always precede action, and the result of such action always instigates the will to new activity via the thoughts and feelings. Generally, we are not aware of this in ourselves, but the feelings and desires are, without exception, the stimuli that give rise to thinking. After thinking, one harnesses one's will to translate into action what has been thought and desired.

This "unconscious" way of thinking and acting results in man's confinement in a circular course. Thus, he vacillates between the visible and invisible halves of this world, unable to enter the Eternal Home.

Brothers & Sisters: Do you begin to see the problem?

The unconscious, automatic, instinctive way of thinking, feeling and willing results in a cycle which is the circular course of life in this world through which man is kept tightly bound to this earth, and jailed in the Circular Prison, unable to enter the Kingdom of God.

In order to commence his journey out of the Forest of Errors, the would-be Aspirant must possess Self-knowledge. "Man, know thyself" is one of the oldest requirements for attaining universal knowledge. To attain to Self-knowledge, it is necessary to see through:

1. our own being,
2. the world in which we exist,
3. our situation in the world, and
4. the fundamental causes of the darkness, sorrow, misery and ignorance in which we find ourselves.

We must endeavor to dwell on the second level of consciousness, whereby we cease to live automatically. Instead, we must become conscious of the way we are thinking and acting and aware of the consequences thereof. We must subjugate the egotistical self and stop misusing the powers at our disposal in I-centeredness for arbitrary earth-centered and vain-glorious purposes. We must go back to an attitude of life which corresponds to the question: "Lord what will you have me do?"

My loved ones, it is my sincere hope the information we are able to share with you will encourage you and give you the keys you need to unlock the gates that open unto the Perfect Day.

May the Peace that passeth all human understanding abide with you.

ESSAY
As a Man Thinketh

From the very beginning of his sojourn on earth, man has been a restless, curious, questioning being. He has pondered the mystery of the stars above him and the world around him. Like David of old, he has asked the question of himself and of life: "What is man?"

Witness the gradual progress of the mind of a little baby, and you see a miracle. What is the golden ladder on which the baby climbs out of mere consciousness into intelligence? Curiosity! As the child grows and matures it is confronted with a factor that comes into conflict with the innate spirit of curiosity: laziness and mental lethargy. Some people climb a little way up that ladder and then are satisfied. They would not open a new book or stretch their minds in wonder at what lies even beyond the next desk above them, to say nothing of what lies beyond the stars or what lies within themselves. Ceasing to be curious, they cease to grow as persons. They begin to gravitate to a religious philosophy that provides them with a comfortable creed to accept and a religious life that is all worked out.

It's a great day in a man's life when he truly begins to discover himself. History is full of the acts of men who discovered something of their capacities. But history has yet to record the man who fully discovered all that he might have been. As Emerson said, "Man is an inlet and may become an outlet for all there is in God."

Our lives and affairs are completely influenced and shaped by the character of our thoughts. Man is not limited by God's will or by heredity or environment or by fate or circumstance, but by his own dominant state of mind. As Shakespeare voices through one of his characters: "The fault, dear Brutus, is not in the stars, but in ourselves, that we are underlings." The Unity writer, Imelda Shanklin, wrote: "Your mind is your world. Your thoughts are the tools with which you carve your life story on the substance of the Universe. When you rule your mind you rule your world. When you choose your thoughts you choose results. Your life is what you think: Think straight, and life will become straight for you."

Do you find this to be a startling idea? You might say, "But this is some strange notion of psychology or metaphysics. How do I know it is the truth? If thought is so important, why doesn't the Bible teach the power of constructive thinking?" That's just the point! The Bible teaches nothing else. It is not until we catch this underlying theme that the Bible begins to make sense.

Throughout the entire Old Testament, through the teaching of the prophets and the beauty of the Psalms, we find the intimation of that which Proverbs expresses tersely: "As [man] thinketh in himself, so is he." Through parable and direct teaching, Jesus stresses the importance of thought. "Whatsoever ye sow (in thought), that shall ye also reap [in your affairs]." Jesus realized that the mind is the bridge between man and the Infinite, and that, even more than fervency and feeling in religion, man's thought is the important element. He said: "A man's enemies are of his own household (the thoughts of his own mind]." And Paul gave the raison d'etre of all religion when he said: "Be ye not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind."

All too many of us think that being possessed by any thought that chances to come along is unavoidable. It may be a matter of regret that we have been awake all night worrying about some problem in our lives, but we tell about it as if it were something over which we had no control. We have yet to discover that we have the power to determine whether or not we are going to be kept awake, whether or not we are going to worry. We may not realize it, but we worry because we make the decision that this is the way we determine to face our problem. Always, there is a choice. "Choose ye this day whom you will serve."

Man is a thinking being. The very word "man" comes from the Sanskrit word which literally means "to think." Through thinking, he has the great possibility of knowing God and expressing the wisdom of Divine Mind. Thought can make man great. Wrongly used, thought can make man weak and ineffective. There is no substitute for good, creative, positive thinking.

It is the absence of positive thinking that is at the root of the dilemma of the religious person: "Why should a good person suffer so?" You may support your church, keep its holy days, and give assent to all of its theology. But this is not enough. The truly spiritual person lets "that same mind that was in Christ Jesus be in [him]." He thinks in tune with God in the same positive and constructive way that Jesus did. The purpose of religion should not be to convert someone to a particular creed, but to help him to be "transformed by the renewing of [his] mind."

The best possible method of thought training is prayer. Yet prayer is the most misunderstood facet of religion. Prayer is thought of as intrinsically invariable. It is often a plea to a superman sort of God somewhere off in the skies. It is usually a wordy and emotional plea to God to have mercy, along with a reminder that He is supposed to be omnipotent In many cases, prayer is simply a form of ritual to be followed - that which usually involves outer practice and ceremony rather than inner feeling and sincerity.

When we think of God as Spirit, and man as the expression of God, then we can understand what Jesus meant when He said: "The Father knoweth what things ye have need of even before ye ask." Prayer, then, is not for God at all. It is for us. Startling as it may sound, it really doesn't make any difference to God whether or not you pray, but it makes a lot of difference to you! Prayer is not a matter of conquering God's reluctance, but of attuning yourself to His eternal willingness.

One thing is certain: When we pray, we do not stop thinking. The mind is the connecting link between man and God. If prayer is anything, it is high-level, creative thinking. And all the powers of heaven and earth cannot help us unless they help us to change or control our thought. Change the direction of your thought, and you will change your experience!

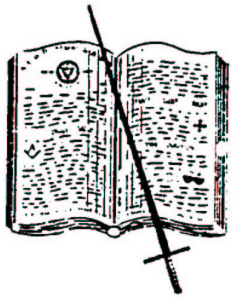
I stress the prayer of affirmation. This is not begging or asking, but claiming and accepting; it is not "I want," "I wish," "I hope," or "I desire," but "I am"; it is not "help me," "guide me," "heal me," "prosper me," but "I am now helped and guided and healed and prospered!" The prophet Joel once declared: "Let the weak say, 'I am strong."' This is the secret of affirmative prayer. If there is a need, instead of dwelling in the thought on the need, claim the Truth; speak the word. All that you need or desire is already yours in the kingdom of your inner potential. Jesus said: "It is the Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

The entire new insight in Truth that we are outlining might well be summed up under the headings of "prayer" and "right thinking." This is quite a discipline. Jesus said: "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." This implies the discipline of knowing the Truth and not just knowing about it.

Many have thought of Jesus' life as providing a means of being "saved" for all time through joining a church. Actually, there is no final salvation. It is a day-by-day process of discipline of thought Many have thought of Jesus' life as providing a means of being "saved" for all time through joining and action. Every time you meet life with a positive thought, you are "saved" from the inevitable effect of negative thought. There is no intermediary between God and you but your mind. There is no way into the kingdom of a happy, healthy, and prosperous life except through disciplined effort.

Our new insight presents many workable techniques, but we must forewarn you — they require faithful and disciplined practice. Attending lectures and reading essays will not create for you that good golfer. How much time should one spend on the "practice of the presence of God"? All the intangible thing called "consciousness" any more than reading a book about golf will make you a time! We can't help thinking, and our thoughts are constantly influencing our lives for good or ill. So you might as well learn to think right, and right thinking is prayer. Become a positive thinker, and "pray without ceasing."

THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF MARTINIST STUDIES



Dear Apprentice:

A few months ago you affiliated with our College and it has been our privilege to have you travel with us through Plane One. If you have inculcated the Work there, you should be very well aware that each person, endowed with a free will, is responsible for his own destiny. . .and that what is popularly called "good luck" and "bad luck" is simply the fruition of the seeds we have planted, consciously or unconsciously, for as it has been pointed out, the earth will grow what ever seed it receives, it does not differentiate between the plants we call "weeds" and those we call "fruit trees" or "garden shrubs" etc. .

You also have an insight into the techniques of visualization and mental creation, the spiritual constitution of Man and the Universe, dreams ... and many other mystical and practical principles which, if you will utilize the knowledge, will enable you to do what the profane regards as "miracles".

It is necessary for rue to call your attention to a very significant matter. I wish I could be sitting and chatting with you in person about this, because it is of the greatest importance. All spiritual work has to do with the raising of one's consciousness, of becoming MORE AWARE of yourself, and this means not only of your personality and character traits, but also of your "inner" self as well. YOU WILL FIND IT VERY DIFFICULT, IN FACT ... ALMOST IMPOSSIBLE ... TO MAINTAIN ANY LEVEL OF UPLIFTED CONSCIOUSNESS UNLESS YOU PARTICIPATE D A I L Y IN SPIRITUAL OPERATIONS . . . such as in prayer, meditation, studying these Libers, reflection, retrospection Exercise #1, etc. etc.. The amount of time you devote to this work can be minimal, fifteen minutes is fine, but be sure you devote it EVERYDAY. Give a little of your time to yourself!!! Tell the family you want to be alone for a short period and ask that you not BE disturbed. Take the phone off the hook! Get the realization that this work, (which you are doing for yourself) is every bit as important as all the other things you do: like eating, drinking, exercise, sleep . . . . . .

And remember too: the daily listening to proper music, and by this I mean, quiet music of the classical or sacred type, vocal or instrumental ... goes hand in hand with the above.

There is another important point that I wish to emphasize as well: It is demonstrated scientifically through applied kinesiology that the practices previously outlined POSITIVELY DO strengthen the Life Force in the body, resulting in better health and well being on all levels. I take the trouble of mentioning this because, although there are a great number of people on the spiritual path, many of them, in spite of their salutary experiences ... still have a lingering shadow in the back of their mind that perhaps it may all be superstition or hocus pocus. Let me assure you, dear Apprentice, (if it is necessary) that the teachings and techniques being shared with you in these Libers, which have been utilized and employed by our mystic brethren for thousands of years, are now in therapeutic use in hospitals, prisons, rehabilitation centers and clinics and are in daily use by taxi drivers, university professors, members of the medical profession, businessmen, "preachers" ... and in fact by all people in all walks of life. The principles work ... if you work them!

Your further progress now lies in your hands. As interesting and useful as the Work you have received has been, it is, nonetheless, only introductory. You are like a bird that has broken out of its shell, and is standing poised on a branch ... waiting to soar into the sky. It is my distinct pleasure to issue you an invitation to continue with us on Plane Two, which contains 12 Libers, to be sent you over eight months. You will find this invitation on the following page, kindly detach it and return it to me, following the directions carefully. I look forward to welcoming you there.

Sincerely yours in the Work

LIBER 11

BOOK OF NATURE

Dear Brother & Sister Craftsmen:

I extend my hand to you on Plane Two and greet you! Here we will continue our journey and reach new heights in understanding and awareness, qualifying you to possess the title of CRAFTSMAN by the time you pass though this Plane. You have probably realized that while you are being prepared for the ultimate Work, you are also passing through a period of tests and trials. You could say the journey is symbolical or mythical — but symbols and myth are keepers of Truth.

As we enter this phase of the Work you must be prepared to consider wider and deeper principles. Some of the lectures will be easily understood — others will require very careful study — all of them will require REVISION for you will find that fresh insights come from "old" material when reconsidered in the light of new information.

Let us now consider that somewhat mysterious word 'truth' which everyone uses without properly understanding it. As you have come to learn, there is only ONE TRUTH :-BUT-: this needs clarification! Truth can in fact be divided into two categories:

... ABSOLUTE TRUTH and RELATIVE TRUTH ...

The Absolute Truth we cannot know (at least not from our present position) because Absolute Truth inheres only in God. Relative Truth is what man deals with — and RELATIVE TRUTH IS WHAT THE INDIVIDUAL ACCEPTS AS REALITY TO HIM AT THE PARTICULAR TIME. The ideas, conceptions and beliefs you have, which cannot be proven or disproven objectively, are examples of relative truth. Now, whereas Absolute Truth may be constant — RELATIVE TRUTHS CHANGE AS THE INDIVIDUAL'S REALIZATIONS AND KNOWLEDGE GROWS. ONE CANNOT GROW WITHOUT CHANGING!!!

Man wants to know truth (hard as it may be for him to swallow sometimes) and he wants to respond to it because he knows instinctively that truth is his greatest asset ... yet when new truth confronts his old beliefs it can be a painful experience. This is why many shy away rather than face it.

In your quest for truth, do not be intimidated by new realizations ... hold on to what you know to be right and good ... carefully analyze what comes to you ... and when you find something of value, you can then safely trade in your glass beads for diamonds.

In this Liber we open our study of the Book of Nature and examine its five pages. This is a precursor to the Book of Man, which we will study on the next Plane. We also begin a series on the Hermetic Science, which will be identified by the letter (H) after the lecture number.

I ask you not to overlook the admonishments you are continually being given: mere intellectual understanding is not enough ... you must make the principles a part of your daily thinking and living ... faithful performance of the exercises will see you well along the Path.

Be of good cheer, dear Craftsmen, as we continue our way.

Sincerely yours in the Work

LECTURE #31(H)

HERMETIC SCIENCE

Dear Craftsmen:

This lecture introduces you to the Hermetic Science. It is from ancient Egypt, the land of Mizraim, that have come the fundamental occult teachings which have so strongly influenced the philosophies of all races, nations and peoples for thousands of years. The Secret Doctrines of Egypt have spread to India, Persia, Chaldea, Medea, China, Japan, Assyria, ancient Greece and Rome ... and to other ancient lands. The Sages of the land of Mizraim freely provided for those who came to them, who were prepared and mature enough to partake of the Holy Wisdom preserved in the Temples of Egypt.

The Mysteries of Egypt, named Osirian, Serapian and Isiac, are the most ancient known to humanity and were the parents of the Eleusinian Mysteries of the Greeks. All these Mysteries were Initiations, or forms of esoteric instruction, relating to the knowledge of divine powers and beings ... and the connection between Man and the Divine Source from which he is animated and inspired.

The tracts, which have come down to us, associated with the name of Hermes as their author, are all concerned with that arcane wisdom which was developed in three directions:

Religious and ethical teaching;
Alchemy, the relation of the material to the spiritual and the transmutation of the former into the latter;
and Magic, the employment of the spiritual powers latent in Man upon the physical plane.

Among the great Sages and Adepts of Egypt there dwelled one whom the Masters themselves hailed as THE MASTER OF MASTERS. He was known as HERMES TRISMEGISTUS. This man, if a "man" he was, lived in Egypt in its early days. The best authorities regard him as a contemporary of Abraham, and some of the Jewish traditions go so far as to claim that Abraham acquired a portion of his mystic knowledge from Hermes himself.

Tradition records that he lived three hundred years in the flesh and that after his passing the Egyptians deified him under the name of THOTH. Years later the people of ancient Greece also made him one of their many Gods ... calling him Hermes the God of Wisdom. The Egyptians revered his memory for tens of centuries, calling him the SCRIBE OF THE GODS, and bestowing upon him his ancient title of TRISMEGISTUS, which means THRICE GREAT. In all the ancient lands, the name of Hermes Trismegistus was revered, the name being synonymous with THE FOUNTAIN OF WISDOM.

There are some who claim that Hermes Trismegistus is identical with HIRAM the hero of the myth of Freemasonry, which is a partial reconstruction of the ancient mysteries.

Even today, we use the term "hermetic" in the sense of "secret", and this is because the followers of Hermes always observed the principle of secrecy in their teachings. They did not believe in "casting pearls before swine," but held to the teaching "MILK FOR BABIES, MEAT FOR STRONG MEN." These maxims are found in the teachings of Jesus in the Bible, but both of them were used by the Egyptian Sages for many centuries before the Christian Era.

The Hermetic Teachings are to be found in all lands among all religions ... but never identified with any particular country nor with any particular religious or philosophical sect. This because of the warning of the ancient Sages against allowing the Secret Doctrine. to become crystallized into a creed. The wisdom of this caution is apparent to all students of history.

The ancient occultism of India and Persia degenerated … and was largely lost ... because the teachers became priests and so mixed SPIRIT with FORM, theology with philosophy ... so that the occultism of India and Persia was gradually all but lost amidst the mass of religious superstition ... creeds ... and "gods."

So it was with ancient Greece and Rome.

So it was with the Hermetic Teachings of early Christianity, which were lost at the time of Constantine, who helped to smother philosophy with theology, temporarily losing to the Christian Church that which was its very essence and spirit.

There are now strong indications, however, that after centuries of darkness some of the Christian churches are beginning the struggle to get back to the Mysteries. Some of the arcane teachings were preserved in the Ritual and Ceremonial of the oldest branch of the Christian Church, as well as in the oral sacred Tradition, also called HOLY WISDOM by that Church.

But there were always some illumined souls ... both in the Church and outside of it ... who kept alive the Flame and thanks to them we have the TRUTH still with us. The Brotherhood of the Rose Cross, which we will abbreviate according to its French name: F.R+C ... was one of the custodians of the Secret Hermetic Wisdom, where it has been passed from Master to Student, from Initiate to Hierophant, from mouth to ear. When it was written down, its meaning was veiled in the terms of alchemy, so that only those who possessed the key could read correctly.

The F.R+C alone has the distinction of hailing the "Thrice Greatest" as the "Father of Our Art," for it has long been a Fraternity tradition the Hermes Trismegistus was the originator of what has since been known to the world as the "Order or Fraternity of the Rose+Croix." This tradition does not imply that Hermes, by any manner of means, definitely and constructively organized the outward and visible fabric of the Fraternity; it simply means that the R+C was the first to develop the principles laid down in the Hermetic writings, and at the same time (according to tradition) must have more closely approached the actual promulgation of these principles ... than any aggregation of scholars and students known at the present time.

The writings preserved to us, which form part of the study work of the F.R+C, are known as the DIVINE PYMANDER and consist of 17 chapters, treating of the Nature of God, Origin of the World, the Creation and Fall of Man, and the Divine Illumination necessary to effect his deliverance. The principle edition of this work appeared in Paris in 1554 and had several subsequent editions. Other Hermetic writings of undoubted authenticity were preserved by Partricius in the Nova de Universe Philosophia, A. D. 1593.

The translation of the PYMANDER in English is a verbatim reprint of one from Arabic by Rev. John Everard, who died about 1640. It is not to be assumed that any scriptural writing could reach the scholar of today without suffering the inevitable corruption due to often repeated translation ... not to mention religious and philosophical partisanship ... but it is quite probable that the translation we use is as complete and accurate as we could reasonably hope for in a document of such great antiquity.

In the preface to Everard's original English translation, one who gives his name as J. F. has this to say: "In this book, though so very old, is contained more true knowledge of God and Nature than in all the books of the world. . . . . There is contained in this book that true PHILOSOPHY, without which it is impossible ever to attain to the heights."

Throughout the F.R+C rituals and teachings the appellation "Father of Our Art" repeatedly occurs, and as these rituals are of the most obscure and remote origin ... it is quite evident to students of liturgical and ceremonial origins that some very specific reason must have existed when they were first formulated.

The supreme power of true spiritual origin is manifest in every line of the entire Hermetic collection. "I and my Father are one." Thus did Jesus proclaim his Divine atonement. "Therefore am I called Trismegistus, as possessing the three parts of the philosophy of the whole world," said Hermes ... a claim or statement no man could make unless well assured of his complete at-one-ment with the Divine Source of Being ... for to possess the knowledge of the whole is a Divine prerogative. History does not record it, as said by any human being, save those whose attunement with the Father or Divine Source was clearly and unmistakably evident. And it is well known to spiritual aspirants, whether within or without the pale of occult science ... that the further one progresses in spiritual attainment THE MORE HUMBLE DOES SUCH AN ONE BECOME IN HIS/HER ATTITUDE TOWARDS OTHERS AMONG WHOM THEY MAY BE CALLED TO WORK.

In still another sense, this claim of Hermes to possession of the three parts of the knowledge of the whole world, is analogous to the sayings of Jesus which have led to the Christian concept of Father, Son and Holy Spirit. For Hermes gave that knowledge ... which had been entrusted to him by his Divine Source ... to the world of his day, and the power of the Divine Spirit has preserved that knowledge unto us of this day, for our study and enlightenment, even as it also perpetuated the teachings of Jesus, who, when leaving the scene of his mortal mission said: "I leave you not comfortless" ... and informed his fellow workers that the Holy Spirit should come.

Civilizations may wax and wane, and from time to time the celestial hierarchies may clear the stage for a new scene or chapter in the activities of earthly children, but it is also, as far as the present light extends, reasonable to conclude that with the obliteration of one system of evolution, the advanced or Initiate members of that evolution continue their labors in planes or spheres far removed from those of the next succeeding era.

The F.R+C concept of Hermes is that he was the first avatar of the human family as known to students of history, sociology and archaeology. His mission was performed at a time not beyond the comprehension of modern man ... and his contact with the Unseen and Divine Source of creative power was so intimate and personal as to make the results of that mission effective throughout the whole extent of the present evolutionary wave.

In each succeeding incarnation he amplified that mission, its works and teachings, with clearer revelations and observations according to the race or age in which they were given ... until ultimately they have spread to the uttermost parts of the earth, exactly as Jesus commanded his followers to preach the Good News to all the world and to every nation. Nowhere do the Hermetic Teachings and the Mosaic and Christian teachings conflict when the true esoteric meaning of each is clearly understood.

Spiritual sincerity is the keynote to the Hermetic mysteries. Hermeticism, like Zorostrianism, Confucianism, Buddhism, Judaism and Christianity, constitutes a "Secret Doctrine" ... for the essential truths in each were given only in parable ... and the mysteries never revealed except to the chosen and qualified few.

Jesus said: "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." If that saying of the last Great Initiate is true and if that Initiate is the last incarnation of the great Sun Spirit. in our wave of evolution ... then we must keep in mind that his presence is just as real, and just as powerful to inspire, direct, guide and illumine ... as though he were with us corporeally.

Therefore, my Brothers & Sisters, enter upon the study of the Hermetic mysteries with the strong, sincere desire to know and to feel the real presence of the Great Initiate, the Alpha and Omega, and while no man knoweth the time thereof, it may be your inestimable privilege to be taken, even as those of olden time, up into the third heaven, there to witness sights which it is not lawful for the tongue of man to utter.

In your future study, at all times keep the inner vision keen and alert for the visualization of that heroic figure, towering so majestically over the rise and fall of the empires, of the wrecks of nations, schools, systems, philosophies, doctrines and dogmas, through succeeding ages, overshadowing and surviving all by the intense virility and spiritual potency of his mission and message, and who said: "If with all your heart, ye truly seek me, ye shall SURELY find me." (Refer to Liber 10, page 13, para. 6).

Spiritual knowledge is not given merely for the asking nor is it always given in the vernacular. (REPEAT) All truth is given under conditions of apparent concealment, simply because its attainment necessitates actual, positive, definite, personal activity. YOU MUST SEARCH, and SEARCH WITH ALL YOUR HEART if you expect to find ... or to attain. The Master meant exactly what he said. Not a portion of the heart will do. All of it must enter the search ... which must be actuated not by mere desire for knowledge (however sublime that knowledge may be) ... but because one HUNGERS AND THIRSTS after that Devine Light to which the human Ame is heir ... and which demands that THE HEIR STRUGGLES AND STRIVES EARNESTLY FOR HIS INHERITANCE ... for only by so doing can he prove himself worthy to be entrusted with the powers that result fro its attainment.

In this introductory lesson of the series to be devoted to a consideration of the Hermetic Science and Art, I have attempted to convey to you an idea of the personality from whom the teachings emanated. I have given more than a hint as to his identity through several incarnations. From this it may be seen that students of the Arcane regard the Hermetic Art as essentially sacred and it must be in this attitude of mind that you should commence your study of the material to follow.

HERMETIC - UNITY

Respected Postulant:

The great message of Hermeticism is the doctrine and truth of the Unity of all things. This truth we shall find summarized in the Gospel of Hermes, which is taken from THE VIRGIN OF THE WORLD. For simplicity, comprehensiveness and clarity ... you will hardly find a better exposition of the cosmic verities and the farther science progresses the more it proves the essential truth set forth in the following lines:

THE HERMETIC GOSPEL

> "All is ONE, and that ONE is All, since all things were in the Creator before the Creation, and we can call Him All since all things are His members. b/hereto fore, remember throughout all this discourse, to bear in mind Him who is ONE and ALL, the Creator of all things.

"Everything descends from heaven upon the earth, into the Water, into the Air; only Fire is vivifying. That which descends from above is generative; that which emanates and rises is nutritive.

The Earth, alone self—supported, is the receptacle of all things, and reconstructs the types which she receives.

"The whole is ONE and everything proceeds from UNITY.

"Nov this UNITY, which constitutes the world, is formed of Four Elements: Fire, Water, Earth and Air.

"ONE single World. ONE single Soul. ONE single God. "As above, so below; in all things ... UNITY."

In their study and contemplation of the inner meaning of this profound concept of Unity, the ancient philosophers and the medieval Hermetists soon realized the truth of the homogeneity of basic matter, developing the knowledge of Cosmic Root Matter or Substance which, as Prima Materia or First Matter, is the foundation of all manifested forms; the variety of expression being simply the result of varying molecular and atomic combinations.

Modern science has carried this knowledge much further, into the realm of the electron, ion and quantel. However, this concept of the sameness or identity of primitive particles of Matter, led to the concept that by understanding how to resolve any given form of Matter such as a metal, into its constituent atoms and then recombining them, a metal could be "raised" from a lower to a higher form or type, for instance: silver to gold.

This was the theory on which the idea of Transmutation was based.

The group of philosophers who devoted their efforts primarily to this work of transmutation, became known as the "Alchemists," and alchemy was the mother of modern chemistry.

HERMETICISM and ALCHEMY go hand in hand, and just as the Hermetic Gospel quoted before is the key to the ethical concept of Unity, ~ so the Smaragdine Table is the key to the Alchemic concept of the basic Unity of manifested creation.

The Smaragdine Table accredited to our Father Hermes, was found, according to Albertus Magnus ... by Alexander the Great ... who discovered the Tomb of Hermes in a cave near Hebron. The tomb contained an emerald table, "The Smaragdine Table," on which were inscribed thirteen sentences in Phoenician characters.

THE SMARAGDINE TABLE

"I speak not fictitious things, but what is true and most certain.

"What is below is like that which is above, and what is above, is like that which is below, to accomplish the miracles of one thing.

"And as all things were produced by the mediation of ONE being, so all things were produced from this one thing by adaptation.

"Its Father is the Sun, its Mother is the Moon; the Wind carries it in its belly, its nurse is the Earth.

"It is the cause of all perfection throughout the whole world.

"Its power is perfect if it be changed into Earth.

"Separate the Earth from the Fire, the subtle from the gross, acting prudently and with judgment.

"Ascend with the greatest sagacity from the Earth to Heaven, and then again descend to the earth, and unite together the powers of things superior and things inferior. Thus you will obtain the glory of the whole world, and all obscurity will fly far away from you.

"This thing is the fortitude of all fortitude, because it overcomes all subtle things, and penetrates every solid thing.

"Thus were all things created.

"Thence proceed wonderful adapt ions which were produced in this way.

"Therefore am I called Hermes Trismegistus, possessing the three parts of the philosophy of the whole world.

"That which I had to say concerning the Operation of the Sun is completed."

Further reference will be made to this Smaragdine Table if the College decides to present an Alchemic Series.

Analysis of the Hermetic Gospel and the Hermetic Writings as a whole ... discloses that the entire Hermetic philosophy is to be comprehended under seven "Principles" or subdivisions. These SEVEN PRINCIPLES are as follows:

(1) The Principle of MIND:
This Principle exhibits the Universe and all manifested Creation as a Divine Mental Concept and that the ALL or ABSOLUTE has for one phase that universal substantive energy we ordinarily term Mind.

(2) The Principle of CORRESPONDENCES:
Following the Hermetic axiom that that which is above is like that which is below and vice versa; that which is within being like unto that which is without, we study the analogies between the visible and the invisible.. The study of correspondences reveals the laws operative in both planes of being.

(3) The Principle of POLARITY:
This Principle maintains the law of Unity but shows that each unit in any sphere of manifestation is of a dual nature, having two sides, opposites, or "polarities," identical in nature but differing in degree, operative as positive and negative, making extremes meet and reconciling paradoxes.

(4) The Principle of VIBRATION:
This principle postulates universal motion and activity; everything from the least to the greatest is in a state of vibration either atomic, electronic, molecular, or in the mass.

(5) The Principle of RHYTHM:

This Principle sets forth the ebb and flow, the action of the pendulum, the rise and fall and compensatory action in the rhythmic activity of all forms both of Matter and Spirit. This Principle of Rhythm and the Principle of Vibration are now well-established phenomena of every physical laboratory and the most notable advances of modern science are developing from them.

(6) The Principle of CAUSE AND EFFECT:
Everything is a matter of the correlation of Cause & Effect; everything known is both the cause of a subsequent effect and an effect resulting from a previous cause. Nothing "happens"; there is no such thing as "luck" or "chance." Law is immutable.

(7) The Principle of GENDER:
As everything is dual, positive and negative, so also everything has its masculine and feminine expressions. This law manifests on all planes and in all spheres.

The synthesis of these seven principles shows us the truth of the Hermetic axiom: Omnia ab Uno ... All from One.

In considering the Atom we find the following correspondence between the human vehicles and the structure of the atom:

a. In Mass structure it corresponds to the Physical Body.

b. In Molecular structure it corresponds to the Etheric Body.

c. In Atomic structure it corresponds to the Astral Body.

d. In Electronic structure or separation it corresponds to the MIND of Man.

e. In Ionic structure ... pure electricity ... it corresponds to the Ame, EGO, God, Light, ESSENCE.

From these analogies and correspondences we learn that in the ultimate, the soul and substance of Metals, Plants, Animals and Men ... is identical.

Working further from the correspondences we find that: All things are born, emerge, proceed or originate from ONE Primordial Cell, the Cosmic Egg.

One of the lowest forms of life: the amoeba ... manifests as a single celled organism. As the life scale rises, we find man as a multi-cellular organism composed of an almost inconceivable number of cells.

Each cell is a primary unit, with its own individual life and individual consciousness.

Man is, total of the Humanity ... and move and to the sum total of his cells ... as God is, to Solar System. Man is a microcosmic Solar System. is the "Body of God"; ... therefore truly "In Him have our being."

If we coordinate and correlate our cell consciousness in perfect harmony, we are "At-One" with ourselves and we are at EASE. If we fail to so coordinate, we have DISEASE. (dis-ease).

Being of the Body of God, if we coordinate our consciousness in harmony with that of the rest of Humanity in the highest ethical aspect, we are AT-ONE with God and enter into His peace.

Each cell, under guidance of its own consciousness, selects just what it requires for its nourishment. Each group of cells composing an organ does likewise. Each group of organs constituting a Human Unit does the same. When each group of Human Units shall obey the law operative in the lower phases, we shall attain Universal Brotherhood ... for this selective law operates harmoniously. When the law is broken anywhere along the line, we have functional disturbances in the Human Unity and functional disturbances in Community, State/Parish, Nation ... World.

Cosmos is built by TIME dividing NUMBER in perfect proportion, rhythm, or measure.

The student who begins the study of Hermetic Philosophy should realize at the very outset ... that he is studying GOD. This is a legitimate study, for it is our duty to learn all we can regarding the Source of our Being ... if we do so reverently and solely with the desire to learn of God in order to approach Him and enter more and more into His consciousness ... and to partake of His Nature.

If you understand this, and accept the responsibility imposed, you become more than a "metaphysician" or an alchemist ... you become a student of TRUE religion.

Religion is of three different kinds:

a. Natural Religion.

b. Revealed Religion.

c. Humanist Religion.

Natural Religion is based upon the evidences of God's qualities and himself . . . as supplied by Natural Phenomena.

Revealed Religion is based upon the direct communication of God's Will to Mankind. The Hermetic Divine Pymander and the Bible are classed under revealed religion.

Humanist Religion is based upon the principles of positivism with a philosophical basis.

Hermeticism is based primarily upon the first two ... Natural and Revealed religion, but it goes much further than the academic definitions, asserting that the best and highest of all revelations come from the consciousness of the "God Within," individually to each human Ego.

Remember at all times that the true Aspirant is the one who seeks to correlate science, religion and philosophy for the clarification of understanding ... rectification of error and apparent contradiction working constructively to bring about a greater and higher revealment for the benefit and welfare of mankind.

In so doing ... you must commence at once to develop the discrimination of scientific method, the deductive process of philosophy and the reverence and religious attitude of religion itself.

I have mentioned the Four Elements but there are others not yet fully known. The Fifth Element is Aether or ether and Hermeticism is peculiarly the science of the Fifth Element . . . the "Free Ether" known to early thinkers as "Chaos," the Eleutheros "immaculate and incorruptible" of Hesid and the Greek Savants. In another sense it is the "Ain Soph" of the Hebrew Kabalists . . . the Devine No-Thing, which is, therefore, the matrix of all things . . . and is the "No-Thing" so frequently referred to in the ancient prayers of the F.R+C.

Theologically, Ether is the mystical River of Eden ... which divided into four heads (or modes of expressional. In its more obvious it is now regarded as a constant and the matrix of all manifested forms in externalized or objective universe. It is regarded as plastic and fluid and above all ... as the medium through which the human thought and will functions. The relations between it and Mind are not yet fully determined ... though interesting experimental phenomena have been produced.

A few recent scientists have attempted to do away with the theory of Ether, but it has remained a stumbling block to them ... and to deny it is simply to negate their specific hypotheses.

Progress in the study of electrical energy alone, has established the position of Ether as an Element. Ether alone of all, the Elements, has the property of universal diffusion that makes possible transmission of vibratory conditions through interstellar space, without which our advances in physical, astronomical and chemical science would have been impossible.

Future generations will learn of conditions within the Ether itself, that they do not dream of today. Ether is a conditioned substance even though it is almost Divine in its aspect of omnipresence. But the point to hold in mind regarding this Fifth Element is ... that by proper contemplation of its known qualities, elusive though they may be ... we shall observe that by the all-pervasive, universal nature of this Element, the UNITY inculcated by Hermeticism is a FACT. Ether surrounds, penetrates and binds all things and all conditions ... both in the matrix of the Spiritual World, and in the Material World which is born from it.

BOOK OF NATURE - MOTION

Beloved Postulant:

Recent lectures have expanded somewhat on the concept of reincarnation and karma, which were introduced earlier in the Works. It has been observed that all Nature perpetuates itself in cyclic patterns ... and that reincarnation is but the carrying over into the Human Realm, the cyclic pattern observable in Nature. Brethren are reminded that they should meditate on the mysteries of life and the universe as it is only through personal experience one will ever know anything with certainty.

"To him whom the science of Nature delighteth, every object bringeth a proof of God."

With this thought in mind, let us continue with our study of the Book of Nature, written by the hand of God. Here we are in the Grandest Tradition of Man ... for it is only mankind, which thinks reflectively on these things. Said Jesus: "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; ... they do not toil nor spin, and yet even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these."

The BOOK OF NATURE contains those fundamental, underlying principles which show us the Eternal Pattern. Traditionally, it is said to consist of Five Pages which are entitled: Harmony; Rhythm; Man & Nature as dual aspects of Omneity; Motion; and fifth: Dreams. We must examine these facets of life in turn, although we must also appreciate that all exist simultaneously. Tonight we will give our attention to two of these Pages namely: Motion and Rhythm. We begin with the first page: MOTION.

As you look out upon Nature, one of the first observations you are likely to make is that: many things move. Upon closer examination you observe that living things move ... and objects, which are said to contain no life are motionless. Have you ever had the experience of watching a motion picture when the film accidentally stopped? The point to observe is that with the cessation of the motion of the figures ... all "life" fades from the scene. So we can notice that motion is a manifestation of life.

You will observe that motion is present in everything we perceive ... from Galaxies down to atoms ... from the growth of a grape vine to that of a living cell ... all is motion or movement. Light is a form of movement and recent scientific speculation tends to equate energy and matter through the concept of motion. We can note therefore, that the prime activity is motion. (The second activity is light.) (In passing, let us note an interesting point in the opening verses of Genesis: "...And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters **...")

Even a quiet rural scene has some form of motion, or shall we say: variation, which makes us conscious of its existence. Such motion or variation may take the form of sounds from birds or insects, changes of sky or other light effects, (changes of color), the differing pressure of the wind or breeze, odors from the plant or animal kingdom may assail our nostrils, whilst, if we partake of food at this time, our sense of taste gives us realization of contact with something OUTSIDE ourselves.

By carefully reflecting on these signs, which we may read in the first page of the Book of Nature, we come to realize that Life in the physical world always manifests through some kind of motion. Where there is no motion, change, or variation at all . . . no Life is perceivable ... although it may exist potentially. Perhaps you would now like to discuss this point, however I would ask you not to stray far from the subject because the other pages may well supply answers to most our questions.

DISCUSSION

1. Motion is an expression of Life.
2. All things move, even if the movement is imperceptible.
3. Where no Life is perceivable, it may exist potentially.

What is the relationship between motion and consciousness?
Could one be conscious if there was no motion?
Does Life depend on motion?
Do all things that move have Life?

When studying the Book of Nature, Man looks, listens and feels around him in order to observe and understand the world he lives in. The question we so often meet at this point is whether the world "outside" us has a factual existence … or whether it exists only in the consciousness of the observer through the agency of the senses. However important this question may appear it should not prevent us from giving careful attention to the objective world. It matters little for our present purposes whether the exterior world is, in fact, exactly as it appears to be. The fact is, in his search for Truth, Man is helped by two faculties ... one of observation outside himself ... and the other of turning inward towards the Source of his consciousness. This latter is the Path of Return ... and is referred to as the Book of Man. The former: that of observation of oneself, which concerns us at the present time, is the Book of Nature.

Let us now turn to the next page of the Book of Nature and see what we can observe. We have noticed that the world around us is in various states of motion, everything conforming to some regular number of movements in a given interval of time. We all know that time is measured by the regular movements observed in nature, such as the turning of the earth on its axis, the apparent motion of the stars, etc... Once we accept a natural interval in these regular movements as our measuring rod, we hive a "sense" of time. Without a change in our consciousness caused by observing external objects, or by mental changes, we should not know that "time" had passed.

Seeing that all is in motion around us, we next notice that all these movements follow a kind of CYCLIC PATTERN which may be relatively slow ... or extremely rapid in rate of change. For example: the planetary electron in an atom of hydrogen revolves around its nucleus (which is called a proton): ten trillion times per second ... whilst our galaxy, whose edge we see as the Milky Way, takes many millions of years to rotate.

The rotation of the earth on its axis gives a daily unit of time, and its rotation round the sun provides a unit we call a 'year'. The moon revolves around the earth 13 times a year. Growth in the Plant and Animal Kingdoms is subject to the cyclic laws of the foregoing motions. Our study at this time must therefore be given over to the second page of the Book of Nature, which we shall call Rhythm and Vibration. We shall pause here, however, and take up these important subjects at our next conventicle.

QUESTIONS / DISCUSSION

You look up and see the moon. Where does it exist ... "out there" ... or in your consciousness?

Is "time" an illusion?

Does time actually pass ... or does it only seem to?

What has happened when time has passed?

What and where is the "past" and the "future"? ... Where do these conditions exist?

If we had a perfect memory ... would we be conscious of a "past"? Is "time" dependent on motion?

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

EXERCISE

Unity of Man with God is the keynote of Hermeticisrn. Deification of man is the ultimate Goal of Hermetic Teachings. This deification is achieved by man through living his daily Fife in this world in imitation of God ... by thinking of himself as a Divine Child ... by living in that consciousness, acting and feeling as one; thus helping to bring the latent divine powers and his true nature into objective reality.

Ordinary man acts like an animal because he thinks and reasons like an intellectual animal, devoid or doubtful of faith in his own immortality, slave of his senses, lover of things carnal ... and doubter as to his High Estate and destiny. Too often he doesn't know the difference between right and wrong ... between truth and error.

In the Fourth Book of the Pymander of Hermes, para. 89, is written: "For man is a Divine living being and is not to be compared to any brute beast that lives upon earth, but to them that are above in heaven, that are called Gods."

The method of transmutation of his level of consciousness from human-animal to the divine is given in no uncertain language in the Tenth Book of the Pymander of Hermes, quoted as follows:

"Command thy soul to go into India, and sooner than thou canst bid it, it will be there. Bid it likewise pass over the Ocean, and suddenly it will be there; Not as passing from place to place, but suddenly it will be there.

"Command it to fly into Heaven, and it will need no wings, neither shall anything hinder it; not the fire of the Sun, not the Aether, not the turning of the Spheres, not the bodies of any of the other Stars, but cutting through all, it will fly to the last, and furthest Body.

"Behold how great power, how great swiftness thou hast! Canst thou do all these things and cannot God? After this manner therefore contemplate God to have all the whole world to himself, as if it were all thought, or intellections.

"If therefore thou wilt not equal thyself to God, thou canst not understand God. For the like is intelligible by the like. Increase thyself into an immeasurable greatness, leaping beyond every body; and transcending all time, become eternity and thou shalt understand God: If thou believest in thyself that nothing is impossible, but accountest thyself immortal, and that thou canst understand all things, every art, every science and custom of every living thing.

"Become higher than all height, lower than all depths, comprehend in thyself the qualities of all the creatures ... and conceive likewise, that thou canst at once be everywhere in the sea, in the earth. Thou shalt at once understand thyself, not yet begotten in the Womb, young, old, to be dead, the things after death, and all these together as also times, places, deeds, qualities, quantities, or else thou canst not yet understand God.

But if thou shut up thy Soul in the Body, and abuse it, and say, I understand nothing, I am afraid of the sea, I can not climb up to Heaven, I know not who I am, I can not tell what I shall be; WHAT HAST THOU TO DO WITH GOD? For thou canst understand none of those fair and good things; be a lover of the body, and evil.

"For it is the greatest evil not to know God.

"But to be able to know and to will, and to hope, is the straight way, and Divine way, proper to the Good; and it will everywhere meet thee, and everywhere be seen of thee, plain and easy, when thou dost not expect or look for it; it will meet thee, waking, sleeping, sailing, traveling, by night, by day, when thou speakest, and when thou keepest silence.

"For there is nothing which is not the Image of God."

You are urged to study, to ponder over the innermost meaning and to meditate on the foregoing quotations. Not only are great secrets of the Egyptian Temple concealed therein, but spiritual power for the expansion of consciousness from that of an intellectual animal ... to that of Man conscious of his Divine Sonship ... is there for the mere recognition of it.

May the Light of the ancient Truth shine upon you and bring you new Understanding!

Dr EDOUARD BERTHOLET:
SAR ALKMAION

GRAND MASTER ORDRE MARTINISTE ET SYNARCHIQUE
MASTER OF ANCIENT WISDOM AND PIONEER OF MODERN MEDICINES

Born in Switzerland at Rougemont, in the district of Vaud, on June 8, 1883, under the double sign of Gemini, Edward never ceased duplicating, indeed multiplying his life and talents: Medical doctor, writer, musician, esotericist ... a universal man ... like those conceived by the Renaissance, and whose quiet generosity and radiant goodness could not be hidden by his sparkling spirit.

When he left the University of Lausanne, holding his medical titles, he seemed to be the son of an era that Tame and Renan oriented towards: a skeptical positiveness ... and he saw the sciences as the only concrete answer to human problems. This view was quickly confirmed by the problems around him. Confronted with the drama of alcoholism, he started an anti—alcoholic campaign that he pursued to the end of his life. He promised never again to taste the good wine ... and he rigorously kept his word, which tells us about the man: capable of paying with his self and of completely engaging himself within his research.

A few years later, Auguste Forel, doctor and world renowned naturalist revealed the keys of hypnotism to him. He soon substituted it with magnetism, a softer technique, better tolerated by the sick.

The method was not original. A century earlier, Mesmer tried to codify a medical magnetism which started a school, and, a convention on magnetism was held in Paris in 1889, four years before the Durville's formation of a school of magnetism. But it still had to be officialized and regulated and that is what Edward Bertholet dedicated himself to.

Using photographic plates, he engaged first in the detection of the luminiscent rays emitted by one's hands. This way he proved the existence of the fluid defined by the Sages and ancient Alchemists as a quintessence of human energies. He then experimented with its effects on plants, seeds of nuts, watercress and especially marrow (squash) ... two pots of which he isolated and watered in the same manner.

Every day, morning and evening, he magnetized one of these "guinea pigs" ... always the same one. At the end of two months, this one was taller, thicker and more vital than its counterpart. The doctor then reversed the magnetism. Leaving the treated plant, he started control on the other pot, which, two weeks later had already surpassed the first one, and which, having finished flowering at the end of a month, saw its flowers surpass its competitor's by 6 centimeters.

Since this was so, why not use the vitalizing fluid in medicine? And so Edward Bertholet became the pioneer of an extraordinary therapy which combines magnetism with fasting, the benefits of which he had long been advocating: "Disease is the consequence of a series of mistakes made against morality and hygiene and especially food hygiene", he explained. "It constitutes ... a natural effort of the organism to get rid, by successive cleansing crisises, the toxins and cellular poisons." Only one action, only one "operation without a knife," — the fast — which enables one to re-establish the disturbed equilibrium! He himself experimented with it many times ... he knew its benefits and its risks. He knew that some temperaments cannot stand such a treatment. But the revitalizing magnetism would be the palliative preventing the headaches and the nauseous state, which sometimes accompanies fasting.

E. B. practiced sensible medicine at home in his big house "Violettes" located near the lake, facing the mountains and rising above Lake Geneva. Every morning it was he himself who brought the special purges to his patients. He himself weighed them and prepared their potions. They then met in the garden where they played bowls and talked before going to the nearby beach. They often watched the doctor eating with his family, but, strangely enough, none of them were hungry ... within a few weeks they saw their general malaise, heart failure, nephritis and tuberculosis adenitis disappear. "Those who came to the Violettes on a stretcher" as Pierre- Genillard, the doctor's nephew, remembers, "left on their feet ..." They were immediately replaced by new ones coming from all over the world, attracted not only by the "miraculous cures" but also by the radiance emanating from him. Smiling and serious, the forehead high, the beard white towards the end of his life, attentive to human suffering, he personified the authentic therapist, the authority who pain does not resist.

He was nevertheless not content with treating and healing. A talented musician, his patients sometimes perceived late at night the echo of his violoncello carried by. the myths of Tristan or Parsifal. He also wrote "Les Guerisons Mystiques et le Magnetisme" (The Mystic Healings and Magnetism), "Le Retour a la Sante par le jeune" (The Return to Health by Fasting), ... almost 25 titles he wrote based on medicine or the great ideas of esotericism.

With a mind open to all kinds of thoughts, he became enthusiastic about oriental philosophy. He invited the swamis Jathsvarananda and Sidheswaranda to the "Société Vaudoise d'Etudes Psychiques" which he founded in 1927. The members flocked, fascinated by the stature, the universal culture of E.B., and by the lecturers he invited, — all bearers of unusual knowledge. Among them: Alexandra David-Neel, who, back from Tibet, had her rheumatism treated at the "Violettes."

Subtle specialist of Hinduism, Vedantism, Taoism, — dazzling his audiences by magistral conferences on Ramakrishna, Randa and Paramananda, the doctor remained nevertheless an occidental impregnated by the "Christic" message and the tradition transmitted by such elites as Lull., Albert La Grand, Paracelse, Claude de Saint-Martin, Stanislas de Guaita, Peda1an and Master Philippe de Lyon.

E. B. never met the later ... unless on those invisible roads where the authentic exchanges take place. But he wrote a "Reincarnation d'aprés 1e Maitre Phillipe de Lyon." And judging the Sar Pédalan, intellectual pole of the Master of Arbresle ... to have been misunderstood during his time, he mentioned this enigmatic figure in "La penseé et les secrets du Sar Josephin Pedalan, — four volumes which confer a new scope to the Rosicrucian ideas which impregnated the thought of the Sar. The doctor shared them so well that he revived in 1933 the "Ordre Ancien et Mystique de la Rose+Croix," (the Ancient and Mystic Order of the Rose+Cross) — an extension of the psychic society which is a group of awareness and not of Initiation.

Did he then consider joining the Order of Christian Rosenkreuz? Or did he mostly plan on gathering an elite connected by the Rose and Cross to the wave length of our ancestral tradition?

It was in the quietness of the "Violettes" that he himself continued his own quest he installed in his own house a small chapel where the Christ and the Virgin are next to the Buddha. The writer Jean Palaiseul says he saw him there "aureoled by his white beard of a prophet and by his ascetic life, standing in front of a big crucifix and wooden polychrome statues depicting the verses of the Koran, arranged around a candelabra with seven branches."

An ecumenical mind before its time, he knew that the energy, which animates all things resides neither in 'labels' nor in narrow sectarianism. And that wisdom is one, above human divergences.

It was towards this unity, within which all contradictions are solved, that he tended more and more. Retired at Vevey during his last years, sick but serene, he composed his last work "Mystere et Ministere des Anges" getting closer and closer to this love he knew to be, more than all science, the only key to life.

It was from Edward Bertholet, Sar Alkmaion; that Sar Gulion received his authority as Sovereign Delegate General and Grand Master of Great Britain and Commonwealth; and from Sar Gulion that the Sar Savitar received his charter as Grand Master of Barbados.

Edwards Bertholet died on March 13, 1965 at nine o'clock in the morning, a few days before the spring ... But does it matter anymore? Escaping from our seasons, from our dawns and our dusks, he passed, with open eyes, through the door of all suns.

GOING THROUGH OR GROWING THROUGH (I)

Some of us look at God through our troubles. Others of us look at our troubles through God. The difference in viewpoint makes the difference in our lives. Looking at God through our troubles means having a faith that fluctuates like a barometer. It also mans meeting adversity with the questions: "Why did this happen to me? I have believed in God. Why is God punishing me?" Looking at our troubles through God means realizing that this is an orderly Universe, that the activity of God is omnipresent, and that because God, the good, is in all and through all, there must be same good in each experience, no matter how tragic or unjust it seems. Obviously, this attitude is conducive to healthy—mindedness.

Life is for living, for unfolding, for releasing our hidden powers I Life is a continuous experience of growth and change. The reason that we so often misread the experiences of life and assume that our lot is hard is that we have mistakenly thought of the goal of life as ease and security. Unfortunately this has become the hallmark of the modern way of life in many parts of the world. We tend to worship material success, the easy road, peace of mind, love and marriage on the "live happily ever after" theme, and early retirement from a life of work and worry to a life of ease.

This is a completely unrealistic attitude toward life. Of course there is no reason why we cannot demonstrate the easy road, the trouble-free experience, the unchanging way of complete security — if that is what we really want. But no one is ever happy with this way of life. All of us long for happiness; and there is no possibility of happiness except along the way of self-discipline and growth and overcoming. Happiness comes not from escaping problems but from meeting and overcoming them. It is not a matter of just "going through"; it is a matter of "growing through" them.

When you want to take a good photograph, almost any building or person or scene can be made into a beautiful picture if you get a shot from the right angle. Perhaps Emerson had this in mind when he said, "This time, like all times, is a very good one if we but know what to do with it." And it follows that right where you are, this experience, this happening is a good thing if you know what to do with it, if you can see it from the right angle, if you can meet it with the right attitude.

Right where you are, whatever you may be experiencing (with all its heartache and pain and long-range implications of misfortune) can be a blessing, an opportunity through which you can grow and move on to success if you find the right angle. But first you must decide whether you will merely go through the experience, making the best of it, perhaps shrugging your shoulders and saying, "Well, that's life for you," or whether you will determine that this is an opportunity to dig a little deeper into your inner potential and draw on the limitless reserves of Spirit within you. You can, if you will, make it a tremendous, unfolding experience that will work for your highest good.

It is important to know that you always have a choice. This time, this experience, this relationship is good if you know what to do with it. You may not be able to determine outwardly the kind of world you are to live in. You may not appear to have a choice as to the kind of work you will do or the kind of employer or fellow workers you will be associated with. You may not even be able to choose the kind of neighborhood you will live in or the sort of weather you will have on a given day. (Although, the better we understand the law of attraction, the more we recognize that we are more closely involved in all these things than we suspect.) But you will always have a choice as to how you will meet these things, what you will think about them, how you will react to them. And this choice will determine the whole character of the experience as far as you are concerned.

Remember the scriptural story of Joseph, who was sold into slavery by his brothers. Joseph was the favored son of Jacob, his father, which caused his brothers to be jealous. But Joseph saw his situation through God, and there followed a chain of most unbelievable circumstances that culminated in his rise to a high position in Egypt, second only to Pharaoh. In the end, Joseph proved that he had actually grown through the misfortune, for he met his brothers with love and forgiveness, and said to them, "You meant evil against me, but God meant it for good."

You may say that such an attitude of understanding is unrealistic, that the brothers did not deserve such loving treatment. Perhaps you have had occasion to ponder Jesus' statement, "Love your enemies and pray for those who persecute you." You may have thought, "In this instance they don't deserve my love." Perhaps not, but you do. At no time can you afford not to let the love of God flow through you. What others do is their problem. What you do is yours. The brothers did not deserve Joseph's love; but Joseph deserved love, and he claimed it. Why should he destroy himself with bitterness and unforgiveness by holding ill will toward his brothers? Fortunately, Joseph had found the right angle.

This does not mean that the brothers' actions should be condoned. Theirs is another story, and obviously they must have paid the price for their treachery in some way. But, "In everything, God works for good," and the story of Joseph illustrates this truth. We should not forget that in every case we have a choice. We can decide whether to go through or to grow through the experience. Joseph chose to grow, and turned his misfortune into good fortune.

Consider now the story of the Israelites in their flight from Egypt. They had been living as slaves for many generations; they were a completely disorganized people. They had no traditions, no culture, no pride of race or religion or nationality. Do you remember how God directed Moses to lead his people to the Promised Land, and how it was forty years before they arrived? It would appear that either it was an unbelievably long journey, or else they were lost for a long time. Actually, neither was the case. As the crow flies, the distance from Egypt to Palestine is about two hundred miles.

If you reread the story you will find that the Israelites actually reached the Promised Land in a little more than two years. But once there, they sent spies into the land and the spies returned with a tale of woe. They said that there were giants in the land, and "we seemed to ourselves like grasshoppers, and so we seemed to them." Thus, the key to the forty-year sojourn in the wilderness was this "grasshopper consciousness." Moses must have realized then that in order to make a successful venture into an occupied and fortified land, the Israelites would have to become a nation. He led them into the wilderness for along period of training, during which they became a homogeneous group: a new nation. They developed laws and customs and traditions. They actually became a people with a culture and a tradition and with a pride of religion. Finally, they were able to go in and possess the land.

The story reveals that the Promised Land was not so much a place to which to go as it was a state of consciousness that the Israelites had to achieve within themselves. The span of forty years of wandering in the wilderness was not merely a time in which they were trying to locate a country, but a time in which they were growing and developing into the "promised land" of their own nature.

We can never become anything that we do not have the potential for becoming. If this is true, then the potential was with us in the beginning and is still with us along the way — no matter what may happen, or in what state we may find ourselves. Even if we are mired in a ditch, we still have the same potential we had when we started on the journey. The experience in the ditch may be the best possible way through which we can grow as we need to in order to reveal the next unfolding phase of our potential. Unfortunately, we tend to measure life too much by misfortunes, by the ditches along the way. Life is an experience in livingness, a continuing opportunity to grow and to unfold our "imprisoned splendor."

BOOK OF NATURE — RHYTHM AND VIBRATION

Respected Postulant:

At our last conventicle we began our study of the Book of Nature and dealt with the first page: MOTION. It was observed that without motion or movement, nothing would exist. Movement is therefore a basic aspect of life and existence. Tonight we continue our examination of the Book of Nature and look at the second page, that of: RHYTHM and VIBRATION.

Physics defines vibration as the periodic motion of particles of an elastic medium in alternately opposite directions ... from the position of equilibrium when that equilibrium has been disturbed. In the simplest terms, then, physics defines vibration as a swinging back and forth from a central point. In other words: if one were to take a weighted cord and let it hang from the hand motionless, it could be said to be in equilibrium. If one were to move the hand in an arc and set the cord swinging ... the motion made by the weight as it oscillated ... would be called vibratory. Such motion is most familiarly illustrated in the swing of a clock's pendulum. In a clock, this vibratory motion is maintained through a series of gears, which are turned by the power of a spring or battery. As the power source reduces, the force is gradually lost until the pendulum swings more and more slowly. When it comes to final rest ... we say the clock has stopped.

In other mechanisms, the vibration is maintained by means of the attraction and counter-attraction set up by two poles that are positively and negatively charged. In any comprehensive treatment of vibration, therefore, both the nature of the initial impulse toward movement and the means of maintaining that motion ... must be considered. This scientific fact was allegorically set forth by Moses in his book of beginnings called Genesis ... where Adam prefigures creation; Eve, the faculty of will or desire; and temptation, the initial impulse which sets the force of attraction and repulsion into motion.

According to this account, it is the interplay of the will … or the desire between the positive and negative aspects of force … that moves man through the world of his experiences. Although this has much of personal and positive value for each of us, we need to realize that: not only man ... but indeed everything within the universe, no matter how small or how large ... is characterized by vibration.

The world itself, in Omneity's great scheme of things, is in motion, and follows the basic law of vibration. There is in reality therefore, no static condition or period of absolute rest; everything is in continuous motion. This fact can be simply demonstrated by a spinning top. Rotate it slowly and the motion is apparent. Rotate it rapidly and the apparent motion is no longer discernable: the top seems to be standing still. So it is with the universe and everything in it. All is motion ... even when to our senses there seems to be a static condition.

We cannot, with the unaided faculties, discover the attractions we call molecular and atomic, nor can we discern the law of gravitation, which is another form of attraction. We cannot even discern the fact that the earth is in motion unless, perhaps, we are near the sea where we can observe the restlessness of the great waves. Nevertheless … all is movement, and underneath movement lays vibration. This, we must remember, is true not only on the plane of so-called physical manifestation ... but also in the realm of thought, emotion, reason and desire.

Another fact made clear in Moses' story of Adam & Eve is that the forces of attraction and counter-attraction, or positive & negative, or good & evil, (call them what you will), cannot be evenly balanced, for if they were ... the awing of the pendulum would become monotonous. Undoubtedly, there are numerous instances where the established vibratory motion is maintained by an equal force of attraction and counter-attraction; but so far as man and his desires is concerned ... variation is allowed for ... otherwise there could be no progress and NO CHANGE OF CONDITION.

Motion is measured or measurable. Motion that is capable of being measured is called rhythm. This is an extremely important consideration to add to our fundamental of vibration. Both rhythm & vibration relate themselves to our science of structure, or harmony.

> Vibration is movement.
> Rhythm is measured movement.
> Brought together: they establish harmony.

Harmony, therefore, depends upon the kind of movement and its particular rhythm. It is capable of almost an infinite variety. Everything in the universe has its own vibration and its own rhythmic pattern ... yet that pattern is so arranged ... or rather the law of its relationship is so established ... that it can be said that: as the vibration of a thing changes ... SO THAT THING ITSELF CHANGES. In other words, change the vibration and you change the nature of the thing. (Object, thought, emotion, condition, **...)

Let us have an example of this change of vibrations, we will use the illustration of the spinning top again: When the top spins slowly, we see its movement readily, but no sound reaches the ear. If it spins more rapidly, we no longer perceive its motion, but we begin to hear a hum. Increasing its speed will produce a note of the musical scale, and if that speed is increased more, another higher note will be distinguished. In fact, under proper conditions, we can demonstrate the relationship between the speed of the top and the scale of musical notes it will produce. If spun rapidly enough, the field of sound will finally be passed and silence will occur. This merely means that the rate of motion is so high that the human ear is incapable of perceiving it. But perception of that motion can now be obtained through the sense of touch, that is: heat can be felt. If the motion is still increased, the faculty of sight is stimulated and a glow is seen. As the speed continues to be increased the swiftly moving top runs though the color spectrum. If the speed were increased beyond the band of color discernable by the eye, the revolving object would still emit the invisible rays we call X-rays. After that the rays would be electrical and, finally, the object would reach a rate of vibration so high that the molecular attraction of its cohesive elements would be overcome and it would disintegrate into its original component elements. All of these changes are due to a change in the RHYTHM of the object.

We can therefore accept as a process of reasoning: that everything of which we are conscious in this physical world ... is changing or VIBRATING at intervals which we call time.

Vibration and rhythm support the harmony of the universe.

Whether these changes take place within us or outside us, does not matter for the present. The essential point is that: periodic motions are observable which are best known by the term rhythm. Rhythm denotes regularity of motion conforming to some physical law. Every manifestation of Life consists of one or more rhythms. When the rhythms change in something, which has been regarded as existing that object has ceased to exist or has changed into something else.

This poses an interesting question: if the rhythms of our physical bodies change, as they do at death, do WE cease to exist?

If so, why should we?

+++ DISCUSSION +++

What causes movement?

What is the source of this power?

Does this power/energy emanate from a central point?

If so, where is it located?

Or is this power/energy universal i.e. not centralized?

By this time, my Brothers & Sisters, you as Initiates of our V::: O:::, should begin to see the direction in which this simple examination of the Book of Nature is leading us. If you do not, it will become clearer soon.

Let us ask ourselves whether the movements of the stars in the sky may indeed be a Cosmic form of life? (What do you think?)

Next time you are by the sea, or on a ship, watch the rhythmic movements of the sea ... the patterns formed by the waves. Observe this also with the clouds. If possible, listen to them ... and learn.

Until we meet again I ask you to continue your meditation on the phrase: "To him whom the science of Nature delighteth, every object bringeth a proof of God." These words are attributed to an ancient Master, who is the first historical figure known to have proclaimed publicly a belief in one All-embracing God ... and to have claimed direct knowledge of God. This great mystic was the Egyptian Pharaoh Khu-en-Aten who lived about 1350 B.C.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

LECTURE #35(H)

ALCHEMIC/HERMETIC – MENTAL PRINCIPLE

Beloved Postulant:

This lecture has to do with the Mental Principle and the general subject is best considered from the starting point of MENTAL TRANSMUTATION. From this we learn that MIND as well as Metals and the so-called Natural Elements ... may be transmuted from one status to another, that is: raised from degree to degree, condition to condition, polarity to polarity, lower vibration to higher vibration.

True Hermetic Transmutation, whether applied to Mind or Metals, in the Mental or Physical Laboratory ... is fundamentally a mental art. Ignorance of this fact may lead earnest seekers after the truth to expend whole life—times in fruitless search along lines unproductive of results, except disappointment. All substance may be and is homogeneous, but its manipulation from the lower to a higher status must begin first on that plane wherein are all beginnings as we are able to understand them ... the plane of mentalism or Mind.

Mind, as has already been said, is not as yet an organized vehicle of man, but it is the mirror through which the higher is reflected in the lower ... hence the mirror through which the lower can also gain a glimpse of the higher. MIND being not a body, but an element, is a phase of Universal Substance and is the vehicle through which WILL operates, functions and focuses.

The word "TRANSMUTATION" which was formerly derided by academic science and now accepted by it as having a definite place in modern chemico-physical processes, has been usually employed to designate the ancient Art of Transmutation of Metals ... particularly of the "base" metals into "Gold."

Exotericists have seen nothing in this art except the attempt to find a physical process of raising common or base metals into precious metals, largely from motives of human greed, and in some rare instances from actual scientific inquiry of a truly commendable nature, devoid of selfishness. Divested of the religious element previously mentioned as a requisite, the ordinary reader or enquirer will find himself wallowing in the "Slough of Despond" of failure through purely materialistic concepts ... but the correct esoteric and spiritual understanding of the term Transmutation, makes the successful accomplishment of it possible to all who will undertake to live the life necessary to its practical application.

The word "TRANSMUTE" means to change from one nature to another, from one form of substance into another; to transform.

Therefore, mental transmutation means the art of changing and transforming mental states, forms and conditions ... into others. More than this, it means that any form or mode of transmutation applied to substances or conditions other than purely mental must perforce begin with the requisite mental status.

Mental transmutation is really mental chemistry. And all transmutation, even when devoted to raising "base" metal to a higher, MUST BE ACCOMPLISHED THROUGH THE OPERATION OF MENTAL FORCE—MENTAL CHEMISTRY IN COOPERATION WITH PHYSICAL CHEMISTRY ... BUT FIRST THE MENTAL.

The Light and Life of the INFINITE GOD has been crystallized or materialized into the base metals of the composition of the human body. These baser metals or materials are being gradually raised and brought into higher spiritual expression.

The body, it must be remembered, is composed just as much of metals in chemical form, as though they could be demonstrated in their virgin expression.

For instance: Radium materializes into a number of different elements, until its ultimate expression becomes lead ... an example of the lowering of higher vibrations resulting in the densest state of Matter.

Conversely, if LEAD is the lowest polarity of Radium, then RADIUM is the highest polarity of Lead.

ALCHEMICALLY and HERMETICALLY, lead corresponds to the lower personal mind; radium corresponds to the Higher Mind ... IS the Higher Mind, for analytically RADIUM will be found to be the perfect expression of the Activity and Radiation of the Higher Mind itself, that Higher Mind whose attributes are known to be Will, Wisdom and ACTIVITY.

Both the Higher Mind and Radium are inexhaustible sources of Radiant Power, Energy and Illumination and draw from the same Source the Universal Mind, or the Mind of God.

The same Law applies to all other Metals and Elements of which the physical body is composed. All have their higher correspondences, which, on the higher planes, are Qualities, Valors, Forces ... the Soul, Light and Spirit of the Materialized aspects.

In the present instance LEAD, symbolized by Saturn, is an emblem of MATTER, the Element of Earth.

Man, a unit of the Universe, sees nothing but Change in Matter, Forces and Mental States. He sees that nothing really IS ... but that everything is in a state of BECOMING and CHANGING. Nothing seemingly endures ... except CHANGE itself.

Among the philosophers of all times, the Substantial Reality has been called the "INFINITE AND ETERNAL, THE INCOMPREHENSIBLE GOD." Hermetic Masters call it the ALL.

The true and inner nature of the ALL is unknowable, for naught but THE ALL ITSELF can comprehend its own nature and being. The ALL must always be unknowable except to Itself and to those who progress in infinite cosmos to at-one-ment with the ALL and develop the Cosmic Consciousness in amplitude.

All efforts therefore to ascribe to the ALL, — personality, qualities, properties, characteristics, proportions and attributes through human concepts ... are presumptuous.

The Unity or All, in one of its aspects, is MIND. Therefore, THE UNIVERSE IS MENTAL or existent in the Mind of the All. The Universe being mental, then TRANSMUTATION must be the Art of Changing the conditions of the Universe along the lines of Matter, Force and Mind.

This is just the point where the operations either of so-called Black or White Magic begin and become effective.

All that we call "psychic phenomena, mental influence, mental science, new thought phenomena" etc. etc. operate entirely on the Mental Plane ... for there is but ONE PRINCIPLE involved ... no matter by what names its various manifestations may be called.

The various treatments, affirmations, mantras, etc. of different schools are but formulas, often quite imperfect, very often absolutely unscientific, and still more often unintelligible, of the Hermetic Art, arranged by self—constituted "teachers", who themselves have failed to grasp the inner significance and logic of the various formulas or mantras they have framed.

Mental states of other persons, as well as one's own self, may be changed or transmuted by Hermetic methods. Even material conditions depending upon the minds of other people, may be changed or transmuted in accordance with the earnest desire, will, and properly devised and prescribed "treatments" of the person desiring changed conditions of life.

The application of the transmutive processes may be used for good or ill, in strict accord with the Hermetic Principle of Polarity. But it must be understood that my use of the term "ill" or "evil" is not the orthodox acceptance, but in the sense of misdirected good or misdirected energy.

For we must ever bear in mind this fundamental truth ... The ALL "Under and back of the Universe of Time, Space and Change, is ever to be found the Substantial Reality: THE FUNDAMENTAL TRUTH OF ALL TRUTH."

As in previous discourses, we shall form the habit which should continue in all Hermetic studies, of seeking such correspondences as the subject may offer. In this case the Principle of Mentalism has shown us that the ALL is Mind in one of its aspects, and that Mind is a phase of Universal Substance. Therefore we shall allow ourselves a wider range and latitude than previously afforded. We have found that CELLS ARE LIVES.

Generalizing, therefore, we may say for present purposes that:

MOLECULES IN CELLS ARE THE LOWER ASTRAL MAN.
ATOMS OF MOLECULES ARE THE SPIRITUAL MAN.
WITHIN THE ATOMS IS LIGHT ... THE INFINITE GOD.

One God, One Life, One Ultimate, and WE, collectively, are that Ultimate. "One Life. One Light, One Power, Thou All in All." In that Ultimate resides all Sound, Color, Number and Form.

The Visible Universe is the Body of the Heavenly Man. The Terrestrial Man is the epitome of the Heavenly Universal Man. The Visible Heavenly Man is the material pole of the Invisible Spiritual Divine Man, called GOD, in His totality.

The material body of Man is the external physical counterpart of forces and qualities, which are the REAL SUBSTANCES composing the SOUL-MAN, for instance: Faith, Hope, Charity, Compassion, Justice, Sympathy, are the Spiritual Grades of Matter used in building SOUL, as HYDROGEN, OXYGEN, IRON, POTASSIUM, SODIUM, CARBON, etc. are used in building the Physical Body.

The idea of complete UNITY is the prime feature of all Hermetic study and discourse, and nowhere is it better summed up than in the words: "In Him we live, and move, and have our being." Acts 17:28.

HOW may we enter into a deeper consciousness of the full truth and significance of this mantra? St. Matthew tells us how, in the 6th Chapter, 33rd Verse: "SEEK YE FIRST, THE KINGDOM

OF GOD, AND HIS RIGHTEOUSNESS AND ALL THESE THINGS SHALL BE ADDED UNTO YOU." (Knowledge, wisdom, clear sightedness, personal power, etc.)

We are also told in Matthew 3:2, that long ago there came the "voice of one crying in the wilderness" "REPENT YE, FOR THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN IS AT HAND." And that "THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN IS WITHIN US."

Every Aspirant should therefore remember to —

Seek FIRST the Kingdom of God, Seek NOW, AT HAND, and Seek it WITHIN YOURSELF.

This is the only way in which each of us will succeed in "knowing ourselves," and it is the only way of approach to that Kingdom wherein we shall find rest and a complete understanding of the Mysteries, for that Kingdom is the Kingdom of Light and Wisdom, where that which is hidden shall be revealed.

Remember also the words: "In myself I am nothing, in Thee I am I." In all prayers the F.R+C address God in the term: "Eternal and Infinite."

This is amplified by the following words, familiar to all Initiates: "I made of nothing, live thou in me and bring me out of the region of self, into the Eternal Light."

In other words: the "I" ... the EGO, made of no PHYSICAL SUBSTANCE, as matter is academically understood, must emerge from the region of SELF by the consciousness of the Presence within the INFINITE and ETERNAL GOD, and being thus conscious, it enters the LIGHT.

What Light? The Light of Cosmic Consciousness, which is the only true spiritual development worth seeking or having; and to be attained only by the elimination of Self and the attainment of At-One-Ment with GOD ... and thus we can truly exist only in the deep fullness of the Divine Mind, the LIGHT OF THE WORLD.

SELF is the greatest 'Lion in way' that the spiritual aspirant has to conquor.
See to it that you do something every day

LECTURE #36
BOOK OF NATURE — HARMONY

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

The two symbolical Books which every Martinist must constantly study ... The Book of Nature and The Book of Man ... are sometimes referred to as treatises on the Microcosm and the Macrocosm. We should be reminded that man in his Original State of superior existence had access to both volumes and could read their truths quickly and easily. Since his Fall, however, although the Books are yet in existence ... he has not been able to read and readily understand the.. When man is able to rediscover how to read these Books correctly, all of his original rights arid privileges will be restored to him.

We have now reached the third page of the Book of Nature, which is a study of Harmony. It has been said that Melody is the cry of Man to God and that Harmony is God's answer to Man. The word "harmony" means: the fitting together of parts so as to form a connected whale. Mystically, then, we are entitled to say it means the science of structure. In this sense, it is easy to see why the principle of harmony is basic to an understanding of the Universe and why it is necessary for us to understand the science of structure. IT SIGNIFIES AN ORDERLY AGREEMENT BETWEEN THINGS AND EVENTS. We Martinists are an Order and to operate effectively we must be in harmony, sacrificing individual wishes for the good of the Collectivity. Our ritual, among other things, disciplines us into orderly agreement at the opening and closing of Conventicles.

If we consider a world in which all is in motion with cyclic variations, we recognize that such conditions manifest order and not chaos. We can however surmise the possibility of chaos if regular repetition of movements were not the "natural order" of events. Hence we speak of Divine and Natural Laws ... such as gravity, reincarnation, natural selection, etc., which involve an overall constructive pattern. Thus the Universe is divided into untold variations of millions of cyclic patterns ... yet it survives because of Harmony in its totality. In Nature all is Harmony.

Music is probably the art where harmony is most studied, although philosophers in all ages have referred to the "music of the spheres" which the advanced student hears beyond the physical plane.

When the ancient Hebrew psalmist sang, "The heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth his handiwork," he meant that everywhere and in every particular the Universe itself was a symbol of Omneity. If man could read this symbol, he would understand Omneity and the Laws by which It operates.

We have remarked previously on the duality, which runs through all Nature, the division of all happenings into an active and passive phase. There is that which moves … and that which is moved. Neither can exist without the other. Every event or object existing partakes of these two opposites to some extent. Co-existence depends on events and objects fitting together in Harmony. In other words ... where Harmony prevails, the good of the COLLECTIVITY is maintained.

Where or when disharmony prevails, lack of BALANCE becomes more manifest ... and breaks down the mutual inter-dependence of the Kingdoms of Nature or of Man.

Since EQUILIBRIUM never remains permanent in any one place or time in this physical world, the Initiate has to learn how to adapt himself to the world outside himself … and then to bring harmony to the world within. Paradoxically, these two aspects of our consciousness do not often go hand in hand. To find them both is perfection … but they do not come by idle waiting or pious wishing: they are the work of the Initiate in his efforts to achieve the Divine Harmony ... the change unto the Ogdoad, the Christ Consciousness.

According to Qabalistic teaching, Omneity was the ultimate, and from that ultimate, in a series of orderly gradations in descending fashion, Omneity expressed Itself in the Empyrean World. That same pattern reflected or repeated itself in the visible realm in the same orderly fashion. Thus, by correspondence, analogy and synthesis, the mystic teachers measured both the visible and invisible aspects of creation and found the same fitness or orderly structure existing. They then said: "As above, so below."

Man, therefore, might seem to himself to be an exile, standing on alien soil, far removed from that High Estate which is his true home; nevertheless ... natural objects surround him as mute symbols of the Divine, holding out the promise of direction and safe conduct the moment he learns to read them. Wherever we find ourself in the visible world, therefore, or whatever condition surrounds us, we are equidistant frau God, our source and center. Said the psalmist: "Whither shall I go from thy Spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there; if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there also." He could say this only because he knew that there was an overall harmony in all things and that Omneity expresses Itself in the minutest point of creation as well as in the largest mass; and wherever man recognizes himself to be, there is that orderly pattern of which he is a part.

Our Von::: M::: Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin wrote: "When God has recourse to such visible signs as the Universe to communicate his thought, it is to employ them in favor of beings separated from him. Had all beings remained in his unity, they would not have needed this means to draw towards him. The Universe is, therefore, a sign of God's love for corrupted creatures voluntarily separated from the First Cause and submitted to the laws of justice in the womb of the visible universe. God operates unceasingly to remove the separation so contrary to their felicity."

So certain was Saint-Martin of the underlying harmony expressed by the Universe itself, he could declare with confidence: "There is not a people, and I may say there is not a man, in possession of his true self for whom the temporal universe is not a great allegory or fable which must give way to a grand morality."

There is perhaps nothing more uncomfortable and distressing than to be lost in space, not knowing where one is, or how to find one's way to a particular point. It is even more abject however, to find oneself lost in this sense of being an exile in a strange world without conviction of order, and without direction as to one's spiritual orientation. The ancient teachers therefore, were careful, first of all, to imbue the student with confidence and assurance ... making him understand that he, as an individual unity, was a definite part of the plan of the universe. We might feel ourselves momentarily in an element altogether foreign to us and surrounded by objects seemingly meaningless, but to know that these objects hold meaning and that all we need is to understand their directions, so as to find the way we should go, should reassure us an give us self-confidence.

Let us close with a quotation from that ancient Initiate called Paul, in his second Epistle of the Corinthians, Chapter 13, vrs 11: "Finally, Brethren, be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the Gad of love and peace shall be with you."

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

In this Liber we are pleased to begin sharing with you some of the papers from John Yarker's Notebook. Here are a few details on the papers written therein: Some are confidential and private and we cannot issue them. Some are general and we will be able to share these. Some are very short, one or two paragraphs (more like thoughts) and some are quite long. All of them are handwritten and some of them are very difficult to decipher ... we have done our best ... most of them were written in the 1890's.

A photocopy of the preamble to the Notebook (reduced) follows this attempted decipher:

Regulations of the Martinist Order in England.

1 This order is formed for the sole object of mutual improvement in the Three worlds of Occult Science. Therefore no broker shall recommend any Initiate to become an Initiator unless he can vouch for the said Broker being a real advanced student.

2. The "Board of Instruction" shall consist of a Council of Eight Members and a Resident, each member holding a copy of the regulations signed by all its members.

3. Each member of the Board of Instruction hereby pledges himself to aid in obtaining all the Information in his power concerning Occult Science and to impart the same to the Board, every member undertaking not to impart to the outside world any information obtained therein with the informer's consent (in writing).

4. The channel of Information shall consist of passing round in alphabetical order, papers by its members & commenting upon the same. When a paper has gone its round each member may see the paper again with all comments.

5. All confidential papers and all comments thereupon, shall be prominently marked with some word such as Arcane, ____, private ___ so that that it may be _____ at once that such matter is not for publication.

6 A member of the board not giving a paper for ____ months shall cease to be a member unless through a prolonged serious illness.

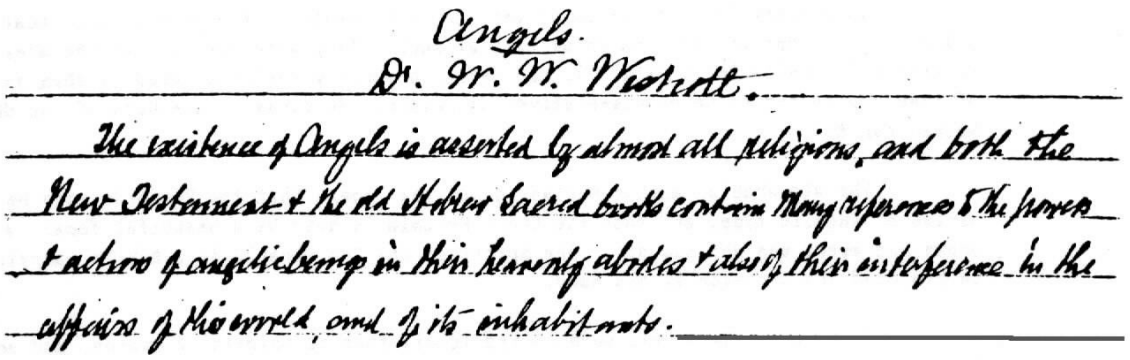
This Paper was written by Dr. W. W. Westcott, a name, which will be familiar to most of you. Where we are unable to decipher a word we will use this sign: -?- and where we are not sure but think we can guess the word we will put a query sign in brackets immediately behind it. We give a photocopy of the title and first paragraph.



Angels.

Dr. W. W. Westcott.

The existence of Angels is asserted by almost all religions, and both the New Testament & the old Hebrew Sacred books contain many references to the powers & actions of angelic beings in their heavenly abodes & also of their interference in the affairs of this world, and of its inhabitants.

Our English word 'Angel' appears to have come to us from a Greek source, the word ἄγγελος, aggelos, (in Greek the double gamma g was pronounced — "ng"). Almost all the New Testament was written in Greek originally, except perhaps the Gospel of Matthew, which appears to have been composed in Aramaic Hebrew.

The word Angel meant a messenger and also the human idea of an Angel is that of a spiritual being from a higher plane sent by Divine authority to give instruction or to carry an some work of an exceptionally and superhuman nature. Inasmuch as Angels are stated to have been seen by men, and their voices heard and that they have done actions with material objects, it is clear that somebody or vehicle is used by angels, at any rate when they visit earth. This does not necessarily imply that their bodies are of flesh and blood as are ours, but only that they are, temporarily at any rate, of a sufficiently condensed form of matter to be appreciable by our senses and dense enough to produce material results.

The Fathers of the Christian Church held very various views of the function of Angels; some have considered that their interference with human affairs has been limited to the instances related in the Scriptures recognized as Canonical while others have affirmed that Angels are in constant action in the world, guiding and guarding Men, Cities, Nations and Churches.

The Pagan faiths of ancient Greece and Rome taught the existence of higher beings as guardians of cities and sacred places and they recognized spiritual and -?- spiritualities as presiding over sea(?), mountains and forests and rulers of the elemental forces of Fire, Earth, Air and Water. There were special groups of such spiritual Elementals and rulers of definite personality were believed in and addressed by names, and they were often worshipped and propitiated by ceremonies, offerings, libations and incense.

The earliest work of an important Christian character dealing with Angels is the Hierarchia C6elestis attributed to Dionysius the Areopagite dated in the 16th Century, but it is of course a very fanciful book. His classification was much followed by later writers, he specified nine classes — Archangels, Princes, Powers, Virtues, Dominions, Seraph, Cherub, Thrones and simple Angels. St. Paul appears to have recognized some such classification no doubt derived from his Jewish wisdom see Romans VIII:38 and Ephesians I:21.

Gregory the Great imagined that the existence of Angels preceded the creation of our world while Augustine had it that they were created on the first day.

The second Synod of Nice postulated an etheral body for the Angels as a vehicle for their spiritual actions; this was in A. D. 789.

In the curious tract called the "Shepherd of Hermes" it is asserted that each man has a good and a bad Angel concerned in his life.

St. Ambrose recommended the invocation of Angels, and a system of dedicating Churches to Angels grew up and has never been condemned by any Church authority.

In ancient Egypt there is no very definite mention of Angels as Spiritual messengers unless we consider the many minor deities as such. They were inferior to the Great Gods, were spititual idents(?) (or ideals(?)), had definite earthly duties allotted to them and were many of them considered to be representatives and restricted forms of the Gods of the Upper and Nether Worlds.

The old Arabian author Murtadi gives the legend that the Pyramids each had a guardian genius of Angelic type, and that the Great Pyramid is held by a beautiful female who however drove mad every man who saw her. The Spirit of the 2nd Pyramid is a Nubian carrying a basket on his head and a censor in his hand.

In Chaldea the Angels were called Igigi, that is Spirits of Heaven, and are related to the Ribu, the Divine Princes. The lower Ea Hu (?) Demiurgos or World Maker (the reflexion of Ex-Divine Wisdom) gave names and assigned duties to them. Angels were associated with Birds, and the home of Angels was practically called the Bird's Nest.

In ancient Roman civilization the Divinities were largely Beings of an Angelic nature and function rather than Gods, because they were themselves under control of a few higher deities such as Jove and Saturn. The Romans believed in the Genius Lad or Guardian of a place and in the "Lares Publici" and "Lares domestici" of the home.

Zoroaster appears to have taught the existence of Spirits or Angels who were at Man's disposition for intercession with God and Paul appears to have combated this dogma.

The Mohammedans taught that two Guardian Angels watched each man's actions, one registering his good and the other his bad action, and that they were so -?-ful of man's fate that they deferred a decision on his conduct after a wicked action until they had allowed him to sleep and if an waking he repented hi. of the evil the bad record was not made.

Among the ancient Persians there was an idea that each man had five Angels, the first at his right hand to write his good actions and a second at his left hand to record his sins, a third before him to show him the correct path, a fourth behind him to ward off the attacks of evil powers and the fifth before his face to sustain his aspirations.

The Siamese recognize seven orders of Angels, they are related to the planets and have guardian powers over cities and men.

The usual Hebrew word for Angels is מלאכים Melakim, as it is found in Genesis XVI:7 and XII:11 & 12. The Bible also refers to two classes of Angels: the Cherubim and the Seraphim, the former acting especially as sentinels and guardians and the latter of winged human forms notable for reverence, humility and obedience and swiftness of action.

Michael the Archangel is named in Daniel X:13 & XII:1, as the "Great Prince" and "The first of the chief Princes", his part in the mysterious conflict with the fallen Angel Satan.

Gabriel is mentioned in Daniel VIII:16 C IX:21, also in Luke 1:19,26. He is commonly called an Archangel, but not in the Bible; he says of himself: "I am Gabriel that stand in the presence of God." The name means "Strength of God", the Gibur of El.

It should be remembered that the name Lucifer is in the Bible. The Morning Star, Isaiah XIV:12 and has no reference to Satan either before or after his fall. St. Jerome first applied the name Lucifer to a fallen Angel and Milton is notable as following the same course. The word Satan of Job 1:6,12 and 11:1 and Zechariah 111:1 appears to have had the meaning of "adversary". In the New Testament the word is Satan-?- and occurs 26 times. The earliest use of the name Satan is in I Chron. XXI:l.

The Jews whilst nominally restricted in their theology to the Old Testament Books, were at all times much influenced in their beliefs by the additional teachings of the Rabbis whose views have come down to us as Volumes called Talmud, the Mishna and Gemara, while the more learned of the Jewish Philosophers also relied on the collection of treatises which demonstrate the Kabalah, a system of philosophy which taught in a special manner the relations which they considered to exist between God —IHVH— Jehovah and the Universe which has sprung from his creative word. These books disclose a vast and complex system of Angels both good and bad. Some are related by the Rabbis to the Sun, Moan, and Stars, others to the earth, heaven and hell, and others again to Man and the Hebrew race.

Some of the Rabbis have also taught the presence of Angelic Guardians to each individual man, It is a very curious fact that the Jews who were bound by the Old Testament to respect it as the complete statement of the relations of God to Man, and bound in a mare dogmatic manner than are the worshippers of any other religion by their sacred Books should yet have accumulated the vastest mass of traditional reading that is known to the literary world.

In the Apocryphal Book of Tobit there is mention in Chap. XII:15 of the Angel Raphael, who says "I am one of the seven holy angels." and four other references to hi. are found in the same book.

According to one Jewish Tradition, which has met with much Christian support, there are four principle Angels who stand around the throne of Jehovah, they are Michael, Gabriel, Raphael, and Uriel. In the curious ancient Jewish volume named "The Book of Enoch" there is constant reference to many named Angels concerned in the fall of Angels and Man.

Among the Jews of old time, only those of the sect of the Saducees denied the interference of Angels in human concerns. One quaint dogma on Angels said that "no Angel carries two messages", presumably not two at once.

We shall now consider the more purely Rabbinic notions which have no support among the Christian teachers.

Rabbi Jochanan says Angels were created on the second day.

Rabbi Chanina allots them to the fifth day of creation.

Rabbi Bechai asserts that Angels are of an ephemeral nature, created from the river Dinor, a stream of fire and -?- daily; except Michael and Gabriel, Metatron and Sandalphon, who remain in glory and their names are never changed.

In the word of Bartalocci 1.267 are given the following names as of the classes of Angels according to the teachings of the mast learned of the Rabbis — Ophanim, Arelin, Chashmalim, Seraphim, Melakim, Elohim, Bene Elohim, Cherubim and Ishim, seven firmaments are described by name as their several dwelling places.

It is also stated (see the Talmudic '-rubin') that God consulted the Angels as to whether man should be created, that opinions differed, that the majority were against his creation. Bereshith Rabba adds that God then made Adam without their knowledge; after which the Angels then agreed that as man had been created, it was his duty to be virtuous.

In Jalkut Chadash(?) it is stated that there is nothing in the world which has not its Angel by whose words and laws it is directed.

In our Chadash we are told that each man has a Guardian Angel — Maohal (?) who repeats to God in heaven the prayers of the man here below: also that Ashtariel, Metatron and Sandalphon in the realm above wear (?) garlands of human prayers, but only of such as have been made in the Hebrew tongue.

Metatron is the highest Angel before God and especially represents his power, he it was who led the Israelites out of Egypt; for God has said My name is in Him. This is explained by the methods of Gematria and Temura thus, — Shadai, Almighty is Sh = 300; D = 4; I = 10, total 314; Metatron is M = 40, T = 9, R = 200, R = 6 and N = 50, total 314.

Of the evil Angels there are also numerous details in the Rabbinical tracts. The Talmud says — Six things are declared concerning demons. They have three points in common with man and three with Ministering Angels. They eat and drink, propagate and die like men. They have wings, they fly and they know future events like the Angels (Codex Chagiga (?) Chap. 2 p 16).

The names of several female demons are commonly noted; Lilith, said to have been Adam's first wife, Naamah and Agrath (?), Samael is the chief male Demon, he has many of the characters of the Christian Satan; he is often called the Angel of Death, but it was alleged that he had no power over true Hebrews.

The proper abode of Demons is Gai Hinnom and there are seven portions (?) in Hell, each part named and having its special qualities and inhabitants.

The original Rosicrucians of mediaeval Europe and their success through recent centuries, have at all times widely proposed the existence of Beings of a more refined nature than Nan who are concerned in the regulation of the forces of nature, of the planetary powers, of the zodiacal stars, and especially of the four elemental states. They peopled all our woods and waters, our air and all fire with controlling beings, each under separate personal rule. These they do not worship but consider them as capable of being propitiated by learned men and the inferiors among them as being subject under certain conditions to mastery by the magician. Hence has arisen the system of practical occult working which has been the aim of so many students who have sacrificed the ordinary pleasures of the world to the aim of wonder-working and to the hope of attaining intercourse with such superhuman Beings for enlightenment and knowledge with power.

The Rosicrucians also refer to the evil spiritual Angels who tempt man to sin, as their duty, and those are apt to attack and injure man if he be not protected by his own goodness. Ceremonial Magic is largely concerned with banishing these evil personalities. Simple goodness in thought and action protects against such Beings in ordinary life, sin and intoxication expose man to their attacks, which may cause death and disease.

When however the Occultist leaving the ordinary duties of life, voluntarily enters the Astral World around us in Magical processes, then he attracts the influence of evil spirits as well as of good Angels, hence it is necessary to pass through a long and arduous study of occult sciences before any such experiments are permitted.

True Adeptship has learned the safe methods of Magical procedure and true Adeptship will only teach real students of discretion and virtue. Hence it is alleged that many self- taught Occultists have injured their health and wealth by experiments they have been in no way qualified to perform.

That many pseudo-magicians have come to fatal endings seems clear from old histories and from modern experience. Ceremonial magic should be avoided by students for even if this occult explanation of the risks involved be but visionary, yet experience seems to show that mental and even bodily woes have been observed, by no means rarely, to follow unbalanced attempts to rifle the secrets of nature.

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

Have you ever asked yourself, “What am I here for?” “Why am I in the world, anyway?” The ethically minded have said, “to do good.” The religious have said, “to prepare for a future life.” The opportunist says, “to make hay while the sun shines.” The materialist says, “To live on in my children.”

The materialistic attitude has brought disillusionment to many. Along with marvelous material progress has come spiritual starvation. Persons of this philosophy have little regard for human life, ... which they believe is here today and gone tomorrow. But, if life has no dignity, no permanence, no meaning beyond its present expression, it is dangerously expendable.

Man is more than the comparatively few pennies worth of salts and other compounds that go to make up his body; more than the final residue after the dissolution of the elements of which his body is composed ... more even … than the characteristics he passes on to his children. People everywhere need to know this and to be sparked to live with enthusiasm, meaning and purpose.

We have had to live through this period of scientific emphasis in order to discover the secret key that unlocks the door to a true understanding of who and what we are and why we are here. Interestingly enough, it is science that has provided the clues ... science applied not materialistically but imaginatively, creatively and spiritually. Today our greatest scientists are almost all spiritually minded persons. Their discoveries about wave lengths, cosmic rays, atomic fission ... and implications beyond the laws of pure physics have forced them to be.

Sir Arthur Eddington, a famed British astronomer, insists that we must look beyond physics to the borderland of the material and spiritual worlds. He maintains that religion for a man of science has become possible within the last half century because scientific thought has been given a new direction by the discovery of relativity and quantum physics.

More and more, the science of man’s mind is finding itself in accord with the basic spiritual truths that have always meant sanity and peace of mind to those who embrace the.. Now you can call the “vital force” anything you please ... God, nature, evolution, the good, the true, the beautiful, the absolute, the ultimate reality ... it doesn’t matter. You can even disbelieve in it, unlike the many wise men of science who have been forced to believe in it, or like the millions who believe because they want to. You can also disbelieve in the law of gravity if you like. But if you jump out of a tenth-story window to prove how right you are ... you will still fall to the ground.

To cooperate with the life force, to evolve into a continually greater awareness of it, and to act as a conscious, creative expression of it is, I believe, one, if not the reason why you and I are here. I dare to prophesy that eventually we shall discover that it is the only stuff of which the universe is made and that all else is just a different expression a different “vibration” ... of the all-pervasive power we call God.

Science has already led us by the hand to the door of this knowledge that is dawning on the world. But, it will take more than the accurate instruments of science to explore the world on which that door opens. It will take the qualities of the human spirit. Before he died, the electrical wizard Charles Steinmetz predicted that the greatest discoveries of the future lay in the spiritual realm, the realm of prayer. An increasing number of scientific triumphs have narrowed the gap between the material and the spiritual: the telephone, the telegraph, radio and radar. All that remains is for us to apply these scientific discoveries by refining and developing our consciousness until it is able to make contact with what lies all about us. We shall then become receiving stations for the divine process ... consciously ... because we have learned how to tune it; instead of unwillingly, as at present.

The electricity that makes a light bulb glow is there whether you can turn the current on or not. The air is full of voices and music even if you don't flip the switch on your radio that tunes them in. All about us is a transcendent flow of wisdom, love and life waiting for us to evolve spiritually until we are fine enough instruments to act as perfect transmitters and receivers.

Time is not a factor in the thrust and growth of the life force that is pushing us forward. The Bible tells us that a thousand years in God's sight are •but as yesterday when it is past and as a watch in the night. James Harvery Robinson, the historian, puts it even more graphically.

He says that if the whole history of mankind were crowded into twelve hours and we imagined ourselves living at noon of the long human day, then we should have to accept the fact that for over eleven and a half hours nothing was recorded of man's existence on earth. Not until twenty minutes to twelve do the earliest vestiges of Egyptian and Babylonian civilization appear. Ancient Greece is only seven minutes to twelve on this clock. Not half a minute has elapsed since man began to make the steam engine work for him!

Instead of letting this make you feel insignificant in the scheme of things, it should reassure you of the godly order to which we individually belong and of which we are a vital part. The life force is not crowding or hurrying us. It is we who falsely imagine that we have only a short time and must rush through it without stopping to enjoy the view from where we stand, pick the flowers along the roadside ... or explore an intriguing trail. We have all the time there is.

You are not here by whim and chance. Living in the middle of the twentieth century is not a supreme jest of the universe. You are here because you are an essential expression of the life force on whose cosmic scale man stands half—way between atom and star. For all of us belong to the ages, and the universe is our home.

Once man found his gods only in the frightening wind, the hostile lightning, and the dangerous forest. He erected totem poles to placate them and he felt that they must be appeased with sacrifices and offerings. Later, he looked upon God as his father, but he still relegated Hi. to the skies and conceived of heaven as some far-distant place that he could reach only after this life was over.

Today, men are coming to realize that heaven is all around them, if they only accept it and enter into it. We are here, among other things, to find that out.

Here are some suggestions that may help you realize the big part you have to play in forwarding the life force as a conscious, responsible agent:

1. Spend at least a few minutes every day in quiet meditation, seeking to feel your oneness with the whole, not asking God for favors but drawing near to the divine process and creative flow.

2. Pick out some inspiring thought that you can hold close to when trouble arises, or indecision irks you during the day.

3. Go about your regular business, but do it joyously, creatively, adventurously ... knowing t hat behind you, backing you up, is the support and power of the pulsing life force.

4. Observe everything curiously and with wonder. Keep an open mind. Secrets will be revealed to you if you stay in an asking frame of mind. So stop often to look and listen. Do not let life hurry you into missing vital events.

5. See everyone else, even one who you mistake as your worse enemy, as an expression of the same cosmic spirit at work, patiently waiting for each to awaken to life.

6. Realize that one person, roused to his dignity, can accomplish miracles. Live as helpfully, positively, and triumphantly as you possibly can and see what happens. Remember that "a little leaven leaveneth the whole loaf."

7. Follow these suggestions and it will not be long before you will know for yourself: the answer to life's most plaguing question. . "What am I here for?"

GOING THROUGH OR GROWING THROUGH (II)

Today we hear a lot about "dropouts." Usually the reference is to high school or college students who have become confused or disturbed with the educational program and have dropped out of school. I wonder if we adults do not occasionally drop out too, in the sense that we resist the disciplines of life; we resist the fact that life is a process of living, an educational experience, and that the challenges along life's way are the best possible opportunities for becoming the kind of person we want to become. We can never be happy until we become the kind of person that the challenges of life can make us. We cannot have our cake and eat it too. We cannot run away from school and still get an education. We cannot run away from the problems of life, and at the same time be happy. We are happy only when we are growing, and we grow only when we find the right way in which to meet life's challenges.

This growing does not mean that we have to have heartaches and burdens and tragedies. But it does mean that when we are confronted by difficulties along life's way, we should admit to ourself that they are evidence of the fact that we still have some growing to do. Let us not resist the difficulties, or resent them, or cry out, "Why do I have to go through this?" Instead, let us know that challenging experiences are opportunities to grow, and that we have within us the potential not only to meet them and to overcome them but also to be a bigger and better person for having met them.

You may be saying to yourself, "That's all well and good, but I started out to accomplish something in my life, and I have failed." Have you failed, really? Henry Austin said, "There is no failure, save in giving up!" You still want to succeed. You still want to be healed. You still want to rise above the heartache, to overcome the feeling of inadequacy. All right then, your desire is the key. Desire is the prophecy of what you can become, and as long as that desire is still in your consciousness you have not failed.

Modern research, which has produced so many of the things that have contributed to our high standard of living, is often referred to as "the art of successful failing." A good researcher is a person who can seemingly fail many times over, and yet still keep at the job with enthusiasm and persistence. He may be given an almost impossible assignment. In his laboratory he begins a long series of experiments. At the end of months he has tried a thousand processes and all have failed. Is he a failure? Not if he is a good research man! He knows a thousand ways that do not work, and thus he is that much closer to the way that will work. And so he keeps on until he finds the solution. He is not a failure. He is a researcher, skilled in the art of successful failing, which is actually the art of growing through experience.

In a way, to fail at something is a good sign. It indicates that you were reaching for something. If you failed dismally, it probably means that you were reaching high. Browning says: "All, but a man's reach should exceed his grasp, / Or what's a heaven for?" As long as you are reaching, you are growing.

To a person whose thought is limited, the loss of a penny can be just as calamitous as the loss of a thousand dollars to another person. Therefore, in your degree of failure you measure your ability to succeed. You can go as high as you can go low. The person whose failure seems the greatest has within him the potential for making the greatest success. He has imagination, vision, daring. He may lack maturity and good judgment; he may lack experience. But time will take care of those lacks. He may have failed in his first effort but he has given evidence, even in his failure, that he has qualities, which, if rightly harnessed by growth in spiritual insight, can lead him on to great heights of achievement. And this is the point: If a man fails repeatedly he may well develop a failure complex. But if he grows through his failures he will build successes on the ashes of his failures.

One of our great problems in life is that we tend to think of success as an arrival: something that comes at the end of effort, the crowning culmination of achievement. The Israelites thought that their goal was in a geographical place, the Promised Land. But success is not an achievement, this accomplishment or that victory. Success is progression, a movement along a road toward a goal.

Inner growth prepares the way for outer achievement. The truly successful person makes the pursuit of inner growth the real activity of his life. Ask the person who has attained brilliant success the question, "To what do you attribute your success?" and you will probably get a very ordinary answer, such as, "Oh, I've always gotten up early," or, "I don't smoke or drink," or some similar remark that has little to do with his success. Why does he answer this way? Because he does not know the key to his success; because he has never thought of himself as one who has arrived at success. He has been too busy reaching forward to look back to see what he has been able to grasp. The person who stops and looks about him and says, "I have finally arrived; I am a great success," is sowing seeks of trouble for himself. Success is in growing, developing, and aspiring. Success is not the end of the road; it is the road.

The law of the road to success is, "Grow or go." If we stop growing, we are through. This is the basic law of life and living. It applies specifically to the experience of age. What is called "aging" does not just happen. Nobody ever grows old. When we stop growing, we are old. As long as we persist in our determination to grow through experiences, we are young. But when we start simply going through them, then we are old.

Through medical research, man has discovered that people do not die of so—called "natural causes." The body does not wear out in a relentless process of deterioration. As someone has so aptly put it, "Man doesn't wear out, he rusts out." The energy of life is limitlessly available to all of us. But we become bored with life and stop mobilizing, this energy. We begin looking back; we fall victim to self-pity. We start seeing our troubles in a different light, and we look at God through our troubles. We say, "When I was young, things were different; now, at my age, life is hard." What we really mean is that life is growth, and we are tired of having to grow through our experiences. We secretly desire to get out of the classroom of human experience, to graduate into the way of ease and security.

The principle, "Grow or go," is the other side of the retirement coin. Today, there is much talk about and planning for retirement. Often, young people are more interested in the retirement benefits of a particular field of endeavor than in the opportunities for growth and achievement. Unfortunately, such thinking leads to a kind of memorialization of retirement as a future kingdom of heaven that will one day come into our experience, bringing happiness and fulfillment and blissful living. The stark reality of retirement is that it offers nothing but the greatest challenge of our life, a challenge that few people are really prepared to meet because the key to happiness is an involvement that leads to growth and development. No one has ever found happiness at the end of the road. The end of the road may bring relief, but happiness comes through the creative involvement along the way.

We need a new concept of retirement, perhaps even a new word properly to explain it. Retirement usually means the end of work, of preoccupation, of business, of activity. But man should never stop working. He should have activity and challenge throughout his life. It may be important that we give up our career in a particular field and that we close the chapter of one phase of our life. But we must turn the page and go on to the next chapter. Perhaps we need not take another job, but we must get involved in something creative, something that will challenge our mind and our skills and spur us on to attain new growth.

Success and growth depend on man's capacity to reach for the moon and to keep on reaching in spite of obstacles and hardships along the way. Man has come to the present level of experience because of the reach of the mind. The only threat to our society or civilization is that we may become bored, tired of reaching out and up, scared of growing through myriad trials. We must never settle into a resigned pattern of living, nor become discouraged. We must learn the lessons life has to offer.

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

Martinism is a body of spiritual discipline and instruction known as Christian Mysticism. It is a system of Higher Initiation based on a synthesis of Christian Illuminism and traditional Eastern teachings. The word "Christian" here does not signify that our Order is in any sense affiliated with, or dominated by any church. On the contrary, it is wholly non-sectarian, seeking, in the words of one brother, to emulate "the mystical Christ without sect" ... rather than perpetuate a narrow, dogmatic, orthodox conception of the Redeemer and Reconciler of Mankind.

As a matter of historical fact, the Orthodox Church was the bitter foe of all Mystic and Esoteric Movements, and was responsible for many unjust, bigoted and cruel acts against established lodges. For this reason, when Papus established the Martinist Order in its present form, initiates in those days did not know the identity of their Initiator. Many members remained masked and were known by an assumed name, or by a number. This was done to guard against traitors. Even so, many unjust acts were perpetrated on individual members of our Order.

Fortunately for us today, greater religious tolerance prevails and adherents of established religions, as well as those who subscribe to no orthodox faith, may be found among our members. Our Martinist Order is a haven for all who are seekers of truth. We have no dogmatic teachings ... no arbitrary proclamations to which members must subscribe or believe ... and while Martinism flows with the traditional stream of esoteric thought expressed by the Qabalah, the Alchemical and Hermetic teachings, the Rose+Croix, esoteric Christianity and the traditional Eastern teachings ... any member is free to accept or reject anything that does not satisfy him. Few places exist where such a liberal approach to truth is allowed. Most organizations of today are trying to foist their own particular (and oftentimes unique) brand of teaching ... and their members are required to accept as truth whatever they trumpet ... or else be disciplined accordingly. The object of our Order was ... and is … to make sincere and disinterested friends in truth as each one perceives it ... and it is our duty to see this ideal perpetuated.

Martinism is not a religion. This fact must be clearly understood in order that you may be certain of your own ground and so you may correct another's erroneous opinion. Martinist "teachings" are those ideas set down by Martinez Pasquales and Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin, in their Works. These teachings are unmatched in their presentation of an inspiring conception of the origin, nature and Fall of Man, and in their offering of a technique for the redemption, salvation and reintegration of the individuals comprising the body of humanity.

It would be well for you to know that Martinism has unbroken roots reaching back into the far past. The sublime instructions and rites, which are being shared with you, identify you fully with the authority and hierarchic power of our Order. The Initiations and Rituals in our Lodges derive from duly authenticated original manuscripts and by the chain of Initiatic Authority transmitted from person to person, the particular rites, ceremonies and doctrines are kept inviolate. As we have received them in all their spiritual power, so shall we transmit them in like manner to our posterity.

DISCUSSION

(Lodge Master should enquire whether all brethren have a chart showing their linkage in the Initiatic Chain extending back to Pasqualez. Advises any Brother or Sister who has not been given a copy of their linkage to speak to the Bro::: Recorder after the Conventicle.)

Brothers & Sisters: attendance at every conventicle is essential to the growth and development of every Martinist. This cannot be too greatly emphasized. Constant participation in the ritual deepens the imprint of it on the Inner Self and opens the mind to a realization of its inner meaning and purpose. This is especially true of the Rituals of Initiation.

It is equally necessary for you to also establish the same regularity in your periods of meditation in your Oratory at home. In this way your growth will be both natural and rapid. An intellectual grasp of mystic principles is never enough; they must become part of yourself and this can only be accomplished by quiet contemplation of them when you are alone. This is so because the interior meaning in every mystic postulation is the most valid, ... and that can never be discovered EXCEPT BY THE INITIATE HIMSELF, and then ONLY IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE DEGREE OF HIS PREPARATION. It is true, as Saint Paul said: "the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them ... because they are spiritually discerned."

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

ALL AND THE INFINITE GOD
ALCHEMIC/HERMETIC — #38(H)

Beloved Postulants:

In this lecture we will examine the All, and the Infinite God. In John 27:22 we read "And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them; that they may be ONE, even as WE are ONE." Indeed, the more the Aspirant recognizes the sublime truth of the UNITY of all things as the expressed fundamental principle of Hermeticism, the sooner he will realize his oneness with his fellow men ... and the oneness of humanity with Divinity, or God. This is the principle every student must sooner or later comprehend if he desires to make any serious or genuine advance in spiritual science.

While the essential nature of the ALL is unknowable, there are certain truths connected with its existence that the human mind CAN comprehend. These truths are:

a. The ALL must be ALL that REALLY IS. Nothing can exist outside the ALL. (In Him we live, and move and have our being. Acts 27:28).

b. The ALL must be INFINITE, without confinement, boundaries, limitations or restrictions.

c. The ALL must be ETERNAL, Infinite in Time, uncreate and continuously existing, indestructible. It must be Infinite in Space, without break, interruption, separation or gaps. It must be Infinite in Power, without limitation, restrictions or restraint and subject to no other Power.

d. The ALL must be IMMUTABLE, not subject to change, not added to or subtracted from. It must have always been and always remain, just what it is now.

Postulate: As the ALL is Infinite, Eternal and Unchangeable, the ABSOLUTE ... anything that is changeable, finite and conditioned cannot be the ALL, and as there is nothing outside of the ALL in Reality, then any such things must be nothing in Reality, and as the ALL is ALL that IS, then that which is nothing in Reality has really no existence.

WHAT IS YOUR OPINION ON THIS?

(Home students will ponder on this before proceeding.)

MATTER forms the foundation for all physical forms.

Matter cannot manifest Life or Mind.

Life and Mind are manifested in the entire Universe.

Therefore, as they are properties of the ALL, the ALL cannot be MATTER, as commonly understood, for nothing can rise higher than its own source.

Herein modern science and Hermetic Philosophy agree, for science states that Matter is non-existent as such ... that what we call Matter is "interrupted energy," i.e. energy at a low rate of vibration.

The ALL is not Energy or Force, because ... Energy and Force are blind and mechanical, devoid of Life or Mind. Neither Life or Mind evolve from Force or Energy, for nothing evolves unless it be first involved. Therefore, the highest concept of the human Mind regarding things KNOWN to be existent in the Universe, are LIFE and MIND, properties and qualities of the ALL, but not life and mind as we ordinarily understand them, rather:

> INFINITE, LIVING MIND, that which in its highest expression is called "SPIRIT." All the foregoing may be summed up in the words of the prayer beginning, "INFINITE AND INCOMPREHENSIBLE ONE **..."

When Matter manifests polarity, as in the case of water for instance, it differentiates into Hydrogen and Oxygen. Tremendous cosmic processes and powers of affinity cause Hydrogen and Oxygen to chemically unite, and uniting form water. Tremendous cosmic powers of affinity cause Spirit and Matter to mingle chemically and etherically, and ... uniting ... form SOUL.

These tremendous cosmic forces of affinity in manifestation, operate as DESIRE, with the polarities of Attraction and Repulsion. Repulsion causes separation and differentiation and therefore the creation and propagation of phases of the original in diversity of types. Attraction causes the re-union and re-creation of the types in Unity.

Thus ... Desire ... in the true cosmic sense, is the Divine Force of Love, or that which desires to see itself reproduced, reflected, multiplied and magnified, and which then draws all individual expressions of itself back to their Source in Unity. "I, if I be lifted up, will draw all, men unto me." Hydrogen and Oxygen disappear as such when united in the drop of water. Matter and Spirit disappear as such when united in the higher, or Over-Soul.

Infinite balance is gained in eternal unity and harmony. In the words of Hermes: "Eternal and Infinite. Everything proceeds from Unity, All are re-united in the ONE. The INFININTE OR ALL IS SPIRIT." Spirit has been defined as original Cosmic or Root Substance. In reality, it is simply the concept of men regarding the REAL ESSENCE. The INFINITE LIVING MIND is as much beyond the ordinary concepts of Mind and Life ... as those are beyond Energy and Hatter.

Cosmic Root Substance, or Spirit, is the Divine, LIVING Mind of God, and we shall see how this postulate explains many hitherto inexplicable problems. I have stated that nothing REAL can exist outside of the ALL or INFINITE GOD. Then, if the Universe is not the Infinite One ... is it Nothing? No again, for we are sensible of its existence. If the Universe is not the Infinite, and is not Nothing, then its explanation must necessarily be that of Cosmic Root Substance. Since the Universe appears to exist sensibly to us, it must proceed in some sense from the Infinite God.

But as something can never come from nothing, how could God, even, have created it in the so—called beginning? It has been stated, (erroneously?) that the Absolute created it from itself, and for the purposes of speech ... we often state that all that is: all life, seen and unseen, organic and inorganic ... is a state of differentiations from God.

However, this will not suffice in the present instance, because it was stated that the concept of the Infinite One precluded the idea that it could be added to or subtracted from. And then again: if that explanation was true, each emanation of the Infinite in the Universe would be aware of its being the Infinite ... which would be as illogical as each individual cell of a human body holding the thought or consciousness that it WAS the body.

Here we apply the Hermatic axiom: "As above, so below."

How does Man create? In the physical world by three processes:

1st. Objectively, with materials outside of himself.
2nd. Sexually, by materials within himself.
3rd. Mentally, by the action of his Spirit within and upon the Plane of Mental Creation.

Note that in the sexual process of creation, whereby man procreates or reproduces himself by transferring a portion of his substance to his progeny, it will be found after a careful study of the science of sex, to be a psychical as well as a physiological act, BY THE PRINCIPLE OF CORRESPONDENCES.

If man can create mentally in his lowly estate, what must it be but the Microcosmic reflection of a vaster and higher concept of creation by the Absolute on the Cosmic Mental Plane, AND WITHIN ITSELF..

Cosmic Root Substance is not a new substance exterior to the Absolute ... nor is it separate from Itself ... but is the LIVING MIND of the Absolute, within which the ABSOLUTE creates Universes which exist only within Itself, neither adding to nor subtracting from its Mass.

Thus, truly, is the Hermetic mantram proven, that "In Him we live, and move, and have our being."

Each of us can in thought create a universe. But as it would be the work of a finite mind, we would lack the Force and Energy to compel it into visible or tangible manifestation, although the thought form would nevertheless be there ... and our thought forms are every day being used for better or worse in the construction of other environments according to the wisdom (or lack of wisdom) of those using or misusing them. It thus behooves us to provide only constructive material of the best and highest character.

The Infinite One, on the other hand, has within Itself the potentialities of Infinite Force and Power for which the mental creation affords a theatre for the various activities required or liberated. Thus, the Universe and all it contains is the Mental Creation of the Infinite God.' ALL IS DIVINE MIND, and error exists to each of us individually ... only as we individually fail to realize the Unity and Harmony and Singleness of that Divine Mind.

In the manifestation of the Universe as a FACT in the Divine Mind, we see the phenomena of sex, in accordance with the Principle of Gender. But Gender means more than simply sex, this latter being only a manifestation of Gender. Gender means "relating to generation or creation." Everything in the Universe must be manifested in accordance with the Principle of Gender.

Now, the Infinite One, being creator, is above Gender, because it is the Originator of ALL Laws. It is THAT from which all Law proceeds. But when it manifests on the Plane of Generation or Creation, it must do so through Law and Principle ... because it is acting, or moving, or manifesting on a plane BELOW Itself.

Therefore it assumes the aspect of Masculine and Feminine, on the Plane of Mental activity, in accordance with the Principle of Gender. However: ALL IS ONE ... and these two aspects are merely different phases of manifestation.

You may consider that the Masculine aspect of the Infinite One in a way stands apart from the actual mental creation of the Universe. It projects its WILL toward the Feminine aspect called Nature, which stimulates the latter into beginning the actual evolutionary processes of the Universe, from the simplest cosmic spiritual centers, vortices and nuclei ... on to the development of Man and more.

In this way our concepts of God as "Father," Masculine; and Nature, as the Universal Mother, Feminine, ... have come into being. But bear in mind that the Absolute, Omneity, is ONE, and ALL is One, and ALL is Unity.

We get the real sense of this truth by realization that that part of ourselves we call the "I" stands apart in a way, and cognizes the creation of the Mental Images in our minds. That part of our minds in which the ACTUAL GENERATION MENTALLY is accomplished, we call the "Me."

In the Divine Mind are many Universes. And there are many grades of being ... celestial and terrestrial. There are phases of humanity as much higher than ourselves ... as we are above the amoeba. And it is man's destiny to follow in the steps of all who have gone this way before him, into those higher realms of the Divine Mind ... for Death is but Birth, multiplied through the eons of time.

As we dwell in the Infinite Hind of God our possibilities are infinite, both in time and in space, for we are limited only by our individual capacities to receive, perceive and apprehend.

And in infinite time to come, the Absolute shall indraw all its mental creations back to Itself mentally, and we shall be AT ONE with the All, and there shall be a New Heaven and a New Earth, for all thing8 shall pass away, and behold, all things shall become new.

This concept of the LIVING MIND OF THE INFINITE GOD is one of the most difficult for beginners in the Hermetic Art to formulate, and it is also apt to cause some confusion in view of previous ideas about Mind and Mental states encountered before, where Mind has been spoken of as a "sheath" and is called "Mind Stuff." This is perfectly correct but the usage then employed was for the purpose of differentiating between the Hind Stuff of Humanity ... and the Mind of the Absolute.

With Humanity ... Mind is not yet organized sufficiently in its general nature to be utilized as a definite vehicle with developed or semi-developed centers as are the Physical, Etheric and Astral vehicles of Man. In its relation to Humanity, Mind has many times been described as the MIRROR through which the Macrocosms reflects Itself in Matter as the Microcosm.

The LIVING MIND OF THE INFINITE ONE however, is far different in its operation, for in the Infinite, or ALL, the Living Mind is the focus point or lens through which the Creator reflects or manifests as the Celestial Hierarchies. The Mind Matter of the Infinite has been, and is, perfected to a point ... far beyond ordinary comprehension. The difference between the Mind Matter of GOD ... and the Mind Stuff of Humanity ... is as great as the vibratory differentiations between the diapason of a pipe organ ... and the Ultra-violet Ray.

All is essentially Spirit. I have spoken of the "continuity of material substance" and we have met these ideas before in the Quaternary Law, but it will be understood that such terms, even when used in technical and scientific definitions, are applied to the FORMS assumed by Spirit in producing the various images in the Divine Mind, through which we gain definite experience while "incarnate," (so-called), in "Matter."

Scientific formulas nowadays have to be changed overnight in some cases, and the rapid advance in scientific discovery makes us begin to realize how little is really known about ourselves and the world, as we understand it, in which we temporarily manifest. Seeing how little, comparatively, we have actually learned to be FACT about this mundane world expression ... we can readily admit that there is infinitely more for us to learn and assimilate than our finite imaginations can at present conceive.

The closer we arrive at the knowledge of the Atom and its wonderful complexity and latent power and energy ... the closer, in reality, we are to a correct knowledge of some of the attributes, powers and properties ... of God. And the deeper science probes into the secrets of Nature in the newly developing field of radio—activity, the more we will realize the truth of the Hermetic teaching that the entire Universe is, allowing far all the creative and cosmological processes, ... a Mental Concept of the Infinite God.

This lecture may be a little tough to digest at one meal … however we have to have a little meat on the menu, it can't be all milk and mashed potatoes! Dine on this lecture often and it will provide much nourishment, especially in conjunction with the other viands that are forthcoming.

Brothers & Sisters,

LOVE OF GOD is the motive power, which must inspire the Martinist because it is the FIRST ACTIVE PRINCIPLE. The goal of every Brother must be to discover this First Cause within his own heart. His rate of progress toward this end will not be controlled by his intellectual knowledge, but by the intensity of his DESIRE, or ASPIRATION, to succeed.

In other words: THE MYSTERIOUS TEACHINGS OF MARTINISM ARE BASED ON THE REHABILITATION OF COLLECTIVE HUMANITY TO A STATE OF ONENESS ... BY THE SACRIFICE OF THE INDIVIDUAL INTELLECT.

Advancement depends to a large extent upon a balanced evolution, both in knowledge and in aspiration. The task of the Initiate is to strengthen and combine these two elements. Our knowledge we perfect by the study of the two Columns we find in the porch of King Solomon's Temple called Boaz and Jachin (pronounced Yah-kin). These two Columns represent Strength & Weakness, the two fundamental opposite qualities. Our aspiration to possess the Divine Love we cultivate by expressing and demonstrating this all—powerful force in its manifestation of HUMAN LOVE DIRECTED TOWARDS OUR FELLOW BEINGS.

This love will find its expression in the works of BENEVOLENCE and BENEFICIENCE ... to which every Initiate is obligated. If, however, we do not practice this virtue ... or practice it only because we feel "obligated" to do so ... you will never be a true Man of Aspiration.

The acts of beneficience or charity of a Martinist do not begin or end with monetary gifts. The word "charity" comes from a Latin word, which also means "love". We acclaim it at every conventicle. True charity entails same form of sacrifice, either in terms of money, property, time ... or even self—esteem. There is, finally, the Fraternal Love that must incite every Martinist to succor, in every possible way, his Brother or Sister before the Luminaries.

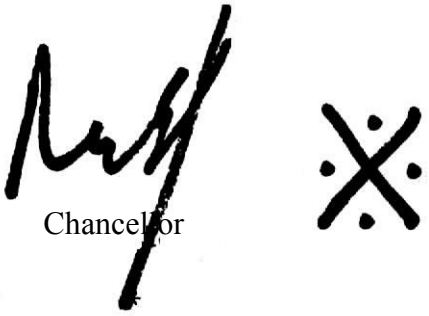
Long ago, Man received a great Law: "Love God and love thy neighbor as thyself." Here we seem faced with an apparent duality. This law seems to contain two distinct propositions ... and yet they are simply different expressions of the same thing.

No man can pretend to love God and at the same time despise or hate his fellow-man. No man can genuinely love his neighbor without at the same time loving God.

This is not the exclusive virtue of either the Jewish or the Christian faith. IT IS A UNIVERSAL LAW. Love of the Creator implies love of all creation ... and love of all created beings is one with the love of God.

Brothers & Sisters: you are admonished to practice beneficience in all its forms.

May the Peace that passeth all human Understanding abide with you.



Chancellor

Brethren, the following lecture on the fourth Page of the Book of Nature, places in your hands a veritable key with which you can unlock many of the mysteries of life. We can only suggest that you study this lecture very carefully and put into practice the particular points.

LECTURE #40
MAN AND NATURE

My Brothers & Sisters:

Tonight we come to the fourth page of the Book of Nature. It is essential you remember the pages and their significance for two reasons: that you may practice the Works of the Day and, secondly, that you may transmit our traditions if called upon to do so. This fourth page teaches us of Man and Nature as dual aspects of Omneity.

The mystic teacher, who expressed himself under the name of Hermes Trismegistus, was convinced that both Man and Nature are animate bodies moved by a force called God, who established and regulated the Laws of their motion.

That Omneity expresses Itself through both Man & Nature, is the point to be thought about. To us, this is of such importance as to be accorded one page of the Book of Nature.

We have discovered that Nature and Man are the two sources from which must come knowledge of Omneity and Its Laws. Martinists accept that Omneity, by Its characteristics of Infinity ... must remain unknowable by man. In other words: exactly what Omneity is, and how It expresses Itself in the realm of what we accept as real … can only be guessed at ... through a knowledge of things observable in the realms of the finite.

The Empyrean World constitutes a place wholly apart from the World of Orbs, and the World of the Elements. Observation, however, can discover certain unchanging conditions, certain orderly processes, certain appearances from which deductions can be made. Consequently, one may say that certain likenesses or analogies exist. Likewise, one may say that certain correspondences are indicated. By combining or synthesizing these elements which correspond, or are analogous … a whole may be built up ... which is orderly, harmonious, and consistent with itself.

By PROJECTING such a concept of the whole to include both the Elemental World and the World of Orbs, it was discovered that the two are operated by, and are expressions of the same conditions, processes and appearances.

It is logical to believe, therefore, that the same continues to be true no matter how far or in what direction one projects this concept of the whole. If order is a law in the two known worlds, is it not reasonable to say that it would also be so in that highest of all worlds, the Empyrean, ... since the Worlds of Orbs and Elements are but the finite and visible expressions of the Infinite and invisible Empyrean?

Thus, using only the mental tools of correspondence, analogy and synthesis, our ancient brethren probed the mysteries of Omneity and discovered truth for themselves ... and we of today may do the same. We, today, with our greater technology and materials for obtaining knowledge, are able to clarify, extend and fill in the gaps of their knowledge ... but we have not bettered their conception … nor have we been able to find them wrong in their general conclusions. It is our duty, each one of us, to move onward and uncover the truths, which have not yet been discerned.

The importance of our two Martinist Books called Nature and Man can now be begun to be seen: These are the books in which we are able to discover evidence of Omneity and Its manner of working in the world. A careful examination and study of these two sources, therefore, will lead us to practical knowledge that is invaluable. Restating the traditional thesis in modern words, one can say that Nature and Man are the two most important fields of investigation … for there the laws of the Universe are there to be seen in constant operation and so are most easily studied.

Both Man and Nature exhibit all of Omneity's laws in harmonious operation. If one studies either of these sources he comes to the same conclusions regarding Omneity ... for both Man and Nature tell the same story. If you fail to find Nature harmonious … or if you love Nature and think Man is a thing to be shunned and hated ... it is at once evident that your investigations are shallow and without any real discernment. You will be in fact: unscientific, for when two things are equal to the same thing, they are also equal to each other. Being equal to each other, they enforce the fact that everything is a fragment or facet of Omneity. Therefore: All is the expression of the One. That being so: man is secure in the assurance that, although seemingly in exile through a loss of knowledge … the estate to which he rightfully lays claim is still to be enjoyed again when lost knowledge is recovered by means of correspondence, analogy, and synthesis.

The secrecy inherent in the relationship of Nature, Man and Omneity exists because, as Francis Bacon once phrased it: "God plays hide and seek with man. It is the glory of God to conceal a thing, but the glory of man to find it out." And Saint Luke adds: (12:2) "There is nothing hidden, that shall not be revealed; neither hid, that shall not be known."

Let us sum up this fourth page of the Book of Nature which tells us that Man and Nature are dual aspects of Omneity. Think of this subject with the two Pillars before you. The Man of Aspiration at the a::: or crucial point of the Temple is on the Path of Return to Omneity while learning to balance the dual forces of Nature at all levels, or on all planes of manifestation. In the last analysis, he must reconcile that which is outside himself, or apparently not part of himself, with what is within himself.

Simply put: the last manifestation of Duality is the Self as opposed to the remainder of the world ... which is NOT-Self. This is the search for the Divine Harmony leading to Divine Unity. Numerologically, it is the Ogdoad or Eight, to which the Divine Negative Nine provides only an apparent opposition, adding nothing, but disappearing into the Ten or ONE. (Check this on the Tree of Life. The Eight here, is eight going up the Tree, i.e. Sephirah 3). (Nine would be Sephirah 2, and Ten … One).

Man and Nature are dual aspects of Omneity. Earlier in our Works we studied the Three Worlds of Martinism and we realized that Omneity is unknowable to Man. The Face of the Creator ... is to be looked for in His Creation. To the seeker, creation exists outside himself ... in the world he observes through his five senses; and also within himself in the realms of the intellect and consciousness. These two opposite views of Creation which lie within Man's powers of observation ... constitute the World of Nature and the World of Man. These dual aspects of Omneity are respectively known as the Macrocosm and the Microcosm.

Let us note the words of Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin, written in his book: Man, his true nature and ministry.

> "Man's thoughts and words are sharp swords and corrosive juices, which were given to him to break and dissolve the infected substances around him. When he fails to use them for his real purposes, they corrode and destroy him, because they cannot remain inactive. Therefore, action is so useful to man; and it is so profitable to him to be employed in the active work of the Word, which is truly Christian."

My Brothers & Sisters: you have been invited to perform certain exercises for certain definite purposes. Many of you have been conscientious about this; but I take this opportunity to issue a stern warning. Martinism, like other Mystic Orders, does not work by the intellect alone ... any more than Man lives by Bread alone. Work is the "order of the day," therefore: practice the meditations and the exercises. Especially the Exercise "M". This point is mentioned now that we are approaching the distinction of the Divine Self from the commonly imagined self. Step by step, we shall have to observe every little thing, which is not truly the Self, until we stand at last "NAKED BEFORE GOD". It was not for dramatic effect that you were told at your first interrogation: "If you knew who you really are, you would have nothing more to learn."

ALCHEMY
ALCHEMIC/HERMETIC—#41(A)

Brothers & Sisters:

This lecture, in a sense, can be considered as something of to Alchemy. The science of Alchemy has to do with sublimation, which, from point of view, is the raising of a lower state into a higher. For example be sublimated into virtues.

In Alchemy, there is what is known as the 4 Elements, and from the compounding of these, results the Three Principles or Substances. The Four Elements are: Air, Earth, Fire and Water. The Three Principles or Substances are: Mercury, Salt and Sulphur. These 4 Elements and 3 Substances are, of course, Alchemically speaking, to be understood as 7 Philosophical or Spiritual Principles. In this lecture I will deal, in an introductory way, with the Four Elements.

We read in Galatians 4:3 "Even so we, when we were children, were in bondage under the elements of the world." See also 2 Peter 3:10. In seeking to study invisible causes or origins, we must deal first with the visible effects and then work back to the cause. Obviously, the first general condition that we note is: all about us is an environment of matter that we comprehend generally in four divisions, commonly known as the Four Elements: Fire, Water, Air and Earth. Everything that we see or sense, can be included in the domain of one or more of these Elements. An occult scientist recognizes, and works with FIVE ELEMENTS ... the fifth one being called "SPIRIT" corresponding to the Element "Akasha" of Eastern Esotericism.

The study of the visible and invisible Elements, from their elementary aspect to the most advanced, constitutes one of the most important aspects of the curriculum of esoteric instruction. The first four degrees of some Mystic Fraternities correspond to the Four Elements and the Four Elemental Planes. The Four Angels of Occultism and Christianity: Michael, Raphael, Gabriel and Auriel are the Archangels of Fire, Air, Water and Earth. And the greatest Arcane Secret is concealed in the sacred, secret and unpronounceable Name of God composed of the Hebrew letters: Yod, He, Vau and He … each a symbol of one of the Elements. The Fifth Element, Spirit, is symbolized by the Hebrew letter Shin.

THE REAL FOUR ELEMENTS ARE, OF COURSE, INVISIBLE. What we feel, see and cognize are but the results of their activities. True Fire is invisible. Flame is NOT Fire ... it is the result of Fire and a product of cumbustion ... just as it is equally true to say that steam is invisible, what we see and describe as steam being merely vapor.

True Water is an invisible fluidic medium. The visible result of true Water is the state of matter we call "water" ... the intermediary between Earth and Air, or the gaseous state. But the invisible Water penetrates both rocks and air.

Earth is not merely the soil of the rocks, or the crust of the planet. Earth in its true sense ... is invisible. It is the "primordial" or first matter, termed by the Alchemists "Prima Materia."

Air is generally comprehended as space, atmosphere. Commonly, it is the chemical compound we breathe, along with the animals and from which the vegetable kingdom derives its principle vital constituents. But the true Air is invisible and has specific spiritual qualities.

In the old Dispensation the Name of God was known as the Tetragrammaton, or the four-lettered, "sacred and unpronounceable Name." As stated before, the four letters of the Name of God are Yod, He, Vau and He, or Yahovah. In a certain way, which we cannot deal with now, these letters and the Elements they stand for, indicate the nature of God. Man being, as we are told, "made in the image of God", the Elements are also descriptive, in some way, of the nature of man; the nature which he must seek and discover within himself.

The Scripture tells us that "when we were children, we were in bondage under the elements of the world." Observing the behavior of the human species of the present day ... we are forced to conclude that most of humanity is still very much in bondage to the elements and that the great need of the day is that MAN FREE HIMSELF FROM THIS BONDAGE AND SLAVERY. This being particularly true to those who aspire to higher states of consciousness. Briefly, the student must discover the Elements within himself, and learn how to use each of them in a constructive way. If he is to become a Master of the Elements of the World (outside of himself), he must first become a master of the Elements within himself.

The student must learn how to invoke the invisible FIRE for a vitalizing of the Spirit that is within his.

He must learn how to keep the WATER of the Soul pure and undefiled; that his individual reflection of the ocean of thought may at all times develop right and constructive thoughts.

He must learn how to keep the EARTH of his body in a wholesome, healthy state that it may house a healthy mentality and a healthy soul.

He must invoke the AIR Element that he may not become crystallized in a petrified state of mind but be ever open to the spiritual vibrations of the highest.

THE FOUR ELEMENTS ARE IN REALITY FOUR SPIRITUAL FORCES WORKING FOR MAN, but thus far, man has permitted them to work more or less uncontrolled ... and more often he is controlled by them. The student must realize that the Elements within him are Divine and that he exists because of them. He must learn how to direct and control them and make them subservient to his higher will ... for his uses for constructive good.

You must endeavor to consecrate these natural forces to a spiritual status in their results. They are already spiritual in the native state of activity, … A strong FIERY Spirit; ... a pure, calm WATER Soul of clear thought; ... a healthy, vigorous body of EARTH; ... and the AIR forces focusing in a powerful mind. All these will combine to make you an individual power for good in your community, nation and the world.

Do not think of the Four Elements as four states of matter in solid, liquid or gaseous form about you. Think of them IN you, vitalizing you and making you what you aspire to be. You have to follow the esoteric path not so much "in theory" as in practice. Strive for control of the Elements within you and you will be thrilled to discover new phases and nature's secrets in the subject of the Elements. Discover the workings of the Elements in you in every situation of your life and you will discover your own methods of establishing the rule of your higher self over them.

Life, ... our daily life, is the battlefield upon which all battles for self-mastery, as well as the control of the Elements ... must be waged. Every moment of your life offers a great opportunity for countless victories on this battlefield, and, therefore, ... spiritual progress.

Let us take the Element of FIRE for example. The Element of FIRE manifests itself in us as a very popular emotion of anger and hate. The uncontrolled Element of FIRE in man leads, among other things, to "killing" of many kinds.

"Thou shalt not kill" does not merely signify physical killing of man or beast. One may injure another in countless ways ... by slow degrees ... and thus kill him. In the words of the popular song, you can "kill a person softly." By your words you can kill another's reputation and good name. Because of your hate, if you awaken in another harmful emotions and hateful thoughts, if you shake another's faith in what he holds to be good and true ... you kill him in exactly the same manner as when you give him work to do which requires greater strength than he has, or when you supply him with insufficient food, or when you pay him insufficient wages.

Uncontrolled sex is another negative manifestation of the Element of FIRE in man. Dire effects of this particular manifestation of FIRE are well known to all.

The Element of AIR is just as deadly in its manifestations, when uncontrolled, as is Fire. This is best manifested in our uncontrolled thinking and speaking careless words. Our words must carry proper meaning and weight ... for we have no power over them after they have left our lips. Many a war, domestic and national, has been started through uncontrolled speaking.

When the physical body and its low appetites are in control and man indulges in all sorts of low pleasures of the body ... the EARTH Element is in control. Overindulgences and harmful habits, such as: use of alcohol, drugs, tobacco and the many other excesses must be brought under control and the Element of EARTH placed under the domination of the Higher Self.

Everyone knows the disastrous effect and unhappiness in all of our lives caused by the cold, clammy and paralyzing Element of WATER, manifesting itself as fear of many kinds, and on many levels.

Every Aspirant on the Path must discover for himself and in himself the negative and uncontrolled action of each of the Elements, and, by earnest effort he must strive to purify them and make them willing servants of his Higher Self.

You will realize, of course, that there is a positive side to these Elements which must be cultivated when the negative side has been brought under control.

From the FIRE ELEMENT our mental concepts derive force, energy and vitality. This gives them the power to impress in such a way that creative results accrue. Fire gives movement. The Fire of enthusiasm, the Fire of unselfish love, the Fire of aspiration for the higher things ... these are only a few of the constructive manifestations of the Element of Fire.

From the WATER ELEMENT our mental concepts gain mobility and fluidity, and this causes us often to use expressions such as: "my ideas seemed to flow as swiftly as water." Courage in doing what is right, rather than the popular attitude: "I do not want to get involved" is one of the manifestations of the divine Element of Water. Clear, lucid, altruistic thinking and speech, which helps to remake our surroundings for the better, is one of the positive manifestations of the ELEMENT OF AIR. From the Air Element, our mental concepts acquire a power or faculty of penetration and dissemination. This quality is what makes possible the "flights of imagination," which are by no means to be despised, but carefully observed and studied. This last quality brings us directly to the personal application. You should develop … not so much the WILL, as frequently, in fact, it is almost universally taught ... but the IMAGINATION. (The power to wake mental images by an effort of will.) It is by imagination that we "wake up our minds," and making up our minds is nothing more or less man concreting the specific idea, or thought form developed by our imagination visually. Blessed is he or she who is fortunate enough to have a "vivid imagination", for if carefully directed and controlled, it may lead to almost any accomplishment. All of us are gifted to some extent with a power of imagination, or the ability to mentally visualize things existent or conditions not presently existent but as we would like to have them. Some instruction on this has already been given.

From the EARTH ELEMENT things derive a stability that enables them to become concreted and this is what gives us the power of holding to a "fixed idea." This is our greatest asset in applying our idea to the molding of ourselves into what we sincerely desire to become. A clean, healthy and strong body devoid of harmful enslavements is the product of the positive action of the Element of Earth.

The foregoing information is introductory, as mentioned at the beginning of this talk, but you are gaining an overall and all-round perspective as we touch on various topics. Greater details about Alchemy will come forth after the Hermetic series has been developed. Before I close let us consider the Four Elements in the creation of Man, using the allegory in Genesis.

In Genesis 2:6-7 we find written, "But there went up a mist from the earth, and watered the whole of the ground. And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul."

Here we have the confirmation of the operation of the invisible aspects of the Four Elements in action, and the correlation of them all in producing Man, who is, therefore, the Focus, crystallization or epitome of them all.

"Lord God" is the figure of speech personifying or identifying the Creative Intelligence who directed the orderly activities of the Nature forces. The Earth is the Great Mother within whose womb lie the germs of all things that become objective in mortal existence, acknowledged as such alike in occultism and mythology.

In the "dust" or substance of Mother Earth, nourished by the Water Element whose invisible activity was manifest in the visible mist or vapor that rose from the Earth, Man was germinated and in due time, after undergoing definite involutionary and evolutionary processes, the Air forces developed him sufficiently to enable him to respond to the King of the Nature Forces, FIRE, which was the "Breath of Life," making Man a rational, intelligent creature.

The ultimate purpose and goal of the spiritual scientist is to learn of God by knowing more of his own Self, Man being as we are told, "made in the image of God." We shall learn more of ourselves by studying Mature ... for we are the epitome of all the creative forces of Mature, and all that we can see or cognize in the natural world exists as the result or product of the operations necessary to bring Man into objective being or existence.

The Masters of Wisdom, the Adepts and all our Elder Brothers are said to control the Elements not only within, but without themselves as well ... and to perform miracles with their aid. The beginner on the Path of Wisdom must begin with himself because by learning to control himself he learns best how to control the things outside of him.

The question is: Are the Elements controlling you ... or, are you controlling the Elements?

Brothers £ Sisters: Think on these things.

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

All of us, whether consciously or unconsciously, live by some standard of excellence, some image of what a man or woman is, and we measure ourselves against that image or standard. In some cases, we only see this image in the fragmented form of roles ... a man is different when he is in the role of a father than when he would be in the role of a soldier.

The image we hold in our inner mind affects our perceptions of ourselves and others. It also is the motivation behind most of our actions, thoughts and words.

The standard by which we measure ourselves is usually determined by our childhood models, our culture and many social, racial, religious, and economical factors. Even the state of our health and the appearance of our body affect the image we hold as excellent. In addition to these more commonly accepted factors, we are also bringing with us very deep soul memories from experiences prior to this incarnation. In many cases, these also shape our inner image or ideal. Then, we tend, whether consciously or unconsciously, to evaluate ourselves and our life by how well we measure up to the image we see as excellent.

The standard, the image or the ideal has a very powerful influence on us and those around us, but most of us allow the ideal to be shaped only by those factors just mentioned. The greatest step we can take to regain our divinity and true consciousness is to decide for ourselves what our ideal will be. Next, we need to describe the ideal in as clear an image as we can, developing it on three levels, Spiritual, Mental and Physical. What is the standard of excellence by which we will measure our progress physically through our daily actions and words, mentally through our thoughts and attitudes, and spiritually through our overriding consciousness, purpose and motivation? For the standard to have its greatest power it must be the highest possible image we can conceive as perfect, something that we can always strive for and may one day achieve. If we set an ideal like this and each day work at moving closer and closer to actually being that ideal, it will launch us into a whole new level of growth and expansion of consciousness.

In practice, the ideal or standard is not a static image, but is forever expanding as we grow closer to it. The nearer we come to reaching our standard the more we see an even greater standard beyond it. It is an ever-expanding vision of the breadth of life, consciousness and being. Just realize for a minute that you are indeed a fallen companion of the creator of this entire universe, not just the universe we see with our eyes, but all the unseen dimensions of it as well! Only then is it easy to see how your ideal today will not be near sufficient for you tomorrow. Eventually, the standard you measure yourself by will be that of your Divine Companion and you will strive to be perfect even as He is. Perfection certainly appears to be a very ambitious goal as we view ourselves today and the Saviour of the Christian Initiates admonished us to strive for perfection.

There's an important, subtle characteristic to this technique of setting and living by an ideal. It is not so much the "what" of your ideal as it is the "why" of it. Why you are setting and living by an ideal is going to determine more about your companionability with the divine than about the actual details of your ideal. One must search one's heart often to make sure that self-glorification, self-gratification, self-aggrandizement, self-centeredness, self-willfulness ... and just plain self is not the reason you seek fulfillment. If the path we are on makes us more humble, more meek, more patient, more compassionate, then it is the right path and it will lead to the ultimate fulfillment of knowing oneself to be oneself and yet one with the Whole.

Another critical aspect of setting and living by an ideal is an awareness that the true aspect of real life, flows from out of the spirit into the mental where it takes on a clearer image and then manifests itself in the physical world. Therefore, the ideal must originate with the spiritual impetus if it is to bring that metamorphic change from material consciousness to spiritual or Christ consciousness, terrestrial nature to celestial nature, from "son of man" to "Son (or Daughter) of God."

Let the image, the standard, this deal com from your higher self, then take hold of it and shape your mental and physical ideals around it. In this way you will really begin the process with the right direction.

Very practically speaking, you should begin developing your new ideal by praying, meditating, holding your thoughts on the things of this spirit, and watching your dreams. After you think you have the "feel" or sense of what your higher seeks in the way of a spiritual ideas, the sit down and write this spiritual standard by which you are now going to live. Then let this shape your mental ideal … how you are going to think and what is going to be your attitude toward yourself, your life and the others in your life. Now let this help shape your physical ideal ... how are you going to act? Especially: what are you going to do in your daily life with the daily situations? This again should be related to yourself, your life and the others in your life.

Each day you should review these ideals and reflect on how well you're doing. Try reflecting on this while in touch with your higher self, you'll gain better insight this way. If you feel your ideal is changing, then make the change in writing and begin to live accordingly. Before you know it, people will be telling you how much you've changed ... and you'll know it, too. It is a wonderful experience, the value of which can only be appreciated through directly experiencing it firsthand.

THE DAILY APPLICATION

There are two old sayings that go something like this: "There is no surer way of getting where you want to go than to keep on keeping on," and "The journey of a thousand miles begins with one step ... and continues step by step." There is a subtle and powerful truth in these two sayings. No matter how long or hard a journey may be, if it is taken step by step and with an unceasing determination to complete it, then it will be done. No one has to deal with the awesome thought of the whole journey ... just the next step along the way.

One of the most practical ways to work with daily application is the use of disciplines. Select one or two of your weaknesses or faults and design a daily discipline related to overcoming them. It can be as simple as trying to focus on the positive aspects of a person or task, than on the negative. Then as the opportunity arises during the day for you to see the negative, you stop yourself and refocus on the positive. Before long, you won't have to stop yourself because it will be second nature For you to look for the good.

The same can be done with helping others. Just select some task or attitude that another person is seeking from you and design a daily discipline whereby you do some portion of it everyday. For example, your spouse may be seeking help from you with some of the mundane chores of daily life, so you decide to do the dishes every other day, or vacuum once a week.

Disciplines don't have to be awesome gestures of great character building. In fact, the greatest changes come through little things done well and faithfully.

There is no aspect of character, or work, or attitude, or relationships, or any aspect of life that can't be changed by applying oneself to it daily in little ways.

SUPERNUMERARY LECTURE— #13

GOING THROUGH OR GROWING THROUGH (III)

History is often approached from the standpoint that the past is final and complete. But history records more than static conclusions; it chronicles a multitude of experiences of growth and development. Knowing yourself is knowing what you can do. And since nobody knows what he can do until he tries, the only clue to what man can do comes through knowing what man has done. The greatest lesson that can be learned from history is that although the any have done mediocre things that have led to a progression of almost meaningless events, here and there individuals have done things that herald the greater possibilities that are open to the whole race of man.

What man has done, man can do. Jesus was an example of a high point in history, a high watermark in the evolution of man. And He said, in effect, "All that I do, you can do too, if you have faith." You can if you have vision, if you reach for the highest, if you keep looking up.

If a person is in the gutter, the only way he can get out of the gutter is to look up. He must begin to think "out of the gutter" thoughts before he can actually get out of the gutter. This is true at every level of human experience. If a person is ill in mind or body, before he can get out of the experience of sickness he must begin to think out of it. He must look up; he must entertain the possibility of something different in his life.

We hear much these days about the United States government's poverty program. A concerted effort is being made to erase the pockets of poverty and to take people out of slum conditions. In our affluent society, however, we have the means in our hands by which we can take all people out of the slums. But unless we succeed in taking the "slum consciousness" out of people, we will probably go forward and build new slums. The basic need is psychological and spiritual, not just economic and physical. The basic problem of blighted areas is blighted spirits. The great need is to undertake a project of helping underprivileged groups to look up, to achieve new states of consciousness, new ways of thinking. Money of itself will not do this, as the lessons of history should reveal.

If we can develop the capacity to look up, even in the midst of difficulties, to entertain the possibility of far greater good than the appearances would seem to indicate, we will experience the action of what can be called the Divine law of adjustment. Have you ever heard a pianist or an organist improvising? He moves from chord to chord and makes up his melody as he progresses. Perhaps he does not even play a melody, but just continuous chord progressions. Occasionally he may put his finger on a wrong note, creating a dissonance. To a person playing a Mozart composition, a wrong note could be a tragedy. Not so for the improviser. He skillfully resolves the dissonant chord into a delightful chord progression, which sounds for all the world as if it were exactly what he had intended to play.

This is the way the Divine law of adjustment works. The Scriptures promise: "In everything, Cod works for good with those who love him." To the one who can look up and see his troubles through Cod, the action of Divine law moves quickly to resolve the mishap, the injustice, the wrong step — even the tragedy — into a progression of circumstances that lead to good. In the end, the entire flow of good appears to be a very natural series of events that were intended to unfold exactly as they did.

No matter what the experience or condition, the potential for good is always at band. All we need to do is to look away from the negative appearance and to decree: "God, the good, is all there is, and God is with me and in me now. Only good can corn to me and through me in this experience, for I am God's living enterprise."

You may say: “But you don’t understand. I lost my job and have absolutely no source of income”; “My loved one passed away, and I am completely alone in the world.” Tragic and real as such experiences are, would you say they are worse than those that faced Joseph? Remember how the Divine law of adjustment worked for him because he saw his troubles through God; because he decided not to resist and resent his brothers; because he put himself into the flow of Divine activity leading to eventual good.

You may find yourself feeling sorry for someone who has met with injustice or heartache or tragedy, but you will not help him by sympathizing with him. Have compassion for him, bless him, and certainly give him your love and understanding, but do not sympathize with him. Sympathy only gives power to a negative condition that has no real existence except in the minds of those who accept it.

Right where this person is, beyond the appearance of his misfortune, the potential action of the Divine law of adjustment awaits. If he can but begin to see good in his problem, see the reality of God’s activity working through all things for good and not fall victim to self-pity and resentment, then the Divine law of adjustment will turn dissonance into harmony and darkness into light. You will soon see him experiencing some great good in a way that will cause you to feel that it all had to happen the way it did. You will find yourself agreeing, however reluctantly, that all things have worked together for good.

Mo matter what our present station in life, no matter what experiences we are facing, right where we are is the best possible starting place to get to where we want to go. We must avoid the tendency to look for an escape, to say, “Oh, if I just didn’t have to meet this problem.” We must resolve to face the problem, to look up and see it through God, and let the action of the law resolve it into that which is altogether good.

Let us never forget that because we are the unique creatures we are, and because consciousness puts its imprint upon everything around us, the things that come to us are the very experiences we need as challenges to make the over-comings we must make in order to become the kind of person we want to become. If that seems disturbing to you, consider Paul’s statement: “God is faithful, and He will not Let you be tempted beyond your strength, but with the temptation will also provide the way of escape.” This means that this problem before you is something you need to solve, and there is with you, right now, the God-given power through which you can solve it. You will move above and beyond the problem!

You may ask, “How long do I have to struggle in my wilderness until I can find the goad of my awn ‘promised land’?” There is no way to forecast the ultimate working together for goad. How long does it take you to develop a particular skill? How long does it take you to achieve a college degree? It may take forty years, or it may take forty seconds; it depends on you. The important thing is to keep on. Even in the midst of our wilderness, when we seem to be making little or no progress, we must keep on. We must look up and away from the discouraging appearances to the realization of the process of growth; we must realize: “In everything, God works for good.”

When the great musician Ignacy Paderewski was called before a queen who acknowledged him as being a genius, he said, “Ah, Your Highness, but before I was a genius I was a drudge.” Long before the genius is acclaimed and discouragement is turned into fulfillment and success, the successful person will have been working, growing, overcoming, and keeping on … keeping on … keeping on!

We fail only when we give up, when we surrender. We fail only when we think that in tragedy, in misfortune, there is no hope for us. If we will look up and determine to see our difficulty through God, through Truth, then there is hope for us, there is help for us. We will experience an amazing progression of events that will turn our misfortune into good fortune.

The day will come when we will look back on our whole life and see clearly that everything that happened has had a part in unfolding the pattern of our own soul's growth. More than this, it will appear as if the pathway by which we have come is the only possible way to reach the desired end. But this is not predestination. It is simply the result of a predisposition to grow through, instead of simply going through, the exigencies of life.

LOOK TO YOURSELVES

The second epistle of St. John is entirely about truth. It is a letter warning sister churches to beware of new teachings and false doctrines. Exoterically, it is a strict warning regarding transgressions … Esoterically it is more interesting: "Whosoever transgresses, and abides not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God." What does this mean? Truly, except that without comprehension of the Christos … and without knowledge of the Christ within … we cannot hope to be truly one with God. It is regrettable that exoteric religion has not yet been able to differentiate between Jesus and Christ – even though Paul states it clearly: "the mystery which has been hidden for ages and generations; but which has now been manifested to His saints, which is Christ in you … the hope of glory."

We must look to ourselves, that we do not forget this, or misunderstand its teaching; for without this, as John says, "we do not receive a full reward." To let the truths about the universe fall by the wayside – which have been revealed to us for centuries through meditation, contemplation and prayer … is to deny ourselves a full spiritual reward. And to give, them up totally for the "modern Western lifestyle" is deadly, or at least deadening, for it is trading spiritual reward for immediate physical and financial gratification. We must never forget the primary charge: Seek first the Kingdom of God – and all these other things will be added. We must be careful not to put the cart before the horse.

"Look to yourselves." What does this mean? It means, variously, "watch yourselves", "examine yourselves", "look at yourselves." All of these may be read into John's statement; all of them are necessary to keep an eye on the past … to keep an eye on what we have done, and therefore are capable of doing again. To know what we have wrought is to be able to comprehend what we shall be capable of doing. fly forgetting what we wrought, forgetting that our "young men" have seen visions, we cut off from ourselves the ability to push farther ahead.

We must watch out both for the scientist who explains away mystical, paranormal, or psychic phenomena as del4sion and for the stiff-neck minister who says the same thing. We must watch out just as much for the hysteria-mongering Journalist and preacher who decrees all such as "witchcraft", "demonic manifestations" and "Satanism." (Which is not only an erroneous position, but one fully at odds with the Bible itself).

Who can we trust in these matters? The answer: "look to yourself", which is … learn to look into yourself and to trust yourself, to hear the still, small voice within – the Christ, … which is our Guide, Lord and Master.

LECTURE #42
BOOK OF NATURE — DREAMS

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

With the fifth and last page of the Book of Nature, we come to the moat important and practical step in preparing ourselves for our eventual study of the BOOK OF MAN. Earlier you were told that correspondences exist between the different levels of consciousness hence we proceed from one Book to the other ... and from the Physical Plane to the Astral ... if you are sufficiently determined to practice the Works. You will have to pay particular heed to the significance to be found in the teaching that: knowledge of the Higher Worlds is to be obtained only through dreams.

However one may choose to define dreams, we recognize them to be connected with sleep. In other words: they occur at times of unconsciousness. When man falls asleep, the faculties, which make him aware of his outer or objective surroundings become dormant … At least, those faculties no longer function on the same levels as when he is awake. Were it otherwise, there would be no difference between the two states which we call conscious and unconscious.

We know there is a noticeable difference between a person asleep and one awake. We also know that that difference is occasioned by the nature of the functioning of the five faculties of awareness in those states.

Our faculties, then, are common to both states:

When we are awake, they report what happens in the realm of consciousness.

When we are asleep, they report what happens in the realm of unconsciousness.

The reports from the unconscious ... we call dreams.

Dreams may be shallow or profound, may be made up of inconsequential fragments or remnants of the daily life, and they may also occur in response to some anxiety, some problem unresolved, or even same wish or desire held uppermost in thought. With such dreams mystics are not concerned ... for they do not penetrate more than the fringe of the unconscious. Although they are of immediate concern to the individual, they do not yield the kind of knowledge mystics seek.

DISCUSSION
(Please re—read the above before proceeding)

Dreams, then, like the reports of the waking experience … are not of equal value. This indicates that, in the unconscious realm, there are levels of worthlessness ... as well as levels of worth.

Ordinarily, our faculties function in limited fashion; giving us only partial and incomplete reports whether we are asleep or awake. Our spiritual instructors in Martinism, however, knew that man's faculties are capable of development and more complete reporting. Since a correspondence exists between the realms of the conscious and the unconscious ... and since both realms must be passed through by man on his return to his Lost Estate in the bosom of Omneity … it is only natural that mystic teachers should concern themselves with every field in which the faculties exercise themselves, in order that their abilities to report completely might be improved ... if not perfected.

For this reason, dreams have been studied in all ages although not always in the same careful way that mystics have recommended ... and rarely, if ever, for the same reason that mystics have investigated them.

The earthly pillars of opposition (the manifestation of duality) have their prototype in the Astral World. Through dreams, man meets these astral pillars, thus bridging the gap between the conscious and the unconscious. The next step from the Earth Plane is therefore to develop a continuous memory during sleep.

For most of us, the dream world is very disrupted and amounts to little more than random ideation, leaving little to recall when we awake. In an attempt to make a serious study of our dreams, it is first necessary to record as much as we do recall IMMEDIATELY we wake up. Each student must keep a notebook (and perhaps a torch) by the bedside so as to make notes of each dream, or bit of a dream at intervals during the night. Obviously this practice may cause some loss of sleep and it may not be possible to undertake such recording every night of the week, but a start must be made and every reasonable opportunity taken of doing so. There is no other way.

At first your notes will probably appear silly. No Initiate is expected to reveal his dreams to anyone else. The purpose is partly to bring about a development of mental discipline in addition to the foundation exercises given previously. However, as continuity of dreams becomes clearer, we begin to see a pattern, which is peculiarly relevant to our personal life. As soon as these results are obtained, more will be said about the next step on the Path of Return.

Meanwhile, here is the method of preparing the mind, or rather the brain, for the observation of dreams:

EXERCISE "D"

Each night, before settling down finally to sleep, concentrate or focus the attention on the nape of the neck. Be quite comfortable and relaxed so that nothing disturbs you from external causes; then let the thoughts turn to the back of the neck, about the region where the neck joins the head, as if a beam of light were focused steadily on that point.

After a few moments, ask mentally that you may reach the level in the unconscious which is your particular goal ... and close your meditation with a prayer of gratitude that Omneity has you always in Its care.

With this last idea in mind, then drift off to sleep.

DISCUSSION I QUESTIONS

Please give me a little more light on the passage, "the Earthly Pillars of opposition have their prototype in the Astral World. Through dreams, man meets these Astral Pillars thus bridging the gap between the conscious and the unconscious."

You raise here a point that has two aspects and I am not quite sure on which one you require assistance: a. Pillars Correspondence, or, b. Dreams as a means of bridging the gap. I will therefore give a brief opinion on both!

The essence of Martinism is the search for correspondences between the three principle parts into which creation and the pairs themselves can be divided and subdivided ad infinitum. Works of our masters are concerned with the relationships of Man and his First Estate or condition, which means: that part of him that existed on the other planes, and with correspondences between God, Man and the Universe.

If we conclude that understanding the correspondences between our present earthly condition and the divine in us, at this stage of our comprehension, (due to our insufficient knowledge of basic principles, since we have not completed the foundation yet), we are left with the task of working at, by ourselves, the correspondences between the conscious (waking) mind, and the unconscious mind … one corresponding to the material or earth plane, and the other to the astral plane (so-called).

The principle of the Pillars is that polarity has to be balanced so as to reach a state of equilibrium. We must temper Justice with Mercy; actualize theory with the practical; etc. etc. The equilibrant or balancing point must necessarily be reflected on the astral plane according to our system or correspondences. The form that these opposite poles and reconciling third force would take on the astral plane is the subject proposed to the reflections and meditations of the brethren.

We now come to the dream part. As well as reflections (which imply intelligent analysis) and meditation … which reaches beyond objectivity into subjective understanding … we have been given dreams, a process of reviewing the recent activities of the mind for sorting into categories of events: either worth storing in the memory … or ''disposable''.

This reviewing has the advantage of bringing up all activities of the mind, even those of which we may not have been conscious of in our waking state. Thus, when we have consciously and objectively reflected on a given subject, the unconscious side of our mind was equally active but its musings and conclusions were not normally perceived by our conscious mind.

At the dream stage of analysis, these items can be picked out ... and give us a glimpse into a level of consciousness with which we are not normally attuned. Then, with proper training, (and this is not idle talk but factual statement of phenomenon experienced by many of us, and the matter of proper experiment), one can, at one point of a dream, without waking up, direct that dream into fields of enquiry AND OBTAIN ANSWERS. At that point, the most difficult thing is to bring back these answers into the field of conscious thought, that is, ... to remember them on waking up. With proper guidance and practice IT IS FEASIBLE. It follows therefore, that this field of investigation brings us in touch with that which, on the astral plane, corresponds to the pillars on the material plane.

It is appropriate to speak here of the Astral Body or Plastic Envelope which surrounds the Physical Body during waking consciousness and Is understood to contain the Ame at all times. According to the Illustrious Papus, our first Grand Master of world Martinism, this Astral Body leaves with the Ame at so-called death and remains as a means of reincarnating at the time and place most suitable to our personal karma. When the personal karma is balanced (equilibrated) on all Planes of Consciousness, or our Being is reintegrated, as Martinez Pasquales taught, the need for reincarnation is gone and the Astral Body is finally dispersed completely. This is sometimes called the Second Death.

You will notice, Brothers & Sisters that we refer to the higher astral or heavenly regions during our rituals, dwelling place of the Masters of our Astral Chain who are still interested in events on the Earth Plane. It may also be worth our while to read a few lines from scripture relating to the Astral Body and Silver Cord which link the Eternal Ame with the transient Physical Plane. In Ecclesiastes 12:5-6, we find the following lines:

> "because man goeth to his long home, and the mourners go about the streets; or ever the silver cord be loosed, or the golden bowl broken ..."

These remarkable words are part of the chapter, which opens with the warning: "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth..." We too must remember that our Venerable Order is a heritage, which points out the Path to us. Opportunity may not strike again so easily. The exercise given you ("D") is to produce what is sometimes called "true dreaming". Some of us have seen the Astral Body and Silver Cord; phenomena, which occur only in true dreaming. You have now been shown the Way. It is left to you to follow it.

A further pointer to the development of Christ Consciousness as something beyond the Earth Plane, is given in the Second Book of Corinthians, 12:2 onwards: "I knew a man in Christ above 14 years ago, (whether in the body, I cannot tell; or whether out of the body, I cannot tell; God knoweth) such a one caught up to the third heaven." The Initiate Paul seems to be speaking of a more advanced Initiate than himself, as the next verses make clear.

Our V::: M:::, the Unknown Philosopher, wrote to the Baron von Liebistorf on September 6th, 1792, concerning astral consciousness as follows:

> "He (that is, the subject of their correspondence) does not put off his corporeal envelope, any more than others who, like him, have enjoyed, more or less, the same favors, have put off theirs. The soul leaves the body only at death; but, during earthly Life, the faculties may extend beyond it, and communicate with their exterior correspondents without ceasing to be united with their center, as our bodily eyes and all our organs correspond with surrounding objects, without ceasing to be connected with their animal principle, the focus of all our physical operations."

It would be unwise to lay down rules for recognizing true dreaming, but these few points may help some to appreciate what they are doing. One of the ways of knowing that one is "dreaming true" is the simple fact of being aware that one is dreaming. This soon follows the practice of writing down one's dreams for a few months.

Next is realized the ability to control the dream and the dreamer becomes the master instead of the slave of the dream environment. The third step is to dissolve the dream scene altogether, knowing them to be only random ideation and a self—created heaven of the lower astrality.

With the disappearance of this more or less chaotic type of dream there follows an attunement with a wider form of consciousness wherein one may see clearly the projections of the physical world, rather as if one had stepped into the beam of a motion picture projector without disturbing its effect on the screen. If, however, one is not serene at this time, one does disturb the appearance of the earthly scene and lapse into false dreaming again.

Once having established a steady consciousness on the astral plane, the Way is open for elevating one's attention to less objective matters, so as to tread the Path of Return between the Pillars of the higher astrality, thus attaining the Serenity of the Masters and the Reintegration of Being.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

LECTURE #43
QABALAH

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

Having completed our short study of the Book of Nature, we shall turn now to a subject that plays a very important part in the formation of what we could call the Martinist Doctrine. This subject is the Qabalah.

Let us first try to define the Qabalah. This word comes from a Hebrew verb meaning "to receive". This refers to the way the doctrine has been handed down through the years. Much was transmitted orally, "from mouth to ear". According to its propagators, the Qabalah was first taught by God Himself to a selected group of Angels who had formed a theosophic school In Paradise. After the Fall, the angels communicated this doctrine to Man to give him the means to regain his pristine nobility and felicity. From Adam, the doctrine was communicated down to Noah, Abraham, Moses, the 70 Elders, David, Solomon, etc. The first man to commit the doctrine to writing is supposed to have been Rabbi ben Jochai who, having been condemned to death by Titus, escaped and hid in a cave where he spent the rest of his life writing the Qabalah under the guidance of the reincarnated prophet Elias.

This version, however attractive, has been extensively attacked and its detractors have found impressive arguments to prove that the work was in fact written later, between the 9th and 12th century A.D.

We, as Martinists, shall not waste our time in vain speculations on the historical origins of the doctrine. What interests us is whether this mysterious and often much maligned doctrine has something to offer. Let us turn our eyes to the past, therefore, and we shall see that this system of philosophy or "theosophy" has captivated the minds of great men like:

Raymund Lully, metaphysician and alchemist (d.1315).
J. Reuchlin (1455—1522).
J. Pic de La Mirandole, philosopher (1463—1494).
Cornelius Aggrippa, philosopher, divine and physician (1577—1644).
Robert Fludd, physician and philosopher (1574—1637).
Dr. Henry Moore (1614—1687).
And other too numerous to mention.

These just named, all men who, after searching in vain for a system, which would disclose to them the "deepest depths" of the Divine Nature and the ties that bind all things together found the craving of their minds satisfied by this theosophy.

What then is the Qabalah?

It is a set of doctrinal arguments designed mainly to solve the great problems about:

The nature of the Supreme Being;
The Cosmogony;
The creation of Angels and Men;
The destiny of Man and of the Universe, and
The importance of the revealed law.

Let us now make it clear, first of all that we do not intend to make a detailed study of the Qabalah. This would require a LIFE TIME and would in any case be outside the scope of Martinism. Furthermore, no perfect understanding of the Qabalah can be achieved unless the student is thoroughly familiar with the intricacies of ancient Hebrew, as intensive use is made of the formation of words by permutation and rearrangement of Hebrew letters to explain certain processes of evolution, phases of creation, attributes of God, etc. etc.

Let us therefore satisfy ourselves with studying the outline of the doctrine and its validity as a philosophy that may help us, who live in the 20th century, to achieve our re-integration.

The essentials of the Qabalistic Doctrine are contained in two books of rather different character. The first and most ancient is the Sepher Ietzirah or Book of Creation; the second, much more elaborate and containing 11 additional treatises which have been incorporated to it is called the Sepher Ha Zohar, or the Zohar for short ... which title means Book of Splendour.

To these two storehouses of Qabalah must be added the Commentary of Rabbi Azariel ben Menachem (b. circa 1160); and 4 treatises dating from 8th century A.D.:

a) The Alphabet of Rabbi Akiba
b) The Book of Enoch
c) The Shiur Koma, or Dimensions of the Deity; and
d) The Palaces.

The ideas set forth in the Qabalah are to be found in all philosophic, religious and mystical teaching. In most cases, they are not 2'ecogniaed as being a part of Qabalistic teaching. The main reason is ... that a generally false notion prevails as to what the Qabalah is. Believing it to be something which it is not ... prevents people from discovering what it is.

Among the Hebrews, from whom we derive the Qabalah, two types of instruction prevailed: an open instruction given to everyone; and a reserved instruction, given only to the relative few. The Rabbi Jesus, himself a Qabalistic scholar, certainly taught according to this method; he did not cast pearls before swine, knowing full well that it is unwise to speak to people about matters which they have not been prepared to understand. As recorded in different parts of the Gospels, (Mark 4:10,11,33,34. Matt.13:11, 34, 36. Luke 8:10 etc.) Jesus spoke in parables to the public and then explained privately what he was really talking about. It would be foolhardy to believe that the Inner Teachings have been neglected or forgotten. Much of his instruction was probably given after his "death" ... there was a tradition in the Church that he visited his apostles for a considerable period after his "death" for the sake of giving them instruction; Acts 1:3 records that he was seen after "death" speaking to his disciples "about things pertaining to the Kingdom of God." In the famous Gnostic treatise, the Pistis Sophia, we read: "It came to pass, when Jesus had risen from the dead, that he passed eleven years speaking with his disciples and instructing them." None of these secret teachings have been publicly recorded but no one should have any doubt that they have not been handed down as a priceless possession. Saint John records at the end of his Gospel that if all the things that Jesus did were to be noted down ... "even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written."

DISCUSSION/QUESTIONS

Now, creation, according to the Qabalists, was the result of God's projecting a virtue or power of Himself into space. This virtue gave rise to another ... similar, yet distinct ... until 10 projections, or emanations, had established the completed pattern in space. These emanations were like separate facets of one jewel. Seeming to dazzle the eye as to so many distinct sources of light, they were, nevertheless, ... only ONE. Infinity is capable of an infinite number of aspects without becoming less than infinity. Since the senses of Man are incapable of appreciating the Infinite, the exact nature of God must remain forever unknown except as it can be approximated from a study of His handiwork in the Book of Nature.

The point where the invisible and intangible began to become visible and tangible ... the Qabalists called the beginning of creation. They traced this growing visibility to its final development as perfected matter and said this marked the final emanation of God, or the point of return.

Thus, two large divisions were arrived at:

1) That which was known, and
2) That which was unknown.

Or, as the Qabalists expressed it:

1) The Lower World, and
2) The Upper World.

Three emanations constituted the Upper World, and these they spoke of as the Holy Upper Trinity. Seven emanations made up the Lower World, and these they called the dimensions of space; or, the six days of creation and the day of rest.

The seven emanations, called the Lower World, arranged themselves according to the Law of Polarity, into two columns of force, ... one positive, one negative, with a third column or neutral or blended force between them. (Refer to the glyph we call the Tree of Life. The column on the right, Sephiroth 2, 4, 7, is the Pillar.)

Around the Lower World, or Seven Days of Creation, the Qabalists imagined 12 positions acting as oblique points or subsidiary directions in space. These constituted, in a sense, a third division, marking either the limits of the known, or the fringe of the unknown.

These three divisions of creation were suggested by the three kinds of letters making up the Hebrew alphabet; so ... the Qabalists let the alphabet stand as a kind of key to their philosophy. The three letters which were called Mother letters, they said stood for the Holy Upper Trinity, or those aspects or emanations of God which lay above and beyond the comprehension of Man.

The seven letters called double (because they had two pronunciations; one hard, one soft,) served as reminders of the Days of Creation, or dimensions of space, and the antithesis to which human life is exposed. (i.e. the seven major oppositions or dualities.)

Then, finally, the 12 simple letters served to represent the oblique directors of space, or the twelve constellations (signs of the zodiac) ... which marked for Man the boundary of his world.

Out of the 22 letters of their alphabet, therefore, the Hebrew metaphysicians developed a pattern of creation, or a philosophy of origins, making everything a matter of law and orderly progression the proportionate relationship always being expressed as 3 - 7 - 12. There were three aspects of the Godhead called the Trinity. There were seven days of creation and, so, seven days in the week. There were six dimensions in space, with the Holy Temple in the center. Likewise, there were seven principle planets that governed man's affairs. Lastly, there were twelve months in the year and 12 heavenly signs. It was simple, eloquently expressive of the simplicity of Omneity ... and it all fitted together to form an orderly world capable of being understood by man.

The Qabalah, therefore, was and is ... an unequalled method of transmitting general knowledge, for the Hebrew alphabet was all that was necessary to recall it completely, the 3 - 7 & 12 letters serving perfectly at all times to establish its fundamental and unchanging pattern. It was possible with the 22 letters and 10 emanations of Omneity to outline the course of creation ... from the realms of Infinity and invisibility to the present state of Man ... and mark as well the path of Man's return from his earthly condition back again to Omneity.

Let us close this lecture with a quotation from the Zohar which will show us straight away the analogy between the Qabalah and what we have learned so far of the Martinist Doctrine:

"Whosoever wishes to have an insight into the sacred Unity, let him consider a flame from a burning coal or lamp. He will see first a twofold light, a bright white light and a dark blue light. The white is ABOVE and ascends in a direct light whilst the dark light is below and seems to be the chair of the former, yet both are so intimately connected together that they constitute only one flame. The seat, however, formed by the dark or blue light is again connected to the burning matter, which, again, is UNDER it. The white light never changes its colour, it always remains white but various shades are observed in the lower light, which, furthermore, takes two directions: above, it is connected with the white light, below with the burning matter. Now, this is constantly consuming itself and perpetually ascends to the upper light and thus, everything merges into a single unity." (Zohar I — 51a).

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

LECTURE #44

NOTES FOR STUDENTS

The Qabalah is the Western Esoteric Tradition.

The Sepher Ietzirah has been called the oldest philosophical essay in the Hebrew language. This metaphysical treatise is without doubt the origin of the Qabalistic Doctrine. The Zohar and subsequent works are obviously elaborations on the Ietzirah's "Decade out of Nothing." This is proved to a large extent by the fact that none of the terms associated with the Qabalah: Ain Soph, Tree of Life, etc. are to be found in the Ietzirah.

There are two Qabalistic systems: the Ietziratic and the Zoharic and these two systems are difficult to reconcile. It is better to approach the. as giving two aspects of the whole, as seen from different angles. One should avoid easy correspondences between systems that are not necessarily directly compatible. For example: take the color spectrum. The basic scientific splitting of white light is the 'seven' colors of the rainbow. But the practical splitting is in the three basic colors used in printing and color television... How do you reconcile the "seven" and the "three?" The difference between the earlier (Ietziratic) Qabalah and the later (Zoharic) is one of emphasis and interpretation, it is therefore important not to mix them together. The Sephiroth of the earlier Qabalah (Ietziratic) appear as quite different from those of the later, (Zoharic). Whereas the later are triads of interacting qualities arranged in three columns; the former consist of spirit, its three elements and six directions. Having studied briefly the arrangement of the Tree of Life (Zoharic), we will now briefly examine the Ietziratjc: The Sepher Ietzirah aims at demonstrating the existence of God and of Divine Unity by things which are manifold, but which converge in harmony. It shows creation as being accomplished by means of Numbers and Letters ... which theory sounds rather strange until we think of the analogy between the letters and created things of the Ietzirah and the thought and action process of everyday life. The letters are the abstract and potentially formative conception which will eventually manifest as created things.

(Please refer to the diagrams included). First came the "Decade out of Nothing." Ten fundamental numbers which were emanated from NOTHING. the choice and meaning of this word Nothing will be studied later. Simply accept for the time being that at first, there existed nothing except Divine Substance, within which were held the Creative Idea and the articulate Creative Word, united in the Spirit of God ... which is one with the Divine Substance. Hence, this SPIRIT OF GOD is the First Number to come into being.

From this Number 1, the Spirit . .. the whole Universe proceeded by gradual emanation, in the following order:

> From the Spirit emanated #2, Creative AIR in which He engraved the 22 letters. From this Creative Air came Creative Water (#3), from which was formed darkness, emptiness, slime and dung. From this Primitive Water came Creative FIRE or Ether (#4), with which God established the throne of His glory, the Seraphim or Orphanim, the Sacred Animals and ministering Angels. Of these three He made His habitation.
> Having attributed 3 Mother letters: Aleph, Mem and Shin to these three fundamental Elements Air, Water and Fire, He bound them with Spirit and sealed them in the six directions: upwards, downwards, northwards, southwards, eastwards and westwards. Thus we have our Decade. (10). The Spirit which binds the three fundamental Elements issued from it ... thus forming a tetrad, (4) ... then six Numbers: one above, one below, one in fro one behind, one of the right, and one on the left. (See diagrams). Traditionally, they encompassed a square which represents the Holy Temple, supporting the whole.

Let us examine again the formation of this Decade. The whole Qabalistic Doctrine endeavours to demonstrate how the manifest came from the Unmanifest ... and how the finite and limited came from the Infinite and Perfect. In order to do this, it introduces between the Boundless Infinity of God and the created world, a series of Agents of Creation which are themselves NOT CREATED but EMANATED. Here in the Ietzirah, we have the first basic attempt to do so.

It must be understood that these Primitive Elements, or Creative AIR, WATER and FIRE … are NOT material in any way. They are "potentialities", that is, they are the abstract principles within which is held the creative power to for., by gradual expansion, the material elements we know under these names.

As to the other six Numbers: height, depth, north, south, east, west ... they are the channels through which the expansion of the Creative Elements must take place in order to bring manifest creation into the three dimensional world in which we live.

Let us now briefly summarize:

> Out of the Unfathomable Void of the Infinite manifested first the SPIRIT of God, the vehicle of the creative will of Omneity.
> From this #1 the whole Universe proceeded: the SPIRIT emanating #2, Primordial AIR, which in turn generated #3, Primordial WATER, from which issued #4, Primordial FIRE or Ether. These Three Creative Principles represented respectively by the three Mother letters Aleph, Me. and Shin, were bound together by #r, the SPIRIT. This Tetrad, although not material in any way, held within itself all the creative potentialities.
> In order to manifest, these abstract Creative Principles were given 6 potential directions in which to expand: Height C Dept', East C West, North & South.

As previously said, the Qabalah seeks to demonstrate how the Universe was created by Agents of Creation interposed between Omneity and the material universe. These Agents were not themselves created ... but emanated ... from the bosom of Infinity and were of the same nature as God Himself.

We shall thus understand the first manifestation of duality through which these first 10 Numbers will be able to produce. Their action indeed is dual because these intermediate members between the Creator and the Created World are passive in relation to God, from Whom they receive their strength ... whilst they are active and creating in relation to the universe.

God is therefore not directly related to the created and material universe, nor is his FIAT hindered by matter.

THE CREATION OF THE UNIVERSE THEN PROCEEDED in the following manner:

> The 3 Primordials expanded and became more palpable in one direction to form the universe in which Fire developed itself into the visible Heaven.
> Primordial Water condensed to form the seas and lands of the earth, and > Primordial Air developed into the terrestrial atmosphere.

The 3 Primordial Elements then expanded into another direction to bring into existence the Cycle of Time, symbolized by the year, and in which the Ether gave rise to heat; the Water to cold; and the Air to moisture.

Finally, the 3 Primordial Elements expanded into a third direction (see diagram) there to create Man in whom:

> Primordial Fire formed the head,
> Primordial Air the breast and organs of reproduction; and > Primordial Water, the body.

Thus, from the 3 Mother letters symbolizing the 3 Primordial Elements, God created:

> The Macrocosm or Universe,
> The Cycle of Time, or Year, and
> The Microcosm, or Man.

We should note that the created things belonging to what we call the Year ... are in fact sensations which, to be perceived, depend on Time. For example: there is no such thing as instantaneous heat. To exist and be perceived, heat must exist in time.

Each of the stages of creation, developed from the 3 basic Elements, illustrates the Trinary Law ... because in each case two opposite Elements are held in equilibrium by a third one, which balances them. Thus: the Air of the atmosphere unites and reconciles the Fire of Heaven and the Water of the Earth. The Breast unites the Head to the Body. Moisture proceeds from the union of Heat and Cold.

In the three worlds thus formed, there were two further stages of evolution:

> The first symbolized by the 7 double-letters, representing the major antitheses of life: Beth, Gimel, Daleth, Kaph, Peh, Resh & Tau. The oppositions are (in English): Life/Death, Peace/War, Wisdom/Foolishness, Wealth/Poverty, Beauty/Ugliness, Fertility/Sterility, Dominion/Dependence. Thus, in the universe were formed the 7 Planets; in the year the 7 days of the week; and in man the 7 gates of the kingdom. (2 eyes, ears, nostrils and one mouth.)

> Finally, in each world a further and last development took place with a stage symbolized by the 12 simple letters of the alphabet ... and thus were formed in the world the 12 constellations of the zodiac; in the year the 12 months; and in man 12 organs. (2 hands, feet, kidneys, the gall, small intestine, liver, esophagus, stomach and milt).

We see therefore in which way the World, the Year and Man were created in 32 mysterious steps. (22 letters + 10 numbers). The process of creation seems to stop there ... but the Ietzirah implies that evolution goes on still further by the permutation of all the above terms. We shall not pursue this subject which goes beyond our goal.

The Sepher Ietzirah closes with these words: "When the Patriarch, Abraham, comprehended the great truism, revolved it in his mind, conceived it perfectly, made careful investigations and profound enquiries, pondered upon it and succeeded in contemplations, the Lord of the Universe appeared to him, called him his friend, made with him a covenant of the tongue, and the covenant between the ten toes of his feet, which is the covenant of circumcision, and said of him: 'Before I formed thee in the belly, I knew thee.'" Search where you will, you shall hardly find a more beautiful statement than this ... and it is true, every word of it. This concludes a brief study of the Sepher Ietzirah. However arduous or even perplexing the subject, this short review should have supplied you with a framework which will greatly facilitate our study of the Book of Man when the time comes. The Sepher Ietzirah is a very small, very inexpensive book and all students of the esoteric should have a copy. It must be studied. As a textbook you will find it invaluable. As a guide, companion and a constant friend on the journey through life, there is none better.

The following questions, which Man has asked himself for ages, were first set down by Isaac Myer. A few months ago they would, no doubt, have been very perplexing to you. Now, however, we believe you may be able to consider these questions in a much more mature way. Do not just casually read through the following. Go through it slowly and carefully, endeavoring to answer the questions:

"How are we to grasp and represent to ourselves the transition and connection of the Infinite and the finite ... the Invisible with the visible ... and Spirit with matter?

How proceeded from Unity, the multiplicity? From a pure Intelligence ... a so different, varied and material many?

In what position does the Creator stand to the created, ... so that we can rightly speak of the Providence and world—government by the Deity? ... notwithstanding the infinite abyss between them?

How correctly can any name be imputed, any attribute ascribed to, or any imagination portray any idea of the Deity?

How is the idea that Man has been made in the similitude of Elohim (God) consistent with Man's weakness and faults?

How, with the conception of a perfect, just and merciful Deity, can be reconciled the existence of the imperfect and the evil? What was the Divine intention through the manifestation of creation? It asks: Is the universe made of nothing, or out of an eternally existing original subtle matter, which may be thought of as the no-thing?

Was the Deity before the universe, and eternal? Has the Deity, as a complete Being, through the inclination of Its will, created the Universe? If so, can the Deity be considered perfect, ... for has not something arisen from It?

If the Will of the Deity did not emanate or create the universe, then we come to chance, which is contradictory to the wisdom shown in and throughout all the works of nature. Is the Deity All-knowing? Does the Holy One know before the birth of men who are to be virtuous, and who will sin?

Why does the Deity permit sin and evil? If the Holy One is the All—good, why is there evil?"

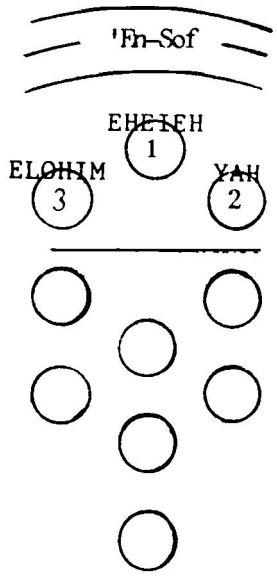
QABALAH (CONTINUED)

Dear Brothers ~ Sisters:

We are proceeding into our study of the Qabalah ... so that we may move right along and avoid unnecessary delay, we give below in concise for,, some information which you must study and understand, so as to inculcate the substance of the next Liber (#15).

The Oabalah, as you have come to know, was the main compendium of Jewish esoteric thought. If differs from the exoteric teaching given out to the flock by the Rabbis. In a later lecture we will discuss why this was (and is) so. The authors of the Old Testament Books were Qabalists, as was also Jesus. Qabalistic teachings are spread throughout the New Testament ... the Book of Revelations is a Qabalistic classic.

Give careful study to the following:



(1) The "God" of the Bible ... the Creator God … is a limited God. He is not the Absolute God. The Absolute God is not mentioned at all in the Bible. The God of the Bible is subordinate to a yet Higher, Limitless and Unknowable God. This Higher God … The Absolute ... is called by Qabalists: 'En-Sof'.

(2) The Creator God of the Bible is Eheieh. On the Tree of Life, He is at Sephirah #1, Kether, Crown. Yah, or Jehovah, (I.H.V.H-Tad, Heh, Vau, Heh) is at Sephirah #2, Chokmah (Khawk-mah), Wisdom. Elohi, is at Sephirah #3, Binah (Bee-nah), Understanding.

(3) These Three Sephiroth: #'s 1, 2 and 3 ... are considered to be a Unity ... a Trinity acting in Unison ... Collectively, this Trinity is sometimes called "The Deity" or, "The First Cause".

(4) Ibis First Cause, however, is NOT the Absolute God. The true, transcendent God, is referred to as the 'EN-SOF and is indicated on the Tree of Life by three curved lines above/behind Kether. The 'En-Sof is Illimitable;

Unknowable; without Will, intention or plan, and may only be described as what He is not. Thus He is neither this, nor that, nor anything the human mind can possibly imagine or envisage. In other words, He is beyond comprehension. For this reason He is called the No-thing ... because there is Nothing we can know about Him.

(5) The Universe is not the result of creation having come from nothing ... for from nothing, nothing comes. (Ex nihilio nihil fit*).* The universe is the result of an operation performed by the emanated attributes ... or Agents ... of En-sof. The Sephiroth, as this ward is understood to mean, indicates "qualities", "attributes" or eminations of the Divine, i.e. various phases in the manifestation of the Divinity which proceed from and succeed each other.

REPORT ON ''VIBRATIONS''

These are some thoughts on "vibration." We are told that everything in existence is in a state of vibration. This suggests to me that all things have a negative and positive aspect. According to the dictionary ... vibration is something moving to and fro, or up and down, etc.. Right from the beginning of things, then, we have DUALITY. What is it that makes any substance move up and down and to and fro … if it is not a negative and positive aspect acting and reacting to each other and in everything? Is this positive—negative (these are just names we give to describe opposite conditions) aspect of everything, and the resultant action that occurs ... the cause of all life and all activity? Is anything ever just positive, or just negative? Wouldn't such an object have no activity and therefore no life? Wouldn't this imply "death"? And if God is eternal and does not and cannot cease to exist, then it seems to follow that there cannot be such a thing as "death" or a state of "no activity" … or a state where positive and negative are both not present and causing vibration.

It may be my ego ... but I find it quite pleasing just to think that there is really no such thing as "death" and that it cannot be. It forces me to rethink many concepts about "life".

We are told that all there is, is God ... and that God is "mental" in nature. When I think about this, I seem to form a picture of God, HIMSELF, so to speak, as being in the "center" and everything that exists beyond that center is HIS mental creation and it all revolves around HIM. We can liken this to the shape of a phonograph record

Cod is where the spindle goes through the record and HIS creation extends out in spherical form around HIM much like the grooves or tracks go "out" from the center of the record.

The mental energy or substance that God sends out to create this creation of His and keep it "alive", keep it existing, is energy formed of His own substance ... and the force that makes this energy move and give life, and have life, is the vibrational aspect it has.

In my mental picture, the further this energy being sent from God moves away from God, or the further it gets from the center of the record, and the closer it gets to the edge of it, the lower the speed at which this substance of God vibrates.

I seem to sense that earth and the physical world (the Qabalistic World of Assiah) is the final point in the outward extension of this substance. We are like that small part of the record where you first put down the stylus to play the first track. Once the substance of God reaches here, the vibrations have become reduced tremendously … probably more than we are capable of comprehending.

Now: what lies between here and God in the center? How vast an area is this? What experiences are those having who find themselves there? What do we have to do to be able to experience those planes and states of consciousness? Being there would seem to imply that our beings and our mental energies would be vibrating at a much higher frequency. I often wonder ... do we have to raise our present selves, or is a part of us already there? If so, are we out of touch with ourself?

If we are consciously out of touch with ourself, are we subconsciously in touch with ourself? Questions to ponder!!!

At this point I can't really begin to comprehend how the only "real" difference between my thoughts, my physical body, the car I drive, the food I eat ... is the rate at which the substance of God is vibrating in this infinite creation of His. Although I cannot quite comprehend how I quite definitely feel I comprehend that it is.

My concept of the term "Magnum Opus" (Great Work) gives me a solid foundation onto which I feel that I have the working tools to improve myself physically, mentally and spiritually.

The mentalism of the Absolute created man, the .male and female, united in the habitat of the Creator — The Word, the first begottan Son of God. When we seriously study the Holy of Holies of Hermeticism and the Lesser Mysteries and practice it with reverence, we enter into Oabalah and learn that the Great Work, The Magnum Opus, is the UNIVERSAL MEDICINE. It is the medicine of the Soul. We learn that the worlds, Spiritual & Physical … are of one unit.

The Prima Materia of the Magnum Opus is in the superior world of enthusiasm and activity; in the intermediate world of intelligence and industry, and in the lower world of labor and science.

Science is the Salt, Sulphur and Mercury, and becomes The Universal Creative Principle of Life, the Azoth of Alchemists. Alchemically, salt comprises Will and Wisdom. Sulphur comprises the principle of Love. Invisible Fire and Mercury comprise the Astral Light … the principle of Mind ... the Spiritual Quintessence of all things.

Salt corresponds to earth. Sulphur corresponds to Fire; and Mercury corresponds to Air and Water.

The Great Work consists of this: the creation and recreation of man in and by himself through which he gains full control of himself, his faculties, potencies and powers, enabling him to regulate and control the present, and arrange and fix his future. It gives him complete liberty of WILL, and enables him to function in the powers of AZOT and further gives to him who triumphs, the power to wield the Universal Magical Agent, Prima Materia. The Hermetic Art, Spiritual and Material, is explained on the Smaragdine Tablet. The Universal Magical Agent is the Secret Fire; the Unseen Parent of the Sun that can be found within each living thing.

LIBER 15

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

We continue our study of the Qabalah. We have seen that the oldest Qabalistic treatise: the Sepher Ietzirah spoke of "the Decade out of Nothing" and described the emanations which issued from the No-thing.

#1. The first emanation was the SPIRIT of God.

From this #1 issued forth:

#2. Creative AIR, from which issued

#3. Creative WATER, from which issued

#4. Creative FIRE, or Ether.

These four Potentialities then expanded in 6 directions: Up, Down, East, West, North and South. Thus we have the Decade out of Nothing.

From the Sepher Ietzirah, the Zohar and other Qabalistic works developed and here the emanations were diagramed in a slightly different pattern, which became known as the Tree of Life.

Both the "Decade out of Nothing" and "the Tree of Life" issued from the No-thing. Let us now study the No-thing, or 'En-Sof, (also sometimes written Ain Soph).

In principle, at the root of being, is the ABSOLUTE. This Absolute cannot be conceived of, and anyone who tries to define It only distorts It by giving It limits. In other words, it is quite impossible to say anything about this Absolute since it is quite beyond Man's comprehension. Because it is Limitless, any description of any kind imposes a limitation — even if we try to use words, which convey the idea of limitlessness or infinity. As Eliphas Levi wrote: "A God defined in a finite God."

This God, the 'En-sof, the Absolute, is not mentioned at all in the Bible. The appellation 'En-sof is formed from the two Hebrew words EN meaning 'without' and Sof or Soph, meaning 'limit' or 'end'. This, then, is the 'En-sof ... the limitless mystery of Divine Thought, the center of all, the Cause of Causes, and the secret of all secrets ... where the essence of all potentiality resides. It is ineffable, not to be described. It is beyond definition, utterance, conception and comprehension, beyond all terms we may apply to It. It is Nameless, Secret, Concealed, Holy beyond Holiness and outside the range of all thought. It is unknown and unknowable and Its ways are past finding out. Silence can best describe It.

The God of the Bible ... who speaks to his creatures and shows compassion, and practices justice ... is It as It reveals Itself to others. Only this aspect of Divinity is named, (in English): He, Thou, Lord, etc.. The ABSOLUTE is mostly referred to as IT.

Let us have a quotation from Moses Cordovera, a 16th Century Qabalist, on the Absolute, or En-Sof:

> "First, one should know that the (Absolute) Creator, 'En Soph, is ONE and there is no second to Him. He is the ultimate Cause. When He is spoken of as 'ONE' it is not the numerical one that is meant. For He cannot undergo any changes or substitution. He cannot be described nor can He suffer increase. The term 'One' is used of Him as an illustration or analogy. The numerical one stands apart. The beginning of every number, it contains potentially all other numbers and it is present in actuality in all numbers. It is on this analogy that the term one is used of God for He is actually present in all things ... all things exist potentially in Him and He is their cause. Like numeral one He does not suffer change by addition or subtraction. His existence is necessary (not contingent) just as the numeral one is necessary in counting, for without it no number can exist but it exists without any other number. So God fashions and creates all things, sustaining all His creatures, but the destruction of the world would not involve the destruction of its Maker for He requires no other being. If all existing things were to cease, this would not involve His cessation for He is self-existent and requires no place for His existence. All theologians are agreed an this."
> "One must know that it is inadmissible to use the expressions 'blessed', glorified', 'praised' and the like of the En Soph, the supreme King of Kings … for He cannot be blessed, glorified or praised by others, but it is He who blesses, praises and glorifies, sustaining all from the first point of emanation to the lowest point, from the horned buffalo to the brood of vermin, and before the creation He had no need of emanation, as is well known. When He hides Himself in the recesses of His Holy and Pure Perfection, no letter, dot or picture can represent Him. For no illustration by picture, letter or point may be postulated of the Crown, how much less of the Source of emanation, the supreme King of Kings. Of Him nothing may be imagined, or postulated, or spoken of, neither justice or mercy, neither wrath or anger, neither change nor limit, nor process nor any quality whatsoever, neither then before emanation took place nor now after the process of emanation."

Because nothing can be known of the 'En-sof, It is also called the No-thing.

The Zohar expressly distinguishes between two planes, both of which represent God:

> FIRST: A primary plane, the most deeply hidden of all which remains insensible and unintelligible to all but God Himself, the En-Sof.
> SECOND: Another plane joined to the first, which makes it possible to know God ... the plane of His attributes.

We must immediately recognize there, the two Martinist Astral Worlds, so perfectly depicted in our Martinist Pentacle by the two interwoven triangles. The DARK triangle, pointing DOWNWARDS, represents the dark nature of EN-SOF, the Unknown and Unknowable; and the WHITE triangle, pointing UPWARDS, represents the lower Astral World, first seen as Astral Light. You see now that it is not by an accident that the DARK triangle of the Martinist Pentacle points DOWNWARDS.

Let me re-capitulate: The Qabalists draw a distinction between God as He is Himself, and God as He is revealed to His creatures. These two (so to speak) worlds or planes … in reality form one, in the same way, to use a simile from the Zohar ... as the coal and the flame; that is to say, the coal exists also without the flame but its latent power manifests itself only in its light.

Cod's mystical attributes are such worlds of light in which the dark nature of En-Sof manifests Itself.

Dear Brothers & Sisters: Greetings!

You now have a fairly clear understanding of the Qabalistic conception of the ABSOLUTE, the En-Sof, the No-thing. As we have already stated, we do not propose to go deeply into Qabalistic philosophy, our intention is only to glean sufficient insight into this profound doctrine as will enable us to understand WHO we are, and WHERE we are, so that we might place our feet firmly on the Path of Return. Brethren wishing to take up an in-depth study of the Qabalah may do so on their own ... there is plenty literature on the subject available from religious and esoteric bookstores.

Tonight we will consider the emanations of the En-sof, the Sephiroth. Before leaving the subject of the En-Sof however, there is still a little more which needs to be known.

The Qabalists, in fact, recognize three planes of un-manifestation, or negative existence. In Liber 14, you will recall the diagram of the Tree of Life diagramming the En-Sof. Of these planes of un-manifestation, the first is called AIN, meaning here, Negativity. The second plane is that of EN-SOF, Limitlessness; and the third is EN SOF AUR, the Limitless Light. The term "EN-SOF" often refers to all three planes, taken collectively together.

Now, according to Isaac Luria (1533—1572), whose writings gave birth to modern Qabalism, the Infinite Being, En-Sof, retreated from the arena of the universe, contracting into Himself, and left behind Him ... an emptiness. It was by this retreat of En-Sof from infinite space into an infinitesimal monad of pure energy, that the world comes into being. If the En-Sof had not contracted into Himself there would have been no space for the activity to take place that is recorded in Genesis. The Hebrew Qabalists said every manifestation, great or small, is begun by the concentration of the Living Light, AUR, upon itself, at a point within itself. In order for a creation to be possible then, there must first be a contraction, a concentration of all energies at a center.

The world comes into being only after this contraction. It was then that the En-Sof sent forth a beam, an emanation of Himself into space. It was on the "surface" of that space that the first spark was struck. "And God said, Let there be light:" Genesis 1:3. This "light" is Kether, the first Sephirah.

The word "Sephirah," singular of "Sephiroth," simply explained ... means "numbers," from the Hebrew root meaning "to count," but it is used as "qualities," "attributes" or "emanations" of the Divine. The Sephirotic emanations are ten fundamental attributes of God, ... which are at the same time ten stages through which the Divine Life pulsates back and forth. MacGregor Mathers, renowned Qabalistic scholar says: "All bodies have three dimensions, each of which repeats the other (3 x 3); and by adding thereto space generally, we obtain the number 10. As the Sephiroth are the potencies of all that is limited they must be ten." Paul Case, another well respected Qabalist says: "In the Master Pattern are ten steps because the human mind is so constituted that these ten aspects of One Reality include all intelligible conceptions. This is because the human mind is itself an image and likeness of the Divine Mind, which thinks of itself in these ten ways. All versions of Ageless Wisdom, Eastern and Western, agree on this."

Let me quote Moses Cordovera on the emanation of the Sephiroth:

> "One should know that the EN SOPH produced His Sephiroth and caused them to emanate, to emerge as ten etheral emanations, in the form of thought which were of His essence, united with Him and forming a unity. These Sephiroth are the souls of which the ten Sephiroth mentioned by name are the garments. These are the instruments of the aforementioned essence and to these apply justice, mercy and the other attributes which cannot be applied to the 'EN-SOPH …
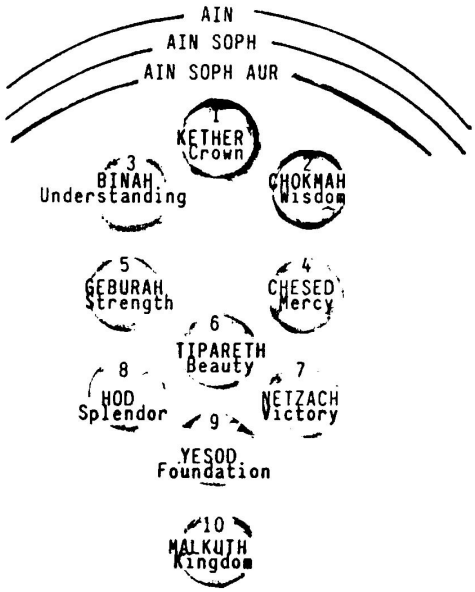
> … These Sephiroth contain His deeds. They are the Ten Words by which He works, the instrument He uses for the actions He performs in the lower worlds that are separate from Him. But in fact His essence and His being are dispersed through the Sephiroth. They are ten in number, not nine or eleven, neither more or less, for thus it was decreed in His Divine Wisdom. He knows the purpose for which they were emanated requires this perfect number and cannot be achieved by any greater or lesser number. This applies not only to the qualities themselves but to all their ramifications. Even when six or four of the Sephiroth are spoken of separately this means only that they are revealed according to the secret of the six or the four but in totality they are still ten."

As it happened, then, ... from that Unsearchable condition which is above any consciousness, by a mysterious operation, the Uncreated Will moved forthward and certain manifestations or relations of the ABSOLUTE became established, and by a kind of flowing forth or emanation, the Sephiroth were produced.

Here are the names of the Sephiroth and, very briefly, some of the attributes of each:

#1. KETHER, the Crown, the "supreme crown" of God; it represents the first impulse of EN-SOPH which sets in motion the process of becoming revealed. It is also known as Primum Mobile or First Swirlings. It represents the beginning of things, for this Sephirah symbolizes that form of the Creator that is Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending. It indicates all first principles.



#2. CHOKMAH, Wisdom, Absolute Wisdom. It is the upwelling spirit of Kether in positive action, a source of energy, in particular masculine, life-giving energy. It is sometimes called The Father. (The Zodiac)

#3. BINAH, Intelligence or Understanding, Absolute Understanding, where the details of all created things are actualized in Divine Thought. It is sometimes called The Great Mother, and it represents the feminine form-making principles .. .(whereas CHOKMAH represents the masculine force principles.)(Saturn)

These Three Sephiroth make up the Supernals, the Holy Upper Trinity, the Upper World. This is the most important of the three triadic divisions of the Sephiroth for it symbolizes the dynamic function of a thought process anterior to the world. It represents, in other words, the thought process of God. This Trinity is also called Deity.

The next seven Sephiroth are called the Lower World.

#4. CHESED, Mercy, First Day (Jupiter), the Love of God, i.e. the flow of Divine Grace through which the creation is effected, but this grace is too rich and prolific on its own; its superabundance must be controlled and confined if finite creatures are to exist. The Divine Light must be screened from view if it is to be endured. This limitation is brought about by the fifth Sephirah ...

#5. GEBURAH, Justice or Strength, Second Day (Mars), the Power of God chiefly manifested as the power of stern judgment and punishment. The source of divine justice and control. Chesed, Mercy, #4, and this Sephirah Power/Justice, complement each other ... Power limiting the abundance of Mercy; Mercy tempering the seventies of Power. The fusion of Mercy & Power results in …

#6. TIPARETH, Beauty, Third Day (SUN). To this Sephirah falls the task of mediating between the two preceding ones, for beauty consists of the harmonious balance between stark severity and sweet sentimentality. In Qabalistic thought, the Divine Power is necessary for creation. It is only when man by his deeds disturbs the balance among the Sephiroth that the quality of Power becomes unbalanced and isolated ... and this results in the existence of evil. This Sephirah is the center of the Tree, and to it is attributed the Sun which is the center of our Solar System and the giver of all life. When the Tree is used as a symbol for Man, the Microcosm, it corresponds to the heart … the circulator of life and the organ of feeling. This Sephirah is the Christ Center. (Remember that the Sephiroth, when considered microcosmically, are qualities or forces acting within one's psyche.)

Sephiroth 4, 5, & 6, make up the second triad on the Tree.

#7. NETZACH, Victory, Fourth Day (Venus), is at the base of the Pillar of Mercy and represents the creative imagination. Under its dominance falls the emotions and the arts.

#8. HOD, Splendor. Fifth Day (Mercury) It is at the base of the Pillar of Severity. It represents the image making ability of the mind. Under this Sephirah come books, learning, communication, the art of magic and thought generally.

#9. YESOD, Foundation, Sixth Day (Moon), the basis, the source of all active forces. It has to do with rhythm, organic growth, fluctuation, tides and cyclic change. It also covers the subconscious, psychic and etheric, and the biological functions of life.

These Sephiroth 7, 8 and 9 make up the third triad on the Tree.

#10. MALKUTH, the Kingdom of God, Seventh Day (Earth), represents the creative principle at work in the finite world. Here the divine grace is diffused into the lower worlds to enable them to exist. It is the center for earth and material things. It is closely associated with Kether of which it should be the material expression.

The attributes given here of the Sephiroth are of course very elementary and introductory ... perhaps in the time ahead we will be able to examine the Sephirah individually and have a more complete comprehension.

In Liber 17 we will examine the Four Worlds of the Qabalah.

My Brothers & Sisters:

Dionysius the Areopagite and Apollonius of Tyana, are two of our ancient Brothers whose lives exemplified in many ways, the philosophy of what most of us have been taught to call pagan. In many ways it is most unfortunate that we have been wrongly taught regarding those times, especially so ... since much that we have come to regard as the deepest spiritual doctrines of Christianity were in truth teachings brought into so—called Christian Theology from older sources. Much too, that was later discarded as formal church doctrine ... was preserved by the mystics ... who recognized that without it, Christianity would be poor indeed.

We must understand then, that the Gnostics, although they were persecuted, and their right to be called "Christians" disputed ... they were following a genuine tradition ... and in spite of persecution, contributed to Christianity those deeper teachings which gave it life.

G.R. S. Head, in Fragments of a Faith Forgotten, writes:

> "If we look back to the evidence of the first two centuries of our era ... for an understanding of the actual state of affairs ... instead of one church and one form of faith, we find innumerable communities and innumerable modes of expression ... communities united for the living of a Life, and systems striving to express the radiance of a Light ... So, far from finding the sharp divorcement between science (or philosophy) and religion (or theology) which has characterized all later periods of the Christian era up to our own day, it was the boast of many of these communities that religion was a science; they boldly claimed that it was possible to know the things of the soul ... as definitely as the things of the body; so, far from limiting the illumination they had received to the comprehension of the poorest intellect, or confining it to the region of blind faith ... they claimed that it had supplied them with the means of formulating a world—philosophy capable of satisfying the most exacting intellect. Never, perhaps, has the world witnessed more daring efforts to reach a solution of the world-problem ... than were attempted by some of these mystic philosophers and religio-scientists. They strove for the knowledge of God, the science of realities, the gnosis of the things-that-are; ... wisdom was their goal; ... the holy things of life their study."

It is evident then, that except for a certain fundamental agreement on a Principle, or Creator, which brought forth the universe by a series of emanations and a system of duality, Gnosticism presented a body of speculation and enquiry, rather than a body of belief.

The esoteric teaching was in the nature of secret wisdom, or explanation by means of which all diversities of opinion could be reconciled. Had the early Christians been able to appreciate this fact, the chief point of contention or disagreement between them and the Gnostics would have been removed.

According to the Gnostics, mankind lives in spiritual darkness and this is the cause of error and ignorance. Salvation therefore lies not in faith but in knowledge. Salvation was therefore delivery from the sin of ignorance by means of a mystical knowledge, or saviour. Of this saviour, they spoke in cryptic or poetic fashion.

What was spiritually true to them ... had no need of historical justification. The Christians, on the other hand, lacking the inner explanation, could only be satisfied on the basis of a saviour who was a historical figure. That the Christians eventually won, and succeeded in forcing the acceptance of a personal saviour as a historical figure ... was to prove a shallow victory ... for it meant the creation of a veritable Procustean bed into which all teaching had to be made to fit so that it could be believed as historically true. We have already seen in an earlier Liber, a quotation from Father Origen, who was there in the early days of the Christian Movement, that SOME of the incidents recorded in the scriptures were historically true ... but not all. When the church decided that all scripture had to be accepted as historically true ... this led to the acceptance of allegory and legend as historical fact ... and the substitution of faith and belief for mysticism and philosophic reason.

On the question of whether Jesus was a historical or a mythical figure, the esoteric tradition definitely holds that he was historical ... but whether his name was Jesus, Jonas, Joshua, Ieschouah, Iesous, or some other name, may be questioned. The known facts of his life are meager in the extreme; the English theologian and New Testament scholar Burnett Streeter has calculated that, setting aside the 40 days and nights in the wilderness (of which little is told), all that is reported to have been said and done by Jesus in all the four gospels could not have occupied more than three weeks. On the other hand, Saint John, perhaps a little over enthusiastically, ends his gospel by saying that Jesus said and did so many things that if all were to be written down, "I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written." (John 21:25)

Certain esoteric brotherhoods accept that Jesus and the apostles are links in their chain ... and this is why the passing on of the spiritual breath (John 20:22) can never be passed on via a "postal initiation" (!) Such an idea as a "postal initiation" as practiced by a wayward organization is not only ludicrous but shameful.

Now ... one of the Gnostic writers whose views were highly prized, was Dionysius the Areopagite. All that is actually known of him has had to be deduced from the writings themselves. He shows great familiarity with both the Old and the New Testament. So far as his style and trend of thought are concerned, he seems to have been well acquainted with the Neoplatonic philosophers, — Proclus and Plotinus especially, and the work of the Church Fathers as far as Cyril of Alexandria.

Dionysius' chief interest for Martinists will, undoubtedly, be his work on the Celestial Hierarchy, his second treatise. He taught that as a mighty root sends forth a multitude of plants, which it sustains and controls, so all created things owe their origin and preservation to the all—ruling divinity. He catalogs these Divine Emanations, calling them choirs and considering them, when taken together, to constitute a Celestial Hierarchy. These choirs he divides into three triads, giving them descriptive names drawn from the canonical books.

(At this point of the studies, all students should have drawn a large diagram of the Tree of Life and should be plotting the information given from lecture to lecture, on the Tree. The choirs follow the three triads of the Tree. Mark them down on your chart.)

The first choir is composed of Seraphim, Cherubim and Thrones.

The second choir: Virtues, Dominations and Powers.

The third choir: Principalities, Archangels and Angels.

(You will notice that the Angels fall at Sephirah 9. In the scripture we read that man was made "a little lower than the angels". Man stands at Sephirah 10.)

The writer of these speculations has been considered to be that same Dionysius the Areopagite mentioned in Acts, Chapter 17, who became interested in the reasoning of the Apostle Paul and identified himself with the Christian sect. Leaving the simpler aspects of the new teaching to be expounded by others, Dionysius, true to his earlier mystical training, sought to set forth deeper matters for Christians.

Like Apollonius of Tyana and many others in the first centuries of Christianity's development, Dionysi us thought of Christianity as being a restatement of mystical truths in terms more understandable to the uninitiated rather than an altogether new doctrine out of harmony with the old. He felt the deeper significance of the popular movement, was to make the old doctrines clearer. The fact that his writings met with such favor is evidence that his views were the traditionally accepted ones.

It is true that outside of the Mystic Orders, the ideas of Dionysius, in later centuries, became looked upon as idle speculations that were vague and somewhat confused. This, of course, was because the unifying mystic viewpoint had become submerged in other speculations and because faith and belief had become more important than knowledge and understanding. Let us see how this happened:

With the gradual growth of the Church as an organization, it was decided that Christianity should be developed as a system of belief designed to appeal to the common man. Many of the teachings of the older schools of traditional mysticism therefore had to be modified and brought down to the level of simple explanations that could be understood by everybody.

It was decided, for one thing, to organize Christianity in such a way that a body of belief could be transmitted by a priesthood and everything thought necessary to salvation could be given either through ritual or open instruction. The RITE OF INITIATION and the esoteric advancement, which was part of the tradition WAS RESERVED FOR THE PRIESTS. Only that which was deemed expedient or aimed at limiting the knowledge of the average communicant to what the priests thought good for him ... was permitted.

Meanwhile, those learned men and mystics who had supported the new movement with the teachings of older schools, and who had risen to high office as Christian leaders because of their knowledge and wisdom ... were now regarded as heretics. Pressure was brought to make them conform to the pattern that was forming … or else to relinquish their offices. Thus it was ... that a turnaround took place ... and in time the old (and genuine) teaching became distorted or altogether lost.

The average Christian, being warned against the writings of those whom the priests disapproved ... and lacking the knowledge of the mystic viewpoint ... was completely dependent upon the priesthood for all that he thought and believed ... unless he was secretly a member of some Gnostic Sect or Mystic Brotherhood.

One has only to remember, as an example, the second Church Council held at Constantinople in A.D. 553 to understand the almost constant threat with which time-honored spiritual teachings were faced. It was at this council that it was decided that the doctrine of reincarnation would no longer be accepted as part of Church teaching. This was not because it was considered untrue ... rather, it was because the Church thought it could better control the actions of the communicants by telling them that final judgment awaited them at the end of this life ... than by letting them continue in the knowledge of eternal and individual justice.

Consider, if you will, what this decision did to the right interpretation of "As ye sow, so shall ye reap."

It was inevitable then that the monopoly by the priests should result in Christianity's becoming a dead form from which the life had disappeared. It was inevitable, too, that Mystic Orders devoted themselves all the more to the preservation and perpetuation of the Tradition and the Initiation ... as well as of every scrap of esoteric teaching that they could.

Without any shame ... the outcome was that orthodox Christianity set itself almost violently against the teachings that had made it vital and valid. Whereas the early Church had drawn its very life from the Mystery Schools of the past ... it nevertheless began to deny its source and origin ... and to declare itself to be the result of a singular and unparalleled intervention of God in the affairs of men. It made into historical fact ... what from time immoral had been spiritual allegory ... and it anathematized and excommunicated all who dared to teach otherwise ... not in the least sparing those in its own priesthood who had risen to their honors because of their previous mystical training. Concomitant with this declaration of tyranny, the Mystic Brotherhoods had to go underground in order to survive.

It is little wonder then, that mystic thought and speculation declined in ratio to Christianity's rise. It is little wonder, too, that the average Christian, even today, is so little prepared to understand and appreciate the viewpoint and teachings that were almost universally accepted in the times now regarded as pagan, barbarous, and unenlightened. He is, likewise, unprepared, to read intelligently the books, which pertain to his religion and, which he considers sacred.

DISCUSSION

If we may trust the work of his translators, a ready example of the mixing of spiritual and historical fact can be found in the Apostle Paul's Epistle to the Colossians. After referring to Christ Jesus as the "first-born of all creation," he continues: "for by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and are in earth, visible and invisible, whether Thrones, or Dominions, or Principalities, or Powers. (Col 1:16)

It is for theologians to argue the exact position in the scheme of creation which Paul intended Jesus to occupy ... for us, the interesting point here is the reference to Thrones, Dominions, Principalities, and Powers. HOW MANY READERS OF THE BIBLE RECOGNIZE THIS AS EVIDENCE OF PAUL'S ACQUAINTANCE WITH DIONYSIUS AND HIS CELESTIAL HIERARCHY? IN OTHER WORDS OF PAUL'S KNOWLEDGE OF GNOSTIC TEACHINGS? It is safe to say: very few. And of those few, how many would be able to understand the reason for it? Virtually none.

As what we call science became divorced from religion, attention was focused more and more upon the Elemental World and the World of Orbs ... than upon the one called the Empyrean. It is however necessary to know how the ancients thought of the Empyrean World and the Celestial Hierarchy ... if we are to appreciate the value of their teachings. With this we shall concern ourselves when we open the Book of Man.

What is important for us to note and remember at the present time ... is how the traditional mystical teachings were shipwrecked ... how truth was expunged and stifled in preference for doctrines which were found more convenient and expedient.

The true worth of our Order should now be seen. The Martinist Order is an Order of Christian Mystic Chivalry, transmitting the Traditional Initiation to all those found worthy and from which the "average person" has been deprived.

Let us now meditate for a short while on what we have learned tonight and then say a prayer of thankfulness for our Brothers & Sisters of the past, who endured through those difficult periods in the history of the world and who, upon the peril of their lives, have delivered the Order and the Tradition safely in our hands. May you ever be aware of the Sacred Light with which you have been entrusted.

In a previous Liber, you were made aware of the book Theosophic Correspondence, a volume of letters exchanged between Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin and Baron Kirchberger. Following is a letter dated Morat, 25th Oct. 1794, written by Baron Kirchberger to Saint-Martin, extracted from that book, about the experience of the Sage Gichtel and the heavenly Sophia.

> " … I am delighted that you are pleased with the little I have told you of the editor of our friend B. (Jacob l3oehme) His name was John George Gichtel, born at Ratisbon in 1638, of pious, rich, and respectable parents. You have rightly compared him to a general, for he lived and died with his arms in his hand; he not only fought himself, and fought for his friends, but he often mounted the breach for whole nations. His eagerness for instruction was sustained by many favorable opportunities, so that he became, in his time, a distinguished savant. He drew upon himself the hatred of the priests by a writing on the bad state of the clergy in his country; and, as he could not recall this writing, they found means to banish him ignominiously from Ratisbon, after first stripping him of everything. He took refuge in Holland, in the greatest poverty. The priests followed him even in his exile. He was imprisoned, and prosecuted criminally; but his faith and patience overcame everything. He withdrew to Amsterdam, where he made acquaintance with several families in which worth and piety were respected.
> It is remarkable that he had knowledge of Sophia, and enjoyed several manifestations of a sublime order, before the writings of our friend B. were known to him. It was the cross which he had carried for his divine Master, and the inviolable attachment which he had vowed to Him from his childhood, which availed him for these favors. Some time after his arrival at Amsterdam, Böhme's writings fell into his hands; they were then exceedingly scarce. The 'Three Principles,' and the 'Seven Forms of Nature,' arrested him a long time, and it was only after being greatly exercised, and many combats, that he fathomed them. Gichtel, although very learned, lost all taste for reading, except the Holy Scriptures, and the works of our friend B. It was by constant practice of his precepts, and after many repetitions, that he came to understand them in their depth. He valued them as much as the Old and New Testament, and thanked Providence, from the bottom of his soul, for having placed these writings in his hands; he never tired of reading, above all, the 47th of our friend's Letters.
> Gichtel called prayer the spiritual meat, and reading the drink of his soul.
>
> The nights seemed too long for him, so that he gave very few hours to sleep. He lived nearly always retired, but rarely in solitude; he was acquainted with an estimable family, who, poor as he was, proposed to him a very rich match; but our champion refused; the parents, nevertheless, continued to esteem him and load him with favors.
> His residence at Amsterdam was replete with a crowd of events in the sublime theosophic order, which I had rather tell you by word of mouth than by letter.

He formed acquaintance with a widow, a worthy woman, though enormously rich. After she had come to know him well, she frankly expressed to him her desire to be united to him indissolubly, lie esteemed her, and felt even a sort of inclination towards her; but he gave no answer; he withdrew, and remained at home without going out for four weeks, laying the matter before God.

One day, as he was walking in his room, he saw at noon, a hand come down from heaven, which joined his hand with that of the widow. He heard, at the same time, a strong clear voice, which said, "You must have her." Any one else, in his place, would have taken this manifestation as a divine direction, but he soon saw it was only the widow' spirit, which, in the fervency of her prayers, had penetrated the outward heaven and reached the astral spirit. From that moment he gave himself altogether to Sophia, who would have no divided heart; he saw that he was called to the priesthood of the highest order. Without any seeking of his own, he received several letters from several lords of Germany, even sovereigns consulted him; women of all classes sought his acquaintance and his hand; it is remarkable that the prayers he offered for them only added oil to their fires, till Spohia advised him to leave off praying for them.

When Louis XIV, came to the gates of Amsterdam, in 1672, our general made use of his own arms, and drove the foreign troops away. He found, afterwards, in the public papers, by name, the very regiments and squadrons, which he had seen, face to face, when he had pursued them out of the territory of the Republic. Sophia, his dear divine Sophia, whom he loved so well, and had never seen, came on Christmas—day, 1673, and made him her first visit; he, in the third principle, saw this shining heavenly virgin. On this occasion she accepted him as her husband, and the marriage was consummated in ineffable delight. She, in distinct words, promised him conjugal fidelity; that she would never leave him, neither in his crosses nor in his poverty, nor in sickness, nor in death, but that she would always dwell with him in the luminous ground within. She assured him she would abundantly recompense him the sacrifices he had made in having given up for her an alliance with any of the rich women who had wanted to have him. She gave him to hope for a spiritual progeniture; and, for dower, she brought essential, substantial faith, hope, and charity into his heart. The wedding festivities lasted to the beginning of 1674. He then took a more commodious lodging, a good— sized house, at Amsterdam, though he had not a farthing capital of his own, nor undertook anything to make money, nor ever asked a groat from anybody, either for himself or others; yet, as several of his friends went to visit him, he had to entertain them. Sophia had also a central language, without words, without vibration of air, which was like no human language; nevertheless, he understood it as well as his mother tongue; this is what assured him that he was seduced by no external astral, and he trusted it with all his heart.

Thus his vocation was derived from the sublimest source, and he would not have exchanged the poverty of Jesus Christ, which formed part of the dower of Sophia, for all the treasures of the world. All the most hidden mysteries were disclosed to him; his spouse revealed one wonder to him after another, as well in the inward light world, as in outward nature; and he lived more in heaven than on earth. He followed the directions of Sophia in everything, and had no will of his own; from that time he gave himself a sacrifice to be accursed for his brethren, even without knowing them; and all that he asked in his prayers, often even only in thought, was granted. Sophia gave him to understand that, if he desired to enjoy her favors without interruption, he must abstain from every earthly enjoyment and desire; and he did so scrupulously. At the beginning of his union with Sophia, he thought he might rest there, and wanted only to enjoy; she showed him that that could not be, and that he must fight for his brethren and sisters; that he ought, as long as he remained under the earthly covering, to employ the time for the deliverance of those who have not yet obtained their inheritance and inward repose. Then his desire to have companions in this spiritual warfare increased. He did not, however, seek new acquaintances; all his means concentrated in one — that was prayer. Several people came afterwards to ask for his advice and assistance; amongst them was a learned doctor, named Raadt, who was, both temporarily and spiritually, in a most deplorable condition. Our champion directed him to prayer, and promised to add his own. From that time Raadt's heart was opened to heavenly grace; and as he complained bitterly of an urgent debt of 2400 francs, which took away his rest, Gichtel, although he had nothing himself, procured him, miraculously, this amount. As Raadt perceived that his married state was an obstacle to his advancement, he took upon himself, with his wife's consent, spiritual circumcision. Sophia received Raadt, and all those who came to see her spouse with good intentions, very well; that is, as I understand it, she allowed some rays of her image to fall on the earthly qualities of their souls, which our friend Böhine calls Tinctura Solis. ('Three Principles,' 13,9.) This reception made a noise amongst Raadt's acquaintances; they all praised the sweet condescension of Sophia, and all would adopt spiritual circumcision; so that, in a short time, our Gichtel had about thirty adherents who all promised wonders. On this occasion Gichtel observed, in a remarkable degree, how the astral spirit is desirous of the nuptial couch of Sophia; these simple folk, notwithstanding all that our champion could say to them, believed that they had only to kiss and take!

It was during this time that Gichtel conceived the idea of publishing a new edition of the works of our friend B., more correct than the previous ones. He made use of some of his new friends and collaborators. The rather large amount of funds which this undertaking required, was first procured, from without the Society of Thirty, from a rich magistrate, who generously contributed it to the good work.

As long as the Thirty, who lived in different towns, remained united in spirit, they obtained in their prayers, all they wanted. If one did not succeed alone, he wrote to the others; and nothing on earth resisted their combined efforts. You may imagine what effect this society had upon the prince of darkness: at the pace things were going, his kingdom would be in danger. What particularly made him foam with rage, was the undertaking of the new edition of Bóhme. He walked round about the Thirty like a roaring lion, to see whom he could devour. He succeeded too well. But the details of this event, and the means the enemy employed to circumvent these people, would be beyond the limits of a letter. Raadt, amongst others, the most advanced amongst them, after passing happily through his work of preparation, failed in the fire of purification: his vacillating mind wanted gravity, meekness, love, and perseverance, to stand through the trial. And then he became Gichtel's enemy. The others, who wanted only the sweets, left him; some even went so far as to say he was a magician. The end of all these people was tragical and frightful. But notwithstanding all these obstacles, and in spite of every effort of the throne of darkness, the edition of 1682 was finished and corrected by Gichtel, on the author's own manuscripts; and the gates of hell could not repress a syllable of it. Our Gichtel desired that 13~5hme should, some day, be translated into French. This was a sort of testament of his, and I should not be at a loss to name the executor. The defection of the Society of the Thirty occasioned many crosses and persecutions to Gichtel. But Sophia had prepared far off for him a solid and faithful friend and collaborator, who stood by him till his death; this was a young merchant of Frankfort, who had received a depot of two hundred copies of the new edition for distribution. This young man's name was Ueberfeld; he was already acquainted with B~5hme's writings, and when the two hundred copies came to his house, it was like the ark of the covenant coming into the house of Abinadab. God opened His temple in the heart of Ueberfeld, and, in due time, he received the Bride Sophia, for he was raised to the sublimest degrees. It is to him we owe the six volumes of Gichtel's letters, which I possess in German, and look upon as a treasure. He came to see Gichtel in 1683, and found a St. Paul. He determined to remain with him. On his arrival, Sophia manifested herself to the two friends together, in the third principle, in the most glorious manner, and renewed her alliance with them, which lasted till 1685.

Ueberfeld, from whom I have these particulars, says, in his preface to G.'s letters, that the mouth cannot express the endearing and permg~nent delights which this manifestation afforded them. In 1690, they had a manifestation of the Repairer, with every indicative sign. They were confirmed in the advanced state in which they then were. They afterwards passed through many crosses, but overcame them all by their faith and patience.

They combated also for those who should follow after them in the footsteps of truth . . . They had a presentiment of the revolution of empires in the time to come. They prayed instantly that God would be pleased to raise up many spiritual combatants, able to bear the burden of the poor and feeble in their faith in Jesus Christ. The translator of Jane Lead's works was one of the Thirty. He began by translating the words literally to his brethren. Ueberfeld, being once present at these translations, felt, at once, that J. Lead went beyond all experience; he comprehended, from that time, that it was all astral only; he was the more convinced of this because Sophia would never accept the sayings of Lead, and when Gichtel begged her to give some explanation, she entirely changed her system, although she said she received her first opinions through a manifestation. The two brothers saw then that her views were only pious opinion, and let them drop. The translator, seeing that they would not join in the opinion he entertained of J. Lead, told them that, if they would make common cause with her, they would get a pension from Baron K., as he himself did, to the amount of 800fr. You will imagine this was not the way to succeed with Gichtel; so the two brothers answered him with the words of St. Peter, Acts viii,2O. From that time, the translator of Jane Lead became their sworn enemy. He even carried away the innocent Lead with him, in his aversion to our two champions, and the historian of Gichtel says she was obliged to undergo the fiery trial before her death, because her spirit had attained only to Tictura Solis.

A little before Gichtel's death, in 1710, Sophia showed herself to the two brothers as she had done when they first met in 1683, and summoned her faithful friend to join her. In 1716 Ueberfeld again had the same manifestation, which was afterwards repeated every year.

The Life of Gichtel was written by one of their faithful disciples; and it was by a remarkable circumstance that these writings have come into my hands, which proves how magnificently Providence repays the smallest services of years before. But without a knowledge of B~5hme, I should never have paid attention to the letters of G., and it is to you, Sir, I owe my knowledge of B. I pray our Divine Master may reward you in this world and the next."

There is not sufficient space left to give Saint—Martin's reply to this letter, which is dated 29 Brumaire, An III. However, following is an extract from that letter, which we have seen already:

" … I have been enraptured with the further details you have sent me of General Gichtel. Everything bears the stamp of truth. If I were near you, I could give you a story of a marriage in which the same way was followed with me, though under different forms, ending in the same result. I have also numerous proofs of the divine protection over me, especially during our revolution, of which I was not without indications beforehand. But, in all this, everything has been done for me, as they do for children; whereas friend Gichtel could attack the enemy in front, in which I should not acquit myself as he did. In short, for me, it is peace, and I always find it everywhere I am. On the famous 10th August, when I was shut up in Paris, and crossing the streets all day, during the greatest tumults, I had such signal proofs of what I tell you, that I was humbled to the dust; the more that I took absolutely no part in what was doing, and I am not so Constituted as to have what may be called physical courage …"

SECOND COLLEGE EXAM

Please send in your answers to the following questions. Write on one side of the paper only, and be sure to include your name and key number.

1. Name the five pages of the Book of Nature.

2. Of what does the fourth page treat, and what practical benefits may be derived from its study?

3. Give the names of the Sephiroth in the Martinist World of Orbs.

4. What condition gives rise to evil? (See page 5).

5. Define the meaning of the word "emanation."

BODIES OF MAN

R + C SUPERNUMERARY #15

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

In the very first Liber we sent you, we said our College is making available information on the Martinist Order and the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The T.E.A. is that body of knowledge, which has been expressed throughout the years by the Rose+Croix, the Alchemists, the Hermeticists, the Qabalists and in Esoteric Christianity and related streams.

There is a problem faced by all organizations caused by the limitations of language, in having to rely on words to express thoughts and ideas ... this presents a great difficulty. In English, for example, there is no neutral pronoun, so one is forced to use "he" when one actually means "he or she", and there is almost no vocabulary to describe certain esoteric or spiritual principles. Some organizations, therefore, have to use words and terms from Sanskrit and other foreign tongues.

Then there exists a further problem when the different "schools" use different standards. For example: some divide man in half and use the number 2 as the equation to designate spirit and matter, masculine and feminine, etc.. Others divide him in 3: the mind, the emotions and the will, in similar fashion to the Christian spirit, soul and body. Martinists too, use the threefold division and speak of the Ame, the Plastic Envelope and the Physical Body. The Alchemists divide man in 4, symbolizing the four elements — earth, air, fire & water. Hindus and Theosophists chose to divide him in 7 and speak of the physical, etheric, astral, mental, Causal, Buddhic and Atmic bodies. Qabalists divide him in 3 or 4, or 9, or 10. Astrologers divide him in 12, representing the twelve constellations. And so on. ALL ARE TRUE DEPENDING ON THE ANGLE FROM WHICH YOU LOOK AT HIM.

In our Libers, we are presenting you with a broad perspective, and your comprehension will be enlarged to a greater degree than if we restricted our presentations to those of one school only. We hope you will appreciate this wide scope of the Works, which is being made available from our heritage.

This evening we will consider the Bodies of Man and this lecture is from the tradition of the Rose+Croix.

In I Cor. 15:44 we read: "There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body." If you read the subsequent passages of this wonderful chapter, you shall find that man is comprehended in three general divisions. In the 45th verse, we note, "The first Man ADAM, was made a living soul, the last Adam was made a QUICKENING SPIRIT."

In the ancient wisdom, ADAM of Genesis was a synonym for earth, RED EARTH, as it was termed. This we find borne out in the 47th verse, wherein it is written, "The first man is of the earth, earthy; the second man is the Lord from Heaven."

Eve symbolized life. The Garden of Eden was represented by the human body, with Man as the invisible, thinking, reasonin~~, feeling, living tenant. When Adam "knew" his wife, it signified the union between Earth and Life, resulting in the bringing forth of all living things thereon. Many modifications and interpretations have subsequently been given to these passages.

First the natural body or physical vehicle developed in VISIBLE manifestation, as stated in the 46th verse of the same chapter, "Howbeit, that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is NATURAL; and afterward that which is spiritual."

In Genesis 2:7 we read that the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul. What these portions of scripture are indicating is that that first body, the natural body, the physical body, was the first to become manifest; then the second grand division of Man became evident ... the SPIRITUAL BODY or vehicle ... which "quickened" the physical body, and Man became a LIVING SOUL, or endowed with a Soular Body. These then, constitute the three great divisions: the Body, Spirit and Soul. But they are only BODIES ... they are not to be considered as the Man himself in any instance. The real Man is the invisible, thinking, sentient, living tenant, who functions through these bodies or vehicles ... and directs activities for his specific purposes.

In man's sevenfold constitution, the Rose+Croix recognize the following seven principles — Divine Spirit, Life Spirit & Human Spirit; united by MIND to threefold Body — Astral Body, Etheric Body & Physical Body.

These Seven Principles are utilized by the Ego in its quest for experience by contact with its interior and exterior environments. (Just what is the Ego? We will take this up later in the lecture.)

By referring to former statements, we find there is a third threefold body, namely: THE THREEFOLD SOUL. The threefold Soul includes the Conscious, Emotional & Intellectual Soul.

These threefold groups, according to the classification used by the Rose+Croix, constitute what are termed the VEHICLES OF MAN, because they are the avenues through which he expresses and also, through which he receives impressions from the exterior world.

The purpose of these bodies or vehicles may easily be seen. It is a law in all worlds that to function in any given world, region or plane, one must have a body or vehicle suited or appropriate to that world, region or plane. The fish, for example, is equipped with fins and gill breathing apparatus and thereby can live in the water element or region, whereas man, without that equipment, could not survive. Again, the bird, with its wings adapted to all sorts of weather conditions, can live in the air ... where man, notwithstanding his marvelous accomplishments in aeronautics, is limited to temporary conditions. The General of an army cannot confide his plans direct to the private, for that soldier, however loyal, not having given the requisite study to tactics, could not visualize his superior officer's idea. The General has to work through a series of grades of subordinate officers.

All this is true of Spirit. Spirit, as such, cannot function directly through a mere mass of blood, bones and tissues. It must develop intervening grades of vehicles, each dependent upon the preceding for its impulses and motive power. When these grades of vehicles work synchronously or in harmony, the Ego functions perfectly and AT EASE. When this harmony does not exist, we have DIS-EASE (DISEASE), which is therefore: imperfect and improper functioning or inharmony between spirit and the physical vehicle.

Without going into details of cosmic evolution at this point, we can observe simply, that the first emanation from God, or Deity, (as we have seen from our brief study of the Sepher Ietzirah) is VIRGIN SPIRIT, for it is as yet undifferentiated into its subsequent nature and attributes.

According to the terminology of the Rose-Croix, by the first differentiation it becomes known as the DIVINE SPIRIT of Man-to-be. By the next differentiation, it becomes or develops the attribute or nature termed the HUMAN SPIRIT of Man-to-be. By the third differentiation, it develops the attribute known as the LIFE SPIRIT of Man-to-be.

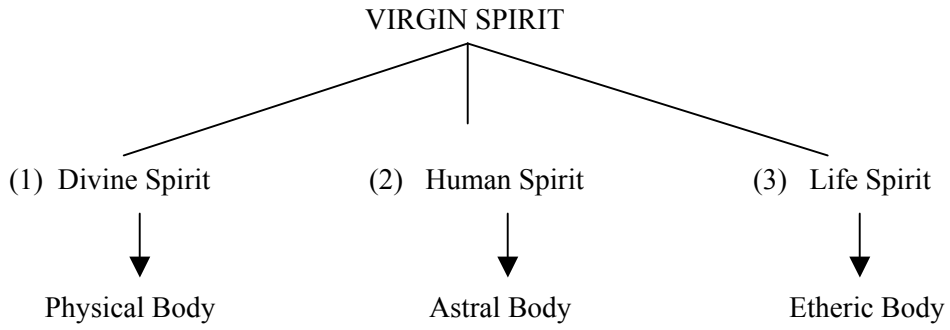
The Spirit of Man in its threefold nature, then develops or "crystallizes" the bodies or vehicles of the body ... like the Spirit of Man, his body is also threefold, as follows:

The Human Spirit develops the Astral Body, through which man is capable of desires, emotions, passions, wishes, impulses to action etc. ... as well as higher orders of emotions.

The Life Spirit develops the Etheric Body, which enables man to draw upon the vital forces of the higher strata of the etheric ocean, in which all visible creation is submerged and which, in its more subtle phases, interpenetrates the invisible worlds as well.

The Divine Spirit crystallizes the Physical Body of Man, much in the same manner as the shellfish crystallizes its hard outer coat or body, over the softer and finer tissues. The Physical Body enables Man to contact the exterior, crystallized form of matter, which will constitute his mortal environment.

Thus ... the Spirit of Man, in its threefold nature, correlates with the divisions of the Threefold Body, by a series of grades, as it were, that extend from the inner, subtle, impalpable, spiritual worlds, to the outer, tangible, material world. In this way, every possible phase of mortal experience is made available to the Spirit through definite points of contact. Let us have a diagram:



Having developed the Threefold Body ... to afford a continuity between the inner, invisible worlds and the outer, visible one ... The Spirit of Man reacts upon these vehicles of expression and contact, developing each to a higher perfection, and in the process extracts the essence or pablum which we call soul. Coming from the different vehicles, it will be seen that Soul, also, ... is threefold ... and as this essence is what makes it possible for us to be sentient, reasoning, emotional and feeling creatures, we term the three divisions the Conscious, Intellectual and conscious or Emotional Soul. Through Soul, human consciousness is made possible.

SPIRIT is the essence of life itself. The difference between something dead or alive is the presence or absence of Spirit. Spirit is life. The condition of the creator before the creation is Spirit, pure life, alive yet still. Life in motion, or the power to move and shape ideas and even forms out of life ... is MIND. Mind is the sculptor, the builder who conceives, imagines and shapes ideas out of the essence of life. Spirit is life ... Mind is the power to use it.

Each of us has Spirit and Mind ... but each of us experiences life a little differently, and these different memories build a unique individual. This individual aspect of each person is SOUL. Soul is the sum total of all that each person has done with its free-willed consciousness. Soul is each person's story, the complex of memories that result from all it has seen and done. Each of us has Spirit and Mind ... but each of us has a different collection of memories and experiences, different desires, hopes and attitudes about life. As you can see then ... the soul develops. It changes as each individual lives and experiences life, gradually building its own collection of memories which result in opinions, ideas and viewpoints.

Spirit is the life force.
Mind is the power to use it.
Soul is the being that develops.
All are one in consciousness.

It now becomes necessary to pause for a little refreshment and clarification. Let us recall the opening of this lecture where it was said that the limitations of language and the systems of classifications used by the different schools poses a real problem.

There is a great deal of confusion, as you are now aware, with exactly what is meant when you come across the words Spirit, Soul, God, Holy Spirit, Celestial Body, etc. etc. Even the English translation of the Bible is not specific or uniform in its use of the words Spirit and Soul and uses them interchangeably, as if they meant one and the same thing.

In this lecture the word 'Soul' has been used to refer to that essence or pabulum of experience which one draws from living life. On the other hand, as you have seen from earlier lectures, some schools use the word soul to mean Plastic Envelope or Astral Body. Then again some people say 'spirit' to mean 'astral body' ... as when they say they have "seen a spirit." What they mean is they have seen an apparition which may have been an Astral or an Etheric Body.

The problem has arisen because of the lack of a standardized English vocabulary to cover things esoteric and a great deal of misunderstanding is prevalent as a result. You, the student, must therefore be precise when conversing with someone as to the exact meaning of the words you use, and you must take care to understand others, especially when reading.

Even in the field of psychology there is this problem of semantics and vocabulary. Exactly what is meant when you hear or read about Spiritual Consciousness, Psychic Consciousness, Subconscious Mind, Subjective Mind, Superconscious Mind, Objective Mind, Unconscious Mind, The Higher Subconscious, Preconscious, Lower Subconscious, etc., etc., etc.??? Perhaps at some appropriate place in the Libers we can try to define some sort of standardized glossary. In the meanwhile it would be a fruitful exercise for you to study the diagrams accompanying this Liber ... THINK DEEPLY ABOUT THE MATTER YOURSELF ... and make some notes in your notebook. Let us continue.

The Threefold Spirit, after it has become individualized as such by its progress through the lower kingdoms of life, is termed collectively: the EGO.

The vehicles composing the Threefold Body are not born all at the same time. First to manifest is the Physical Body at the moment of human birth. The Etheric Body is born at about the age of seven. The Astral Body about the age of fourteen ... and the Mind becomes matured and active at the proverbial "age of reason" … twenty-one years. Note that the Astral Body, source of the desire impulse, is born at the age of puberty and adolescence.

A little meditation will reveal to you the meaning of the motto: OMNIA AB UNO, All From One. This motto is very ancient and appears on all the literature of the Rose+Croix as a constant reminder of the unity of God and Man, and the evolution of all mankind from God.

Man is evolutionally, a direct emanation from God comprising as one of his attributes a distinct element of divinity, and it is the mission of Man to express God in the material world. Man also appears as a composite creature, uniting Divinity and Humanity in each unit, and collectively in the mass aggregate.

This being the case, the principle of human brotherhood ceases to be a platitude, or a beautiful and altruistic theory … and becomes an organic fact.

The important truth contained in this progression of the vehicles of Man, or the development of bodies which enable him to function in both the visible and invisible worlds at the same time ... is the actual fact of our At-One-Ment with God at all times … because we are a very part of His existence.

The more you will study this lesson, the more you will realize how futile it is to "seek" God as a principle far off, when the truth is, that He IS infinitely near ... "nearer than hands or feet" … and that we do "live and move" and have our being in Him.

St. Augustine lamented this futile searching after God outside of himself, in the following words: "I, Lord, went wandering like a strayed sheep, seeking Thee with anxious reasoning without, while Thou wast within me. I wearied myself much in looking for Thee without, and yet Thou hast Thy habitation within me, if only I desire Thee and pant after Thee. I went round the streets and squares of the cities of this world seeking Thee; and I found Thee not, because, in vain I sought without for Him, who was within myself."

Each human body represents, as it were, a bridge or span between the finite and the infinite, extending from an eternity past to an eternal future, for though its temporary expression may indeed be fleeting, if timed from womb to tomb ... it is nevertheless the symbol to us of imperishable attributes and spiritual correspondences associated with it, that are independent of time periods or space concepts. A little reflection will reveal to you your true lineage and cosmic ancestry, and give you an almost overwhelming sense of your individual responsibility to your fellow man and of the actuality of your oneness with God and the consciousness of His Presence.

This truth of the essential unity is well set forth by Franz Hartmann: "Unification with the Eternal One is the only aim and object of all true religion. All things are originally one, they are all states of one universal divine consciousness; they merely APPEAR to be different from each other on account of the illusion of form. Differentiation and separation exist merely on the surface of the periphery of the All; the CENTER is one. To become reunited with the Center is to enter the REAL, and to become divine and immortal. After a man has become united with his Higher Self, he may become united with Christ."

Brothers & Sisters, this lecture contains a great deal of information. Study this entire Liber, a little at a time, every day until the next one. Remember not to allow the intellectual aspect of the Work to assume a greater importance than the practical. PERSIST WITH THE EXERCISES,ESPECIALLY NOS 1, 2 & 3. These three exercises are among the greatest developmental practices that exist in the entire field of esotericism.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

EXTENSION ACTIVITIES

The Masters of the Universal Spiritual Brotherhood are deeply appreciative of the work being done by our members to lead others to the Light. A very simple way of doing this is to display the College's decal where it can easily be seen such as on the windscreen of your car, shop front, window pane, etc.. People are attracted to this beautiful decal, which displays the College's motif: Book & Sword ... and they naturally ask about it. THIS IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY TO MAKE A FRIEND FOR THE COLLEGE! Have you obtained a decal yet? If not we hope you will do so soon!

Tuesday Evening

Dear Companion

The works of the OTG were started in the English-speaking world under the auspices of the ICES. The OTG is derived from the European Order and it took quite some time to translate the material and evolve it into a workable system that would be viable in today's social environment. After much work, everything is in order and several Commanderies are now operating.

An OTG Commandery is a beautiful and rewarding activity. The Works may easily be operated in one's living room (or spare bed room) and are designed to function with a minimum of red tape. A Commandery is an excellent work to operate even exclusively among the members of one's own household ... it is spiritually unifying and yields effects of the most harmonious kind.

Think about this: a Commandery can be a small unit comprising family members only — or with the inclusion of a few close friends — or you can make it into a large operation with dozens of people, as you please!

We have prepared an "information package" giving full details of the purpose and programme of the Order. If you have a feel for ritual and ceremonial work we invite you to write and express your interest and ask that we send you the information on how to start a Commandery.

We will be looking forward to hearing from you!

May He who gives us life light your way and lead you to the Glorious Kingdom.

Sincerely & Fraternally

Grand Recorder

P.S. This is a general letter going out to all ICES members. If you are already involved with a Commandery, please disregard!

LECTURE #50

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

We begin by answering some questions:

(1) The "dots" used in abbreviations signify as follows:

Three dots usually deployed in a triangle ∴ but not necessarily, abbreviate a word or .a name having to do with Freemasonry. Example: L∴ P∴ (Lodge Perfection) would be a Masonic lodge.

Four dots, usually in the form of a square, signifies the Elus-Cohen. Example: Bro:: John Browne, would be a member of the Elus-Cohen.

Six dots, usually written this way ⁘ or this way :::, distinguishes something Martinist. Example: "two Bros::: visited London" — these would be members of the Martinist Order.

(2) In the Order Martiniste et Synarchique, after the member has passed through the three degrees and has been "fully instructed", he participates in a ceremony and receives the distinction of "Rose+Croix Martinist". Rose+Croix Martinists meet in a special Chapter and there the brethren present lectures or discourses, which they themselves have written. In Martinism, Masonry and allied fraternities, these discourses, or papers are called "pieces of architecture." They may be drawn from existing works, or they may be a thesis or dissertation. The word "thesis" as it applies to work presented in a Martinist Lodge, means a work or treatise, which a member has prepared on the basis of their own research, investigation, observation and conclusion, and among the chief tools used in preparing this work will be those of analysis and synthesis. In the phase called analysis, one "picks apart" the particular item and carefully considers or investigates each component. Analysis is from the two Greek words ana, implying distribution, and lysis, a loosing, or resolving.

Synthesis is the opposite of analysis. It means "putting two or more things together to form a whole. In logic: the combination of several elements of thought into a whole." Synthesis is from the Greeks works syn, meaning with, and tithemi, to place. In upcoming Libers it will be our pleasure to bring you various pieces of architecture presented by Martinist brethren ... the papers in John Yarker's Notebook are in fact pieces of architecture ... and we will open this Liber with a thesis by a Martinist brother who is attached to a Lodge in London, England.

(3) "Can you tell me the meaning of the word "Sâr" ….

As far as I can recall without delving into my records, the title Sâr was originally introduced by Joséphin Péladan, a Supreme Council member of the first Martinist Order under Papus, and a member of the Ordre Kaballistique de la Rose+Croix; he eventually left and created the Ordre de la Rose+Croix Catholique which has survived under a slightly changed name in the European Rose+Croix Order. He had, I believe, borrowed the idea from the title used by Merodach-Baladan (720 B.C.), King of Babylon. (Sâr Merodach or Merodeq), and the title was used originally by S. C. members of this order and by members who "graduated" into the R+C from "antechamber" societies. A link was established between the R+C and the Martinist Order and the title was granted to Martinists who graduated into the R+C after attaining the grade of S.I. It gradually became absorbed into Martinism in the branches of the OMS and TMO. In another sense it also means “Prince of the Holy City.” the feminine form is Sarah, which means “Princess”. Today, in the DM5, a Lodge Master must hold this title before he/she may be installed to that office.

A PIECE OF ARCHITECTURE
BROTHER A.L.

THE BOOK OF NATURE

A THESIS

The Book of Nature is one of the most important departments of study to which the Martinist is directed. It is a book that contains five pages or sections and gives us the key to the understanding of Nature. The five pages have five titles which are motion, rhythm, harmony, Man & Nature and dreams. Through a study of the Book of Nature and an application of the principles he discovers, the Martinist will be able to master the forces of Nature and completely harmonize himself with his external environment.

The first page of the book of nature is entitled Motion. Motion is the manifestation of energy, motion or vibration, i.e. sound is the keynote of the Universe. Through an understanding of motion or sound one learns and contacts the forces in Nature. All energy, whatever form it takes, is essentially vibration; nothing that exists is without energy; matter itself is energy as was shown by Einstein in his formula $E = mc^2$. The phrase “In the beginning was the word” is closely connected with this fundamental notion that motion or energy is fundamental to all creation.

To the first page of the Book of Nature I have attributed the letter Yod, the first letter of the Pentagrammaton. The letter Yod rules over the element of Fire or energy and is thus an appropriate attribution to the first page. All fires ruled by Yod are in constant ceaseless motion which is the keynote of the first page. The works of evocation are attributed to fire and clearly in order to master the forces of Nature for the good of the whole, theurgic practices need to be undertaken and performed.The magical weapon attributed to the element of fire is the fire wand. The wand is made from wood, one of the fruits of Nature and consecrated in due form which enables its user to contact the forces of fire or motion and the more easily to rule and contact them.

The organ of the eye is attributed to fire, the organ through which we perceive the motions and movements of Nature and through a study of her processes we learn to conform ourselves to them.

The crucifixion experience is also attributed to fire and hence one learns on the first page of the Book of Nature the importance of selflessness and a complete surrender of one’s will and purpose to that of the Almighty. Through the crucifixion experience one comes into contact with the transmuting and cleansing fires of INRI which will lead one eventually to full Christ Consciousness. Through the contemplation of motion, one will contact those beings who rule and preside over celestial motion, those beings who embody the principle of living fire. One such being is the great Archangel Michael who not only rules over fire and motion but is also the self pledged adversary of evil. Clearly anyone who contacts the energies of Motion will need to learn and understand their correct and lawful use and such beings as the Archangel Michael are willing to impart such information.

From a consideration of the Tree of Life we see that the first page of the Book of Nature is attributed to Kether and Chockmah, the first two Sephiroth. One of the titles for Kether is Rashith ha Gilgalim, or the First Swirlings and the order of angels for Chockmah, the Auphanim, means wheels. These two Sephiroth convey to one's mind the concept of movement and motion and are thus appropriate attributions to the first page.

The second page of the Book of Nature is entitled Rhythm. Rhythm at once suggests ideas of order, of patterns. Rhythm points to an underlying intelligence behind motion and it also presumes intelligence in the beings who experience and appreciate such sensations. Life and nature are full of many rhythms from the beat of the heart, and the inspiration and expiration of one's breath, to the rotation of the Earth and the passage of the seasons ... we see that Nature is governed by many powerful rhythms.

To the second page of Nature I have attributed the letter Heh, the final letter of the Pentagrammaton which rules the element of Earth. Earth and all solid objects are powerful mediums for the transmission and conduction of vibrations and hence the element of earth is an appropriate attribution to Rhythm.

To the element of Earth is attributed the magical weapon of the pantacle which is a disc consecrated to hold the forces of earth. The pantacle enables the occultist to overcome the obstacles present within his environment which prevent the full manifestation of the Divine Purpose on earth.

The human ear is the organ attributed to the element of earth and through this organ and what it represents one is able to hear and thus perceive the Divine Rhythms in Nature.

The expansion of consciousness attributed to the element of earth is that of the Birth at Bethlehem, the birth within the cave of the heart, the seed of Christ Consciousness. The Birth at Bethlehem can only occur within an individual who has aligned himself to the great Rhythms of Nature and of God.

The two Sephiroth attributed to the second page of the Book of Nature are Binah and Chesed. One of the fundamental symbols of Binah is that of waves breaking on the shore, the great waves of Cosmic awareness descending in Rhythmic pulses down through all levels of consciousness to the shore of the physical plane. Hence Binah is an appropriate attribution to Rhythm. Chesed is an appropriate attribute to Rhythm also, for one of the titles of Chesed is love … and unless one can attune oneself to any motion through love, one will be totally ui.able to experience the Rhythm present within it.

The third page of the Book of Nature is entitled Harmony. Harmony is an essential element in any system of rhythmic forces in order to prevent discords, clashes and hence ... destructive, if not cataclysmic occurrences within the system. When one considers Nature, one is at once stuck with the tremendous adaptability of her work. The way in which everything is well suited to their environment, and the way that harmony and balance of nature prevails.

To the third page of the Book of Nature I have attributed the element of Water and the second letter, Heh, of the Pentagrammaton, it ruler. Water is an appropriate attribute to the third page because no matter where water is it will always flow and fit perfectly within the object that contains it. Water is in complete harmony with its environment.

The great expansion of consciousness attributed to the element of water is the Baptism in the waters of the Jordan and the descent of the Holy Spirit. Clearly this marks a high degree of harmony between the individual and the powers of the Holy Spirit … the descent of the Holy Spirit is a demonstration of this

I have attributed the organ of taste to this page because it is through taste that we can determine the harmonious from the inharmonious.

The two Sephiroth attributed to the third page of the Book of Nature are Geburah and Tiphareth. Geburah is an appropriate attribution because one of the main lessons it teaches us is how to create and maintain harmony in our environment despite the conflicts and difficulties present. Tiphareth is also an appropriate attribution because one of the main lessons this Sephirah teaches us is how to perceive harmony and beauty in all forms.

The fourth page of the Book of Nature is entitled Man & Nature. This points to the fundamental duality of I and "not I" and the need to study both in order to finally reconcile and unify them. For many ages Man has ravaged and misused Nature and her forces in order to gratify his own selfish desires and has created a great tension and conflict between himself and her. The fourth page of Nature directs us to a study of this particular duality and conflict so that we can finally neutralize and equilibrate this situation.

To the fourth page of the Book of Nature I have attributed the letter Vau, the fourth letter of the Pentagrammaton. The letter Vau rules over the element of Air. Air is the element of inter-relation and communication and hence communicating with the forces of Nature over a period of time one is able to understand and co-operate with the vast plan and schemes manifested in and through Nature of which Man is himself a part. Hence the element of air is an appropriate attribution of the fourth page.

The great expansion of consciousness attributed to the element of air is the transfiguration experience on the mountain top. This is the experience where Man and Nature are completely reconciled, where Man can directly communicate with his Creator face to face.

The human organ which I attribute to the fourth page is the nose. The nose is the organ that represents the ability to discriminate very acutely between Right and Wrong, the Right and the more Right. The individual who undertakes this major reconciliation between Man & Nature will need to have a heightened and clear discriminating ability.

The two Sephiroth attributed to the fourth page are Hod and Netzach. The two Sephiroth are appropriate attributions in my opinion because Hod represents Man as the Hermaphrodite, the fully developed and balanced individual. Netzach represents the forces of Nature through her Venusian principle.

The fifth and last page of the Book of Nature is entitled Dreams. Dreams have all through the ages held a place of prominence with regard to communication and understanding of other worlds of higher vibration than ours. Dreams and their interpretation have held the key, for Man, to the understanding of both himself and, the external spiritual Universe. Dreams contribute one form of spiritual perception ... as do clairvoyance, clairaudience, etc.. All these forms of spiritual perception need to be understood and developed, dedicated to the furtherance of the Great Plan.

The Hebrew letter I have attributed to this fifth and last page of the Book of Nature is Shin, which also rules over the element of spirit and is the third or central letter in the Pentagrammaton. (Yod-Heh-Shin-Vau-Heh). The attribution of spirit to this page is very appropriate as this page concerns itself with contacting spiritual realms through Dreams and other forms of spiritual perception.

The great spiritual expansion of consciousness attributed to spirit is the resurrection experience from the limitations and restrictions of all worlds. Through contacting the higher worlds via dreams and other forms of spiritual perception one's consciousness expands and expands and hence the resurrection experience, I think, is an appropriate attribution to the fifth page.

The human organ I attribute to the fifth page is that of touch. It is only through direct contact or touch that we come into intimate relations with our Creator. It is through direct contact that we are able to grow into Spirit. Contact waters the flower of our consciousness and awareness and hence spiritual contact with God is essential. Dreams are one clear form of contact.

The two Sephiroth attributed to this page are Malkuth and Yesod. The reason Malkuth is an appropriate attribute is due to the fact that the spiritual experience of Malkuth is full conversation with one's Holy Guardian Angel, or with one's true spiritual essence. Hence this would constitute a very deep and profound form of contact ... and hence is the reason why it is attributed to this fifth page. The reason why Yesod is attributed to this page is due to the fact that an individual who has undergone full union with Deity, has experienced the Mystical Marriage of the mystics in the middle ages. The Mystical Marriage or Union is the sexual expression elevated to, and transmuted into an experience with Deity, where the physical, animal aspects are not present, or even possible, and where through mystical contemplation of Deity, one experiences an ecstatic Union of Bliss. (Recall the experience of the Sage Gichtel related in an earlier Liber - Ed.) Yesod, which rules over the normal sexual union also rules over the Mystical Union with Deity of the mystics, and it is an intimate, deep contact with Deity. This is the reason Yesod is attributed to the fifth page of the Book of Nature.

The Five Pointed Star is a symbol of the balance of the four elements with spirit ... and the person who studies these five pages, and endeavors to put into practice what he discovers ... will himself grow into such a Star. The Star Exercise sows the seeds in the aura of him who practices this exercise. The Star Exercise lays the foundation for the balance and harmony of the elements within as well as without ... in one's environment.

The control and mastery of the five elements which were shown to have been closely related to the Five Pages were each shown to have been related to a letter of the Pentagramrunaton. The five elements contributed the five letters of this Divine Name, the Yod Heh Shin Vau Heh, or Jeheshuah, the S.A.O.T.U.. (Sovereign Architect of the Universe). Hence one will grow into and become a microcosmic reflection of Jeheshua through a study of the five pages of the Book of Nature.

Now, the Hebrew letter Yod is hand, Heh is window, Shin is tooth, Vau is nail ... from which we can deduce a moral: Yod being the first letter of the Pentagrammaton, tells us that the first step is that of giving our hand in service to our brothers and sisters. Heh, the second letter, meaning window, tells us that through service we may find that window or door leading to the Light. Shin, meaning tooth, which is a part of the mouth, informs us that once we have contacted the Light we must radiate that Light by word or action. Vau, meaning nail, points to the persecutions we may receive as a result ... and even crucifixion. Heh, the last letter, reminds us of the window or door of resurrection.

These five pages of the Book of Nature, Brothers & Sisters, have the underlying theme of Jeheshuah running in them and through them ... and by making a study of this book we will indeed learn, first hand, about the mysteries and workings of Jeheshuah, the S.A.0.T.U..

(Brothers £ Sisters: We are indeed grateful to our Brother for sending us his thesis on the Book of Nature. A great deal of "food for thought." The Star Exercise mentioned has not yet been given in the Libers but will be quite soon. We will have more "pieces of architecture" in up coming Libers ... in the meantime I hope all students will be realizing what has been said since the start of the Works: Spiritual development is something each person must undertake by themself ... no one can do it for you ... teachers can only point the way. We look forward to receiving some architecture from all students who are willing to set down their insights — Ed.)

DOMINION/DEPENDENCE

Brothers & Sisters:

The seven pairs of Ietziratic opposites, which represent the seven major oppositions of life, have already been named for you. It is the mystical interpretation of these oppositions which particularly interests and concerns us as Martinists. On this occasion I would like to dwell on the pair: Dominion/Dependence. Sometimes Dependence is rendered "Servitude" or "Slavery". It is the same.

Be certain you always remember that although we may speak of them as external things ... these opposites are all qualities which are expressed within us. It is their significance in this sense which concerns us ... not the outer, material things by which we represent them. This is to say ... when we speak of wealth, for example, it is not so much physical wealth, as richness of ideas and intellect that we mean. When we speak of fruitfulness, it must be taken to mean productiveness or constructive action. So when we consider Dominion/Dependence, it is the mystical significance which concerns us most. This is mentioned as a reminder because mystic truth has been misapplied and actually lost because an outer interpretation has been substituted for an inner one.

The Sacred Books of the past are filled with stories that originally sought to make abstract ideas more understandable by clothing them with the forms of men. These personified abstractions were intended to teach certain things to man about his own unfoldment and progress. But in time ... the inner meaning was lost ... and only the shell remained, for the stories were accepted as actual occurrences and the personified virtues taken to be real individuals.

The Biblical story of the giant Goliath who was slain by the slingshot of the shepherd boy, David, may be taken as an example. If we consider Goliath to have been an actual giant and David to have been an historical figure ... then our attention is likely to center on them as such ... and the significance of their conflict becomes incidental.

If, on the other hand, we see in these two characters certain virtues and vices personified, we shall probe the story for its spiritual implication in our own individual life ... and not trouble ourself about the historicity of the individuals mentioned.

It has been said that past teaching was cast in the form of personifying virtues as people or things, because the lesson was more easily remembered and transmitted in this way ... rather than as an abstraction. It must be remembered therefore, that to the mystic ... the story is nothing more than the shell which covers the kernel of truth. The characters in the story are secondary matters and are always to be disregarded ... and we must remember to disregard them in our studies.

In our consideration of this pair of opposites, Dominion/Dependence, if we were to regard the matter otherwise, we might be tempted to feel as David did ... that all we need to do is to see that our equipment consists of a few simple qualities to be used as protection against the possible appearance of a giant on our horizon at some time in the future.

The story of David & Goliath as it is told in First Samuel in the Bible, is both rich and complex. It is undoubtedly considered by many as an authentic bit of Jewish history, an account of supreme individual courage ... and nothing more. In this particular instance, nothing would be gained by arguing the point; however: there can be no objection to assuming that it has inherent in it, the mystic purpose of setting forth abstract virtues and vices in the garb of personalities. It is certain that its effect is heightened ... for mystics anyway ... when it is regarded in such light, for then one sees a personal application which is otherwise out of the question.

Let us briefly review the highlights of this story as it is set out in First Samuel: "And the Philistines stood on a mountain on the one side, and Israel stood on a mountain on the other side: and there was a valley between them.

"And there went out a champion out of the camp of the Philistines, named Goliath, of Gath, whose height was six cubits and a span … And he stood and cried unto the armies of Israel, and said unto them, "Why are ye come out to set your battle in array? ... choose you a man for you, and let him come down to me. If he be able to fight with me, and to kill me, then will we be your servants: but if I prevail against him, and kill him, then shall ye be our servants, and serve us."

David was the youngest son of Jesse and had been left at home with his father when his three older brothers joined the followers of Saul in battle. His father, however, had sent him to carry food to his brothers. Goliath had issued his challenge morning and evening for 40 days, and there was consternation in the camp of Israel when David arrived because no one dared to present himself against Goliath as champion of Israel.

"And David said to Saul, Let no man's heart fail because of him; thy servant will go and fight with this Philistine."

Because Goliath was a man of war and David an untried youth, the king attempted to dissuade him from becoming the champion for Israel. But David was not to be deterred, saying that as a shepherd he had fought both a lion and a bear to protect his sheep. He declared that he had no fear. Saul offered to put his own armor on David but he could not walk with it on and, finally, throwing off the weapons and protection so unnatural to him, he took his staff, chose five small stones from a brook, put them in his shepherd's bag, and, with his sling in his hand, drew near the mighty Philistine.

To the insulting curses of Goliath, David answered, "Thou comest to me with a sword, and with a shield: but I come to thee in the name of the Lord of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou hast defied. This day will the Lord deliver thee into mine hand **.."

With only a stone, a sling, and supreme confidence in the God of his trust, the Bible tells us, David was successful.

Now, wouldn't it be pointless to enquire whether or not there were giants among the Philistines, whether Goliath was seven feet or nine feet tall, or what was the exact weight of his shield and spear ... and other incidentals? It seems equally pointless to speculate on the possibility of one stone in a slingshot being sufficient to kill a man.

The lesson of Dominion/Dependence is better illustrated in other enquiries, for instance: the 40 day's challenge of Goliath and the five stones which David chose from the brook. Both numbers have significance.

Let us leave the familiar interpretation for a moment and consider the inner, or mystic one, suggested by the giant, David, the 40 challenges, and the five stones.

The number 40 is a mystical one, representing the number 4, equally mystical, ... 40 being the 10th degree of 4. You might say it means completeness, or maturity. The word Philistine is said to mean 'wanderer'. Presuming David and Goliath to be merely representative of two aspects of one individual, let us say that the part represented by Goliath, the braggart, the boastful, the wanderer, the idler … is the man who has reached 40, his maturity, without that discipline or direction which would make him a complete man.

His faculties, let us say ... are untrained except for destructive or nonproductive enterprises. It very often happens that people grow physically in the world, experiencing one thing and another, seeking pleasure, self-aggrandizement, amusement and selfish gain … only to arrive at the age of maturity to find that the real things in life are still enemies to him. Calloused and hardened by his own instincts and experiences, he challenges everyone and everything.

Suddenly, in response to his challenge, there confronts him … his own inner spiritual self ... which appears as an unfledged youth. This spiritual self is not burdened with the accepted accoutrements of warfare, for it is inexperienced in them. It chooses five smooth stones, which are the higher aspects of the five physical faculties. Goliath is shaken to hear the challenge of his own spiritual self which, confident of its attachment to and attunement with the Supreme … serenely acknowledges itself ready for battle. With one stone, which may be any one of the spiritual faculties, it finds the vulnerable spot in the boasting giant ... and lays low forever the dominance of the physical side.

We see, therefore, that this story can perfectly illustrate the Dominion/Dependence pair of opposites represented by the Pillars of Duality.

In fact ... it is clearly suggested by Goliath's challenge that whichever is overcome in the combat ... becomes subservient to the other. In other words: if the victory is a physical one, then the spiritual senses of man are dependent upon or secondary to the domineering forces of the physical nature.

On the other hand, if the spiritual senses gain dominion, then the physical ones fall into secondary, or subservient, places. This agrees perfectly with the lesson our Martinist teachings would have us draw from this Dominion/Dependence pair of opposites.

Taken literally, the story seems an objective one that simply relates an historical occurrence between two individuals of opposing tribes. It depicts a mere incident, let us say, in the outer history of a people. The true meaning, however, is an inner one, depicting the conflict which goes on within man's self. This conflict is a continuing one ... we call it life. Here the armies of the Philistines and Israel are in perpetual array against each other.

Daily, even hourly, the champion of the armies of this world comes forth to challenge and, if possible, to frighten the forces of man's spiritual self to acknowledge the dominion of the material forces. The place of combat is the realm of objective consciousness ... which is poetically described as a valley between two mountains.

If at the time of maturity the spiritual preparation is not complete, then the spiritual champion does not appear and man continues his life in fear and trembling because he has not properly responded to the challenge. His right to dominion is never realized ... and he spends his days in dependence upon the wandering whims, impulses, and forces of his physical, or lower, self.

If, however, the preparation is wisely made, one is able with the five faculties to have a store of ammunition, one-fifth of which is sufficient to take the measure of the boastful giant and lay him low.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

QUESTIONS I DISCUSSION

SUMMARY

When we speak of the oppositions of life, we are talking about inner qualities...those oppositions you meet within your own consciousness.

In considering traditional stories and fables, the instruction intended by the mystic schools is lost...when an objective interpretation is substituted for the inner meaning.

The opposites Dominion/Dependence are very well illustrated in the story of David & Goliath. It is to be spiritually interpreted, rather than regarded as an historical event. David & Goliath are two aspects of one's own nature. The 40 day's challenge of Goliath represents the constant impact of the physical world on man up to the time of maturity. David represents the spiritual side of one's nature. The five smooth stones are the spiritual faculties of man brought into play in the conflict with the giant, any one of which is able to find man's weak spot and give him dominion over himself.

How are you balancing the oppositions in your life? Are you barren or fruitful? Rich or poor? In command or in bondage? The ideal situation is to equilibrate or neutralize all pairs of opposites, all dualities. To be excessive ... on either side ... is to be in error ... or in "sin."

Use the seven major pairs of oppositions as your guide in life. In your period of self-analysis, rate your thoughts, words, deeds and your general situation under these seven heads:

Wealth/Poverty	Wisdom/Ignorance	Beauty/Ugliness
Fruitfulness/Barrenness	Peace/War	Dominion/Bondage
	Life/Death

LECTURE 53(H)

ALCHEMIC/HERMETIC — GENDER

Respected Postulant:

Gender, as a fact in all manifested forms of life is so obvious as to be an accepted commonplace; however: the basic principles underlying gender ... and the still greater principles which it inherently represents are generally not understood ... in fact they are mostly unknown.

On this occasion I will not enter into the evolutionary status of gender, rather, I will consider it from the Hermetic standpoint, purely as an existing fact, independent of the manner in which it may manifest, from time to time. If the past is interesting to students of evolution from a biological point of view ... the future holds out an even more interesting picture.

GENDER is vastly more than a biological condition. It functions psychologically as actively ... as it does biologically. Its psychological importance develops the nature of the organism in which, in any given instance, it assumes its major presentment. Gender is more than a matter of sex or reproductive process, indeed ... it deals with infinitesimal beginnings that ultimately shape the destiny of multiform phases of matter in their evolutionary manifestations.

The study of gender takes us directly into an invisible realm ... and while sex as ordinarily understood does not inher in the spiritual worlds … gender does play an important role therein, and commences its activities with the actual archetypes of which all visible forms are expressions and results.

The Principle of Gender is closely analogous to, but different in its functions from the Principle of Polarity. (Lecture #21, please re-read it in the light of this lecture.) Everything has Gender; masculine and feminine are present in all the activities on all the planes, in this Instruction, however, you must bear in mind that when speaking of Gender Hermetically ... we do not mean Sex as commonly understood.

The term "Gender" in its derivation from the Latin really means "to beget, generate, produce, create, cause to exist," and at a glance we see that its initial impetus to activity is on the mental plane. Sex as it is commonly understood ... is a function of gender manifesting only in certain departments of the physical plane.

The well known writer Ella Wheeler Wilcox, voiced this truth in her exquisite poem, which begun:

> "Nothing in this world is single,
> All things, by a law Divine, etc. etc."

No SINGLE things exist ... except in some physical phases as the separated half of a whole, of which it is one expression of Gender. Text books of even a very recent date of publication taught that the Atom was the true ultimate and final division of Matter. These "text books" are now being revised to teach that Atoms are composed of ions, electrons, corpuscles and even still smaller particles, and that the ion is composed of corpuscles of positive and negative gender; a preponderance of negative corpuscles clustering around and cohering to a positive corpuscle, and each revolving round the other at a speed of inconceivable velocity ... and the mass vibrating tremendously both in degree and intensity.

Yet, these positive and negative corpuscles are but the expressions of gender of the cosmic root substance of which they are ultimately composed; the beginnings of Prima Materia. The positive corpuscles are said to be masculine, and the negative corpuscles feminine.

Positive and negative are terms ordinarily used in the simpler branches of electrical science, to designate certain qualities of electrified or magnetized Matter. But in common usage they have caused a lamentable misconception ... for commonly we take positive to mean strong, vigorous, imperative, etc. ... while negative is understood to mean weak, non-resistant, vacillating, unresponsive, etc. Nothing can be farther from the truth.

As a matter of fact, in electrical science, the negative pole is the one from which emanates the cloud, legion or storm of liberated electrons or corpuscles, and from which also proceed the rays of Roentgen known as the X rays. Electrical scientists term the negative pole the "cathode," a term which, in its derivation means "descent, and the path of generation."

In the expressions of gender manifestations in the human individual, we see the mutual interrelations and operations of the Hermetic Principles of Gender, Polarity and Correspondence.

Thus we say the female is negative. We say the male is positive. It is his physical body that is positive, but his etheric body is negative. And his negative etheric body creates and makes possible through crystallization ... the substance which his positive physical body begets.

This Principle of Gender is not static, it is intensely active on all planes; of organic and inorganic matter ... and in spiritual substance from the densest to the most sublimate, even to the throne of the Absolute.

And in the fact of the intense activity of Gender on all planes ... is concealed one of the most vital and essential truths of the very mystery of life itself. It is the answer to the question, "How is motion produced, what starts and causes vibration?
etc.."

The law is: unlike qualities attract, and like qualities repel. In other words ... positive attracts negative and repels positive. Negative attracts positive and repels negative. When positive attracts negative they unite until polarized ... and then repulsion separates them.

Now, for the terms positive & negative, we shall use Hermetically the terms masculine for positive, and feminine for negative.

All vibrations, and manifest activity, originate in and revolve around the activities of these two opposing forces ::: attraction and repulsion ::: as they manifest in the corpuscles and in the Atom. The first motion is known in esoteric parlance as the Primum Mobile. (Please pause at this point, refer to Liber 15, page 4 and re-read #1. KETHER, the Crown.) This began with the Absolute. It is beyond our concept. In its manifestation we observe the Atom.

Now, the atom is composed of masculine and feminine corpuscles, or electrons. A feminine corpuscle under obedience to the law of repulsion detaches itself from the atomic mass and starts on an independent career, seeking from the very outset to find and enter into affinity with ... a masculine corpuscle. When found, their combined powers of attraction draw other feminine corpuscles, and all revolving separately to each other, yet in group unison around the central masculine corpuscles ... until they become polarized in the natures and qualities. While so revolving, the feminine around the central masculine, and the whole revolving as one until ... they compose an Atom. And all matter is resultant upon the activities of atoms in molecular groups.

When polarized, each feminine corpuscle restores its balance of equilibrium as a feminine corpuscle and seeks another affinity with a masculine corpuscle forming new atoms and again breaking them down.

All visible material conditions are produced by this constant seeking of affinities by the feminine corpuscles, and dissociating themselves from such affinities as soon as their mutual qualities and natures are become polarized. This is the modus of all vibration and the beginning of all motion in the physical world. The process of this dissociation is technically termed "ionization."

From the unions formed by these corpuscles as atoms, come all the phenomena known to us as heat, light, sound, electricity and chemical affinity.

The function of the masculine corpuscle is to beget in the feminine corpuscle specific creative power and energy which expresses itself in varying grades and planes according to the mass group formed by the atoms concerned, whether it be a microbe or a human being. But the feminine corpuscle in all stages is always the unit of creative force.

Now this principle of gender is so often misunderstood that it is, in reality, the misconception of it that has given rise to the modern prevalent sex mania which is rampant today in all circles of society. The fact that the basic units of being seek affinities when their mutual qualities have become polarized, has been taken by those who eagerly seek to call in science to endorse individual ideas and perverted proclivities.

The corpuscles enjoy a lifetime consisting of an incalculably fractional minimum of time relatively speaking. Yet in that individual lifetime of the corpuscle it discharges its functions, and reincarnates un-polarized to act again in obedience to cosmic law.

So too, the human unit seeks its affinity ... or should do so ... but seldom finds it ... for the things of the material world blind it to the verities and realities of the higher life. But granted that the human unit is drawn to another unit with which it unites in a reasonable degree of success ... the law of the corpuscle is not an excuse for a lifetime of affinity-seeking ... which is merely another way of expressing promiscuity.

The corpuscle acts in blind obedience to law. But the human unit has an indwelling ego and the gift of' reason, and one lifetime is hardly sufficient, in normal cases, for two human units to study and harmonize their mutual qualities and natures and whenever the faculty of reason is permitted proper exercise in seeking the affinity … polarization remains a long way off. Nature seems to have established a reasonable average of the length of human life ... that will prevent polarization in normal cases, to take place prematurely.

Thus it will be seen that the Principle of Gender is at the very basis of all things organic and inorganic. Everything that is, has within itself both masculine and feminine opposites and powers. It also shows clearly the basic truth of the Hermetic science ... that it is the feminine aspect of Deity that is the active factor, and justifies our teachings of the feminine Gender of the "Ancient Wisdom."

The foregoing considerations of the Principle of Gender have been concerned primarily with its functions in regard, primarily, to states of Being. Let us now consider it for a moment in relation to the Mental Plane. We must be ever conscious that at this time the Mind is not a true body of any sort, it is simply a "sheath" of' Mind Stuff utilized by the Ego in its present state of development. But we find in this sheath the essentials of conditions that will ultimately organize into perfected organs.

We find on examination that the Mind Stuff is dual in its nature. And we are accustomed, in accord with the influence of modern erroneous psychology, to use the terms "Objective" and "Subjective" minds; terms first invented by Thomas J. Hudson in exploiting many of his mistaken theories regarding the persistence of consciousness after so-called death. Also, we use the terms "Conscious and sub-conscious minds," "Voluntary and In-voluntary, active and passive; higher and lower minds."

Heindel discussed the third aspect of mind; the "super-conscious," but as in one specific instance he makes mind practically synonymous with "memory", and also states the super-conscious mind to be the storehouse of all faculties and knowledge gained in previous lives though dormant in this incarnation, it does not materially alter the popular concept of the duality of mind as such.

This super-consciousness may be a valuable attribute of mind so long as that particular substance of the mind sheath is attached to the Ego ... but so far as the operations of mind per se are concerned ... it is simply dual in its nature and essential quality.

We may group the classifications given above, under two headings:

Masculine	Feminine
Objective Mind	Subjective Mind
Conscious Mind	Sub-conscious Mind
Voluntary Mind	In-voluntary Mind
Active Mind	Passive Mind

But note that these designations reverse in opposite polarities of sex.[1]

On analysis, one will find that the "Me" is the consciousness of the body, its attributes, appetites, etc.

The "I" is the mental power to Will the "Me" into action.

The "I" is the masculine principle of Gender; the "Me" is the feminine principle of Gender.

The "I" represents the aspect of Being; the "Me" represents the aspect of Becoming.

The Masculine Principle tends always in the direction of giving out; the Feminine Principle of Gender tends always in the direction of receiving.

The Masculine devotes itself' to the operation of the Will in various phases.

The Feminine to the generation of thoughts, ideas, concepts and objects, including the works of the imagination.

ATTENTION should consist in concentrating the activities of bath the masculine and feminine principles to a focus on a given matter.

In the operation of Suggestion, the Masculine directs a stream of vibratory energy or will power toward the feminine principle of the person to be influenced.

Throughout all the domain of cosmos it is the property of the masculine aspect of Gender to energise and vitalize the feminine aspect, to the fruition of creative process.

[1] Students are recommended to read The Alternate Sex by G. C. Leland. This author, while advancing some very fanciful theories has nevertheless laid hold of the very essence of true Hermeticism and describes fully and correctly, the dualities of the human mind. He calls the two opposites, the Masculine Mind in Woman, and, the Feminine Mind in Man. He shows that besides the dominant mental manifestation that predetermines the sex of a given expression ... there is also alway.s present the active co—operation of the opposite sex, and sometimes the dominancy of this opposite sex within an individual is what gives masculinity to a woman ... and femininity to a man.

R+C
SUPERNUMERARY #16

Brothers & Sisters:

In the preceding lessons we have brought out some fundamental principles that are basically important for both the advanced student and the beginner in Esoertic Science to know. They should be carefully reviewed and kept firmly in mind.

Some occult schools teach what is known as the "mental body" of man. With this teaching the Rose+Croix do not agree. The word "body" implies an organized vehicle and this, as yet, has not been accomplished mentally. Some day there will be a MENTAL BODY just as there are now the physical, etheric and astral bodies. At present, so far as man is concerned, his mental equipment is not fully organized as a body with specific centers corresponding to physical organs, and so the Rose+Croix terms the human mental equipment the MENTAL SHEATH.

Despite the marvels and wonders of accomplishment by the human mind it is as yet, still in the process of development and molding ... in other words, still "in the making." This is important for us to realize, for knowing this, we are conscious that we have a marvelous privilege in being able to make our minds what we will, to a large extent.

We often remark, "I made up my mind" to do this or that. There is far more in these simple words than appears superficially, for they express a profound cosmic and esoteric truth. It is the work of the human Ego in each incarnation to mould, develop and build the mental powers to the highest degree of efficiency, and on the extent that each succeeds, will depend the value of the subsequent incarnation.

Men and women who are powers in the world today, despite seemingly insuperable obstacles in early life, lack of education, technical training, etc. are those who won in the struggle in the preceding incarnation to develop their mental powers and faculties, regardless of all inhibitions, and today they reap the fruit of their labors, for no modicum of energy constructively expended is ever lost in Nature's economy.

Devoid of the light of modern science, our forefathers in the Human Kingdom accomplished wonders in the development of the mind, even though in ignorance to a great extent. Today anything we may legitimately desire is within our reach. You can accomplish your desire if you seek persistently, and if your desire is within the bounds of reason.

The babe, lacking knowledge of perspective, cries for the moon which appears suspended just outside its window, and there are many grownups who are just as unreasonable in their desires. All Nature and the cosmic forces are ready to assist the one who truly seeks to better himself, for this is the law of progress, whether it be in business, social, industrial or professional pursuits. Such a desire is perfectly legitimate, for it spells the progress of the race, and this progress is made up of many elements of activity.

But before you decide definitely what you want to attain, let us remind you of the scriptural admonition to SEEK FIRST THE KINGDOM OF GOD, for thereafter all these other things shall be added unto you. That is the value of the lesson of Solomon, who sought first of all WISDOM, and according to the tradition, all other things were added unto him as a result of the expressed wisdom of his choice. Get wisdom, get understanding ... of the truths of nature and of God.

As your first step in "becoming" you must learn the value of a "fixed idea", termed in esoteric verbiage, a "concreted thought form and the first step in studying ideation is to arrive at a knowledge of what constitutes CONSCIOUSNESS.

What is consciousness?

Let us assume that some distance away, we observe a man striking a blow with a hammer. After a perceptible interval we say we "hear" the blow. The vibratory waves set in motion by the blow have reached our ears, the impact has been received on the drum, the vibration communicated to perilymph, and the endolymph, passing through the semi-circular canals are received on the fibers of Corti, is finally transmitted to the brain via the auditory nerves. This, roughly speaking, and omitting detailed anatomical features is the process of hearing. But what happens after these vibrations have reached the brain?

The human brain, marvelous though it be, after all is nothing but a congeries of cells, without power of its own to translate these vibrations into consciousness. When a man "dies" and the brain ceases to function, we know that consciousness still continues in the spiritual worlds as it has been amply proven by psychical research, if such proofs are necessary. Therefore, consciousness is not a function belonging only to the human organism.

In the spiritual worlds human speech and sound are nonexistent. Communication is from mind to mind; ideas are implanted by will power and the language ... the universal language of spirit, is that of FORM, COLOR and TONE.

Form, color and tone are spiritual methods of expression. Consciousness, therefore, is the translation by the EGO of impacts received from external sources, into the language and visualization of the inner worlds. It is the state of "awareness", the act and process of KNOWING, by the EGO or REAL SELF. Thus the human EGO functions in both the inner and the outer worlds. Therefore we may say that consciousness anywhere, is the translation by the EGO of impacts received by it, through physical or spiritual organs or centers, into active visual concepts.

Consciousness is vastly more than this. Virgin Spirit previously mentioned, was the FIRST EMANATION from God, but undifferentiated. When differentiated into units or integers, it began its "dip into matter , or descended down through the planes to our physical world. In passing through the World of thought, it clothed itself with the mental substance or sheath, with which to function later.

On reaching the physical world, it passed through the process of involution until it reached the human stage, where it is able to function through the mental sheath with complete facility. As each unit is an emanation from the Divine, it possesses a modicum of the Divine consciousness, but NOT SELFCONSCIOUSNESS. It is only after it has completed its involuntary journey and begun its evolutionary journey back to God ... that it is self conscious ... and this is one of the purposes of mortal existence. When differentiated Virgin Spirit has completed its involutionary journey, it has become INDIVIDUALIZED and this individualization is what constitutes the EGO. The Ego, therefore, is INDIVIDUALIZED, SELF-CONSCIOUS SPIRIT.

While the involving spirit has been equipped with mental substance, the potentialities of this substance have been crystallized in a trance-like condition in the Mineral; slept dreamlessly, but less crystallized in the Vegetable; partially awakened to dream consciousness in the Animal; and arrived at full waking consciousness ... the consciousness of its SELF ... in the Human Kingdom. These are what are called the FOUR STATES OF CONSCIOUSNESS.

Therefore, greatest of all consciousness is the KNOWLEDGE OF SELF, and the act or process of translating all impacts received externally to itself into the language, knowledge and cognizance of its environment.

This process of translation is accomplished by what we term REASON. Reason is the act, process and power of selecting, arranging and coordinating all the factors of one or more impressions so that the Ego can translate the impacts, expressing them into consciousness of the existing conditions.

There is another important fact that has been developed in the foregoing paragraphs although attention has not been drawn to it:

> Involution brings Virgin Spirit down to human expression for the attainment of self-consciousness.
> Evolution takes the individualized Spirit from mortality back to God.

Much foolish discussion has occurred, due, through ignorance, to the fear that the "evolution theory" takes one away from God. Actually .... EVOLUTION TAKES US BACK TO GOD.

While our potentialities for translating exterior impacts into consciousness have been slowly unfolding while in the latency of the lower kingdom ... they have been taking on valuable qualities in passing through the mineral, vegetable, animal, and lastly the human stage. These qualities have been derived from the Four Elements ... as you have already glimpsed in the introduction to Alchemy: Lecture #41.

> "From the Fire Element our mental concepts derive force, energy and vitality. This gives them the power to impress in such a way that creative results accrue. From the Water Element, our mental concepts gain mobility and fluidity that causes us often to use the expression, "my ideas seemed to flow as swiftly as water."
> From the Earth Element they derive a stability that enables them to become concreted and this is what gives us the power of holding to a "fixed idea". This is our greatest asset in applying our idea to the moulding of' ourselves into what we sincerely desire to become.
> From the Air Element, our mental concepts acquire a power or faculty of penetration and dissemination. This quality is what makes possible the "flights of imagination", which are by no means to be despised, but carefully observed and studied.
> This last quality brings us directly to the personal application. You are to develop ... not the WILL, as frequently, as is almost universally taught, but the IMAGINATION. (The power to make mental images by an effort of will.) It is by the imagination that we "make up our minds", and making up our minds is nothing more or less than concreting the specific idea, or thought form developed by our imagination visually.
> Blessed is he or she who is fortunate enough to have a "vivid imagination", for if carefully directed and controlled, it may lead to almost any accomplishment. All of us are gifted to some extent with the power of imagination or the ability to mentally visualize things existent or conditions not presently existent but as we would like to have them."

PLEASE REVIEW LECTURE #41 IN THE LIGHT OF THIS DISCOURSE

Spiritual and mental development and attainment must be and ARE conscious arts. Each is the result of the activity of the Ego. It is easy to observe plenty of instances where these conscious acts have not taken place ... for we see all about us those who have remained in spiritual darkness and mental infancy for a lifetime ... though the opportunities for advancement and assistance have been ample.

Before closing this lecture, I must point out one more salient truth. Much controversy exists over the orthodox teachings that man was an individual creation of God, created exactly as we know the species today. Science and evolution contradict this teaching, … but DO NOT CONTRADICT THE REAL TRUTH INVOLVED.

Man was created in the spiritual image of God, as we read in Gen. 1:27 — "So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them." … This means that man is like God, having the female and male aspects within him. This is the creation of the spiritual man … at this point the physical man had not yet been created. It is only AFTER God created the spiritual man in His image … that he created the physical form: Gen 2:7 "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground … etc." IN OTHER WORDS TWO CREATIONS HAVE BEEN DESCRIBED:

> The first occurred in the spiritual realm when man was created in God's image, i.e. to be like God and to have dominion (to do as he pleases) with the creation (Gen. 1:27).
> The second occurred on the earth when the physical body was created (Gen. 2:7) for the spiritual man to dwell in the physical environment. As all occultists know, the spiritual man enters the physical body at the first breath. The poetic phrase "God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and man became a living soul" is simply a description of the entrance of the spirit or soul (according to the terminology you prefer) into the physical body ... which occurs at the birth of every baby, hundreds of times every day.

We are what we are, regardless of what we may appear to be.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

QUESTIONS

1. What is your definition of consciousness?
2. What are the Four States of Consciousness?
3. How do the Four Elements influence our mental concepts?
4. Does evolution take us away from God?
5. How is man said to be really made in the "image" of God?
6. Give YOUR definition of mind.

HEPTAD/GNOSTIC
SUPERNUMERARY #16

THE RELIGION OF THE FUTURE

Man delights in looking forward and imagining the kind of world he will have in the future. In fiction and in the funny papers, he imagines cities of the future, space travel in the year 2,000, and even computerized systems of education of an age to come. Man seems to know that the times change and that the world and all that is in it evolves. He has seen so many developments in just his own life span that he looks forward with an almost breathless anticipation, wondering "What's next?"

But it would seem that man has a blind spot, for he looks into the future except in the case of his religions. Traditionally, religions have looked backward to other times. We are urged to remember "the day Cod walked the earth," to find help and inspiration in the prophets of old. Generally, it is worship in retrospect. Or, if religion does look to the future, it looks beyond time and out of the world to a millennium which is really the fulfilling of a concept formulated in the religion of the past.

It has always seemed to me that one of the basic reasons for man's unbalance in the world, which gives rise to wars and to all manner of man's inhumanity to man, is that while man makes steady progress in knowledge of the Universe around him, he accepts dogmatic assertions that knowledge of the world within him stopped in some time in the revered past. Thus, while science and education are continually evolving, progress in religion comes slow, if at all. And these words might well cause some raised eyebrows among the "defenders of the faith." "Progress in religion?" it might be asked. "How can we progress beyond God's word, beyond eternal truths?" We can all agree that Truth cannot be surpassed, but I suggest that there may be a great disparity between absolute Truth and man's concept of Truth.

Some people were very much disturbed by the theologians who were crying a few years ago that "God is dead." Personally, I saw this as a good sign. It reflected modern man's unwillingness to accept custom—made convictions, and his inability to find help or inspiration from an ancient definition of God. Emerson once said, "When we have broken with our god of tradition, and ceased from our god of rhetoric, then may God fire the heart with His presence."

While today we talk of religious unity, and ecumenical movements are much in the news, why not speculate upon the religion of the future? If the religions of mankind succeed in putting away their swaddling clothes to the degree that science has matured in the past century, what can we expect to find in the next hundred years? Let me say that this view of the "religion of the future" is my very own, based on my insights and hopes and dreams. However, I am not giving a prophecy of which of the great religions of today will win out in a "survival of the fittest." I am thinking of "religion" not as a particular system of worship, but as mankind's general quest for Truth.

To the average individual, "religion" is something you join. You may be asked, as I was in the army, "Which are you: Catholic, Protestant, or Jew?" I was forced to give such a definition so they could put it on my dog tags. It seems to me that this will be the most startling distinction of the religion of the future: There will be many schools of thought concerning the spiritual way of life, and there may be many churches involved in the process of spiritual education; but there will be only one religion, one absolute science of Being.

The religion of the future will not be centered in churches, but in lives. It will not be a way of worship, but a way of life. Its purpose will not be to create great churches, but to produce good people. When we have good people at the bargaining table, good people in the councils of government, good people as teachers and policemen and parents, then the problems of the world will be easily resolved.

Oh, we will still have churches in the future. We may always need them, but as places of study and spiritual research, not as repositories of "final truths." The problem of retrospective religion is that it ends in the church. In the future, religion will only begin in the church. The great purpose of the church must be to teach, not preach; to set the individual free; not to bind him in chains to a creed. The Scottish preacher, Henry Drummond, once said, "The great purpose of the church is to help people to get along without it." The church must not center its efforts on converting people from one "ism" to another, but rather on helping them to be "transformed by the renewing of their minds."

The religion of the future will be focused on one great concept: unity. It will emphasize man's unity with the great creative force of God, which finds is outlet through man himself. Man will end for all time his speculation about God. He will realize that God is a presence and power which can only be apprehended and conceived of in terms of His manifestation. We may know God in and as the daisy of the field, the birds of the air, the sun, the moon, and the stars of the heavens. Or, we may know Cod in and as man. Thus, religious studies of the future will be studies of self-realization, using techniques of self-unfoldment.

The religion of the future will not only be compatible with science, it will realize the basic unity of all knowledge, so that you can't have one without the other. The fact that even today the great scientific minds are grasping this is exemplified by this prophecy of Charles Steinmetz: "The greatest discovery and development of the coming years will be along spiritual lines.... Someday, ... the scientists of the world will turn their laboratories over to the study of God and the spiritual forces. When this day comes, the world will see more advancement in one generation than it has in the past four."

In the religion of the future, man will be taught that his body is not him, but only the instrument of self—expression. You do not need to be the victim of your body; you can and should be its master. To outgrow this tyranny of the body, occasionally leave your body behind. Let it drop out of your thoughts completely. Forget its demands for attention, its passions and appetites, its hungers and thirsts, its aches and pains. A freedom greater than any of us has ever known awaits us when we educate the body to do our will.

We are also subject to the tyranny of the intellect. No one knows less about real freedom than the man who lives strictly on an intellectual plane. As Bergson says, "There is a deeper than intellect in man." Slip away occasionally from the only guide to Truth you are accustomed to, and dare to go your own way into the unseen alone, feeling for the right pathway by intuition. Eventually, the intellect will follow and will be enlightened by the intuition.

Certainly, the religion of the future will accept the concept of the unity of all mankind. It will become obvious that when we know God, and know our true self as an activity of God, that we will know our basic unity with all which is of God. As Emerson says: "The heart and soul of all men being one, this bitterness of his and mine ceases. He is mine; I am my brother, and my brother is me." We have tried all manner of laws of social justice and of restraints and barriers for protection, but the key lies in the realization of unity.

Usually, we see in others only the things that separate us. But the religion of the future will condition us to turn resolutely away from all these surface expressions, realizing that they do not express the real person; we will be disciplined to hold the real self in them constantly before us. And this is the role of love. Love is the language of the Spirit and its harmonizing influence, through which we can see the Divine even in the human.

Above all, the religion of the future will not be a theology, neither reducible nor reduced to a doctrine, or written in a book. It will be a beckoning light to follow, and it will be a way of life. As Jesus said, “By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another.”

Kabalah Lecture #54

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

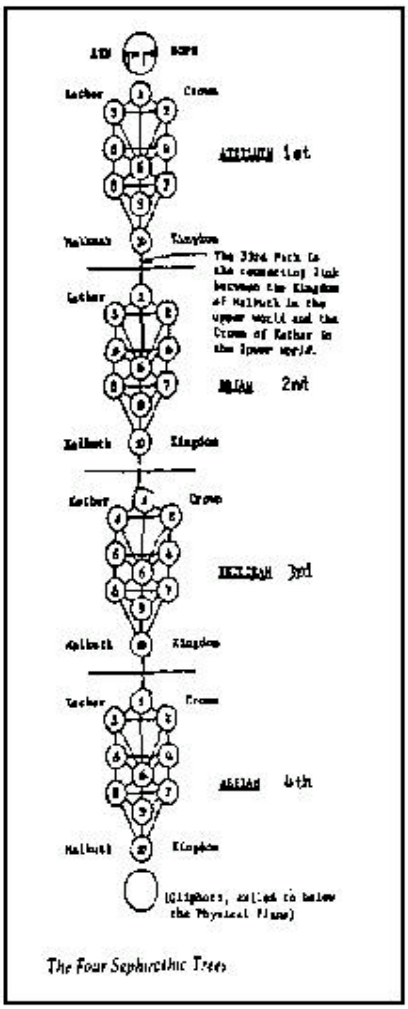
You have come to know the Tree of Life as a figure composed of 10 Globes or Spheres. This figure is known as The Basic Tree. On the diagram of the Tree in Liber 10, which illustrated the Three Worlds of Martinism and the Four Worlds of the Qabalah, the Three Martinist Divisions and the Four Groups forming the Qabalah, were shown. Please refer to that diagram now and refresh your memory. The names of the Four Qabalistic Worlds or Realms were indicated, their names being: Atziluth, Briah, Ietzirah and Assiah. Now, apart from the Basic Tree, some of you will have suspected that there are, in fact, Four Trees ... one in every Realm. Let us examine this now.

You were told that the Am Soph concentrated a center of Light "...And God said: Let there be Light' ... that Light was Kether from which the other nine Sephiroth, in turn, were formed. It must ever be remembered that the Sephiroth are NOT 10 separate Sephiroth ... EACH ONE IS A LOWER MANIFESTATION OF THE FIRST.

Kether is like a fountain which fills its basin and the overflow therefrom feeds another fountain (Chokmah) which in turn fills its basin and the overflow feeds another fountain (Binah) ... and so on down to the tenth Sephirah. This was the formation of the First World: Atziluth.

Atziluth. however, gave birth to three other worlds: Briah.. Ietzirah & Assiah. each containing a repetition of the Sephiroth, but in a descending scale of brightness and density ... thus the light from the original gradually poured forth so that they became four great world chains, or four symbolical Trees.

In our laboratory we perform a simple experiment for the students, which dramatically illustrates this principle. You too can do it at home: Fill a Pyrex glass with boiling water and dissolve in it as much sugar or salt as it will take. Then watch. You will notice the liquid is transparent and formless, however, a change will soon occur: suddenly, out of nothing, crystals, solid, visible and of definite form begin to appear! This very dramatic experiment graphically illustrates in an analogous way how a change in the Ain Soph occurs, and how from the invisible and formless, visible things appear.



The Four Sephirothic Trees

We will now briefly describe the Four Worlds.

ATZILUTH is the First World, Boundless World of Emanations; the Axchetypal World; the Divine World. It is the World in which God manifests Himself in the form of Archetypes. Atziluth is the only World upon which God acts directly; the others are acted upon by His emissaries, i.e. those who carry out the Divine Will. (In BRIAH these are the Archangels; in IETZIRAH they are the Angelic Hosts; in ASSIAH it is the zodiac — the planets and the elements.) In ATZILUTH the Ten Holy Sephiroth manifest through the Ten Holy Names of God, as follows:

1: Ehieh	6: Jehovah Eloah Va-Daath
2: Jehovah, or Yali	7: Jehovah Tzabaoth
3: Jehovah Elohim	8: Elohim Tzabaoth
4: El	9: Shaddai El Chai
5: Elohim Gebor	10: Adonai Malekh, or Adonai ha Aretz

The second World, BRIAR, is the World of Creation, the Archangelic World. Archangel Metatron is said to be the visible manifestation of the Deity. He governs the visible world, preserves the unity, harmony and the revolutions of all the spheres, planets and heavenly bodies and is the Captain of the Angelic Hosts who people the third world ... Ietzirah. Duality begins in Briah. BRIAH is the immediate emanation from Atziluth whose 10 Sephiroth are reflected herein and are, consequently, more limited ... however they are still of the purest nature and without any admixture of matter. In this Briatic World the Divine Emanations are held to manifest through the Ten Mighty Archangels, whose names play an important part in ceremonial magic. However, as duality begins in the Briatic World, it will be here that one will find the "other side" to the Archangels ... the Archdemons.

ARCHANGELS in Briah	ARCHDEMONS in the Qlipoth
1: Metatron	Satan
2: Ratziel	Beelzebub
3: Tzaphqiel	Lucifuge
4: Tzadqiel	Ashtaroth
5: Khamael	Asmodeus
6: Raphael	Bellphegor
7: Haniel	Baal
8: Michael	Adram Melech
9: Gabriel	Lilith
10: Sandalphon	Nahema

The Third World is IETZIRAH, the World of Formation and of Angels. It proceeds from Briah and though less refined in substance it is still without dense physical matter … however, Ietzirah corresponds in a way with the Biblical "Days of Creation," we can describe it as a "material" world … but it is not yet a or the "physical" world.

The Ietziratic World is the Angelic World where those intelligent and incorporeal beings reside who are wrapped in a luminous garment, and who assume a form when they appear to man. In this Ietziratic World the Divine Emanations manifest … not through a single Bering, but through different types of Beings, which are called the Angelic Hosts or Choirs.

Here are some correspondences:

SEPHIROTH	NAMES OF GOD	ORDERS OF ANCELS	ASTROLOGICAL	INCENSE	ANATOMICAL
	Ehieh (I AM)	Chajoth	First Swirlings	Ambergris	Head
2: Wisdom	Jah (Jehovah)	Auphanim	Zodiac	Musk	Left Cheek
3: Understanding	Elohim	Thrones	Saturn	Myrrh	Right Cheek
4: Mercy	El	Chasmalim	Jupiter	Cedar	Left Shoulder
5: Justice	Elohim Gebor	Seraphim	Mars	Tobacco	Right Shoulder
6: Beauty	T.A.V.D.	Metachim	Sun	Olibanum	Heart
7: Victory	T.T.	Tarshishim	Venus	Benzoin	Left Hip
8: Splendor	Elohim Tzabaoth	Beni Elohim	Mercury	Storax	Right Hip
9: Foundation	Shaddai El Chai	Ashim	Moon	Jasmine	Genitals
10: Kingdom	A.M. or A. h. A.		Earth	Dittany of Crete	Feet

T.A.V.D. = Tetragrammaton Aloah Va Daath
T.T. = Tetragrammation Tzabaoth
A.M. or A. h. A. = Adonai Malekh or Adonai ha Aretz

The whole question of Angels, archons and elementals ... is a very vexed and important one in practical esoteric work. Christian thought tolerates, with an effort, the idea of Archangels but the ministering spirits and the messengers who are the heavenly builders and flames of fire is alien to reformed Christian theology. In general, Christian theologians hold that God alone, and in an instant ... made the heavens and the earth, in other words He was both the Great Architect and also the brick-layer. Not so, say the Initiates, who hold that there are legions of spiritual beings who are the agents of God's will and who are His workers and it is through these that He works.

Let us have an analogous example: A Field Marshall does not run his army directly. He is assisted by Generals, who have under them Colonels, and under them Majors, then Captains, and so on down to Sergeants and finally to the rank and file, the foot soldiers. The Field Marshall does not give orders directly to the foot soldiers ... they come down through the hierarchy. Similarly, the Ain Sof, the Absolute, does not concern Himself directly with the mundane creation. Each Sephirah is a "god" and has charge of the activities of his particular sphere where he is assigned. Let us not forget, however, that each 'god" or demigod, is in fact an Emanation, an Aspect, an Integral Part of the Absolute God. And so too is the creation for all things are made by Him and truly and actually in Him everything lives, and moves, and has its being.

The fourth World is ASSIAH. Each of the preceding Worlds diminish in quality as the original emanation, which began their formation becomes grosser. Eventually, the ensuing impurities of its passage gather to form the fourth World, which is the World of Matter, the Physical Plane.

It will be seen then, from what we have learned so far, that God as He is, in His entirety, is hidden behind the Negative Veils of Existence, and He is called the No-thing, because nothing can be known about Him, since He is beyond human comprehension. However He is shadowed forth through His Emanations, the Sephiroth. Each Sephirah will therefore consist firstly: of a special aspect of Deity; secondly, of an Archangelic consciousness; thirdly, of an angelic host, devas or archons, principalities or powers ... according to the terminology used and fourthly, of its mundane chakra. We now have a fairly good picture of the Qabalistic conception of God and creation. We will advance our knowledge further as we proceed though the Works.

MARTINIST LECTURE #55

Brothers & Sisters:

Our V::: M::: Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin once wrote that he considered it the obligation of the mystic teacher "to lead the mind of man by a natural path to the supernatural things which of right belong to him, but of which he has lost all conception, in part by his degradation, in part by the frequently false instruction of his teachers." It already may have become evident to you that our Order is fulfilling that obligation, first by helping the probationer, or Associate, to divest himself of the false notions of the profane world; and, secondly, by teaching the awakened Man of Desire the technique by which he may advance most surely "to those supernatural things which of right belong to him."

Because man was pure before the "Fall"... and became impure or mixed with matter because of it ... Martinists make PURITY a sacred ideal. They do this because of their confidence in the truth of the words of the Master Reconciler: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see (that is, know) God." To the Martinist, primordial purity is synonymous with divine Oneness. Having that for his goal, his constant concern is the surest way of reaching it.

Associates are admonished to make a sacrifice of the sensuous nature. In the triadic pattern of Martinism, the Associate Degree might be called the Degree of Sacrifice, or subjugation of the carnal self. This is not to be understood as the rooting out or the annihilation of the desires of the body. It is rather to be taken to mean their subordination ... so that the needs of the soul nature and Higher Self will be freed from hindrances and frustrations.

Man is a composite and extraordinary Being. In him is found both the angelic and the animal, or demonic, nature. The spiritual training we receive through the sublime teachings of Martinism calls for the subjugation of the animal man and the setting free of the angelic being.

Thus, as the ancient masters said: "Liberty of the Soul and Mind is gained by fighting against the passions, thine earthly cravings; by this thou mayest hope to conquer that freedom so praised, so exalted, so truly divine."

Although suffering is an inescapable part of higher spiritual development, suffering is not an end in itself and God is not reached solely through it. ANY SUCH TEACHING IS A DISTORTION OR INVERSION OF MYSTICAL TRUTH. The path of asceticism ends only in dryness of heart and body.

Every Man of Desire must learn to overcome temptation, however, in order to win the silent inner struggle with the adversary of the senses. It is a sad mistake to accept as true the thought that "the greater the sinner, the greater the saint," for ills a distortion of right counsel to believe that in order to rise to the highest, one must sink to the lowest. Such a view falsifies and exaggerates the fact of temptation.

Plato, one of our ancient predecessors, declared the soul to be in chains while in the body; but that neither leads us as Martinists to despise the body, nor particularly to revere it. Our physical envelope is a marvelous example of natural and spiritual law; yet it is a severe testing ground for the spiritual being within.

Martinists are supremely concerned with the release of the higher powers and faculties of the inner spiritual man, for, in the highest consideration, the spiritual alone is real, immortal, and capable of divine reintegration. The ascent of the famed Middle Path embraces the traditional Eightfold Way of Purity ... that of Pure Belief, Pure Will, Pure Word, Pure Behavior, Pure Means of Living, Pure Aspiration, Pure Memory and Pure Meditation. Martinists interpret these precepts as follows:

THE EIGHTFOLD PATH

PURE BELIEF I rest all my belief upon the One Reality of God. Omneity is the capstone of the symbolic pyramid of the Universe. All things, including myself, have their origin and being in Him.

PURE WILL I seek constantly to identify my will with the Divine that I may undo man's first error and make certain of my own reintegration.

PURE WORD I order the words of my mouth that they may be acceptable in Thy presence, O Lord God of all Creation. If it be Thy will, I may one day speak Thy Sacred and Incommunicable Name!

PURE BEHAVIOR I strive that the actions of my life may conform to the words of my mouth and heart so that charity, mercy, kindness and forgiveness may abide in my dwelling and may go forth with me into the affairs of the day.

PURE MEANS OF LIVING I do not defile my spiritual temple by doubtful morality. Pure and honest in heart, I aspire to treat others as I would have them treat me.

PURE APPLICATION I apply myself with unceasing zeal to the higher truths of life. I dwell heart and soul upon the sublime tradition of the Ancient Wisdom.

PURE MEMORY Although life comes to me in all its phases, I permit only the loving, constructive and divine to echo through the vault of memory.

PURE MEDITATION Never a day passes but I pause to contemplate and adore the inimitable perfections of God's living universes Meditation upon the love and wisdom of God are ever among the chief joys of my life.

Brethren are admonished to affirm these precepts daily ... and live by them.

With the calming of the passions comes a gradual unsealing of the spiritual faculties and the unfettering of the native powers of the soul. The Inner Self, with its transcendent faculties and the body, with its senses and appetites ... are like opposite ends of a balanced scale. Constant or excessive indulgence of the sensual nature weights the scale in favor of the body, and diminishes the expression of the higher attributes of the Self upon this plane. Conversely, a strict regulation of the passions and appetites in harmony with the loftier impulses of the soul weights the scale in favor of the evolving Inner Self.

The ancient regimens of fasting and celibacy were means of disciplining the body and its imperious senses and establishing the supremacy of the angelic nature. Although the Martinist Order maintains no monasteries and by no means encourages its members to become anchorites. it does suggest that each Man of Desire adopt some means of reminding the body and its powerful physical sensorium of the supremacy of the soul.

> Regular periods of abstinence from sensual indulgence are helpful, — for example: fasting one day each month. As the soul or angelic nature asserts itself more and more, habitually conforming the physical body to its loftier needs, and as we practice the maxims of the EIGHTFOLD WAY OF PURITY — a feeling of calmness, peace and spiritual imperturbability surrounds the personality. This is the SURE WAY to illumination, to the divine moment when the veil of obscurity is drawn aside and the initiate participates in the Consciousness of God.

Martinism displays these characteristic signs of attainment:

(1) The Sacrifice of the Sensual Nature
(2) The Rise of Desire
(3) The Marriage of the Lamb

Having established a spiritual mastery over the world of sense and appetite, the Rise of Desire in the Initiate is a natural consequence. Desire for what? Obviously not for earthly things and pleasures as commonly understood by the profane. Desire for communion with the In visible World and its Master Souls and Angelic Beings — for the noblest ideas and philosophy that men can impart to one another — for the mystical experience of the Divine and for ecstatic absorption into the consciousness of Omneity, the absolute!

Of the Marriage of the Lamb ... very little can be told at this time.

At the conclusion of the Superior Degree, as fully instructed Superieurs lnconnus, most of you will have experienced that heavenly union or marriage, wherein your aspiring Selfhood will become one, if only momentarily, with the Being of the Son and of the Father!

Thus, Brothers & Sisters, you see stretching before you the ancient equilibrating path leading to mastership and profound spiritual unfoldment. As you resolutely ascend the difficult, perilous, yet joyful way, there will come a blessed day when transformed into the New Man, you will forever be a regenerated and reintegrated being.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

MARTINIST LECTURE #56

My Brothers & Sisters:

In preceding lectures certain laws regarding man's origin, his first splendor, his will, and the condition in which we now finds himself, have been given. Certain errors, too, we found to be prevalent in the daily opinion and conduct of mankind in general.

One of the greatest of these is the failure to distinguish between inanimate matter and the living organism. Why is this? We shall give three misconceptions, which have resulted in this great error: The first is the error made by man in his apparent perception of evil. Let us give the definition of evil: "Evil is that which is opposed to the progress of each individual." (NOTE TO LODGE MASTER: REPEAT THIS DEFINITION AND PAUSE A MOMENT FOR THE BRETHREN TO THINK ABOUT IT.)

Opposition to the progress of mankind makes man unhappy. If he is unhappy, then he must be guilty of not making use of the privilege of his free will ... because evil is nonexistent when confronted with good. The progress of every being on earth, however, is subject to opposition as a result of its own evolution.

As far as actual practice is concerned, there is really a double action working upon man and nature. We can say, in fact, that in effect, there are two opposing forces ... if we remember at all times that of these two only one can be real.

The second force, or apparent evil, can have neither weight, number, nor measurement since these conceptions belong to the very essence of good. Man will make much progress, therefore, if he will recognize at the start the GREAT DUAL LAW of positive & negative forces at work in nature or corporeal creation. We must recognize this dual law in all temporal things, for this realization will be the means of unraveling it within ourselves. Since the beginning of man's consciousness, there has always existed this law of dual action. It is necessary, however, that man understand and subsequently overcome his belief in the illusory power of negativeness, or evil.

As a result of man's unfortunate belief in the power of negativeness, there has arisen a second error in this Forest of Errors: In his struggle for progress ... man has made of material nature an independent force. Although man is able to see that nature is living and active, he considers it separated from the main trunk of creation. Ultimately, he sees in it only an isolated being whose voice is lost in the distance. Therefore, the laws and truths which nature should reveal are looked upon as oppositions rather than helpful lessons.

Since man has been bound to the material regions of the earth, he has tried to discover the laws and forces extended into matter from the invisible realm; but he has been confused by the belief that such invisible guidance should be as tangible as matter itself. He has wanted to submit both matter and the directive force back of it ... to physical measurements, but such a corporeal gage can only be given to space and mass.

If mankind were correct in believing that that invisible, directive force was the same as matter – it would mean that some of the spiritual emanations of Omneity would be within the bounds of limited and inaccurate sense faculties. This is directly opposed to what we understand about both man and the great spiritual forces of the universe – for we believe that previously man was able to perceive such forces. The solution to the two problems which have arisen as a result of our misunderstanding is that we should all know that – the in visible forces back of nature are superior to, and control matter. Therefore, they cannot be of the same quality. MATTER COULD NOT EXIST WITHOUT THESE PROTECTIVE FORCES — yet these forces can exist without matter. It is the continual rhythmic recurrence of such forces that causes the regular renewal of corporeal beings.

This brings us to a third error or general misconception of mankind: Having seen bodies of animals and other living creatures decompose and disappear from sight, and having seen as well those bodies being replaced by new ones ... man has concluded that the new bodies were formed from the debris of the old ones ... the different parts being again recycled in the composition of new forms. From this, man concludes that the particles of matter are going through a continual cycle of life and death. This is not true.

Matter, (that is, its forms and expressions,) is destructable and is not eternal. Only the invisible cohesive forces of Omneity WHICH ARE THE ESSENCE OF MATTER are eternal and indestructible.

One must be careful not to confuse matter with the divine energy that supports it. Matter is only the outward, apparent, sensible, or tangible expression of the innate cohesive forces of Omneity.

As far as Omneity is concerned, there can be no end to any living creature. However, the law of duality ... causes the end we call death. It applies even to vegetables, which proceed from seed to full bloom. Opposition to its progress ultimately brings it to a conclusion.

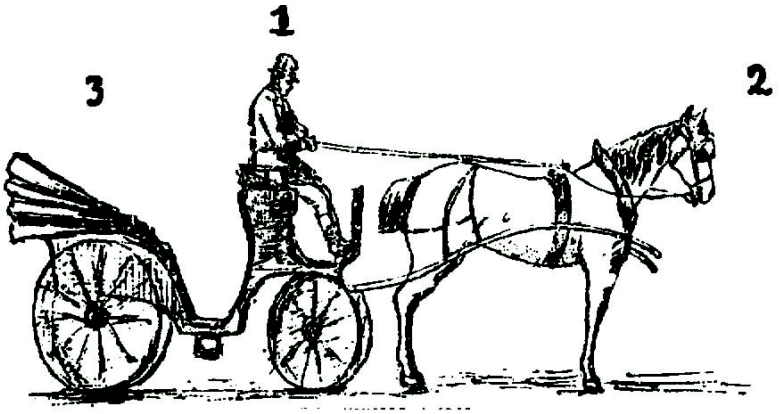
Therefore, we can see that bodies of animate things are made up of matter ... which is continually being reinforced by cohesive energy. Matter is unable to retain this force under the continual stress and strain of the negative aspects of nature ... so death occurs.

DEATH RESULTS FROM THE CESSATION OF THE ACTIVITY OF THE COHESIVE FORCES OF OMNEITY. The forms (and shapes) disintegrate and decompose simply because the forces, having retired, abandon matter to its own chaotic conditions. These conditions, being negative, are opposed to one another ... they divide and destroy themselves before our very eyes.

We can conclude, then, that death is a simple phenomenon, which concerns us all. A wise man has the moral stability to contemplate his own death. Those who have comprehended the errors of this world and have been occupied in life with light and truth are sometimes aware of their approaching end because spirit is the universal torch of matter.

We have said that man is composed of the physical body, the plastic envelope, and the ame. Using the analogy of the horse drawn carriage and its driver, we say the driver is the ame, or Self; the carriage is the physical body; and the horse corresponds to the plastic envelope. If the carriage breaks down, the driver can mount the horse and ride on. That is what occurs at death. The rider travels on until the horse becomes old weary, and worn out. If the driver has not reached his destination he must obtain a new horse and carriage.

In the materialistic conception man pulls the horse, the horse is seated in the carriage, and the carriage directs the actions of the horse as to the way it should go. The same analogy may be applied to other misconceptions in regard to death.



The wise man, convinced that this world is only a reflection of the unseen world, rejoices rather than grieves when the time comes to renew his acquaintance with his Original Estate, for he knows that originals are preferable to reflections.

DISCUSSION QUESTIONS

- Is matter indestructible?
- What is matter?
- What causes the end we call death?
- Why is matter not able to retain the cohesive forces indefinitely? What happens when the cohesive forces withdraw from matter?

RE-CAP

We strongly recommend that students obtain Martinist Tradition Vol. V from the ICES Supply Dept. This book expands upon the topic of Mystical Anatomy introduced in this lecture.

There operates in this material world a positive and negative interaction known in Martinist teachings as the great dual law. This apparent action is due to the manifestation of good and the effects of the absence of good ... which is evil. Evil, by its nonentity, works in opposition to the progression of man.

The general erroneous opinion held by mankind is that nature exists by and of itself ... independent of all creation.

If man guides his actions in life so that he can circumvent opposition to his progress ... he will master life and comprehend so-called death.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

MARTINIST LECTURE #57

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

In order for us to have a more complete understanding of the difficulties with which man is beset in this world, it is befitting that we should have a greater understanding of the world of nature, of man, and, eventually, of the spiritual spheres. As our lectures continue, you will notice they expand and elaborate general principles and statements regarding God, nature, and man. After having taken a cursory examination of nature, let us examine it in more detail, step by step.

We are told that we are on a planet called earth, spherical in shape, whirling upon itself in space. Many more or less organized living things, together with us, form the different steps, which separate us from the minerals. In the heavens beyond the earth, roll other opaque bodies that are lighted only by reflections of the sun. These numerous planets and their satellites together with the sun ... from what is known as our solar system. There are an infinity of solar systems comparable to our own, in the universe.

In the last lecture, I spoke of the positive & negative actions which man is forced to acknowledge. We see specific instances of this positive and negative action trying to destroy everything we do with effort. Man builds ... and if he ceases for one moment to keep what he has built in repair ... forces that seem invincible start to take all these things back by destroying them. Moths eat our clothes. Rust eats up iron. Weeds spoil our cultivated fields.

- We have spoken of the mineral, vegetable and animal kingdoms. These divisions and their existence constitute what is known as the Elementary World of our solar system. This is the first division for consideration.

- The earth, the other planets and satellites constitute what the ancient mystics called the World of Orbs, the second division of our solar system.

- There is yet a third division of the solar system, which is more or less invisible ... this division was known of old as the Empyrean World.

Let us consider in a little more detail, the Elementary World. Minerals are substances having a unique property of growth: they increase in volume without changing their position. Thus, the mineral is a little earth-sun, receiving rays and reflecting them and, at the same time, increasing and becoming larger itself.

The vegetable kingdom shoots upward to the light without changing its position but growing in a vertical direction. Vegetables have their heads, or mouths, formed by roots in the ground. The main body of the vegetable is found above the ground. The head sinks more and more into the ground as the branches and the limbs give forth flowers and seed.

This point is important to notice because sometimes man thinks he can grow only one-way upwards. On our planet, everything must grow in both directions. In other words, every time man performs an act upon the earth, it either uplifts him or degrades him. In time, he may become so deeply rooted that fear and suffering will only break or uproot him with great difficulty.

Man belongs to the animal kingdom. The outstanding characteristic of animals is the ability to move about wherever they wish. In addition, man possesses within himself a living light, or mystical fire ... and a "conscience" ... which is not found elsewhere in the animal kingdom. By this light, he is able to function intellectually and spiritually.

Mystical anatomists usually divide the body into three parts: the head, the chest, and the abdomen. We note here the number 3. It is sufficient to say, at this time, that nature herself directed this division. The first general divisions are representative of more detailed subdivisions and analogies.

The abdomen contains the stomach, intestines and liver. To the ancient alchemists, the abdomen corresponds to alchemical salt, symbolizing the waters of creation. The Qabalist used the Hebrew letter Mem to represent the same thing. The chest contains the heart and lungs and is, therefore, the seat of the circulatory and respiratory systems. The alchemists represented this by alchemical mercury the universal vital essence, and the Qabalists represented it by the Hebrew letter Aleph. The head of man is the source of the primitive substance of the nervous system and the seat of the intellect. To the alchemists it corresponded to alchemical sulphur, the divine fire. The Qabalists referred to it by the use of the Hebrew letter Shin.

In the embryonic state, the human body is made up of three coats, or sheaths. First appears the external one, which forms the brain, the spinal marrow, the nerves, the skin, the hair, the enamel of the teeth, the nails, and parts of the eyes. This is known scientifically as the ectoderm or ectoblast. After this sheath, an inner one appears from which develops the digestive apparatus that is, the liver, the stomach, pancreas, etc. This inner skin is called the endoderm. When the internal skin has been formed, an intermediary sheath appears, which is called the mesoderm. From the middle sheath develop the organs of circulation, the kidneys, the muscles, the skeleton, the dentine of the teeth, etc. In addition to this threefold formation, there is also a threefold circulation.

From the occult point of view, the abdomen, chest, and head are considered the centers of the lymph, the blood and the nervous force – each more or less a fluid, attached respectively to each of these three centers.

To each of these three divisions of the body are attached limbs: to the abdomen, the two legs: to the chest, the two arms; and to the head, the cephalic limbs, or upper and lower jaws. Observe the diagram:

DIVISIONS OF MAN	1	2	3
General	Head	Chest	Abdomen
Scientific	Ectoderm	Mesoderm	Endoderm
Formative	Nerves	Lungs & Heart	Bowels, Digestive Apparatus, etc.
Circulatory	Nervous force	Blood	Lymph
Limbs	Cephalic limbs	Two arms	Two legs
Mystical	Will	Life	Flesh
Alchemical	Sulphur	Mercury	Salt
Qabalistic	Shin	Aleph	Mem
Elemental	Fire	Air	Water

SUMMARY

The threefold conception of the universe, or our solar system, is classified by Martinists into the Elementary World (mineral, vegetable, animal); the World of Orbs (heavenly bodies); and the Empyrean World (the infinity beyond the World of Orbs).

The anatomical conception of man is also threefold, consisting of the head, the chest and the abdomen.

This conception is in accord with both Alchemy and the Qabalah:

Alchemy represents the divisions by sulphur, mercury, and salt.

The Qabalah represents them by the three Mother letters, Shin, Aleph, & Mem.

MARTINIST LECTURE #58

My Brothers & Sisters:

Martinism traditionally draws attention to the Number 8, which was the sacred Ogdoad of the Gnostics, the number of Christhood and Divine Harmony. Mention has been made of the Eightfold Path, an Eastern doctrine expounded by the Buddha 2,500 years ago and still finding a place in Western thought in one form or another. Martinists are admonished to use the precepts of the EIGHTFOLD PATH as a daily standard. The 8-fold Path is more generally called the "Aryan Eightfold Path" since the 'elect' of the Buddha's day were known as the 'Arya' ... probably related to the first sign of the zodiac (Aries) as the then prevailing age. The root of this word is still found in "Iran", the alternative name of Persia.

> Whenever and wherever mankind fails to be in harmony with Omneity ... either as God immanent, or as God manifested in nature ... some state of suffering supervenes. This results from the Fall of Man from his First Estate. Originally, an un-selfconscious state left no conditions for disharmony. Now, however, in a state of consciousness which is conditioned by duration in time and motion in space, Man can only take the Path of Return by becoming reunited with his Ame ... or his 'Principle' ... as Saint-Martin expressed it.

The process of reintegration as we Martinists call it. is both a practice and an understanding. The practice includes the cultivation of Single Awareness as instructed earlier ... which is the first step on the path towards DIVINE AWARENESS.

> While we are doing this, we are given practical guidance from those who have trodden the Path ahead of us in the form of the Eightfold Path. By daily following this blue-print for successful living you climb firmly and steadily out of the Forest of Errors.

(The Lodge Master calls for a period of meditation.)

Brothers & Sisters we must not forget that the purpose of what we call the Great Work of our Order… is the spiritualization of humanity... individually and collectively, and the re-establishment of the divinity of mankind. Our thoughts continually find their center in Omneity and our concern is that Man's return to It may be speedily accomplished. Throughout time, mysticism has expressed man's unquenchable desire for identification with Omneity. That desire is being realized through our Martinist activity, for here we are learning through personal experience to know the power, reality and love of the Divine.

It must be clear that when we speak of the end of time and final things, we mean that time when the whole of humanity will have been perfected, when all will have found their way back to the throne of Omneity. Such a process cannot be thought of as being accomplished in time as it is ordinarily conceived. In other words, no date can be marked on a calendar as the day when the law of reintegration will have been worked out. We know only that certain results must be achieved in order that such a state can be reached.

Omneity created the world in which space and time exist for a purpose ... a part of that purpose being that humanity should have an environment were certain lessons might be learned and a type of punishment and spiritual privation suffered.

Through the long process of the evolution of the selfhood, of the soul personality, mankind is learning these lessons and is drawing ever nearer to its First Spiritual Principle.

Because such lessons cannot be learned in one lifetime and because universal justice and equity must be manifest, men are reborn into successive earthly lives, preserving the identity of their spiritual beings so the wisdom of one life may be added to the experience of ensuing ones. Ultimately, through this process of learning and experiencing, all humanity will have attained mastership over the conditions an environment of this earth, this material dwelling place. When this has been accomplished, the purpose of the material world will have been served. We can, readily and logically conceive that at a future time the Creator will in-draw to Himself the creation which He manifested eons ago. As our V::: M::: Martinez Pasquales said: "In the end, all will come back to the beginning."

THE MARTINIST DOCTRINE

Let us consider in a little greater detail the circumstances called the Fall of Man. Let us think for a moment in terms of the BEGINNING.

Omneity, as the Creator, existed before any created thing, before the world of nature, man, plant, or animal. In the immensity of Its thought and power, Omneity encompassed every possibility. It existed without limitation, want, hindrance, or insufficiency. In the divine Immensity, in the bosom of the Creator, existed the potentiality of an infinitude of beings, not generally unlike ourselves. These were the first created beings. At the time of their emanation, they received laws of order and purpose appropriate to their natures … and a free will. The crime of the first spiritual beings was that they turned their wills against Omneity: they willed in change the order and purpose of their beings and even desired to challenge the powers of theCreator by creating other beings themselves … a thing that was absolutely forbidden to them. Omneity, it Its perfect knowledge, noting their crime and mis-use of will … punished them by absenting Itself from them and by thrusting them into the prison house of the material world. There is the intimation that the material world was emanated at that time for the express purpose of punishing these beings and teaching them humility, obedience, and harmonious cooperation.

We must note, that humanity was emanated as a second class, or goup, of spiritual beings known as MAN-GODS, who were to be rulers of nature, the material creation, and the first perverse beings.

In the words of Pasquales:

"God would not be the Father and Master of all things if he had not within Himself an inexhaustible source of beings that he amanated at will through his pure desire."

"It is by this infinite multitude of emanations of spiritual beings without Himself that he holds the name of CREATOR. His works form the divine creation … spiritual, temporal and animal."

Following his emanation, Adam, that is, COLLECTIVE MAN, ... (known in the Qabalah as Adam Kadmon) ... enjoyed enormous powers and privileges. He had free access to the center of the universe, to the divine thoughts, and his being was clothed in a spiritual form of glory --- not subject to the ravages of time or the limitations of Space.

One of the duties of Adam was to rule over the first perverse beings and see that their proper mid necessary lesson was learned. However, the chief, or prince, of these beings enticed Adam (Collective Man), suggesting that be too challenge the immutable and absolute power of the Creator. Filled with pride and willfulness... Adam succumbed to these blandishments and temptations ... and attempted spiritual operations beyond his ordained powers. He set his will against the immutable Will and decrees of Omneity ... and thus, as we say … "sinned."

As a result of this weakness, this inability to resist temptation, THIS MIS-USE OF HIS FREE WILL... Adam fell!!! His FALL meant that he no longer dwelt in the center of divine thoughts, in a body of spiritual form, clothed in glory. He was forced to exchange his glorious form ... for a material body, which is subject to the actions of time and space. Furthermore, he lost his enormous powers as MAN-GOD of nature and created beings ... and live in spiritual darkness, privation, pain sorrow, and misery.

The long story of mankind ... which is called the Adamic history … has been a ceaseless struggle to overcome the limitations and sufferings imposed by the Fall, to obtain reconciliation with the Creator, to recover the lost status as MAN-GOD, the favored and intimate one of the Eternal Power. From this sad condition stems the power of the word REINTEGRATION. The hopes and longings of the race are embodied in it. No one can ever find permanent rest and felicity until humanity, the collectivity of mankind, has completely regained the divine favor and obtained oneness, absorption, reintegration with the Creator of All….. Omneity.

THE DOOR IS ALWAYS OPEN

It has been said that no door in life ever closes but that another door opens, and it is up to us to open that door. Sometimes we feel when a certain door closes we shall never be happy again. An unhappy experience is not often thought of as a doorway to happiness. Certainly, a person in the throes of an unhappy love affair could hardly think of it as a blessing! Yet many persons can look back and see that this isn't true for them. Because of the good that has come from it, they are even able to think ... with gratitude ... of the experience that seemed so hard at the time.

Time alone is a great healer of heartaches, but we don't have to wait for time's slow healing. It is better to form attitudes of mind and heart that will protect and sustain us in time of need. The most essential attitude is one of trust in God, trust in the Divine process, confidence in the activity of the Infinite working in and through us at all times. He who made the heart surely knows its needs and is capable of filling them.

A girl I know was aware of this Truth. Unable to think of anything elaborate or poetic in a period of deep heartache, she would say over and over again, "God will not let me down; God will not let me down." And God did not let her down. Her faith kept the door of her heart open so that life could come in and flow through. And come it did, with blessings that superceded the ones that her heart was set upon. She had faith in the flow. She had trust in the process.

New blessings will always take the place of the ones we have hoped for if we will let them, for the richness of life, the abundance of life, the prodigal goodness of life is never exhausted. We can close our heart and mind to life but life never closes its door to us, and that's a marvelous thing to know. We may think that life has closed its doors because the person who has made us most conscious of life, and love, and joy of living, has chosen a way of life that doesn't include us. But the closed doors are an illusion created by our feeling of desolation.

It is sometimes difficult to understand the reasons for the changes that take place in the affections of men and women, but every action is an endeavor to satisfy some inner need of the soul. There may be an easier, better way, but a person can only act in accordance with his present understanding and ability. You must know that the needs of one person are never met at the cost of another's happiness. Your faith that somehow things work together for good (even though the good seems obscure) will help you to accept with courage and grace what seem to be heartbreaking changes. Even though the love and encouragement you seem to need have been withdrawn from you, you must never let your loss destroy your peace of mind. Instead, you must know that when one door closes, another always opens.

It happens to many of us that things are going along just fine, just the way we want them to go, and as we take each step on our smooth, unruffled path, we look down life's corridor and we see all the open doors ahead leading straight to our goal. It is a marvelous feeling. We are sure of ourselves, and feel a deep security because we know where we are going and how we are going to get there. And then "Bang!" The door just ahead of us closes, finally and firmly, and there appears to be no key, no device for opening that particular door again.

What do we do now? Well, some of us just stand there banging at the door, bruising our spirit as we rant and rave at our ill luck and dark fate. We cry out, 'Why? What have I done to deserve this? It's not fair!" And what do we get for all of our raving, our bewailing, our self-pity? Does the closed door suddenly open, and do all animate and inanimate things rush to our cause to make up for the inconvenience and worry we suffered? Certainly, any closed door never opens because we rave. It may open again in the natural course of things. Or, through prayer, or by investigations of ways and means, or particular needed effort, we may find a solution that proves to be a key to that door. But very often, doors close permanently. Accumulating circumstances, sudden happenings, accidents, death, or natural process often put blank walls where an open door once existed. And what do we do then — give up? Do we take the path of least resistance and declare that we must have meant to fail? No. We were meant to look for new doors to open. They are there always. The Creator of this wondrously complex Universe could not have so limited one of his creatures.

Milton's blindness shut a door but opened others to deeper sensitivity. Would Paradise Lost ever have been written otherwise? Lou Gehrig, (called America's best-loved ballplayer,) certainly saw all his open doors ahead clear and unobstructed, and then a mysterious paralysis struck him and a door was closed. Neither the most advanced medical knowledge nor the widespread sorrow of his fans could reopen the door. Did he give up? No, not even in the face of a very limited life span. Instead, he opened another door by taking a job in New York City as Parole Commissioner. With vast sympathy and astounding courage, his service to others not only helped him to walk with spirit upright through a new open door, but he was also privileged to help former convicts find new doors to better lives for themselves.

Mary Doyler was the contented wife of a well-to-do store executive. She was a busy mother, and her life door was opened wide to the well-marked corridor ahead. Then her husband became ill, and before he passed on, all the family resources had been spent. In a very short while, a physical condition developed that eventually left her voiceless. She tried working in a shop, but couldn't make enough to support herself and her three children. She found it necessary to look around for other doors and part of this looking around consisted in taking stock of herself: listing her experience, her capabilities, her talents. In this evaluation process, she recalled her interest and experience in speech therapy; she had taught remedial reading and speech years before. But now she had no voice at all. Was this another door closed for her? Intuitively, she felt that the speech therapy might be a glimmer of light from a possible door opening. So she consulted her surgeon and learned of a special method of esophageal speech. She learned the method, and then got a job teaching others who had lost their voice boxes. As is so often the case, her new open door led to satisfied ways to open doors for others.

For everyone, there are always other doors. How do we find them? There are countless ways. Here are a few suggestions that might help. First of all, you can pray for guidance, giving in to what I call the Divine flow, knowing that it will be only good. Expect an answer. Second, you can turn away temporarily from your own private world. A seeing heart mirrors the need of others, and in serving, reveals new doors. Third, you can get outdoors. You can walk, or ride a bicycle, or take some form of exercise, or sit in the sunlight or the rain. And fourth, you can make a list of your talents, experiences, problems. Then list ways that come to mind (even the improbable ones) of how you may use what you have in order to find a way ahead. Do not force ... just let go and let God. TRUST THE PROCESS.

I would like to share with you a favorite poem of mine, written by Hazel Thomas Wright, entitled, "The Door Is Open":

"Be still and know whatever may betide,
No door is closed but that another opens wide:
A door that opens to a boundless view,
Of blessings rich in promise, vital, new,
Blessings more wonderful than you have ever known;
Dare to step through the door and claim your own,
Keep clear your inner vision, thus to see,
The good awaiting you, and constant be;
Face each new venture with a joyful song,
Lift up your head and heart, be valiant, strong;
With God as your protector, friend, and guide,
No door is closed but that another opens wide."

In countless ways and places, life opens its doors to us. Our part is to enter in. We are travelers toward new horizons and ever-increasing good. And the person we are to become is much greater than the person we would have been if we had not had the experience that made us ask and seek and knock at the new doors of life.

HOW TO DEVELOP YOUR ESP

RELAXATION AND ESP

If there is a 'key' to psychic development, it is relaxation. There are a number of reasons why this is so:

1. A relaxed body cannot contain a destructive emotion. This means it is impossible to relax and worry at the same time (for this reason alone the ability to become perfectly relaxed at will is a most valuable asset). As we shall see, control over the emotions is of paramount importance when it comes to sending and receiving information psychically.

2. When the body is at rest, the field of consciousness expands, and the vital energies are available to the mind. Energy that would otherwise be used by the body can be 'stepped up' and redirected to the higher faculties. The power of thought that is, the power available for mental and psychic functioning — is greatly increased when the state of total relaxation is achieved.

3. With controlled, deep relaxation, thoughts become crystal clear, and it is possible to hold mental images for long periods. Clarity of thought is essential to the control of the psychic process, and in the area of telepathy the advantage of being able to hold onto thought-images will be obvious. If you are to 'see' the thoughts of others, it will help if you are first able to see your own thoughts clearly. The word "clairvoyance" actually means 'clear vision', and it is just as important - perhaps even more important - to be able to see inwards as it is to see outwards.

4. You have often heard it said that a blind man develops a 'sixth sense' to compensate for his lack of sight. There is some truth in this. When one sense is 'switched off,' the others tend to become sharper, more acute. This is the reason why people close their eyes when listening for some delicate sound, or when trying to remember something. The available energy is redistributed when the senses are switched off, and the higher faculties come into play. Paradoxically, the unused or resting senses also become more acute.

5. Total relaxation brings increased mind control, and it is an important part of psychic training to be able to produce specific mental states (or specific brain rhythms) at will.

6. When the mind is free from the necessity to monitor and regulate the workings of the body (vital functions will not be affected by even the deepest relaxation), and when it is rid of the 'noise' or interference from the surface mind, it can pick up and identify impressions of the most fleeting or subtle nature just as it is possible to hear the slightest whisper when there is complete silence, so it is possible to detect minute psychic signals when the mind is calm and unruffled.

Perhaps you, like many people, regard the prospect of doing relaxation exercises tedious and unexciting. If so, I urge you to reconsider your ideas on the subject. Relaxation is not just a matter of 'not doing anything', it is a positive state which only a very few people ever experience, let alone learn how to produce at will.

Many people are convinced that they are able to relax completely. Almost invariably, they are mistaken. Mastering the art of perfect relaxation is the most important step you must take towards developing your psychic powers.

The following, simple technique, has been tried and tested over many years. Study it well, and practice it regularly. The best time to carry out relaxation exercises is when you are alert and refreshed, and not when you are feeling tired. If you do this exercise at night, in bed, you will probably fall asleep before you are halfway through it — which is good news if you happen to be an insomniac.

TENSION

Essentially, there are two kinds of tension - a fact that is seldom acknowledged in books dealing with the subject. Hold your index finger straight out in front of you. Now bend it, and keep it bent. The muscles of that finger are now tensed, which is to say electrical energy is being discharged into them, causing them to contract. This may be said to be 'benign' tension, since the nervous energy used is released in a controlled action.

Now straighten the finger again, and think about bending it. but don't — that is threaten to bend it. This readiness produces an electrical potential in the muscles of the finger, but, until you actually bend the finger, the potential will not be properly discharged. This can be compared to applying a car's brakes and accelerator simultaneously; you burn up a lot of fuel unnecessarily, you cause wear and tear to the 'engine', and you get nowhere fast. The constant presence of undischarged electrical energy in a group of muscles causes all kinds of chemical and organic imbalances that ultimately result in permanent damage to the system. This is destructive tension ... it poisons the body and interferes with the flow of vital energy.

Destructive tension becomes a habit that is difficult to break. Check yourself right now — are you tensing your shoulders? Your jaw? Your forehead'? A muscle should not be tensed unless it is working. Whenever you become aware of tension in a muscle or group of muscles, you should immediately tense that muscle even more than it is already. Accentuate the tension; 'go into it and by doing so you can isolate it and bring it under your conscious control ... then you can relax it.

Tension impedes the flow of psychic energy like a knot in a hose impedes the flow of water. You must begin to unblock all channels by learning to become AWARE of the presence of tension in your body. Check yourself as often as you remember to do so, and relax consciously.

Before you can learn how to relax fully, you must first learn to become aware of tension. Until you can recognize tension in a group of muscles, you cannot be sure when those muscles are in a relaxed state. For this reason, the position you adopt for the following relaxation exercise should not be comfortable. It is far easier to identify a relaxed muscle when physical pressure is applied. This is one of the reasons why the Indian fakir lies on a bed of nails to relax and meditate, rather than on a soft mattress. It is better, therefore, if you sit in a hard-backed chair, or lie on the floor to do the exercise, rather than in a comfortable armchair or couch.

If you have a friend to help you with this exercise, it's a good idea to get him or her to pinch various parts of your body — not too hard — when you feel you are fully relaxed. If there is still some tension in the area pinched, you will become conscious of it (it will probably hurt), and be able to correct it. If the area is properly relaxed you should be aware of a slight analgesic effect i.e. the pinch will be less painful than it would normally be. This is because a relaxed body has a much greater resistance to pain and injury (which is also why a drunkard who falls over a dozen times on his way home is far less likely to hurt himself or break any bones than a person who stumbles while sober).

TECHNIQUE FOR PERFECT RELAXATION

Carry out this exercise at a time and in a place where you will not be disturbed. The room should be warm and well-ventilated. Remember, your body's surface temperature will drop considerably during the exercise.

1. Lie on a hard surface (or, if you prefer, sit in a hard-backed chair).

   Lie quite still for several minutes, keeping your eyes open. The room should be dimly lit, but not in darkness. Keep your hands by your sides and your legs uncrossed. (Incidentally, you should always avoid clasping your hands or crossing your legs during psychic readings, as this interferes with the flow of psychic energy.)

   Now, imagine that you are beginning to 'set' like cement or a jelly. Imagine that you are capable of less and less movement until, finally, your body is completely motionless. Do not move a muscle. This may not be as easy as it sounds; the brain is lazy, particularly when it comes to any kind of sustained effort, and it will do its best to get you to shift your position - to scratch your nose (it will produce an itch), yawn, swallow, etc. You must resist the urge to do any of these things. Instead, you must remain absolutely still for a full five minutes. If you feel uncomfortable, this is all the better.

2. Close your eyes and do a mental tour of your body, starting at your toes and working up to the this stage, make any attempt to relax the various parts of your body; simply become aware of each group of muscles and make a mental note of how tensed or relaxed they feel. This tour of inspection should take about three minutes to complete.

3. Now, take a few deep breaths, in through your mouth and out through your nose, emptying your lungs completely each time. Then breathe normally again, through your nose.

4. Tense the toes of your left foot as tightly as possible, and hold the tension for ten seconds. Relax these muscles and immediately tense the toes of your right foot. Hold the tension for ten seconds then relax the muscles and immediately switch your attention to your left calf, tensing the muscles here for ten seconds ... let go and immediately tense the right calf muscles ... and so on with every part of the body, each time tensing the muscles for ten seconds then letting go and switching to a different group of muscles. You should complete this sequence by knitting your brow — hold, and relax. It is important that the switch of attention — and tension — is immediate.

5. At this stage you should attend to your breathing. Begin by simply listening to the sound of the air moving through your nostrils: feel the air filling and vacating your lungs. Gradually take longer and deeper breaths, and try to breathe without making any sound, smoothly, evenly and silently.

   Breathe into your 'tummy', or lower chest, at the beginning of each inhalation, filling your upper chest last. When you exhale, empty your upper chest first, then the lower chest. Try to do all this in one smooth movement. Be sure to exhale fully each time. It should take a couple of seconds longer to exhale than to inhale. If you breathe in to a count of eight, you should exhale to a count of ten.

6. Become aware of the force of gravity pulling your body downwards. Feel your own weight; feel the weight of your fingers, hands, arms, legs and head.

7. You have probably seen those Dracula movies where the Count is exposed to a lethal dose of daylight, whereupon his body begins to disintegrate before your very eyes, and within minutes there is nothing left of him but a pile of dust. You must now imagine that the same process of disintegration is happening to you. Visualize your body beginning to crumble. Feel your fingers, then your hands, then your arms turning to dust. Imagine, as vividly as you can, that your whole body is turning into a fine powder on the floor (or chair). If you have followed the preceding instructions properly you should have little trouble in imagining this; sometimes the 'turning to dust' sensation occurs spontaneously with the onset of deep relaxation.

8. You have become a pile of dust. Now, imagine that there is a light breeze and that it is gently blowing what is left of you away, scattering you in all directions ... until there is nothing remaining - but your consciousness.

9. When you are ready, give yourself the instruction, either mentally or aloud: 'Whenever I count from ten down to one and say the word Omega (or any other key word you want to use) three times, I will immediately become perfectly relaxed, as I am at this moment. Repeat this instruction several times.

10. To end the exercise, take a deep breath and stretch your body gently. Say aloud to yourself: 'At the count of three, I will open my eyes and be fully awake, alert and refreshed.' You can give yourself positive self-suggestions at this point for example: 'From now on my memory will improve' or, '...my concentration will get better' - or even, 'my psychic abilities will improve.

    'One two three'

    Open your eyes. Shrug your shoulders. Stretch your legs. Clench and unclench your hands a few times, then slowly stand up.

    After doing this exercise for the first time you will probably feel a bit stiff so do not make any sudden movements for a while, or you could pull a muscle but you should also feel extremely relaxed and refreshed (unless it is close to your bedtime anyway, in which case you should sleep like a top).

Before you carry out this relaxation technique. you must first memorize the instructions given: you will not he able to refer to them when you are halfway through the routine.

1. Remain motionless.
2. Mental tour, noting tension.
3. Deep breathes.
4. Tense and relax sequence.
5. Listen to and control your breathing.
6. Feel your weight.
7. "Turning to dust'.
8. Blown away...
9. Mental instructions and signal.
10. End on count of three.

If you carry out this exercise regularly, you will instill a conditioned reflex response to your signal, so that ultimately it will not be necessary to go through the whole routine: simply by counting from ten down to one and uttering the 'magic word', you immediately become totally relaxed and, consequently, highly receptive to psychic impressions.

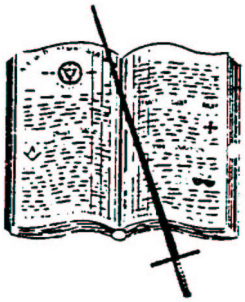
THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF MARTINIST STUDIES



Dear Brethren

Some time ago we mentioned that the volumes of the Martinist Tradition compliment the material in the Libers and give added information. We explained that through the M. T. it was possible to present important details, which could not as effectively be presented in the Libers, since it would require serialization.

In the last Liber and this one, the doctrine of Martinez Pasquales has been introduced. We will be examining these teachings. in detail on Plane III. Martinist Tradition volumes one, two and four contain a wealth of material on this profound subject, as well as historical information and an Elus-Cohen ritual.

With best wishes for your continued progress on The Path Sincerely in the Works,

LECTURE #59

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

This evening we will continue the instruction given by our V::: M::: Martinez Pasqualez which was, broadly speaking: Qabalistic. Let us consider in a little more detail his statement that creation is an emanation from Omneity of Its own virtues and aspects. This is pure mysticism ... one of the oldest and most substantial teachings of the secret schools of Egypt and the Orient. All things have emanated and are emanating from Omneity, the eternal and in exhaustive source. Furthermore, the point of emanation is conceived as the center of being, the center of the universe. Plato, an Initiate of Egypt and one of our noblest predecessors, described the universe as: "A central point, seat of the presiding Deity, enveloped by concentric circles of mingled light and darkness, and bounded by a wall of flame."

Without entering minutely into Martinist cosmology or the theory of the shape and organization of the cosmos, suffice it to say that the universe is undoubtedly circular or cellular in general formation, perhaps a combination of concentric spheres, with a positive central, divine point, or condition, known in mystical literature as the central fire, or throne, of Omneity.

It is also true that the source, from which emanates all that is, is pure spirit, undefiled by the gross forms and the lower octaves of vibration of matter. The farther we are from the point of emanation ... the grosser, denser, and heavier the condition and the lower the rate of vibration ... until at the outer part of the cosmic sphere, we encounter the region where the universal essence, or spirit energy ... is formed into matter.

Our conception of Omneity does not limit Its power or activity to any one part of the universe. Actually, the entire universe is only a breath of Omneity, an exhalation, we might say. In the fullness of time and in accordance with Its inscrutable wisdom and power, Omneity will complete the process through a figurative inhalation, or in-drawing to Its own Immensity ... of all that was created. These are enormous conceptions, Brothers & Sisters; yet they indicate the scale on which the drama of human history and individual aspiration is being worked out.

Our V::: M::: Martines Pasquales emphasized in considerable detail the role of the first perverse spiritual beings, who in turn plotted and gained the Fall of Man. He occasionally spoke of them as evil demons and perverse spirits. By turning their wills against the will of the Creator, they created or caused to manifest temporarily what we call evil. Speaking of this, Martines said:

(1) "It would be wrong to say that evil comes from the Creator, because all emanates from Him. From God has come all that is spiritual, good and perfect. No evil has ever ... or can ever ... emanate from Him."

(2) "Evil is nurtured by beings but not created. Creation belongs to the Creator, not to the creature. Evil thoughts are nurtured by evil beings just as good thoughts are nurtured by good beings. It is up to man to reject .me and accept the other, according to his free will, which gives him a. right to participate in the rewards of good works, but which also may cause him to remain far an indefinite time deprived of his spiritual rights."

(3) "Evil is born uniquely from the tendency and will of Omneity's creatures.

DISCUSSION / QUESTIONS
Keep to the point

As a result of the widespread acceptance of naturalistic doctrines of evolution, and the abuses of theology and Biblical teaching … the doctrine of the Fall of Man is in disrepute among the majority of modern thinkers. Evolution as taught in the public schools would indicate that modern man stands at the peak of personal and spiritual development, climaxing a long and arduous ascent from lesser beings, arriving at his present position after having come up through the various classifications of species, beginning as a unicellular creature existing in the primordial ooze. Within the frame of such thinking, any notion of the Fall of Humanity is absurd and fantastic, savoring of a peculiar theology.

Likewise: Biblical literalists ... with their rigid interpretation of each passage of the Bible, have done much harm to the 'true conception of the Fall of Man. If the choice is between accepting the account of the Fall in Genesis literally ... or disposing of the whole conception altogether ... the latter is usually the more appealing.

However, mysticism throws new light upon the problem and offers a method of reconciling the seeming contraries ... in keeping (let us note) with our technique of harmonizing the opposites!!

... As for the Bible: its truth is that of sublime mystical allegory and symbolism. PROPERLY INTERPRETED WITH THE CORRECT ESOTERIC KEYS, IT BECOMES A STOREHOUSE OF MYSTIC WISDOM AND PROPHETIC KNOWLEDGE.

The Fall of Man, properly conceived and broadly interpreted, … IS A FACT.

The traditional history of many peoples refers to a time when man lived in greater spiritual glory and closer attunement with Omneity. This tradition is older than histories, older than legends of the flood, and older than the existence of lost and mighty civilizations. Perhaps, too, our conceptions of sin are derived from faint recollections of our collective "original sin," ... that of turning our wills from the will of the Creator, conspiring to ignore His laws, setting our wills against His commands and precepts.

After the Fall, collective man undoubtedly was in a miserable condition. Considering the misery, lust, and greed of a large portion of humanity today, ... even after many epochs of supposed evolution ... the sense of man's privation and darkness immediately after the Fall seems real and appalling. It must have been like abruptly leaving an intensely lighted room and plunging into a black and impenetrable abyss that was devoid of light and all other sense perceptions.

Especially tormenting must have been the faint memories of divine felicities and privileges enjoyed in the former High Estate … the freedom of manifesting in a spiritual body unencumbered by the wants and demands of the flesh ... the ineffable peace and joy of participating intimately in divine thoughts, of basking, as it were, in the effulgence of Omneity's love and goodness. …

All of this, exchanged for a miserable, limiting physical body, which constantly warred against the inclinations of the subtler Self within ... and imposed chains upon the freedom of the soul! It is small wonder that the body came to be known as the prison house of this world, the abode of the devil, a demon whose design was to work eternally for man's destruction and obliteration.

In reconciling the above thoughts with the concept of evolution, it is evident that some progress has been made by collective man since the Fall. Many have evolved, perfected, and released their Selves to a considerable extent. Higher types of men & women do exist today. We are evolving upward, forward and onward ... to the goal, the only worthwhile and spiritual goal: that of reconciliation and reintegration with our First Spiritual Principle.

In the view of our V::: M:::, then, there were virtually two Falls: The first, by which the perverse beings found themselves separated from Omneity because of their attempted assumption ,of Its powers of creation; the second, when Adam, the MAN-GOD, was himself deceived by the perverse beings over whom he was placed as a guard.

In the "Treatise on the Reintegration of Beings," many passages are given to the activities of the perverse beings. A few paragraphs will be enlightening:

> "By insinuating a multitude of material passions which they know conform to the weakness of material and spiritual senses, the demonic beings stir up in the minors (i.e. human beings) actions opposed to one another, thus keeping them in confusion.
> "This is why among material men we do not find two thoughts, two actions, or two operations that are in harmony. The persistency of the demons in sowing dissention among men has resulted in giving them inordinate thoughts of pride and ambition, so that men live continually in spiritual discord. Not knowing the motive and cause of the troubles and sufferings to which they are condemned, they lose completely the idea of the proper worship they should render the Creator.
> "To Conceive of the subtlety of the demonic chiefs, one must realize that they are everlastingly trying to degrade all forms and to corrupt all spiritual beings.
> "They persecute the minors (humans) from the moment they enter into this world, surrounding the corporeal form as soon as the spiritual being is incorporated in it."

Whatever be the precise nature of the forces affecting man in his spiritual privation, there is no denying that we are very often tempted to do that which is evil or which is not expressive of the best and purest in us. St. Paul expressed this inner conflict thus: "The good that I would do, I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do." (Romans 7:19).

As we have said before, the punishment of man, following the misuse of his will ... was the exchange of his glorious, spiritual, non-material form ... for the physical body, which he inhabits during the present period of privation.

Note that the anguish of privation, of man's exile from the Creator, centers about the material body. What is wracked by pain and suffering, enfeebled and twisted by disease, tormented by insensate lusts and passions, anguished by worldly appetites, which disconcert the Inner Self? ... Obviously the physical body.

Therefore, recalling conventicle #55 ... where it was stated that the sacrifice of the sensual nature was the first of the three characteristic signs of attainment ... we again bring to your attention that the dominance of the material body over the soul must be overcome. There is no surer or better way to spiritual progress than following carefully the suggestions enclosed in that lecture.

A mistaken understanding of the subordination of the physical body has led to the path of asceticism, ... which for us is a false and unprofitable one. In mastering the body, its harmonious functioning and possibilities as a vehicle for good should neither be weakened nor destroyed ... but rather controlled and subjected to the spiritual needs and aspirations of the Self within.

DISCUSSION / QUESTIONS

There are implications in the writings of Martines Pasquales, which suggest a systematic demonology, or hierarchy of demonic beings, and a philosophy pertaining to them. Remembering the law of opposites which is integral in creation, it is not surprising that men have sought to personify evil influences which they sense and contend against, both within and without their own natures. Lucifer, Satan, or the devil, is thus a name, a personification of the demonic chief, or prince, of demons. Exactly what these evil energies and powers are, will be considered in the near future; however: powerful as the forces of evil, or negation, may seem in today's world... Martinists are never dismayed by the onslaught of the adversary.

Evil has no real, no final power; in fact it has no real existence at all! Part of the process of purification in readying ourselves for reconciliation is to combat, resist and eventually overcome these demonic and hateful forces as they impinge upon our individual lives.

Happily, we are not without aid in our contest with the so-called perverse forces. The Creator has emanated spiritual beings from His own divine immensity in accordance with His pure desire, many of whom are more evolved and closer to the divine than man. These angelic and celestial beings have among their duties the assistance of humanity and the spiritual instruction of the Adamic race. In a symbolical sense, man's nature is a battleground of furiously contending forces, each striving to capture his will and thinking consciousness. The Creator has granted to man the power of choice between them, constituting his essential free will.

These angelic and celestial beings form a great spiritual hierarchy, reaching upward from man through progressive levels of spiritual attunement and divine power to the radiant Throne of Omneity. The universe is a perfect spiritual autocracy, ruled and directed in harmony by the Absolute, the Will of Omneity.

Even in his fall, however, man did not by his unfortunate action put himself entirely out of reach of his Creator. With every attempt to usurp the prerogatives of Omneity's law, man found that law reaching out to find him so that he might know, even in exile, that the way of his return was at hand ... whenever he was ready to follow it. Spiritual instruments are ever at hand, sent by Omneity to comfort us in our distress and to aid us ... whenever we beseech them.

These Agents of Light have been in every land among all peoples and have been known by many names. They are the Repairers and Restorers of mankind. These beings, who represent Omneity and work to bring man back to his First Estate, have been called saviors by the world. In the Christian Tradition, the reconciliation of man is promised through Jesus the Christ, who has been called the Son of God. In each of us, there exists the same potentiality. When we have accomplished our return to the center of Omneity, the same Light will shine through us.

In our oratories and Conventicles we invoke the name Ieschouah (Yea-hesh-shoe-wah) as the Repairer, the Restorer, or Reconciler. By doing do, we do not necessarily mean a particular historical personage, but rather the transcendent principle of Light.

This name, coupled with the following steps, will see us far along the path of reintegration. These steps are a daily discipline of the bodily being so that the higher purpose arid needs of the soul may be kept in view. A regular meditation for this purpose should be held so that the consciousness of Omneity may at all times be present in us.

A Suggested Weekly Application

At least once a week, devote the time in your Oratory to the following special practice of attunement: When you have attained a calm and quiet frame of mind, read a few passages from the Gospel of St. John in the New Testament. Then put the book aside, close your eyes, and let your mind dwell on the nature, beauty and power which characterize the Being whom we have called the Repairer, Restorer, Reconciler. Invoke that power in your own behalf by softly pronouncing the name Ieschouah eight times. Afterward, remain absolutely quiet in order that you may sense completely your impressions. Such exercises of attunement cannot fail to bring rich spiritual results.

SUMMARY

Omneity, absolute in power and knowledge, is largely unknowable by man. The first spiritual beings emanated by Omneity challenged Its wisdom and were exiled to a condition of privation.

Humanity, emanated as a second group of beings to rule nature and act as a warden over the perverse beings, likewise became a victim of its own pride ... and fell.

Privation brought about the physical body and its continual harassment by perverse forces.

The history of mankind ... the Adamic history ... has become a record of man's attempted reintegration with the Divine.

Evil does not ... and cannot ... ever emanate from Omneity. It claims only a spurious existence, stemming from the perverse tendencies of unregenerate beings.

The purpose of the Great Work of our Order is the spiritualization of humanity ... individually and collectively ... and the re-establishment of the divinity of mankind.

Mysticism has ever been the expression of man's unquenchable desire for identification with Omneity. In our Martinist activity, we are learning through personal experience the power, reality and love of the Divine.

It is not given to man to know the ways of Omneity. They are inscrutable to him. However, spiritual instruments, Agents of Light, or saviors, are ever at hand to help us.

Martinists invoke the name Ieschouah, the transcendent principle of Light, which men have ever personalized and to which the names Repairer, Restorer and Reconciler, are given.

The truth of the Bible is that of sublime mystical allegory and symbolism. Properly interpreted with the correct esoteric keys, it is a storehouse of mystic wisdom and prophetic knowledge.

Living the precepts set forth in the Eightfold Path ... and regular practice of the Suggested Weekly Application given in this discourse are invaluable aids in traversing the Path of Return.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

LECTURE #60

Brothers & Sisters:

Earlier in our Works you were introduced to the symbolism of numbers. Pythagoras taught: "everything is number." In this teaching, he followed closely that of the earlier mystical schools in which he studied. This was the way of reason, or pure intellectualism in mystical philosophy. It dominated mankind's thinking until the late sixteenth century when Galileo revived the experimental method.

The pendulum of thought then began its swing in a new direction ... and the essence of all teaching became "experiment answers all." Not until the 1920's did the pendulum once more begin to swing back to the viewpoint of Pythagoras. This was true, of course; only so far as profane thought was concerned ... for mystics still adhered to the science of numbers.

While profane thought swings back and forth between two opposing viewpoints, the student of mysticism continues to be informed of the fundamental relationship between God, man and nature ... by means of numbers. It is true that Martinism and other genuine schools express these relationships somewhat less guardedly, and in terms not quite so obscure as was once thought necessary; but the essentiality of the science of numbers has remained unchanged.

Perhaps this may best be illustrated by a passage from Martinez Pasquales' The Reintegration of Beings:

> "Subdivide the number 4 into the numbers innate in it (1, 2, 3, 4), and you will find the denary number of the Divinity, and you will learn, physically, that it is from this same denary number that proceed all spiritual beings: major, inferior, minor, all law of action, either spiritual or spiritous. Adding the four numbers included in the quaternary gives us 1+2+3+4—10; and by joining these in different ways, you will find how everything has been conceived and created. Unity (i) belongs to the Creator. The number 2 is given to the confusion in which are found the perverse spirits and the men who have joined the intellect of these spirits. The number 3 indicates the 3 spiritous essences that constitute all forms; three also indicates through the origin of these three essences the direct action of the inferior ternary spirits since from them emanated mercury, sulphur, and salt for the construction of the universe. Thus, the number 4 indicates the minor[1], his origin and power.

"Adding 2 and 3, you have 5, the number of demons who employ action and counteraction against all that is purely divine and spiritual. In the original emanation, the number of the demoniacal spirit was a quaternary number, the same as the minor: the Eternal Father (1), the Son (2), the Holy Ghost (3), and the emanation from these three divine persons (4). But the perverse spirits, by their own free will and authority, added an arbitrary one to the original quaternary number, which lowered their spiritual power and transformed it into a limited and purely material one under the direction of the chief from among themselves. This is why the quaternary number no longer applies to them and why the number 5, the quinary, is the number of evil.

"By adding 2 and 4, you have the senary 6, which is the number of divine thoughts that operated at the creation of the universe. By the addition of 3 and 4, you arrive at the septenary 7, which constitutes the power of action of the major spirit which is double. . . . Add 1 to 3 and again add four and you have the octenary 8, the number representing the double divine spiritual power that had been confided to the first minor to manifest the glory and justice of the Creator against the prevaricating spirits. . . . This number 8 is the one reserved by the Creator for the Spiritual Elect…

"Join 5 and 4 and you have the nonary 9. … Through the joining of the quinary with its imperfections and corruptibility and the quaternary, perfect incorruptible, (man) degrades his divine spiritual power."

Picturesque and obscure as this statement way seem, it is simple to deduce that both Unity and 10, the monad and the denary are related to Omneity. The duad, or 2, expresses a departure from Unity and, therefore, represents opposition or confusion. The triad, or 3, expresses the universal elements salt, sulphur and mercury. The quinary, or 5, is evil because it draws a spirituous power not of the divine 1 to its perfection as the minor (4) and seeks a status unwarranted in the divine plan.

The quaternary, or 4, is the number of man, constituting the perfection of powers bestowed by Omneity. It contains all numbers of divine creation.

The senary, or 6, represents the third power of the Creator expressed in the six days of creation.

The septenary, or 7, represents the second power of the Creator, the divine number which brings man's release.

The denary, or 10, is held by Martinists to represent the first power of the Creator.

The nonary, or 9, represents degradation because it is the union of the imperfect five with the perfect four.

An example, which follows will serve to illustrate the use to which numbers have been put in the solution of philosophical problems and at the same time to indicate the misuse of intellectual powers to which man in exile is prone.

One of mankind's greatest problems has been to discover the true relationship between the straight line and the circle. A straight line regulates the base and balance of all things, but the circle limits the production of straight lines. To illustrate this distinction, Martinists represent the straight line by the number 4 … and the circle by the number 9.

[1] Remember that Pasquales calls man a "minor." We will be examining Pasquales' doctrine in detail in the not too distant future.

The object of a straight line is to perpetuate to infinity the production of the point from which it emanates. But the circular line limits at all points the production of the straight line. Hence, the circular line tends to destroy the production of the point and may be regarded, so to speak ... as its enemy.

The number 4 is applied to the straight line because the radius drawn from the center of the circle to the circumference is a straight line. This radius is symbolic of all movement. In other words, there is an analogy between the principles of motion and the straight line. The number 4 is the number of all that is not corporeal and sensible, and 9 stands for all matter. The number 9 may be said to represent the circular line, also, because the circle is equivalent to zero: The circle's center has a point, or Unity, and unity joined to zero makes 10. The separation of Unity from 10 leaves zero as a circular line, thereby establishing a correspondence between 0 and the number 9.

Man's struggle since his exile can be symbolically illustrated by the incongruity of these two numbers. Since his Fall or exile, he has conciliate them, trying to multiply 4 so as to wake the result exactly 9 ... or attempting to divide 9 by 4 without an unequal remainder. A harmonious relationship cannot be established between incongruities.

Our ancient Brother, Pythagoras, held that numbers were the means of stating philosophy. With them, he said, one could define Omneity's laws and demonstrate their relationships throughout the world. According to Pythagoras, the study of mathematics, or the science of numbers, was a necessary preparation for a life of regeneration, providing the quickest and best means of grasping abstract thought. To be able to think in numbers, said he, was to raise one's thoughts above the things of earth; in fact, to bring one into a clear conception of the divine world, or, as we might express it to give one a glimpse into the fourth-dimensional world.

You may not find it immediately possible to use the science of numbers as did our ancient brethren; but after this brief introduction, you shall appreciate all the more the fact that the science of numbers furnishes a valid way of raising one's thoughts above the things of this earth.

My Brothers & Sisters:

We have considered something of the perfect privileges and powers of man in his First Estate. Having indicated by what processes we will re-attain them, it seems necessary to speak of the ideal state of society ... which has existed ... and which will exist again when man repossesses himself of his lost kingdom.

Even in his present state of exile, man ... like the Prodigal Son in the Biblical record, dreams of his former status in his father's house and pictures for himself the ideal conditions which prevail there. This, in itself, is significant: it indicates that man recognizes that society as at present constituted is only a temporary and unsatisfactory arrangement which can be and is being changed in proportion to his ability to envisage a better one.

It indicates, too, that man realizes he makes more progress when he has a goal in view; and that, even though that goal may not be perfect and may be improved on ... without it, he becomes hopeless and altogether degenerate in his state of exile.

It is, therefore, one of the obligations of Mystical Orders such as ours, to help man improve his ideal, and inform him of the true nature of that for which he seeks. Many of the accounts of ideal societies, which have brought encouragement and awakened hope ... have been written by mystics for this very purpose.

Martinists, certainly, have given much thought to the form of society, which would most nearly approach the ideal. Conceiving, as they do, that society is a living organism, they contend that the ideal state must exhibit the same threefold character, which we have already discovered expressed in nature and in man.

The three divisions of such a state, then, should be: religious, legal and economic, and should function analogously to the head, chest and abdomen in man ... all under the governance of Omneity.

The head, being the seat of the intellect, would express most clearly the communion with Omneity and manage those human affairs having to do with the educational and religious pursuits of society.

The chest, being the seat of the emotions, would establish the relationships between individuals in matters pertaining to law and welfare.

The abdomen, being the door to bodily birth and performing the generative functions, would put laws into effect and watch over the body politic.

Individuals of such a society would separately fulfill their assigned functions as particular agents of Omneity, acting always from the standpoint of union with the divine. Society itself, therefore, would in reality be a theocracy ... a state wherein each played his part by divine direction.

It is to fit themselves for such a task in such a society ... that Martinists seek to reintegrate themselves with Omneity in order that they may become acceptable messengers of the divine in human affairs. In this way, too, they can find in the society of which they are now a part, the opportunity for practical application of their vision of the ideal state. Martinists maintain that such a state can exist in perfection only when the rule of theocracy becomes universally established. Theocracy implies that both Omneity and man function best when Omneity's interests are given precedence over those of the individual and when individual human acquisitiveness yields to the good of all. ... In other words: when competition gives way to co-operation.

Mankind in the past has failed to establish a theocracy because of the many illusions and errors entering into everyday life. Nonetheless, by the continual practice of brotherliness and honest effort toward individual regeneration, a true theocracy may become evident among men. With its manifestation, Martinists are confident ... will come the establishment of universal solidarity, an association of all interests, a federation of all nations, and a genuine society based on man's brotherhood.

Brothers & Sisters: these ideas are too profound and consequential to pass over lightly; let us pause momentarily, meditate on them, and then we can share our ideas.

MEDITATION
COMMENTS — QUESTIONS

Let us continue. Perhaps the earliest thought regarding an ideal state or society was Plato's Republic. Long before that time, society had become more or less crystallized into a pattern. Primitive societies no doubt grew out of a need for mutual safety and protection, and their laws were such as the elders of the tribe thought necessary to preserve its customs, and benefit its members. It was only when the imperfections and inequalities of such societies became apparent that men began to think of improvements, which would make for more individual happiness and allow for greater individual growth.

Those mystic writers who set themselves the task of describing the ideal state as a theocracy were well aware of the fact that man in exile has fallen far short of that ideal in practice. They could, in fact, merely outline the ideal state as a goal towards which mankind might aspire, for the society, which they proposed was in many ways the antithesis of that which was in existence. In the superior state, which man had inhabited and to which he aspires to return ... no individual has authority over others.

Each, although recognizing his dependence on higher spiritual forces for his direction, is a law to himself. In society, as it has existed in the past, and even today ... some people have more or less authority over others. In some instances there was one who had absolute authority, unlimited rights and privileges and the rest lived and moved as he directed. Furthermore, that one claimed to be Omneity's representative and as such was endowed with faculties and powers denied the other members of society. He was the king, whose very name became the seal of authority in the state.

He was the center and source of all privileges and powers within his kingdom, holding the power of life and death over his subjects. As God's Agent or representative on earth, it was expected that all should submit to his voice and authority as to Omneity Itself. Naturally, such states as had wise and good kings prospered and had cause to be grateful; but such as had foolish or evil rulers suffered. In either case, however, nothing could be done by the subjects themselves to change matters.

It is possible that the idea of kingship arose on the continent of Atlantis, where the spiritually wise were the rulers. When the Atlantean's left their ancient homeland and settled in Egypt, it is believed their spiritual leaders, having great knowledge of both esoteric and exoteric matters ... were retained.

Tradition informs us that the oldest and greatest of the rulers of ancient Egypt was Osiris, who not only ruled his people wisely, but also taught them the higher truths to which he had access. He sought to lead men out of the Forest of Errors and start him once more upon the upward road of his return to his First Estate. So great was the life and influence of Osiris and his consort, Isis, that they were considered divine by the Egyptians and worshiped as gods. In much the same fashion, the later ruler, Hermes, or Hermes Trismegistus as we call him, was deified.

The first great ruler of Egypt, according to history, was Menes, who by an engineering feat safeguarded the land against the Nile's periodic overflow and used its waters for irrigation. After Menes, came Cheops, the pyramid builder. Then came Rameses the Great, who devoted himself to building temples and founding schools in order that mankind could be bettered by studying arts and sciences.

Not all rulers of Egypt, however, were as wise as these … nor as eager to fulfill their obligations and accomplish their missions as vice-regents of Omneity. In the Eighteenth Dynasty, about 1350 B.C., there did appear, nonetheless, a very serious and high-minded young ruler, Amenhotep IV. He recognized his position as a privileged one but full of responsibility. He undertook the greatest reform the country had ever known, establishing a government designed to restore to his people privileges and a way of life long lost, and at the same time bring them back to a recognition of one God.

Unfortunately, not even Amenhotep's wisdom and desires were strong enough to establish permanently the reforms he hoped to accomplish. Like those Hebrews who followed Moses toward the promised land and yet longed for the fleshpots of Egypt when they experienced the deprivations of the wilderness ... there were many associated with him who thought him too benevolent in dealing with his subjects. These were mainly selfish nobles and priestly officials who worked secretly to undermine his policies while openly appearing to support him. In this we see that man himself, for some imagined advantage, or for some measure of power over his fellows ... was responsible for continuing his exile.

Not being willing to help himself, or, rather, not being willing to allow all ... instead of a few ... to enjoy the privileges and benefits of life, man set himself against the path of his return, and so forfeited the help and guidance of the Hierarchy of Spiritual Beings. He accepted the divine right of kings ... in its lower ... instead of its higher meaning ... and committed himself to further wandering in the Forest of Errors.

History is the record of man's struggle to find a way out of this Forest of Errors ... and it records that he has oftentimes been helped in his progress by benevolent rulers. Such helpers, undoubtedly, were Queen Anne of England, Louis XVI of France, Frederick the Great of Prussia, Catherine of Russia, Charles Ill of Spain and Emperor Franz Joseph II of Austria. In time ... man must succeed ... for there are three laws that make it necessary: First, it is the desire of the Hierarchy of Spiritual Beings that the true Light of ancient wisdom be spread among all mankind, and not confined to, or monopolized by a few rulers. Second, the universal order must manifest itself sufficiently strongly in the physical world to bring about that type of government most equitable and beneficial to man. Third: individual man must have access to the spiritual world without the intercession of either king or priest.

Progress has been made in this direction and it is evidenced both in the gradual disappearance of kings from the governments of the world and in the tendency toward more enlightened procedures in certain outstanding societies. Progress may be said to have been made, too, in restoring to the average man certain powers, or virtues, which once only kings possessed.

This concerns especially the power to heal by the laying on of hands, which rulers and a few others were known to possess. As far back as the time of Edward the Confessor, the kings of England were possessed of this healing gift.

Others after him considered it a part of their duty and obligation as sovereigns to practice healing on occasion. The secret of their ability undoubtedly lay in their knowledge of how to utilize the magnetic or electric currents of the earth. From the days when their predecessors were in possession of secret wisdom, these rulers had inherited a knowledge of how the positive and negative currents in the body could be strengthened. The method, which they used was no doubt similar to, if not identical with, that which you may now test for yourselves. ... It is such an invigorating and beneficial practice, in fact, that you will surely want to use it for yourselves and members of your family.

The benefits of the practice are due to the balancing of human electricity within the body. The flow of blood is such that in half an hour it can circulate some seventy times throughout the body. When a person stands with the hands clasped above the head for this length of time, the positive electricity and the negative in the body become balanced and the power of healing thereby increased. As a matter of fact, the former practice of clasping the hands during prayer was an unknown use of the law of balancing forces

There are, then, two exercises which should be practiced in conjunction with each other. The first: the pentagram ... is that of standing with the feet spread widely apart with the arms and hands extended horizontally, so that the position of the body represents a Five-pointed Star, or Pentagram. The second is that of joining the palms together by clasping the hands above the head, arms reasonably perpendicular, and placing the feet together. First perform the Pentagram for some three minutes or so then follow with the joined palms exercise for another five minutes. The time may be gradually increased to thirty minutes. A throbbing sensation in the hands will be felt during the exercise. The Pentagram exercise will bring atmospheric vibrations of a positive nature into the body; the clasped hands will charge the body negatively. This powerful exercise we call "S", the Star, and you will derive great benefit by performing it regularly. If you can practice it in darkness and in quiet, so much the better. Also, if it helps, you say whisper "Peace be still." I will now repeat the exercise once again, then we will all try it together.

PRAYER

My Brothers & Sisters:

Much has been written on the topic of prayer ... the message is simple: but each time it is given from a different angle. I hope these few words will give you a new insight into the importance of prayer.

"Prayer is a gift from heaven and a grace which is given to us by God. Papus gave a magnificent definition of it known to all Martinists: Prayer is the great mystery and to those who perceive the influence of Christ, God made flesh, it can enable them to receive the highest influences in action on the divine level."

Sedir wrote: "Prayer is an ineffable act. Because it does not claim to be anything, it can do everything."

Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin tells us: "It transforms all misfortunes into delights; because it is the daughter of love, because you have to love it (love) to pray ... and you have to be sublime and virtuous to love."

Everything lives in creation and everything prays because everything evolves. The tree, which lacks water asks for a refreshing shower, the animal, which is hungry asks for its food. And man too, even if he does not believe it.

Prayer is the simplest act because it is a grace which God very generously gives us, and also the most difficult act because it requires us to build within ourselves an inner temple which enables us to develop our spirituality, change the bases of our life and make the spiritual world available to us.

Prayer is an act of love, "for God is love" and the creation is an act of love. What man does to attain the very source of life must be of the same nature as that which presided over his creation. That is why in our prayers there is also an outpouring of our soul, which remembers its former dignity, its temporarily lost abode. Prayer is also an act of absolute confidence.

The success of our undertaking depends above all on our desire and our sincerity in our faith. The objective will have been reached when through our prayer the veils fall one by one and a new world appears to us: That of principles.

Prayer is the only way to reach the sources of life without any of the risks, which lie in wait for the unwise at all moments along his path. He whose only weapon is prayer, who has no other riches than sincerity, no other weapons than his love of the creation and the Creator ... is apparently the most unprotected of men and it is true, but prayer puts us in possession of a leading thread which makes of each of us a new Theseus, brings us out of the labyrinth where the "man of the stream" looses it, and enables us to see the brilliant sun which lights up the way of the "Man of Desire." If we need light to advance, it will be given to us, for we are never abandoned and if we do not receive any, our prayer will also achieve its objects; let us be certain of this, for it is true. If it is not answered, it is because Heaven knows better than we do what we need, or what is best for the person for whom we pray.

Whom should we pray to? Jesus Christ in the prayer he taught us addresses "our Father who art in Heaven." Therefore it is to Him that our prayers ultimately go. For some, this Father who is so good seems inaccessible or too distant. They address intermediaries who pass on their request. These supplications are also answered, for some are authorized representatives of Heaven. Let us not forget that our prayers are brought to life by our deeds if they are in accordance with the gospel teachings. Prayers without deeds are oak trees planned sand. Neither go very far, their life is very short!

When should we pray? We can pray at any time. At any moment of the day we have thanks to express or requests to make. Every day Heaven intervenes several times in our life and it is certain that we are never alone.

Let us attach the least importance to our poor little selves. What are we in fact without the help of Heaven? Very little indeed. If we are conscious of this obvious reality, we will receive unexpected help and our prayers will gain in effectiveness what we have lost in conceit.

"Watch and pray, Heaven will do the rest."

LECTURE #63

PRAYER
By CONSTANTINE CHEVILLON

CONSTANTINE CHEVILLON WAS THE SOVEREIGN GRAND MASTER OF THE

ORDRE MARTINISTE. HE WAS ASSASSINATED IN LYON (1941i) BY THE FRENCH

MILITIA ON THE PAY OF THE NAZI INVADERS.

Prayer is the only true and holy magic. Ceremonial magic, too often, places the will at the service of pride. Prayer, on the other hand, is a very humble aspiration of the finite towards the Infinite. A person praying resembles a desert striving to become a meadow full of flowers and, furthermore, he does not demand ... he beseeches.

However, common men ignore all that prayer involves. For the overwhelming majority, to pray is to say words with the lips and sometimes with the heart, the ardor corresponding to the intensity of their desires; or to bow in a temple or oratory in order to entreat, from an antropomorphic God, wealth, success or love. Thus we pray nowadays as did the Jews of yore, wishing to exchange Manna for the onions of Egypt.

Certainly a prayer asking for the goods of this world is, of course, permissible. To address the Merciful Father, asking Him to guard us from physical misery, is a homage to His Almighty Power. We forget, however, only too often, the words from the Gospel: "Seek you first the Kingdom of God and His Justice and everything else will be given to you."

Prayer should not only intend to break the infernal circle of Destiny; it is far more elevated and noble. It is a superhuman lifting-up towards the Divine splendor, as well as kneeling ... it is unspeakable ecstasy ... facing the Ineffable Charity.

To be able to pray in this manner, it is necessary to become silent within. Free yourself from all evil thoughts, even from simply negative ones. It is necessary to put feeling, understanding and reason in tune with the spirit, to enter into a passive state in order to allow Divine activity to be realized within. It is necessary to shed indifference and coldness, to make a holocaust of one's own being and to project above any human selfishness, a prodigious call of love.

Then the channel of Beatitude opens itself in its subliminity. Two currents project themselves towards each other. The first, ascending current, carries man into the bosom of God; the second, like a celestial river, descends upon the earth to make the soul conceive into a pregnancy of eternity. Now … that finite being, that nothing, lost in the ocean of Being without boundaries and place ... is carried up to the confines of the Absolute. A mysterious operation through which, once, the Son of God became the son of man, repeats itself in the inverse sense. Distance becomes non-existing. The Human nature, now transfigured in an incomprehensible union, embraces the Will of God, His Justice and Mercy.

When prayer reaches such summits ... how unimportant appear the terrestrial things! The words of Chrysostom are aglow in their severity: Vanity of Vanities! ... all is Vanity! Riches ... Vanity!

Honors ... Vanity! Human Power ... Vanity of Vanities! Everything disappears under the blazing breath of the Paraclete … nothing remains there except the immense furnace of love:

FONS, VIVUS, IGNIS, CARITAS.

Are only saints able to lose themselves into this mystical transport, neighboring the Beatitude? No. If peace is with him, every man of good will is capable of reaching there, because every prayer is holy when it relies upon faith and hope … even measured by human standards. O you of humble heart and poor in spirit, do not become discouraged in spite of the apparent sterility and inefficacy of your prayers. If you ask for temporal favors, do not be surprised if you do not receive anything. The Kingdom of CHRIST is not of this world, and your desires mean very little when compared with the eternal gift, which, unknowingly, is granted to you.

Pray, therefore, in the heights of ecstasy, for yourself and for others; but above all ... pray far others, recalling the last vision of Denis, the Areopagite[2], who, on the eve of being tortured, was thinking in his prison about the salvation of Humanity. Jesus came to comfort hi, and said to him: "If you pray far others you will be heard." Now, if Cod can pay a hundredfold for the least alm given to the poor, in His name, how will he repay the fruit of your prayers???

. . . . . BY HIS GLORY . . . . . .

[2] St. DENIS or DIONYSIUS, Bishop of Paris, often identified as Dionysius the Aeropagite.

SUPERNUMERARY LECTURE #18

WHO SHALL CARRY THE SIGNS?

> "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned. And these signs shall accompany them that believe: in my name shall they cast out demons; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents, and if they drink any deadly thing it shall in no wise hurt them; they shall lay hands o the sick, and they shall recover." … And they went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them and confirming the word by the signs that followed. (Mark 16: 15-20)

In this controversial passage, to whom is the Master talking? Who is to go into the world and preach? Who shall preach everywhere and have the word confirmed by the signs that follow? On the surface, it would appear that Jesus was addressing the eleven disciples as He appeared to them following the resurrection. It seems to be a final commission to these men whom He had organized to carry on His work.

The Christian church has always believed that this was, through the disciples, the commission for the church. Thus it has seen the entire Gospel directed primarily toward the church rather than to the individual, and the Bible becomes more of a set of church bylaws than a Universal truth for application by all men. One variation on this theme is that man lives only for the church, and only by supporting it can he gain righteousness and salvation. Another variation has led missionaries to all the darkest corners of the world to face great hardships and sometimes brutal deaths.

The church has followed the idea of baptism to the letter, stressing the idea that unless a person is baptized, either by sprinkling or total immersion, he cannot be saved. The statement, "But he that disbelieveth shall be condemned," has been taken to be a command rather than a basic statement of cause and effect. Because of this, we have seen the most unchristian denunciations of those who do not "believe." Many religious sects, again misunderstanding the final commission, have literally sought to "babble in tongues," have made the handling of deadly snakes an initiation into belief, and have even drunk poison to prove their belief.

Now, an enlightened minority within Christianity, and certainly mystics and great thinkers throughout all time without organized religion, have believed that Jesus' commission was really a Universal challenge to all men everywhere. Jesus was not giving instructions for a church to follow. I do not believe that Jesus organized a "church" as such. As a matter of fact, many of the accepted practices and organizational ideals of modern churches are the very things Jesus condemned in the religious institutions in His day. Jesus organized a little band of disciples to convey His message of Truth, to carry on the teaching of the Truth that would make them free and would help them to find abundant life. His was an organization not of doctrine but of ideas.

When Jesus said, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to the whole creation," this refers to the world within. We can never be of any great influence in the world without until we have converted the world within! Therefore, man's first job is to discipline his own thoughts, to bring every errant thought into captivity to the Divine process, and to peach the Gospel to every. cell. and organ of the body.

How the idea of baptism has been labored over in Christianity! We recall that John baptized people in the river Jordan, as did some of the disciples. This was an outward symbol of a spiritual ideal that Jesus merely tolerated. He said, "Suffer it to be so now. Jesus did not baptize people with outward symbols. The only form He ever used was when He breathed on His disciples the holy breath of the Spirit.

The word "baptism" comes from the Greek word "baptisma," which is a wonderful and powerful word. The real meaning is: "To become overwhelmed completely by an element [any element] to the point of saturation." Jesus had in mind an immersion in cosmic awareness: as Paul said, "In Him we live and move and have our being."

The "baptism of repentance unto the remission of sins," which the church has made into an outward form, is, in fact, a simple and beautiful matter of thought training. The Greek word from which we receive our word "repentance" is "metanoia." It has been interpreted as admonitions to God of sorrow for past sins and a resolve to be good in the future. In the sense of goodness, of course, the whole Christian world has failed, failed to discern the Christ teaching about mental laws. The true meaning of "metanoia" is to change one's mind. Jesus did not mean that we should condemn those who do not believe or repent. He was stating a law of Truth: "As a man thinketh, so is he." To believe in God is to make contact with the source of life, substance, and intelligence. It is the very key to living abundantly. To disbelieve, to close the mind, is to open the way to want and suffering. The disbeliever veritably condemns himself, as does a person who refuses to turn on a light switch, to walk in the darkness.

"And these signs shall accompany them that believe." Again, this is not a command to do something, but an indication of the law of cause and effect. The person who keeps conscious contact with God in faith will experience blessings.

"In my name shall they cast out demons." The word "demon" refers to a multitude of inner conflicts and complexes, states of consciousness that have been developed because the creative power of man has been used in an unwise or ignorant manner. There are demons in all of us, such as inferiority complexes, because in human consciousness we have become confused and filled with obsessions and mental aberrations. But when we lift our consciousness and work "in His name," we find that we can speak with authority and spiritual Truth, and Union states will be cast out.

To "speak with tongues" actually means to have the spiritual ability to speak in harmony and understanding with people in all different states of consciousness.. Jesus had that ability; He could translate his thoughts into everyone's language. This is one of the signs we carry when we truly believe.

"They shall take up serpents, and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall in no wise hurt them." We must remember that Jesus did not hold deadly serpents in His hands just to prove His power. He would not even turn stones to bread to prove this power. The serpent in the Scriptures always refers to elemental life, Jesus said, "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the son of man be lifted up." This refers to the lifting up of individual consciousness, from sense awareness to the consciousness of man's Divine nature. "Taking up serpents" represents lifting up consciousness without being hurt by sense reactions.

"They shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." We must remember that all these things are the signs that accompany those who believe and are elevated to spiritual consciousness. There can be no real healing in human consciousness; cure, yes, but no real healing. This has been the weakness in Christianity; it has tried to carry the signs as the Divine authority, and has laid on hands only through rituals and ceremonies. But you are the one that the signs must accompany. You must carry the signs; you must believe; you must be immersed in spiritual consciousness. You must go forth to preach the gospel, to heal the sick, and to cast out demons.

To “lay hands on the sick” is a figure of speech. It does not necessarily mean to make physical contact. It means rather to take the sick person into your consciousness and hold the person in your consciousness of the all-pervading life and love of God, in which there can be no imperfection.

We find a vital key to all this in the final phrase of this passage from Mark: “And they went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them arid confirming the word by the signs that followed.” Remember that “the word” in the Scriptures always means ”the law.” The law worked with them, then. It seems obvious, but it is easy to forget. The law is always working on our side when we are in the right consciousness, and it becomes our servant. When we speak the word of Truth the law works with us and results in health, overcoming and demonstrations of good. Remember that “all things are possible.” You make the difference. You carry the signs!

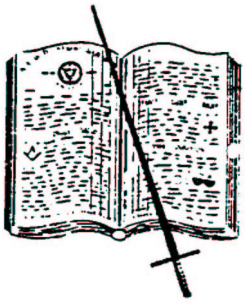
THE INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE OF MARTINISTS



Dear Associates:

You will notice the turf on which we are walking is hardening! Let us praise God for that. We have lost a number of our party since we first set sail some months ago. One brother fell overboard during high seas and another was drowned in a whirlpool. Then, after we made landfall, several fell victim to the scorpions and snakes, and a few more got stuck in the bogs and swamps. We will have to pause for a while and set up camp and send out a search party to look for and rescue those who have succumbed to the perils.

While we are waiting, let me take this opportunity to bring you up to date with our schedule. We said just recently that we would begin a detailed examination of the Martinist philosophy as enunciated by Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin, starting at Liber 20. We find we will have to make a slight adjustment to this table and extend this second phase of our work to Liber 22 ... because the reports coming in from members are asking for more light on reincarnation & karma, the Inner Order and a few other topics. We are therefore going to accede to these requests ... and will assure everyone that this slight rescheduling will be of great value to all.

Again, yet again, we must re-emphasize these points: You can read every book in the world, you can talk to every wise man, you can join every organization that exists and go to all the universities ... and you will never find Truth in any of them. All you will get there is information. FOR TRUTH IS WITHIN YOU AND YOU WILL NEVER FIND IT ANYWHERE ELSE. We could have told you that in the very first Liber, but you would not have been receptive to it.

Receive these Libers, chew on them, suck them, extract the juice and nourish yourself with the vital essence. Become a dietician and work at building a strong and healthy body. As you go through life, avoid the foods that are harmful and poisonous. When you discover nourishing elements, incorporate them in your menu and improve your cuisine.

Just as we must nourish our bodies all our life, so too is our search for Truth a life-long quest ... and it spans like a bridge from this life into the ones to come. It will end only when you have re-entered the Lost Paradise. Those who fall victim to the snares of this world ... will have to pick up the thread again at some time, for no one can advance us but our own self ... it is one of the penalties we face for the privilege of having a free will.

Let us praise God for the Light that is coming our way, and may He continue to inspire and guide us on every step of the Path.

Sincerely & Fraternally,

LIBER 19

LECTURE #64

Brothers & Sisters:

During our early travels ... mention has been made about the seven oppositions of life revealed by the seven Hebrew double-letters. You have been given the names of the pairs of opposites and we have examined some of them. We will scrutinize the remaining pairs as we continue the works, however: the importance of harmonizing contraries is beyond all emphasis and it is necessary that you have a good understanding of this principle. It is essential to an understanding of the Martinist view of life and it is equally necessary to the practical application of what we are learning.

One student of these matters has written: "Life is a problem which has for each an individual solution. No one can solve it wholly for us, or take from it the element of personal responsibility. It has its own particular history in each individual case. Difference in temperament and in experience gives infinite variety to these personal solutions. The utmost that one individual can do for another is to enunciate the principles which underlay all experiences, however varied. Truth is not truth for us until we have made it our own through reflection, until we have applied it in daily life."

Such a statement is absolutely true. And it is equally true that the teaching necessary to each individual's fulfilling his personal responsibility in regard to life's problems ... is to be found only in the genuine Mystery Schools.

The reason for this is that the mass of humanity is as yet too little evolved to accept the personal responsibility for its own salvation. It has been necessary, therefore, in order that all may have a measure of truth ... that so-called "pious fictions", and only such broad truths as may seem helpful ... be given to the profane. Perhaps it is only after one has spent many lifetimes in these outer groups, that one grows to the point of accepting responsibility for his own progress through life. Then he finds his way to one or another of the genuine schools of mysticism for proper teaching.

Here he must not only be taught the truth behind the pious fiction which he knows ... but he must also be shown the technique of adapting what he has been taught to his own experience. In the main, this consists of a complete reversal of viewpoint. From looking for salvation outside himself and by virtue of faith in an individual, or set of ideas ... he must turn his thought within himself, finding there the principles which he must accept and be personally responsible for. Further, he must see that histories of Avatars and World Saviours are but variant stories of his own inner nature.

This is far more difficult than it may at first seem, for one must acknowledge that almost everything he has been taught is only half-true and of little value to him. He must forgo the comfort of believing in something outside himself and must be strong enough to withstand the shock of Learning that what he considered true ... was mainly false ... at least false in the way he was called upon to accept and interpret it.

The point previously made regarding the story of David and Goliath is illustrative of this. To most, it is a page taken from the history of real individuals, whose difference in viewpoint became the occasion for a moral lesson. Undoubtedly, to some, it is merely a tale told for the sake of setting forth moral teaching.

To the mystic, however, it points to a deeper lesson having nothing whatever to do with actual historical personalities ... but rather portraying an internal struggle between conflicting elements in one's own nature.

It is this difference that is fundamental between the Mystic Schools and the outer schools of learning ... a difference that can be traced right back to ancient Egypt. There, the wise, studying the heavens and noting the sun's daily progress through the constellations, described the process in personal terms.....

The twelve constellations were seen as twelve different circumstances through which the sun passed in the course of the year. The sun became to be known as an individual who responded or reacted to these different circumstances or experiences in a certain way. It was born weak in its own innocence, suffered defeat, overcame that defeat, and rose to supreme power, overcoming all its enemies.

How like man who is born weak and is unable to cope with the strange circumstances of life. He finds within himself conflicting elements that are heightened by the challenging experiences through which he passes. Finally, through right teaching, maturing man overcomes the enemies within ... those elements, which stand opposed to his progress ... and, at last, he emerges a new man.

As above, so below, said the mystics. Since there was order in the heavens, should not earth express the same? And man should have the same assurance of overcoming his difficulties and of reaching his final goal ... as the sun does in its progress through the heavens.

The outer circumstances of man's life are of less importance than the inner ones. IT MATTERS LESS WHAT HAPPENS TO MAN THAN WHAT HIS RESPONSES ARE. The mystics were more concerned that their pupils see the parallel ... and that they individually accept the responsibility for their own lives ... with the assurance that as the heavenly order brought triumph to the sun ... so would that same order prevail in their lives.

At the very time, however, that the mystics were teaching such truths to their initiates ... the priests were fostering among the un-evolved the idea that the sun was a god ... and that all men should worship him! It is from the story of the sun and its progress through the 12 signs of the zodiac that religions of the world have drawn their stories of a god, an avatar, as the saviour of mankind. This is immediately evident when we study the lives of the avatars of the religions of the world. MEN DO NOT WILLINGLY FORGO BELIEF. It is easier TO BELIEVE ... than it is to know ... and accept the responsibility, which that knowing entails.

This indicates one reason why in the long past it was necessary for the mystic to choose carefully, after a long-time study, those to whom he would communicate what he knew to be true. The same reason holds good today when Mystic Orders attempt the same care in the selection of candidates. This, we hope, will explain the necessary emphasis that must be placed upon the complete understanding of the oppositions of life, which are characterized by our two Pillars.

Certainly, it will serve to indicate that such explanation can have meaning only to those willing to acknowledge their own responsibility in the manner of solving life's problems. This is especially true when we come to the pair of opposites called PEACE — WAR.

Objectively considered, Peace seems altogether desirable. War seems altogether reprehensible. Peace, we picture to ourselves as a state of harmony and concord. War we depict as dissension, strife, inharmony and discord. Objectively this is true; mystically it is false ... because we have failed to see the full and complete meaning of Peace & War. We have failed to realize that they are simply two aspects of the same thing ... and must exist together.

Peace & War are merely opposite polarities. War is positive; peace, negative. War: active, Peace: passive. War: work, Peace: rest. War: movement, Peace: immobility. War: gathering, Peace: assimilation.

This is the ebb and flow ... the pulse of life. What we see objectively portrayed on the world stage, is but a large-scale manifestation of what goes on within each individual. It is this universal drama played out in the individual consciousness that is of value and interest to the mystic. As he reviews life at every stage of its progress, it is likely to be seen as being made up of many periods of relatively long conflicts, interspersed with short periods of rest. But for the periods of struggle ... the times of rest would have no meaning.

DISCUSSION / QUESTIONS

It is not too much to say that the ancients were masters in their knowledge of the workings of the mind. As a matter of fact, their knowledge of what we call psychology transcends even that of the present day ... and enters the field we now call psychoanalysis. After making plain to the initiate the laws of the universe ... the intent of their teaching was to show him the ways in which mind, that is, ... his faculties ... reacted to certain phases of life, and to show him, as well, how to control those reactions. They realized that life presents an individual problem. Each individual, out of the differences of his own history and background ... reacts to the experiences of life differently.

The teacher, therefore, had to point out to the student his responsibility in determining what his reactions would be to any outward circumstance of life. The underlying principles were always clearly enunciated, and the student was given every aid so that he might know what the experiences are which challenge his progress. After that, each had to assume individual responsibility for his acts, determining in every case what they would be.

The effort the individual puts forth positively, whether to achieve a new skill, develop a technique, or weed out undesirable characteristics and overcome detrimental handicaps ... is war. War is the activity of the individual self to bring about certain positive changes within our own nature. The intervals of rest and peace at the end of such activity, (we sometimes call them breathing spaces) ... are periods of summing up, when the individual assimilates into the fabric of his being ... the results of his warfare.

WAR / PEACE ... indeed, these are a most necessary pair of opposites on our Pillars and one we shall oftenest make use of. For that reason, we should meditate on their aspects as often as we can.

Are the greater number of people ready to accept responsibility for their own actions?

Can we be “saved” by someone else?

Does the mass of people know “the truth”?

Which is easier ... to know ... or to believe?

In what way does the teaching of the Mystery Schools differ from that of the outer schools?

Let us recap the essential parts of tonight’s Lecture:

> True knowledge has always been preserved for the initiate. The masses have had to content themselves with pious fictions. This is because the mass of humanity is as yet too little evolved to be able to recognize that salvation is their own personal responsibility.
>
> Since earliest times, the law and order exhibited by the heavens has been the model for man’s instruction.
>
> Stories drawn to illustrate the parallel between man’s progress in his journey through life ... and the sun’s through the heavens ... have been accepted widely by the unenlightened as stories of actual personalities called avatars and world saviours.

The mystic is taught to accept the responsibility for his own progress and to be more concerned with his reactions to events in his experience ... than to the experiences themselves.

War and Peace are to be thought of mystically, as periods of activity and rest, or as growth and assimilation.

The mystic is to balance the pairs of oppositions within himself. He uses the seven pairs represented by the Hebrew double-letters to guide him on his journey through life. Are you balancing the oppositions in your life?

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

LECTURE #65
ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

My Brothers & Sisters:

Our recent lecture (#61) on the nature of the ideal state and the responsibilities and duties of those who rule, should have given you the fundamentals of the right mystical viewpoint on these matters. In other words, it must have become evident, that to Martinists, the ideal state among men would be that which most nearly follows the triadic pattern of nature. Government should be threefold, corresponding to the head, the chest and the abdomen of man. Analogous to the head of man, the highest division of the state should concern itself with education and religion, the next division, the chest, should regulate matters legal and military. The last, the abdomen, should be devoted to the body politic and the carrying out of the decrees of the other two divisions.

In addition, the ideal state among men, for Martinists, would be a theocracy, for only in such fashion would it grant man the privilege he had in his First Estate, the privilege of being a Law unto himself under the direction of Omneity. Theocracy to a Martinist, therefore, is the highest and most desirable system of government., for it recognizes man's individual access to Truth and his innate right to self-government.

A necessary aspect to even the ideal state is the administration of justice, the meting out of reward and punishment. Here, again, man finds it necessary to contrast existing conditions with those, which prevailed in his First Estate. Absolute justice inhers only in Ornneity. It is approximated most closely by those who forget themselves in patterning after the Divine, as Agents of Ornneity. Justice, however, has been all but lost because its agents have forgotten Omneity and have patterned themselves after their own frailties.

It is because of the necessity of justice in every state and because of its lack in most ... that the Martinist is so concerned with it. He beholds the travesty enacted in the name of justice, recognizes justice to be blinded instead of impartial, and knows that crime is engendered rather than done away with in present—day society. He may even run through the catalog of capital punishments meted out since society's beginning. He finds them to have been by beheading, branding, burning, breaking on the wheel, boiling, burying alive, crucifixion, crushing beneath the feet of animals, compulsory combat in the arena, drowning, electrocution, impaling, flaying alive, hanging, drawing and quartering, piercing with spears, poisoning, shooting, strangling, suffocation, stoning and sawing asunder. Still, he seeks the answer in the only way he can ... by an appeal for a quicker return to the ways of his First Estate and a well—grounded trust in the designs of Omneity.

The Martinist knows that punishment is to some degree necessary, but he pleads for punishment that is corrective rather than full of revenge. He recognizes the possibility of man's growing better through wise correction, but he remembers that all men are his brothers and that "whatsoever ye would that men do unto you, do ye even so unto them" ... is a divine precept.

The Martinist never forgets that man has little right to condemn his brother and no right at all to take away his life, (excepting perhaps, in one's own self defense.) For that reason he is unalterably opposed to capital punishment. Beyond being a violation of divine precept and humanitarian instincts, it is questionable whether it is a deterrent to crime and it certainly is not corrective to the criminal. Furthermore, there is no recourse against its enactment and it presumes an infallibility of judgment that is altogether impossible to imperfect man.

Fortunately, advancing civilization is slowly acknowledging the rightness of the Martinist's position, for capital punishments is losing favor with enlightened judges and almost everywhere the criminal is beginning to be looked upon as a sick person, rather than a totally depraved one of whom it were better to be rid. In time, it is inevitable that human justice will more nearly resemble divine justice. Then it will be that the mystic meaning of the Biblical admonition: "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap" will be understood.

This is the law of Cause & Effect, which the mystics have always taught, usually under the name of the Law of Karma. It is simple, as all Omneity's laws are, ... but it is profoundly just. What we think and what we do ... what we suffer and what we permit register in Omneity's records as CAUSES. These causes must have effects, and IT IS INEVITABLE THAT EACH RECEIVES THE GOOD OR BAD EFFECTS OF THE GOOD OR BAD CAUSES HE SETS IN MOTION.

DISCUSSION

With this law of karma is joined another which explains it and gives it the necessary freedom of operation. This is the Law of Reincarnation, which states that the âme, that undying part of ourselves, is periodically being rejoined to a new physical body. It separates from the old at the moment of "death" ... and is joined with the new at the moment of "birth". Thus the âme virtually constitutes a permanent astral personality, which is reborn and grows anew with each rebirth into a fleshly body. The physical body changes … the âme remains itself.

DISCUSSION

Man is so constituted that generally he is unable to see himself as the cause of his own punishment. He is inclined to blame his family, his environment, or even Omneity for his difficulties in life. The inequalities in the distribution of wealth, learning, health, and human necessities, which are evident in life are without satisfactory explanation until one accepts the Laws of Karma and Reincarnation. Both of these laws were part of the mystic's fundamental instruction in those great universities of the past called the Mystery Schools … and remain so today.

In the light of this discussion, it will be seen that the Martinist will follow the Biblical injunction: "Judge not that ye be not judged" ... for the affairs of man's life are not so haphazardly arranged as it may seem. The Laws of Karma and Reincarnation ARE in operation ... and the Martinist will do well to recognize that fact, confining himself always to making his own life conform to the highest possible pattern while being charitable towards all men ... who are his brothers.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

LECTURE #65
REINTEGRATION

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

Our V: M: Martinez Pasquales, whose teachings we will soon study quite closely, wrote "In the end, all will come back to the beginning." IT IS THE MARTINIST'S DUTY TO ACCELERATE THAT PROGRESS. This he must learn to do individually ... as an Agent of Omneity. By working persistently and sincerely to bring about his own reintegration through the techniques and principles you are being taught, the Initiate is, as well, furthering the good of the whole of humanity. Men of Desire, therefore, have been led to the Martinist Order to learn of Omneity's laws and how they may be used for the individual and the collectivity. Here, we pledge ourselves to use these laws for the benefit of others, as well as for ourselves.

This means that each of you has acknowledged that you seek the way of reintegration and recognize that the progress you make and the good you accomplish will depend upon your own efforts. Until one recognizes that what has been called SALVATION is not a matter of BELIEF — but of PERSONAL EFFORT ... he is not ready for Initiation. One is ready for Initiation only when he knows that salvation ... more accurately described as REINTEGRATION ... is a matter of learning and using Omneity's expressed laws.

Our V: M: Louis—Claude de Saint—Martin, has written: "Man has been set amidst the darkness of created things only to demonstrate by his individual light the existence of the Supreme Agent, to convince all who misconstrue it." This is true. Yet the profane sees only the darkness. His individual light is so dim that oftentimes he cannot discover by its means the Supreme Agent himself ... much less convince others of its existence. The profane does not even know the nature of the forces, which operate in his world of darkness; he does not know how they arrange themselves into polarities, or oppositions. Consequently, he is defenseless against them.

The Initiate DOES know these things. He knows, too, that through his mystic instruction his individual light grows bright enough for him to discern not only the oppositions themselves but also how to equalize them. "Evil is that which is opposed to the progress of each individual." This being so, we have to test each event or circumstance of daily life to discover its relationship to our progress and to know whether to name it GOOD or EVIL.

Our work in the Martinist Order is supplying us with a broad knowledge of the major oppositions, which we shall encounter, and it is furthering our understanding of how to test them. We shall advance ourselves in accordance with our right judgments and with the right causes we set in motion, for the final goal of reintegration can only be achieved as the effect of the causes one sets in motion.

The pairs of Opposites represented by the seven double-letters of the Hebrew alphabet constitute the major oppositions of life. Knowledge of them provides the Initiate with a gauge and by maintaining his balance between the poles, he learns to avoid the extremes which bring about the downfall of those who do not know.

You have been told: "The reintegration of each cannot be finally accomplished apart from the reintegration of the collectivity of men." Only when all the cells of Primitive Adam have been reassembled at the place we occupied before the Fall, will reconstituted Adam be indrawn by the First Cause that emanated him. The transfiguration of all therefore depends on the transfiguration of the one.

Thus, as the Man of Desire progresses in his work of equilibrating the Oppositions ... he finds his consciousness continually unfolding and his Inner Self awakening and asserting itself with increasing power. Subtle changes bring like effects in the habits, outlook and activity of the outward man. He continues to shoulder his normal responsibilities, meeting them always with a greater sense of exactness. He finds certain errors, which were part of his earlier life no more tolerable. A definite change comes to his tastes and desires. Old associations loosen their hold ... and he finds new contacts a source of joy and spiritual reflection.

A growing sense of detachment, a feeling of aloneness, does not surprise him. He knows this to be but the consequence of his venturing forth upon the great sea of mystical experience. It is the testing of his strength, showing him his life and present affection as they really are, and as they will be.

Perhaps this has been nowhere better stated, or with more clarity, than by Emanuel Swedenborg, who was one of the teachers of our V: M: Martinez Pasquales. In his book Heaven and Hell, Swedenborg wrote: "There are those who believe that it is difficult to live the life which leads to heaven, which is called the spiritual life, because they have heard that one must renounce the world, must divest himself of the lusts called the lusts of the body and the flesh, and must live spiritually. They take this to mean that they must cast away worldly things, which are especially riches and honors; that they must go continually on pious meditation on Cod, salvation, and eternal life; and must spend their life in prayers and in reading the Word and pious books. But those who renounce the world and live in the spirit in this manner acquire a melancholy light, unreceptive of heavenly joy. To receive the life of heaven, a man must, by all means, live in the world, and engage in its duties and affairs and by a moral and civil life receive the spiritual life.

"That it is not so difficult to live the life of heaven, as some believe, may be seen from this: When a matter presents itself to a man which he knows to be dishonest and unjust, but to which he inclines, it is only necessary for him to think it ought not to be done because it is opposed to divine precepts. If a man accustoms himself to think so, and from so doing establishes a habit of so thinking, he is gradually conjoined to heaven. So far as he is conjoined to heaven, the higher regions of his mind are open; and so far as these are open, he sees whatever is dishonest and unjust; and so far as he sees these evils, they can be dispersed ... for no evil can be dispersed until it is seen."

MASTER OF LODGE CALLS FOR A PERIOD OF MEDITATION AT THIS POINT

Brothers & Sisters: as associates, you were informed that man once occupied his proper place at the center of the universe in closest attunement with the Divine Power. However, he used the free will, which the Creator had given him in such a way as to bring about a "fall" from his exalted spiritual state, exchanging his glorious spiritual form for a gross, material body.

As Martinist Men of Desire, we gain a keen personal realization of our spiritual privation and exile. Is there one among us who has not sensed a yearning for higher development and increased spiritual perception ... for a true and lasting reintegration with the God of his Heart, the Deity of his most profound realization? Like our V: M: Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin, we desire above all things to reach deeper and deeper into our inmost nature until we find the living God within. As Mystics, we hunger and thirst for God, aspiring to make Him the foundation stone for the development of our personalities.

In this effort to find God and unfold our true selves, we are unerringly guided by conscience. An evolving and quickening conscience is the monitor, the sentinel for the establishment of God's Law in one's Inner Self. As one of our Brothers has said: "Thy conscience is the Master to be feared, from whom thou must always receive counsel, the severe and inflexible judge to whom thou must render a just account of thine acts."

Ultimately, morality is an inner condition, a progressive structuring within the personality of the moral law, which is of God. Only high morality can build and sustain a noble, cultured civilization. With the decay of morality ... (the basic goodwill which is its eternal leaven) … the foundations of the state totter, and its decline is not far distant.

As Martinist Initiates, our task is to build a spiritual temple ... that temple said by Qabalists to be supported by the three pillars of Wisdom, Strength and Beauty. There must ever be, they were at pains to point out: Wisdom to construct such an edifice; Strength to support its superstructure; and Beauty to characterize its every aspect. With this Martinists agree, seeing in Wisdom the true mystical religion of all humanity; in Strength the sound logic of philosophy and science; and in Beauty those principles of ethics and harmonious human association called morals and political economy. These time-honored pillars, we likewise consider to be the three branches of the tree of knowledge ... whose fruit is divine and right action.

My Brothers & Sisters, the right understanding and right application of these matters are of such importance that time should be given to their assimilation. It is therefore recommended that, during the ensuing week, the conscience should be carefully examined and the subject of unity considered in your daily meditations.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

A NOTE TO REMEMBER

The words "material" and "physical" are often used interchangeably. While this may suffice in general conversation, bear in mind that in esotericism this is not necessarily so. The Physical World is a Material World ... but not all Material Worlds are Physical.

ALCHEMIC/HERMETIC #67(H)

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

In Isaiah 39 18 & 25-26, we read: "To whom then will you liken God?" ... "To whom then will you liken me, or shall I be equal? saith the Holy ONE." "Lift up your eyes on high, and behold who hath created these things, that bringeth out their host by number; he calls them all by names by the greatness of his might, for that he is strong in power; not one faileth."

Let us consider the Hermetic Principle of the Harmonic Planes, for, according to Hermes: "As above, so below ... and as below, so above." A marked analogy appears between the sayings of Hermes and the scriptural text taken from the Hebrew Scriptures. This principle of likening, comparing or studying correspondences has long been a powerful factor in enabling man to arrive at a solution of some of the most abstruse problems presented to him. This principle is in common use in scientific laboratories and schools and may be applied with equal value and equal propriety in the domain of religion and philosophy. Hermeticism, being a synthesis of religion, science and philosophy ... it is natural to expect this law to have been postulated at the very beginning of the Hermetic revelation, which, indeed, was the case.

Enough has been said already to cause you to realize that Hermeticism has for its object: the bringing about of a personal revelation of the nature and attributes of God. This is the goal of every sincere seeker of Truth. Therefore, in the deepest sense, all correspondences are the likening of one phase of God to some other phase, enabling us to realize how true it is that "In Him we live, and move and have our being."

As you have understood ... the ALL is in ALL, and all is in the ALL; therefore every unit in the several planes of Cosmic Manifestation, Life and Being. (including Becoming) must be subject to identical Laws and thus show forth the Harmonics of both Involution and Evolution.

Hermeticists classify the phenomena of the known Universe under three broad general divisions termed:

1. The Physical Plane
2. The Mental Plane
3. The Spiritual Plane

These Planes comprehend the lower divisions of the physical world known as the Chemical, (Solids, Liquids and Gases); the Etheric divisions of the physical world and the Lower Astral, for #1.

#2 includes the higher divisions of the Etheric regions or planes of the material world, the Astral and the Region of Concrete Thought, of the World of Thought.

#3 includes the higher regions of the Astral World, the Region of Concrete Thought, Abstract Thought and the lower regions of the Divine World.

Thus, the Phenomena of each blend with higher and lower planes, forming one complete unity; the higher phenomena of the Physical and the lower of the Mental; and the phenomena of the higher mental with the lower physical.

These Planes are more than states, conditions or dimensions. A dimension is measure in a straight line. This would not define the cosmic relations referred to. An ordinary dimension is conceived by us as length, breadth and thickness. The Planes we are considering here must be considered as a state or dimension conceived as consciousness, interpreted as what is commonly designated as the "FOURTH DIMENSION." This pertains to the Hermetic Principle ... "that everything vibrates, nothing is at rest."

You must keep in mind however, that the concepts of the cosmic planes must be those of States of Consciousness, a universal dimension, a condition of integral vibration. Realizing this, you will understand the occult truth that the "Kingdom of God is within us."

This is a deep truth, my brothers & sisters. Once realized, it brings to our conscious minds the truth that wherever you are—there also are all the conditions that make your heaven or hell, your spiritual uplift or your spiritual and mental depression.

As you gather in the unity of class study, or proceed with the daily occupations of life, there are ever present all the conditions, states and dimensions of consciousness THAT YOU WILL EVER EXPERIENCE.

In the great unity of the Divine Mind, our physical bodies are merely the outer and more slowly vibrating states of matter crystallized from the activities of spirit substance; meantime, our more etheral vehicles are vibrating on their respective planes of being ... as each has, in the course of centuries and eons, become more and more highly organized and differentiated from primal conditions.

If, for instance, one of us here should experience his death or transition at this moment, it would be merely the discarding of the physical or dense body. And without departing from the chair in which such a one was sitting, the Ego with the Etheric and Astral Bodies and Mind Sheath would be functioning in the Etheric World. At the second death, without removing, the Ego, Astral and Mind would simply discard the Etheric Body and function in the Astral World. At the 3rd death, the Ego and Mind would discard the Astral and function in the higher Astral World and the Lower Thought Planes. And so on. Space means nothing in cosmic relations. At the exact place wherein each one of us may now be, ALL OUR RESPECTIVE VEHICLES ARE FUNCTIONING AND VIBRATING IA' THEIR RESPECTIVE PLANES, and our heaven or our hell is right here and now ... exactly wherever we may be at any time of our existence, terrestrial or celestial.

Thus, the cosmic root substance vibrates through each of us and at every moment of our existence we are in the Kingdom of God, though we may not be conscious of it. WE ARE IN THE KINGDOM OF GOD ... AND AT THE SAME TIME: THE KINGDOM OF GOD IS WITHIN US. As the man Jesus said, "I am IN the Father and the Father is IN ME."

INITIATION and spiritual development therefore ... is the process of entering into the higher states of consciousness, and this entering in ... is what actually accomplishes the AT-ONE-MENT with the Father or Infinite One.

Therefore: all existence on the Three Great Planes aforementioned is an existence solely WITHIN THE INFINITE MIND OF GOD.

Some present day philosophies teach that matter is nonexistent; all our students are warned against allowing such teachings to give you a false concept or appreciation of the true value of matter.

Hermetically, we divide the Three Great Planes of Manifestation into Seven Minor Planes, each of which are in turn subdivided into seven sub-planes. As these divisions and subdivisions are somewhat technical and will not be of interest to all students, we will enumerate them at the end of this lecture.

The Plane of Human Mentalism too, like all the others, is subdivided into seven grades, of which the race today has reached approximately the fourth, a process which has required millions of years to accomplish. Of the present race, some have evolved to the Fifth Grade.

You must remember, however, that there have been races before us who have accomplished these Grades and passed hence, to higher. Our own Race is the Fifth with laggards from the Fourth. Some Hermetists style the coming man of the Sixth Subdivision the "Super-Man" and that of the Seventh, the "Over-Man."

The Third and last great division, the Spiritual Plane, is also sub—divided into seven Minor Planes, each being again subdivided into seven ... as in the cases of the Physical Planes and the Mental Planes. These seven subdivisions of the Spiritual Planes are indescribable in terms of comparative phraseology. They are the habitat, grade for grade, of exalted Spiritual Beings and Hierarchies whose development and status is as far beyond man ... as man is beyond the amoeba.

These seven subdivisions of the Spiritual Plane may also be stated to be the habitat of such Exalted Beings as can be described only by the term: "clothed-in-glory." In the lower of these subdivisions dwell those whom we term Masters and Adepts. Then come the Hierarchies of Lords of various phases of Evolution. Beyond them are the "Gods", whose attributes are beyond mere human hypothesis. It is the wisdom of these lofty intelligences that is superimposed upon the mortal world, guiding and unfolding its evolution. Yet all these Celestial Hosts and Hierarchies must be conceived as existing even as ourselves, only in the Mind of the ALL, the Infinite God, the ABSOLUTE.

For even these HIERARCHIES have been mortal.

In attempting a reasonably logical concept of these hierarchies, only those whose steps were entered on the Path in previous lives, can hope to gain a clear insight ... for the phenomena of the Higher Spiritual Plane is vastly differentiated from that of the Mental Plane. And then, too, in contemplating the higher spiritual planes you must remember that some things may not be spoken, neither written, and that true Hermeticists realize that only those who EARN the right to KNOW, by actual perseverance in personal practice of the Hermetic Art of Transmutation of the Lower Human Principles to the Higher ... will the clear vision be given ... and such are unable to translate their vision in terms of ordinary speech. IT IS THE OCCULT TRUTH OF THE SCRIPTURAL SAYING, REGARDING THINGS, WHICH IT IS NOT LAWFUL FOR THE TONGUE OF MAN TO UTTER.

It must bee noted also, that to Hermeticists, the word "Spiritual" itself takes on a vastly different& more important meaning than any attributed to it in orthodox theological parlance. To the theologian it means etheral, lofty, sublimated, holy, reverent or religious; to the Hermeticist it means LIVING POWER, COSMIC VITAL FORCE, ENERGY AS COSMIC ROOT SUBSTANCE.

And spiritual Power, it must be noted, can be used as freely for what is commonly termed "evil" as for what is often termed "good"; and this is in strict adherence to the Law of Polarity. But the penalty imposed on the apparently "successful" ones who utilize spiritual power for personal ends and so—called Evil, or in other words the misuse of Spiritual Power which is Black Magic, is terrible indeed and this truth is the basis for the great epics on the "Wars in Heaven" and the legends of the "Fallen Angels" whose pride led them to measure their ambitions against the Will of the Absolute.

All seven of the Great Hermetic Principles stated in lecture #32 are operative on ALL PLANES. Thus:

> The Principle of Mental Substance comprises the ALL.

The Principle of Correspondence manifests the Harmonics and Agreement between the Planes.

The Principle of Vibration differentiates the Planes.

The Principle of Rhythm manifests the ebb and flow.

The Principle of Cause & Effect likewise manifests on all planes.

The Principle of Gender or Creative Energy operates along the lines of Masculine and Feminine aspects.

The Principle of Polarity is also operative on every plane.

The Principle of Correspondence is the great Principle to be sought in all Hermetic study, as the key to the Mysteries through analogy.

HOMEWORK!

What are correspondences and how are they applied in any form of study?
What great Hermetic axiom illustrates the point?
What "Dimension" do the Planes of this lecture constitute?
By what other name or names may it be known?
Who are the "Super-men" and "Over-Men" said to be?
Why do we not describe the seven subdivisions of the Spiritual Planes?
On what plane do "masters" and "Adepts" dwell?
What is your own, original definition of the term "spiritual"?

For the Keen student, we list the subdivisions of the Physical and Mental Planes:

The Physical Plane is subdivided into the following seven:

A	Plane of Matter	1
A	Plane of Matter	2
A	Plane of Matter	3
B	Plane of Ether
C	Plane of Energy	1
C	Plane of Energy	2
C	Plane of Energy	3

A-1 includes Solids, Gases and Liquids.

A-2 includes phenomena of Radio Activity.

A-3 includes subtle and tenuous Matter, link between Matter and Ether.

B includes the Ether interpenetrating all cosmic space.

C-1 includes phenomena of Heat, Light, Electricity, Magnetism, Attraction, Gravitation, etc.

C-2 includes etheric forces through which mental phenomena become possible.

C-3 includes the vibratory waves by virtue of which the higher evolved spiritual beings function in their relations to terrestrial conditions.

The Mental Plane is subdivided into the following seven:

A	Plane of Mineral Mentalism	1
A	Plane of Elemental Mind	2
B	Plane of Plant Mentalism	1
B	Plane of Elemental Mind	2
C	Plane of Animal Mentalism	1
C	Plane of Elemental Mind	2
D	Plane of Human Mentalism	1

A-1 Comprises the dimensional consciousness of the Mineral Entity, in the Trance State.

A-2 Comprises the states of consciousness of the Elemental Spirits of Earth, the Gnomes.

B-1 Comprises the dimensional consciousness of the Plant Entity, in the Dreamless Sleep State.

B-2 Comprises the states of consciousness of the Elemental Spirits of Water, the Undines.

C-1 Comprises the dimensional consciousness of the Animal Entity, in the Dream Sleep State.

C-2 Comprises the states of consciousness of the Elemental Spirits of Air, the Sylphs.

D-1 Comprises the dimensional consciousness of the Human EGO in its waking consciousness, from the Elemental Spirits of Fire, the Salamanders, to the present stage of developed consciousness.

R+C LECTURE #68

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

In Liber 15 we gave you the names of the Seven Planes according to the Rose+Croix and Theosophy. In Liber 16 we asked you to think about where they would fit on the Tree of Life. In this Liber we have given you the placements of the Seven Planes on the Tree. We hope you have studied carefully the information relating to the Four Qabalistic Worlds in Liber 17. Do you have that information inculcated? ... If not you will have to review it.

The Tree of Life is a symbol that enables the mind to grasp every plane of existence from the highest point of the Very Unmanifest ... to the lowest point of densest matter. In Atziluth, the first world, God manifests in the form of Archetypes (in an earlier Liber you were asked to look up this word in a dictionary and be sure you understand what it means.) Atziluth is the world in which the Sephiroth originally manifest themselves, they are the manifestation of the Hidden God's activity and in this first world there is a raying-out of His inexhaustible energy in the form of archetypal representations ideals, which in time will become the models for all things in the lower world. Atziluth is the ONLY WORLD upon which God acts directly ... in the other worlds He acts through His Agents or Emissaries and this is where we find the Archangels whose habitation is in the second world, Briah.

The Archangels in Briah come "down" into the lower worlds Ietzirah and Assiah ... but no creature or being goes "up" into Atziluth for there God alone resides. The question can be asked: "What is an Archangel?" Archangels are cosmic forces but they are also able to assume a form so that one may experience them as a definite appearance by which they may be identified, or they may be experienced as a feeling or as an emotion.

Let us now enter into the practical application of the principles we have been studying. We are in Malkuth. By the time the overflow from Kether reaches Malkuth it has lost a great deal of its mystical or spiritual power, but what it has lost in ethereality it has gained in solidity, so Malkuth possesses in fact what Kether had in potentiality, however ... from the spiritual perspective, Malkuth has only in potential what Kether has in fact. It is therefore the goal of the Aspirant to raise himself up ... and this is where chanting and the use of mantra comes in. AS WE APPROACH THE DIVINE, THE DIVINE APPROACHES US.

Chanting has a very special and important place in all esoteric work; it is used to raise one's level of consciousness, especially in meditation, but also to change inharmonious and discordant conditions in one's environment. Chanting is therefore one of the keys to the development of the higher consciousness. Through the creative use of sound, one is able to produce patterns of vibratory frequency that correspond to the soul expression of certain very high individuations of Divinity. In addition, one's psychic centers, to which certain of the endocrine glands are related, respond positively, producing a salutary effect on several levels; for example: the consciousness is expanded enabling the individual to become aware of subconscious impressions ... the mental faculties are quickened ... and the body is toned. (See diagram on inside cover.)

When certain Divine Names or Formulae are chanted, they not only act as an attuning device ... they serve to connect the chanter with the radiative Source of those qualities in the universe. It also pushes away, in effect, the lower astral substance and vibrations that normally surround us. In doing this, it gives the chanter the opportunity to experience a much higher level of perception and feeling, which has at its foundation a sort of serene joy, Then, with our mental processes much clearer, we are permitted to experience a bit of our own divinity.

The sheer spiritual pleasure of this experience acts as a magnet to draw us permanently into this level. This will happen to anyone who vibrates the Divine Names and Formulae correctly ... even if they do not have the faintest idea of what they are doing and why it is so. Perhaps you can now see why some people have certain ecstatic experiences when participating in a ritual or church liturgy that is properly conducted. When self-conscious understanding and intent are added to chanting and esoteric operations ... the effect is even greater.

The foundation of chanting is the breath. Proper breathing is essential. The breath is your power. ALWAYS REMEMBER TO SILENTLY TAKE A FULL BREATH BEFORE YOU BEGIN YOUR CHANT. This is the single most important thing to remember. MAKE IT A HABIT. If you will experiment using a partial breath for your chanting, you will be instantly convinced of the difference the moment you change to full breath work. USE THE FULL BREATH ON EACH CHANT. This means: exhaust your breath completely on the sound. Extend the chest, extend the chant so that the breath is fully exhausted at the end.

Now remember: chanting is not singing!!! It does not have to be loud (but it can be, however). Chanting the Name or Formulae is called "vibrating". There is a knack to this that you will easily learn with a little practice. Strive to produce an intense resonance in your chest cavity and head. Properly done you will feel the vibration even in your hands and feet. You will find that when you are chanting correctly that the vibration will be felt throughout your whole body. It is an extraordinary experience to hear a word properly vibrated ... but it is even a more extraordinary experience to vibrate it yourself. It is not something that anyone can show you how to do; a little experimenting will enable you to get into a "resonant groove" … and you will know when you are there. You should feel the tones vibrating throughout your whole body ... you can also do this with great intensity almost inaudibly ... or even completely inaudibly ... with great power!!! This is wonderful for use when sitting at your desk or riding on the bus.

Private & Confidential

SILENTLY INTONING OR MURMURING THE NAMES OF POWER IS AN EFFECTIVE WAY OF "CLEARING THE AIR" WHENEVER OR WHEREVER YOU SENSE A DISCORDANT SITUATION ... ESPECIALLY THE NAME IESCHOUAH.

Now a few words about rhythm: Give each syllable the same time value when you chant. Rhythmic sound is sound under conscious control, just as rhythmic motion suggests mastery of movement. Be aware of this principle in your chanting.

Always start your chanting work with a mental and emotional preparation. The mental attitude to take is to remember that you are making sounds that attune you to a vastly higher level of consciousness and you expect to be aware of the results. The emotional attitude should be one of gratitude for the capacity to make this linkage and for the knowledge of how it is done. The most loving gratitude and recognition should be given to the Father for the quality and existence of the outflow that comes to you through chanting. In reality this is spiritual recycling. This is returning to the Source that which you receive. This is always an open door to a down flow from Deity.

Chanting before meditation is very beneficial and chanting is also a great help for control of emotions.

Now, the following is meant for use in conjunction with the cassette tape N.4 already mentioned. The tape has been specially prepared, giving first the intonation of the Names and Formulae. Using a full breath, chant with the choir. You may then enter into a period of meditation. After you have adjusted the volume level for the chants, do not change it. The tape has been specially prepared so that the levels will aid and not detract from your meditation. After the chants you may like to send out thoughts of peace, love, friendliness, harmony and health ... not particularly to any specific person but just as a general radiation as a light in a darkened room. Then, sitting comfortably and relaxed, stop transmitting and remain receptive and be conscious of any thoughts that come to you.

The order of the Divine and Archangelic Names are as follows: ACCURACY IS AN ESSENTIAL PART OF ALL PRACTICAL QABALISTIC WORK ... ESPECIALLY CHANTING.

The Four Divine Names

Eheyeh	(Eh — hay — yeh — eh) These are actually four syllables but the last two are the same there is no break in the pronunciation and they come out as one sound.
Jehovah	(Yod — hay — wah — hay)
Elohim	(Eh—lo—hee—ee—mmmm)
Adonai	(Ah — do — nah — ee)

Archangelic Names

Raphael	(Rah - fah - ay - ul)
Gabriel	(Gab - ah - bree – ee - ay - ul)
Michael	(Mee – ee - khah – ay - ul)
Uriel	(Co – oor - ee - ee - ay - ul)

Brothers & Sisters: there is a great deal of information in this lecture ... practical information ... We can do nothing more than give it to you. The wise will use it. The teacher can only point the way. It is up to the student to use what is given. We remind you of this salient point: you will never find truth in a book even if you read all the libraries of the world. You will never find truth in any church, organization, group or from any person ... BECAUSE TRUTH RESIDES WITHIN YOU and THERE is WHERE you must look for and find it.

GNOSTIC — SUPERNUMERARY LECTURE #19
THE ART OF INNER LISTENING

In the conclusion of the twenty-sixth chapter of Job, there is found this passage: "And all this is the mere fringe of His force, the faintest whisper we hear of Him. Who knows, then, the full thunder of His power?" We also remember that Jesus said, "Having eyes, ye see not; and having ears, ye hear not."

This is the dilemma of man, for as Walter Pater proclaimed, "All Life is a kind of listening." The darkness, fear, lack, and limitation we experience is evidence of our failure to be responsive to the limitlessness, abundance, and affluence of God all around us and within us.

We think of the ear when we speak of listening, but actually we listen with our mind. The very word "listen" connotes an inward response to outward stimuli, sensitivity to vibration. And vibration is everywhere. Man can, and ultimately must, cultivate the ability to hear and to heed the message of the Infinite creative process; he must develop sensitivity to good vibration.

The mental picture we form from the perceptions that come to us depends on our individual mental makeup. We are like radio receiving stations; with thousands of signals reaching us constantly, we chose which one to tune in. One may appreciate the sound of raindrops, or he can dread their sound. One may listen to the message of the great silent stars of the Universe with awe at their mystical grandeur, or he can simply be afraid of the dark. One may listen to joy or sorrow, success or failure, optimism or fear.

Every individual is equipped to hear from birth, but the faculty of hearing rightly and listening selectively must be cultivated. The radio, the television, and the newspapers all spread a wide range of information. What are you listening to? Your associations through the day express many and various opinions on many subjects. To what do you respond? What is the character of your response? To what are you sympathetic? To what are you most sensitive?

While hearing itself falls within the realm of the senses, true listening is actually extrasensory in nature. It is a feeling, a consciousness. A Beethoven symphony is being played, but by no means does every listener get the message. A priceless painting is viewed by many, but only a few truly appreciate its aesthetics. True listening is perception of ideas, appropriation of Truth, which commands concentration, discrimination, humility, and flexibility. It requires open-mindedness, minimizing the prejudices we all have, evaluating objectively, and listening to what is being said rather than who is saying it.

Bennett Cerf once complained that listening is a lost art, and that nobody listens anymore. I wouldn't go that far, but I believe that never in history has there existed a greater need than today for creative listening. Selectivity is needed to cull the positive from the negative in the news and in advertising. This is vital for our mental health and for the peace and stability of the world.

You may have seen two people "talking," where one gets the head start and the other can't wait-until the first one stops for a breath, so he can tell his side. When a patient's malady was diagnosed as a mild case of laryngitis, he insisted that the doctor give him something for it, saying, "But I have some important conversations coming up. What shall I do?" The doctor replied, "You can listen."

A wonderful poem by Edward Hersey Richards states: "A wise old owl sat on an oak, / The more he saw the less he spoke; / The less he spoke the more he heard; Why aren't we like that wise old bird?"

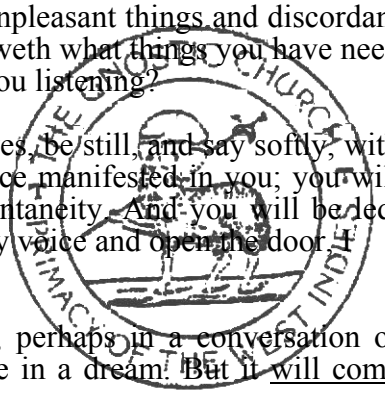
When we are attuned to the dimension of Truth, and when we take the time to listen with patience, it is amazing how many wonderful ideas will come to us from the ordinary conversation of those around us. But we must be really listening with humility and with love. Conversation with any person should commence with tuning in on the Divine level in yourself and in the other person. The Oriental expression "Namaskar" means, "I salute the Divinity in you." The Christian might say, "I behold the Christ in you." In this way, you can express from the depth within you, knowing that there is that in you which is harmonious with that in the other person. In this way, you will understand and be understood, no matter if what the other is saying happens to be poorly stated or is intended to be mean. Your creative listening will be a blessing to him, influencing him to express on a higher level. When on that level, you tend to draw out of him thoughts he will be proud of.

The statement, "I hear and heed the voice of God," means that one is responsive to the depth—level of Truth. It is good to start every day by hearing the good manifesting in all things and in all persons; by finding God's voice in all persons, conditions, and circumstances, whether they are sordid or uplifting, good or bad. It is my sincere conviction that guidance is ever within us, and that, as Emerson says, "By lowly listening, we will hear the right word." The indecisive person who is always running about seeking advice is not a good listener.

A new school of psychiatric thought holds that men and women are born with a spiritual urge as strong as the urges for nourishment and sex. The forerunner of this approach is Dr. Viktor Frankl, a professor of neurology and psychiatry at the University of Vienna. He believes that while most have conquered bashfulness about their emotional drives, they remain deeply troubled by the repression of their inborn religious feelings. Dr. Frankl calls this "God-shyness," and advises people to achieve emotional health by overcoming the notion that religion and belief in God are not really needs and that it is unsophisticated to search for spiritual development.

Have you ever felt God-shy? Is this because you have used prayer as a device in which you talk and God listens? Prayer must, you see, be listening. It must be a receptivity to the deep creative forces within us. We must recognize that God blesses us through many channels and that our good, our inspiration may come through reading, or through other people, or just out of the silence … if we listen! Psychologically, it is assumed that the person who rarely listens, and is forever forcing his opinions on others, is a person who feels insecure and insufficient. If we overcome our God-shyness, we discover that God is forever speaking to us. We realize that the same Mind that is within the greatest of men is within us.

Cultivate your ability to listen and, in quiet meditation, know that you are being charged with the voice of power and wisdom. Then pray without ceasing to carry this listening attitude into your actual relationships with others. In this way, you will find wonderful things coming to you from perhaps unexpected sources. When becoming an artful listener, when practicing the presence of God, you will guidance everywhere. You may not have dramatic experiences such as did Moses when God spoke to him through the burning bush, yet through cultivation of the art of listening, you will hear a small voice in every need. Tell yourself over and over, "I hear and heed the voice of God." At the beginning of the day, resolve to listen to inspiration, even from unpleasant things and discordant notes. Remember that you are one with God and that "the Father knoweth what things you have need of even before you ask Him." God knows and God is speaking. Are you listening?



Here's a technique for times when guidance is needed. Close your eyes, be still, and say softly, with assurance, "Father, I am listening." You will find marvelous guidance manifested in you; you will feel a sense of conviction, a sense of assurance and a sense of spontaneity. And you will be led. Jesus said: "Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him and will sup with him and he with me."

Your own guidance may come directly or it may come indirectly, perhaps in a conversation or through the inspiration of a piece of great music. It may even come in a dream. But it will come when you develop the art of listening.

 A Student's Insight ***

This is my realization on the Hermetic Doctrine of "The All" …….. All that we perceive of the universe around us is within the Mind of the All. Every good and perfect gift that humanity receives comes from God by way of the Laws He created regarding manifestation an the physical plane; as above, so below. First the spiritual, then the physical. Studying the doctrine of the All, it is explained that not only is ALL contained within the Mind of the All, but that there is something of the Infinite, Immutable and Eternal character of the Creator contained within every one of His Creations.

The "Real Presence" of God within our hearts is what lifts us upon the scale of spiritual evolution. Each individual must recognize and acknowledge the Light shining within and strive to bring forth that Divine Light on the physical plane, for passive acceptance of the Real Presence is not enough. It is active manifestation of the Divine Energy within which leads the way on the path of spiritual development.

Three attributes of The Absolute are Will, Wisdom and Activity. Through It's Infinite Wisdom, the Divine is impelled toward activity. The Absolute Will furthers the mental processes by lowering the vibrational status of a portion of the Divine mental substance, the lowest vibrations manifesting as matter.

This process of wisdom, or desire, will and activity is known in Hermeticisu as the process of "becoming". It is a phenomenon that directs energy outward. All matter, all activity and all thought must first proceed outward from the center, from the desire for creation. This is a natural law. And when the desire that directed the original impulse is satisfied, the rhythm reverses and the energy is drawn back, back toward its source, toward the center.

This ebb and flow of energy can be called by many names. Coming fro, the center, or involution, it is the outpouring of creative energy, the dissemination of Divine Substance. Returning to the center, or evolution, refers to the individualization of Divine Substance, which occurs upon the journey back toward the center, or the return to the source. (Regarding this, fellow members may like to contemplate the inner meaning of the story of the Prodigal Son Luke 15: 11-32).

The Alchemical Wedding of involution and evolution creates the seed, born from the process of transformation within Unity. On its journey toward the Source, the original virgin energy gains experience and consciousness. The Divine Substance's awareness of itself and of its journey back to its Creator, results in the development of a soul and each soul must retain its individual consciousness even as it continually transforms. For above all and within all is the ALL, and even on the outermost edge of it's journey the soul is still contained within the ALL. As each soul returns to the Center, it is as the thought of God returning to itself, continuing the Divinity's awn process of "BECOMING".

The Hermetic philosophy and that of the Rase4Craix are two different methods of approaching the same material. I particularly appreciate my membership in the I.C.O.M.S. because it provides insights from the many different streams). Both of the just named philosophies deal with the spiritual nature of the individual and of the universe. The R+C studies the origin, structure and laws of the universe as an exact science of the occult. Hermeticism studies the same information but approaches it from the plane of abstract thought. By stressing the mental nature of the Divine and all it's Creations and by striving to reason and think in Abstract, the student affects the vibrations of the mental world as he or she learns the vital importance of their own thoughts in relation to their reality.

(Submitted by one of our student members).

At a Conventicle of Lodge Benevolence, on June 13th, 1985, Sis::: Asunta S.I., presented the following piece of architecture to the brethren. We are pleased to be able to share it with you:

OF ERRORS AND OF TRUTH — AN EXPOSÉ.

This evening, I am basing my talk on the first part of Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin's book 'Des Erreurs et de la Vérité' (Of Errors and of Truth), published in 1775. This work was written in French and as far as I know, it has not been translated into English, although parts have been quoted in English. It was written by Saint-Martin himself and can be considered as one of the works central to Martinism. You may have read the beginning of this work in editions 3 and 4 of the Martinist Digest. This evening's exposé is not a translation of the work, but a summary of the first part ... and as such is limited by my own level of consciousness.

LCSM says he did not write this book for people without desire ... "but the man who thinks enough of himself to try to know himself, who has kept a watchful eye on his habits and who, having already taken the trouble to push aside the veil which envelops him, can benefit from these reflections. This person can open this book which I gladly entrust to him with the aim of strengthening the love he already has of good."

The book goes into great detail about the sources of human error and the nature of this error with a view of showing the way back to truth. In his introduction, LCSM calls his book "a ray of mankind's own flame which I rekindle before them so that it can light up the false ideas which they have given about Truth, as well as the feeble and dangerous weapons which unsure hands have been given to defend them."

Thus, truth has been hidden from us and error has been mistaken for truth for a long time. He says: "Yet, even though light is made for all eyes, it is even more certain that not all eyes are made to see it in its brightness. That is why a small number of men who are guardians of the truths I announce are committed to wisdom and discretion by most formal vows." He also admitted that, in his book, he sometimes speaks of things very different from what he appears to be speaking of (just as in the Bible the truth is veiled). Nevertheless, the book provides food for thought for all readers.

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material, which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber, which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

CONTINUATION FROM LIBER 19 OF THE LECTURE GIVEN BY SISTER ASUNTA

The cause of error, says LCSM, is man's "dissolute will."

Man has little energy left and what little he has he always directs "against the law of his being," and "it is with his own hands that he puts the blindfold over his eyes." By saying this, he does not wish to criticize man, but rather to endeavor to "awaken their courage and show the way which leads to the realization of their desires."

Man constantly seeks peace and light and basically he knows there is an order to things. Yet he continues to err, as he does not know which path to take to achieve his aims. He knows there is a truth, but he does not know the nature of this truth. He sees a confusion of good and evil, light and darkness, harmony and disorder in the world around him, which worries him. One source of comfort in this state of affairs would be to know the origin of this disorder.

Man has neglected the true means he ha of attaining knowledge, and, in trying to explain things, he has only succeeded in confusing himself even more. Good has been seen as both a tyrant and a father, educating at the same time as destroying, having to punish itself to maintain its justice. Man cannot explain exactly what good the evil are, and has ended up saying that there is neither good nor evil. These are the methods used by unwise masters to justify their doctrines.

"How many errors and how much suffering we would have been spared it, far from seeking truth in material nature as it appears to be, they had decided to look within themselves." They would not have seen it straight away, but they would have been inspired by the enlightenment they would have received.

LCSM: "When man, after having resisted courageously, succeeds in surmounting everything in his being which repulses him, he finds himself at peace with himself and henceforth with the whole of nature. But it, through negligence or being tired of fighting, he allows the slightest spark of a fire alien to his own essence to enter him, he suffers and languishes until he has completely rid himself of it."

Man has called the principle, which causes peace and happiness "good" and that which causes pain and torment "evil."

For all Beings, good is the realization of their own law. Thus evil can have nothing to do with the law of being, because it is opposed to it. Evil is false, because it cannot exist by itself. Evil cannot destroy the law of Beings, although it can prevent it from being fulfilled. When man deviates from this law, he feels unhappy and confused.

R+C — LECTURE #69 (H)
REINCARNATION

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

As mentioned in our last Liber, we wish to deal with various topics, which have been specifically requested by members. In this lecture I will therefore give some more information on the subject of reincarnation, since this is the most often requested point.

The subject of reincarnation confronts the student of occult and spiritual Mysteries at the very beginning of his progress on the Path and without an understanding of it (theoretically at least), he cannot otherwise fully comprehend the Laws of Compensation and Karma, upon which the evolution of humanity is both ethically and organically based.

Many mystics have written about reincarnation and sometimes use other terms which include: rebirth, metempsychosis, transmigration, palingenesis and re-embodiment. Each of these words actually have a distinctive meaning, but many writers use them interchangeably.

We read in Job 14:14, "If a man die, shall he live again? All the days of my appointed time will I wait, until my change comes." This voices the dissatisfaction of mankind with the allotment of "three score years and ten" for the expression of consciousness.

Seemingly, man flits like a firefly, out of the darkness of an eternal past, only to be extinguished for an eternal future after a life expression that, in comparison with higher time and space concepts ... is of shorter duration than the spark that flies from the blacksmith's hammer.

Nature requires millions of years to produce a grain of sand when we review all the processes that have led up to its present state as such. Even the trees in some forests are mute yet eloquent symbols of Nature's creative work, enduring for hundreds of years and, in the estimation of some biologists, even for thousands of years.

Yet Man, the epitome of all creative forces, is assumed in the estimate of cold science to be merely the evolution of a speck of protoplasm, growing like a yeast culture until, after reaching maturity, he is snuffed out, to be seen no more, forever. What a prodigious waste of cosmic energy this would be, if true.

In the lifetime of a single man, thousands of cattle, fowl and fish, hundreds of thousands of vegetables and fruits have given their lives to support his existence. Thousands of animals have given their lives in the experimental work of Scientists in their efforts to improve man's physical condition. Mines have poured forth their unlimited treasures to accommodate the requirements of his civilization. What a tremendous waste of creative energy, what a crime against the lower kingdoms ... if 35 to 65 years is to be the average sum total life expression of an individual AND THE ONLY LIFE EXPRESSION HE IS TO BE PERMITTED after the whole earth has given of its best, to train and equip him for constructive work.

It is unthinkable for those who stop to think of it. There must be some compensatory condition ... and since the beginning of the human kingdom, its thinking members have sought that compensation. And it is found in Reincarnation or Rebirth.

Two great facts were implanted in the human mind by the Divine Intelligence: that the best specimens of the species were to act as rulers and guides in the evolution of the mass of the species and hence arose the line of Kings as we have already noted and the second is the FACT that man SHALL AND DOES LIVE AGAIN, after so-called death. This is an atavistic truth brought over from one life expression to another in every individual. It forms the principle doctrine of the numerically largest religious group on earth and has been the basic principle of the root religions of the world since mankind first gave voice to religious aspiration and thought.

From the totem poles of the Alaskans to the grotesque images of Deity in Equatorial Africa and Australia; from the Chinese Joss to the High Altar of the Christian Cathedrals, the same fact is in evidence ... that from somewhere, down through the ages … humanity has been invested with the truth that there is another life beyond the human ::: a spiritual life ::: and millions of those who have delved deepest in religious truth have found for a certainty that human life is simply an alternation between spiritual and mortal expressions, up to the point of accumulating all the experience that activity on this particular planetary sphere can give them.

Reincarnation or Rebirth is NOT transmigration, or the descent of the soul into lower animals, for that would imply retrogression or devolution. As we have already seen, the Law is: EVOLUTION ... progress, the onward, forward movement of all.

As the races have grown older and wiser (in some things at least) and as mankind has entered more deeply into the arcana of Nature, especially in the case of Initiates ... who have and who do investigate through personal experience some of the fundamental ethical and religious truths, the accumulated number give personal testimony as to the FACT of a spiritual Life beyond the grave ... and that another mortal expression ... several expressions ... is the privilege of every individual human being.

But the truth of rebirth is comparatively new to the people of the Western Hemisphere, for our civilization is yet young and we have been so busy with our material growth, that it is only in fairly recent times that we have begun (more or Less individually) to give heed and close attention to the fundamental spiritual principles that concern the welfare of the race, for the Christian Church, whose mandate it is to educate the masses, has failed in its mission, at least regarding the deeper spiritual truths and practices.

We have been, and most still are, content to let the clergy do our thinking for us spiritually and ethically, our politicians act for us in civic affairs, and our lawyers muddle conditions until one can hardly walk one city block without transgressing some law of the community. Furthermore, we are still in the shadow of puritanical ancestors with sterling character but narrow vision, who made religion a morbid, gloomy, punitive matter, and sternly denounced any cheerful optimistic realization or concept of Divine Mercy, Love and Charity.

Today, in our western world, we find three classes of people when we note their attitude toward the profound doctrine of rebirth. First, there are those who are evolved and well along the Path toward higher realization and consciousness. When this truth of rebirth is brought to their attention, even for the first time, it is accepted as a truism. There is no effort connected with it. It seems always to have been a part of their consciousness. There is neither hesitation, objection, question nor opposition. It is clearly logical, natural and obvious.

Second, there are those less advanced along the Path of evolution, physically and spiritually, who accept it without attempting to go deeply into all that it implies. There is no opposition but there is a lack of understanding.

Third, there are those who are deeply crystallized in materialism and commercialism, who consider that having paid their church dues that is sufficient; who are afraid that it contradicts some particular dogma, doctrine or tenet of their religious denomination; who talk a lot about “soul” and “spirit” but do not know what either is, and so cannot even follow what part of them is real and what it is that reincarnates; who live their lives on the old theory that "one life at a time is sufficient," that "we are here today but a long time dead," etc., etc., ... that they not only hesitate, but oppose the truth without even knowing anything about it. They reject a truth that has far more to do with their lives, their advancement and progress than the dollars and cents they accumulate, with less thought than they would give to the purchase of an adding machine for their office, or automobiles for their pleasure and convenience.

The truth of reincarnation is inextricably united with the truth of the Law of Karma, which I will expand on in Liber 21. However, to state it briefly, the Law of Karma is, that "as a man sows, so shall he reap." That is pure Christian Scripture. Furthermore, Jesus himself said, in speaking of John the Baptist : "And if ye will receive it, he is Elias, which was for to come." (Matt. 11:14). Actually, his words mean ... "if you are capable of understanding, John is the reincarnated Elias, whose coming was prophesied." Jesus had the same different evolutionary grades to contend with as we do in our day ... and these three grades will be amongst us for quite some time.

The Christian Church in the Apostolic and Post—Apostolic eras taught reincarnation to those who could "receive it," and the writings of many of the Church Fathers are replete with this truth. It is only since the church lost sight of the mystic and esoteric aide of Christianity and the CHRISTIAN MYSTERIES, that it has not been heard from the pulpit or found in the catechism*, but today, the moat enlightened Christian Clergy of all notable denominations are approaching the subject with greater courage and assurance, finding that in no-wise does it conflict with any fundamental of Christian doctrine and indeed explains and makes clear many of the apparent contradictions of faulty and questionable translations and exegesis.*

One of the greatest Saints of the Church, Saint Gregory of Nyssa, who lived A.D. 257-333, has the following to say: "It is absolutely necessary that the soul should be healed and purified, and if this does not take place during its life on earth it must be accomplished in future lives."

Saint Augustine, another of the Church Fathers and venerated by Christians of all denominations, writes: "The message of Plato, the purest and most luminous in all philosophy, has at last scattered the darkness of error and now shines forth mainly in Plotinus, a Platonist so like his master that one would think they lived together, or rather, since so long a period of time separates them, that Plato is born again as Plotinus."

Synesius, the saintly and illumined Bishop of Ptolemais, who lived between A.D. 370-430, says: "When first it comes to earth, it (the soul) embarks on this animal spirit as on a boat, and through it is brought into contact with matter. The soul's object is to take this spirit back with her; for if she were to abandon it and leave it behind on earth, the manner of her quick return would bring disgrace on her ... The soul which did not quickly return to the heavenly region from which it was sent down to earth had to go through many lives wandering."

Reincarnation, as a doctrine, is of the greatest asset to the Church. It explains as nothing else, how those who lived before the Christian dispensation are to be "saved" or partake in the blessings and privileges given to earth's humanity by the mission and works of Christ. ONLY through reincarnation, can we understand how He did and could take upon Himself the sins of the "WHOLE WORLD," not only those of His own time and thereafter, but also those who lived before Him and would, through reincarnation, LIVE AGAIN AFTER HIM.

There is nothing fatalistic about reincarnation, for in each recurring life expression we voluntarily surrender temporarily, our cosmic memory of preceding lives, so that we may not become embarrassed or worried by the memories and associations of the past.

Reincarnation is the logical and scientific sequence of evolution, as demonstrated by innumerable illustrations in the Book of Nature. It explains the incongruities, inconsistencies and apparent inequalities of life as no other hypothesis can or does.

Understanding reincarnation, we can understand why it is that the son of wealthy parents given all the advantages of life, turns out to be a failure …he is paying the price for a previously misspent life expression. We can understand how one born in a log cabin can become the ruler of a nation and the liberator of a race … he is reaping the reward of a life extraordinarily well spent in a previous incarnation, and is fulfilling a destiny the first steps of which were undertaken, long ages ago. We can understand the inequalities of human life, socially, industrially ... and economically.

Above all, we can only marvel, through an understanding and acceptance of this law, at the goodness, mercy and sublime justice of the Divine Power over all, that shows us through the operation of the Law how Divine Justice DOES manifest, and that though the "mills of God grind slowly, they grind exceedingly small," ... the big FACT being that they DO GRIND.

We can sense reincarnation. By personal living in the right way, you can develop your psycho-intellectual faculties to an extent that will enable you to recover your super-conscious memory and, little by little, reconstruct past lives. Many people have fleeting glimpses of recognition in the course of their lives, of people and places they are positive of never having visited physically, and of scenes and conditions which do not pertain to modern life at all. These are the fleeting impressions from the super-conscious memory, which from time to time glide past and through our normal consciousness and, without understanding reincarnation, are not rated at their true value.

The proof of reincarnation lies within each individual. Man is the epitome of the Four Elements. He is a microcosmos within himself. He is a universe of cells, each with its individual intelligence. Within his personal universe, these cells, countless in number, are dying by the millions almost momentarily. The cast off physical bodies of these cells are thrown out of the human systems as waste. The life spark in each cell immediately reincarnates in the new cells that are being produced (born) ... and does so over and over again, as Long as the human system lasts. The intelligence of all the cells makes up the sum total of the intelligence of the human system.

The best proof of a teaching is its ability to answer adequately all the questions that may be propounded regarding it. Reincarnation will be found to answer the complexities, incongruities and inequalities of human life and shows us also the absolute necessity of right living, clear and clean thinking.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

SPECIAL EXERCISE

Take the 12th and 13th verses of the Gospel of Matthew, (17th Chapter), and meditate upon them. There was nothing divine about John the Baptist or his former expression, Elias. Therefore, as a human being, what was said of him must be equally true of all others of his species. Meditate on your own general proclivities and tastes. Seek to learn through history, with what era or period they seem to be most in harmony. In the silence, seek to find your own place in evolution. Meditate on the quotation from Job. (Job 14:14).

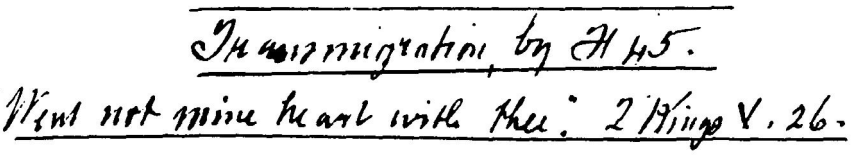
LECTURE #70

Brothers & Sisters:

It is now our distinct privilege to present another paper from John Yarkers's Notebook. This paper was written by a brother who called himself F 45, and the paper is dated 17 XII (18) 95. As you know, all these papers were written by hand and the writing is sometimes difficult to read, so we have decided that rather than guess at the illegible words, we will put a photocopy of them in the text and give you the pleasure of guessing at them yourself!



The Reincarnation, by F 45.

"Went not mine heart with thee." 2 Kings V. 26.

Whenever new ideas are formulated, whether on matters affecting religion, politics, service or any other topic, a vast amount of popular prejudice has to be [illegible] with. The Order of St. Martin is not however a Society of mushroom growth, it has now been in existence upwards of a century. Its ranks are composed of those inbred with high religious principles; persons of any cults are admitted into its fold; there is nothing antagonistic in its teachings and any known cult is in sympathy with the Hebrew and Christian creeds and it will be shown to be in strict accordance with those two cults by illustrations taken from the Volume of the Sacred Law. The principles of the Order are also understood and practiced in the East by Mussulman and Brahmin, by Parsee and Buddist; the noble Redman of the [illegible] hopes at a future time to be reunited with the Gilche Manito in the happy hunting grounds of the Great Hereafter.

The Druidic Theory was - "that the godly enter heaven northward, the ungodly are relegated back to the circles of Metempsychosis in the southern direction, from the moral equinoctial line, or the line of liberty of human existence on earth." (Moriem)

Transmigration is not necessary a rehabilitation of the corporeal nature, see 1 Corinthians XV.

It is singular that every cult should agree in admitting the doctrine of spirit transfer and yet so few teaches and so few of the various creeds are found to include those tenets amongst their followers; in fact as a general rule in this country, should a person believe in the doctrine of transmigration of souls he must mask his thoughts or run the risk of being laughed at as a fool, or put under restraint as a lunatic. Some serious thinking persons imagine such a doctrine contrary to all accepted ideas of religion but let them search their own sacred writings and it will be proved how much they err. In the notes which follow, naturally most of the references are made to the Bible; but let the student refer to the sacred writing of any such, whether it be the Koran, Vedas, Shastras, or Zendavesta and it will be found that the doctrine is of transmigration is promulgated in each. The Martinist may be of any cult, he understands that every creed or religion inculcates God, all terminate at the same point; he is the Initiate, his great hope is that he will one day attain Nirvana — be reabsorbed in אין

Let the student carefully examine his own scripture of whatever cult he may be and judge for himself whether or no the principles taught there are at variance with those of our founder the Unknown Philosopher.

The recruits we seek in our Order are those of "sound judgment and spirit and morals" and the object of these notes is to point out that there is nothing in the Order of St. Martin at variance with religion no matter what cult one may profess.

"Went not my heart with thee." How many thousands have read these words without having even thought of their Mystic meaning? The history of the leprosy of Naaman, his cure, the fearful but severe punishment of Gehazi is well known by every one; how many have studied the occult teaching contained in this short chapter.

From the time that the Mantle of Elijah fell into the hands of Elisha, he developed into a mystic of the highest possible kind — a Mahatma endorsed with a double portion of his Master's Great Spirit. When the prophet was about to pass from this sphere, he called upon his servant to choose his legacy. The wisdom of Elisha was exemplified by the choice he made, viz: that a double portion of Elijah's spirit should rest upon him. In the falling Mantle he had instant proof that his request was complied with (2 Kings 2:9). His subsequent history confirms the fact — if confirmation is needed — that his Master's spirit remained with him.

And Gehazi, what was the wish of Elisha as regards his servant? Was he to be disciple and friend? Was it the master's hope that the servant should be numbered against the prophets? Doubtless such was the master's wish if one reflects on the part allowed to be taken by Gehazi at the restoration of the child to life.

On the departure of the cleansed Naaman, from the dwelling of the prophets, Gehazi quickly matured his plan for [illegible]

One can well imagine Elisha in a trance, his spirit, for the time having departed from its tenement, following his erring servant who was hurrying after the great man of Syria to possess [illegible] dross of this world's goods, that servant little thinking that the great spirit of his Master was watching his every action, listening to every word. What is most astonishing is the thought that he did not feel his Master's presence, how dull must have been his perception. Only a short time previously he had been permitted with Elisha to take part in arousing the dormant spirit of a child, he had seen his Master struggling in his very soul and succeeding, in inspiring a dead child with renewed life and vigour, yet with such late evidence of his Master's power, his all in variance of being in the very presence of that Master. Poor Gehazi! With a mind so gross and material how could he ever attain Nirvana? With a mind properly disposed, what occult instruction a servant might have received from such a Master — 'Went not my heart with thee,' the words must have scorched and withered his very soul, think of the terrible punishment of being banished from the service of such a master, the awful sentance of banishment must have been more severely felt than the sudden contraction of the loathsome disease. To what perfection Gehazi might have attained under the tuition of Elisha it is impossible to imagine, but every hope of his attaining Moksha was blashed by his yielding his soul to his grovelling nature. What a contrast to his master who was taken direct from the plough, without even an opportunity of wishing parents or friends farewell.

Many persons have denounced the study of Theosophy as though it were something very little short of a crime and the doctrine of spirit transfer downright wickedness; but a study of the Bible will disclose the fact that the Book is becoming with instances of the spirit dissociating itself from the body. This going forth of the Spirit from its earthly tenement is not regarded as an event of unusual occurrence in eastern countries; but it is an essential qualification in any who would have full control over his that he should lead a pure and uncorrupt life. The nearer the approach to the Great All, the greater the spiritual power. He who would attain Nirvana, must annihilate self, and live only for the welfare of his fellow creatures; or as John of Parma states, "to loose oneself in God is the only object rowards which men should strive." It is the annihilistic or nothingness of Buddhism.

A knowledge of the power of the spirit of man to migrate must have been known from the earliest ages; of the many instances recorded in the Volume of the Sacred Law, a few are here quoted:

"The spirit of Elijah doth rest on Elisha." 2 Kings 2:15.

"And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophecy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions." Joel 2:28.

"Thy good deed was not hid from me but I was with thee," and "All these days I did appear to you, but I did neither eat nor drink, but ye did see a vision." Tobit 12:13 & 19.

"Elias it was who was covered with a whirlwind: and Elias was filled with his spirit; whilst he lived, he was not moved with presence of any prince, neither could any bring him into subjection." Ecclesiastics XLVIII: 2. 13.

"Then the angel of the Lord took him by the crown and bare him by the hair of his head and through the vehemancy of his spirit set him in Babylon over the den." Bel and the Dragon verse 36.

"Nathaniel said unto him, whence knowest thou me? Jesus answered and said to him, before that Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig tree, I saw thee." John 1:48.

"And he became very hungry and would have eaten; but whilst they made ready he fell into a trance." Acts 10:10.

"And Cornelius said, four days ago I was fasting until this hour; and at the ninth hour I prayed in my house, and behold a man stood before me in bright clothing." Acts 10:30.

"And it came to pass that when I was come again to Jerusalem, even while I prayed in the Temple I was in a trance." Acts 22:17.

"I knew a man in Christ about 14 years ago, (whether in the body I cannot tell; or whether out of the body I cannot tell; God knoweth) such an one was caught up to the third heaven." 2 Corinthians 12:2.

"I was in the spirit on the Lord's day." Revelations 4:2.

"So he carried me away in the spirit into the wilderness." Rev.17:3.

"And he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain." Revelations 21:10.

Many other examples might be cited from the Bible but the above will probably suffice for the purposes of the present paper, and to prove scriptural authority for the practice of Samadi.

The following is from the trial of Margaret Johnson, for witchcraft, which took place on the ninth day of March 1613. "But shee saith it is not the substance of their bodies that doth goe into anie such roomes, but their spirits that assume such shape and forme. And shee further saith that the devill, after hee begins to suck, will make a papp or a dug in a short time, and the matter he sucketh is blood. And further saith that the devill can raise foule wether and storms and soe he did at their meetinges. And she further saith that when the devill came to suck her pappe, he came to her in the likeness of a catt, sometimes of one colour, and sometimes of another. And since this trouble befell her her spirit hath left her, and she never saw him since." Witch, Warlock & Magician, page 254; by W. H. Davenport Adams.

So far as can be ascertained, no surprise was expressed by the judges of the unfortunate Margaret Johnson, at her curious statement of spirit projection; and it would be perhaps, unsafe to assume that her theory was accepted; but the fact remains that in the 17th century, spirit transfer was believed in.

A. S. Oliott says: — "The Mayavirupa, when intelligently projected beyond the physical body by the developed energy of an initiate of Occult Science, contains in it all its Manas and Buddhi (including the Chittam and Ahamkaram - seat of individuality), i.e., his Physical Intelligence and Spiritual Intelligence. The Initiate quits his earthly casket in which are left the Jiva and Linga-sarira), and for the moment lives, thinks and acts in the double of himself. Its atomic condition being less dense than that of the corporeal body, it has enhanced powers of locomotion and perception. Barriers that would stop the body, for example, the walls of a room — cannot stop it, for its particles may pass through the interstices of the vibrating gross matter composing the wall. It is in the subjective world, and may traverse space like thought, which is of itself a form of energy. Or, if he likes, the initiate may simply project a non-intelligent image of himself and make it appear at the spot at which he may have focalized his thought. It depends upon him whether the image shall be but an illusionary form, or his own self; it may be mere matter, or matter plus himself." (Theosophy, page 95.) (I also have seen this same thing, the pulse being only enfeabled 45 X Yarker)

In referring to the trance the same author states: "I have stood by a person in this death like lethergy, and found there was neither pulse, animal heat, nor breath, while, at the same time, the inner self of the ecstatic was apparently soaring in the supernal spheres, keenly alive to its rapturous experiences."[1]

Hargrave Jennings says: "Mystical, fantastical & transcendental, — nay, impossible, — as the studies of the Rosicrucians seem in these modern ultra practical days, it is forgotten that the truths of contemporaneous science are all based on the dreams of the old thinkers. Out of natural philosophy, the occult brethren sought the spirits of natural philosophy, and to this inner heaven — so

unlike ordinary life — through purifications, through invocations, through humbling and prayers, through penances to break the forms of body with the world, through fumigations and incensing to raise up another world about them, and to place themselves en rapport with the inhabitants of it, through the suspension of the senses, and thereby to the opening of other senses — to the shutting out of one state, in order to the passing into another state, — to all this the Rosicrucians sought to reach."[2]

Transmigration of the spirit is in accordance with the creed proposed by the Mussulmans: The Mureed must, mystically, always bear his murschid in mind and become mentally absorbed in him, through a constant meditation and contemplation of him. The teacher must be his shield against all evil thoughts. The spirit of the teacher follows him in all his efforts, and accompanies him wherever he may be, quite as a guardian spirit. To such a degree is this carried that he sees the master in all men and in all things, just as a willing subject is under the influence of the magnitizer. This condition is called 'self annihilation' into the Murshid or Sheikh. The latter finds in his own visionary dreams, the degree at which the Mureed has reached, and whether or not his soul has become bound to his own.[3]

"He (Buddha) taught the transmigration of souls, but considered that the highest state of felicity was that of Nirvana, in which the immortal spirit loses all bodily states and becomes at one with Deity, but individually and eternally happy."[4]

"My soul, while wandering on the earth inspire
With thy own blessed and impulse fire:
And from thy fables, mystic and divine,

Give all her powers with holy light to shine
Give love, give wisdom, and a power to love.

Such as connexions of base earth's control
Gently attracts the vice-subduing soul:
From sight's dark region aids her to retire,
And once more gain the palace of her sire.
O! all-propitious to my prayer incline!
Nor let those horrid punishments be mine
Which guilty souls in Tartarus confine,
With fetters fastened to its brazen floors,
And locked by hells tremendous iron doors.
Hear me, and save (for power is all thine own),
A soul desirous to be thine alone."

That we may all attain Nirvana is the ardent wish of

GNOSTIC — LECTURE #71

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

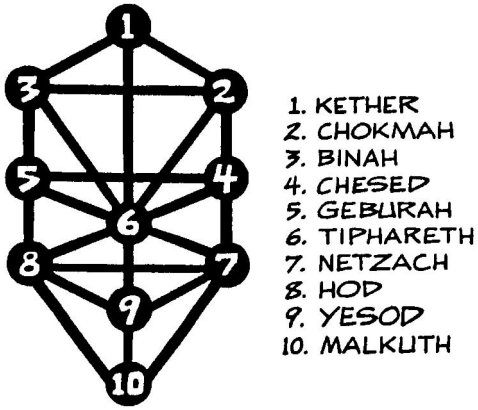
In the course of his teaching, Jesus taught his disciples a prayer which has since been recited by Christians everywhere, ever since, and which we know as the Lord's Prayer, or the Our Father. Contained in this prayer is a very ancient science handed down by a tradition, which had existed long before Jesus' time. But this teaching is expressed in such a condensed, encapsulated form in the Lord's Prayer, that it is not easy to grasp the full depth of its meaning.

An Initiate goes about things in the same way as Nature. Take a tree for instance: the whole tree ... roots, trunk, branches, leaves, flowers and fruit are all miraculously condensed in a pip or a seed. The marvel of a tree with all its potentiality to live for years and years and constantly produce fruit in spite of the buffeting of wind and weather, is all there, in that one little seed buried in the soil. And this is an image of what Jesus did: he condensed all his sacred science into the Lord's Prayer hoping that it would take root in the souls of those who recited it and meditated on it and that, as it grew, they would gradually discover the untold grandeur of all it contains ... the tree of Initiatic Science.

All Christians, everywhere, recite this prayer, whether they be Catholic, Protestant or Orthodox. But they have not always understood it correctly. In fact quite a lot of them think it is not rich eloquent enough. They have composed their own, far more impressive, poetic, all-embracing and — let's face it — interminable prayers ... and they find them highly satisfactory! Yes, but what do their prayers really contain? I'm afraid that if you analyze them you will not find very much. So, let's try and see if we can find what is hidden in the words of the Lord's Prayer ... although I must say at the outset that it is so immensely rich, we shall never be able to explain it all.

"OUR FATHER WHICH ART IN HEAVEN"

A Creator and Lord of Heaven and earth and of the whole universe exists and his dwelling place is in heaven. But heaven, in the Jewish tradition, has several different regions and each region has its name: Kether, Chokmah, Binah, Chesed, Geburah, Tiphereth, Netzach, Hod, Yesod and Malkuth.



Each heavenly region also has a numerous population consisting of one of the celestial hierarchies, from Angels to Seraphim. Here, in the 10 regions known in the Qabalah as the Sephiroth, dwells the God described by Moses and the Prophets as a consuming fire, a "jealous God." This was a God who inspired not love but fear and trembling in the hearts of men: "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." Then, one day, Jesus appeared ... and taught that God was our Father.

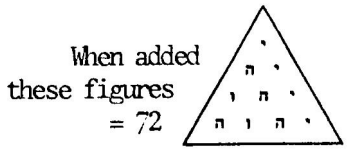
Jesus came to replace fear with love. Instead of being afraid of that terrible God, man can now love Him and nestle close to Him as a child with his father. This was the novelty of Jesus' teaching: we can love God with tender devotion, for He is our Father, we are all His sons and daughters. "Our Father which art in heaven"... Yes, and if our father is in heaven, then we too can be sure that we will reach heaven: one day the father and his children will be together. There is marvelous hope in these words: the hope of a glorious future. God has created us in His own image; we are His heirs; He will give us kingdoms; He will entrust us with the organization of planets; He will give us everything.

"HALLOWED BE THY NAME"

God has a name which we must know before we can bless or "hallow" it. Christians are not accustomed to calling God by name, they just call Him "God", but Jesus was heir to an ancient tradition and he knew that God has a mysterious, unknown name. Once a year, when the High Priest uttered God's name in the Holy of Holies, in Jerusalem, his voice was covered by the sound of trumpets, drums, flutes and cymbals, so that the people gathered before the Temple would not hear the sacred Name. In the Old Testament this name is given as Yahveh (Yahweh) or Jehovah and we only know that it consists of four letters: Yod, He, Vau, He:

Qabalistic tradition teaches that the Name of God is composed of 72 names or powers and it may help you to understand this better if I tell you how the Qabalah explains it. Each letter in the Hebrew alphabet is identified with a number. Yod י = 10; Heh ה = 5; Vau ו = 6 and Heh ה = 5, thus the four letters add to 26. When the Qabalists write the Name of God in a triangle they place the letters like this:



Another way is this:

When the Name is written the second way, the 24 knots represent the 24 Elders mentioned in Revelation and each knot has 3 fleurons, also giving a total of 72.

But what does it mean to "hallow" or sanctify God's name? Don't be surprised if I begin with the four elements: earth, water, air and fire, of which the world is made. There is a connection between the forces and virtues of the four elements and our bodies, hearts, minds, souls and spirits, and each element has its own presiding Angel. This is why, when an Initiate wants to purify himself he asks the Angel of the earth to absorb all the impurities of his physical body; the Angel of water to wash his heart; the Angel of air to purify his intellect and the Angel of Fire to sanctify his soul and spirit, the level of fire and light.

The notion of holiness has always been associated with the notion of light. The Bulgarian language contains a good example of this: svetia in Bulgarian means holy or saint and has the same root as svetlina, light. A saint (svetia) is one who possesses the light (svetlina): all is light within him, he shines and radiates light. And as you know, traditional art has always depicted a halo of light surrounding the heads of the saints. Holiness is an attribute of light, of the pure light, which shines in the spirit.

Only that which is pure can purify; only that which is holy can sanctify. Only light, therefore, can sanctify, because only light is holiness. It is in the purest light of the spirit that we must bless and sanctify God's name. A name represents, resumes or contains the entity it designates, so that if we are infused and penetrated by the holiness of light when we utter the name of God, we have the power to draw Him into ourselves and into everything around us, to sanctify all objects and all living creatures. It is not enough to go to church and repeat: "Blessed be thy name we must bless His name really and truly within ourselves. If we do this we shall know the extraordinary joy that comes from having the power to illuminate whatever we touch, whatever we eat, whatever we look at.

Yes, the greatest of all joys lies in really grasping what this means and every day, everywhere, in blessing, sanctifying and radiating light on all that comes our way. Then, only, are we doing what Christ told us to do. If all we do is repeat "Hallowed be thy name" and never actually do anything to bless that name in the way we live our daily lives, it means we haven't understood the first thing about it. When we say or write the name of God we ally ourselves to divine forces and we can actually draw these forces down into the physical sphere. But this work has to begin in the mind. "Hallowed be thy name." To hallow God's name is a work of the spirit and it takes place, first and foremost, in our minds.

"THY KINGDOM COME"

From this we see that the Kingdom of God does exist and that it has its own laws, and its own harmonious organization. To imagine what it is like is totally beyond us! But we do seem to get a fleeting glimpse of it every now and then in our purest, most spiritual moments, but it is only at these special times that we can begin to have any idea of what the Kingdom of God means. It is no use relying on our experience of earthly kingdoms, with all their disorders, conflicts and madness, to guide our imagination. It is possible to establish the Kingdom of God on earth; there is a whole body of teaching and methods to bring this about. But it is not enough to ask for it in our prayers. The trouble is ... we have been asking for it over the last 2000 years and it still has not come because people do nothing to make it come.

With this second petition, "Thy kingdom come", we have moved from the domain of the mind and spirit to that of the heart. God's name must be hallowed in our minds but it is in our HEARTS that His Kingdom must come, for the Kingdom of God is not a place BUT A DISPOSITION OR ATTITUDE, which reflects all that is good, generous and disinterested. Two thousand years ago Jesus said that the Kingdom of God was at hand: this was true for some, but for most people it still has not come and it never will, even in another twenty thousand years, if we are content to wait for it to come from the outside and do nothing about the inner reality. For some, then, the Kingdom has already come; for others it is coming ... and for others it will come one day, but who knows when!

We come now to the third petition of the Our Father, one that is even less well understood than the others:

"THY WILL BE DONE ON EARTH AS IT IS IN HEAVEN."

The whole of Initiatic Science is summed up in these few words. In Heaven God's will is always carried out without a murmur, because His servants are totally attuned to it. Amongst human beings this is not the case and that is why Jesus gave us this prayer, so that we should learn to adjust our own wills to the will of God. There are all kinds of comparisons we could use to express this idea: a mirror for instance, which faithfully reproduces the object it reflects, or any electrical appliance. Every electrical appliance is built on the principle of the two, complementary poles: the emissive pole on the one hand and, the other, the receptive pole, which has to tune in and adjust itself to the emitter. The emitter is Heaven and the receiver is the earth, material creation. The task of the material world is to attune its vibrations and even its physical forms to those of Heaven, to conform to the qualities and virtues of Heaven so as to manifest here, on earth, the splendor, which exists on High.

The mission of mankind is to work in the world and cultivate it so that it becomes a beautiful garden of flowers and fruit, a dwelling place for God ... and, instead of that, what do people do? Well, I know many who say, "Oh, you know, the earth doesn't really interest me anymore..." Of course, this simply shows they have not understood Christ's teaching. And yet, surely, it is clear enough. He says: "May thy will be done, on earth as it is done in Heaven." Everything is already perfect in Heaven … it is here, on earth, that there is still a lot to do. So we have to come down to earth, consciously and deliberately, and be ready to take risks and get involved with material things. This is the only way to conquer the material world and bring it life, the life of the Spirit: for the life of the Spirit has yet to be made manifest on earth as perfectly as it is in Heaven.

It is up to us, Christ's workers, to put our shoulders to the wheel. It is not enough to repeat this prayer and then live in such a way as to prevent it from being granted. We often do that; we are like someone who says, "Come in, come in" and then slams the door in your face. We mutter a prayer and then: "Bang", we close the door. It is amazing how people can be so unaware of what they are really doing ... and then they go and boast that they are Christians!

"Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven": in these few words are contained the whole of theurgic magic. If the disciple understands the awe-inspiring impact of this prayer, if he manages to make it come true, one day he will be a transmitter, a mirror in which Heaven is reflected ... he will, himself, be a Heaven. That is what is written into this prayer; that is what is expected of us.

The first request: "Hallowed be thy name", concerns our minds. In order to hallow and bless God's name, we must study, meditate and fill our conscious minds with light. The second request: "Thy Kingdom come", concerns our hearts, for God's Kingdom can only come into hearts that are full of love. The third request touches our wills: "Thy Will be done on earth as it is in heaven" ... implies hard work, obstacles to be overcome, victories to be won, and for all this, strength and perseverance are needed. That is why we have to train ourselves and learn to work with methods, which can help us to harmonize with Heaven and vibrate on the same wavelength. What do you think we go and see the sunrise for? So as to become like the sun, of course! So that the earth, our earth, our physical bodies, shall become like the sun. When someone is attuned to the sun and spends time in loving contemplation of it, he becomes luminous, and radiates warmth and life like the sun. So you see, our custom of being present at the sunrise is a very practical method for making this request of the Lord's Prayer come about. It is one method and there are plenty of others.

There is nothing more important for man than to apply himself to doing the will of God, because to do so is powerful magic. As soon as you decide that you are going to do only God's will your whole being is "occupied," set apart for God and closed to all other influences, and the forces of opposition which wanted to use you for their own ends can no longer do so. This is the only way to safeguard your purity, strength and freedom. If you are not occupied by the Lord you may be sure that you will be occupied by others and will end up by being at the beck and call of all manner of self-serving, anarchical will which will ultimately be your downfall.

"Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name, thy Kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." There is a hidden meaning in each of these requests, a meaning that can be discerned only by someone who has a profound grasp of reality. When archeologists examine ancient manuscripts or monuments and artifacts, they see the texts or objects and the plans and disposition of the old buildings as relics, which can give them some idea of that era and of the mentality of the people who left them. Thanks to these clues they can penetrate their intentions and have some idea of what they meant. And we can do the same: we can look on the prayer Jesus bequeathed us as a sort of monument, a testament to be studied and dwelt on until we uncover the vast teaching concealed in it.

The first three requests of the Lord's Prayer, then, correspond to the three principles in man: the mind, which must be full of light in order to illumine and make all things holy; the feelings or heart, the central powerhouse which must become God's Kingdom, the Kingdom of peace and of love for all creatures; and finally the will which corresponds to the physical dimension in which, by our acts, we have to express and reflect all that is in Heaven. Isn't that marvelous? To my mind no other activity can compare! When we have done our part, God will take care of us and give us all the rest,

... but what else can He possible give us? We shall have received everything. Once we understand what these three requests contain, we realize we already have it all: light, since we understand; happiness, since we love; health and strength, since we are working and accomplishing something. What else could one possibly want?

BRIEF DISCUSSION / QUESTIONS

"GIVE US THIS DAY OUR DAILY BREAD"

This is the first of the three requests, which directly concern man himself. The first three concerned the Lord (we always have to begin with God): to know and bless His name; to seek His Kingdom and do His will. Now man asks for something for himself and his first request is for bread. Why bread? ... Because bread is the symbol of all the different kinds of food we need for our existence.

The bread Jesus is talking about is certainly not just material bread. In the Gospels, spiritual nourishment is mentioned far more often than physical food. For example, when the Devil challenges Jesus to change stones into bread, he replies: "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." At another time he says: "Blessed are they that do hunger and thirst after righteousness." It is true, of course, that he multiplied the loaves and fishes to feed the multitude, but later he told that same multitude: "Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life .." The spiritual significance of food becomes even more evident at the Last Supper, when Jesus blessed the bread and wine and gave them to his disciples, saying. Take, eat; this is my body" and again, "Who so eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life."

Man's first supplication for himself, then, is for bread, the daily bread he needs to sustain life, but this need is even more poignant on the spiritual plane: someone who does not take some spiritual food every day, dies. (NOTE: All the ideas in this lecture will be deepened in lectures to come.)

"AND FORGIVE US OUR DEBTS AS WE FORGIVE OUR DEBTORS"

This is a better translation of the Gospel text than the usual "forgive us our trespasses" for each breach of the law is like a dishonest act by which we incur a debt we are going to have to pay back. If, for example, someone abuses another's love and trust, it is a form of theft and, one way or another he is going to have to pay back what he has taken dishonestly. The idea of karma is based on this truth: that we have to come back to this earth in order to pay for transgressions committed in previous incarnations Someone who has paid off all his debts need not reincarnate.

But whether we ask to be forgiven for our sins or released from our debts, the idea at the heart of this supplication is that of forgiveness. And this was new: for the first time in the history of mankind Jesus introduced the notion of a merciful God, a God who forgives. The God of the Old Testament was portrayed by Moses as a vengeful God who delighted in exterminating sinners: those who were guilty of transgressing the law were punished without mercy. And although the Gods of some other religions were less vindictive, no one had ever insisted on the mercy of God in the way Jesus did. The notion that God forgives is a logical consequence of the very first words of the Lord's Prayer: "Our Father". God forgives us for the simple reason that a father always forgives his children.

We must not forget, though, that Jesus added: "As we forgive our debtors." Unfortunately, as we do not release others from their debt nor forgive them their offenses ... the Lord does not release us from our own debts. Nor does he forgive us our sins. If we want to be forgiven we have, first of all ... to forgive! The notion of forgiveness is central to the Christian religion. (Father, forgive them for they know not what they do.) (Unto him that smiteth thee on the one cheek offer also the other.) etc..

Jesus' teaching was one of love, whereas the founders of the other major religions put more emphasis on justice, wisdom, knowledge or power. Of course it is true that Buddha taught compassion but nowhere will you find a doctrine of love of such breadth and such clarity as that of Jesus: in this he was unique. And that is why he was crucified.

When Jesus associated with social nobodies or even criminals and prostitutes he was flouting all the existing conventions. No one had ever seen anything like it people, who, by rights, should have been stoned ... were his friends: he visited them, ate with them, accepted their invitations. And that is why those who were determined to maintain the existing social order could not accept him. When they realized that he was revealing the most sacred truths to the poor and uneducated they decided he must die. Jesus was crucified because, when he revealed a religion of love, he broke down the age-old barriers which others had an interest in maintaining.

"AND LEAD US NOT INTO TEMPTATION, BUT DELIVER US FROM EVIL"

You will certainly be shocked if I tell you that I am not at all sure that what Jesus really said was: "lead us not into temptation" but I will explain why, in a moment.

For the time being, let's be content to note that in spite of this prayer we are continually subjected to temptation ... even Jesus was tempted. Saint Matthew says: "Then was Jesus led up of the spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil." If the Holy Spirit led Jesus into the desert to be tempted ... we must conclude that it was necessary for him to be subjected to these tests. In the desert the Devil taunted Jesus saying, "If thou be the son of God, command these stones to be made bread." Later, setting him on the pinnacle of the temple, he said: "If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down for it is written, He shall give His angels charge concerning thee, and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone." And finally, having taken Jesus up into a high mountain, he showed him all the kingdoms of the world and said: "All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me."

The Devil made these three propositions to Jesus for a very precise reason: as I have already explained, they correspond to the three levels in man: the physical, the astral and the mental. But what is even more interesting is the answer Jesus gave to each one, for they show us that if we want to resist temptation we have to know how to answer the tempter, what arguments to use against him. When someone replies to his suggestions with irrefutable arguments he realizes that he will be unable to seduce him and leaves him alone.

This is something you must realize: it depends entirely and only on you, whether or not you agree to be influenced. Even the Devil cannot force you against your will. Of course, if you have no discernment and do nothing to protect yourself, you are liable to be swayed. The spirits of evil are very skilful at presenting you with all kinds of appetizing bait and then, as soon as you take it, you are hooked and gradually, very gently, they will drag you under and destroy you. God has given them the power to do this, but only if you are weak and ignorant. Once you have been drawn into their orbit, once you have taken a step in their direction their power is tremendous: they can tear you to pieces ... and it is your own fault. It is you who are guilty. They are only being themselves and doing what they are allowed to do: tempt you. That is their job. But why do you have to be so stupid as to let them snare you in the first place?

Yes, if the forces of evil destroy a man it is because he has allowed them to do so. It all depends on him: if he refuses to let them in to take possession of him they are powerless. Their power comes from the fact that they manage to fool him into thinking that if he does thus and so he will be stronger, richer or happier. If he succumbs to their enticements they can get a grip on him and destroy him. But if he remains steadfast they are powerless to harm him. So one could say that man is as powerful as God, but only when it is a question of saying "No", of rejecting, resisting any attempt to influence him. When it is a question of imposing his own will and getting what he wants it is much more difficult; his possibilities are limited. But when it comes to saying "no" man is all-powerful. Hell itself can do nothing to him against his will. If he lets himself be swayed it is through ignorance: he is not aware of his own strength.

In some countries ... Turkey, for instance ... they have a special wrestling technique: the wrestlers are almost naked and their bodies are oiled, so it is almost impossible to get a hold on an adversary: he slips through their hands like an eel. Well, that is how we should behave when we are confronted with a bad influence. If you say "no" to the spirits of darkness it is as though you were "oiled" and they cannot get a hold on you. But if you have bits of string and all kinds of loose ends ... symbolically speaking ... then they can get a grip on you and you will have a real job to shake them off. They will truss you up and throw you to the ground. So ... leave no loose ends for undesirable entities to hang on to, be so slippery that they cannot get a grip ... and to be slippery means to be capable of saying "no."

When you find yourself faced with temptation say to yourself: "Of course, it's a very attractive idea, really enticing, but it's not for me! I intend to become a man of wisdom, a Son of God. I'm not going to be led astray; I shall overcome this temptation. I'll be stronger than it is." And, above all, do not Look upon temptation as a handicap or an obstacle in your path. On the contrary, use them to stimulate you and make you stronger. A man of wisdom, an Initiate, never tries to avoid temptation, in fact he sometimes contrives it on purpose in order to acquire self-control. Someone who runs away from temptation is bound, sooner or later, to give in. You cannot solve problems by running away from them.

So now you will have understood why I doubted that Jesus really said, "Lead us not into temptation." We need to be tempted in order to measure our capabilities and become stronger. As you know, the original Gospel manuscripts are lost and only copies exist. I believe the original prayer would probably have said: "Give us the strength to resist temptation." When we are tempted it is like having a problem to solve or an exam to pass it makes us put our best foot forward and show what we are capable of. So we should not pray to be spared temptation, only to be capable of resisting. Evil, and the forces of evil exist ... and it is useless to ask the Lord to wipe them out : he won't do it. In the Book of Revelation we read that it is only at the end of time that the Beast will be cast into a lake of fire and brimstone. Until then we shall always be up against evil, (for we live in a world of duality) and we had better learn the right attitude to take in order to deal with it.

And now let's take a look at the final verse of the Lord's Prayer:

"FOR THINE IS THE KINGDOM, AND THE POWER AND THE GLORY, FOR EVER."

In order to understand these words we must turn our attention to the spiritual regions I mentioned earlier, (The Tree of Life) … to what Jesus called "the heavens" which correspond to what the Qabalah calls the Sephiroth. The 10 Sephiroth together form the Sephirotic Tree or Tree of Life. The name of each Sephirah expresses a quality or attribute of God. Kether - the crown; Chokmah - wisdom; Binah - intelligence or understanding; Chesed - mercy; Geburah - strength; Tipareth - beauty; Netzach - victory; Hod - glory; Yesod - the foundation; Malkuth - the Kingdom. The tenth Sephirah, Malkuth, reflects and summarizes all the others.

Jesus said that the Kingdom of God was like a mustard seed. A seed always represents a beginning, the beginning of a plant or a tree. But we must realize that although, on the physical plane, all our beginnings are below, the situation is reversed on the spiritual plane: on this level everything begins on high. And this is why growth on the physical plane is an upward movement, whereas on the spiritual plane, it is a downward movement. The seed of the Tree of Life, therefore, is Kether, the first Sephirah. When the seed begins to grow it divides into two before putting out a trunk, branches, leaves, buds, flowers and fruit; and the fruit, in turn, produces more seed. When the seed, Kether, is planted, it becomes a tree as it passes through each Sephirah in turn all the way to Malkuth. The ripe, life-bearing fruit, the flesh given for our nourishment, is Yesod and this is the fruit that produces the seed: Malkuth. So you see that at the end of its cycle of growth the seed that was first sown, becomes the seed in the fruit and Malkuth, the seed below is identical to Kether, the seed above, for the beginning and end of any one thing are always identical. Every new departure is the conclusion of an earlier development and every conclusion is a new departure for further development. Everything has a beginning and an end and yet there is no such thing as an absolute beginning. Every cause produces its effect ... and each effect becomes a new cause producing a new effect.

In the final phrase of the Lord's Prayer, "For thine is the Kingdom, and the Power and the Glory," Kingdom, Power and Glory correspond to the three Sephiroth: Malkuth, Yesod and Hod.

The Kingdom is Malkuth, the Kingdom of God, the realm of realization, and this is the planet Earth.

The Power is Yesod, which means "foundation" or basis, because this is the Sephirah which reigns over purity, the true foundation of all things. Sexual energy is associated with Yesod because true power, the life-force, is expressed in sexual energy. It is this same power, on a higher plane, which gives rise to all great achievement. The planet associated with Yesod is the Moon.

The Glory is Hod, the bright light of knowledge and science. Its planet is Mercury.

So this last phrase of the Lord's Prayer means: "Thine are the three regions which represent the final stages of Kether's growing into Malkuth; the three regions which represent the realm of realization." The Kingdom, the Power and the Glory form a triangle, a repetition of the first triangle: "Hallowed be thy Name, thy Kingdom come, thy Will be done." The Name, the Kingdom and the Will are Kether, Chokmah and Binah. So the upper triangle: Kether, Chokmah and Binah, which represents creation in the invisible, spiritual world, is reflected in the triangle below: Malkuth, Yesod and Hod, which represents formation, realization on the physical level. The phrase "forever and ever..." corresponds to the Sephirah Netzach which means "eternity".

Now, perhaps you are wondering where to situate the remaining Sephiroth: Tiphareth, Geburah and Chesed. You should be able to find the answer for yourselves if you work out the correspondences using the same method and with the explanations I have just given you. But let's refer to the Our Father again and take it in order, starting with the fourth verse: "Give us this day our daily bread." Our true daily bread, the inexhaustible source of life is the light flowing from Tiphareth, the Sephirah ruled by the Sun, for it is from the sun that man receives both physical and spiritual nourishment. (We will deal more with this in the time ahead.)

"Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors." This request corresponds to the Sephirah Chesed and when we say these words we are creating a bond with Chesed. Jupiter, the symbol of benevolence and generosity, is the planet, which corresponds to Chesed. In order to pardon others we have to have that sovereign assurance we find in Jupiter that no one can ever rob us of the riches God has in store for us.

"Lead us not into temptation (or preferably, give us the strength to resist temptation) but deliver us from evil." This verse represents Geburah with its corresponding planet, Mars. It was the Angels of Geburah who banished Adam and Eve from Paradise after they had been tempted by the serpent, for they have the special task of combating evil and impurity of every kind. When you establish a bond with Geburah you become stronger, more able to resist evil.

Now, the first Sephirah, Kether, corresponds to the sublime World of Emanation, which the Qabalah calls Atziluth. Chokmah & Binah correspond to the World of Creation, or Briah. Chesed, Geburah, Tiphereth, Netzach, Hod and Yesod, correspond to the World of Formation, or Ietzirah; and, finally, Malkuth, which is a condensation of all the other Sephiroth, corresponds to the World of Realization, Assiah.

Malkuth is the Kingdom; Yesod the Power; Hod the Glory, and Netzach, Eternity. So when you say, "For thine is the Kingdom, and the Power, and the Glory, for ever", you create a bond between yourself and the last Sephiroth of the Tree of Life.

Are you beginning, now, to have some inkling of the vast scope of this short and apparently simple prayer Jesus gave us? It contains the whole universe. What immense vistas it opens before our eyes! And what I have told you this evening is only a fraction of its wonder. If you think about it and meditate on it you will discover a great deal more for yourself.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

GNOSTIC — SUPERNUMERARY LECTURE #20
THE LORD'S PRAYER

The word "prayer" has no absolute meaning in our day. It means one thing to a child who says, "Now I lay me down to sleep... ," and something else to a person who recites the Lord's Prayer in a monotonous drone. It is amazing to me that so few people have really understood the new insight in prayer that Jesus gave. He explains that prayer does not deal with a capricious God who demands attention. Prayer is not something we do to God, but something we do to ourselves. It is not a position, but a disposition. It is not flattery, but a sense of oneness. It is not asking, but knowing. It is not words, but feeling. It is not will, but willingness.

The Lord's Prayer is voiced by millions of people throughout the Christian world. It has become a ritual, a practice that has lost its meaning, but not its place, in the life of most Christians. The prayer is often repeated in a singsong fashion, over and over again. And yet Jesus specifically said, in the words preceding the prayer, "Use not vain repetitions, for your Father knoweth what things you have need of, even before you ask." So when Jesus said, "After this manner, so therefore pray ye," He had no idea of giving a prayer to end all prayers, but rather to give some insights into the way of prayer. The Bible is the result of many translations from one language to another, and from one idiom to another. In the King James Version, from which most revisions have come, the Lord's Prayer is rendered as a prayer of supplication. And yet, most modern scholars agree that in the original, it is a series of positive statements, or affirmations. I would like briefly to go through the prayer, to catch the great implications of the more accurate rendering, which modern Bible scholarship has given us. And then I will suggest a simple version that articulates the key ideas.

Our Father: This is "the true point of beginning." God is my father; I am His child. This declares unity with God, which is man's greatest, and perhaps his only, need. We begin on this note, not to get God's attention, but to turn our attention to that which loves us with everlasting love.

Who art in heaven: This forever locates God, not in the skies, but as the pattern within the seed, the allness within the illness, the Christ ever within man. We have within us the great power and potency, which is God. We have ignored it; we have shut our eyes and ears and understanding to its glorious possibility. But it is ever present; it is a Presence. Religions cannot make a man good, from the point of putting goodness in him. No metaphysical teaching can make one successful by putting a success potential within him. The whole need is to provide the climate and encouragement and techniques for stirring up and releasing "the gift of God that is within."

Hallowed be Thy name: This is an important realization, of the wholeness and the omnipresence of God. The word "hallowed" comes from the same root word as "whole, hearty, healthy." Thus, in a sense, it says, "Wholeness and perfection is the nature of God." "The same fountain cannot send forth both sweet and bitter waters," said Jesus. God cannot send illness and trouble, for these things are unlike His nature.

Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven: "Kingdom" is the ideal, the perfect idea of creation. Each person is a perfect idea in God-mind, a plan possible of infinite capacity. And the plan is imbued with a ceaseless urge toward fulfillment. This is what is called "God's will," the ceaseless longing of the Creator to express Himself and perfect Himself in the creation. So this statement is a decree: Let that perfect idea, which I AM in spirit, unfold in me and through me. Let the divine will lead me into a manifestation in the outer, of that which I am within.

Give us this day our daily bread: The spirit of the original is, "Thou art our supply, and the daily manifestation of that supply." This is not asking God for supply, which would be like a fish asking the ocean for water. It is simply an affirmation that God is substance, and a claiming of our inheritance. In all creation man alone is an individual; man alone is free. And yet man alone is sick and knows want, because in his freedom, he has failed to accept or to claim his inheritance.

Forgive us our debts, as we also have forgiven our debtors: This shows the working of the great cosmic law: give and receive, cause and effect, forgive, and you are forgiven. In a sense, God does not forgive, as a special act on His part. God is love. God cannot forgive you, for there can be nothing but love in God. But in love is the power of washing away transgressions. Through love, man can forgive or give good for evil. If you let go, you let flow the divine love that moves in, and cleanses.

Leave us not in temptation, but deliver us from evil: Certainly, God would never lead us into temptation. Can light lead you into darkness? There is no darkness in light. So the words we use are, "Leave us not in temptation...." This is affirming the urge for expression of our potential that is so great in us. This urge is what we call God, who never leaves us comfortless, never abandons us in trial or in temptation, but is always the power of help and healing and deliverance. The temptation comes not from some power on the outside, but from our human consciousness, our selfishness, our pride, our ego. And the evil is the confusion that arises from our temptations. The prayer is saying that God will not fail you or forsake you, for there is a spirit in you, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth you understanding.

For Thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory, forever: Not part of the original prayer, this has been added for liturgical purposes. It is a suitable closing, leading to humility, saying, "God is my power to think; God is the thought of aspiration; God is the will to commence; God is the strength to keep on."

Amen: This does not mean, "So it will be." Certainly it does not mean, "I do hope it will be." It means, rather, "So it is." It is complete, now.

Here is a simple version of the Lord's Prayer. If we fix this interpretation in our consciousness, even when we speak the traditional words, they can take on a new connotation for us.

Our Father who art in heaven: I am now conscious of the infinite and eternal Presence in whom I live and by which I think and create.

Hallowed be Thy name: This Presence in me is whole and complete. It is the activity of health that heals, of intelligence that inspires, of substance that prospers, and of love that harmonizes.

Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in heaven: I am God's glorious possibility. I now let His perfect idea of me unfold in me and through me. My desire for betterment is God's desire to perfect that which He is expressing as me, and I let Him have His way. I see myself doing that which He sees me as being.

Give us this day our daily bread: I have no existence outside of Cod's Presence, for I am that Presence expressing as me. Therefore, I can never be separated from the all—sufficient substance of the opulent Universe. I claim my divine inheritance and I daily, perpetually, manifest abundant supply.

Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors: The Presence in me is my potential for dissolving all conflicts or transgression. The Presence is Love, and it loves in me and through me as I forgive. It releases me as I loose and let go of all my limited thoughts about myself or others.

Leave us not in temptation but deliver us from evil: The Presence in me is my light and my deliverance. There is no darkness in the light, and there can be no darkness in me when I am established in spiritual unity with the Presence within me,—which is "better than light and safer than a known way."

For Thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory, forever, Amen: In all that I seek to be or do or have, I humbly realize that in the Presence is my power to think, my very thought of aspiration, my will to commence, my strength to keep on, my power to achieve, and the glory of all my accomplishments. This is the Truth, and it is now done.

GNOSTIC LECTURE #73

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

We have been given the admonition; "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father in Heaven is perfect." So now you know your goal, your destiny! But modern man has lost sight of that light which flowed from all the sanctuaries of Antiquity to teach men that they were sons of God .. and so they are in the grip of slavery .. the worst possible form of slavery. When Jesus came and revealed the tremendous truth to the multitudes he was crucified; it had always been concealed from the masses up to then, for fear that once they realized their own dignity they would no longer submit to the rules and regulations imposed by the Sadducees and Pharisees. Jesus Christ was the most revolutionary of all God's messengers. He flouted all the old laws and was made to pay on the cross for his boldness in telling the people they were all children of the same Father.

The Old Testament had already declared: "Ye are gods", but this had been deliberately ignored, and still is, to this day. And yet the key to men's salvation and reintegration is in their recognition of the fact that they are all children of the same Father: God, and of the same Mother: Nature or the Universal Soul. Until they realize this they will never know their true nature, they will be out of touch with the essential core of their own reality and, naturally, they will continue to suffer. Whether they refuse to acknowledge the divine origin of mankind or whether they simply neglect to seek out the divine spark within themselves, they will all suffer, for it is impossible to find happiness if one rejects the basic reality of man's divine essence.

Yes, God has planted in the heart of man a spark, a seed, a model of perfection and splendor and has enjoined him to correspond more closely to that model until he becomes one with it. This was what Jesus was saying when he told his disciples: "Be ye therefore perfect as your Father who is in Heaven perfect." But how can we be as perfect as our Heavenly Father if we have never seen Him and do not know what He is like? The fact is: it is not necessary to see Him! In each of us there slumbers, like a seed, that image of our Heavenly Father's perfection, so all we need to do is nourish and water that seed and breathe life into it and, gradually, we shall come closer and closer to perfection. Deep in each man's heart lies this seed engraved with the indestructible image of divine perfection, but it needs something to nourish it and strengthen it, something to stimulate its growth … and that something is a high ideal: a lofty ideal is the essential catalyst if that seed is to grow into a healthy plant. It is because of this that one can say that everyone comes into the world with a mission … but be sure you understand the word "mission" correctly. A great many, very ordinary people delude themselves with the idea that they have a mission: they have no special gifts or talents but they have got it in their heads that they have been sent by Heaven to put the world to rights .. and when one sees how puny and powerless they are, one can only laugh! Of course we do have a mission, all of us, but we must be sure we know what it is. Our mission is to bring all the talents and virtues Heaven has sown in us to their full flowering. It is perfectly possible that, from time to time, Heaven should choose a very special being for a very special mission … but the mission of all men is to grow and develop until they reach perfection. Even if their talents are not outstanding, even if they seem not much better than animals, this is their mission: TO IMPROVE THEMSELVES AND TO WORK AT THEIR OWN EVOLUTION. Unfortunately, there are always plenty of "takers" for false missions … people who think that, like Joan of Arc, they are going to save France, or somewhere else … but their veritable mission does not interest them and that is a pity.

First and foremost we must fulfill the mission God has entrusted to each of us: to become perfect, as He is perfect. And if we cannot complete our task in one short incarnation, we shall come back and go on with it in another. For when Jesus told us to be as perfect as our Heavenly Father, reincarnation was obviously implicit in the command. Otherwise, how could he, who was so wise and enlightened, possibly have asked human beings to become perfect in only one life? Is it possible that he did not fully realize the weakness of men or the immense majesty of God? No, if he had not considered reincarnation, this precept of becoming perfect would have been nonsense … but in the light of reincarnation it makes perfect sense. And if Jesus demanded perfection of us, it was because he knew that perfection was the law of the entire universe.

God is perfect and man is not. But man can become perfect, for the Book of Genesis tells us that man was made in the image of God: "And God said, let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea …" And a few lines further on, it says: "So God created man in His own image, in the image of God created He him." The word "image" is repeated in the second verse … but not the word "likeness" … and one may ask, "Why?" and "What is the difference between image and likeness?" It means that God intended to create man in His own image and likeness but He did not do so. He created him only in His image, in other words He gave man all the faculties He himself possessed but He did not give him the full fruition of those faculties: the likeness.

It might help you to understand better if we take the example of an acorn: this tiny nut is in the image of its parent, the oak tree, by which I mean that it possesses potentially all the oak's characteristics and qualities … but it does not seem to be in the least like its parent-tree. Just look at the difference between them! The acorn can only become an oak if it is planted. Man is in the image of God, which means that he possesses the same attributes: wisdom, love, power and so on, but to an infinitely lesser degree. When, in the course of time, he attains his full stature he will be like God because he will possess the divine attributes in all their fullness.

So you see that the evolutionary process … the passage from "image" to "likeness" implies reincarnation. God said, "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness," but He did not bring the likeness to completion! "God created man is His own image, in the image of God created He him." By leaving out the word "likeness" and repeating the word "image" Moses secretly implied the idea of reincarnation.

"But," you might object, "there's no mention of reincarnation in the Gospels." Well, that is where you are mistaken. True, the word is not mentioned explicitly, but it is there, as plain as day, for anyone who can read.

Let's have a look at some of the questions Jesus or his disciples asked, and the answers they received. One day Jesus asked, "Whom do men say that I am?" and we may well wonder what this question really means. Haven't you often heard people asking a question like that? And now, look at the answer he got from his disciples: "Some say that you are John the Baptist; some, Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets." How can you say that someone is quite another person, especially if that other person has been dead for a long time … unless, of course, you accept reincarnation?

On another occasion Jesus and his disciples met a man who was born blind, and his disciples asked: "Master, who did sin, this man, or his parents, that he was born blind?" This man could not have sinned in his mother's womb before he was born! So, either the question makes no sense … or we have to recognize that Jesus and his disciples took it for granted that the blind man had lived on earth before. The disciples asked if it was his parents who had sinned because they knew from Jewish law that although every infirmity is a result of having broken the law, it does not necessarily mean that the one who pays the debt is the one who sinned, for it quite often happens that someone is allowed to sacrifice himself for another.

This was a generally accepted belief amongst the Jews of that time and the disciple's question, therefore, implied that they knew the blind man was paying a debt incurred through a breach of the law, for no man is born blind by chance or because it had pleased God to afflict him in that way ... as Christians imagine! And Jesus answered: "Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents: but that the works of God should be manifest in him."

Men suffer for two reasons:

(1) Because they have sinned and have to be punished, or

(2) Because they are sinless themselves, they take on someone else's karma and sacrifice themselves in order to hasten their own evolution.

But there is also a third category: THOSE WHO HAVE COMPLETED THEIR OWN EVOLUTION AND ARE COMPLETELY FREE; THEY HAVE NO NEED TO RETURN TO EARTH. And yet, very often, they do so because they are willing to suffer every imaginable disease, pain or infirmity, even martyrdom, in order to help other human beings. That blind man comes into this third category.

Let us consider a few more points: One day Jesus was told that John the Baptist had been put in prison and the Gospel story simply says: "Now when Jesus heard that John was cast into prison, he departed for Galilee." Shortly after that, Herod ordered the execution of John the Baptist and his head was cut off. After the Transfiguration the disciples asked Jesus, "Why then do the scribes say that Elias must first come?" Jesus answered: "Elias truly shall first come and restore all things. But I say to you, Elias has come already and they knew him not, but they have done unto him whatever they listed." And the Gospel adds: "Then the disciples understood that he spoke to them of John the Baptist." It is obvious, therefore, that John the Baptist was the reincarnation of Elias. But there is another text, too, that tells us the same thing: when an angel appeared to Zacharias to tell him that his wife, Elizabeth, would bear a son, he said, "And he shall go before God in the spirit and power of Elias."

Now, let us look at the story of Elias and see what he had done to deserve being beheaded when he came back as John the Baptist. It is a very interesting story. Elias lived at the time of King Ahab whose Queen, Jezebel, was the daughter of the King of Sidon and, because of Jezabel, Ahab and his people worshipped Baal. One day Elias came before King Ahab and reproached him for being unfaithful to the God of Israel, saying, "There shall not be dew nor rain these years, but according to my word." Then, instructed by God, Elias went and hid in the mountains so that the King could not find him. At the end of three years the country was ravaged by drought, the people were starving and God sent Elias to King Ahab once again. When Ahab saw Elias he reproached him bitterly for having caused the drought, but Elias replied: "I have not troubled Israel; but thou, and thy father's house, in that ye have forsaken the commandments of the Lord, and thou hast followed Baal ... Now therefore send and gather to me all Israel unto Mount Carmel, and the prophets of Baal ,,, four hundred and fifty." When they were all assembled, Elias told them they would now see who was the real God. "I, even I only, remain a Prophet of the Lord, but Baal's prophets are four hundred and fifty men. Let them give us two bullocks and let them choose one bullock for themselves and cut it in pieces and lay it on wood, and put no fire under; and I will dress the other bullock and lay it on wood and put no fire under. And call ye on the name of your gods, and I will call on the name of the Lord, and the god that answereth by fire, let him be God."

The prophets did as he said and all morning long they invoked the name of Baal, "0 Baal, hear us!" But there was no voice, nor any that answered .. and Elias mocked them and said, "Cry aloud, for he is a god; either he is talking or he is pursuing, or he is in a journey, or per adventure he sleepeth and must be awakened!" The prophets cried all the louder and even slashed their own bodies with knives, for, being magicians, they hoped that the blood would attract ghosts and specters who would set fire to their offering. But nothing happened. So when evening came and there was still no answer from Baal, Elias decided that was enough, and taking 12 stones he built an altar with a trench all around. Then he put wood on the altar, cut the bullock in pieces and laid the pieces on the wood and poured water all over the altar and the sacrificial bullock until it filled the trench. When everything was ready Elias called on God: "Lord God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy word." Then the fire of the Lord fell from Heaven with such power that everything was consumed; nothing was left, neither victim, nor wood, nor stones, nor water and the terrified people recognized that the God of Elias was the true God. But Elias, who no doubt was a little too pleased with himself, ordered that the four hundred and fifty priests be taken down to a nearby brook and massacred.

This is why, as was to be expected, he too had his throat cut. For there is a law, which Jesus referred to in the Garden of Gethsemane when Peter lunged at the high priest's servant and cut off his ear. He said: "Put up again thy sword into its place for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword." Now the truth of these words is not always demonstrated in the space of one lifetime. Elias, for instance, did not die by the sword. Not only was he not massacred, but a fiery chariot was sent to take him straight to Heaven. It was only later, when he returned to earth as John the Baptist that he received his punishment. Jesus knew who he was but could do nothing to save him, justice had to take it's course.

The Christians accepted reincarnation until the fourth century, as did the Jews, Egyptians, Indians, Tibetans, etc. .. But as we have learned previously, this doctrine was eliminated for policy reasons whereby the priests could exercise a tighter control over the lives of the faithful. No doubt some of the Church Fathers also thought that with the people believing in reincarnation .. it would give them too much time .. and they would improve too slowly, whereas if the people were told they had only one life .. they would improve more quickly. But with the elimination of the doctrine of reincarnation (and other mystical principles and practices) from the exegetics, the Church gradually invented more and more dreadful things to frighten people into obedience; … by the Middle Ages, all they believed in was devils, Hell and eternal damnation. And not only did the people fail to improve through fear and dread .. they became worse .. and ignorant to boot! And this is why it is essential for the Christian religion to recover and restore this teaching, for nothing is true and nothing in life makes sense without it. When there is no knowledge of reincarnation it makes the God whom Jesus presented as our Father be seen as capricious and whimsical and a monster of cruelty.

If you want further proof, go and ask a priest or a pastor why such and such a person was born into an affluent family where he has every opportunity, whereas another is born in a slum and deprived of even a basic education. Why is one person good-looking, intelligent, healthy and succeeds easily and another is ugly, deformed, sickly, poor and plagued with "bad luck" and a lack of brains. He will reply that it is the will of God. Perhaps he will speak of predestination and grace, but you will not be any the wiser for it.

If such an answer is true, we are left to conclude that God is so fickle and erratic that He does whatever He fancies, that He favors some and hates others; gives to this one and not to the other arbitrarily. Well, for the sake of argument, let's accept that this is so … after all God is God and if it is His will … so be it … all we can do is bow our heads and accept whatever is our lot. But in that case how can you possibly explain why He should be furious and outraged if people who have never had a chance to learn any better behave badly, or become atheistic, unscrupulous and vicious. If it is really He who has given them that mentality, and sent them into the world with so little intelligence and such evil in their hearts, why should He then punish them? Simply because He is all-powerful? Couldn't he have made them honest, kind, intelligent and wise? Not only is it supposed to be His fault if they commit crimes .. but in addition He punishes them for their wrong-doings too! Something is very wrong here! Why isn't God more consistent, more logical and just? He could at least leave people alone. But no .. He has to torment them by banishing them in Hell f or all Eternity!

And there, again, something is terribly wrong. How long have they been sinning for? Thirty, forty, maybe fifty years? Well, all right, let them stay in Hell for the same number of years, but no more. Not forever … that would be unbelievably cruel.

Now, when the truth of reincarnation is accepted, everything looks quite different: It can be seen that God is really and truly Master of the universe, the noblest, most sublime and most just … and we can understand that whatever station or position we find ourself in life … it is because we have earned it. If we are poor, unintelligent and unhappy it is our own fault because we have not made use of all the wealth He gave us at the beginning. We wanted to try all kinds of costly experiments and He is so immensely generous and tolerant that He let us misuse our freedom.

Please write this in your notebooks in a prominent position:

WE ARE NOT PUNISHED FOR OUR SINS … WE ARE PUNISHED BY OUR SINS!

I hope you can now see more clearly the meaning of Jesus' words: "Be ye therefore perfect even as your Father in Heaven is perfect." This precept has been rejected as being too difficult to fulfill, whereas, in fact, the point is not so much whether you are going to succeed or fail in it, but to take it seriously as an ideal to be aimed at. Shall we achieve our ideal? And if so, when? That is not for any man to say and we should not even bother our heads about it. Just remember that it is our duty to attain the likeness of God. Perhaps no human being has ever achieved it; divine perfection is so infinitely beyond us. But we must still desire and long for it, for it is this aspiration, which sparks the qualities and virtues dormant in us into life, which makes it possible for us to benefit from their existence. It is this aspiration which sets them in motion so that we can actually feel their help and support. The Creator has planted untold possibilities in us, but a high ideal is the fuse, which is needed to make them active and effective. A high ideal is what sets everything in motion.

R+C LECTURE #74

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

As was said in Liber Twenty — we are responding in these last lectures of Phase Two, to information requested by fellow members. By far the majority of questions asked have to do with reincarnation and karma, so we are having something of a blitz on these particular topics.

We read in Galatians 6:7 "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." In this simple scriptural passage is summed up one of the most penetrating, exacting and far—reaching laws of a cosmic nature that have come within the scope of human knowledge - the inescapable and immutable Law of Karma. This Law is also known as the Law of Cause & Effect; or Law of Compensation.

This Law has been mentioned often in previous lectures, for reincarnation and the Law of Compensation can hardly be considered apart from each other. It is a law in both the spiritual and material worlds. It operates in and through the minutest details of life affairs, as the governor to an engine, ensuring that the ordering of our daily lives and the exercise of our free will shall only be in strict accord with the rate and measure of progress to which we are entitled as the result of merit and demerit in this life, as well as that brought over from our previous mortal expressions.

The term "Karma" is Sanskrit, and although it is a comparatively recent interpolation into the English language, it has already found extensive acceptance and a more or less general understanding. It is defined; briefly, as "the effect of any act, religious Or otherwise; the law of ethical causation regulating the future life; inevitable retribution; an idea of Brahmanic origin but developed by Buddhists."

Among the ancients, some cults sought to develop the truth of Reincarnation into the doctrine of TRANSMIGRATJON OF SOULS; that is, offering punishment to those who misused their immediate mortal expressions, by having their souls incarnated in the bodies of lower animals in the next life expression. Those who used their mortal lives advantageously, were rewarded by having their souls incarnated in still better human expressions next time.

The idea of transmigration of souls was a mistaken concept, (we have already noted in Liber 20 that there is no retrogression of the soul into lower forms) … but it is evidence of the effort to recognize the action of cause & effect, and an attempt to "make the punishment fit the crime", or to apply retributive justice to all evil effects resulting from causes which had their origin in error, ethical or physical.

Karma is inextricably interwoven with the truth of Reincarnation and the intermediate states of consciousness between death and rebirth and also between birth and death.

The "Man from Missouri" wants to be "shown". He wants proofs Christianity teaches the existence of Heaven and Hell. But the Christian Church cannot prove it by any laboratory method, … or any method for that matter, acceptable to "doubting Thomases" or scientists. We shall not discuss Heaven & Hell at present, but we will say with all the positivity at our command, that the existence of that other world in some form, has been and is being proven conclusively, with as much positivity as science would require in any department of its domain, by strictly laboratory methods, through physical research. In other words, those who will "put themselves into a proper position" or condition to receive it, may possess the knowledge of actual certainty.

Just as those who require proof of the existence of "life beyond," or the "other world," can have it by "putting themselves in the proper position to receive it," so also, proof of the action of Karma (both "good" and "bad") can be had by a similar receptive attitude of mind and far simpler, for this law does not require special development of the higher senses to make it manifest; it is observable to all who simply study carefully the operation of cause & effect not only in the natural world, but also in the ethical world of humanity$_4$

Then, by the application of the laws of analogy and correspondence we shall find that karma is equally operative in both the physical world and the spiritual, world.

Mortal life is not only a day in the cosmic school of experience, but a period of great opportunity. Therein we have two duties to perform: first, to gather experience; second, to exercise our free will in the measure to which we are individually entitled, in attempting constructive work … primarily for the world we inhabit, secondarily (and as a result there from) for ourselves and our individual progress.

Many conditions through which we pass in mortal life, the reason therefore being at the time inexplicable, may be safely accorded to Karma. For Karma is both good & evil, or rather: beneficent and punitive. Karma rewards and punishes. Therefore, when we personally experience conditions of pleasure or advantage, help, aid, assistance in time of need, favor shown us unexpectedly, … or witness the same conditions applying in the lives of others … we may be sure that it is due to Karmic conditions either sown in this life, or brought over from a previous existence, and which we, or others, are just now reaping the reward.

Similarly, when we experience unpleasant, disastrous, or evil conditions, for which in our limited sense of justice we can find no adequate reason, or witness the same operative in the lives of others, we may be equally sure that it is punishment for Karmic conditions, either sown in this life, or brought over from a past life expression.

We see about us on every hand, those whom life seems to favor beyond all sense of proportion to observable personal merit. Those who are thus favored have earned it for previous merit accumulated. If we see one visited with misfortune for no observable reason, we may believe it is punishment merited … for DIVINE LAW DOES NOT ERR. The strict law of Divine Justice, unlike our human tribunals, permits no erring human to escape. NOR DOES IT FAIL TO REWARD WITH EQUALLY STRICT JUSTICE AND IN EXACT PROPORTION.

DIVINE JUSTICE HAS NO I~'AV0LJRITES, IS NOT BIASED, IS NOT CAPRICIOUS NOR WHIMSICAL.

Mortal life is an opportunity to gather experience. Therefore, the spiritual life intervening between death ~and rebirth is another opportunity, that of digestion and assimilation of the experience gained. Otherwise, we should be judged for a period in which no opportunity for reflection and introspection was provided and even our limited human judgment will see at a glance that this could hardly be considered as an evidence of divine wisdom or justice. We gain or accumulate experience in mortal life. We digest, assimilate and make a part of our personality and individuality ... the essence of that experience during our purely spiritual term of expression. Can't you see the correspondence? During our physical life we consume food & drink and breathe in air. We extract from these elements the vital nutrients we need and discard the unwanted portion as waste. Similarly … we originate causes in the mortal world … we study their effects in the spiritual world .. and like taking an inventory, we determine the Karmic accumulation of merit or demerit, as the case may be.

We have already seen in a previous Liber[1] why we do not 'remember' past existences on earth, but there is also another obvious and benevolent reason as well. Can you think what that reason could be?

DISCUSSION / QUESTIONS
(keep to the point)

Now right here a note of warning must be sounded. Too much should not be taken for granted. Many people who become acquainted with the Law of Karma ascribe almost everything under sun to its action. Nothing of the sort. Karma is not so easily discerned as that.

No human being is exempt from Karma. All are subject to this law. The administration of the Law of Karma rests with the same divine intelligence that directs all the movements of the orbs of the universe and the forms of life thereon. Divine justice will mete to every one his or its just punishment and rewards, so we need not fear that the culprit who escapes human justice through corrupt courts and political, social and financial influence, can ever escape the full measure of his wrong. THE PROCESS OF KARMA, IN ITS "GOOD" AND "BAD" ASPECTS, IS DIRECTED BY THE SAME DIVINE INTELLIGENCE THAT NOTES EVEN THE SPARROW'S FALL.

If the Law of Karma did not operate, the scriptures of the religions of the world would be proven wrong, for they all teach this Universal Law. And, if it were not for this Law of Karma, well might we become discouraged, for all about us we see the evil doers not only escaping from the immediate consequences of their acts, … but often we see them exalted in the community as successful, clever, able and "good business men." As W. J. Bryan once said, "There are three kinds of larceny: if one steals a loaf of bread, that is petty larceny and he is sent to prison for a term of years. If he robs a bank, that is grand larceny and he gets several months. If he steals a railroad, that is GLORIOUS LARCENY and he becomes a pillar of the community."

Often we are asked, in regard to some unfortunate condition relating to a fellow man, "Do you think it is his Karma?" In our limited judgment and fallibility only a higher Intelligence can tell for certain if it is Karma, or a condition resulting from some erroneous free will act committed possibly in good faith.

Understanding the Law of Karma shows us how we are responsible for the lives of others; how we are in fact: our brother's keepers. For every thought, word and deed that originates with each of us, affects in some measure several, perhaps many, other human beings. No one can live unto himself. We are all interdependent. If we were responsible only for ourselves, and if we were rewarded or punished only for our merits and demerits as they relate singularly and individually to ourselves, the Karma would be a comparatively simple law and we could regulate our lives accordingly without too much trouble.

The fact is, however, that our every thought, word and deed influences one or a multitude of other human beings … and we are responsible, not only for the results of such thoughts, words and deeds as they relate to ourselves, but also as they relate to or affect and influence the resulting thoughts, words and deeds of others.

If through a hateful expression from one human being regarding another, a third human being is inspired to go forth and do a violence to the second being, the primary responsibility will Karmically rest upon the one who first inspired it. Thus it will be seen that our entire human lives form a complex network of interlaced influences, affecting multitudes of other human beings whom we have never seen, or of whom we may never have heard, yet in some measure, we are responsible for much of their individual activities and results.

"Judge not, and ye shall not be judged; condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned: forgive, and ye shall be forgiven. Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again." This is the Law of Karma or Causation – and it follows us from mortality to beyond the grave into the spiritual world. It follows us from the spiritual world through rebirth into the physical world. There is no escape. But it is not to be dreaded! On the contrary .. it is something for which we should be thankful, for it gives us the "new chance" so many cry for. By right living, right thinking and right feeling, we can unconsciously "work off" little by little our accumulation of "bad" Karma, and if we know the law, we can consciously endeavor each day to create our future the way we want it to be. In the parlance of the day it means having to "watch our step" at every turn .. and soon we shall find our lives regulated in such a manner that we shall instinctively rebel at any sort of thought, word or deed of a retrogressive nature.

In bringing this discourse to an end, let us not be under the false impression that asking for and receiving ''forgiveness means having our bad debts miraculously dissolved. A child who loses his temper and breaks his father's stereo set may well ask to be forgiven and receive it … but in the act of forgiveness the damage is not miraculously repaired. Now here is a question for you to ponder: You can go to the bank and withdraw money from your account only as long as you have money on the account. Can you ask for — and — receive God's Grace … if you have no "Karmic credit" in the Spiritual Bank? Also: Does God intervene, of His own accord, in the lives of men?? We would appreciate having your views on this when you write us.

"As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." If we begin with the thoughts, in the heart, our outward actions and words will soon be shaped accordingly; in other words, let us begin our corrective measures right at the source, … which is mental. According to the Hermetic maxim: "as within, so without," … if our inner thoughts and ideas are right, our outer manifestations will naturally be in accord therewith. Furthermore, by deliberate acts and words of an intentionally constructive nature, without any selfish or personal motive attached thereto, we can set in operation forces which will act powerfully for good as they spread out in every direction. Like the ever-widening circles of ripples caused by throwing a stone into a clear pool, they will reach an extent unknown to us individually, but nevertheless surely … and the energy developed by them will do much toward the annihilation of destructive forces previously instituted by us … and help us to swell the balance on the credit side of our individual Karmic accounts.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

In 1906, the magazine I.N.R.I. was published in England. The Honorary Director was Papus and the Editor was Teder. It said of itself: "I.N.R.I. is in the British Common wealth, like the "INITIATION" on the Continent, the only official organ of the following centres: Independent Group of Esoteric Studies; Martinist Order; Kabbalistic Order of the Rose+Cross; High School of Hermetic Sciences; Universal Idealist Union; F.T.L.; Sovereign Sanctuary of the Ancient and Primitive Rite of Masonry; Rite of Swendenborg."

We give below a short paragraph written by J. J. Casanova, who was born at Venice in 1725, INRI Vol 2, and on page 18 we reproduce an article on the Martinist Order from INRI, Vol. 1, April/May issue, 1906.

THE SECRETS OF INITIATION

The Secrets of Initiation are, by their very essence, inviolable; for the m who knows them can only have discovered them himself. He has found them while frequenting well-instructed lodges, by observing, comparing and judging doctrines and symbols. Rest assured, then, that once he has arrived at this result, he will guard it with the utmost care, and will not communicate it even to those of his brethren in whom he has confidence; for, since they have been unable to discover the secrets for themselves, they would be equally unable to grasp the real meaning if they received them only by word of mouth.

LECTURE #75

The following piece of Architecture was presented at a conventicle of Lodge Benevolence by one of the brethren:

Most I:: and V::: Grand Master, Brothers & Sisters:

My address to you tonight is on the subject of spirituality. I have been prompted to present this paper on this particular subject because one day, not so long ago, I overheard someone asking another exactly what was meant by 'spirituality'. I thought, therefore, that this would be an interesting topic to explore with you, since this subject will certainly be of interest to all Martinists.

Let me begin right at the point. From my own position, I do not consider spirituality and religion to be synonymous. Let us be clear on this: the ultimate purpose of religion is to unfold spirituality … but spirituality and religion is not the same.

Spirituality is, essentially, a state of human consciousness, a certain way of thinking and willing, which profoundly effects one's way and style of living – and therefore their being. For example: what you are – and what you will become.

There is that well known injunction: "seek ye first the Kingdom of Heaven." What does this mean? This is referring to the acquisition of a new level of spiritual consciousness. The question you will now wish to ask yourself is: "How can I alter and expand my human consciousness so as to achieve at least some vivid flashes of this new state of consciousness to guide me and inspire me on my Quest?"

The first step on this Path is to turn to yourself, or into yourself, for your personal growth and development. Remember the old saying of Angelus Silesius: "If that which thou seekest thou findest not within thyself – thou wilt surely not find it without." Yes, Brothers & Sisters! There is the jewel so few ever find – those who spend their whole life reading books and joining this and that organization in a relentless search for truth. They will never find it! And you will never find it either if you persist in looking on the outside for that which is inside!

You must acquire first: systematic self-knowledge, then self-mastery and finally, self-realization. There is simply no substitute for these simple fundamentals and they must be acquired, however painfully and slowly.

In the past, self-knowledge, self-mastery and self-realization (which is psychospiritual work aimed at discovering one's spiritual Self and aligning one's consciousness with It) … were high and distant goals reserved for the few who were set apart from the rest of humanity and who were especially trained for this purpose through rigorous and very demanding disciplines. Today, these great fundamental aims of human nature are open to all who truly search for and desire them. They can be realized through methodologies designed to get down to the essentials of the work, cutting out all the unnecessary ideological and semantical adornments and encumbrances with which they were clothed in the past.

The Quest and its essentials remains the same but its cultural vehicles and expressions must be adapted to present times and needs. And it is to these basic essentials, which our Martinist Work addresses itself. Once again the Great Work of the Traditional Esoteric Brotherhood is reappearing on the contemporary scene … but it is clothed and masked in modern dress and is being carried out through a modern approach which is answering to the needs, ideals and consciousness of our age. The fundamental Truth, of course, remains the same … because, as you know, there is only ONE Truth.

There are certain very simple, universal and unchanging elements, which can be summarized as follows:

(1) A spiritual discipline aiming at consciously altering, transforming and expanding human consciousness so as to give birth to a new and qualitatively different type of consciousness … that is: SPIRITUAL CONSCIOUSNESS.

(2) A philosophy of life and an ethic by which to organize and structure one's entire daily life so as to progressively incarnate and live what is revealed in this higher state of consciousness.

I submit to you that this transformation and expansion of one's consciousness can effectively be brought about through:

(a) The mystical use of our regalia.

(b) The sensitizing of that aspect of ourselves we call our conscience … and, as a result, living what we feel.

(c) Persistent practice of the exercises and principles being given via the ICOM's Libers.

The spiritual discipline and Way of Life are grounded in the two axes of all the Genuine Traditions:

The love of God, and

The love of Man.

In the Western Spiritual Tradition, the specific formulation of these two main axes is: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, with all thy mind," and, secondly: "Thou shalt love thy fellow man as thyself."

Underpinning the love of God is WORSHIP … climbing the sacred mountain wherein the Divine dwells and can be encountered in other words: within yourself.

Underpinning the love of Man is SERVICE … helping one's fellow men to unfold their being and actualize their potentialities to the highest extent so that life may express through them as consciously and fully as possible.

The science or knowledge, and art or practice of effective worship … and the science or art of effective service … constitute the very center of spiritual life, which was, and is, the aim of the sacred traditions. Moreover, worship must precede service, for in order to have the means to truly help one's fellow man, one must be illuminated, vitalized and guided by the Light of the Spirit.

The synthesis and culmination of worship and service is union with God (with one's Spiritual Self), which has ever been the final and supreme goal of all the sacred traditions.

In concluding my talk with you tonight, I cannot help but share with you an observation of mine: I notice that there are so many people who can freely quote from the scripture, chapter and verse; there are others whose heads are filled with great intellectual concepts … and yet when you look at their lives, their attitudes, their behavior, their deeds … their fruit … there is nothing!

I cannot help but stress, Brothers and Sisters, that which you are constantly reminded about: Teachers can only point the way! It is it to YOU to put into practice, to manifest in your life … the concepts and ideals you hold in your mind!

I adjure you, beloved brethren, to let your Light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in Heaven.

ALCHEMIC/HERMETIC
LECTURE #76(A)

Dear Brothers £ Sisters:

In Matthew 13:11 we read "It is given unto YOU to KNOW the Mysteries of the Kingdom of Heaven." This assurance, from the Gospel writer known as Matthew is a most appropriate corollary to the mantram we have been recalling in the lectures of the Hermetic series: "In Him we live, and move, and have our being." It will be especially applicable in a very personal sense when we begin the Alchemical Instructions in due time.

Many students of the Hermetic Doctrine upon reaching this stage of their studies, often experience a certain sense of hopelessness as to their ability to go farther in the Mysteries, saying within themselves, "what are these mysteries, and when shall I ever be able to even recognize them, let alone understand them?"

It is on this account that the subject of the present Instruction was chosen. Each student is requested to read and study carefully the Parable of the Sower, at the very beginning of the 13th Chapter of Matthew. This may, in fact should be done once every day during the interim between this and the next Liber. Let the entire Parable be a subject of meditation and concentration.

For the present, however, we shall note the words of the Disciples, who came to Jesus and asked: "Why do you speak to them in parables?" He answered: "Because it is given to YOU to know the mysteries of the Kingdom of Heaven, but to them it is not. Therefore I speak to them in parables; because they seeing, see not and hearing, they hear not, neither do they understand."

"For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and they have closed their eyes; lest at any time they should see with their eyes and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and be converted, and I should heal them."

Hermetic students must remember that in all the great world religions the original revelations were given in the form of parable for two principle reasons:

FIRST: because the language of the ancients both in the schools of the prophets and the Temple Hierarchies, was "Hieratic;" it had an exoteric meaning for the people, and an esoteric meaning for the Priests and Initiates … and parable formed the easiest mode of conveying a specific truth.

SECOND: because, having a spiritual or esoteric meaning, it required individual mental activity on a spiritual plane, in order to understand the inner or real meaning. Spiritual things are to be spiritually discerned. (I Cor. 2:14)

Let us consider for a moment the character of the disciples who asked this question: "Why do you speak to them in parables?"

Twelve men, far below the average in learning or intellectual attainment and with the exception of Luke, the Greek physician, chosen from lowly and menial forms of employment, unembarrassed by any social prestige, practically unknown, and surely less adequately equipped to understand the fundamental truths of life, that we of today of whom it might be truthfully be said as in Matthew 13, 17th verse: "that many Prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which WE see, have not seen them … and to hear those things which WE hear, and have not heard them.

Yet with those 12 uncouth men, after the brief ministry of three years the Master Initiate gave to mankind a revelation through parable that became' the basis of a world religion that has been the all-powerful, dominant factor for nearly 20 centuries.

This is our example. From it we may learn that not in the universities or schools of this world are we to gain the higher wisdom for again it is written in the great book: "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man … the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him." (I Cor.2:9)

And right in keeping with the former statements regarding the hieratic and parable we find that the way in which we are to KNOW the mysteries by spiritually discerning them, is also given us in the great book, in the very next verse to the one just quoted: "But God has REVEALED THEM unto US by His SPIRIT; for the Spirit searcheth ALL things, yea, the deep things of God." (I Car. 2:10).

Every teacher of the mysteries is called upon frequently to recommend certain books, wherein the student can "read up" and get ahead in the Divine Science. The careful teacher will hesitate to respond as desired, solely because that would defeat the very purpose of occult study, which, is to help the student towards at-one-ment by personal, individual effort.

The fallibility of books and human concepts is shown in the continuation of our quotation: "For what man knows the things of a man, save the Spirit of Man which is in him? Even so the things of God know NO Man, but the Spirit of God."

Therefore, to those who ARE in very truth desirous of KNOWING the Mysteries, and willing to apply themselves actively, — not as listeners only, — but by personal endeavor to discern spiritually, let the next verse come as a revelation: "Now WE have received, not the Spirit of the World, but the SPIRIT WHICH IS OF GOD; that WE might KNOW the things that are FREELY

GIVEN TO US OF GOD. (I Car. 2:12). Which things also we speak NOT IN THE WORDS WHICH MAN'S WISDOM TEACHETH, But which the HOLY SPIRIT teacheth; COMPARING SPIRITUAL THINGS WITH SPIRITUAL."

Let all R+CH recall the words once spoken to each, that the OBJECT of the Art is the perfecting and improvement of Man, his transformation from a STATE OF NATURE, TO A STATE OF GRACE (or Spiritual understanding). With this in mind, consider the next verse, (I Car. 2:14): "But the NATURAL MAN receiveth NOT the things of the Spirit of God, far they are foolishness to him; neither can he KNOW them because they are spiritually discerned."

Now the power of the Mind of Christ in us, is not an exterior principle acting upon us from without according to orthodox theological postulates. It is the actu21, living mind of the Christos, which, after indrawing into Mother Earth after its exit from the Corpus of Je8U8 on Golgotha, became the Indwelling Spirit of Mother Earth, and hence IS, ACTUALLY PRESENT 2W EVERY LIVING BEING WHICH HAS DRAWN BREATH SINCE THAT GREAT EPOCHAL EVENT.

The student may enquire: why was it not possible far the Prophets who foresaw the mysteries … to be able to understand them .. they undoubtedly having been spiritually minded men?

We find the answer in the second chapter, verse seven, which also explains the necessity for the so-called crucifixion: "But WE speak the Wisdom of God in MYSTERY .. EVEN THE HIDDEN WISDOM, which God ordained before the World unto our glory. (8) WHICH NONE OF THE PRINCES OF THIS WORLD KNEW: FOR HAD THEY KNOWN IT THEY WOULD NOT HAVE CRUCIFIED THE LORD." ..and had they not crucified the Lard, the Christ Spirit or Sun Initiate would not have been able to use the out flowing blood and water as the vehicles through which it could have entered the earth … and not being able to become the Indwelling Spirit thereof, it would not have been able to penetrate with its life all the subsequent living forms.

WHILE THE CHRISTOS DWELT OUTSIDE THE EARTH, HUMANITY HAD PROPHECY AND REVELATION. SINCE THE CHRISTOS HAS INDRAWN, HUMANITY HAS HAD FULFILLMENT WITH THE CONSEQUENT RAPID DEVELOPMENT AND PROGRESS OF CIVILIZATION, INTELLECTUAL ATTAINMENT ... AND WITH THE INDRAWN SPIRIT ... SPIRITUAL INSIGHT.

So then, to every student and to every class, the Teacher who is conscious of his personal responsibility will say in the words of the writer of Corinthians (2:4) "And my speech and my preaching WAS NOT WITH ENTICING WORDS OF MAN'S WISDOM BUT IN DEMONSTRATION OF THE SPIRIT AND POWER. (5) That YOUR faith should NOT stand in the WISDOM OF MEN, but in the Power of God. "Howbeit, we speak wisdom among them that are perfect; yet not the wisdom of this world, not of the princes of this world (intellectual or scientific princes as well as political) that are COME TO NOUGHT."

The whole process of spiritual discernment is that of becoming AT-ONE with the Indwelling Spirit, knowing as we do, that from the standpoint of logical scientific reasoning, it dwells within us, and we in it, as summed up in the words of the prayer which reads … "that WE MAY DWELL IN HIM, AND HE IN US." We shall be able to realize this great truth more fully if instead of trying to visualize an exterior Deity, we comprehend somewhat of the conditions under and through which Deity functions and operates.

We DO, literally and logically, DWELL IN HIM, and His Spirit pervades ALL. He literally and logically DOES DWELL IN US. "In Him we Live, and Move, and have our Being."

Our individual consciousness is the sum total of the consciousness of the individual cells within us. The God consciousness is the sum total of the consciousness of all the Human Cells composing the organs of the God-body. The Cosmic consciousness is the sum total of the Consciousness of all the Gods or Creative Logoi merged into the Supreme Being, hence back to the Absolute.

Thus, All is ONE, and that ONE is ALL, and so each of us HAS within himself the God or Spiritual consciousness through which we can discern spiritual things if we MAKE THE EFFORT TO AWAKEN THIS SPIRITUAL CONSCIOUSNESS INTO ACTIVITY.

"Be ye doers, not hearers only" is the admonition. This Spiritual Consciousness is not a matter of specific developmental process like the awakening and functioning of spiritual or physical powers; it is easily awakened and brought into activity simply by the keen, unselfish, GENUINE DESIRE THEREFORE.

It is perfectly possible for us to KNOW THE MYSTERIES if we put ourselves into the proper position to know them. It is not possible for us to know them simply by attending lectures and classes, or going to church, or by reading books about them. THE KINGDOM OF GOD IS WITHIN US, and we must look within, not without or on the pages of any book … to discern the Mysteries … for do we not learn in the Chg. of Sand. that "THE UNIVERSAL ORB OF THE WORLD CONTAINS NOT SO GREAT MYSTERIES AS A LITTLE MAN, made in the Image of God?"

THE MYSTERIES ARE WITHIN … AND LECTURES AND SERMONS AND BOOKS ARE BUT ATTEMPTS ON THE PART OF SOME TO INTERPRET THEM EXOTERICALLY.

God is One, said Pythagoras, who summed up the whole doctrine in his teaching that GOD WAS ONE, a single substance, whose continuous parts extend throughout all the Universe, without separation, difference or inequality, like the diffusion of the soul throughout the Human Body. The World or Universe was compared to Man: The Principle of Life that moves it ... to that which moves Man; the Soul of the Universe ... to that of Man. Therefore, Pythagoras called Man a Microcosm or little world, as possessing in miniature all the qualities found on a great scale in the Universe ... by this reason an INTELLIGENCE partaking of the Divine Nature. Thus, he made the Universe a Great Intelligent Being, like Man ... an Immense Deity, having in itself what man has in himself: movement, Life and Intelligence and besides: a perpetuity of existence, which man has not; and as having in itself perpetuity of movement and Life ..therefore the Supreme Cause of All.

And because we are a part of God manifest, and each one of us micro-cosmically a God manifest, dwelling in the greater, and the greater dwelling in and through us, the lesser, so we DO HAVE THE SPIRITUAL CONSCIOUSNESS TO DISCERN SPIRITUALLY THE SPIRITUAL THINGS, IF WE HAVE THE DESIRE TO DISCERN THEM.

In the child is concealed the future man. In the man is concealed the future God. The child properly cultivated can be brought to a state of intellectual attainment and maturity long before the neglected urchin of the streets. The man, properly cultivated for the awakening of the God qualities can be brought to a state of spiritual attainment, power and comprehension long before the dry-as-dusts of the universities and creed—bound systems of orthodoxy. Such systems are necessary for those who are as yet unable to do their own thinking. And doing one's own thinking does not mean ultra radicalism, anarchy or rebellion against the duly constituted order of things. It means to understand that order thoroughly … and to use it as the basis of advancement. One does not climb by knocking away one's support from under him before he has begun to climb. One does not advance spiritually by throwing away those fundamentals upon which great men and women have climbed to lofty heights of power before they knew a better way.

The Apostle saith, "Are ALL Apostles? Are ALL Prophets? Are ALL Teachers? Are ALL workers of miracles? Have ALL the Gifts of Healing? Do ALL speak with Tongues? Do ALL Interpret? But COVET EARNESTLY THE BEST GIFTS and yet I show you a more excellent way." (I Car. 12:29-31).

That "more excellent way" is the way of at-one-ment with the All-consciousness, whereby we CAN easily discern the things of the Spirit of which all the manifestations just named are but incidental revealments of the omnipotence of real Spiritual Power. All these things will be added unto him who seeks FIRST of all the Kingdom … and seeks it within himself … not by listening to another, but by working it out in your own personal experience. Men and women in the busiest departments of everyday life ARE doing it … and proving it - to their own satisfaction and lasting jay, and the benefit of those with whom they came to as messengers, in contact.

NOW, SOME QUESTIONS!

1. How are the Mysteries revealed to the student?
2. What is meant by Man's "State of Nature?"
3. What is meant by Man's "State of Grace?"
4. What guidance had Humanity prior to the Crucifixion?
5. What specific result has obtained since the Indrawing of the Christos?

THIRD COLLEGE EXAM

(1) WRITE A SHORT ESSAY AND STATE BRIEFLY AND CONCISELY JUST WHAT YOUR CONCEPT OF THE "MYSTERIES" IS; WHAT THEY MEAN TO YOU AND HOW FAR YOU FEEL YOU HAVE PROGRESSED TOWARD A BETTER UNDERSTANDING OF THEM.

(2) ALSO ANSWER THIS QUESTION FULLY: WHAT IS THE VERY PURPOSE OF OCCULT STUDY?

WHAT ARE THE ADVANTAGES OF BEING A MARTINIST.

While there are disadvantages in any organization, it is conceded that the benefits are greater than the evils. Of the Martinist Order we can truly say the advantages are so many and so great that we see no evil whatever. In the first place, it is one of the few Orders that demand no adherence to creed or belief. Whatever the belief of the candidate, he does not need to change it or take up a new one. He is expected however to live up to his highest conception of it to the best of his ability.

He has no need to fear there may be some selfish motive in the Order, for each new member only increases the work of some delegate, who could go on with his own development without any one else. There are no fees and dues, and the instructions which are sent out from time to time, are free. The suspicious man of the world asks: "What can be the motive for increasing the membership?"

A true Martinist does not work for his personal interest, but to bring man back to his pristine powers. The time has passed when men can say they are doing the work of God and humanity, and live like the world and love the things of the world, and serve self like the rest of the world. Men have ceased to be influenced by this kind of christian work and the day has come that the standard is changing until men who claim to be Apostles of Christ, must live his life and be able to prove by their works that they have some of the gifts mentioned in the later part of the Gospel of Mark.

The Martinist Order stands for this, and for the equality of the sexes as to ability to develop the higher and Divine gifts.

Its centre is in France, where it first organized, but its members are found in every part of the globe. The founder was Louis Claude de Saint Martin. His writings are unlike any others and would change the entire world if they were only translated into the different languages, but in the British Empire there are but few copies of two of his books, and these are in the large libraries that prize them so highly that they will not permit them to be taken out. All the other works of this illumined man are in his native tongue, and we hope in the near future we shall be able to have them translated and published. His teachings are the foundation of all that is taught in the Order. Whatever may be the knowledge attained on other lines, it cannot usurp the place of this.

Martinism does not only show the way to illumination, but holds the light on the path that leads to it. It stands for the most generous, and liberal and Christ like teachings that are given in any organization, without restrictions as to belief on lines of reading, it insists on the daily living in communion with the Logos or Word.

As the little leaven will leaven the whole measure of meal, so this Order should change the whole world till those who see the sick, either in body or mind, healed, will say: "They must belong to the Order of Louis Claude de Saint Martin."

Another benefit of belonging to this Order is the advantage it gives of help and counsel from the wise men who (both in the body and out of it) are ever ready to send by the finer farces of nature, the strength or help needed. Many do not believe the wards of Saint Paul: "We are surrounded by a cloud of witnesses" but no one can be a Martinist long without proving the truth of his words.

THE GOAL IN SIGHT!

The International College of Esoteric Studies Inc., is a registered non-profit institution and exists for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material, which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber, which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

ADDRESS BY SISTER. ASUNTA TO LODGE BENEVOLENCE ON LCSM's BOOK OF ERRORS AND OF TRUTH . . . CON 'D

So man, deprived of' some of his freedom, still has to do his portion of good, even in his state of servitude. "His material body has only been lent to him to enable hi. to constantly compare truth with falsehood and never can his insensitivity to this point destroy his essence."

Free will means that whatever we do does not depend on any other Being. The things which cause us to act as we do only gain influence on our free will to the extent to which we let ourselves go and do not resist them.

Finally, the origin of evil is to be found in the corruption of the free will of a Being or of the Principal, which has become bad. If evil had a more solid basis, it would be as eternal and unchanging as good.

LOUIS-CLAUDE DE SAINT-MARTIN then goes on to speak of the former state of the Principle of evil. He says that evil was good without being the equal of good. It was inferior to good without being evil. It came from good and thus could never be as strong or as powerful as good itself. It was also inferior, because it did not have its own law and so it had the ability to either do or not to do what its source dictated. Thus, it had the potential to move away from its law and became evil. Good contains its own law and thus can never change or become evil.

Why does the author of evil never make an act of free will to reconcile himself with the principle of good? This question has led to the perpetuation of the idea of evil as a force, which is as strong as good, thus making man despair and be discouraged from seeking the peace and light he desires.

But the author of evil, having become corrupted by the misuse of his freedom, continues on this path in the same way as he started on it ... he rebelled against the acts and the will of the Principle of good. He became separated from this Principle by his own act.

Thus, good and evil are incompatible.

On the subject of the 2 states man, LCSM says that each of his sufferings is an indication of the happiness he no longer possesses.

Man's true state is one of calm and happiness without having to labor to achieve it. Now he is creeping around in darkness, trembling at his ignorance and blindness. Man is the only Being aware of death, which he finds humiliating and which he fears.

LCSM gives the following allegorical account of the Fall of Man, which I have translated in its entirety, as much would have been lost if I had summarized it:

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

This is a most auspicious occasion and certainly one for rejoicing, for we have passed through the tests of Water and Earth and we can see before us our goal ... the Adventurous Castle ... wherein is the vase containing the precious liquor which will quench our thirst for higher knowledge. We have started the Ascent!

Our journey to this point has not been easy, indeed it has been quite difficult and as you know, we have lost some of our initial party along the way; however, it Is possible they may unite with one of the groups that are following behind us. Let us hope for this.

Your progress to this point is all the more praiseworthy because you have done it with very little encouragement from us ... and we heartily congratulate you!

Let us review very briefly the most important points that have been covered. There has been a great deal of information given but the most important, we think, is this:

(a) The knowledge that we are endowed with a free will. We are free to choose and free to implement our choices. Our lives are and will be in strict accord with our actions. Fortunate circumstances result from wise decisions and actions ... and unfortunate ones from the opposite. The results of the causes we initiate, both fortunate and unfortunate, follow us through our various lives just like the tail follows a pitching star.

(b) We have had a clear explanation of the physical and spiritual composition of Man and the Universe from several different viewpoints: Martinist, Qabalist, the Rose+Croix, Theosophic and Hermetic.

(c) We have been admonished repeatedly that we must seek our own Truth, since Absolute Truth is not to be found in this world. ... It won't be found in any book, from any teacher, or in any organization. We must look for it WITHIN OUR OWN SELF. We must carefully sift all information that comes our way, extract what, individually, each of us can use ... discard the rest ... and build our own model of truth, remodeling and refurbishing as often as necessary.

(d) Last but not least we have had it impressed upon us that faith without works is dead. We must not only think right ... but act right as well! Practice of the exercises ... ALL OF THEM ... is vital. Setting aside a few minutes every day for prayer and meditation is essential, as is listening to music of an uplifting nature.

In addition, let me adjure you, if you have not done so as yet ... to obtain a notebook for the recording of your thoughts and impressions. You are receiving thoughts of a valuable and inspirational nature. WRITE THEM DOWN. Let me be blunt: your entire endeavor will be useless unless you write down your impressions! Thoughts and messages that come to you in meditation, at odd moments during the day, and in dreams ... they flit away and dissolve almost immediately. First say them out loud … then write them down ... or they're gone and, as you know, you will never retrieve them.

Remember also to revise! You will find that every time you revise an "old" Liber ... you get a new insight. This is natural of course, for in the light of new information, previous work, which you think you understood, … takes a new dimension.

Let us now pass to another important matter. As is stated on the cover of each Liber, the lectures are privately issued to YOU for YOUR personal study. It would be a breach of privilege if you were to loan them to someone else. We have not spoken of this before but we bring it up now that we are progressing to greater heights. All our material is issued under the seal of "private and confidential" and, with the Libers to follow, we ask you to observe this obligation to the letter. It would be a offense to loan your Libers to any one, to copy or photocopy them or to reproduce them in any way. Now why is this? THERE ARE MANY REASONS BUT WE GIVE ONLY ONE. Do you realize that you are a vastly different person now from he who set his feet on the Path some time ago? There are things you can do, things you can read and understand and have knowledge of ... which are quite beyond the uninstructed. To attempt to share this information with anyone who is not a fellow student of your own level would be casting pearls before swine. Not only will they not understand, but more than likely they will get the wrong impression as well.

Now we must take care not to be misunderstood. It is not our purpose to train and educate our members in every way and then expect them to hide the light under a bushel. This is not what we are saying! By all means share your knowledge and understanding freely! Please, in fact, make every effort to restore the light to this darkened world ... but exercise discretion ... explain to others what they can understand and digest, encourage and help them in every way you can ... however, to talk to them above their heads, to give them food they cannot chew or digest, would be hindering and not helping. We hope we have been able to make ourselves clear.

Dear Brothers & Sisters, this Liber #22 brings us to the end of the Second Phase of our curriculum. To mark this attainment we confer upon you the appellation of Companion. Truly this is well deserved for you have proven and demonstrated your resolve to tread the Path and we number you among the zealous. We sincerely trust our party, which presently numbers 38 will continue on together and suffer no more losses. It will be most important to stay close together for the path up the mountain is rough and fraught with perils. There are still the tests of Air and Fire to be met and in addition, wild beasts are in the hills. We will certainly need each other's help and protection as we travel on. Remember all fellow sojourners in your morning prayers; with our trust in God success is sure.

Dear Companions, may you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

Sincerely yours in the Work,

LECTURE #77(S)

Dear Companions:

This is the first of a series of particular lectures, which will be identified and recognized by the letter S coming after the lecture number.

You will recall that we told you at the beginning of the Works that Martinists use comparatively few "exercises" but the ones we do use and prescribe are potent and should not be neglected or cast aside. You now have about a dozen exercises that have been given and I wish you to go through your Libers and note them down on a single sheet of paper. Apart from the exercises you have also been given certain other techniques for changing your environment and bringing about different conditions around you. Note these also.

Now, it will not be possible to do all these exercises every day. I am therefore suggesting to you to make up a timetable or schedule and assign certain exercises for one day and others for the next. It is important that you do all the exercises given. Your spiritual and psychic development must keep pace with your intellectual comprehension. Do not be disappointed if you think your inner development is not manifesting as fast or to the extent you would like. The development of one's inner faculties can be compared to an iceberg. An iceberg, floating in the sea, has only its tip visible. The greater portion of it is under the surface and out of sight ... but its there ... and you can be sure of it.

Tonight I wish to speak to you about the breath and its relationship with the mind. It has been discovered by practitioners of esoteric science that there is a definite connection between breathing and thinking.

When the breath flow becomes regular and its rhythm even,
THE MIND OR CONSCIOUSNESS BECOMES CALM, DESPITE OUTSIDE INTERFERENCE.
Unnecessary, hurried thoughts and impressions disappear
... and a clear mental vision or inspiration takes place.

FURTHERMORE: Each person has their own particular type of breath-flow and this individual rhythm affects the nerves ... even the personality.

Without going into unnecessary details, it seems that the glands in the physical body react to the "motor" working of the lungs and the nerve reflexes. Western medicine is only now beginning to comprehend more fully the action of the ductless glands in particular. However ... the constant pumping of air in a uniform way (air with its generally unknown element which the Easterners call 'Prana') DOES affect the psycho-spiritual functions. [Prana may be described as the elemental psychic energy, which gives all things life.]

The point to be grasped is:

DEEP, REGULAR, EVEN OR RHYTHMIC BREATHING ... INDUCES CALMNESS …
CLEARS THE MIND ... AND STRENGTHENS THE WILL.

IT IS UP TO EACH OF YOU, INDIVIDUALLY, TO PUT THIS KNOWLEDGE TO WORK FOR YOUR PARTICULAR ADVANTAGE

When we breathe through our nose, (which is the proper way to breathe, we should not normally breathe through our mouth), we usually breathe more air through one nostril than the other.

Certain Adepts of the Esoteric Science teach that there is a nerve center at the point where the two nostrils are joined and this nerve center is connected to the brain. They teach that:

The RIGHT NOSTRIL takes in a POSITIVE current of air, which invigorates the RIGHT SIDE of the body, and sends certain currents of an electrical nature down the RIGHT SIDE of the spine;

whereas,

The LEFT NOSTRIL takes in a NEGATIVE flow, which affects the LEFT HAND SIDE of the spine and body.

Too much one-sided intake (negative or positive) upsets the nervous balance and is believed to affect the digestion, health in general, as well as personality.

Too much right nostril, positive breathing, induces greater heat in the body and a more emotional temperament with less capacity for calm consideration, but, on the other hand, gives more drive and energy. The character formed is determined and positive, but inclined to anger. Digestive, liver and throat ailments may appear.

Too much left nostril, or negative breathing gives a pliable nature, uncreative, inclined to defeatism and deferring to other people's wishes. Perhaps good intellect, but little capacity for independent action, as the negative current detracts from self-confidence. May be more liable to chest and nervous complaints and debility.

Psychiatrists in mental institutions have carried out experiments in the study of breathing and have agreed that, if a patient who is in a harassed, anxious state, can be induced to breathe regularly, deeply and evenly, this has a definite effect in calming the mind. This modern finding endorses the traditional teaching.

Now: In order to attract the element of PRANA, which is in the air we breathe, there are certain preparations that are necessary. Before attempting the breathing exercises that will be given (beginning with this lecture) every effort to purify the body in various ways is necessary. The first step is physical purification … this means CLEANLINESS. Not only cleanliness from bathing, clean clothes and fresh linen … but INNER CLEANLINESS.

You may ask ... what has this to do with thoughts surely what I ate for breakfast cannot affect what is going on in my mind? Strange but true --- it does! Unfortunately, we have concentrated very much on drains and sanitation for our houses, on soap and water for the outside of the body ... but most people leave the body to look after itself internally. They think they can swallow whatever they like and the body will take care of everything. Well, ... it won't.

The result of that illogic is that fortunes are being made by the purveyors of patent medicines and remedies that don't work ... have a look at the crowded hospitals and surgeries and see how this is working out.

The average person puts a heavy strain on the body by irregular and improper eating and drinking, and too much smoking … and nowadays drugs ... and not enough sleep. (And although they are not ignorant of their bad habits they still complain bitterly when attacked by sickness and distress.)

For a fair start, without undue penalties, it is necessary to follow these few simple rules of eating called the Mystic's Menu:

THE MYSTIC'S MENU

WATER. Most people do not drink enough water and get their water mostly in tea, coffee or soft drinks.

Drink a large glass of luke-warm water last thing at night and first thing on mornings ... and several times during the day.

FOOD Refined starch and refined sugar are the enemies. This is not the place to elaborate on dietetics, however, very briefly, refined sugar is a completely dead food, devoid of any enzymes, vitamins, minerals, or any food value whatsoever. It is a concentrated and purified carbohydrate that greatly taxes the system to digest and metabolize it. Refined sugar overuses pancreatic insulin, induces hypoglycemia and hyperglycemia. In the bloodstream, it increases the amount of free floating fatty acids, increasing the chances for plaques on the vessel walls and arteriosclerosis. It causes cavities and puts weight on faster than any other food.

Refined flour is aged and bleached with chemicals; it defies digestion and coats the colon walls. It has little nutritive value and clogs the intestinal tract.

Chemical food additives destroy the liver and kidneys and confuse the enzymes.

Excessive cooked animal proteins raises E-coli bacteria, raises urea level and puts stress on the liver and colon.

Coffee, tea, cola drinks, salt, chocolate, tobacco and alcohol, over stimulates the nervous system, upsets the electrolyte balance, causes cardiac and vascular stress, and over stimulates the adrenal glands.

Animal fat is also to be avoided. Animal fat is a definite "no, no". The Mystic's Menu for optimum health is as follows:

NO "junk" food: i.e. foods containing sugar, additives or preservatives. (For a sweetener use uncooked honey.)

NO white sugar.

NO smoking.

NO over consumption of white flour products, fats, salt, meats, coffee, tea, and alcohol.

Eat plentifully of fruits and vegetables, seeds, nuts, grains, bran, legumes, yogurt, cottage cheese, lean me at, fish, juices and herb teas.

Desserts should be made with honey.

Instead of eating white bread, substitute whole-meal bread. Make sure that you eat some green vegetables or fresh fruit daily. Avoid excesses at all times. See that your daily diet has a sufficient portion of crude fiber.

DRINK PLENTY FRESH WATER DAILY.

Fiber is hydrophilic, meaning it is attracted to water. Therefore, it swells and softens. When it passes through the digestive tract, it carries away undigested food and toxic wastes which would otherwise remain in the tract, harden, and cause constipation. So you can see why people who are addicted to a low-roughage diet of white bread and other refined foods, are also addicted to commercial laxatives. The simple dietary addition of wheat-bran, the highest known source of food fiber, washes away the source of constipation.

FOLLOWING THE MYSTIC'S MENU IS SIMPLE AND EASY. It will not only result in better health for you ... it may even save your life.

We come now to two other essentials for better bodily and mental health:

FRESH AIR A brisk 15-20 minute walk out doors, morning and evening, is recommended. Regarding this short exercise period, it is the regularity that counts.

SLEEP It is a fact that sleep requirements vary from person to person, but one thing is sure: regardless of how much sleep a person should have ... he or she usually does not get it. Sleep is the Great Restorer. SEE THAT YOU GET ENOUGH OF IT.

Now, before we approach the general breathing exercises to be given, there is one more important point to be put into place: for controlled breathing, care of the nose and throat is an obvious essential. If your nostrils tend to be clogged, or catarrh prevalent, try sniffing a little warm water up one nostril, close nostril with thumb, and gently blow through opposite nostril. Then reverse, thus clearing each nostril alternatively. This practice should be made a regular habit and can be conveniently done while bathing. Be careful to use very little water and expel gently but thoroughly. Also: gargle with a gentle antiseptic. This will restore clear breathing, which is the very first essential.

The foregoing corrections and adjustments to your diet and daily routine should be made BEFORE beginning the preparatory breathing exercises. These are the other requirements:

Adopt a comfortable position during the exercises. The requirements are: Spine must be straight and upright, chest able to expand freely. Body evenly balanced. Legs, feet and arms relaxed. Do not wear tight clothing. The room should be properly ventilated but do not practice in a draught.

Breathing through the mouth should be avoided at all times, except when specially referred to.

- - - - - - - - - -

Just as the breath, being absorbed constantly through right or left nostril, or both, exerts an influence through the energy contained, so does the RHYTHM adopted affect the individual. Having previously explained the properties peculiar to left and right nostril flow, the first thing is to establish a balance ... and thereby: control. Each of you will practice the following exercises, noting the instructions for variation, until each student will discover which is best suited to him or her.

The rules are:

(a) DO NOT ATTEMPT ANY BREATHING EXERCISES IF UNWELL. Wait until the physical condition is approximately normal.

(b) NEVER STRAIN.

To commence, the following are two simple general breathing exercises.

GENERAL EXERCISES

#1 — BREATHING THROUGH ALTERNATE NOSTRILS

Close the right nostril by gently pressing the right side of the nose with the thumb.
Look straight ahead, at eye level. Fix your gaze on some object at eye level, such as a spot on the opposite wall.

Breathe in gently, and deeply, through left nostril, counting from 1 to 5. Retain the breath, counting up to 5.

Breathe out through left nostril, again counting up to five. Now reverse -

Close left nostril with right forefinger.

Breathe in ... retain breath as before ... this time through right nostril, then breathe out through right nostril ... counting at each stage up to 5.

Practice this complete cycle of breathing, alternating left & right, a total of up to 10 times. Do not go more than this, at first.

End the exercise by lying flat on your back for a few moments. Relax and breathe easily and naturally ... and without troubling how.

#2 - BREATHING THROUGH ONE NOSTRIL ONLY, SEVERAL TIMES

Close one nostril (either one).

Then breathe in, retain and breathe out through the same nostril. Repeat. Do not alternate to other nostril. Do this 7 to 10 times through the same nostril. Count 5 for breathing in, 5 retaining, and 5 exhaling, as before.

Then change to the opposite nostril and repeat. 7 - 10 times only.

Again lie relaxed for a few moments.

- - - - - - - - - -

These exercises will have a dramatic effect, increasing general health, the ability to think clearly, and balancing the personality. In giving you the information contained in this lecture I can only repeat what you are told over and over again: the teacher can only point the way ... the rest is up to you.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

R+C — LECTURE #78

Dear Companions:

In life we are continuously called upon to overcome obstacles. Not just one obstacle ... but a continuous series of them ... for obstacles or problems are nature's way of placing before us tests or examinations to be worked out and solved, to develop more and more all our inherent faculties.

Our obstacles are necessities! It is the surmounting or overcoming of our problems that makes us what we are. It builds our spiritual fiber into strength and power and enables us to cope with greater and yet greater problems.

"The greatest man is he who can and does solve the greatest number of problems."

Obstacles are not punishments, they are opportunities, but man, in his blindness, sees it not. This misunderstanding exists, because man wants to attain results and things with the least possible effort. He wants things which are easy to get or to attain. He displays this desire for ease in all that he does, even to the most minute details in his life. Why is this? Because man mistakes ease for power. So accustomed has he become to this wrong idea ... that the acme of man's ambition is to lead a life of ease.

Those who have had few or no problems or obstacles are regarded by man as fortunate and privileged. How little man understands! It is the Surmounting or overcoming of his obstacles and problems that constitutes the essence of a full, rich life and ... is concreting and developing man's future mental body.

Everything in life has a purpose and serves a definite purpose. Nothing is ever lost or wasted. Life uses every bit of energy expended, sometime.

You ask: "What's the difference?" If a life is misdirected isn't it really wasted? Not at all. Otherwise you could say the same of a life that has made many mistakes and we all know we learn through our mistakes.

Just as we learn through our mistakes we grow and develop through overcoming obstacles.

What do I mean by obstacles? Every problem, situation, responsibility, that comes into our lives, especially those things we would like to evade and avoid instead of facing, working out and surmounting ... which ever of these three attitudes is necessary. Man begins this unconscious avoidance in childhood and as he grows older he extends this negative activity into everything that he does and thinks and feels, and then he wonders why his life is so difficult and unhappy. He has lost the habit of conquest and has come to feel that his life is full of limitations and that there is little or nothing he can do about it.

That is the pity of it ... he thinks and believes he can do nothing about it.

I do not deny that our environment and our associates have much to do with coloring our viewpoint, if we will allow them to do so, but we and we alone can control our actions.

Overcoming or surmounting obstacles develops our willpower. The more will power an Ego possesses, the greater his ability to control his problems and above all things ... himself. By will-power, I do not mean what is mistakenly considered as will power, namely stubbornness.

Will power is the motivating power or energy of the Ego, while stubbornness is of the astral body or desire.

True will power has intelligence for its guide, stubbornness has only emotion.

Will power functions through the mind; stubbornness through the emotions.

Will power has ideals; stubbornness has selfishness for its foundation, or the gratification of self.

Will power and stubbornness are two vastly different things.

Make sure you remember what the Ego is: understood from the perspective of the Rose+Croix, the Ego, spelt with a capital E, refers to the Threefold Spirit, after it has become individualized. (Refer to lecture Supernumerary 15, Liber 15, and to the diagrams accompanying that Liber).

The power to overcome obstacles depends upon the ability of the Ego to be in command of its various bodies. The one who feels, believes and knows there is a way out and then asks for guidance and listens to the inner voice, knowing that this voice will guide him correctly, will usually find the battle half won.

How are we to know when it is the inner voice and not just our own personal desire seeking expression? By the nature of the guidance. Is it constructive and does it include the well being of others … or is it jut for one's self? This is extremely important.

The Ego, an individualized atom of God, is Divine, and therefore is concerned with others, because God is concerned with all. The astral body, the body of desire, and man-made, is interested only in itself. Do I make this point clear?

The most important steps in overcoming obstacles or problems are basically all the same:

First: Facing the problem, not turning your back to it.
Second: The inner conviction that there is a way out and the firm intent to find the constructive way out.
Third: Asking for spiritual guidance with the inner conviction that it will be given. This is most important.
Fourth: The resolve to work through the problem, using all our faculties and abilities.
Fifth: Consider success the only outcome.

Always remember this: problems cease to exist the moment they are worked out or surmounted. Problems become gigantic mountains the more we avoid solving them or doing something about them.

And again: a problem is a problem only when it is viewed as, or is considered to be a problem.

Problems can be separated into various types:

1. Material or physical.
2. Emotional or personal.
3. Mental or temperamental.
4. Spiritual.

It is rarely that a problem or obstacle in our life applies to one type alone. It usually involves several others and many times ... all.

All problems affect the physical, regardless of the cause. Most of them affect the mental and emotional life, while the spiritual man is likewise affected by them all.

Can you not see the importance of every experience in life to the Ego?

Then why this separation, you may ask, if they are all so inter-related? Because we must simplify all we can, in order to get to the root of the trouble and heal the source.

Let us assume that you are facing a problem, condition, situation or handicap of some sort. (We all are ... every one of us.) No one is an exception. Remember that. Not even those who appear not to have them have their own problems ... it is only that we know them not. What is your attitude toward it? Do you feel helpless and incapable of changing it? Are you sure you can do nothing about it ... or are you only excusing yourself from doing something about it? It is easier to do nothing! Have you applied all your abilities and capabilities to it? Have you tried and done your best ... or have you only done what pleased you and was convenient?

Companions: do not misunderstand me. I do not mean to sound harsh but there is one thing that must be realized; that problems are not punishment nor something to avoid. Rather, they are something to be worked out.

How much would an engineer accomplish if, every time he met a difficulty or problem in his work, he folded his hands in despair and said: “It is God’s will, I can do nothing.?” The world would be filled with unfinished structures. What does he do instead? He accepts and recognizes the problem, set-back, or difficulty and then makes up his mind to find a solution and surmount it. And he usually does. It may require years of persistent effort, as was the case of the Panama Canal but ... he succeeds. De Lesseps failed. Goethals won.

Man has conquered the problems of wireless communication by persistent effort and by using all the faculties at his command, until successful. In other words ... putting the very best of himself into what he is working out or solving. It is following the Law of Evolution or growth.

A little earlier I tabulated various types of problems, labeling them: Physical, Emotional, Mental and Spiritual. I called attention to the fact that all types affected the physical. I really mean all types manifest on the physical. Therefore, realize that there is no such a thing as a purely material or physical problem.

The physical is merely manifesting, or reflecting and expressing what exists on other planes and in other bodies of man. The root of the trouble is not in the physical but elsewhere and this applies to all problems ... without exception.

This may sound strange, startling or questionable to you ... but think it over.

It is due to this truth that some cults have erroneously taught the non-existence of matter. There is a vast difference in stating that the root or cause of our physical problems is not of a material or physical origin but of the other bodies of man, either emotional, mental or spiritual ... and saying that because of this, there is no such thing as matter.

There is matter and there are physical or material problems but the cause of these is elsewhere and that is what we are interested in ... the cause. And here we come, come back to our revered sage, Sendivogius, "If that which thou seekest, thou findest not within thyself, thou wilt never find it without thee."

Have we a problem that involves personality? Are we unable to attain what we desire because of our personality or what we consider to be the hindering influence of another personality? The answer is still within ourselves. Is our problem a spiritual one? Still, the answer is within ourselves.

Early in our talk, I mentioned that problems were opportunities and you may have questioned that statement. They are opportunities for growth and development. Whether you grow, or allow the problem to encompass you, is squarely before you.

The answer to every problem should be the greatest good to th5 greatest number. When good involves yourself alone, the problem has not been solved ... you have merely gratified a desire.

The constructive solution of difficulties, problems or handicaps always helps others besides ourselves. No matter how limited the sphere of our activity, it affects others, and when we put our best effort in all our activities they are bound to affect others in a constructive way.

No matter how complex or involved our problem, the application of the three Martinist cardinal principles of Right thought, Right Feeling and Right speech applied to them will help to face them and to solve them. There is no other way. Anything else is make-shift evasion.

The Great Master, Jesus, gave us such a simple, easy philosophy to live by. He commanded us to love God and our neighbor. as ourselves. That, to him, was the key note to the situation of men's problems.

The power to solve our problems depends upon our ability to permit the Ego, the Divine within us, an opportunity of expression, through the various bodies in perfect control and harmony.

The Ego never leads us astray ... the bodies do.

Cultivate the habit of listening to your own Inner Self. Its messages will always be constructive, uplifting, encouraging. It will vitalize every atom of your being with renewed energy, vital force and the will-to-do.

The Divine within each one of us is limitless in power, strength, courage, energy, vitality, and has the ability to cope with every situation.

No Ego is ever given more than it can endure. The Lords of Destiny see to that, but if the Ego permits its bodies to be the controlling factors, problems arise to compel the Ego to take hold of its vehicles and control them.

When the Ego is in command, you can observe the activities of your various bodies or vehicles with an impersonal detachment and therefore see and understand points that are weak and that need correcting and then the Ego, because it is in command through the use of intelligence and will power, corrects the weaknesses in the various bodies, transmuting them into abilities and faculties.

Most of our problems are self-created and when we realize this our difficulties are half solved. The other half is dependent upon what we do. Action is absolutely necessary. No problem was ever solved through inaction ... unless silence was the action necessary. Many times it requires more will power to remain silent than to speak. In such cases, when silence is what is necessary, it is the action to take. In such cases it is not passivity ... but control. There is a vast difference between these.

Passivity requires no effort. Control requires tremendous effort. Have I made this point clear?

And now the big question ... You ask: what about Karma and the solving of problems. You say I speak as though all problems had a constructive solution. How does this affect Karma?

Beloved Companions ... have you the idea that Karma is something about which you can do nothing? If that is your concept
... YOU ARE WRONG.

On the contrary, Karma is something which you MUST do something about ... and until you do ... it will be there for you. As soon as you have done something about it, it no longer is your Karma; instead ... it has become part of your experience and has helped to expand your consciousness a little more.

Never regard karma as something that you cannot escape. Regard Karma as something that you must do. Do you see the difference? Karma is the result of Cause, or the effect of an action ... and only another action can correct this, polarize it, NEUTRALIZE IT. Of course the new action must always be constructive, otherwise experiences are repeated until the constructive results are attained.

The more man evolves the more he values life, not because he fears death but because he values the privilege and opportunity of expressing that part of Divine consciousness which he has been given to manifest and use.

The problems themselves, that we have in life, are not important from the higher and real standpoint. What our response is, how we approach and meet and solve them is very important.

Our attitude toward the problem is what is important.

Problems and Karma have a relationship but not all problems are Karrnic. If we avoid facing a problem and working it through, sooner or later that same problem, possibly in a different setting and involving different personalities will face us again. Then we find ourselves staring into the same situation once more.

We have been told that Man was made in the image of God. We say it, but believe it not. The reason for this is that we judge man by his vehicles and forget that the Divine Spark or Fragment is what is made in the image of God ... his vehicles are merely useful tools to work with.

He who believes and knows in his own consciousness that all things are working for good because God Himself is everywhere and in all things, will approach life and its experiences in a constructive attitude of mind, soul and body and find that former apparently insurmountable obstacles will actually dissolve and cease to be.

You say, “Well, you are demanding perfection and we are all human.” Beloved Companions, I am not demanding perfection for there is no such thing. Perfection would imply a static condition. I am inviting you to use the very best that is in you at all times, not for just a few minutes or for a given situation, but all the time!

Obstacles or problems are challenges. They can all be surmounted if we really want to do so. Here is the way out:

(1) Face the problem. (2) Pray for guidance and illumination.
(3) Put of your best into the solving of it. (4) Act for the good of the greatest number.
(5) Have implicit faith in the successful outcome or surmounting of your problem.

Putting of your best into anything involves action and persistent constructive effort.

God gave of His best.

Should we do less than give of our best?

May His Best abide with us all ... in love, guidance and protection ... always.

God bless you.

Dear Companions:

Tonight I wish to speak to you about the Egregor. It will broaden your perspective considerably. An Egregor is a collective entity. For example: A nation, a state, society, religions and sects and their adherents ... and even minor human organizations. The structure of Egregors is similar to that of human beings ... they have physical bodies, i.e. collectively all the bodies of those who belong to the particular Egregor ... and also astral and mental ones. The Egregor is the SUM TOTAL of all these elements.

Mouni Sadhu (a Martinist) writes in his book, The Tarot: "Imagine that an intelligent and well-disposed man, who is able to concentrate, is thinking about a good idea, giving it a certain form. He may then find others, who have the same or similar ideas, and so a circle of men may come into being, who are all thinking along the same lines but in a different form. It is as if every one of them is repeating the drawing of a plan, placing a pencil again and again on the same contours. The thing grows in strength, develops an astrosome[1] and becomes an 'Egregor' or collective entity.

"Such an Egregor, like each astrosome, defends, heals and even resuscitates the physical bodies of its members, rousing them to activities and realization of the principal idea incorporated in that Egregor. So, for example, an Egregor of a benevolent society may urge its physical members to still more activities and work, and the attracting of new members. Egregors belonging to organizations and nations which are inimical to one another, are able to fight on the astral plane, while their human beings fight in the physical world.

[1] Astrosome: As used in the Qabalah, "astrosome" means the whole complex which remains when the physical body is taken out of consideration and refers to the astral and mental bodies combined.

"If on the physical plane, enemies destroy the bodies of members of a particular Egregor, their astrosomes fortify the Egregor on the Astral plane. Recall the persecution of Christians by the Jews and Pagans in the early days of the new religion. The former won the fight, because they were stronger on the astral plane. That is why the Church, at that time, said that 'the blood of the martyrs is the best seed for new Christians.'"

I will now continue by presenting a piece of architecture which was given on the subject recently, to another group:

THE EGREGOR

T ∴ T ∴ G ∴ O ∴ T ∴ S ∴ A ∴ O ∴ T ∴ W ∴

A ∴ T ∴ Y ∴ M ∴ B ∴ B ∴ I ∴ Y ∴ G ∴ G ∴ A ∴ Q ∴ Q ∴

This discourse - "The Egregor" - is taken from the complete discourse by our G ∴ M ∴ G ∴ C∴ O∴ T∴ O∴ in his book "La Kabbale Pratique" (The Practical Kabbalah), Part II, Chapter I: Theurgy, Sub-chapter III: The Energetic Forces, Section B.

Subtlety of concept being the great Yod of Occultism, I had no choice but to make you suffer some very abstruse words that I obtained in my word-for-word translation, in trying to convey as much as possible the underlying meaning which might reveal itself after meditation, and having due respect to the original text. As you know, Bro.. R. Ambelain has a special regard for what he calls "The Phonetical Kabbalah" or "The Hermetical Kabbalah". This is compounded of play of words, etymological effects and double meanings and he insists that one can employ this method of "Kabbalise" in any language. He would even claim that it is the only key to understanding ancient medieval scriptures. Of course, a translation in everyday English could have made the discourse more easily understandable. However, I felt that I had no right to give you a "cheap version" such as you could have gathered from the numerous paperbacks nowadays available. Nevertheless, I would still like to call on your indulgence over my bad pronunciation. You may be able to overcome this problem by the use of the photocopy text provided.

I will start with an extract from the introductory paragraph (The Energetic Forces) which will put us in the picture straight away.

"As we have seen, the "powers", as set in motion by the occult faculties of the kabbalist are Energetic Forces, relating to the Universe in its totality or simply to one of its parts, and the knowledge of them is a link to the study of traditional Metaphysics.

These forces subdivide as follows:

(a) Entities (from the scholastic Latin 'entitas' : being). An entity is a principle whose existence is distinct from the object which it signifies. The assembly of several Entities constitutes an Egregor.

(b) Collectives of Egregors; the assembly of Individualities producing a general or particular character common to each one of them. (from the Latin 'colligere': to assemble)."

We now proceed directly to the passage on "The Egregor":

"One gives the name Egregor to a 'Force' generated by a powerful spiritual stream, and fed subsequently at regular intervals according to the rhythm which is in harmony with the Universal Life of the Cosmos, or to an assembly of Entities united by a common character.

In the Invisible Realm, outside the physical perception of Mankind, exist artificial beings, generated by devotion, enthusiasm, fanaticism, that one calls Egregors. They are the souls of the great spiritual realm, good or bad. The Mystical Church, the Celestial Jerusalem, the Body of Christ and all synonymous terms, are titles commonly attributed to the Egregor of Catholicism. Freemasonry, Prbtestantism, Islam, Buddhism are also Egregors, as are the great political ideologies.

Integrated physically by a ritual initiation or by intellectual conviction to one of these streams, the affiliate will become one of its constituent cells. He will augment the Egregor's strength with the virtues or faults that he possesses and in exchange, the Egregor will isolate from outside forces of the physical world and strengthen, with all the accumulated collective force, that weak means of action of the man who becomes a part of it. Instinctively, popular language gives to an Egregor the name 'circle', thus expressing intuitively the idea of a circuit. Between the constituent cell and the Egregor, that is to say between the affiliate and the group, there is established thus a kind of inner psychic circulation.

This would explain why the opponents of a concept, in studying the origins, nature and life of the concept quite often end up following it, or at the very least endorsing some of its theories, unbeknown to the one to which they were primarily linked, will carry them off the course they thought they were following. If they were without any affiliation, the action will only be more brutal and more forceful.

This rule is valid for all the great streams of ideas: philosophies, religions, politics.

However, a spiritual stream can only become 'alive' in the occult sense if it is vitalized by rites. Egregores are 'vitalized concepts'. This explains why only those human associations of a ritualistic character (the Catholic Religion, Freemasonry, Martinismn, etc.) have the ability to generate an Egregor, and consequently, to endure.

The rapid destruction of an Egregor can be obtained only by the 'death by fire' of its living members, the destruction of the symbols which gave it concrete form or bind it together, and also of all the writings which it makes use of (rituals, archives etc ...).

The Egregor will be slowly destroyed if left to itself, without ritual, having no spiritual stream generated by very precise occult rules to perpetuate its existence.

The incineration of its living members and or the writings which relate to it is itself sufficient to secure the destruction of the physical body and of the double of all being or of anything else. Simple, ordinary death (without total destruction of the 'image'), if this takes away material life, in no way hinders astral life. Furthermore, death by bloodshed will only boost up the occult vitality of the Egregor, by means of the mysterious power of blood when it is liberated in a 'sacrificial' form.

This explains why the pagan persecution of Christianity did nothing but strengthen its amplitude. Equally, there is the fact that heretics and their writings have often been destroyed by fire. The Catholic Church suspects, it would appear, the secret life of Egregors.

Detachment from an Egregor is obtained by a ceremony which is analogous, though opposite in its goals from that which secured its genesis. 'Initiation' is, thereby, annihilated by 'excommunication'.

The reaction of the Egregor towards the expelled cell is sometimes quite dangerous, even though it always assumes a perfectly natural manner. This rejection quite often considerably modifies the destiny of the 'excommunicated', a destiny already modified in the first place by affiliation. When leaving an Egregor it is often wise to integrate oneself momentarily to a concept of equal strength but opposite in nature.

As much as the constituent cells of an Egregor are taken from humanity itself, when in the material plane, equally, other constituent cells of that Egregor will be extracted from the world of entities. The Egregor lives then on a physical plane (where it acts through Man) and on the superior plane (where it acts through Entities). It is then in possession of a 'body', a double and a soul.

This can be applied to the triple Church: 'militant' (terrestrial); 'suffering' (astral); 'triumphant' (celestial).

The rhythm of the Egregoric life being secured by the practice of ritual, one will easily understand that the least perturbation of this ritual will produce an equal upset in the vital rhythm of the concept[2]. Rather like a human organ which begins to function abnormally. Once established and perpetuated by usage and time, a ritual cannot be modified anymore without weakening the Egregor. This explains why secrecy should be applied, most particularly to initiation rituals.

Similarly, 'divine names', 'words of power' etc., that's to say ritual definitions consecrated by usage allow concurrently formulas, prayers, invocations (likewise consecrated by common usage) which establish a spiritual relationship between God and Man; these special, secret names, words and formulas are also used in the primal awakening and subsequent activation of an Egregor.

But though the passive life of this 'vitalized concept' is secured by the mass of followers, the active life can only be secured by certain members ... the most trustworthy and the most qualified. This of course implies a hierarchy throughout the association. Equality, if there has to be such a thing, can only be established within the 'inner circle' at the head of the Egregor.

Finally, the great cosmic laws, and most particularly those relating to time, epochs, duration, must collaborate in the life of the Egregor.

This explains how all the great ceremonial rituals, both religious and philosophical, occur at the equinoxes and solstices, or on dates which are in agreement with these four great annual divisions and flow from them.

As much as the pace of the stars may be observed, thus also the influence that may emanate from a place, an orientation, etc...

The conventional 'image' of an Egregor, its mental representation, is equivalent to a reality in the 'astral plane' or the immediate hyperphysical world. The Oligarchy[3], Mother Country, Justice, War, Famine are Egregoric images. Man, in visualizing concepts necessarily anthropomorphizes them. In the divine plan, where everything is equivalent to a numeral, to a divine number, it is the 'sign', or seal ("silillum") which concretizes the Egregor.

These are, successively, the Seal of Solomon or Hexagram; the Pentagram or Star of David; the Latin Cross; the Masonic Triangle, and the innumerable signs, seals, figurations and Entities as handed to us by Magical and Kabalistic books.

All Egregors must therefore possess a 'sign' which is characteristic of its nature, its goals and its means. Towards the affiliate, this sign is at the same time a 'protection', a 'support' and a 'point of contact'. It becomes then a veritable pentacle.[4]

---

[2] Where the occult effectiveness of a certain proganation may consist only of divulgence or public display of something that should be kept hidden.
[3] Note from translator: we took the liberty to replace 'Republic' with 'Oligarchy'.
[4] The Coat of Arms of a very old family is its Pentacle, the genealogical tree its magical chains. "All descendents are but one being," said Maurice Barres.

When an Egregor has existed for a long period, it acquires, relatively, an independent life. It no longer obeys the will of the Masters of the sect as transmitted to it through the intermediary of ritual, and from a docile slave it often becomes a fiery tyrant. This explains why, quite often, a movement will deviate far from the goal to which it was assigned in the beginning. Equally, it may change hands. The conquest of an Egregor by its being evoked was one of the secrets known by the priests of Rome.

The psychic formation of Egregors are described at length in various occult works. The rules of Yoga are part of it. Also, the 'Spiritual Exercises of the Son of St. Ignatius', a work known to all Jesuit disciples.

The occult life of Egregors is secured by a process identical to those employed by Magic to give life to the forces called 'elementals'. The blood of victims (Holocausts of adoration or expiation), aromatic resins, incense, myrrh, etc... (vegetable blood), the visualization of a concretizing image, mental waves, chains of union, etc..., form part of these ritualistic ceremonies, animating and preserving the Egregor.

The material life of Egregors is secured by the number of their members, their discipline, their spiritual at-one-ment, their strict observance of the vivifying and conserving rites.

Equally, the sympathetic or antipathetic streams generated in the profane world by their action or their inclination, strongly aiding or harming the vitalization of the concepts as well as their action. Furthermore, the procedure of 'occult action' in Traditional Magic and Theurgy are powerful means for supporting or combating the Egregor, provided of course that their strength is in rapport with the aforementioned concepts. This explains why sacrilege and profanation have at all times been considered as religious crimes.

We have tried to specify the role and raison d'etre of the Masonic Chain of Union. As generator and life-giver of the Egregor of the 'Order', it has no other goal but to project into the 'spiritual regions' closed to the physical senses and their action, the force-currents which generate a 'metaphysical being' defying all anthropomorphism. Born from a human assembly, child of its will and its ideal substance, this "being" of another world will become its divine director.

Repeating the governing principle of Universal Free-Masonry which rules that 'Power is born out of the majority, and that it becomes authority only when it has been from those extracted'. It is then the "Masonic Spirit", the true Egregor of the Order.

This is the translation.

LECTURE #80

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

We are about to close our Works on Plane Two and we think it would be fitting to have a brief revision and note some of the practical benefits. We have examined the three Worlds of Martinis. and also the three bodies of man; also, the three levels of consciousness, and we have noted that there are correspondences:

THREE WORLDS	THREE BODIES	THREE PLANES OF CONSCIOUSNESS
The Elemental World	The Physical Body	The Instinctive or Automatic
The World of Orbs	The Plastic Envelope	The Intermediate or Emotional
The Empyrean World	The Ame	The Perfect of Christ Consciousness

We studied also the subtle forces and influences that link the three bodies of Man to the three Worlds. Mystical Anatomists have divided the physical body in 3 parts, thus:

The Head which contains the organs of the Nervous Force, of Thought and of Sensibility.
The Chest which houses the Heart, the Source of Life, Center of the Emotions.
The Abdomen which contains the organs of Material Formation.

From our principles of correspondence, we shall no doubt realize that the Head is more closely related to the AME'S activities and is under the influence of the Empyrean World; while the Chest and Heart are related to the PLASTIC ENVELOPE or Astral Body and is under the influence of the World of Orbs. The Abdomen, accordingly, is more strongly connected with the PHYSICAL BODY and submits to the influences of the Elemental World.

The Alchemists, who were deeply versed in the science of correspondence, used to say that the Head was of the nature of Sulphur; the Chest was of the nature of Mercury; and the Abdomen was of the nature of Salt.

Martinis. carries on the Triadic division on different levels of being and formation. We have also spoken of the 3 divisions of consciousness and no doubt you can fit them into the pattern we have been studying. I shall not mention here the other traditional divisions of Man according to Martinis. as their detailed study would achieve no purpose at this stage. Suffice that we note that the general divisions are subject to further subdivisions. Anatomy is a man-made science and we therefore have the right to interpret it as we see fit. It matters little if the terms and definitions we use seem old fashioned, as long as they enable us to find the unity underlying all Creation ... they will have served their purpose.

In our lectures, the two Pillars which, as they stood in the porch of King Solomon's Temple, were called Baaz and Jachin, however, they point to the basic law of creation: polarity, and they may be read about in the literature of all religions and philosophies. The seven fundamental qualities which make up the antitheses of life ... and are encountered at every turn in daily living ... are to be found represented on our Pillars. Even the number seven, which represents the sum of these oppositions, has always been thought to have a special or sacred meaning.

It has been demonstrated to you, too, that the old and the familiar may be combined to produce something wholly new and unsuspected. This should be encouraging. It is further evidence of the surprising richness of mysticism in constantly turning old matters into something new through the subtle alchemy of illumined thought.

The ways in which the number seven have figured in history are almost infinite. There were seven days in creation, seven spirits before the Throne, seven days of the week, seven graces, seven divisions of the Lord's Prayer, seven ages in the life of man, seven wonders in the ancient world, seven days in the phases of the moon, seven bodies in alchemy. Every seventh year was sabbatical, and seven times seven made the jubilee year.

Three great Jewish feasts lasted seven days each, and a period of seven weeks elapsed between the first and the second. The Biblical purifications lasted seven days. There were seven churches in Asia, seven candlesticks, seven stars, seven trumpets, seven horns, seven eyes in the Lamb of God. Ten times seven Israelites went into Egypt. The period of exile was ten times seven, and there were an equal number of elders. In Pharaoh's dream, there were seven kine and seven ears of corn. There were seven sages, or wise men, of Greece and seven champions of Christendom. In fact, according to very ancient teaching, the inward holy body of man is said to be composed of seven properties under the influence of the seven planets. Those properties, or senses of the inward holy body, are: animation, feeling, speech, taste, sight, hearing and smelling.

The Hebrews, we have seen, represented the seven fundamental antitheses of life by the seven double-consonants of their language. In addition, according to the Sepher Ietzirah, there were "seven worlds, seven heavens, seven lands, seven seas, seven rivers, seven deserts, seven days a week, seven weeks from Passover to Pentecost. There is a cycle of seven years; the seventh is the release year, and after seven release years is jubilee. Hence, God loves the number seven under the whole heaven."

It is abundantly evident, therefore, that seven represents something fundamental in the life of man ... especially that part of it which applies to his inner unfoldment.

As you were told earlier, the Hebrew metaphysicians used the 22 letters of their alphabet to illustrate certain fundamental principles. The three Mother Letters represented the Holy Upper Trinity. The seven consonants, having two pronunciations, served as a model for softness and hardness, and strength and weakness ... and so they became the representatives of the antitheses of life. Further, they were analogous to the six dimensions of space: height and depth, east and west, north and south, and the Holy Temple that stands in the center.

Thus we see, from a Qabalistic point of view, these seven letters represented the world and the conflicting forces which man experiences in his progress through Life. These correspond to our Martinist World of Orbs and is illustrated in our Heptad, which is representative of the world itself.

In our work so far, the Man of Desire has been presented with a picture of the world and the forces in it which challenge his progress and to show him how these forces may be brought to focus within himself ... so that he may move forward and progress along the line of his individual evolution. This technique calls for walking the middle path between the extremes.

In King Solomon's Temple, the two Pillars, .Jachin and Boaz, were placed in the porch so that everyone entering came face to face with the.. They represented the positive and negative forces which make up the antitheses of life. On his right hand he saw the red column; on his left the black, and this served as a constant reminder that in his progress through life, he must equalize these forces within himself.

Before you became a member of our College you knew nothing of the inner significance of the pillars; in fact, as a surface reader of the Bible, you probably thought the. interesting features of the Temple's architecture. In several of our lectures, however, an attempt has been made to point out to you some of the forces which make up these pillars and the challenge they make upon you as an advancing mystic.

We have not yet studied esoterically all seven of the major pairs of opposites, however, it is hoped that you have acquired sufficient insight to put what you have learned to practical use and that you have been made to feel confident of the manner of resolving them within yourself. Simple as these teachings are, they are, nonetheless, the fundamental lessons to be found in all schools of mystical teaching.

As has been said, in the Qabalah the Hebrew metaphysicians represented the world of conflict by means of the seven double—letters and pointed out the means of its resolution. In alchemy, we find the same lesson set forth. The three fundamental principles of alchemy are sulphur, salt and mercury. Their proper combination and their perfect fusion, which the alchemists tell us is the result of the process called transmutation, is the Philosopher's Stone. In that branch of alchemical study called transcendental, we find that one of these principles, representing spirit and called mercury, is denoted by the color red. Another, called soul and prefigured by sulphur, is represented by the color black. The third body is called salt. Upon the salt of the body, therefore, the elements of spirit and soul must meet and mingle. That means conflict, or the process of transmutation, the result being a perfected body called the Philosopher's Stone.

You will note that spirit is mercury and red, and soul is sulphur and black, and the body, which is salt, stands between the.. So you see that the two Pillars, known also to Martinists, were well known to the alchemists and used in the same symbolic fashion by them. That which is called the Philosopher's Stone by the alchemists, a Martinist. knows as regeneration. In both systems, the process is one in which our human conception of time does not enter. It is not possible that it should since life and the living of it is the process. Exactly when the transmutation, or regeneration, takes place ... it is not possible to say. We do know, and state with conviction, however, ... that when the resolution of the two conflicting polarities takes place and the perfect equilibrium in san is established ... the result must always be perfect regeneration, or the Philosopher's Stone.

THE LODGE MASTER WILL NOW ALLOW A SHORT INTERLUDE AT WHICH ANY MEMBER MAY EXPRESS HIMSELF.

My Brothers & Sisters, I crave your indulgence as we prepare to close our Work on this Plane.

Unknown to the great multitude, an Order of Wise Men exists whose aims are the improvement and spiritual elevation of mankind. Its active means are the destruction of error and the encouragement of all who want to acquire the faculty of knowing Truth.

This Order, the origin of which is so remote that it cannot be traced, always operates in the world, either secretly or openly, under different names and in different forms. It has promoted spiritual and social movements and has thus proved an anchor of hope and salvation in hours of danger or of evil. Always it has maintained the standard of freedom against tyranny and despotism, whatever its form: clerical, political, or social. In a word, it opposes all kinds of oppression.

Every wise and spiritually enlightened person by natural birthright belongs to this secret and sacred initiation, the members of which, though they may not know each other, are one in the unity of their views, and are guided solely by the light of Truth, which is One.

None, however, can be admitted into its bosom unless he individually possesses the strength to penetrate into it by virtue of his inner illumination. Nor can any, after entering, be excluded except by his own unfaithfulness to the principles or by forgetting the truths that his own experience has shown him.

A few know that there also exist outer and visible organizations of initiates who, having found the path of knowledge of self, strive to share the benefit of their experience and to serve as spiritual guides to whomsoever desires to be guided by the..

Naturally, persons capable of entering by themselves into communion with the great spiritual brotherhood, thanks to their spiritual development, receive direct teachings and will continue to be directly guided by the spirit of wisdom. Those less gifted by nature and still in need of help and guidance will find it in the outer organizations of the Society.

Of this Invisible Order, one of the Brothers says "Our community has always existed, ever since the day of creation when God issued this Divine Commandment: 'Let there be Light.' It will continue its existence to the end of time. It is the Society of the Children of Light, the society of those who live in Light and who have attained immortality.

"In our School, we receive the direct guidance of Divine Wisdom, the will of which is free, and its disciples are chosen amongst its devotees."

"The mysteries taught to us comprise all that is possible for men to know about God, about nature, and about man. Without such knowledge, no human being can be wise, and it is in our school that all the wise of the earth have been trained."

"Among our members are some who do not dwell in this terrestrial world but belong to other spheres of the Universe. Our disciples are scattered all over parts of the starry worlds. We study but one book: that of nature, which encloses the keys of all secrets. In our study of it, we follow but one method: that of experience. Our meeting place is the Temple of the Holy Ghost which permeates the Universe and which the elect easily discover ... whilst it remains hidden to the eyes of the profane. Our secrets cannot be bought or sold, but we give them freely and without stint to whomsoever is capable of receiving them."

With regard to the outer organizations of the Order, a rapid glance at their history will show them to have been ever the same.

Whenever these Invisible Spiritual Beings manifest their will on the outer plane and appear in this world, an association is formed in the beginning between a few enlightened and capable individuals, thus giving birth to a nucleus to which other individuals are attracted. Invariably, in proportion to the association's increase, disparate elements are attracted to it. These are people who are either incapable of understanding its principles and following them or those whose aim is to place the whole organization in the hands of an unwholesome majority controlled by them.

Thus, in view of the trouble caused by the merely selfish ends of such initiates, the enlightened minority withdraws from the activity, taking back into secrecy its beneficent work. The majority, pursuing for some time its ghostly existence, sooner or later dies, for no living form, be it man or society, can continue to live after the principle that is its life has vanished.

This is the reason why our outer organization keeps its secret and reveals neither its name nor its See to the profane.

This is also why, though it earnestly desires that the teachings be spread among the profane, it renounces public propaganda as a means of multiplying the number of its members. The Initiators and the Initiates remain unknown. If some say that this outer society will gather but few members in this way, it is easy to answer that it has a spiritual head and that those who are worthy to be admitted will be led to it by their intuition. Those who are deprived of the necessary intuition are not ready.

A comparatively small number of capable and enlightened members is always preferable to a multitude of unprepared and indifferent ones.

From the above, it is easy to draw the conclusion that the first condition to which the new disciple must submit himself is that of silence on all that concerns the Society; not because it has anything that must not be known to the virtuous or the good, but because it is at one and the same time necessary and prudent that high and sacred things not be exposed to the vulgar to be perverted or profaned by them.

Another condition is required: It is the mutual confidence between initiator and disciple, for a disciple who has no faith in his initiator cannot be taught or guided by him. Such things seem strange in the beginning; but when the disciple has attained a certain grade of evolution, everything becomes clear. The unfoldment which loads to the awakening of the inner sense is slow; but without patience and courage ... nothing can be achieved.

The victory of the higher self over the lower in man is a manifestation of the victory of the divine consciousness over the terrestrial and the animal. The object is always the realization of man's true nature and the acquisition of Conscious immortality.

These few preliminary remarks are sufficient to remind you of your ends in this Order.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

Dear Companions:

I take this opportunity to join with your Principal in congratulating you on reaching this milestone in your progress along the Path. We do, in fact, take it as an indication of your sincerity.

Our first 22 Libers have been introductory and basic and have given you a solid foundation in esoteric principles. KNOWLEDGE IS POWER ... USE IT! ... the information and techniques given you, if rightly used, will enable you to accomplish things which seem impossible or miraculous to the untaught around you. The principles work ... if you work them! Always remember that nothing ... nothing comes ... you must initiate the causes ... there will be no effect if there is no cause!

The next series of Libers will contain information and lectures which have never before been made available on this scale; also, there will be a great deal never before made available in English. We certainly hope you will appreciate what is being given to you. We also take this opportunity to thank those brethren who have given their time in painstakingly translating from the French.

There now remains but one other important matter at this point: if you have not already done so, do now choose a particular night (or day) which is to be your personal Lodge Night and try to hold your conventicle regularly and habitually at the appointed time every week. The reason for this should be quite clear after having received lecture #79 on the Egregor.

How meaningful, clear and worthwhile our lives become when we realize who and what we are!

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

Address by S: Asunta to the Brethren of Lodge Benevolence on LCSM's book Of Errors And Of Truth .. . con'd from inside cover.

THE FALL OF MAN

There is no origin which surpasses that of mankind; for he is older than any other being of nature. He existed before the birth of the lowliest seed and yet he did not enter the world until after they did. But what elevated him above all these beings is that they were subjected to being born of a father and of a mother. Moreover, their function was altogether inferior to his: that of mankind was always to fight to put an end to disorder and to bring everything back to unity ... That of these beings was to obey man.

The combats which man had to engage in could be very dangerous 10 him, so he was covered in an impenetrable armour which he could use as he wished and of which he had even to make copies equal to and exactly like their model. In addition, he was armed with a spear made of four metals so well amalgamated that, since the beginning of the world they have not been separated. This spear had the property of burning like fire itself; in addition, it was so sharp that nothing was impenetrable by it, and so active that it always struck in two places at once. All these advantages, together with an infinite number of other gifts which man had received at the same time made him really Strong and formidable.

The land in which this man was to fight was covered by a forest made up of 7 trees, each of which had 16 roots and 490 branches. Their fruits were constantly replenished, thus providing man with most excellent food, and these same trees served as his entrenchment and made his post inaccessible.

It was in this place of delights, the abode of man's happiness and the throne of his glory that he would have been happy and invincible for ever; because, having received the order to occupy the center of it, he could, without difficulty, observe everything which was happening around him and also he had the advantage of seeing all the tactics and movements of his enemies without ever being seen by them; thus, for all the time he was defending this post, he retained his natural superiority, he enjoyed a peace and a bliss which cannot be be shown to man as he is now; but as soon as he left it, he ceased to be its master and another agent was sent to take his place; then man, after shamefully being deprived of all his rights, was thrown into the region of fathers and mothers where he has remained ever since in the pain of affliction of seeing himself mixed and confused with all the other beings of nature.

It is not possible to conceive of a more unhappy and deplorable state than that of this unfortunate man at the time of his fall; for not only did he immediately lose that formidable spear which no object could withstand, but even the armour with which he was clothed disappeared from him and was replaced, for a while, by another armour which was not impenetrable like the other had been and thus became a source of continual danger to him, such that, still having the same fight to maintain, he was infinately more exposed.

However, in thus punishing him, his father did not want to deprive him of all hope and abandon him entirely to the rage of his enemies; touched by his repentance and his shame, he promised him that he could, by his own efforts, regain his original state; but that would not be until he had succeeded in regaining possession of that spear which he had lost and which had been entrusted to the agent by which man was replaced in the very center which he had just left.

Thus, since that time, man has had to try to recover this weapon beyond compare and he must continue to do so every day because he cannot regain his rights and obtain all his rightful favors without it."

LIBER: 23

The International College of Martinists Incorporated, is a non-profit institution existing for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

THE FALL OF MAN - con't

" NOR SHOULD ONE BE SURPRISED BY THE RESOURCES LEFT TO MAN AFTER HIS CRIME; IT WAS THE HAND OF A FATHER WHICH PUNISHED HIM AND IT WAS ALSO THE TENDERNESS OF A FATHER WHICH WATCHED OVER HIM AT THE SAME TIME AS HIS JUSTICE REMOVED HIM FROM HIS PRESENCE. BECAUSE THE PLACE MAN LEFT IS SITUATED WITH SUCH WISDOM, BY RETRACING HIS STEPS ON THE SAME ROUTE ALONG WHICH HE WENT ASTRAY, THIS MAN MUST BE SURE OF REGAINING THE CENTRAL POINT IN THE FOREST WHICH IS THE ONLY PLACE HE CAN ENJOY SOME STRENGTH AND SOME REST.

IN FACT, HE WENT ASTRAY IN GOING FROM 4 to 9, AND HE CAN NEVER FIND HIMSELF AGAIN WITHOUT GOING FROM 9 to 4. AS TO THE REST, HE WOULD BE WRONG TO COMPLAIN ABOUT THIS IMPOSITION; SUCH IS THE LAW WHICH APPLIES TO ALL BEINGS LIVING IN THE REALM OF FATHERS AND MOTHERS; AND SINCE MAN DESCENDED TO IT VOLUNTARILY, HE MUST FEEL ALL ITS PAIN. THIS LAW IS TERRIBLE, I KNOW, BUT IT IS NOTHING COMPARED TO THE LAW OF THE NUMBER 56, A FEARFUL, TERRIBLE LAW TO THOSE WHO EXPOSE THEMSELVES TO IT, FOR THEY CANNOT REACH 64 WITHOUT HAVING SUFFERED IT IN ALL ITS SEVERITY."

LCSM's allegorical story of the Fall of Man ends with this enigma.

However, man can, in spite of his being condemned, appease justice itself, reconcile himself with truth and taste its sweetness from time to time as if he had never been separated from it.

It was wrong to suggest that we could be made to return to wisdom by describing to us the bodily pains to be suffered in the next life. It would have been better to describe the remorse man should feel. Better still would have been to say that the Principal we became separated from was love, and so man can only be punished by love, for once love is removed from man, nothing is left. Nothing should frighten man more than to cease to love the principle of good, for then he would be in a void.

Man's suffering begins at his physical birth, which is one of pain and suffering. If man had not been guilty, his birth would have been one of joy and peace. He has to suffer for his crime. At birth, his body suffers. Later on, his mind suffers. But he has help, and as he advances in age, and the obstacles he encounters increase, his physical envelope becomes stronger and more resistant to the attacks of his enemies until his intellectual temple has been built and this envelope becomes useless.

It is our physical body which is the instrument of all our suffering, in which we begin our trials without which we cannot regain our former relationship with the Light. Without this physical body, we would be even more vulnerable than we are.

The so-called wise men of all times had these ideas, and always tried to preserve the illusions which this body presented to them. They all knew very well that it was the way of error and lies. But experience also taught them that it is also the way by which knowledge and illuminations of the truth come to man, and materialists said this humiliating system even elevated man above the animals.

Dear Companions:

This is Plane Three ... And welcome! As Sâr Saccas has observed, not everyone who set sail with you is still aboard. It is inevitable that among any group there will be some who are idly curious and faint-hearted, and when the going gets tough they draw back into their shell. You who have reached this level, however, have demonstrated your interest. Let us now settle down and give full attention to the Work that is coming up. We feel very priviliged to be able to share with you the following lectures. A great deal of what will be coming up has never appeared in English before. We know you will benefit greatly from it, we hope you will appreciate it also. We ask that you hold these Libers as strictly confidential.

May the Peace that passeth all human understanding, be with you.

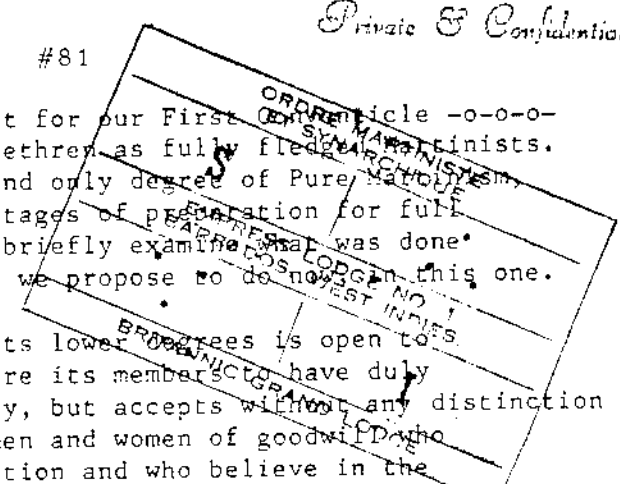
Brethren: #81

We are gathered here tonight for our First Degree -o-o-o- This is the Degree in which we greet Brethren as fully fledged Martinists. As was said to you, this is the first and only degree of Pure Martinism, the two previous degrees being simply stages of preparation for full admission into the Order. Let us then briefly examine what was done in the two preparatory degrees and what we propose to do now in this one.



As you know, our Order in its lower degrees is open to the profane, that is, it does not require its members to have duly qualified in some other Order or Society, but accepts without any distinction of social condition, sex or race, all men and women of goodwill who are aware of the necessity for regeneration and who believe in the existence of a Supreme Power from whom, or which, all creation originates. It will easily be understood that an Order such as ours wishes to protect itself against the possibility of undesirable persons, that is, lukewarm or undecided persons, being admitted into its bosom. This is partly the reason for the preparatory degrees. They constitute a true preparation in that they are devoted to promoting lofty virtues and aspirations, whilst familiarizing the neophyte with the essentials of our Symbology and the general principles of our Doctrine. They are also a testing ground designed to eliminate the lukewarm and the sensation-seekers so that the sacred heritage of Initiation is not entrusted to unworthy hands.

It is in this Degree, however, that we examine the principles that give to Martinism its main characteristics. But what, may we ask ... is Martinism? We are told that it is a system of Christian Mysticism based on a particular conception of the origins of Man and of his place in the scheme of Creation, and aiming at achieving the regeneration of Mankind through the reintegration of the individual. Martinism is also SYNCRETIC in its general pattern. To be SYNCRETIC means that it is a doctrine that embodies certain of the most desirable elements of other doctrines and systems. A syncretic doctrine is, in a way, a system that endeavours to find and gather all that is common to the different religions, leaving out all the points which bring disharmony between the different creeds. (GO OVER THIS).

You will no doubt have realized this syncretic nature of the general Martinist teachings when turning over in your mind the principles presented to you in the two lower degrees. You will have noticed that the Martinist teachings as presented so far, has absorbed the Pythagorean theory of numbers, the Hermetic doctrine of correspondences, the Gnostic principle of duality, the Buddhist Eightfold Path and the Christian virtue of disinterested beneficience. All these principles have been slightly adjusted and it may be said they fit together and constitute a fairly coherent whole. We also briefly touched upon the teachings of Martinez Pasquales.

In this Chamber, we shall examine and study the contribution made to this general doctrine by what we could call specific Martinist thought ... literally Martinist in this case, because it originates from Martinez Pasquales and Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin.

Among other things, we shall also study systematically the history of Martinism and of the Martinist Order. This history will be fairly comprehensive and will spread over several conventicles to minimise the risk of confusion. As Martinists, it is fitting that we should know something of the circumstances of the birth and development of Martinism. Our presentation of this history will be comprehensive but not too detailed because this would take too long and would have little practical value. Those of the brethren who feel attracted to that side of Martinism may study it more systematically on their own. There are a great number of sources, mostly in French, and anyone wishing further details can speak to me about it afterwards.

From this history, we shall understand the origins of the two different systems that are usually called Martinism. These two systems have one original conception, of which they are the different applications. The Martinist Order has suffered in the past from divisions caused by the preference shown by some Martinists for one or the other system, ... differences of opinion, or rather tendencies, which have brought about some splits in the organization.

Aware of the disastrous consequences of these divisions, the main branches of Martinism have today moved towards a reconciliation and, in full agreement with the principle of Martinist Unity, we shall study in turn the two ways of Martinism and the Common Doctrine, leaving to the Brethren the responsibility of adopting, when the time comes, what they find best suited to their own tendencies and aspirations.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

Private & Confidential #82

My Brothers & Sisters:

We said in our last Conventicle that Martinism is a distinctive system of Christian Mysticism based upon a particular conception of the Origins of Man, of his place in creation, and of the relationship that exists between him, God and the universe. The aim of Martinism is to bring about a regeneration of Mankind through the reintegration of the individual. Only when all the cells of mankind ... who are the individual men and women of the world ... have been reintegrated into Unity, can Mankind return to its status of archetypal or Celestial Man, and fulfil its destiny. This reintegration can be accomplished in two ways: One is by the interior development of Man's spirituality and the inner union with his center. This is called the Inner or Interior Way and it is the one advocated by our Venerated Master Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin. The other way is by acting directly on the forces that are keeping Man away from his First Estate, through theurgic practices. This is the Operative Way advocated and taught my Martinez Pasquales and perpetuated in the Rites of the Elus-Cohen and those that have descended therefrom. This is more accurately called Martinezism and we shall study at a later date the principles of this system. At the present time we will consider the Martinism of Saint-Martin, the one we practice in the three degrees of our Order.

Having defined Martinism, let us now look at its vehicle, the Martinist Order. We shall not study just now the history and origins of Martinism, but it should be well understood that the Martinist Order, under the name and with the structure it has today, was not founded by Saint-Martin. It would be inconceivable indeed to all who have studied the personality of Saint-Martin that he should have given his own name to an Order. In the course of your reception, a lecture claiming no historical authenticity was read to you. It alluded to the continued existence of an unnamed Initiatic Society, known at different times under different names. Historically, however, there was no MARTINIST ORDER before 1891, date of the foundation of the Order by Dr. Gerard Encausse, known as PAPUS. This person, of whom much more will be said, had received an Initiation under the form of a personal transmission, which had come directly from person to person, from Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin. This, as we have just said, was a purely personal transmission and was not held under the auspices of any actual organization such as ours. Martinez Pasquales had constituted an Order of Elus-Cohen (Elect Priests) was was recruited exclusively from the ranks of persons who were high degree Freemasons. That Order always maintained its Masonic character. Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin became a zealous Elu-Cohen and helped Martinez to direct his Order in the capacity of secretary. But, as time went by, Saint-Martin discovered that the theurgic method did not really suit him. By nature and aspirations, he felt drawn more and more towards a different path ... that of the Inner Way. He was in fact drawn into another Initiatic current which had other immediate aims than those of the Elus-Cohen or of High Masonry. He renounced all Masonic affiliations towards 1790 but stated that he wished to retain his spiritual link with his first school. Saint-Martin then began to spread among a selected few the comprehension he had acquired regarding God, Man and the Universe. To these few disciples, he became known by his nom-de-plume of the "Unknown Philosopher". The school he thus created was not an organized Order such as ours. It was more in the nature of an informal group of friends, having been directly initiated by the Unknown Philosopher himself, without the prerequisite of Masonic affiliation and without distinction of sex.

The Initiation TRANSMITTED by Saint-Martin to his disciples was not simply a ceremony consisting of the giving out of signs, words and grips. It was not even the saying of a consecrating formula with imposition or marks made by a sword or mallet. IT WAS MORE PARTICULARLY THE TRANSMISSION OF A SPIRITUAL INFLUENCE BY A WORD, A BREATH AND THE IMPOSITION OF HANDS SUCH AS THE INITIATOR HAD HIMSELF RECEIVED. There is here a subtle difference which we hope the Initiates will Understand.

The Initiation of Saint-Martin was sometimes a very simple ceremony but its essentials and its symbolism are found intact in the xxx xxx xxx in this Order. Saint-Martin repudiated the 3 degree system and his Initiation was transmitted completely in one grade. In its splendid simplicity, it consisted of what our Illustrious Papus has cryptically described as: "a small bequest consisting of two letters and some points" and was accompanied by an appropriate lecture.

When this tradition was organized under the name of the Martinist Order, it was found necessary and expedient to introduce degrees of probation to enable the Initiator to observe, in the works of the Lodge, the progress and worthiness of the neophyte. It is in this way that the Secret Tradition has reached us as it was received by Papus, but it was only since Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin that it was communicated to a wider public by the works of the Unknown Philosopher.

Papus, as we have said, had received the Initiation in direct line from Saint-Martin. One link of this chain of descent was difficult to prove beyond doubt. Papus therefore surrounded himself with other members who had received the Initiation from Saint-Martin through different channels, and thus the first Supreme Council of the Martinist Order was constituted.

The Order flourished and remained united under this Supreme Council until the death of Papus. Then, unfortunately, it lost its unity. One member of the Supreme Council reformed the Order, introduced a few elements of the tradition of the Elus-Cohen and imposed a Masonic prequalification on the members. This was Teder, and his Order became known as the Ordre Martiniste de Lyon. Another member, wishing to preserve the original tradition regarding the free admission of both men and women, and freedom from Masonic prerequisite then created the Order Martiniste et Synarchique. Later on, another member formed the Ordre Martiniste Traditionnel. Then war came again*. The Ordre Martiniste Traditionnel collapsed at the death of its Sovereign Grand Master and a surviving member of the Supreme Council of the O. M. T. endeavoured to form the Ordre Martiniste Rectifié, but without much success. At last the tide turned. The son of Papus, Dr. Philip Encause, renovated the Order founded by his father, and the heads of the remaining Orders, realizing the harm done to Martinism by the divisions of the Order, began working towards its re-unification.

This brief outline of the history of the Martinist Order as such, with its unfortunate divisions, should not detract from its overall value. We accept the principle that each branch of the Order was working in its own way to the common purpose of Martinism. We therefore recognize the validity of all Martinist Orders which have kept intact the Initiatic Tradition. We invite all our Brothers & Sisters to consider as their true Brothers & Sisters, all those who have REGULARLY received that "small bequest of two letters and some points."

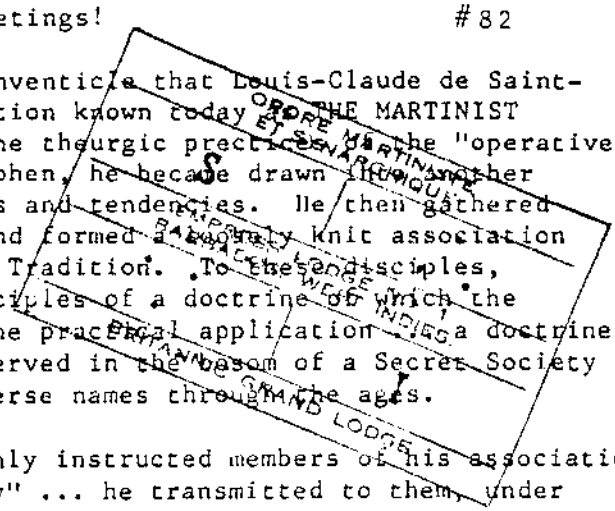
My Brothers & Sisters: Greetings! #82

We said at our last Conventicle that Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin did not create the organization known today as THE MARTINIST ORDER but that, after abandoning the theurgic practices of the "operative way" worked in the Order of Elus-Cohen, he became drawn through another spiritual current through his gifts and tendencies. He then gathered around him friends and disciples and formed a closely knit association devoted to the study of the Secret Tradition. To these disciples, Saint-Martin taught the basic principles of a doctrine of which the Elus-Cohen, in their Works, were the practical application ... a doctrine that has always been kept and preserved in the bosom of a Secret Society manifesting in the world under diverse names through the ages.



But Saint-Martin not only instructed members of his association in the principles of the "Inner Way" ... he transmitted to them, under the appearance of a simple ritual ceremony, that mysterious viaticum which is a key even stranger than Solomon's Keys, I refer to: THE Initiation.

"INITIATION! EXTRAORDINARY POWER OF THE DIVINE AFFLATUS WHICH RADIATES FROM THE HANDS, CREATES PRIEST OR ADEPT AND COMMUNICATES THE UNDERSTANDING AND POTENTIAL POSSESSION OF THE SCIENCES! MAGICAL VIRTUE SITUATED ON THE EXTREME BORDERLINE OF THE NATURAL AND THE SUPERNATURAL! MIRACULOUS AND IMPALPABLE AGENT THAT IS GIVEN WITHOUT DIVIDING, THAT PASSES FROM PERSON TO PERSON WITHOUT LOSING ITS POTENCY AND PRESERVES INTACT ITS ACTION WHICH REMAINS INFAILLABLE, BUT WHICH DEVELOPS ITS FULL POWER ONLY IN THE MIND READY TO NURTURE IT! SUBTLE CURRENT OF A VITAL FLUID WHICH ANIMATES THE MEMBER OF THE MYSTICAL BODY!"

Saint-Martin understood the nature of Initiation which, as he said, did not follow the "the laws of corporeal or physical nature." To Willermoz he wrote: "You are right to believe that our progress depends on our personal dispositions, but you are also right to believe that the degree (or grade) ... gives a distinction to the initiate and nothing could be more true than to say that the perfect blending of these two factors has a tangible result which undoubtedly grows with time according to the instructions one receives and the individual efforts one renders."

Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin entrusted to his disciples the Initiation that it might GROW IN HIM WHO WAS WORTHY TO RECEIVE IT AND PURIFY HIM WHO WAS NOT YET THUS PREPARED. In his work The New Man, Saint-Martin writes: "If the power of Initiation does not give visible results, it nevertheless works infallibly as a preventive and prepares the shell of him who remains pure to receive salutary impressions when the spirit deems it advisable."

DISCUSSION

When you were received into the xxx xxx of our Order, you were given a title, symbolized by a signature to reveal your quality as a Martinist Initiate. You were warned however not to consider that title as "a vain sign of pride or of affectation." How then are we to regard a title that proclaims one an "Unknown Superior" ?

This title existed before Saint-Martin ... and was sometimes used in organizations where, it must be said, it was a source of pride, even of vanity. Saint-Martin, who was not much impressed by the noise made around around this and other high sounding titles, passed it on to us restored to its original and mysterious purity.

The whole of the Martinist Doctrine rests on the premise that Man's first achievement and endeavour along the Path of Reintegration must be directed towards self-knowledge and self-realization.

The first work of the Unknown Philosopher begins with these words:

"IT IS A SAD VISION INDEED THAT WHEN WE START LOOKING AT MAN, WE SEE HIM AT THE SAME TIME TORMENTED BY THE DESIRE TO KNOW, FAILING TO FIND A REASON FOR ANYTHING, BUT DARING NEVERTHELESS TO GIVE A REASON TO EVERYTHING!"

On the long and arduous path of reintegration, Man is faced with having to make a major discovery before he may even hope to start to understand the first thing about himself and Nature, that is, HE MUST ADMIT THAT HE KNOWS NOTHING! It may take Man a very long time to realise this, but until he does so, the knowledge he imagines himself to possess ... will form an insurmountable obstacle to his progress. Man must first see himself naked, ... before he can begin to study his true self. Only then will he understand that he has everything to learn and that the smallest detail holds an important lesson. The more Man then learns, the more humble he will become because he will realise the immensity of his ignorance.

As long as Man is in the Forest of Errors, he is satisfied with his imagined knowledge. Then one he senses that he has within himself, a superior principle. He will begin to study his mode of thought, his will power, all these "intelligent and genial acts that will always give him a distinction through striking features and exclusive signs" as said Saint-Martin. Then Man will become restless and unhappy in his condition and in him will rise the aspiration to know that superior principle in himself. He will then become in truth ... a MAN OF DESIRE.

DISCUSSION

Now, how is a Martinist Initiate Superior? Simply because, through the works of the preparatory degrees, he has been made to look at himself ... and a Nature ... and, if he was sincere in his search, he has discovered that he had everything to learn. He is thus Superior in HUMILITY. Although he still has everything to learn, the Initiate KNOWS this, ... and he knows that the secret to his progress IS WITHIN HIMSELF.

"MAN IS THE ENIGMA, HE IS ALSO THE KEY TO THAT ENIGMA !"

The Initiate is thus Superior to the Man of the Stream in that he knows the vanity of the exterior intellectual acquisitions. BUT HE IS ALSO UNKNOWN ... BECAUSE TO REVEAL THIS SUPERIORITY AND MAKE IT A SOURCE OF VANITY WOULD BE TO PROVE HIMSELF STILL IN THE FOREST OF ERRORS ... AND THEREFORE NOT TRULY SUPERIOR.

It is only by remaining UNKNOWN in his superiority, that the Initiate establishes this superiority. The title of Unknown Superior is therefore indivisible, because the name "superior" would become meaningless if parted from the adjective "unknown." EVERYTIME the Initiate uses his title of Unknown Superior, he thus proves his humility by revealing that his superiority is far from perfect. Therefore, my Brothers & Sisters: use this title sparingly. Use the signature when you sign the attendance book and in your correspondence with other Martinists because it then becomes an injunction to humility that is reciprocated. It is an admission that the writer reminds his correspondent that he, the writer, knows he has much to learn!

Dear Companions: # 83

This is another of those times when I wish I could be speaking to you in person, for the matter is of greatest import.

I wish to say something more about self-knowledge and self-realization, which was broached in the preceding lecture. Kindly study it carefully. THE MARTINIST IS ON THE PATH OF SELF-KNOWLEDGE. Exactly what does this mean? It means it is necessary for you to analyse carefully everything you hear about, observe, believe, read about, are told, and come to know through the many channels that information comes to you.

From the great medley of information that comes your way, you must pull it apart, examine each component, and, using these parts as building blocks, proceed to construct your own model. This model you will undoubtedly modify, change, add to, subtract from and modernize as you go along, until you come closer and closer to the Ultimate. The model you build will be your own, based on your own observations, reasoning and intuition. It will be the result of your own self-realization and self-knowledge ... and it may be different from somebody else's.

This quest for self-knowledge is the complete opposite of the way followed by most others. In the "profane" world, you will find that usually, most people and bound by beliefs and that they have no real knowledge. They subscribe to these beliefs because they have been told such and such is the case ... and they have never bothered to think about them very much. (After all, why should they, is'nt the popular opinion "right"?) Can you see the danger in this? People are often nothing more than pawns in the hands of others who exploit them. There is religious exploitation, political exploitation, commercial exploitation ... there is exploitation among family and friends ... there is exploitation in every department ... and most of it is very subtle. You may easily find a hundred persons who can quote you chapter & verse, page & paragraph, and express somebody else's opinion ... but you can hardly find one who has any knowledge of their own.

This is not the way of the Martinist! The Martinist studies the Book of Nature, the Book of Man, and any valuable source, and analyzes it all. He comes to his own conclusion, is not ashamed of it, and admits it may be subject to revision, in fact he constantly strives for further light and corrects accordingly. The Martinist is not egotistical about his ideas, he is not dogmatic about them, nor does he think that only his ideas, or some particular person's, have any validity.

The Martinist is on the quest for self-knowledge! Please remember this at all times.

The real Martinist is truly an unknown superior ... superior in his humility because he knows he has everything to learn, and he establishes this superiority by allowing his humility to be unknown.

Brothers & Sisters: BE an Unknown Superior!

Sincerely yours in the Work,

Sâr Sacco

NOTES FOR STUDENTS

The Martinist Doctrine as expressed by Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin.

GOOD AND EVIL

The attainment of light and truth is the object of the INNER WAY ... but it is also the aim of all human research; the first step on the way is therefore to identify the obstacles which hinder us. Saint-Martin observed that both Man and Nature are in a state of disorder, or as he termed it: in extralignment. We are in darkness since we seek for light, we are in delusion since we yearn for reality; but the fact that we desire both shows we were made for both ... and that in our present environment we are far away from the purpose of our being.(1)

Before everything else, then, man must accurately guage his present position; he must understand the precise nature of the disorder that is both about and within him; and he must learn, if possible, how it came about, so that he may escape from it. If light, if truth, if order are good and desirable above all things; and if darkness, falsehood and confusion are evils, we must at the outset, obtain a certain criterion of judgement as to what constitutes good & evil ... and this was the first task to which Saint-Martin applied himself. It is the incessent confusion of these ... the confusion of light and shadow, of harmony and disorder, which man perceives in the universe and in himself, that so often obscures the rays of the true light. (2)

"This universal contrast disquiets him, causing an entanglement in his ideas which it is difficult to unravel. The most signal service which can be rendered him is therefore to convince him that he can become acquainted with the source and origin of the disorder which astonishes him; it is, above all, to dissuade him from concluding, on account of it, anything opposed to that truth which he confesses, which he cannot dispense with, and cannot cease to love."(3)

Before we consider the explanation of the disorder, let us observe saint-Martin's definition of good & evil: "Good is for every being the fulfilment of his proper law, and evil is that which is opposed thereto."4 There is no doubt that man was formed to enjoy the light and and to possess the truth and we have here an unfailing criterion for distinguishing the evil from the good: evil is all that which hinders us from the attainment of light and truth. "Since all beings have but a single law, for all derive from a first law which is one in like manner, good, as the fulfilment of this law, must be one also, single and exclusively true, though it embraces the infinity of existence. On the contrary ... evil can have no correspondence with this law of being because it is at war with the same; it cannot, therefore, be comprised in unity since it tends to degrade it by seeking to form a rival unity. In a word it is false, since it cannot exist alone;" (that is to say it is a derangement, and a derangement supposes an order which preceded it) "and since, despite itself, the true law of beings co-exists with it, which law it can never destroy, though it can disturb it and retard its fulfilment."(5)

In accordance with the practical nature of Saint-Martin's doctrine, he does not long delay over the question of its metaphysical aspect, but hastens to account for the existence of evil* in the universe and man, according to the doctrine of the duality of principles ... which we will study shortly.

Dear Companions: # 84

In keeping with our principle of presenting a wide variety of material in the Libers, we give you a section from the book "Sâr Hieronymus and the FUDOSI" by Serge Caillet. This book is now out of print and was published in French. The information, we know, will be welcomed by many members.

I

FROM VISCOUNT DE LAPASSE TO THE ROSE+CROIX OF TOULOUSE

In considering the European, or Universal Rose+Croix, a certain Rose+Croix, or one than considered itself as such ... which flourished first in France and then in Belgium and finally in neighbouring countries across the Atlantic during the first decades of this century ... and whose structure and philosophy we shall try to define further on, the name of "Sâr Hieronymus" must immediately be remembered. I had heard this pseudonym, shall I say hieronym? as that of a great initiate at the beginning of my 18th year, when I made my entry into initiation in a certain contemporary esoteric milieu of a Rosicrucian (or neo-Rosicrucian) nature, which I frequented from then on. Usually he was known by the initiatic title of "Imperator", a classical title; "Imperator of the Rose+Croix for Europe" to be exact. But that was most often all that anyone could tell me, not at all because the life and work of this occultist had to remain a secret, but simply because the people I spoke to knew almost nothing about this mysterious "Hieronymus", sometimes not even his true identity. Hieronymus was indeed mysterious, and remains so today, now that he has departed from this world. His secular name was Emile Dantine (1884-1969) where civil status was concerned, even though he usually spelt his patronym "Dantinne" (with an additional 'n') for a reason I was never able to discover.

But, before moving on to Emile Dantinne-Hieronymus, a certain universal Rose+Croix and the FUDOSI (Universal Federation of Orders and Initiatic Societies) which are the subject of this work, the question of another Rose+Croix, known as that of Toulouse, thought to be the predecessor of the former, must be considered.

Some people, whose sources are unclear, occasionally spoke of the constitution of a certain Rose+Croix order in Toulouse around 1850, by Viscount Louis Charles Eduard de Lapasse (1792-1867). It has been established that, already during his lifetime, he was thought to be an initiated Rosicrucian, even a "Rose+Croix", and that in Toulouse he practised spagyric medicine (which accounts for the phenomena of life and health through chemical theories - Translator's note).

In this Rose=Croix of Toulose, of which he was considered to be the organizer, and from which Josephin Peladan was later to draw his inspiration, must be seen the origin of the Rosicrucian movement mentioned earlier, a descendant of Peladan's Rose+Croix, which flourished in Belgium and its surroundings under the aegis of Sar Hieronymus and which spread from there to adjoining countries. Spencer Lewis (1883-1939), who, in the year 1915, formed the Rosicrucian order of AMORC in the United States, also claimed affiliation to the Rose+Croix in Toulouse (was it the same Rose+Croix)? Now, Lewis worked closely with Dantinne in the FUDOSI during the thirties.

Thus everything began through this mysterious Rose+Croix Order and the enigmatic Viscount de Lapasse, presumed to have been its founder. This first chapter will therefore be devoted to them.

THE NOBLE LAPASSE FAMILY

The noble Lapasse family, of Spanish origin, became famous in more ways than one in the service of the Counts of Foix, since the last decade of the XI century, mainly in a military capacity. In his "Eulogy to the Viscount de Lapasse", delivered to the Academie des jeux floraux in 1869, Count Fernand, whose information on the secular life of the Viscount and his family appears reliable, although incomplete at times, but in any event indispensable, summarized the history of the Lapasse family as follows:

"The Lapasse family was one of the best in our regions. The renown it acquired in our southern provinces, and particularly in the court of the Counts of Foix, was eminently chivalrous. The Lapasse family, originally from Spain, had, since the year 1090, been vassals and companions to this noble Foix family, whose valour has left so many memories in our regions, and whose Court, during the Middle Ages, together with those of the Counts of Toulouse and the Viscounts of Bearn, constituted the center of all political and social movement in our South during the Middle Ages. The crusades, the War of Albigeois and the occupation of the Guienne by the English, these three aspects of our local life in the Middle Ages, as well as the war-like descents into Italy and Spain, always showed the Lapasse family in the forefront, defending the interest of their sovereign by the sword on the battle fields or with words in the councils. They were to be seen at the battles of Ravenne, Pavie, Cerisoles. They were sometimes in Aragon or Tunis, in the Holy Land or in Flanders, and everywhere they remained faithful to an unchanging tradition, and they lived and died in the service of the Foix family. And later, when the country regained the crown and when, through successive inheritances, Foix, Bearn and Navarre were incorporated into the French unity, the Lapasse family remained in their mother country and the various branches of their family showed a remarkable attachment to the province which had been their cradle."

LOUIS CHARLES EDOUARD DE LAPASSE

Louis Charles Edouard de Lapasse was born in Toulouse on 2 January 1792 of the Viscount de Lapasse and his wife, the Viscountess, nee de Cardillac. For the noble Lapasse family, times were hard, but the couple and their child were able, in spite of everything, to escape the revolutionary committee's research on the black list, on which they were high up, by hiding in the suburb of Toulouse.

After an education in which his mother played an important part, in better times, the young Edouard pursued his secondary school studies at the Bordeaux Lycee, then he entered Law School in Toulouse. He left, probably in 1812 or 1813, with or without a diploma, I am not sure.

(There is a section missing here from the original - Translator)

Marshall Soult in the suburbs of Toulouse. His military enthusiasm was short-lived, undoubtedly the time, Resseguier would say, of a "moment of youthful effervescence when he was unaware of his true aptitudes". Perhaps also in order to be included in the chivalrous lineage of his ancestors. In any case, he very quickly left the King's Household Cavalry, aiming at a diplomatic career.

From then on, he gave himself over to the muses, as they say, and, throughout his life, he never ceased dedicating himself to literature and poetry amongst other activities, which were numerous as we shall see. Here is a critical statement from that time made by Resseguier, his colleague at the Academie des jeux floraux:

"I find amongst the numerous papers he has left, carefully kept, copied in an orderly manner and attached with a slightly faded blue ribbon, note books of poetry which prove to us the value the author attached to his compositions. However, in basis and in form, these poems are also faded. They have a flavour contemporary to the years preceding the renovation of literature under the Restoration".

Possibly from 1815, or in 1816 at the latest, Louis Charles Edouard was introduced by his mother to the Marquis d'Osmond, Ambassador to King Louis XVIII in London, who was a relative. There, he worked at the Embassy and thus gained full entry into the small diplomatic world of the Restoration. It appears that he very quickly made his mark as he went to the Congress of Aix-la-Chapelle in 1818 in the company of the Duke of Richelieu, the King's Prime Minister. Then he became charge d'affaires in Hannover, where he represented France. It was there, but I do not know when, that he married Mlle de Lagarde, "rich heiress of a deservedly esteemed family". Then, the post of Ambassador in Berne having become vacant, he was sent there. Resseguire said:

"His home soon became the refuge and center for Swiss society, for to him diplomacy was not only the assiduous study of international affairs and the protection of interests in question, but it was also the daily promotion of the French influence, which he practiced with the help of the charm of social life. His drawing room was used as much as his office, and, in the evening, he liked to continue the works of the morning with brilliant conversations or elegant meetings which he constantly instigated."

Two years after his arrival in Berne, the first tragedy occured: his young wife died while giving birth to their first child. It was a girl, Marie, who lived, and on whom I believe he bestowed all his affection. Deeply affected by the sudden departure of his wife, he received permission to leave Berne. He was called to Naples, where he gradually regained his interest in life. There, he was introduced to archaeology, for which he soon developed a passion, and above all to medicine, let us say a kind on medicine based on spagyrie. (See my earlier note - Translator).

It was in Naples in 1830 that the July revolution took him by surprise. Immediately, Louis-Phillipe, at the Tuileries, called him so that he could give his account of his mission in the service of Louis XVIII. As a result of this meeting with the King, the Viscount, at the age of 38, ended his already full diplomatic career and went in pursuit of the defence of the royalist legitimist cause. Resseguier mentioned his close work with the Renovateur and La Quotidienne and the fact that, in Paris, where he lived from then on, he frequented the drawing room of Mme the Countesse of Boigne.

VISCOUNT DE LAPASSE, SPAGYRIST

In Naples, once more according to Resseguier, the Viscount went into medicine for the first time. Here once again is his account. It is fundamental:

"The School of Salerne, having lost its splendour, was for him a permitted school. He was seen seeking famous practitioners, isolating himself, and sometimes meeting in monasteries. Asking in the dusty libraries of the Abbeys of LaCava, Mont Cassin and Montreal for the treasures contained in their charters; and, if it is to be believed, it was in these monasteries that he collected his valuable and secret medical information which was later to form the basis of the health system he created."

I believe this quest took place around 1825, at least it was before the year 1830, when Lapasse was forced to leave Naples. At the same time, no doubt, he stayed in Sicily, in or near Palermes. There, according to Simon Brugal (pseudonym of Firmin Boissin), who seems to have obtained his information from Lapasse himself, and whose company he used to keep, the Viscount met a certain Prince Balbiani. Here is the description Brugal gave of him, which could only have come from Lapasse himself:

"... an amiable, educated old man who received strangers with charming grace. This octogenarian was a companion of the famous Joseph Balsamo, better known by the name of Cagliostro, in spite of the novel dedicated to him, using his real name, by our novelist, Alexandre Dumas.

"Prince Balbiani developed a friendship towards the Viscount de Lapasse. He enjoyed conversing with him about hermeticism and he encouraged his project to get to the bottom of its mysteries. He did more: he guided the first steps of the young adept through the labyrinth of manuscripts and books on alchemy and the Qabalah, of which he had plenty. In Italy, this prince was considered to be a Rose+Croix ..."

Brugal adds that Prince Balbiani, or the so-called Prince, always carried with him a rock crystal flacon containing a mysterious transparent liquid which had been given to him by an old hermit from near Palerme. Here we are right in the spagyric tradition. Again according to Brugal, Prince Balbiani was Viscount Lapasse's initiator. But I do not know exactly to what initiation he is referring. And I do not know in what sense of the word "initiate". This whole question of Prince Balbiani is also a mystery, as it is certain that Lapasse never made much of this "initiation" outside the friendly and fraternal circle which we believe the Toulouse Rose+Croix to have been. Finally, according to Brugal, the Viscount returned to Italy, probably in 1830, with a letter of recommendation to the Count of Ourches, owner in Paris of a very beautiful library of occult sciences. He apparently let the Viscount go there whenever he wished to.

Prince Balbiani is unknown amongst the nobility of Italy, but should this title be interpreted in the way in which it is usually used? More than one initiate has adopted a title of nobility, which has for him and his peers a completely different meaning, without having been authorized to do so in accordance with the customs of the nobility. One example, the "Count" St. Germain or the "Count" Cagliostro, whom Prince Balbiani used to frequent. Let us note also that the title of Prince is indeed used in Freemasonry to designate the degree of several orders. Thus, the 18th degree of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Order is designated Rose-Croix Sovereign Prince. But it is also true that, according to Brugal, Prince Balbiani denied to Lapasse that he belonged to the Freemasons. He even protested against the frequent confusion between the Masonic Rose-Croix title and the meaning of this term otherwise. Brugal attributes the following words to Prince Balbiani: "Popular belief is incorrect. True Rose+Croix are not to be found in Masonic associations."

Lapasse's meeting with Prince Balbiani should be looked at with caution. Let us note that Count de Resseguier was not aware of it; at least he made no mention of it anywhere. But I do not, however, believe that there is any reason to be surprised about this, since the Viscount's occultism escaped him; even though he knew him and kept his company I doubt whether he would have confided in him about his hermetic preoccupations. Nevertheless, Resseguier mentions a second stay in Sicily by Louis Charles Edouard in about 1840 for a new campaign of medical research, where, he stated, he left sick and returned healed!

What about this Prince Balbiani? A mythical person or a real one? Anybody who, with the amount of evidence available, tries to resolve this would be foolhardy. It is impossible to refute the theory of myth, pure and simple. But it is also impossible to refute the theory of a real person under the veil of an initiatic title added to a pseudonym.

According to Resseguier, the Viscount stayed in Paris after his return from Italy in 1830 until about 1842, the time of his return to Toulouse. According to Brugal, the date of this return should be delayed by 10 years and, still according to the same person, Louis Charles Edouard, in Paris, registered for a while as a free student in the faculty of medicine at the age of 60, in about 1852. He did not return to Toulouse until after that. In the case in point, I am inclined to favour Resseguier, who states that around 1842, when he returned to the South, the Viscount fell ill, and he adds that the sick man brought out the doctor in him:

"He read everything of note that modern medical science has published and was able, if not to support an official thesis, at least to make a free attempt, upon which, when it was published, the best practitioners of the Faculty of Montpellier bestowed the most encouraging praise." The "thesis" that Resseguier mentions certainly corresponds to the following work, published in the year 1845 and certainly entitled "Considerations on the human life span and ways to prolong it", a copy of which is kept in the National Library. It is a of 200 pages which is dry to read, and which I will not elaborate upon.

After another stay in Sicily, which I mentioned earlier, according to Resseguier, Louis Charles Edourd opened a doctor's office in Toulouse where he practiced his medicine, usually free of charge. Resseguier again:

"... for, more fortunately than many recognized doctors, M. de Lapasse had patients. Some were charming young ladies whom he kept under the influence of his mysterious doctrines, and who brought to him for healing their distressing migraines, gastritis and neuralgia. No doubt, after feeling their pulse in true doctor's fashion, and helping himself to an extra pinch from his gold tobacco container, he seriously prescribed going to balls, the theatre or sweets. Others were poor forsaken people to whom he was not satisfied merely to give hope, but whom he would always support with abundant alms. I will leave you to imagine the sweet and precious fees that M. de Lapasse must have collected in this way!" For his part, Brugal reports the words of the people of Toulouse: "he is a skilful person who heals for nothing" and compares him to his "departed friend" from Nice, Dr Adrien Peladan. In fact, this comparison is not without interest, for Adrien Peladan was said to be affiliated to the Rose+Croix of Toulouse, according to his brother, Josephin, whom we will come back to later. (It is therefore possible that the two men knew each other and kept each other's company.)

In addition to the work I mentioned earlier, emphasizing that it could have been his unofficial medical thesis, Lapasse published, in 1860, an "Essay on the preservation of human life", then, in 1861, "Health practices for longevity, curing of migraines, stomach aches, painful nerves and dizziness". He took part in research done by the archeological society of the Midi of France and joined the Argricultural Society of the Haute-Garonne. In 1865, he was elected to the Conseil Municipal of Toulouse, where he spent a little time. At the end of 1866 or the beginning of 1867, a final tribute was paid to him by his admission to the Academie des jeux floraux of Toulouse, where he expressed his thanks at the meeting of 12th May 1867. As you will remember, the Viscount had lost his wife at the birth of their only child, Marie, who lived and married the Marquis de le Bourdonnay. Too soon, alas, Marie departed from this world; her father never recovered from this loss. I imagine that he then became even closer to his aged mother, whom he loved to live near and upon whom he showered much affectionate care and attention. For example, he never failed, Brugal reports, to serve her seven drops of his gold-based elixir "stomatico-nervin". When, in her turn, she departed from this world, her son, stricken yet again, went to rest with his cousin, M. de Montesquiou, "It was there", explains Resseguier, "that within a few days he was afflicted by a cruel sickness, and died a kind-hearted man, a Christian, with courage and in faith."

THE TOULOUSE ROSE+CROIX

Did Louis Charles Edouard de Lapasse form in about 1850 a Rose+Croix order, meaning a rosicrucian, or so-called rosicrucian society in Toulouse, such as have been appearing periodically for three centuries? In spite of the rumour which was spread here and there, I do not know. For my part, I have never found the slightest convincing piece of evidence on the subject. Nothing in the Municipal Library of Toulouse, as far as it was possible to verify, seemed to relate to our subject. As for the famous Lapasse documents, which were supposed to have found their way into the National Library, and on which I had based my hopes, Monsieur Pierre Jeanin, the Librarian, and I searched for them in vain.

Concerning the Rose+Croix of Toulouse, the most important point comes from Joesphin Peladan, who accounted for his Rosicrucian lineage in this way:

"Through my brother, Dr Adrian Peladin, who, with Simon Brugal, was in the last branch of the so-called Toulouse Rose+Croix, as were the Aroux, the d'Orients and the Viscounts de Lapasse, I am from the Rosenkreutz." The Peladan collection of the Arsenal Library in Paris contains a "Commemoration to Firmin Boissin (Simon Brugal), Rose+Croix commander of the Temple, Prior of Toulouse and most senior member to the council of 14, who died in the arms of the Church", signed S.P. (Sâr Peladan). Here it is repeated in its entirety:

"To members of our Order and to all intellectuals, it is with great sorrow that we announce the passing away in God of our Commander and Prior of Toulouse, FIRMIN BOISSIN. In him, we have lost our most senior member: he was knighted as a Rose-Crucian of the last branch of the Traditional Order, that of Toulouse.

"In 1858, he received as a Rose+Cross brother Dr Adiren Peladin, and on the death of the illumined doctor, legitimately became Grand Master of this past order, which we brought back into being.

"Firmin Boissin wrote a wonderful novel on the Revolution in the Ardeche: 'Jan de la Lune', a learned study; 'Le Camp de Jales', some biographical critiques: 'Les excentriques disparus' (Departed eccentrics). For a long time, out of necessity, he edited 'Le Messenger de Toulouse'. We commend him to your prayers, to your reading and to your memory. Amen."

The two quotations we have just made indicate the existence of a chain of initiates, which would appear to date back to Christian Rosenkreutz. The last links of this chain were Firmin Boissin-Brugal, then Adrien Peladan, junior, who, in his turn, transmitted this affiliation to his brother, Josephin. We have seen elsewhere that Brugal himself declared the existence of a rosicrucian lineage of which Lapasse was a member, and which originated from the enigmatical and possibly mythical Prince Balbiani, said to have been a disciple of Cagliostro. With reservations on the Rosicrucian character of this chain and on its true source, it remains possible that Lapasse instituted in Toulouse a circle of hermeticists claiming to be Rose+Croix. If this was indeed the case, this circle could not have had more than 20 members. For all that, there is nothing which allows us to be absolutely certain of this.

Peladan himself maintained that the Rose+Croix of Toulouse was no longer in existence, that he reactivated it and that it only survived through its Ordre de la Rose+Croix de Temple et du Graal, formed in 1890. Peladan's Order, although very small numerically, provoked much interest in Paris (this will be seen in the next chapter) through the salons of the Rose+Croix organized under its auspices.

As for the Rose+Croix in Toulouse (in case it did exist and whatever its structures and forms), is it possible that it survived independantly of Peladan? This question would establish the validity of one of the filiations of the Rosicrucian Order AMORC in Chapter IV of this work, where Spencer Lewis' stay in France, in particular in Toulouse, during the Summer of 1909, will be analysed.

But, for now, we will make way for Dantinne-Hieronymous, who will be featured throughout the following chapter.

Dear Companions: #85(S)

This is a continuation of lecture #77(S) where we learned the purpose of rhythmic breathing: it clears the mind, induces calmness,
strengthens the will.

We have also learned the particular qualities associated with left and right nostril flow. PLEASE RE-READ LECTURE # 77(S).

Let us now waste no time and get immediately into the practical aspects of this information.

THE LAW OF ATTRACTION AND REPULSION

Axiom (1) "Want a thing obviously and consciously and you won't get it!"

Axiom (2) "Want something impersonally and subconsciously, work for it, direct your efforts towards it, YET KEEP THE IDEA OF THE RESULT OUT OF YOUR CONSCIOUS MIND ... you will obtain success!!!"

Let us use an analogy: if John writes a letter to Mary, Mary will not get it unless John gives it to the post office ...

As long as John 'holds on' to the letter it can't be delivered. The principle is: Visualize and charge the mental image as you have been taught to do ... then release it, forget it, dismiss it from your mind. A little later on you repeat the procedure ... visualize/energize ... release/forget. Remember the analogy with the letter ... unless it is given to the post office it can't be delivered.

(PAUSE AND RE-CAP. QUESTIONS/COMMENTS)

Now hear this: Each of us is somewhat dependent upon the impressions we create upon other people. Yet, so often, we overdo things. Let the other person concerned realise that we are too anxious and trying to please. Immediately we arouse hostility in those whom we are trying to impress. (Axiom (1) of the Law of Attraction and Repulsion.)

Therefore, if one enters an office ... cool, detached, yet pleasant and receptive, one will NOT ANTAGONISE the other individual subconsciously.

Enter the same office, filled with apprehension, tense and determined to do well ... you WILL arouse subconscious hostility.

Therefore, before an important interview, go quietly aside, sit down if possible, practise controlled breathing, alternately through each nostril. Focus your mind on any object in the room.

When you feel confident and ready ... GO AHEAD.

Train yourself to partially relax, by unflexing the muscles, and breathing evenly.

You can learn to do this anywhere ... flying, driving, in a bus, in waiting-rooms, even sitting down at a typewriter or in a dentist's chair.

Then, before meeting your new contact, take some full, deep breaths, and you will be amazed at the new strength and confidence flooding through you.

Just because you are NOT TRYING to do or say the right thing, your SUBCONSCIOUS MIND WILL TAKE CONTROL, COOLY GUIDE YOU THROUGH ... and you WILL DO, automatically, just what you should! Many modern courses of psychological training teach these very things ... the esoteric science teaches them too ... but from the angle that one's Subconscious Mind is part of the Universal Mind and can link itself with that Universal Power to obtain fresh, greater strength for an emergency.

SOLVING OF PROBLEMS

I will now give you a real "secret", a sure way of finding answers to problems, a method that really works:

The time is just before retiring for the night. Take any serious personal problem. Sit down quietly and relax. Breathe evenly ... rhythmically. Note all the things that are wrong. Write them down on a piece of paper if you wish ... also all the possible actions you could take. Think carefully about the entire problem.

Then ... WITHOUT WORRYING OR THINKING OF THE OUTCOME AT ALL ... will your subconscious mind to show you the best solution.

PUT THE WHOLE MATTER OUT OF YOUR CONSCIOUS MIND. Get up, take a short walk, or take up any distracting recreation ... drink a glass of water ... look out of the window, or whatever ... anything to divert the conscious mind.

GO TO SLEEP. "Sleep on it" as the saying goes.

Next morning, THINK OF THE PROBLEM IMMEDIATELY YOU AWAKE ... a solution WILL APPEAR!!!

KNOWLEDGE IS POWER ... ... USE IT !

HEPTAD

OVER THE HILL TO HEAVEN

One of the self-evident things of life is that wherever we go, we find that hills loom up before us. We find them in a geographical sense, and in a sense of meeting life we find the "hills" of obstacles and difficulties. There is no such thing as a road of life that does not occasionally have its hills, and sometimes great mountains. But the important thing (and this is the thing that I believe Jesus so exemplified) is that although you find mountains before you, you have the power to rise above them. As He might say, "Go over the hill to heaven -- to overcoming, to freedom."

Paul tells us: "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man. But God is faithful; He will not suffer you to be tempted above what you are able, but will, with the temptation, also make a way of escape, that you may be able to bear it." This has always been one of my favorite Bible verses because I think that it points to the truth of the unlimited potential of man. No matter what challenges or hazards life may present, there is that within every person -- within you and within me -- that is equal to them. No matter what hills or mountains loom before us, we can go over the hill to heaven and find fulfillment. The quotation above is often misapplied because of the word "temptation." The word "temptation" as used here actually refers to problems or challenges. "Trial" is perhaps a better word, and we might state it this way: "There hath no trial beset you but such as is common to man...God will not suffer you to be tried or tempted or tested beyond your ability, but will, with the trial, also provide a way of escape, so that you can be able to bear it, so that you can rise above the mountain and find new accomplishment."

A businessman tells of when he was playing guard on the football team in college and the coach needed more power from his players. So the coach took him to a room off the locker room and said: "You have not been living up to your potential. Don't you believe in yourself? I want you to stand tall, and I'm going to tell you something: You've got it in you to be the greatest guard that this college has ever had. Now get out on that field and be what you can be; be what God means you to be." This man says that he realized the coach may well have told this to every other person on the squad, but it did its work. He ran out on that field running tall, and he actually became the kind of guard that his coach said he should be. He says that today, when he gets his business associates together, he tells them: "Think tall, act tall, pray tall, believe tall, and walk tall. Then, when problems come, you stand towering above them and you simply step over them to your desired end."

Washington Irving once wrote: "Little minds are tamed and subdued by misfortune; great minds rise over it." We need to continually refire ourselves with enthusiasm and with faith, and with the determination and the will to go forward over the seeming mountains to the heaven of overcoming. It is easy to go forward when there are no obstructions, of course, but it takes character to refuse to accept the mountains and the rough places as roadblocks.

I love the thought of Tagore, the great Indian poet, who said: "I thought that my voyage had come to its end, that the path before me was closed, that provisions were exhausted, and that the time had come to take shelter in a silent obscurity. But I find that thy will knows no end in me; and when old words die out on my tongue, new melodies break forth from my heart; and where old tracks are lost, new country is revealed with its wonders."

Health problems are often mountainous obstacles to happy and normal living. How often we are blocked by some tragic physical crisis, and how many persons bow down in despair. I remember reading, some years ago, a magazine article about Senator Clinton Anderson of New Mexico, where he tells of the lowest moment of his life. At age twenty-one, he had just launched a promising career on a newspaper and he was eagerly anticipating getting married. Then all of his hopes were shattered when it was discovered that he had tuberculosis. He was sent to New Mexico where he was confined to a bed in a sanatorium. He had nothing to look forward to, and it seemed that life was at an end for him. The doctor finally wired his father to come within five days if he wanted to see his son alive. Anderson said that he seriously contemplated taking his own life, when suddenly he noticed somebody standing beside his bed. It was an old TB patient named Joe Mars. The words Joe Mars spoke saved young Anderson's life: "Remember that what you've got will never kill you if you keep it in your chest. But if you let it get up here," he said, tapping his temple, "it's fatal. Worrying kills more patients than TB itself ever did." Well, Anderson's heart leaped. He determined to keep the thoughts of illness out of his mind, so he began writing poems and stories, and later worked on the hospital newspaper. And to each patient he passed along old Joe Mars' warning against letting a physical ailment become a mental ailment. As most of us know, Clinton Anderson not only had a complete recovery but he went on to live a happy and successful life. He became a United States Senator, and one of the very best, all because Joe Mars taught him to keep his physical ailment where it belonged: in the flesh, but not in the mind.

There is never a physical condition that is superior to the life force within you. It is only when we let ourselves bow down and worship the physical mountain that it seems to have power over us. I love that statement of Jesus: "I will say to the mountain, 'Be thou removed and cast into the midst of the sea'; and it shall be done." In a figurative sense we can always do this, if we believe that we have the power within us to go over the hill to heaven.

Channing Pollack tells of seeing a man that he will never forget. Pollack was lecturing at Brigham Young University, and after the lecture a man came up to him and said something about the talk. He turned to shake the man's hand and he found that he had no hands. He looked up to meet his eyes and found he had no eyes. The next morning, that man called Pollack on the telephone and invited him to drive with him to a scenic canyon nearby. Pollack wrote of this occasion: "The idea of seeing a canyon with a man who couldn't see intrigued me, but perhaps no one has ever seen that canyon as clearly and as appreciatively as my blind companion. He kept pointing this way and that; 'Look at that crag!' he would exclaim. I asked him, 'How long since you really saw this valley last?' He answered, 'More than thirty years, but I know every rock and tree. When I am depressed I always come here to look at them. I can't tell you what these mountains mean to me.'"

This man had been blinded and crippled in a mine explosion when he was twenty-one, but he then went on to earn money to pay for his education. After that, he gave thousands of lectures and crossed the continent unaccompanied fifty-five times. Since he couldn't read Braille, he memorized over forty-thousand words of classical literature so that he could repeat them to himself when he wanted to "read." He kept house alone in a lovely cottage, doing cooking with a wooden hand that he had made, and he went fishing, using another kind of artificial hand. Pollack described him as one of the busiest, happiest, friendliest persons that he had ever met. Certainly, this man went over the hill to heaven.

So, may we recapitulate with Paul's statement: "There hath no temptation taken you (there is no test or challenge that can come to you) but such as is common to man. But God is faithful (God is stable dynamic law, the support that is ever within you) He will not suffer you to be tempted above what you are able (He will not allow you to be tested or tried or challenged beyond your ability), but will, with the temptation (the test, the challenge, the difficulty), also make a way of escape, that you will be able to bear it."

Yes, what he says is: You have the power to go over the hill, over the mountain to a new experience, a new fulfillment. The power is in you and that is the promise. And the next step, of course, is to use it, to stir up the gift of God within you. Believe today that you have the power to rise above your challenges and begin right now to act as if you do. And you'll begin to find a whole new demonstration of good in your life.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

CONTINUING THE ADDRESS BY SAR ASUNTA TO THE BRETHREN OF LODGE BENEVOLENCE ... BEING AN EXPOSE OF LCSM's BOOK: OF ERROR AND OF TRUTH.

This was the most skilful and dangerous trick which could have prevented man's progress. When confronted by a choice of two ways, he could work out the right one to choose, but if someone comes and tells him that both roads go the same way and are equally good, the position of the traveller becomes more confusing and embarassing than if he had taken advice from himself. This is the present position of man in the face of what he has been taught to believe, that the only laws that exist are those of his senses, and that they are his only guide. How is it that man could not put himself on guard in the face of these dangerous masters?

The principle of evil has taken advantage of this situation and has thrown man into this horrible state of uncertainty. But man's nature contains the means of discovering the strategy of his enemy and it will eventually lead him naturally to the truth. This power is not contained in the senses, but within man himself are the seeds of light and truth.

Man is different from other Beings, some of which are only intelligent; others are just sensory. Only man is both at the same time. Man was an intelligent being, but he also had an envelope ... the impenetrable armour in the allegory.

Since his fall, man's envelope has been destructible, and his actions, based on his senses, destroy each other. But man has not lost his intelligence. So he is at one and the same time great and small, mortal and immortal, still intellectually free ... yet tied in the physical by laws which are independant of his will. Man does not merely satisfy his physical senses. He has the ability to refuse food, even when hungry, for some other reason. Thus, man has a dual nature. His body tries to live and continue to exist, yet man can let it suffer, become exhausted ... and die.

LCSM goes on to talk about the realms of Beings.

Animals are trained through their senses ... punishment and reward; plants also have an inborn active principle which causes them to grow, bear fruit and reproduce, but they do not show signs of pain and desire like animals.

Unlike animals, Man is only temporarily linked to the Principle of the senses. LCSM goes into this discussion of the realms to help man to believe in his true nature. Man's science has no 100% sure way of classifying the 3 realms.

Animals have one Principle, and they do not need to belong to the earth to bring it to realization. They are sustained by the warmth of the female of their species or by the heat of the sun or any other source of heat.

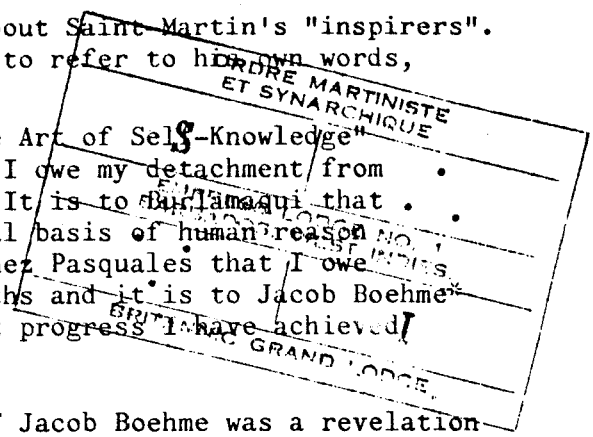
My Brothers & Sisters: Greetings! #86

Private & Confidential

Many things have been said about Saint-Martin's "inspirers". We feel it would be best in this respect to refer to his own words, in his book "Portrait" where he wrote:



> "It is to Abbadie's work 'The Art of Self-Knowledge" (L'Art de se Connaitre) that I owe my detachment from the things of this world ... It is to Du Lamaqui that I owe my taste for the natural basis of human reason and justice. It is to Martinez Pasquales that I owe my admission to superior truths and it is to Jacob Boehme* that I owe the most important progress I have achieved in these truths."

The discovery of the works of Jacob Boehme was a revelation to Saint-Martin. He found therein the final key to the "INNER WAY." He then follows the path he had sensed but of which he had only reached the threshold. He now walks towards Unity along the road of the Heart and of the Spirit. HE NOW UNDERSTANDS THE REAL MEANING OF THE COHEN TRADITIONS. Combining his natural gifts with the teachings of Pasquales and those of Boehme ... Saint-Martin creates "Martinism".

What then is Martinism?

Martinism is, before everything else: a way of life. Its active principles, however, are related to a certain mode of thought. In the first place ... the primary principle of intelligence and of moral sense must be respected. Our existence and all our activities are controlled by essential and ineluctable TRUTHS that books can only confirm. In whatever sphere Man is moving, his behaviour results from deep, intellectual convictions that should really be called philosophical convictions. It is only because he knows whence he comes and where he goes ... that Man is able to orient his actions and give them a meaning. The solution to the vital problem of human destiny contains also the answers to all questions that face Man. To follow the logical character of these deductions it is essential first to know on what they are based.

What were to Saint-Martin those primitive truths? ... and how does one acquire them? We quoted last week the first words of the first work Saint-Martin wrote. Let us repeat them:

> "IT IS A SAD VISION INDEED THAT, WHEN WE START LOOKING AT MAN, WE SEE HIM AT THE SAME TIME TORMENTED BY THE DESIRE TO KNOW, FAILING TO FIND A REASON TO ANYTHING ... BUT DARING NEVERTHELESS TO GIVE A REASON TO EVERYTHING."

This is the starting point of Saint-Martin's doctrine.

Man is the sum total of all problems. He himself is a problem ... the enigma of enigmas. The question Man asks, indeed the question that his very nature presents, must be resolved. How useless would be a theory which would not have for its first object "Man's general welfare." !

This welfare can only result from the answer to the human question. The existence of this interrogation will be the first thing Man is sure of. Indeed, a first realization imposes itself: Man's condition. This condition, furthermore, is characterized by a feeling of insecurity ... of imperfection. The fact that Man may be ignorant of something, or be mistaken ... constitutes the initial mystery which causes, logically, the obscurity of the world.

From looking at Man's status, one reaches, inevitably, some conclusions of the "origin and destiny of Man." It is however, through the study of Man alone, by getting deeper into the problem and by reflecting repeatedly on the terms of that problem ... that one may reach a solution. This is Saint-Martin's method: one must "explain things through Man ... and not Man through things." !

In his "Tableau Naturel", Saint-Martin wrote:

> "He who knows himself will be able to know the universe and other beings. But the knowledge of self will be found only in self. It is in Man's mind that we must look for the Laws that have presided at his origin."

Man, who is the enigma, is therefore also the key to that enigma.

- - - - - DISCUSSION - - - - -

Although that last phrase can be misinterpreted in terms of intellectual casuistry, there is no question however of following a method of self-study in order to establish the superiority of the intellectual faculty, or even demonstrate the existence of that faculty. Faced with his condition (which is also his enigma) Man is naturally led to study himself. His normal reaction must be to look within himself ... because THAT IS WHERE THE PROBLEM IS. It is therefore "unfortunate" for Man to need proofs that are external or "foreign" to himself in order "to know himself and believe in his true nature, because in his own nature lie testimonies far more convincing than those he could find by observing material objects." (Please re-read this paragraph and study it carefully.)

Only after recognizing himself for what he really is, will Man, convinced of his divinity and of his central position, take himself as the yardstick with which to measure, or at least to explain ... external things. To state that from Man's true nature must come "knowledge of the Laws of Nature and of other beings" is not a supposition ... IT IS A CERTAINTY, THE FINAL RESULT OF AN EXPERIENCE.

If Martinism, then, can help us find the Key to the Universe and the Vision of God ... it is because it is rooted in the "Art of Self-Knowledge."

Saint-Martin, a Master of the Occident, meets here the Light of Asia. The Buddha, struck by the urgency of our condition, strongly condemned sterile speculations which lead us away from our real concern. In truth ... what folly it would be to start by seeking to know whether the universe is temporal or eternal, finite or infinite, or if the life principle is identifiable with the body ... or something else! Let us quote this passage from the Masshima Kikaya:

"It would be as if a man, wounded by an arrow, said to his friends, relations or neighbours who were about to call a surgeon to treat him: 'I do not want this arrow taken out before I know who shot it. Was it a prince, a citizen or a slave' or 'what was his name; to what family or tribe did he belong?' ... We may be sure that this man would die before he could learn all that"!

We have said that according to Saint-Martin, Man's own nature must be the object of his first study. The Universe should be explained through Man and not Man through the Universe. The first question that occurs to Man concerns his condition and it is to this he must find a precise answer ... all other problems are of secondary importance. Saint-Martin does not however place these secondary questions outside the field of human research ... he does not reject philosophical investigation ... he actually finds it absurd if our mind is thirsty for knowledge to prevent it from quenching this thirst ... WHAT HE DOES IS TO RELEGATE THIS DESIRE FOR KNOWLEDGE TO ITS PROPER PLACE. When Man has found the Way That Leads To Truth, he may then pause and meditate on the Mysteries of God and of the Universe, for he has found his yardstick ... BUT THE PURSUIT OF INTELLECTUAL SATISFACTIONS, EVEN OF AN ABSTRACT NATURE, MUST NOT BE GIVEN PRIORITY OVER MANAGING OUR LIFE.

It may even be said that there is no strict differentiation between these two types of pursuit but simply a matter of precedence, seeing that because of a sort of universal "conspiration" all things are bound together and that the solution of the first enigma also brings the answer to the second. As seen from our story of the man wounded by an arrow, we must first remove the arrow and tend the wound. However: when we are thus engaged in this urgent operation ... which is to save ourselves ... we realize from the nature of the wound the kind of missile that hit us. From its imprint, we recognize its nature and origin. This, however, comes to us as a by-product of attending FIRST to our salvation.

One of Saint-Martin's historians wrote: "Saint-Martin wants to believe, but he wants to believe more or less as a philosopher would believe. He is a mystic, but an intelligent mystic! Saint-Martin's theosophy is not a work of imagination. It is not a fabric woven with unverifiable assertions and mystical dreams. To climb towards the highest peaks of metaphysics and of spirituality, Saint-Martin does not set himself on a plane that is inaccessible to the person unfamiliar with abstract speculations." He starts at our level, that of Man, and he leads from there towards that divine goal that we grieve so much to find so distant. What are the stages of that journey?

First: Man becomes conscious of his condition, that is, he sees himself as mind and body ... or, if you like it ... he becomes conscious of manifestations within and without himself. These two kinds of manifestations contribute to create his "condition".

In his "New Man" (Le Nouvel Homme), Saint-Martin says:

"To those who have not realized their true nature I would only recommend looking at themselves in order to avoid all possible mistakes. In what they call Man, in what they call moral quality, in what they call science, indeed, in all that can be considered as the chaos and the battlefield of their different doctrines, they will find so many dual and opposed actions, so many forces fighting and cancelling each other, so many principles clearly active and so many clearly passive, and all this without even looking outside themselves that, without perhaps being able to say what they are made of, they will be bound to agree that all is not uniform and alike within us and that we exist only in perpetual division, being different from ourselves, from all that surrounds us and from everything we can reach and examine. It would then be enough to strengthen with scientific principles these very differences in order to see Man's true nature and to place him in his proper station."

- - - - - DISCUSSION - - - - -

We draw to members attention the fact that most of the material on which these early lectures in this Degree are based is in 18th century French. In presenting the doctrine of Saint-Martin at the present time, and then later that of Pasquales, we decided to stick as closely as possible to the original texts and to sacrifice style and fluency to accuracy. Our last quotation and the subject of this conventicle may, in the eyes of some, tend to be somewhat abstruse. I think it is essential, however, that we make a special effort to follow the development of Saint-Martin's philosophy of Man, which, after all, constitutes the very basis of Martinism as we know and practise it. In quoting such long sentances from our Master's works, we resist the temptation to shorten them and revert to more modern phraseology ... which could betray the fullness of the argument.

We realize it is not easy for our members to go back to the source, so to speak, and familiarize themselves with the works of Saint-Martin, as these are just about unobtainable in English. This is one of the reasons for the detailed way in which we are now studying the basic principles of Man's Way of Return, or Reintegration, according to Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin. We shall then examine the basic elements of the doctrine of Martinez Pasquales which inspired Saint-Martin. We shall then be well-armed for bringing the subject down to our own time and for examining modern Martinist thought. Meanwhile, let us not regret too much the lack of works of reference in English because Saint-Martin himself, perhaps not without a little humour, once declared:

"The books I have written had only one object and that was to incite my readers to forsake all books in their search ... not forgetting my own."

Let us then, in simple words, recapitulate the subject of this conventicle:

Saint-Martin invites Man to examine and study himself and to analyse carefully the elements of his own REALITY. Thus will Man discover his true place and feel the harmony of creation, according to the famous Delphic saying: "KNOW THYSELF AND THOU SHALT KNOW THE UNIVERSE AND THE GODS." Let us therefore accept Saint-Martin's invitation and begin to study ourselves until the next conventicle. Let us do this in all sincerity, looking squarely at our faults and qualities, at all the opposites and contradictions of our make-up. Only through such a critical examination shall we begin to understand ourselves. (L.M.: GO OVER THIS LAST PARAGRAPH AND ENSURE THAT ALL PRESENT UNDERSTAND WHAT THEY ARE TO DO).

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

* The philosophy of Jacob Boehme is set forth in the book FIVE CHRISTIAN PRINCIPALS.

Saint-Martin's last book MAN: HIS TRUE NATURE AND MINISTRY is the only one completely translated into English. In it the influence of Jacob Boehme can be discerned. Both of these books are available from our Supply Department.

"Martinism" is a word that encompasses more than one explanation. We saw one definition in lecture #81 para. 3. We have also seen a further definition in this lecture (#86), para. 5.. "Martinism" is also the works of Martinez Pasquales and the operations of the Elus-Cohen. "Pure Martinism" has been described as the ideas enshrined in the regalia and furnishings used and found in a Martinist Lodge. Papus, de Gauita, Peladan, Sedir, Amblain and others have written on Martinism ... but not all of their material is Martinism. A definition of Martinism was given as early as Liber 1, in "A Short History of Martinism and the Martinist Orders" para. 1. As we go along we shall yet find another definition.

Before begining tonight's lecture, the Lodge Master will take first any observations re self-study that the brethren have to share.

My Brothers & Sisters: Greetings!

Quoting from the book "Le Nouvel Homme", (The New Man), we saw last week that Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin considers man as existing only in a state of conscious division; a state in which we are different from ourselves, from all that surrounds us and from everything we can reach and inspect. When saying we are different from ourselves, we do not simply mean that men differ from one another ... but we mean that within each of us there exists, so to speak, different beings or identities.

We are at one and the same time an intellectual being, and a sentient being ... both housed in a corporeal or physical being. Each of these three main beings in us rules our life in its particular sphere and each has a consciousness capable of assuming, in turns, the control of our existence.

Our physical being, for instance, has a consciousness which controls all functions related to the sustained life and activity of our body. It supervises the renewal of the cells, the circulation of the blood and other functions of which we are barely aware. When it becomes urgent for an energy supply to be found in order to recharge our reserves, it takes control of the whole organism by flashing a message to our sensitive being in the shape of a feeling of hunger. Our sensitive being upon becoming conscious of that feeling of hunger will then transmit to our intellectual being a message requiring it to direct our attention to the search for food. Thus, in a hungry man, the intellectual being and the sensitive being become subjugated to the physical being and work for the fulfilment of its needs.

But, according to our individual characteristics, these three beings of ours are in turn divided into different influences which could be called tendencies for our intellectual being, propensities for our sensitive being, and urges for our physical being.

The whole structure becomes then a very delicate and complex piece of mechanism in which individual influences act in different directions, counteracting and cancelling out one another sometimes, to achieve a state of precarious balance in which even our environment plays a part.

This diversity that exists in our own person ... which we like to imagine as an integrated whole ... will explain the frequent inconstancy of our behaviour. We often resolve to act in a certain way under the influence, say, of our sensitive being (led by a desire to satisfy one of its propensities) ... but when the time comes to accomplish that action, we find that the urge has gone and we have no inclination to do so. It is simply that we may then be ruled by our intellectual being which is bent upon another pursuit ... and we find no need to do what we had previously decided. It is rather as if a man wishing to go to Mexico, was steering a boat for an hour and then handed the controls over to another man bent on going to Norway.

We are in fact a whole shipload of contradictions.

This is why it is imperative that we first learn to throw a little daylight upon our own personality ... our complete being, as it is here ... within ourselves ... that a whole field of study exists.

--- D I S C U S S I O N ---

Let us therefore, Brothers & Sisters, begin NOW a systematic study of ourselves. To have any value, such a study must be sincere; and it is a task in which we can cheat no one but ourselves. When studying our tendencies, our propensities, our urges, our desires, our aspirations, our hopes, our dislikes and every other thing that motivates or helps to motivate our actions, we may find things we do not particularly like ... or even recognize as our own. Unless we are honest enough to accept seeing ourselves as we really are ... with our sordid side as well as with our respectible and noble leanings ... then the study of self will be ENTIRELY FRUITLESS and we might as well forget all about self-knowledge and go on pretending we are something we are not.

This self-study is, you will understand, an entirely individual and personal pursuit. Nobody can do it for you. We can only help inasmuch as we may offer lines of inquiry and move systematically from one level to another. The rest is up to the individual.

In the course of this study of self, there are two general recommendations we would like to make:-

First: in trying to discover the motive of our actions and thoughts, let us not isolate ourselves too much. Some of our reactions are due to external stimuli and we would only achieve a partial realization of our being if we withdrew ourselves from contacts with people and with external influences.

Secondly: let us not rush and try to adjust too much to start with. Let us not attempt to eliminate out of hand any undesirable aspect we may find in our personality. Man, as we have said, is a delicate and complex piece of mechanism holding a precarious sort of balance in a whirl of conflicting influences.

The work of putting things in order must be accomplished slowly and carefully. It is first essential to have an overall picture of ourselves before starting haphazardly to put things right. Any careless medling before we know what we are doing ... why we wish to do it ... and what possible reaction it may have ... is quite likely to do more harm than good.

If you had a motor car in more or less running order and, knowing nothing about car mechanics, you wished to improve its performance, you would not get hold of a spanner and begin taking off every little part that seemed to protrude here and there. You would first study the repair manual, listen to the sound of the engine, try to locate the essential parts, study their function, study the basic elements of the internal combustion principle, and, once satisfied that you knew how the thing should work, YOU WOULD PROCEED, STILL WITH CAUTION, TO INTERFERE WITH IT, assuming of course, that no expert advice was available.

This week, then, let us try to distinguish the functions of our intellectual self, and of our emotive or sensitive self. When we remember ... let us analyse our actions and attempt to determine whether they stem from a purely intellectual decision (like doing a crossword puzzle) ... or whether they are motivated by an emotion, or a desire, or a need. Then: try and go to the root of the influence and see whether it has an outside motivation ... or whether it is an inborn characteristic of our being.

Dear Companions:

Let us carry on from lecture #85(S). This will be the last of this special (S) series for the time being. After reading and studying this lecture, kindly go back and re-read the series: #'s 77, 85, and this one ... at one sitting.

We have seen that the Esoteric Theory embraces a Positive (Right) and Negative (Left) Breath-Flow. This idea of two opposing, or balancing, forces does not only apply to breathing of course ... but to all forms of energy ... from human and animal to the atom.

We have already noted this in our earlier study of Duality. Let us not forget that what we see as "opposite" is only the other half, or other side, of the same thing. Take an orange and cut it in half. Each half is the opposite side of the orange. Each half is not unconnected to or foreign to the other.

Notice, for example, that your own body comprises two opposites: it is divisible into two halves, each with its own polarity. Muscles, limbs, bones, organs of sight and hearing ... they all come in pairs. Even the brain has two hemispheres. While you have but one heart, it is divided into right and left sections. The same is true of other internal organs. Structurally, each has two halves, united at a central line. Everything in creation is divided into positive & negative, male & female, passive & kinetic, electric & magnetic.

For practical purposes, we can say that it is as though two electric currents are in circulation, and from this, emerges the Law of Attraction and Repulsion.

We have already seen that a PREDOMINATING flow of either nostril produces a lack of balance. Too much positive flow produces excessive heat, anger, passion, as well as energy and agressiveness.

Too much negative flow gives concentration and mildness, but leads to timidity, vacillation, and a weak will.

Now, although it is nowhere noted in the literature of Western medicine, as you have already been told: the breath does not flow equally through both nostrils, except for very brief intervals during the day. Instead, it will normally issue more from one nostril for an interval of perhaps 24 minutes or so ... then shift to the other nostril for a like period of time.

When the breath flow is equally through both nostrils, it is said that one achieves psychic powers, makes time stand still and possesses knowledge of the future ... HOWEVER ... for those who have not attained the proper development, this brief interval in which the breath flows equally from both nostrils is extremely perilous. It is said that it is during this interim that accidents and death occur, there is a tendency for actions to become erratic, losses take place, and failure is likely.

The ideal condition is that: NEGATIVE AND POSITIVE SHOULD BE BALANCED MOST OF THE TIME. This balancing is done through breathing alternately for similar lengths of time through each nostril ... not by breathing equally through each nostril all the time.

Notice "most of the time" is stated in preference to "always." The moral is ... as soon as we learn to control breathing, we can adjust TO SUIT OUR IMMEDIATE NEEDS.

When physical courage and energy are needed, when it is necesssary to be agressive, to keep up the body temperature (as in cold weather), if you are entering into a contest or debate of any kind, participating in sports or physical activity ... practise and generate RIGHT NOSTRIL BREATH-FLOW.

When clear thinking is called for, when the judgement must be level and far-sighted, for meditation, study, and protection against excessive climatic heat, for all activities of a calm, gentle steady nature ... practising any of the arts: painting, singing, writing, studying music, going to church, beginning a course of study ... use LEFT NOSTRIL BREATH-FLOW.

Now examine your present habit of thought: are you inclined to be pessimistic, diffident, unsure of yourself and lacking decisive power? You may find that your normal breath-flow is mainly negative. Not only that but this habit of negative thinking will attract negative conditions. Correct the condition by studiously practising Right Nostril Breath Flow.

On the other hand ... too much positive thinking ignores pitfalls, does not take a reasonable view of opposition and rushes headlong against circumstances and other people, making rash judgements. Correct by Left Nostril Breathing and you will find that the habit of thought becomes more methodical, obstacles can be seen without, however, being feared ... and you will become more capable of steady application.

THE ALL-IMPORTANT POINT TO BE STRESSED HERE IS: YOU CAN CHECK YOUR BREATHING DURING THE DAY AND FIND OUT IF YOU ARE PREDOMINATELY OR EXCESSIVELY POSITIVE OR NEGATIVE. YOU CAN CHANGE YOUR MOOD BY INSTITUTING APPROPRIATE LEFT OR RIGHT NOSTRIL BREATHING.

You can breathe through the nostril you wish to by simply blocking the other with thumb or forefinger.

It is said there are advanced Initiates who can change the breath-flow simply by an act of will. For the majority who cannot do this the following techniques will accomplish the same thing:

Lying down on the side opposite from that which you wish the breath-flow to predominate, will bring it about. Example: if you wish the breath to predominate through the right nostril, lie on your left side ... and vice versa. With minimum practice you will soon be able to perceive the exact moment when the change-over from one nostril to the other occurs. Normally, it will not take more than two or three minutes. If you have a cold or nasal congestion from some other cause, a little more time may be required.

One way of hastening the change when using this method, is to prop yourself on your elbow, supporting your head with your hand, your thumb resting firmly under the ear and the fingers pressed against the forehead.

Pressure in and around the arm-pit of the side opposite the desired flow will also initiate a change-over. To avoid attracting attention when this method is used in the presence of others, it may be effected by dropping your arm over the back of a chair.

Another means of correcting or changing the breath flow is to sit on the floor and draw the right or left knee, as desired, up to the arm-pit and lean heavily upon it.

Yet another procedure is to massage the ankle and great toe, again opposite the side through which you wish the breath to flow. Quite aside from using the great toe as a means for changing the breath flow, the science of reflexology which is becoming more and more popular says that there is a nerve which terminates in the large toe that regulates all cyclic changes and rhythms in the entire body.

A final and quite obvious way to cause the breath to flow through a given nostril is to plug the opposite one. When this is done, use a piece of clean cotton cloth rolled into a small ball.

If the breath flow is not wilfully changed, it will alternate back and forth, changing from one nostril to the other.

After a little experimenting with the techniques described, you will soon be able to control the breath flow, directing it through the right or left nostril as you desire. It is well to undertake this simple and easy exercise at once. A mastery of the breath flow (that is, of the pranic currents) constitutes an operational key in regulating your personality and mood ... even your health.

Bear in mind that all the time you think and breathe, you are sending out invisible waves which attract other people and circumstances to you. A level, clear mind, patient and firm, and not to be imposed upon, will not attract the envy and anger of others, but rather will bring you into contact with bright and successful persons.

As you continue to meditate, you will gradually become aware that places, and persons, seem to emanate vibrations which react upon you. Instinct and intuition will then surely show you what could not be perceived at once by reason. Your "first impressions" of people and places will become more accurate because it is as though the impersonal Higher Self can see into the heart of the other person. By properly utilizing the information given in this series you will add power to your normal processes.

Here now are some specific breathing exercises. These should be attempted only after you have been practising the first two general exercises for a few weeks:

FOR CONCENTRATION AND TO CALM THE MIND

The " 2 : 1 " Breath

Inhale Left, count 4 beats. Retain, count 2 beats. Exhale Left, count 4 beats. Repeat through right nostril.
Go 7 up to 14 times. Not more. Increase by easy stages. DO NOT STRAIN.

The " 1 : 2 : 1 " Breath

Inhale through either nostril counting 8 beats.
Retain 16.
Exhale 8.

TO ASSIST CONCENTRATION
The " 1 : 4 : 2 " Breath

This is much more difficult and should not be attempted until all the others are performed gradually without strain or discomfort.

Try 2 or 3 times only, initially:

Inhale through either nostril, counting 8 beats.
Retain 32 beats.
Exhale 16 beats.

MOUTH BREATHING
Aids Digestion

Place tip of tongue at back of upper teeth. Close nostrils gently with fingers. INHALE through mouth. SLOWLY EXHALE through mouth, at the same time gently contract abdomen. 5 or 6 times. Practice ocassionally not more than once per day.

- - - - - - - - - - - - - -

After practicing for 2 - 3 weeks, you will realize which of the rhythms in these varied exercises suits your breathing. Also, you should try to notice at odd moments during the day, whether you tend to breathe predominantly through either left or right nostril. Then you can try to vary your breathing practice.

For example: for the two general breathing exercises ... try breathing in, counting 2 only, retain 2 beats, breathe out 2 beats. Then try counting 3 each time, then 4, 5, 6 and up to 7 ONLY.

This experimenting will ascertain which suits you best. It should be quite free from strain when you retain the air, and the pulse should remain even and comfortable.

AVOID ALL STRAIN. Be content to achieve balance by slow degrees, and your mental calm will be much greater.

Then try repeating the exercises more times. For 10 times each nostril up to 14 or 15 ... NOT MORE.

The next stage is to vary the rhythm by making the inhaling longer, retain the breath a SHORTER period, but BREATHE OUT MORE SLOWLY AND EVENLY.

LONG, SLOW EXHALATIONS are good to clear the lungs, while long, slow inhalations should increase the intake of oxygen and renew the blood.

RETENTION ... HOLDING IN ... OF BREATH should be WHAT YOU CAN COMFORTABLY MANAGE. A little longer as you progress ... BUT STOP IMMEDIATELY IF YOUR PULSE IS TOO QUICK OR IF YOU FEEL TIRED.

These exercises are never meant to strain ... but only to train and control.

The thing to avoid at all times is over exertion. Keep slowly and quietly progressing ... IT IS THE REGULARITY OF THE PRACTICE WHICH MATTERS.

FOURTH COLLEGE EXAM

Send in your answers to the following questions. Please write clearly, on one side of the paper and be sure to include your key number:

1) What is the effect of regular, rhythmic breathing?

2) Does the average person breathe equally through both nostrils, most of the time?

3) What is an Egregor?

4) On what particular premise does the Martinist Doctrine rest? (Check lecture #82).

5) What is meant by the "Inner Way"?

Do not stand at my grave and weep,
I am not there, I do not sleep,
I am a thousand winds that blow,
I am the diamond glints on snow,
I am the sun on ripened grain,
I am the gentle autumn rain,
When you awake in the morning hush,
I am the swift uplifting rush of quiet birds in circled flight,
I am the stars that shine at night.
Do not stand at my grave and cry,
I am not there. I did not die.

EMILE DANTINNE - HIÉRONYMUS

Who was this Hiéronymus, Imperator of the Rose+Croix, whose name was mentioned in my presence as that of a venerable sage of several decades ago, but about whom, in the end, nobody could tell me anything, or very little? My awakening initiatic quest coloured with Fulcanelli's alchemy, then with contemporary rosecrucianism and Martinism, seemed in part to cover some of the loves of the person. My taste for secrets and true mysteries (in the fullest, very ancient use of the word) encouraged me to try to resolve the enigma. Thus begun my first historiographic research which a curious moment of fate was to encourage straight away in the form of a discovery:

A HAPPY DISCOVERY

It was indeed in 1982 that a chance discovery was made which was to provide the basis of my documentation and a leading thread to my still clumsy investigations: a whole pile of documents came to light about Dantine, and more generally about the occult milieu in Belgium which I like to call "the grey eminence." This pile of archives brings us face to face with an engaging character and, in spite of its shortcomings, it reveals itself to be of some importance to knowledge of the short but great history of occultism in Belgium, France and Switzerland in the years 1923 - 1943.

Thanks to this discovery, the activities of little known initiatic societies can now be clarified and the veil has been partially lifted from this European Rose+Croix which gave rise to the FUDOSI, whose venerable Imperator was Hiéronymus.

Before coming to Emile Dantinne and his hermetic companions, before painting the pictures of the initiatic Orders, the FUDOSI for example, of which they were the collective soul, and which are the subject of this work, the history of this discovery should be recorded, it should be introduced with a few words about Léon Lelarge, a prime witness in the case in point.

LELARGE THE CONFIDANT

Of the occult activities of Léon Lelarge, whose nomen was Sâr Agni, we know little, except that he played a prime role in the microcosm of Belgian occultism. This person seemed to be discreet, like Dantinne, to whom he was a faithful friend, the closest collaborater and perhaps the only confidant, and in any case the most certain, who held Hiéronymus (who was not lacking in psychology) in esteem. Lelarge, before the second world war, often acted as "a mail box" to his friend Dantinne. It was through him, in fact, that passed almost all mail and information addressed to Hiéronymus concerning his occult activities. In return he sometimes (during the occupation it was constantly at the risk of his life) sent messages from the Imperator to his subordinates, for Dantinne cherished discretion to such an extent that it became for him the norm in life. Some people, even amongst his colleagues in the RoseCroix, did not even know his ordinary name and they preferred, most of the time, to contact him through Lelarge, as they knew him as well as his address. Here follows a significant extract from a letter to Lelarge from the rosicrucian Grand Master Hans Grüter, taken from the newly discovered collection:

"Already some time ago, I received a charming letter from Hiéronymus, whom I held in great esteem, knowing neither his real name nor his address. I asked our friend Mallinger how I could get a note to him. He wrote to tell me to send it to you and that you would deal with it. I therefore take this opportunity to send a plaque for our great leader who scrupulously observes his incognito."

Lelarge and Dantinne both lived in Huy-sur-Meuse, a small French-speaking Belgian town a few blocks away from each other; the passing on of mail and information was thus made easier. The role of the former during the German occupation should be highlighted: in those tragic hours of initiatic secrecy (because of the occupation), which was, on occasion connected with aid or even collaboration on the part of some brethren, with the Resistance, Lelarge served as a link between Dantinne, more secret than ever, and the Belgian brethren. Jean Mallinger (another close collaborator of Dantinne's) stated that some rituals had even taken place in Lelarge's home, in Huy, under the Nazi terror. Some initiations had occasionally been performed there by Hiéronymus himself.

Around 1943, Lelarge joined the Resistance, then the Allied Forces. It then was Dantinne's turn to offer him his collaboration by giving his knowledge, particularly of divination, to his friends' plans for the destruction of railways, as I was told by Mlle. Marie-Louise Dantinne, his eldest daugther, to whom I shall refer on several occasions further on. At the time of the liberation, Lelarge held the position of vice-president of the railways in the new Belgian government and left this world in the year 1954.

It was at Lelarge's home in Huy which Mme. Lelarge finally occupied before her death, that the papers were discovered which probably belonged to him and which will henceforth be referred to as the "Lelarge Collection." These papers were at the bottom of a trunk under a thick layer of all kinds of magazines which were evidently put there to hide them. The most recent pieces were obviously from 1943; it is possible to believe that they had been hidden there by their owner (or by somebody else) before he left Huy to join the Resistance. If this was indeed the case, these documents had thus laid out of sight for almost 4 decades when they were unearthed in 1982. The discovery was not publicized other than a few pages which circulated amongst a few of the leaders of fraternal societies. My friend Roger Maréchal informed me, at the time of the discovery and then, subsequently, with the friendly co-operation of the owner, I was the first person to whom he passed on copies of the most important pieces of the collection. May these two friends from Belgium accept my strong and fraternal gratitude; without them, this study would certainly never have been made.

How can it be explained that Lelarge never took back these documents after the war? Everybody of high rank, even every initiate in the Belgian movement had the formal obligation to ensure that these records never came into the hands of laymen, especially in the case of the death of the owner. All the more reason still for all dignitaries who had access to many important records. The following note to the brethren of the Pythagorean Order explains it to us:

"By the order of our Sov:: GR:: M: Universal SAR HIERONYMUS:: IV, Rector of the Order M:: T::, all B:: Herm:: should, at the appropriate time, make all necessary written testaments so that in case of his death or serious illness he would urgently be visited and helped by a B:: belonging to the 4:: degree of the Order. It is he who would, in case of death have to put all Courses, Documents and Seals of the Order into a safe place."

For all that, it must be remembered that these precautions are usual practice, in the past as in the present, in initiatic societies. How, in this case, can it be explained why Lelarge should have failed in this most important duty? Or is it possible, in spite of his new governmental responsibilities, that he could have just forgotten that these documents existed? If he remembered, is it possible that he did not see the necessity to get them back for himself or to give them to whom they may concern? So many questions that, in all honesty, I am unable to resolve.

We will continue the foregoing in our next Liber.

Address by Sar Asunta, continued from inside front cover:- - - -

The vegetable realm consists of all Beings which have their forms* in the earth, which makes them grow and reproduce.

In the mineral realm are Beings which also have their forms* in the earth, which sustains them, but they are governed by 3 agents which are not part of them, and they do not show any signs of reproduction.

It is easy to distinguish between the animal and the vegetable. The vegetable is attached to the earth and dies when detached. Animals live on the products of the earth and are not attached to it. It is more difficult to distinguish between the vegetable and the mineral.

The Quaternary Law applies: the lower the Being, the more its powers are decreased because it is the furthest from the source. The mineral realm is the last in the progression of creation.

Man does not know any of his roots, as he lost them when he descended from his original position.

(forms* : the French word is 'receptacles' or 'containers'. We think 'forms' is the most suitable English word to use here.)

If Man could discover the true Principles of Beings, he would find that fire belongs to the animal, water to the vegetable and earth to the animal kingdoms. None of these elements can exist without the others, although one or the other is dominant in the various realms. This observation applies to everything, even mercury.

Man is distinguished from animal in that he has an intellect and a sacred Principle shared by no other Being. Man receives light through his senses, but he remains in darkness because he does not think beyond that observation. He thinks his intellect is made up of his senses, and does not recognize his dual nature, where one faculty is sensitive to the physical and the other to the intellectual. Our senses are the instrument of our thoughts ... but not their origin.

Man has many faculties and free will is the only one he had before and retained after his fall. Free will caused his fall ... and it is only through his free will that he can regain his original rights. He is responsible for the use he makes of his free will where good and evil are concerned. He can choose, but only within the limitations of what is offered to him. He suffers whenever he makes a wrong choice.

Man has to use both reason and feelings to help him decide ... reason without feelings would make him cold and insensitive; feelings without reason would lead him astray.

Man was mistaken for animal because his intellectual Being was thought to be the actions of his sensory Being, and his acts of intelligence were taken for material impulses. Man must constantly remain aware of the difference between his intellect and his senses, and the making of this distinction must be of prime importance to him. During his short stay on earth, Man's intellectual and sensory faculties are linked. Man has to constantly keep watch on his 2 natures ... he can easily mistake the sensory for the intellectual in his constant exposure to good and evil.

LCSM goes on later in the book to show the dangers attached to man's current situation, and the misconceptions that have arisen out of his negligence to distinguish between his various faculties. This subject involves:

Divine, intellectual and physical sciences; Civic and natural duties of man; Art; Legislation; Establishments and Institutions.

Man's state of ignorance and darkness are not his essence, but the natural effect of his mistake. It is his duty to try to return to the light which he left, and if this knowledge was his before he fell ... it is not lost to him ... as it emanates constantly from the inexhaustible source. He only needs to try and have courage. It would be to scorn this source if we do not do all within our power to get closer to it.

LCSM closes this section of the book by saying that the occult was much criticised in his time, which is paradoxical:

"If what is occult to the eyes is that which cannot be seen by them, and what is occult to the intelligence is that which it cannot conceive of, to this end I ask what is more occult to the eye and the intelligence than received ideas on the subjects I have just been discussing? They explain matter by matter, they explain man by his senses, they explain the Author of all things by elementary Nature."

It is no wonder that Man seeks in vain the elementary Principles he was informed of in this way. It is clear that they are false and that he has been misled, for the explanations given always have to be replaced by new explanations.

Those who are against the occult should change their path "for most certainly nothing is more occult or obscure than the path along which they would like to drag us."

THIS BRINGS TO AN END THE ADDRESS BY SAR ASUNTA WHICH BEGAN IN LIBER 19 AND CONTINUED SUBSEQUENTLY IN LIBERS 20 - 21 - 22 AND 23 ON LCSM'S BOOK OF ERROR AND OF TRUTH.

There is a wonderful story told among mountain people that I would like to relate to you: An old man wandered into a country store and saw something he had never seen before: a mirror. He picked it up, looked into it and said, "Why, that's the spitting image of my Uncle Zeke!" He bought the mirror and took it home, but because his wife's family was at the time feuding with Uncle Zeke, he hid the mirror under some hay in the barn. From time to time he stole out to the barn to take a look at "his Uncle Zeke." After some time passed, his wife became quite suspicious of the trips to the barn and she investigated. She came across the mirror, looked into it and said, "Ahah! So that's the woman he's been seeing!"

As we try to understand life, it can be compared to many things. Madeline Bridges has an interesting idea: "For life is the mirror of king and slave, / 'Tis just what we are and do; / So give to the world the best you have, / And the best will come back to you."

The world has for us what we will have of it. We experience only what we see, and what we see, we are. The Cosmic mirror of life reflects the faces we make at life. Sunny and smiling or sour and irritable, we find the world a true copy of our moods. Nature is susceptible in that she laughs with those who laugh, and she weeps with those who weep. If we rejoice and are glad, the very birds seem to sing more sweetly. But to the sad and sour, there is sudden gloom on nature's face. The sun may be smiling, but not in their hearts. The birds may be singing, but they break the heart of the sullen soul.

Nothing will be found in the world that is not first found in ourself. As Emerson says, "That only which we have within, can we see without. If we meet no gods, it is because we harbor none...We find in people the qualities that our own prevailing characteristics call forth."

It is said that in his native haunts, nothing makes an elephant quite so angry as seeing his own reflection in a pool of water. However thirsty he may be, if he sees his image he becomes angry and lashes the water furiously before he will take a drink. While the elephant may not like his looks, he does not become less ugly by attacking his reflection. And, actually, we do the same thing when something occurs in our life which brings out the ugly side of our nature.

The person who shows little or no warmth toward others will probably meet with a cold reception wherever he goes. He will produce the climate around him by what he has within him. If he is a friendly person, he will have friends; if he is a selfish person, he will be left to himself. Are there those in your life who seem to have an ugly disposition towards you? Perhaps, before condemning them, you should be sure that you are not doing as the elephant: charging at your own image. Most of us have a handy mirror, before which we check our appearance in the morning. If our hair is askew or we have not properly shaved, do we get mad at the mirror? Of course not. We simply correct what was out of place in our appearance.

Whatever we look upon and contemplate for any length of time has a transforming influence on us. It is a well-known principle that we become like that upon which we look. If, instead of trying to correct a problem, we keep looking at the imperfect image and keep resisting the imperfect conditions around us, we cause a static condition.

Ideals, desires, aspirations, are things which we embrace in idle moments, but we sternly put them from us with the thought that we must get back to the realities of life. Almost by definition, ideals are things we do not expect to come about. We see the dull routine as the real thing, even though we wish with all our heart that we could experience the ideal. An ideal is a state of being in which all things conspire to happy, satisfactory, and constructive living. Why, then, should not the ideal be the real, and the routine be the unreal? Is is not better to be a full and complete individual than to be a miserable, unexpressed, disgruntled person who accepts compromises?

We say that the ideal is hard to grasp in the face of harsh experience. How do we do it? Well, this calls for a little imagination. We constantly use imagination anyway; in fact, imagination is what draws into our lives that which we presently think of as harsh reality. When trouble approaches, we have no trouble mustering up enough imagination to die a thousand deaths of expectancy. So, why not use imagination constructively, and through it, live a thousand joyous moments of expectancy until we finally find ourselves stepping upon the threshold of full experience?

Paul said: "For now we see in a mirror darkly, but then face to face. Now I know in part; then shall I know fully, even as also was I fully known." He speaks of the mirror concept, in which we can just as easily convert the ideal into the real as we can the thought of fear into reality in our lives. He says again: "But we all, with unveiled face beholding as in a mirror the glory of the Lord, are transformed into the same image from glory to glory, even as from the Lord."

This is the concept of the magic mirror. The "unveiled face" is the person who is free from prejudice, self-interest, and preconceived ideas: the sincere person. The origin of the word "sincere" means "without wax." This refers to honey that has been strained through a cloth until the wax is removed; the honey has been cleansed and nothing is left but pure, amber honey. No doubt this is what Jesus meant when He said, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." When we find the purity of heart and vision, we see as God sees; we see our God-likeness as if we were looking into a mirror, and we are transformed by that image, step by step, by the spirit of the Lord.

What does all this mean in practical terms? Simply this: When you survey your life from a realistic standpoint (remember, it is but the reflection of your thought), do so without resisting the appearance or the persons around you. In correcting the faulty image, ask yourself the questions: "What do I want to be? What would I want to have?" This is your ideal, so unveil your face so that you see this ideal instead of the cold reality.

Keep looking at the ideal. See things as you would like them to be, and you will find yourself gradually transformed into that same image. Milton makes this point when he says: "Till oft converse with heavenly habitants / Begins to cast a beam on the outward shape, / The unpolluted temple of the mind." Wordsworth makes the same point when describing the education of his daughter: "She shall lean her ear in many a secret place, / Where rivulets dance their wayward round, / And beauty born of murmuring sound / Shall pass into her face."

Keep looking into that magic mirror. Keep seeing yourself as you want to be, instead of as you are. Keep seeing the ideal instead of the cold reality. The only real difference between a rich man and a poor man is not in money, but in what each man sees. John Burroughs was rich because he could see and enjoy the glories all about him, while his schoolmate, Jay Gould, was a poor man even though he accumulated fifty million dollars. He was poor because he could see nothing but dollar signs and bank accounts. Michelangelo could see an angel in every rough stone. Jesus could see a child of God in every beggar. Because He looked through the magic mirror, His unveiled eyes saw the glory of God and He was transformed into that same image. It is the same principle for you and me: "Two men look out through the same bars; / One sees the mud, and the other, the stars."

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

HISTORY OF ETHIOPIAN CROSSES

THE ETHIOPIAN CROSSES have their origin way back in Biblical times ... long before the Christian era. The old Coptic priests in Ethopia say the Queen of Sheba decided to visit Solomon because she had something wrong with one of her legs and she believed that he was a great healer. She took with her many gifts. It is related that Sheba and Solomon got along quite well, for they had a son and he was given the name Manelik (the first). Manelik, it is said, remained in Jerusalem until he was 19 and then returned to Ethiopia and became the first Emperor. The late Emperor Haile Selassie claims to trace his lineage to this young man. Memelik was educated in Jerusalem and Ethiopia; priests say that a type of cross called a LUMOT that was in use in Ethiopia long before the Christian era, was brought back by Manelik when he arrived from Jerusalem. It is thought the LUMOT must have been one of the symbols in the temple of Solomon. In the centurys that followed, a flattened lumot became a Christian sign. The basic shape of the LUMOT can be found in all Ethiopian crosses.

The Ethiopian crosses in their symbolic content, reflects the history of Ethiopia. Ethiopia has been described as an "ancient Christian island in a Moslem sea." Ringed by militant Islam, Ethiopia isolated herself from the outside world for nearly 1000 years ... close your eyes for a moment ... and see her long ago, when Egypt sent emissaries to the courts of her powerful kings and mediterranean travellers brought the language of Homer from the Red Sea shore ...

Ethiopia had contact with Christianity from the days of the apostles. We read in the New Testament of St. Philip explaining Isaiah to the eunuch who served the Queen of Ethiopia. Also, we know from Historia Alexandria that Egypt was the site of the ministry of St. Mark. In the 4th cent. Frumentus came to Ethiopia and his name is mentioned and revered as a powerful figure in the early Ethiopian Coptic Church. It is believed that at this time Christian symbolism such as the cross was intermingled with the existing Hebraic and so influenced the work of the silversmiths of the time. The Knights Hospitallers adopted a flattened Lumot as their sign during the crusades.

During the 12th century, in the north-central village of Laibella, artisans hewed eleven incredible churches out of solid rock. An Ethiopian legend relates that the Arc of the Covenant is hidden there. Some say the cross with four dots or circles found on many Coptic crosses is a location marker for this treasure. At the end of the 16th cent. the Mohammedans posed a real threat and the Emperor of Ethiopia appealed to the King of Portugal for help. The requested aid was sent and the son of Vasco da Gama chosen to lead this adventurous expedition. The Portugese experition was victorious, but after the war many Portugese had to remain in Ethiopia for almost a year awaiting a ship to take them back to Portugal and during their time in Ethiopia they left a record of their visit among the silversmiths ... the ornate designs being made by the Ethiopian craftsmen abruptly became more latin in shape ... but the crosses still exhibited the outline of a flattened lumot.

Ethiopia has shut herself off from the outside world during much of her existence and it is only in the latter half of this 20th cent. that some of the ancient crosses have become available. In 1942, a westerner: Angelo Di Benedetto was assigned the job of mapping a coast to coast strip of Africa; his travels took him to areas not previously visited by western man. He also traveled the coast of the Red Sea along the route probably taken by the Queen of Sheba. He made many friends among whom where the priests and bishops of the Ethiopian Orthodox Christian Church. From these, as well as from the people in areas where strangers seldom return alive ... he was able to gather a remarkable collection of crosses and other artifacts ... as well as some interesting history.

Dear Companions:

We begin by answering some questions: One of the problems we have is regular access to supplies. Operating from a small island where almost everything is imported from overseas means that business houses are often "out of stock". This affects us in many ways ... we can't always get the same colour paper for example! Or the same quality envelopes! Very often the high humidity dampens the stationery and this causes unclear copies or copies with "splotches" i.e.: unprinted sections. We try to watch for this and discard bad copies ... but we know some get through. We are sorry about this; we try to do our best ... if you ever receive an illegible page be sure to let us know and we will send a replacement.

May we thank the many, many Associates who shower us with so many compliments. We are always happy to learn about the various ways the ideas in these Libers are helping.

Another area of concern is "promotion". We are doing the best we can with the advertising budget but we rely more than ever on members telling their friends about the Work. Thanks again to every one who "spreads the word" and to those who send donations and other helps. It is this support ... and your prayers ... that enables us to carry on.

Let us turn now to tonights lecture:

Dear Brothers & Sisters: Private & Confidential #89

In a first endeavour at systematic self-analysis, I said in the last lecture that Man is made of different identities working normally towards their own individual aims and assuming, in turn, control over our whole being. This should not be difficult to understand as you have already had it explained that Man is composed of a congeries of "bodies" and it would not be unreasonable to follow that the various aspects of ourselves exert their particular influence on our total psyche. Regarding the different identities, we classified them into three main categories constituting the three main components of our being: the intellectual or mental being; the sensitive or emotive being; and the corporeal or physical being. It may be well to clarify the meaning of these terms as we understand them:

(1) By intellectual being we mean that part of us whose actions are entirely controlled by the intellect, or the mind. We could therefore also use the expression: mental being.

(2) By emotive or sensitive being, we mean the part that depends on emotions and sensations ... that part of us which FEELS (both physical sensations and emotions).

(3) By physical or corporeal being, we mean simply the body with its organs and functions on the physical level.

It will become evident that I am now expanding on a subject which we have touched on before. You will remember that in our study of the triadic pattern of creation, we said that Man was threefold.

We said he had an Âme, or Spiritual Principle; an intermediate Plastic Envelope; and a Physical Body. Each of these divisions of Man is in turn divisible into 3 sections ... each of which is more intimately related to either spiritual activities, emotional activities, or physical activities ... with one characteristic predominating.

In other words: the Âme is divisible into 3 sections, likewise the Plastic Envelope and the Physical Body. In each section the same division of spiritual, sensual and material persists. Thus ... in the Âme there is a pure spirit element which we could call 'spirit of spirit' that is predominant ... but there is also an emotive element which we could call 'sensuality of spirit' ... and a material element: the 'material manifestation' of spirit.

The Plastic Envelope is also divisible in 3 sections. (NOTE TO LODGE MASTER: ALLOW THE BRETHREN TO WORK OUT THE THREE CLASSIFICATIONS).

Likewise too, the Physical Body is divisible into 3 ... and we could identify the three qualities in each of the 3 sections of the body as follows:

In the head we find the spiritual influence is the strongest and the emotive and material are lesser.

In the chest the emotive is the strongest and the spiritual and material, which are also present ... are lesser.

In the body-regenerating organs grouped under "abdomen" the material influence is strongest and the spiritual and emotive are lesser.

You will note that although a particular quality predominates in each division, the other two are not altogether absent.

(PAUSE ... IS THE FOREGOING COMPLETELY UNDERSTOOD?)

(Note: You will recall from our previous study of duality that the Absolute condition does not exist (at least on our present level) ... there is a little light present even in the darkest night, and there is a little darkness even in the brightest day - etc. etc.).

We have spoken also of the 3 levels of consciousness. The lowest or Instinctive Consciousness is concerned with the automatic functions by which the body is kept alive and replaces the energy it uses. The Intermediate Consciousness is that through which we FEEL ... (when we are isolated in that state of consciousness, we become fully aware of being or of existing. It is a state of AWARENESS.) The Higher Consciousness, in its pure form, is that which could exist independently of our physical being ... even of Life. It is pure thought that does not depend upon impressions from our senses or emotions. It is, indeed, that segment of God that is in us. To be wholly in this state of consciousness is to know illumination.

(LODGE MASTER: GO OVER THE ABOVE PARAGRAPH AGAIN.)

I must repeat here what you have been told already concerning the 3 divisions of Man, his 3 beings and his 3 states of consciousness: namely, that these 3 divisions are to a certain extent arbitrary.

There is no discontinuity between each division ... they merge into one another and they are in fact "borderline cases". But these divisions help us in our analysis and offer a sure guide to our work as long as we remember they are not as rigid as may first appear.

We have therefore, at different times, divided Man into sections and parts in order to study better the characteristics or features of each division, isolated from neighbouring ones. This process is known as ANALYSIS ... that is: dividing the subject into its constituent parts in order to study them better. To reap the full benefit of our studies however, it is obvious that this operation must be followed by another one in which, having acquainted ourselves with the working and functioning of each part, we re-build the whole and then survey the overall picture. This second operation is known as SYNTHESIS and that is what we shall soon have to attempt.

* * * * * * * D I S C U S S I O N *******

Meanwhile, let us carry the last stages of our analysis further:

You were asked last week to try to distinguish in the course of an honest self-appraisal, those actions or reactions that can be attributed to your intellectual or mental being, from those originating in your emotive being. In other words ... were your actions in each circumstance dictated by your HEAD or by your HEART?

If you have attempted such critical self-study, you will have noticed how your mental and emotive beings are well equipped to fight between themselves for the lead. Each has its own arsenal of weapons and is apparently able to manoeuvre at will.

Let me quote a hypothetical example: A person on his way home suddenly sees a man come out from a side street in a state of apparent inebriety and, after a few staggering steps, falls against the curb of the road.

Now, according to his particular make up, the witness will feel an urge coming from his emotive being. Let us be charitable to the witness and suppose that he has a compassionate heart. His first reaction will then be to go and help the man. This is a pure movement of the heart that owes nothing to thought (mental being) or the preservation instinct (physical being).

But then in quick succession, the following thoughts will flash through his MIND:

"I wonder whether I shall get dirty picking him up" ...
"Maybe he could be violent" ...
"I would have to take him somewhere and that would delay me" ...
"There is a nice programme, my favourite, on television" ...
"He might be sick on me" ...
And so on.

Now all these are strictly egotistical thoughts. As we do not usually like to admit EVEN TO OURSELVES how selfish we really are ... we then see quite a remarkable piece of "whitewashing" on the part of our Mental Self. Not willing to admit that he or she really does not care enough to become involved, the witness's mind or Mental Self will quickly spin a web or arguments in order to question or repress his Emotive Self, whose first move was towards direct help. The Mental Self could elaborate this type of argument: "After all, he is drunk! ... It is his own fault ... why did he have to get himself in such a state? ... This will teach him a lesson ... If I help him I shall only be encouraging him ... After all, drunks never hurt themselves ... "

After a few seconds of this, his conscience stiffled, his susceptibility quietened, the witness will delicately step over the body and proceed on his way home. The Mental Self will have (under the stimulus of an intimate egotism) triumphed over the impulse of the Emotive Self.

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

Are the various "selves" that go to make up the being called Man, separate and distinct ... or do they in fact merge into one another, with no clear line of demarcation?

How should one reason? Should we listen exclusively to the Heart ... or to the Head ... or to the Instinct (body)? Should be "blend" the ideas that come from the various "parts" of ourself?

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

NOTE: DO NOT PROCEED TO STUDY THIS LECTURE UNTIL YOU HAVE COGITATED FOR AT LEAST ONE WEEK ON LECTURE #89.

Dear Brothers & Sisters: Private & Confidential #90

Let us begin tonights conventicle by returning to our V::: M::: Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin looking at Man. He sees that the condition in which Man finds himself presents him with two co-existing features in apparent contradiction, but both of which are nevertheless the fruits of experience:

First, upon introspection and turning his thoughts deeper and deeper within himself, Man discovers within himself a "Superior Principle." He observes his thoughts, his will power, all those actions full of ingenuity and intelligence which set him apart from other creatures and endow him with distinctive features and exclusive signs.

"Why can Man follow a way which is not that of his senses?"

"Why has he will power which he can set against the 'call of the senses'?"

These are the questions Saint-Martin asks himself in his book Of Errors and of Truth. Why is Man guided by a marvelous moral sense which is infalible in its principle? Why should it be thus, were it not that Man is singled out through his Intellectual or Mental essence? Why is it that he is the only creature thus honoured on earth? (E. & T.)

Man's first assurance as to his destiny comes from his realization of self. "WHEN WE HAVE ONCE SENSED OUR SOUL, WE ARE LEFT IN NO DOUBT AS TO ITS POSSIBILITIES" says our Master. In his correspondence he adds:

"Man, let it be said, by his quality as an intellectual or mental being, has over corporeal beings the constant advantage of feeling an urge WHICH HE CANNOT UNDERSTAND."

Let us come now to the second point: Man, whilst he recognizes the transcendent character of his Spirit (or Mind), sees also the sum of all the ills and the havoc that surrounds him. When realization of his possibilities comes to him, Man immediately feels a pain at finding himself in exile. It is the nostalgia of a lost paradise.

It is true that suffering is brought home to us in a most striking way. There is no man who has not had his share of misfortune and who is without foibles. "No man of good faith could deny that his corporeal existence is a state of perpetual privation and suffering." (E. & T.)

There we have the two starting points of Saint-Martin's philosophy. Man is suddenly made to realize, after self-study, the nature of his soul ... but this realization brings with it another realization: that of the sorry state and predicament in which he suddenly finds himself. The road is now open for the YEARNING that will turn him into a MAN OF DESIRE.

\+ + + + + + + DISCUSSION + + + + + + +

I said that Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin found in Man two co-existing features:

(1) The realization of a "Superior Principle" within himself;

(2) A subsequent realization of a state of exile and privation.

Let us now examine these two results of experienced self-examination, together.

"True as it results from the study of Man that we find in ourselves a relationship with the first of all Principles and the traces of a glorious origin, it is no less true that it reveals also how much these things have become degraded in us." (E. & T.)

This brings us back to the dual nature of Man. Saint-Martin says: "Some Beings are exclusively intelligent ... others are wholly sentient ... Man is both and here lies the key to the riddle."

This double aspect of Man, who unites the 'intellect' or thought power of the purely Spiritual Beings to the sensitive nature or "feeling powers" of animated creatures, gives rise to a sense of contradistinction and this very often comes between his desire to know ... and the frequent failure of our attempts at doing so.

From the encounter of these two experiences ... the intellectual experience and the sentient experience ... stems the whole of Martinist dialectics, because the tragedy of our plight affords us no object of reflection if we did'nt have a mind to realize it.

The great sage Aristotle said: "Wonder is the beginning of philosophy." WONDER in itself can be an interesting subject of meditation. In the process of self-study, wonder is the link that unites Man, the observer ... to Man, the object of observation. The first wonders at the other.

Wonder takes us away from materialism. Everything is a subject of wonder. The true mystic has an infinite capacity to wonder. Wondering about ourselves will lead us inevitably to classifying beings and things in two categories and to realizing the existence of a negative principle, a form of evil influence that is very powerful ... although subordinate to the principle of Good.

The study of Man will also, in time, LEAD TO AN UNDERSTANDING OF THE LAWS OF NATURE AND THE LAWS OF GOD.

If the Martinist Doctrine rests chiefly on the principle of Man's duality ... must we see there the cause of Saint-Martin's originality? Indeed not. Many thinkers had followed the same lines before. Aristotle after Plato knew quite well that the essence of Man, his soul, was "something divine."

Saint-Martin does not try to innovate throughout his doctrine. On the contrary ... he rejoices to find himself in agreement with the traditional teachings and the discoveries of the philosophers. Tradition is particularly dear to him. He also finds himself often in agreement with Pascal and we recommend the reading of this author's book known as the Pensées.

------- DISCUSSION -------

(a) What are the two starting points of Saint-Martin's philosophy?

(b) What happens when the individual becomes conscious of this?

(c) Saint-Martin says "some Beings are exclusively intelligent, others are wholly sentient." He then observes something particular about Man. What did he observe?

(d) In the process of self-study what is the best procedure in initiating a line of enquiry?

- - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - Knowledge is Power

Brothers & Sisters: I hope you have been carrying out the self-examination suggested in our recent conventicles. You may have thought again of the example with which we illustrated our argument last week ... if this is the case, you will undoubtedly have realized that the position was oversimplified in the example and that the reactions of the witness who observed the fall of an apparently drunken person were not just a straight conflict between the heart and head, but that many other factors came into it concerning our individual background, environment, personal likes and dislikes, in short: A WEALTH

OF INBORN AND ACQUIRED EMOTIVE IMPULSES. The purpose of the example was mainly to provoke thought on your part, to make you WONDER about it ... and incite you to ask yourselves what you would do in the same or identical circumstances.

If you have sincerely delved into your own make-up, you will have had to admit that you have in yourself a host of tendencies, some good and some you would rather not boast about. These exercises are not designed to make you turn over and over your weaknesses and shortcomings ... but to cause you to come to terms with your own TRUE nature. Only then will you be in a position to choose your way. If you plan to journey from A to B by car, it is as well to know the road and the possibilities and weakness of your vehicle in order to plan accordingly; whether, for instance, to take the short route across the mountains or the long roundabout way over easier ground. In our case, we wish to attain a certain stage of evolution. It is as well to know our own nature with its human weaknesses, so that we do not proceed uncautiously.

Your self-study should have also revealed to you the presence in your being of generous and noble impulses, generally spontaneous, which often guides you or shows you the way you should, or could, have taken. You also have an innate sense of justice, (or right and wrong), in relation to your own actions. This is called our conscience. In any situation, you always know what you OUGHT to do, although you may very often fail to do it. It is your conscience that is "the judge, inflexible and severe" to whom you are responsible. Let me emphasize that your conscience is your PERSONAL judge ... interpreting what is the right path for you to follow ... IT CAN OFFER NO LEAD IN ENABLING YOU TO JUDGE OTHERS.

Let us then, Brothers & Sisters, privately pursue our own self-study. Let us be analytical, bearing in mind that we cannot be too dogmatic regarding such things as the divisions of our own beings as there are so many varying factors. However, the frame we have suggested will serve our purpose admirably if we remember that it is only a loose frame which we have to reinforce with struts out of our own workshop.

- - - - - 0 0 0 0 0 - - - - -

Answers to the questions:

(a) After self-study, man comes to realize that he has a soul, he discovers within himself a "Superior Principle". This realization brings with it another realization: (2) That of the sorry state and predicament in which Man is in ... i.e. a state of exile or privation.

(b) He feels a yearning that turns him into a true Man of Desire.

(c) That man is both an intelligent and a sentient being which is the key to the riddle. This double aspect of Man gives rise to a sense of contradictinction and this very often comes between the desire to know ... and the frequent failure of our attempts at doing so.

(d) Wondering. The ability to wonder. We should develop our capacity to wonder.

We return to John Yarker's Notebook ! (Especially for our brethren who are also Freemasons.)

Knowledge is Power #91

Dear Bro Hughan. Harodim 14 January 1896

Prepare yourself for receiving a theory. Can you give me any information touching the English Harodim Ritual and Ceremony? Has anybody got one? You will see hereafter what I mean by Ritual. I would like to peruse it in order to identify some references and abstracts.

I have read all I can get hold of concerning it both mss. and print and have certain parts of the working. I am sure that you do not believe that Harodim = HRDM in one sense allowing at the same time that HRDM is a corruption of the word Harodim but that the original import is gone.

Part of the old Harodim is the Royal Order of Scotland or the Harodim of Kilwining stripped of much of its former lectures and adjusted to modern circumstances of which more hereafter. Now then for my postulates. When I use a year it matters not as to the exact date [,] when I say degree it is not in our present sense but often used for want of a better expression or as being equal to "Section" or = degree of knowledge.

We have 3 degrees in 1720. We have the mss "Constitutions and their History (!) before that date for a century or two ℞, establishing the custom of one historical (!) retrospect from say "Noah" his flood to Charlemagne as a precedent. Then follows references to various additions later on. Next we have the printed "Constitutions" and history up to say 1700.

Then we have Oliver who says he first traced the lectures (!) at 1720. It matters not if Locke's quotation King Henry VI 1425 or before is a part of Elder Lectures (!).

Then we have the Harodim working 1743 and before to which Master Masons were admitted to open the Lodge (consequently Craft Lodge) but not to the lectures. (Palatine Lodge minutes).

The lectures (all of them) up to 1513 were Christian. Lodges gave them (1813) various degrees other than the craft.

We know that Harodim lectures (!) covered the whole ground of Masonic knowledge, esoterically [,] historically (!) and emblematically with various allusions to practical Masonry as then understood.

note: these brackets [] are our interpolations. Words we are uncertain of have been inserted.

Naturally these lectures could not be given or learnt in any single night but took a long time.

Theory

In order to distinguish those who had attended the series of lectures[,] to prove their knowledge up to such a point, a catch word and perhaps a catch sign were given to mark their progress, such word being most naturally taken from the subject matter of the preceeding lectures?

From this judicious system of education or in other words from the Harodim lectures sprang three results

1., Our so called Lodges of Instruction.

2., The lectures attached to all degrees - Where they have not been forgotten, they are seldom given. 3., Our High Grades.

For in the course of a little time when the Lecture Master became an ornamental officer the section was eviscerated and the catchword etc. alone was substituted and this broke up the B.Brn into Classes Sections or degrees of knowledge. (!)

Hence the foundation of a new order with superior knowledge.

Now as soon as any one such separate body was evolved, the old Harodim lecture was crippled to that extent for the arcana of that "degree" could not be any longer given in the Harodim lectures.

In this way the children devoured their own father and thereby the Harodim became an impossibility, in fact until finally it was itself conferred as a degree 'Made free of Harodim'.

Section holders invent Passwords. Sections are called degrees. Degrees generate systems.

Different renderings by different Lecture Masters, foreign Travel and return with new clothes, revision and foreign influence, on one and the same incident create the multiplicity of Similar degrees. The first to be ordered would be the Master of the Chair with all its variations.

Then the Passage of the Bridge leading through the Arch to the Mark or vice versa, etc. etc.

Now you have my theory and being its parent I like it well; it seems to get us over a lot of difficulties and is - well - plausible enough. I happened to be the Chief of the Harodim just now, for that dignity has been handed down to us through the old Dunckerly W.R. Wright Templar in the Royal Arch & am seized with it also separately from that branch through the Dedimus 45 working via 19th R.B. Reed P.M 45 Editor of the Chronicle & Dd. Pr. of Mark M. and not only that but many other degrees now only worked by us which I give in the old way in lectures etymol-=ogical historical and esoteric.

Please avoid the mistake of confounding the Harodim with Heredom, we conferred all along the Harodim (free of Harodim) after the E.P.R.s, Pelican & Eagle & but before the Kadosh & the Ne Plus Ultra which with us is mixed up with the R. Arch Knights Templar Priest. I am quite sure of this & take it from documents before me. I have also a series of lectures Verse & Prose & which lead through the M.M. into much of what is now the Arch including an interesting astronomical lecture.

Now please peruse my sketch with a much patience as you can command, I will not insult you by a detailed scheme, points only are indicated. Please let me have your views and oblige.
You will notice what I call ritual on the 1st page is that obligation which is now and was certainly formerly exacted as to advanced knowledge. Also the lectures. I do not desire this to be for any other perusal than your own privately.

A Sample of the old lectures enclosed which please return and oblige. W. W. Westcott.

Templar Ceremonies

It cannot be without interest for us to examine how far the inner life of the Templars in the latter part of the 13th and beginning _____ of the 14th century is reflected by our ceremonies. I do not for a moment mean the Emasculated Ceremonies we now work, but such as were in use a century ago and before that will be taken as our ceremonies as well as those now in use.

To begin then at the beginning, we must state that there was more than one degree in the Templar Order, and they had secret statutes, such as William of Pocklington copied by order of the Grand Master of the English Langue (du Puy, The Templars, page 525).

There was the first grade, known to every Templar, and often enough described in literature, and this although the newly admitted Knight was not a Novice but a Professed Knight (see the declaration of Wm. de Lamberton a Scottish Knight (du Puy page 374) Ego vero non intromisi in ordine suo aliquo pertinente, imo ego statim habebam Receptores Tres Professos.)

Then there was the 2nd Degree which all did not receive, but which is admitted to have existed by many English and other Knights. In this degree they were accused, and some admitted that they denied during the ceremony the divine nature of Christ, and some of them that indecent ceremonies took place, and the recipient was instructed to believe in a God who had not died and could not die. (X)

In the 3rd Degree which was generally given in a General Chapter a picture or and a head was shown.

The 2nd Degree then was a transient one of trial and the denial of Christ's divine nature is a common occurence amongst non-jews, from the early part of the Christian era to the present day. The principal tenet of the Mahomedan religion, as well as the Jewish and the teaching of the ancient Mysteries, is the belief in one God. The title "Servants of the Cross" or the crucified was used as an insult by the Mohamedans, who were and are willing enough to acknowledge Him as a Prophet. The highest Catholic prelates maintained that God alone was Almighty - Abdard de Trinitate at the Council of Soissons to which the Papal Legate replied that every child knows that there are 3 Almighty beings. (Cuvier L'Histoire de l'immortalité de Paris, Vol 1. Pge 241) Everyone indeed gave his own explanation of the Trinity and sects such as - - - - - - - Cathari, Monophysites, Adop-tians, these latter blended with Gnostics & Manichaeans. The Cathari believed that Christ was Man alone, the Albigenses denied his divine nature.

Roscelin the founder of the philosophic sect of Nomalists said that those who believed in the Trinity in Unity must believe that God himself died as well as the Holy Spirit, while his scholar Abelard Manichaeus said that God alone was Almighty. The Kabbalists who were deeply imbued with neo-platonic teaching gave rise to the Gnostics, and these again to the Sabaei or St. Johns Christians. The latter exist in fact now and they believe in St. John the Baptist but not in Christ.

Now if we remember that the denial of the divine nature of Christ is admitted freely in all countries by the Templars *his we admit this intermarriage, or at least intercourse with the Mohammedans - the offspring was called Janissaries and formed a kind of foreign legion of Bastards in the Turkish army, and there by long residence *and if

(X) In France Wm. de Narsae admitted that a test of obedience [obedience?] had been introduced, which had been brought forward as a change [change?] of denying Christ.

brought the Knights together with many of these speculations and beliefs, it does not follow at all that we need accept the fact that they in reality denied the divine nature of Christ. I will tell you why.

In some of our old rituals the story of St. Peter and the cock and crow, the denial of Christ is rehersed, - for instance in the 1761 York Ritual, this, as part of the Ritual of the Secret Initiation would easily lead the Judges set to condemn them to twist such innocent acting into an admission of denial. Let us remember that the torture will force out many things, and that education was not what it is now. There may have been also those who were tainted by one or other of the aforementioned heresies, but as a body we must pronounce them free.

But the next accusation, namely that of idolatrous worship of a head or a picture is ~~one~~ grave will be your reply. Now it is first of all admitted that such actions were in existence. The accusation is a picture or head. (X)

Well I will go so far as to say that they had both a picture, a figure and a head. Then they had a girdle or ribbon which circled the picture and this was turned into magic by their accusers. I will tell you what the picture was and the girdle as well. The girdle was the ribbon at the end of which the picture of St. John the Baptist was worn. See the Ritual of the old York Sir Knights.

But then the head which was in a box. What other can that have been but the Baphomet (say you) as some of them say it was, and who can have been but Mahomet, and this is etymologically quite easy, for according to the genius of the Saracen language B & M are often exchanged and H. & Ph, also; so that we have no serious etymological difficulties at all and the head is that of Mahomet, and with that all of your other arguments fall down, because this is convincing proof of the Apostacy.

Well Sir Knights we will not go quite so fast, but we will look at an old tracing board, where we will find this fearful head,

— — — — — — — — — — — —

(X) In the ancient Church of St George & St James at Hormead a wooden platter "in the possession of the Parish Priest of St. Peter" which is said to have belonged to the Templars.

just as described with black curly hair depicted in a Charger. Will this will remind us of Salitt a Carni & the Head of St. John the Baptist, and we now know at once that some of the Knights used in their secret ceremonies the head of St. John the Baptist and wore the image of him on a girdle or ribbon, - just as our old York Knights did and just as was done by us up to 1856.

Now you will say that is all very ingenious but what about the invocation of Baphomet or Mahomet: how will you get over that damning proof? Well Sir Knts I will try to give the explanation of this old Templar password.

Βαπτιζω Βαφη means immersion, properly an immersion in a colouring liquid or ticture and one which leaves a color or dye. Topically, or in the applied sense, it is used for Baptism in the Middle Ages, on account of its spiritual colouring Maetos, or Maetis, μυτος- μυτις, means wisdom or science. - - - - Βαπτιζω μαετους or Βαπτιζω μαετεος - Βαφη μυτος(εος), - is consequently the tincture or dye or Baptism of Wisdom, and refers clearly to the Baptism of Christ by St. John from the Spiritual point of view and this word, taken by some Knights, who did not understand the word to represent this act, this Password misunderstood by many to be a secret idol, or the name of one, appears to support my theory and conviction to an enormous extent.

I would of course require to go into many of our Arcana, to vindicate the memory of our ancient Knights publically, but to you I have fulfilled my duty, which I undertook, when I drank to the memory of all those valiant Knights who shed their blood in defence of the faith, while fighting under the banner of our Order.

XXX That the denial of Christ practised or recapitulated in the ceremony was not meant as a positive denial but as a rehersal of the St. Peter incident appears from Du Puy, 211-2- Gottfried de Gonaville (31h), the English Grand Prior tells him when he would not deny Christ - "Ego juro tibi in periculo cum vinae meae quod nunquam fiat judicialiter tibi quantum ad animam, vel conscientiam," and a little further on (212/315) the same Govaville states that this denial was done in momory of St. Peter. We need only refer to the Old York Ritual to see how both these statements are correct. / That the Templars did not consecrate the bread and wine they took at their ceremonial is another accusation (Du Puy 202). Well no more do we. Moreover all those secretly initiated were Priests, and confessed and absolved. See accusations against them.

xxxx Mr Sean Sir Hughet Gaucer and de Monte pessato attest before Judge: Que le susperieur lui montra une idole bâtue part in figuram Baffometi (Du Puy p. 216) and Bro. Raimond Rubei (Same page) says the same, "ubi erat depicta figura Baffometi". Well Sir Knts, I trust we shall in future understand that this figure was that of St. John the Baptist, or in other words the figure of the Baptism of divine knowledge, - Theosophic Baptism and not an idol representing the arch enemy of Christendom, - Mohamed, Mahomet, Baphomet, Buhamet. Here then lies the falsehood of the accusation against our predecessors. - 2nd - The reason and justification for such a feeling as invented or degree of vengeance or Kadosh, 3rd, the antiquity of our old Templar Ritual, which must in their essentials have been handed down orally, as nowhere in history is any such information, as I now give you, rendered or preserved, and the compiling of our old rituals must have had oral tradition to go upon, if not copies of the old workings. That such workings and secret writings did exist in England is proved beyond contradiction of even the modern iconoclastic Masonic critic, who hears nothing, respects nothing, acknowledges no authority except his own "ipse dixit", and the passages of any writer, however tainted and false, so long as his reports agree with our critic.

XXXX In order to place at your service the sources of information I refer you to, I give the first proof that foreign Knights went to England for refuge as follows:

EMILE DANTINNE - HIERONYMUS

SOME FACTS ABOUT DANITNNE'S PUBLIC LIFE

Emile Danitnne was born on 19 April 1884 at Huy sur Meuse in Belgium. In this area, to which he remained attached for ever, he lived all his life, and worked in the service of the administration as well as privately. He died there on 21 May 1969. About his childhood and his adolescence I know very little. The little I do know, which follows later, was told to me by his eldest daughter, Marie-Louise, who was very attached to the memory of her dear father, and to whom I give my sincere gratitude for the willingness with which she gave me the information. So thank you, dear Marie-Louise Dantinne, for the information you passed on to me and which I am anxious to pass on (also).

Emile Dantinne was brought up in the Roman Catholic faith, to which he remained faithful to his last day. But I believe he had to adapt it on many occasions to the traditional knowledge he obtained from the best sources. To himself and his few followers, he restored Christian wisdom, of which he was a living example, and of which he believed the Rose Croix should have custody. Several times, too, he must have suffered to see his associates in occultism rise up against his fidelity to the Roman Catholic Church and try to turn him against it. But he remained steadfast, a master of the contradictions they gave him to analyse, which to him were only superficial. Thus he was at one and the same time an initiate, occultist and Roman Catholic.

After excelling at Primary School, he was a brilliant scholar at secondary school, where, in 1900, he gained the first prize for excellence in the general competitive exam. But, in the same year, he had to cut short his promising studies to help with the material needs of his family, in place of his father, who had just died. Nevertheless, or as a result of this, Emile Dantinne was a student throughout his life, not at school, but in his untiring research as an eternal seeker. When he was over eighty years old, he went to study oriental languages at the University of Liège. For he was a linguist and a brilliant oriental scholar, as we shall see.

In 1901, at the age of seventeen, he entered the administration of the telegraph and telephone company as a clerk. At the same time, he was enthusiastic about the world of writing and poetry. In the year 1900 he published his first verses. In 1903, he was a co-worker with the 'Revue Mosane' and the 'Liège Universitaire'. The following year, when he was twenty, his first collection 'Rythmes et douceurs' was published, and others followed. Between 1905 and 1907 he published various studies in 'L'Art Direct' and in 'La Verveine', then two new collections 'Ballades de la décadence' (Ballads of decadence) and 'Louange des jardins et des soirs' (In praise of gardens and of evenings). In 1906, 'L'Essor Littéraire' awarded him first prize as a critic. In the same year, he published scholarly notes on Chinese grammar.

Having learned germanic languages at secondary school, he studied latin languages by himself : Italian, Spanish, Portugese, as well as Latin and Greek. Later, during the First World War, he learned Russian.

On 21 November 1907, Dantinne married Lucie Rouffart, daughter of a farmer in his area. His first daughter, Marie-Louise, was born of their marriage on 8 April 1909, and a second daughter was born on 26 January 1911.

From 1909, he found time to take courses at Liège University in Arabic and Hebrew from the Orientalist V. Chauvin, whose works he annotated after his death in 1913. Still in 1909, he published his two first novels : 'Diekje chez les hommes' (Diekje amongst men) and 'Le roman de l'épouse' (The novel of the wife). In 1913, during a trip to Paris, he met Ch. Virollaud, director of the 'Babylionaca'. He studied numerous Sumerian tablets, which he also translated, thus becoming an expert on Assyriology.

THE LIBRARIAN OF HUY

In 1915, Emile Dantinne became a librarian in the Commune of Huy. This position, I am certain, suited him down to the ground, and he took it on with zeal on a voluntary basis for 30 years, until the Liberation. He also had the opportunity of devoting his time to the history of his town, and published regular articles and pamphlets on this subject.

In 1923, he obtained a diploma in Librarianship, followed in 1927 by the first class Civic Medal. And, while we are on the subject of honours, I will depart from strict chronological order to mention here his ensuing distinctions. In 1931, medal for the 100th Anniversary of Independance. Then, much later, in 1962, the Golden Palms of the Free Academy for Educational Merit. Finally, in 1965, he was admitted to the Order of the Crown with the title of knight.

In 1929, Dantinne worked with the Revue Mosanne, which had ceased to function, and which came back into publication from that date. From there, we move on to 1936. In that year, he published 'Les Contes de la Vallée du Hoyoux' (Tales from the Hoyoux Valley) and a French translation (the first) of traditional Tibetan tales : 'Le contes de No-rub-can' (Tales of No-rub-can). I do not know where, when or how Dantinne learned Tibetan, but it is true that, to him, it was only one more language to add to his knowledge as a self-taught genius.

Still today, (1985 - Editor) the residents of Huy remember their librarian. (My friend, Maréchal, was able to gather together some of what they had to say, and he passed it on to me for this study. I will refer to it at the appropriate time.) But certainly very few people suspected his occult qualities, which he kept secret. For, behind the appearance of a quiet, hard-working civil servant, was concealed (in order to avoid misunderstanding on the part of the people, and out of his usual modesty) the face of the 'Grey Eminence' of the European Rose Croix and its affiliated fraternities.

FACING THE NEW FRONTIER

"Man, know thyself." These simple but profound words were the first of seven wise sayings inscribed on the Temple of Apollo at Delphi. Man has always been an inquisitive being, but his inquisitiveness has pertained mostly to things rather than to himself. Man has climbed the highest mountains, crossed the plains of the wilderness, risen out of the earth's atmosphere, and explored the frontiers of electronics, philosophy, astronomy, biochemistry, and so many other areas. I sometimes wonder whether the explorers and men of research are impelled entirely by inquisitiveness, or whether there might be a certain degree of escapism in the effort. It was said of old, "The heart is ever restless until it find repose in God." Failing to conquer the world within, to a great extent man's drive across the plains has been a restless drive, a kind of attempt to find in the world what one can only find in himself.

There is a new frontier: the world within every person. How long can we put off facing this frontier: the charting of the wilderness of our own mind, the conquest of of self, the discovery of the soul, the hidden powers of the indwelling Spirit? What tremendous untapped resources lie within each one of us? What revelations lie ahead for those who truly seek to know themselves as spiritual beings?

The ancient command, "Know thyself," is an eternal call of the soul of man. It is a sad thing that most people wait until they are ancient themselves before they really take it seriously. When we recognize the importance of the frontier of the mind and the soul, we are conscious of an inner potential that is greater than that revealed by all previous experience. In J.M. Barrie's interesting play, The Admirable Crichton, we have portrayed for us a man who served as a butler and was proud of his place, as such. He had never had much or done much in the world about him, but he had pushed back the unconquered frontiers of the world within, and thus was receptive to hidden reserves of inspiration and strength. So, when thrown on a desert island, with the well-being of his master's family dependent on his ingenuity and leadership, the butler became the master of the situation and took complete charge of the group. When put to the test, those who had everything in the worldly sense had nothing in the inner sense. And he who had little of worldly worth, but had attained a consciousness of his inner depth, became the leader of all.

How easy it is to become lost in the wilderness of despair and despondency when one has not previously charted the inner resources of one's mind. Faced by tragedy, loss, hardship, or injustice, we are so easily bogged down in the mirey marshes of self-pity and helplessness. In Charles Fillmore's interesting Metaphysical Dictionary the word "wilderness" means "a multitude of undisciplined thoughts." Moses, in leading the children of Israel (man's spiritual nature) out of bondage to the intellect, into the "promised land" of spiritual consciousness, goes in circles for forty years in the wilderness, during which time all errant thoughts are being brought into captivity through a knowledge of Divine law. So, the wanderings of the children of Israel and the leadership of Moses have a metaphysical counterpart in terms of our own experience.

In the first chapter of Mark, we are told that even Jesus had this inner frontier to cross. It is said, "Jesus was led by the Spirit into the wilderness, where for forty days He was tempted." Now, we might ask, "Led by the Spirit into temptation?" No. He was led into the wilderness of mind to gain the victory.

Many are the times when we go on to outward attainment and success, while allowing a large wilderness area of undisciplined thoughts to remain within. Of course, this always spells trouble in the long run. A man of considerable means who, retired, is living in frustration and despondency, sits on the veranda on a sunny afternoon as the gentle and refreshing breezes stir the leaves. He says, "See the way the shadows chase themselves around under those trees? That is one of the few things which gives me comfort. They did it just like that under those same trees when I was a boy, and when I had a good time living." The trouble with this man is that shadows are chasing themselves around in his mind. He has become lost in the wilderness of his own undeveloped inner life. His need is to face this frontier, to launch forth to spend his time in that wilderness and to put the satanic influence of negative thoughts in their place. To probe the depths of himself means inner prayer and meditation.

It is unfortunate, but true, that a simple acceptance of religion or the joining of a church does not necessarily launch us across the new frontier into the conquest of our inner wilderness. This is a confusion that is sometimes foisted on us by the propaganda of religious institutions. I love this thought by Manly P. Hall in his book, The Mystical Christ: "We have been given a beautiful teaching, to which the better parts of our natures instinctively aspire. As never before, we need to live and to understand the original Christian code. We must cleanse our minds of the tendency to associate Jesus' teachings with the false concepts that have circulated in His name." He then goes on to tell the story of a man who came to him seeking spiritual help, a man who was the picture of piety. He had convinced himself that he was a paragon of Christian virtue, and at the same time he was devoured by hate. He loved everyone in general and hated everyone in particular. He suffered, and retaliated by making others suffer. And yet, he would have been highly insulted if anyone had suggested that he was not a fine Christian gentleman. He is typical of the incredible inconsistency of much of our Christianity. He constantly complained about an unprincipled world and yet he was without any real principle himself.

Crossing the frontier within ourselves, one important task is to find the Divinity of our own innate person, to find the Christ in ourselves. Christianity is a vital influence in our lives, but only to the degree that we find our way through the maze of our own negative thinking to the source of our abundant living, the Divinity within us. Of course, "finding" the Christ is a redundant idea because the Christ isn't lost; the Christ is our greater self. Actually, it is we in human thought who are lost.

Paul tells of this inner perfection within the outer form. He refers to "the mystery which hath been hid for ages and generations; but now hath it been manifested to His saints, which is Christ in you, the hope of glory." This is probably the greatest statement in the Bible, which we need very much to understand: "Christ in you, the hope of glory." "Christ" refers to the Divine dimension of yourself. "The hope of glory" is the hope of righteousness, the hope of overcoming, the hope of finding any kind of meaning or purpose or effectiveness in life.

In II Corinthians, the thirteenth chapter, Paul says: "Examine yourself, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates?" Now, he is using this "Jesus Christ" in a rather interesting way, because he is not speaking of Jesus as being in you, but what he calls, "the Jesus Christ consciousness," a level of awareness which he simply identifies as that being revealed by Jesus. He tells us to examine our inner selves, to cross the inner frontiers, and to see if we can't find within ourselves this Divine level, this pattern of Divine sonship. And he unequivocally states that this Christ, or Divinity, is in us, "except ye be reprobates." The word "reprobate" means, among other things, "to disapprove with strong dislike; to refuse to sanction; to reject; to abandon as helplessly wicked." In other words, as long as man disapproves of his own inner self, as long as he has a strong dislike for the depth of himself and refuses to recognize its omnipresence and guidance, then his own man-made reprobate state of mind will remain the one and only barrier that keeps the Divine level of himself in a state of inertia.

So, the challenge is to launch into this wilderness of mind, to conquer this reprobate state of consciousness, that we may come to know and to experience the inner power of the Christ.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

ANSWERS TO THIRD COLLEGE EXAM

1. "The mysteries or the Mystery, that is the question" - whether it is appropriate or not to twist Shakespeare like this, or to quote Eliphas Levi; "The greatest Mystery of infinity is the existence of He to whom alone everything is without mystery", it is a way to describe my concept of the mysteries and the Mystery in a nutshell. There are lesser mysteries, but one Mystery behind and beyond them all. This fundamental Mystery means all to me, for there is nothing outside of It so I am myself within It and It is within me. This Mystery knows no time and no dimensions, or, rather, all "time" and all "dimensions", for It simply is. Name It God, name It whatever, it changes nothing, for It is eternity, It is the cosmos, It is the reason behind all reasons man can perceive or think of, the ultimate and intangible, yet so close, so close - yea closer to my Self than am I! Therefore I can experience the realness and presence of this Mystery when reaching within or when looking without and sense like an extatic rapture Its light, power and depth, Its life, love and beauty. Such experience leaves me rich beyond all measure and the cup of my heart and soul is filled beyond borders, to overflow completely... and the taste of this wine, how could I describe? The veil before my eyes has become translucent and I have beheld splendours of unspeakable power and beauty, so I have certain knowledge of things that are beyond words. Still, such knowledge has hit me hard, clearly pointing out my weakness, my errors and my limitations. Therefore I know also that I have a lot of work to do, work that I am not yet ready for, but preparing for. One may come to think that one has made a good part of the distance when things opens up, then only to realize that the Path is a never ending one, a realization that may induce a feeling of despair. I have since long come to understand that every step I make along the Path is a step preparing for steps that are not even yet in sight, so against what am I to compare my progress or whith what instrument do I plot my position on the seas of eternity? Truly, I know not how far I have progressed nor the exact position of my ship, for the horizon is heaven and sea in all directions, so all I can do is follow the Sun. And meeting with strong currents and high winds I will learn to sail...

2. The purpose of occult study is to help the student towards at-one-ment by personal, individual effort. That is to say that occult study is a system of training or a step-by-step method, intended to accelerate the development of the student, to permit him to reach into the mysteries of his own nature, develop his higher faculties and to guide him making use of his faculties in his quest for Light, so he may become a knowing being. Through occult study, the student will, if he persevere, develop mastery of himself and his environment, bringing it all conciously under spiritual control, attaining by degrees continuous and concious union with the Higher Self. Then he will also experience attunement and union with the Divine, the profoundest mystical experience, and prepare to serve the Will of God.

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

Our self-study has revealed in us the presence of some higher principles and functions which distinguish us from the animals, to whom our physical being relates us. It also reveals another distinctive character: the fact that we are able to study, analyse and judge ourselves. Man is thus a dual being, partaking of both the angelic and the animal..

What conclusions will Saint-Martin reach from the combination of Man's two streams of experience? With Pascal, he comes to the conclusion that the principle of the Fall of Man, or original sin, offers a better solution to our difficulties than the speculations of philosophers.

Saint-Martin uses here, in his book "Ecce Homo", a play on words to express a shade of meaning he finds important: "Through the realization of our greatness, we arrive at the conclusion that if we are not GOD-THOUGHT, we are at least 'THOUGHTS OF GOD.'"

The first expresses the idea of thought imbued with the power of God, in other words: an emanation with the power of creation. The second implies that we exist as a result of thought in the mind of God ... in other words: that we are at the receiving end of the emanation. Man, therefore, is not a creative force emanating from God but the result of such an emanation.

Saint-Martin says, therefore: "Through the realization of our Greatness we come to the conclusion that ... if we are not GOD-THOUGHT, we are at least THOUGHT OF GOD. Through the realization of our dreadful plight, we can form an idea of the happy state we have known previously."

Pascal has said: "Who is unhappy not to be king ... but a king deprived of his throne?" and Saint-Martin echoes the same feeling: "If Man has not anything more, it is because he had everything."

On the other hand, whether we feel it intuitively in our primordial faculty, or whether we infer it from our present poverty ... we have the certainty of our sublime origin. Yet, we have that very poverty at present. Nothing but a doctrine based on the Fall can explain the passing from the first estate to the second. Just as we have acquired a notion of primordial bliss and just as we cannot escape the reality of the misery in which we are now, so must we admit transition, either sudden or gradual, from one state to the other. This is the principle of the Fall of Man.

We come now to the conclusion of Saint-Martin's philosophy, the substance of which, you will remember, has been passed down from the far past in the bosom of a secret Initiatic Society ... a Society manifesting throughout the ages under different names, at different times, in different places.

Let us now examine for the last time the path of spiritual evolution that is entered ... when Man, by looking around him, but most of all within himself, comes to the realization of a first and sublime estate from which he has been exiled. It is the analysis of this sublime estate which made Man so great and so happy ... that constitutes the third stage of Saint-Martin's dialectic.

Let us now see our Master's last analysis:

1) Man is a god ! A truth !
2) How can Man, that god, that wonderful being ... languish in opprobrium and debility?
3) How can Man find himself in such a condition of ignorance, weakness and misery ... were it not for the fact that he has become separated from the very principle which is the Unique Light and sole support of all Beings.

With the principle of the Fall once accepted, it is obvious that the aim of Man ... who, says Saint-Martin, "is fixed to this earth like Prometheus to his rock" ... must be to reconquer and re-enter his First Estate.

But have we the means of finding the Lost Paradise?

We know how man was thrown out. The description of this Eden would show, says our Master, "that it is designed with such wisdom that by retracing his steps along the same path which led him downwards to exile ... Man can be sure of returning to the Central Point, which is the only place where he can find strength and rest." (E.& T.)

The dialectic of Martinism rests therefore on a threefold proposition which is:

THESIS - ANTITHESIS - SYNTHESIS and which Martinists translate as

ORIGINAL FELICITY (of a First Estate) - FALL - REINTEGRATION

Man, who has been called a "Spiritual Minor" ... a term we shall find again soon ... has found his destiny (to attempt reintegration) to be by way of a logical process of analysis, which could be said to duplicate his own evolution.

Every man must therefore discover in his own mind, the Eternal Saga of Man.

DISCUSSION

Brothers & Sisters ... the aspect we have shown you represents in a way the intellectual approach.. It must not be considered as the whole of the Martinism of Saint-Martin but it is the only part that can be studied rationally. The purely mystical aspect of the Quest can neither be taught nor described but must be DISCOVERED in each one's own heart.

(Please pause, reread and inwardly digest before proceeding)

The Martinism of Saint-Martin, has been called a mystical system and Saint-Martin is himself considered a mystic. This is correct, but the term 'mystic' is sometimes understood in different ways. In the sense generally considered as the oriental sense ... or Hindu conception ... 'mysticism' describes a state of union with God or the Absolute. The same word, however, is also used to describe the technique or method by which such a state of union is achieved.

These techniques, although directed to the possesion of an entirely spiritual and abstract condition may however verge on the physical, as we can see from the method known as Hatha Yoga.

"Mysticism", therefore, is taken in two ways:

1: To designate a STATE of Nirvana or Illumination, or of union with the Absolute.

2: To describe the discipline and the way to be followed, to achieve such a state.

In Martinist terminology, we call the state "REINTEGRATION" and the method "THE INNER WAY."

Unfortunately, many mystics and so-called mystics, have been so divorced from earthly realities that their work is surrounded by an impenetrable haze which has helped to discredit the adjective "mystical" in the public mind ... by associating it with anything that is irrational or weird.

The French author Balzac wrote of certain mystical writings:

"They are written without method, without eloquence, and their terminology is so baroque that we may read a thousand pages of Madame Guyon, of Swedenborg and particularly of Jacob Boehme, without understanding a single thing. Do you wish to know why? Simply because in the eyes of these believers, everything had already been proved."

We note that Balzac does not include Saint-Martin among those hazy writers. Saint-Martin was a man with strong spiritual aspirations but he always supported his principles with philosophical arguments, presented in a logical manner. In a letter to Willermoz, dated February 3, 1784, he wrote:

"As for the two doors, that of the Heart and that of the Mind, I believe the first one is by far to be prefered, particularly if one is fortunate enough to be gifted in that respect. But one should not stop there, especially when one has to talk to people who only have the door of the Mind barely ajar and one must be very consciencious about this aspect of the Teaching until the light comes."

THE PART OF THE TEACHER ENDS THERE. The Initiate, having absorbed through the intellectual approach those principles which form the rational part of the Doctrine ... is then left to open his Heart through his own will and desire.

Those who are privileged to lead you into Martinism cannot take you any further.

That is why the spoken lecture on the Teaching can remain but a theory. THE REST OF THE WORK IS UP TO THE INDIVIDUAL ... UP TO YOU. You will, however, find help of a more subtle nature in the ritual work sincerely undertaken and in the exercises of meditation and contemplation already given you, and which you are always reminded to practice.

We shall conclude this brief study of the philosophy of Saint-Martin with a word of hope for those who find the goal so far away ... and apparently unattainable ... and who despair of ever reaching it.

The Way of Reintegration, like all other ways, requires a voluntary decision from the Man of Desire who STARTS on the Path. Such a decision, however, is already a form of realization, for it is said that the will to identify oneself with God is in itself a grace of God.

Let us take courage and inspiration then, my Brothers & Sisters, from this beautiful thought of Pascal, with which we shall close this conventicle:

"Tu ne me chercherais pas si tu ne m'avais déjà trouvé."

"THOU WOULDST NOT SEEK ME IF THOU HADST NOT ALREADY FOUND ME." !

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

Dear Companions;

Over the past few Libers we have been presenting that portion of the Martinism of Saint-Martin that can be studied. As was stated just now, the purely mystical aspect must be discovered by each person.

In the next Liber we will begin to examine the Martinism of Martinez Pasquales.

I am sure that you have long ago realized that "truth", "right and wrong", "good and bad", &c ...are not concepts that can be as clearly delineated and defined as many people seem to think they may be, but rather ... these are things each person must determine for themselves.

Certainly the self-study you are undertaking and the analysis of the ideas that come to you, whether they be from your "head"(mind), or the "heart"(emotional self) ... must be making you conscious of your behaviour and your attitude. We hope these lessons are causing you to discover things about yourself that you had not noticed before and that whether you call it reintegration, salvation, nirvana or whatever ... you know now what the goal is ... that its attainment is in your own hands ... and you are on the way to becoming a New Man.

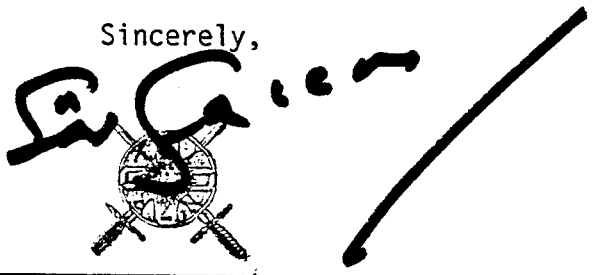
Regarding the ritual work mentioned above: we have two useful rituals for home use. One was released by the Union of Martinist Orders and the other is a collection of prayers of the Elus-Cohen, translated from manuscripts in the Jean-Baptiste Willermoz collection at the Municipal Library, Lyon, France. They are listed in our Supply Bureau .

Companions: allow me to congratulate you on the progress you are making. Your mystical and spiritual development we cannot judge ... but your intellectual comprehension we can! Following is the first of a 3 part exam for the College's Certificate of Proficiency. We hope all Associates will participate.

May that Peace which passes all human understanding, abide with you.

Sincerely,



CERTIFICATE OF PROFICIENCY

The examination for this Certificate will be divided into three parts. The first will be to do with the ideas of Saint-Martin. The second on those of Martinez Pasqualez; and the third will be general. We will require an overall average of 90%. Associates who fail the first time will be required to do the exam over.

Please write or type clearly, give your name and key number, and write on one side of the paper only. Head the paper Proficiency Exam No. 1. (You can submit each exam paper separately, or send them all in together.)

Proficiency Exam No. 1

1: What is Martinism?
2: What is the aim of Martinism?
3: How does Martinism propose to achieve these aims?
4: What do you think of Initiation?
5: Who inspired Saint-Martin?
6: What is Man's most important endeavour?
7: Where does the secret to each person's own progress lie?
8: How can Man hope to know himself?
9: What does self-study reveal?
10: What is the most essential virtue in practising self-study?
11: What study does Saint-Martin advocate?
12: What does this reveal?

13: What are the three phases of Man's realization of Self?
14: What need arises out of the realization of the Fall of Man?
15: Explain what is meant by The Inner Way.

Good Luck !

Who are the "builders of tomorrow" ... and why? These are the questions many of the more thoughtful are asking themselves these days and the answers will vary according to each questioner's individual outlook and attitude toward life. Some will give political reasons why this or that nation will be responsible for the future and its results, whereas others will advance religious, philosophic, racial, scientific or sociological answers. They will, each and all, depend solely upon the individial view-point. Each considers his answers, his attitude and his theory to be the "right" ones ... (otherwise he would not hold them). Yet all the answers will be different Who or which is right?

One group will assure us quite vigorously that if the totalitarian way of life triumphs ... liberty and freedom are doomed. Another group will claim that unless Christianity and all that it symbolizes is re-awakened in the heart of man the world is doomed and the future is lost in darkness. Yet another group will assure us, oh so positively, that science has the future of man in its care and that continued progress is inevitable because, as man gains in understanding of the mysteries of life, the standard of living is improved and raised to higher levels. Therefore, science is to be the sole arbiter of the future. And so on. Each group claims to have the only authentic and authorized solution to our problems and the key to our future welfare. Again: Which group is right?

Is it not a fact that all groups of people in life, generally speaking, feel that they hold the solution to all of life's problems ... if only they could get a sufficient number of people to think as they think? Does this claim not sound familiar?

Is it not true that different religious bodies believe and claim that their system is the only truth, or the only expression of truth? Is it not true that different governments claim that theirs is the only sound form of real government? Is it not true that different schools, universities and even businesses assert that "their way is the 'better way'?" Is it not true that certain races claim that theirs is the superior race? Why is this? There must be a fundamental reason for these conflicting states of mind and opinions in all creeds, races and individuals.

At the present time, groups of men, known as nations, are seeking ... forcibly ... to impose their way of life upon other groups. Why is this? Because they believe "their way" (whatsoever it may be) is better ... and should be imposed upon others. Again: Why is this?

Is it not because all men know that tomorrow will be what they make of it today ... and each group wants tomorrow to be just what each individual of the group thinks it should be? In other words: people believe that the world will go to ruin unless what they have come to believe in, and stand for, is preserved. Again and again we ask: Why is this so? You - me - this organization - and lots of others - could give many answers ... all of them particularly true, but the fundamental reason for this chaos of attitudes is a spiritual one.

When we discard our physical body at so-called "death" what have we left? We have an etheric counterpart and an astral counterpart, a mental sheath and the Divine Spark, or Ego. How well we utilize these other bodies immediately after the "great change" depends upon our spiritual consciousness and development. It is just the same as on the physical plane. Some people go through life without really living ... simply drifting ... having no objective or plan to their lives. We might well call them "life drifters." Do you believe that an entity, which in the course of its incarnation, has not taken an active interest in its surroundings and has not made it a point to participate in the important constructive work that is going on in this world ... will be any different when it passes to another world? That lack of aliveness and interest is due to the individual himself and not to his surroundings. When he passes over to the "other side" ... to reality ... he is not going to be any more AWARE than he was on earth.

I am not now refering to physical defectives but to individuals who are endowed with all their faculties but who are spiritually lazy. These individuals can be awakened or sensitized only through discipline. This discipline takes many forms of expression but the most effective seems to be obstruction and denial. These are both negative conditions, you say. But spiritual laziness is the most negative of them all and it takes another negative condition to produce repulsion. Repulsion, though negative, is active. It produces activity and what follows upon such repulsion is very important. Just what we will do about it depends upon our soular growth. Those who have evolved to the point of having a well-controlled astral body will have developed well-controlled emotions and the seed-atoms or essence of these will be absorbed by the Ego for future use. When we fully realize that nothing in life is wasted ... that every experience is utilized ... how glorious and important every moment of life becomes!

He who says, "What does it matter?" does not realize the absurdity of that remark. All things DO matter ... but in relative importance. There would be little or no purpose in our living, whether on this planet or in any other state of existence, unless living DID matter. Not a single life is lived in vain regardless of the surroundings and circumstances attending a given individual.

How often has one said: "What a pity such people should live" when they have seen a monstrosity of some kind. Rather, their remark should have been: "Too bad that Ego has had to learn in such a difficult way." Were we permitted to trace back some of the incarnations of that individual we might be astonished to discover its identity.

Gifted with talents but using none of them ... just drifting with the tide and planning nothing. How could an Ego develop talents and then not use them? ... that, you say is unlikely ... yet: look about you everywhere, you will find unused talents wheresoever you look.

When we have a talent or faculty and use it not, what happens? It atrophies through lack of use or exercise. It corrodes, sometimes even disintegrates. Only through USE does a talent become a part of our soular and spiritual structure. If we have developed a faculty and talent in a given incarnation and never again use that talent in subsequent times and lives ... it gradually fades away and disintegrates. Maybe you say this doesn't seem right to you but ... ponder. What creates or developes any faculty or talent? NECESSITY and USE. On the physical plane all our faculties have evolved because of necessity and they are all refined and sensitized through USE ... and nothing else.

Lets have an illustration: The co-ordination of your entire body is due to use. Stop using any part of your body and what happens? You lose co-ordinated action. No matter how skilled you may become in anything ... stop working at it for any length of time ... and you gradually lose your skill. Eventually, the faculty and ability whether it be drawing, music, sewing, craftmanship or anything else ... becomes limited or useless.

The purpose of digressing from the subject of how well we use our various vehicles or "bodies" after the "great change" is to emphasize the importance of utilizing all our faculties here and now in order to carry over with us better and more perfected tools when we reach higher planes of use and expression. We perfect our tools on the earth plane ... to use them on the spiritual plane.

The earth plane is our training school because it supplies resistance that strengthens not only our physical structure but our mental and spiritual fibre as well. It cannot be stressed too strongly, or too often ... the importance of what you acquire and develop inwardly, to the state of your future growth and well-being, not only "here" but on the inner planes of being too.

So many individuals go through physical life looking forward to the day of their physical release because they think that "over there," meaning the spiritual side of life, things will be different ... because "there" they will be everything they have wished to be and to have. How sadly disappointed these good folks will be for they will not be going to any other world than what they have created within for themselves.

Do you really believe an individual who is embittered, resentful, revengeful and unloved ... will be happy, loved, and joyous after he makes the "great change"? Companions: We carry our world with us where'er we go! This applies to us not only physically but emotionally and spiritually as well. Remember that when we discard our physical bodies or vehicles, we are taking with us the same etheric and astral bodies we possessed while incarnate on this side; the same mental sheath and the same Ego.

We will return now to our original subject, the importance of what we do after repulsion has set in, when we have been moved from our state of complacency or crystallization. The law of repulsion is the first wedge used in the breaking up of crystallization. What we do with that wedge is important, for we act either constructively or destructively according to our state of evolution.

When something repels you, do you run away from it, or do you stop and study it and try to discover why it repels you and then, if it is because of something wrong ... do you try to correct the condition or thing? This is a very important question for it not only applies to us individually but to the whole of life itself.

If we but knew it, the law of repulsion is one of man's greatest blessings, for that law is an incentive and a propulsion to progress and change. Not until we are touched either by attraction or repulsion do we take action. Both can be equally constructive, equally good ... it just depends upon what we do with either one. It is the same law manifesting in its two polarities!

When we make the "great change" and review our life activities, this law of attraction & repulsion, or polarity, is very active, because it functions through the astral body, or Plastic Envelope. Of all our vehicles (the "bodies several" as Saint Paul calls them), the astral body is the most sensitive to the law of polarity, because our emotions respond instantly to the two extremes of attraction & repulsion. That is why many, before giving a new idea careful consideration, are instantly attracted or repelled by the new idea, sometimes simply because it is new. It is their astral body that has passed that judgement, not the mind. Frequently, the mind accepts the idea when it has had an opportunity to work upon it and "think it over." And yet ... that astral reaction was probably right ... and subsequent events often prove it to have been true. We frequently say "It was my intuition" or a "hunch." It truly was. It registered through the astral body because the astral body is quick to sense and register all "feeling" or messages the soul receives from the Ego. One translates to the other, according to its ability to receive and transmit.

When we are in the spiritual planes ... feelings, impressions and thoughts are all intermingled, just as they are on the physical plane. Only one thing is different: resistance is absent (as we ordinarily think of resistance). Then and there it is that we discover the reality of thought: that thoughts are things just as matter is to us while on the physical plane.

At first we are bewildered and somewhat overwhelmed by this realization for, on earth, it was so difficult to convey our thoughts accurately to others. In fact, sometimes it was impossible. On the hinterside of life we discover that our thoughts are being read as though we had actually spoken them.

Just as on earth we had to be very careful how we expressed our thoughts in words spoken or written ... on the "other side" we have to be careful, perhaps for the first time, how we think because our thoughts take form and life. Then we discover that what we feel and what we think are very important because we can see the form and life these take at once. Then it is that we are taught how to use our minds and how to direct and control our felings. We enjoy this schooling and believe we have reached the point where further experience on earth, where we can test our skills acquired ... can be taken up.

We feel sure we have acquired sufficient ability on the spiritual side, or planes, to apply what we have learned on the physical plane. So the great desire to return, test and prove our ability to correct so many things that we have learned were wrong, takes hold of us. We want to "go back" and, as you term it ... "make good." We want to put into operation so much that we have learned while in the World of Reality. We feel certain we can do so many things better ... not only than we did them before ... but better still than they are being done by others who are on earth at the time when we are still in the Spirit.

With this urge we return then, but, alas, that creative virgin urge to put into active operation the valuable things we have learned ... gradually becomes weaker and distorted through our environmental resistance and the truths we acquired and thought we were so sure of ...become foggy images in our minds and distorted out of all semblance and recognition. Again, we have allowed the physical to bind us down. One thing remains, however, one spark has not been lost and that was the fact that something had to be done. ... So we bring back this tiny light: what we think and feel is important ... but in coming back into the physical world it has acquired the illusion of matter ... and therein lies our greatest test.

We have allowed our surroundings to dominate us ... instead of dominating our surroundings ... as was our intent, while in the Spirit.

We forget so much as we become more and more engrossed in our material needs and cares that our original reason for returning has become lost, or so buried that it cannot express or impel us strongly enough. The poet Robert Browning said it this way -

But friends,
Truth is within ourselves; it takes no rise
From outward things, whate're you may believe.

There is an inmost center in us all,
Where truth abides in fullness; and all around Wall upon wall, the gross flesh hems it in
This perfect, clear perception ... which is truth.
A baffling and perverting carnal mesh
Binds it, and makes all error: and to KNOW
Rather consists in opening out a way
Whence the imprisoned splendour may escape,
Than in effecting entry for a light
Supposed to be without.

William Wordsworth phrased it like this -

Our birth is but a sleep and a forgetting;
The Soul that rises with us, our life's Star,
Hath had elsewhere its setting,
And cometh from afar;
Not in entire forgetfulness,
And not in utter nakedness,
But trailing clouds of glory do we come
From God, who is our home:
Heaven lies about us in our infancy!
Shades of the prison-house begin to close
Upon the growing Boy,
But he beholds the light, and whence it flows,
He sees it in his joy;
The Youth, who daily farther from the east
Must Travel, still is Nature's priest,
And by the vision splendid

Is on his way attended;
At length the Man perceives it die away,
And fade into the light of common day.

Study and meditation on these two beautiful verses will amply repay the effort.

So ... our urges do express in part, but in so doing, there is the feeling that the individual's way is the only right way, be it what it may. What originally suggested the conviction has been buried under a veritable mountain of tradition, custom, national and racial ideas, educational misconception and personal prejudice. How to release that spark from all this encumberance is indeed an undertaking.

We are all "bound" by the many limitations we have created for ourselves. The world as it is today, is the product of our labours. The forms of government and the economic systems are the results of our own activity. They are our brainchildren. We have been the builders of our yesterdays, our todays and we are now in the process of building our tomorrows. Those who inhabit the earth now are the builders of the future. Think of what this means! It means that what you - me - we - are individually doing NOW ... is the most important moment of our whole existence thus far.

Crystallization is fast being broken up, not in just one country alone, nor in one city, but around the planet. This means that a vast change is taking place upon the face of our earth, a change that will materially alter its appearance in many ways. It is a change that we, as individuals, are bringing about. We are reaching the point where the great wedge of repulsion, (war), is breaking up old forms, - but that question of what we do after repulsion sets in is very important. It faces us as a collective question. We have faced conditions as individuals, now we must face this law as a group, because, as a group, we have set still other laws into operation that must be worked out and utilized.

Are we going to turn our backs on what is before us ... or are we going to find out what is wrong and correct it ...TOGETHER?

It is easy to say that the reason for all our upheaval and chaos is due to human greed, personal ambition and thirst for power. It is easy to blame individuals and nations for the present situation. Such blaming, is part of the activity of the law of repulsion. We feel great repulsion toward those whom we consider responsible for existing conditions. That repulsion is in fact healthy if it precipitates an answer to the most vital question "What are we going to do about it?" You may say you cannot change the world ... and that this is a world condition. True. But there is one thing that each individual CAN institute and no amount of defense preparation can destroy or stop it - and that is vital, constructive thought. Thought is indestructible and before any constructive action can be taken constructive thought must precede it.

What is constructive thought? If each group of people believe that theirs is the better, or only way, are they not engaged in constructive thinking, according to their individual light? And yet - their way may be detrimental to another nation. You can answer your own question: Constructive thought hurts no one but uplifts and helps everyone.

Before we can change the world we must change ourselves individually. Our thoughts must be creative, constructive and free from prejudice. A prejudiced thought is not constructive because it is not free - it is bound. It is bound to and by the prejudice. And so we return to the opening question of our theme, "Who is right?" and "Why is this?"

Any individual or group of people who have for their motive, objective or plan the subjugation of another, or of other groups of people, without thought of the well-being, progress and happiness of the people with whom they are dealing, but only of their own selfish ends ... are certainly not following constructive thought and action. What such groups and individuals do not seem to "remember", because they have become so bound to matter, is that ... the difficulties they are imposing upon others, nations or individuals, ... they themselves will come back to live in.

Governments now, that through a sense of injury wish to impose penalties upon other governments or individuals, will have the privilege and opportunity of coming back in subsequent incarnations to reap the product of their own previous activity. So when we think or believe that we are imposing obstacles and difficulties upon another, we are simply imposing them upon ourselves. The world we are creating for the future is the world we will inhabit in a subsequent incarnation. If we think and act unconstructively, we are not only preparing a world for our children and grandchildren to suffer in, but also to return to ourselves ...and then and there pay off the karma we will be accumulating. And "no one shall come out thence until he has paid the uttermost farthing," is how the Great Book puts it.

Perhaps this is a good thought we all might remember to our advantage: The Golden Rule can work both ways. It might well be given, "Whatsoever ye do unto men, they also shall do unto you." And this appears to be well substantiated in every day life. We must come back to whatsoever we have built and are building for the future. That future is in our own hands. So, it is in very truth that we build our futures, not only spiritually but physically as well. It is all very well to lay up treasures in the spiritual heaven but we would do far better to remember that heaven exists right here and now and it is worth our while to lay up treasure here that is equally immune to moth and rust and which no one can break into and steal. We all belong to the same wave of human evolution that is now expressing and must be perfected by suffering and experience to whatsoever it is destined to be.

Constructive thought always precedes constructive action! Remember that at all times. No general enters combat without a definite plan of attack. No one should attempt the battle of life, - for self-improvement, welfare of those about them, self-control, balance and progress, without a definite plan of action and approach. Yet we universally make the great mistake of going into action before going into thought. Understanding that we don't have to look very far for the reason for our chaotic conditions. Emotions released and set into action without thought is a daily error made by many.

"How can we, as Students of Truth, stimulate constructive thought among our fellow-men?" The answer is simple: By thinking constructively ourselves. Above all, avoid hasty judgements and try to overcome prejudices, be they personal or national.

People, generally speaking, are short sighted. They do not look very far ahead. They think almost in terms of hours. Look at the present daily processes overstuffed with archaisms and obsolete formulae - in business, economics, social, intellectual and spiritual life. The New Order of the Ages now undergoing its birth-pains will cause more suffering to those whose minds are not elastic to new ideas than to those who adapt themselves readily to anything that will foster expansion and growth, both of the Nation and of the individual.

It is important to realize this: The tomorrow we are building is not merely the transient period of the balance of our individual life-expression, or our immediate generation. (If that were all, then humanity would now be in a process of total suicide.) We are building the tomorrow that historians a thousand years hence will review as one of this planet's greatest and most momentous periods. Science will liberate forces hitherto unknown ... and human greed will, as usual, at first work much suffering in its attempts to soborn nature to its selfishness. But then the constructive spirit will triumph and mankind will go on and into vistas of evolved mentalism, spiritual insight and applied power ... and the two worlds, seen and unseen, will draw closer together than ever before in man's history.

Some may still complain, "Well, what good will all this do for me? I won't be here to see this wonderful time or take part in it." Are you quite sure friend? Where were you before you came here, and whence came you? I ask this because I have never yet met a person who could conceive of a time when he or she was not. Plenty there are who can remember back only so far, but none who can comprehend a time of non-existence except in theory. Every one who participates constructively in the building of tomorrow will not only experience that tomorrow ... he cannot escape it even if he would. That too, is part of karma.

Never is man or cosmos the same one second after another. That is a definition of motion in one sense and, as you know, everything is in a state of continuous motion. None of us are the same from one second to another. Minute changes are undergone and tomorrow is always the newest status whether measured by minutes or milliards.

You are building this moment, while listening to this statement. You are building by the attitude of mind in which you receive it.

Keep the tremendous importance of tomorrow in mind - always-tomorrow presents itself to us momentarily, tomorrow is always becoming tomorrow ... somewhere. Anticipate tomorrow by doing the best you can - today - NOW!

Dear Companions: #94

I am going to talk to you about "The Brittle Aura" ...but first let me say this - It is difficult for earth-dwellers to place themselves in a position to see the position from the "other side" of life; that, however, is exactly what I am going to strive to do tonight, thus making the picture complete.

Right now the world needs these teachings as never before ... as never before in all its history. Out of the present morass of darkness and misery LIGHT will survive ... survive because of the tireless efforts of those not only on the physical side of life, but in the Unseen as well.

We are constantly striving to help man see the Light, but the realization must come from within man himself. We can help plant the seed, but the cultivation and growth is entirely personal. You, on the physical plane, must do likewise ... plant the seed and wait for its fruition. You cannot hasten the growth of another, but you can help it, through proper nourishment. You can take an emanciated body and rebuild it through proper nourishment, exercise, sunshine and fresh air. The body grows by itself, when you provide the needed elements and proper environment. In other words, you help it through intelligent living.

The same law applies to the mental and spiritual vehicles of man. The growth is from within, but you can render powerful help through proper nourishment, exercise, sunshine and fresh air. What are the correspondences of these in the realms of Mind and Spirit? Truth, understanding, kindliness, love ..... what a pathway of opportunity and upbuilding they offer!

You speak about these things; you write about them; but - how much of them do you live? That is what counts! Nothing matters except that you live of what you know and believe.

The living of a principle gives life to it, otherwise it is dead. The principles for which our Order stands will survive in ages to come only to the extent that you who are living on the earth today - NOW - make them vital, pulsating principles in your daily living.

When you pass through the veil, the ever-burning question is not "What did I say?" "What did I believe?" but - "What did I do?" "What did I live?" "What did I do with the great opportunity given me - *life itself?" WHEN LIFE IS REGARDED AS AN OPPORTUNITY ... AND NOT AS A BIOLOGICAL HAPPENING ... IT WILL THEN BEGIN TO MEAN SOMETHING TO EVERY INDIVIDUAL.

Brothers and Sisters, please spread the truth that life itself is the most glorious opportunity ever given and that every moment of it is precious, whether it be on your side of the veil, or on ours. It is all ONE.

Before one can make life worth living, one must understand one's place in it. Then, come what may, it is all lived with new light, new purpose, new vision.

Hitherto man has regarded his physical body with disdain, and in misguided religious fervour has even mutilated it to serve his God better. Poor children of earth! Why do you believe you have a body? It is a tool to be used, improved, repaired, looked after and kept fit for the habitation of the Divine Spark!

You would not consider entertaining guests in an unclean, disordered home. Why do less with your bodies than you would do with your house? The body is the temporary home of the Ego. It is everybody's duty to make this Temple or home worthy of the occupant. We refer not to vanity but to health, cleanliness, vitality, strength, courage, resistance to disease, co-ordination of every muscle ... . These physical qualities have mental and spiritual counterparts and correspondences. Man is forever developing one vehicle at the expense of another. Man should develop all his vehicles synchronously and neglect none. They are all-important for the proper functioning of the Ego - or Spirit.

The more man aligns himself with God, the greater his vital living on all planes becomes. Those who think they have aligned themselves with God and then live fruitless lives, wasted lives, are deceiving themselves only ... no one else. "By their fruits ye shall know them" is the only true guage; it is the guage of results.

Living ... to become worthwhile ... must be active, not passive. Constructive, not destructive. Vital, not stagnant. This living applies to all planes. None should be neglected at the expense of the others. All must work together. It is this lack of co-ordination of man's three vehicles that causes unbalanced living, spiritual unbalance and unhappiness.

When an Ego is in full command of the body, mind and soul, it is then on the King's Highway of Life and not until then. Previous to that it is only on the by-paths. But not on the King's Highway itself.

Full command! What is full command? ... Complete control, command of one's self. Not just the body, but the mind and soul. Then and only then can the Spirit of man -- his Ego, do its real work.

Realize that man's body, mind and soul are merely tools or vehicles for the Ego to function with and through. At present, man is permitting these tools to be the commanders instead of the servers. All this brings us to the subject, "How can man gain greater control of his vehicles?" ... By constantly living the high principles he believes in. By constantly living the high principles he believes in. He must LIVE them. No other course is open. They must be lived. Every time a principle is lived it becomes a part of you and enriches your being on every plane. To have ideals and not live up to them is cosmic waste and cosmos abhors waste, for waste in any form ... is ignorance.

In his ignorance, man believes he has control of himself by placing a hard exterior, first to his body; then to his mind, by appearing immovable; and third, to his soul by seeming and appearing to be unemotional. He then feels pride; he is in full command of himself. Nothing can reach him! Nothing can touch him! Yes -- he is right -- nothing can touch him, nothing can reach him. He is a slave to himself. He is imprisoned within himself and knows it not. He has a brittle aura. He is a sad spectacle ... and is ignorant of the fact.

Life gives abundantly, generously, - but man, in his ignorance, sees it not. There is in each one of you the most precious treasure in the world -- a treasure of limitless supply. It is there, waiting to be tapped, waiting to be used ... and yet ye seek everywhere else for it ... and wonder why ye find it not.

Man complicates his life so unnecessarily. Simplicity of living is a sign of greatness; a sign of growth, - of soul growth. All great souls have, and do, live simply. Look about you and see.

The brittle aura! Does that name surprise you? Just as the skin on your physical body is an outer covering or casing, containing the physical organs, &c., of the physical body, and protecting them from outer friction ... so the aura, in its own way, is the skin or outer covering of the astral body of man.

Probably you have never thought of it in this light ... but the human aura is, to a large extent, the key to the soul, for through that aura one reaches or rather, reads the soul of another.

Man's protective instinct is caused and developed through fear ... fear of the unknown. The same applies to the aura. Emotional fear will cause a brittle aura. The aura is normally hardened, like a skin, but a brittle aura is one that is fragile, easily broken or wrenched apart, leaving openings through which other influences can reach in or penetrate. Normally the aura is hardened as a protector. Protector of what, did you ask? A self-created protector that is opposite to the brittleness we bring about in opening ourselves to fear and all its syndromes.

The reason why I bring up the brittle aura at this time is because it is the greatest obstacle to spiritual growth. Those having brittle auras not only have to help themselves from within, but strangely, they have to be helped from without. They have locked themselves within, but part of the key is without.

Does this seem paradoxical?

When your physical skin is very dry it becomes brittle; it cracks easily and you bleed from within; friction from without is painful for it causes further cracking or splitting of the skin. I am referring to diseased skin or infected skin. You correct this condition both internally and externally through proper regulation of diet, medical aid and the application of soothing, healing oils or salves to the outer skin. The same law applies to the aura. The inner healing comes from within; the outer from our environment and outer experiences. But the real healing always is from within; the outer is only a help, not a cure.

Man, at present, is in the process of building three vehicles at the same time. The most perfected so far, is his physical structure. His astral body is far from perfect and far from under control.

The human aura is not only akin to the physical covering or skin of man in its functions to the astral body, but it is far more than that. The human aura is the radiation or emanation of electronic energy as contained in each vehicle. This radiation or emanation is either in control of the astral or it is not. Either it controls the astral, or it is controlled by the astral body, according to individual development. The human aura is both physical and spiritual ... just as electricity is both physical and spiritual.

The human aura not only indicates the vitality of the body, but the vitality of the soul as well. It is an emanation of a radioactive nature and envelopes all of man's vehicles. The human aura can, therefore, be called man's spiritual skin; it is sensitive to both inner and outer impacts. It can be translucent, opaque, thick, heavy, light, radiant, thin as tissue and impenetrable as the strongest steel at the same time. It can be porous as a sponge, brittle as glass, and soggy as mud. In colours, there is no limit to what it can produce by way of variations ... for colour is vibration and the aura feeds on vibration and produces vibration. Another paradox!

Just as your physical skin protects and receives, so the human aura protects and receives likewise. Both sympathy and antipathy are sensed through the aura. Personal magnetism and the human aura are close companions. As control over our vehicles increases, personal magnetism has greater facility for expression and the human aura increases its power of extension and influence.

You feel the influence of a person through the aura. The Great Master who was called the Christ had an aura that extended tremendously and could be sensed for miles.

The aura is, in reality, the radiance of the soul. Many labour in the fear of obsession and all that it implies. FEAR itself is the easiest channel for an obsessing entity to use.

Remember that love and fear cannot exist together. Love is the greatest power there is. He who truly radiates love, (not sentimentality or its many equivalents), but true, whole hearted LOVE ... fears nothing.

The brittle aura is becoming more and more common because of the increase of fear, doubt, confusion, greed, and the many human failings that man is indulging in at the present time. Fear develops brittle auras to a most confusing degree and extent, and therefore, when an Ego comes over to our side under such conditions, it is not only physically blasted but spiritually so, as well.

The person with a healthy, normal aura finds it possible to associate with all types of people. He who can associate only with a limited group has the answer in his aura. Many who have studied the human aura, pride themselves on their ability of being so sensitive that they can associate only with those who are in complete harmony with themselves. The truly evolved person is in control and is not controlled by. ... That is why the Great Master was able to associate with all sorts of people ... from social nobodys and those who had disorganized auras ... and brought order and love into their lives.

The brittle aura is the product of fear, doubt, uncertainty, greed, jealousy, hatred, malicious gossip, envy, &c.. Everytime any one indulges in these, everytime you indulge in these ... the aura becomes brittle, fragile, and as a result fractures, leaving gaps here and there; these are points or places of least resistance and openings where many things may enter. If these negative qualities are indulged in constantly and frequently, it becomes more and more difficult to soften the aura, and its natural state becomes so crystalized that it becomes permanently brittle. Then you have a truly self-imprisoned soul.

"How can you help such a condition?" you ask. The answer is so simple it is often one of the most difficult things to do:

by expressing LOVE.

Love has many by-paths: It has kindliness, compassion, sympathy, real understanding, consideration, patience, thoughtfulness ... .

Take the most brittle aura and apply these qualities from without ... and stimulate the intent and purpose to change from within ... and your brittle aura will quickly become soft, pliable and strong.

The human aura is an index to the soul.

Every world-saviour who has ever come to earth, has preached one truth. It has been phrased in various ways to suit humanity's intelligence and evolution, but it all can be condensed into one simple mantra: the all inclusive power of LOVE. And man, in his ignorance, has tried everything else instead.

We on this side can give you no greater message than this:

Radiate LOVE in all your activities.

It can be done. It should be done. It MUST be done.

For "As above, so below."

The human mind is in a state of mutation, from a crystalized attitude of materialism to a more fluid and plastic state of spiritual anticipation. Man has not succeeded entirely, by any manner of means, in breaking up his crystalized mental and intellectual status, but he has discovered that something "must be added to" his rigid ideas that only what he can see, feel, hear, taste or smell, can be real. He is willing to concede that all else may have a little bit of truth in it but he also strongly believes that almost everything outside the realm of the physical senses is mostly illusion or imaginary.

So when we warn about the "brittle aura" there may be some who will wonder if it is possible that there is such a thing and, if so, how do we know anything about it?

Quite outside the field of those who have developed clairvoyant sight, the human aura can clearly be seen by anyone equipped with dicyanine cells through which to look. This is an accepted physical fact and even now the technique is being used in reputable hospitals in England for diagnostic purposes.

The point is, through using these dicyanine cells, the idea of a broken aura can be proved. From the diagnostic perspective they are of great value because wherever an organ, especially a vital one, is weak or diseased, a pronounced break, thinness or complete absence of auric emanations over the area is noticable.

This being true with the purely physical aspect of the human aura, how much more true it is of the spiritual aura ... for no one can be a student of Spiritual Science very long without having the truth borne upon them that for every physical condition there is a pre-existing spiritual condition.

The causes that affect the spiritual aura, as already stated, are the intensity of the human emotions and these, it is well known, can readily affect the physical well-being of a person too. (This is the area of psychosomatic medicine.) So, if the causes of breaks in our spiritual aura develop from spiritual and emotional sources, the cure must clearly come from that side as well. The obvious cure consists in changing, eliminating or modifying those inner emotional or spiritual causes

They must be transmuted from the wrong type of expresion, to the right expression. This is what I have tried to point out to you in the earlier paragraphs. There is an old saying about "loving not wisely but too well" and the result is said to be disastrous. That is, by loving with what passes for love but seldom is the real virtue. Control of our lives, our passions, and our fears ... our emotions generally ... is what will heal the broken aura and exhibit a complete, perfectly functioning auric envelope. For the aura has a special function to perform for the astral and etheric vehicles, just as the skin has for the healthy physical organism. They correlate. Let me illustrate:

Do you remember the story of the Roman Emperor who had been awarded a triumph and in whose honour some little children had been covered with gold leaf to signify the return of plenty and the Golden Age? The children died. Neither the skin nor the aura could function and being obstructed, death ensued.

It is the aura that makes people appear to you as they do. You have phrases like: "How I wish I could get under his skin." "I wish I could break through that barrier he keeps around himself and contact the real person." &c. What you mean is that you wish you could break through an unusually hard aura and reach the person's emotional nature.

Then some people have a spongy aura and when you are with them, even though you like them immensely, you feel devitalized. Such persons are almost vampires but don't know it ... the spongy or porous aura they have developed absorbs yours and you feel a sense loss. Remember what the Nazarene Master said when the woman touched the hem of his garment: "I perceive that virtue is gone out of me."

A brittle aura always indicates some obstruction in your spiritual vehicles which is bound, if not corrected, to show up in the physical body, or in your outward attitude toward your fellow-beings. That is why some people whom we know and respect are said to be "difficult" to get along with. It may be owing to some repression or inhibition due to false pride, diffidence or self-consciousness ... preventing a free, spontaneous and natural expression of the real personality and a truly good disposition previously unsuspected.

We speak of something as brittle when it breaks or crushes easily. Do you know of people in your own circle of friends and acquaintances who answer to that discription? They break easily when some serious matter arises, even though it is not nearly a crisis. Do they not seem easily crushed in spirit and temperament too? Now some of them have a sufficient resilience to rise again quickly, and they do. This is because their emotional surge passes swiftly and they return easily to a normal attitude of mind and begin, even though unconsciously, to reconstruct. Others, however, stay crushed for days, in spite of all you try to do for them. I shall have something more to say about this in my next address to you, which will be called "How to Heal a Broken Aura," for the aura can be healed, just as well as any part of the physical corpus. Unfortunately, not many know when they have a broken aura so they do nothing about it. This always leads to trouble. Any neglected portion of the vehicles, spiritual as well as physical, requires prompt attention when the distress signal is displayed ... the signal is pain: mental or physical.

It is a common trait among humans to neglect that which they may know ... but do not always see. Even though it is right before the eye - it is often overlooked, - "not seen." Just because you do not always, or perhaps ever, see the auras of your friends, (or even remotely suspect that you have one of your own), is no reason to ignore its existence. When you feel "out of sorts, down in the mouth, under the weather or completely let down," as these sayings go, just remember that the reason may come from the spiritual base, and while you may not be able to see your own aura even in the mirror ... set about examining your mental state, your emotions, your attitudes, angers, rages, yearnings, urges, hopes, wishes and desires. See if they are in keeping with what a normal attitude of mind should be. Sometimes you can effect a wholesome cure this way, that drenches of medicines, tonics, laxitives, &c, could never accomplish. Cures that can be brought about normally, i.e., by giving nature a chance to make the repairs, will cause no violent reactions.

Keep this thought of your aura and its health in your mind and see if you cannot come into closer consciousness of it. You have been given the methods in earlier pages and you can do much with them for yourself, if you will.

May the love of the Great Ones weave your aura into the shining seamless garment that betokens true inner vision and consciousness.

QUESTIONS ... (write your answers alongside.)

What is the human aura?

What is its function and why the need of it?

What is a 'brittle aura' and how does it become brittle?

What outstanding spiritual principle have you gained from studying this lesson?

Do you begin to understand more clearly why we recommend the introspection exercise on retiring?

Has this lesson opened your eyes more to the importance of watching what you think, feel and do?

SEEING THE AURA

The aura is not so difficult to see if you will look for it!
If you are at a position to observe a person as he is walking under a bright light, especially a florescent light, you may easily see the aura around his head. The 'trick' is not to look at the aura ... look at his head, and the aura will be seen peripheraly. Also, if a person is sitting or standing against a neutral-coloured background, the aura may be seen. Again, do not look AT the aura, look at the person, the aura will be seen with your peripheral vision. As said above, the aura, in fact, is not so difficult to see if you will practice looking for it!

NOTES FOR STUDENTS TO REMEMBER - #S1

Martinism is a way of life, or a doctrine or a system of Mystic Chivalry based on a particular teaching of the origins of Man, of his place in Creation, and on the relationship existing between God, Man and Nature. Its aim is the Reintegration of Man (mankind) with his First Estate. It proposes to achieve this aim in two ways:

1) By the regeneration of Mankind through the regeneration of the individuals.
2) By the removal of the forces that manintain Mankind in its present state of exile.

"INITIATION! Extraordinary power of the divine afflatus which radiates from the hands, creates priest or adept and communicates the understanding and potential possession of the sciences! Magical virtue situated on the extreme bordeline of the natural and supernatural!

Miraculous and impalpable agent that is given without dividing, that passes from person to person without losing its potency and preserves intact its action which remains infallible, but which develops its full power only in the mind ready to nurture it! Subtle current of a vital fluid which animates the member of the mystical body!"

Saint-Martin entrusted to his disciples The Initiation, that it may grow in him who was worthy to receive it, and purify him who was not yet thus prepared. In his work The New Man, Saint-Martin writes: "If the power of Initiation does not give visible results, it nevertheless works infallibly as a preventative, and prepares the shell of him who remains pure, to receive salutary impressions when the spirit deems it advisable."

Saint-Martin was inspired by Abbadie, Burlamaqui, Martines Pasquales and Jacob Boehme.

Man's most important endeavour is to know himself. This he discovers by observing his own behaviour, thoughts, tendencies, reactions, hopes, likes, dislikes, &c., &c..

According to Aristotle, wondering about things is the beginning of philosophy. Wonder takes us away from materialism. Everything is a subject of wonder! In the process of self-study, wonder is the link that unites Man, the observer ... to Man, the object of observation. The first wonders at the other. The true mystic has an infinite capacity to wonder.

Self-study reveals that Man is rarely an integrated being, that he is made of many "I's" functioning on different planes, and fighting for pre-eminence. The most essential virtue in practising self-study is SINCERITY.

Saint-Martin advocates the study of Man. Such a study reveals that Man is a dual being who can think and feel and who can thus realise that he is in a state of exile or privation.

The three phases of Man's realization of Self are:

1) Discovery in himself of a "Superior Principle."

2) Consequent realization of the misery of his present condition.

3) Logical conclusion that at one time Man lost the state of bliss that was his.

Coming to the realization of the Fall of Man and the consequent predicament in which we find ourself ... the need arises of attempting to regain our First Estate or Lost Paradise.

Of the two ways by which Reintegration may be accomplished, Louis-Claude de Saint Martin favoured the Inner Way, which is the interior development of Man's spirituality and union with his Center. Martines Pasqualez advocated The Operative Way, that is, by directly acting, through theurgic operations, on the forces that are keeping Man away from his First Estate.

The whole of the Martinist Doctrine rests on the premise that Man's first achievement and endeavour along the Path of Reintegration must be directed towards self-knowledge and self-realization.

Supernumerary lecture #26

THE FIRST DAY OF THE REST OF YOUR LIFE

Have you ever realized that today is the most important time in all your life, a "red-letter day," almost like the beginning of a new year? We should be saying, "Happy New You!" What am I talking about? I'm talking about the fact that today is the first day of the rest of your life -- an exciting day, an important day. And of course, so is every day.

I love the words of Thomas Carlyle: "Every day that is born into the world comes like a burst of music and rings itself all the day through; and thou shalt make of it a dance, a dirge, or a life march, as thou wilt....The poorest day that passes over us is the conflux of two eternities, the junction of the eternal past and the eternal future." This is an imaginative way of putting it, because eternity is an indivisible unity, and time is not a passing phenomenon but the unfolding of Infinite possibility.

There's an important lesson in watching a gust of wind blow away last year's dead leaves. Each leaf epitomizes the plan of the Universe. Everything, we realize, is formed according to plan and moves in a pattern, Divine and creative. The stars, the planets, the blood in our veins, the seasons, day and night, the phases of the moon -- all are part of this Universal plan. With an instrument we can graph the musical vibrations of a symphony and see a very definite pattern. Stories and paintings, in a way, all have a design as unique as a snowflake or the contents of a drop of water. Even the rise and fall of nations and civilizations, and the fluctuations of the stock market, have rhythmical design, and this is likewise true of your life and mine. Although we may not always be able to recognize it, and indeed may not want to look for it, there is design and pattern in our lives, cause and effect, plan and purpose. We are often so close to our experiences that we cannot see this, but peering into our past, we can see how things are directing us to a certain end.

Shakespeare says, "There's a divinity that shapes our ends, rough hew them how we will." Am I referring to predestination? Isn't it strange that people may reject predestination theologically, but still say, "Well, what will be, will be; there's no use fighting fate." Actually, the Bible speaks of a form of predestination. Paul, in Romans 8:29, says: "For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his son." Now, this means that the ultimate goal of all life is set; with each of us created in God's image-likeness, it is foreordained that we will ultimately manifest it in the outer appearance. But human destiny -- the way of attainment, the path we take of achievement -- this goal is shaped by our actions, thoughts, ideals, aspirations, will, and reaction to the experiences that confront us.

No, we are not talking about predestination but rather of predisposition. Consider that each individual is predisposed toward that which is good and creative, and it is there even though he may suppress and frustrate this tendency. Much confusion experienced by individuals results from this frustration of potentiality. We might ask, "Is it not so that some people are destined to be great, to do great work?" Well, if Thomas Edison was destined to be the wizard of electricity, that would mean that he functioned under a special dispensation and that he had available certain aids not usually possessed by men. If so, then why did he have so many failures, and why did he have to work so hard and so long? Tradition holds that Jesus was predestined to become the Messiah, but if so, then why was He tempted in the wilderness? Why the agony of Gethsamene? Like us, He was predestined to become the Christ; the way of our achievement of this is up to each one of us. Jesus asserted His self-mastery and followed the road to victory; His entire Gospel challenges us to follow. However, the difference between Jesus and you and me is that although we are all predestined to become the Christ, Jesus was predisposed toward it. He had worked for a long time preparing Himself for this end, and it created certain mental habit patterns that led Him in the right direction.

Though the choice of human experience is always with man, and though we make mistakes that bring chaos, yet we can never lose the Divine catalyst of Spirit which forever works to bring harmony out of discord. An organist may accidentally strike the wrong key, but if he is skillful he improvises and resolves the dissonances into harmony which sounds like an interesting turn in the music, and the listener assumes that is the way it was intended. There is in life that which I call the Divine law of adjustment, always turning mistakes into good. All things work together for good! Looking back, we can see how some horrible errors were resolved into something propitious. Examining a pattern from the perspective of a distance makes it appear that that was the way it had to be. In this sense, there will be a good design in everything in your life that takes place -- beginning with this, the first day of the rest of your life.

We cannot familiarize ourselves with this pattern in advance and be aware ahead of time of all this good, nor can we find any insurance against untoward circumstances other than the discipline of thought and faith. As long as we are involved in the contemporary world, with other human beings, there will be conflicts and changes. We can know, however, that regardless of what may happen around us to to us, that we will hold fast to Truth. Thus, in the ultimate, everything that happens in this lifetime, everything that starts in this, the first day of the rest of our life, is going to reveal a beneficient pattern. This indicates the importance of seeking guidance from day to day, to keep in tune with that spiritual predisposition toward good. Isaiah says: "Thine ears shall hear a word behind thee, saying, 'This is the way; walk ye in it,' when ye turn to the right hand, and when ye turn to the left."

As you go forward into this, the next part of your life that is beginning with today, you have the assurance that nothing is fixed and final except that, come what may, the Divine of you will somehow find its way, through that little spark which you cannot quite lose. As you are confronted by experiences, think of them as substance before you. Nothing is fixed. Stars or cards cannot indicate what is good or bad for you. As Shakespeare says, "There is nothing good or ill, but thinking makes it so."

We can change ourselves. We can make of every experience what we will. We may not be able to prevent things happening, for in this, many states of consciousness are involved. But don't overlook the possibility of a consciousness of protection! You certainly can, by your attitude, determine what something will be to you, how you are going to accept it. You can call it good and know that you have something going for you; you can be predisposed toward the good. Most important of all, know that you have the courage and the power and the wisdom and the guidance to press on through every experience. As Paul says, "In all of these things, we are more than conquerors."

Yes, today is the first day of the rest of your life. In this unfolding process of life before you there will be a pattern and design of that which is good, for the Divine law is working. Press on in the upward call and thus make of the pattern of this next phase of your life one that shows a definite upturn in the demonstration of that which is good. This is the first day of the rest of your life, so we say to you, "Happy New You!"

GRADE: COMPANION

Private & Confidential

The International College of Martinists Incorporated, is a non-profit institution existing for the purpose of disseminating information on the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. The lectures/ instruction contained in this Liber comprise material which was previously delivered orally to an esoteric group and has subsequently been given to the College for its use. Under these circumstances the College does not claim to be the author or originator of the contents of this Liber which is distributed in good faith. This Liber is loaned, not sold, to the receiving member as an incident of membership, for personal and private study, and its acceptance by the student is an acknowledgement that it is being held in trust for the College and is to be returned to it upon request.

Dear Companions:

With this Liber we begin to study the Martinism of Martinez Pasquales. We are sure you will find it intensely interesting. Pasqualez' monumental work Treatise on the Reintegration of Beings is now available in English. If you do not see it on the Supply Bureau list, please write for details should you be interested in obtaining a copy.

Let us take a brief look at what is impending. We have a beautiful series on Alchemy to bring forth, and an equally interesting one on the Qabala (in depth); also Saint-Martin's 10 lectures to the Elus-Cohen Lodge in Lyon which we will be able to bring out after the present series on Pasqualez' teaching is complete. You will have to understand Pasqualez' teachings before you will be able to follow these lectures by Saint-Martin! Then there is the History of the Martinist Order which we know many of you are eagerly awaiting ... plus more John Yarker material.

Just a few words on the John Yarker Notebook: As we said in Liber 1, John Yarker was both a Martinist and the G. M. in England of the Masonic Rite of Memphis-Mizraim. The papers in his notebook were written almost 100 years ago. Some are difficult to decipher; we have done our best with the ones presented thus far. Some of the material in the notebook is historical and the information is not readily available elsewhere today. The last paper from the notebook in Liber 25 was on the Harodim. We received a number of letters expressing appreciation for that lecture. However, because of the technical nature of some of the papers and the difficulty in reading them, we suspect some members may overlook them. We feel they are too valuable to be omitted but at the same time we believe some Companions may neglect to read them because of the difficult handwriting. The question is: what should we do about them? Well we have come up with a solution which we doubt Solomon, in all his wisdom, could have bettered!

We are going to present photocopies of the papers directly from the notebook as additional pages in the respective Liber so that those who have a particular interest in the topics therein can enjoy themselves unraveling them with the aid of a magnifying glass ... just as we did! ... and those who find them too tedious to plod through, can leave them alone! In the meanwhile, if any member cares to decipher them correctly and will be good enough to present us with a clean transcript ... we will certainly say "thank you" and include them in place of the photocopied lecture, so everyone will be able to read them easily! Now how's that for settling a thorny question amicably?

As you know, we have been trying to keep the Libers as interesting as possible by including various topics in each. We thought that especially necessary in the beginning, when some of you were still neophytes. Now that everyone has acquired a basic foundation we feel we can concentrate material in some Libers ... and maintain a varied format in others. In this Liber you will find an introduction to Pasqualez' teachings; a continuation of Hieronymous and the FUDOSI; and other material. In the next Liber will be a photocopied lecture from the Yarker notebook.

Be of good cheer brethren as we continue on our way!

Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin received his knowledge of "higher things" from Martinez Pasquales and he adopted Martinez' conception of the Fall of Man and of Reintegration. No study of Saint-Martin is possible and complete if one does not study also the bases of the distinctive philosophy he evolved. These bases were laid by the Founder of Martinism ... MARTINES PASQUALEZ.

For a long time, little was known of this very mysterious man who was to leave such a deep impression on the seekers of the day and on the Masonic Fraternity. Lately however, researches undertaken by Martinists have been successful in unearthing a few official documents which enable us to know more about the founder of Martinism. Members are welcome to make notes on the historical details given here.

From the marriage certificate recently discovered and dated August 27th, 1767, we know the full name and identity of Martinez Pasquales. This is given as: "Messire Jacques de Livron Joachim la Tour de la Case Martines Depasqually", legitimate son of the late Messire de la Tour de la Case and of Dame Suzanne Dumas de Rainau. His address was given as "Parish Sainte-Eulalie, Bordeaux." He was wedded that day to "Damoiselle Marquerite Angelique de Collas", residing in the same parish.

The mode of designation would indicate a person of low nobility but of gentle birth. In other documents, he is given the title of "Ecuyer" or Squire, like his father. This was the first grade of the gentry.

There is conflicting evidence on the question of his date of birth, a thing quite common in those days. His certificate of "Catholicism", dated April 28, 1772, gives his age as 45, according to his own declaration. He would therefore have been born in 1727, at the beginning of the reign of Louis XV.

From the description given on this document, he would be 5 foot 8 or 9 inches tall, with dark hair, wearing a wig and professing to belong to the Roman apostolic and catholic faith. On the other hand, his father's Masonic Patent dated 1738 gives Martinez's age as 28, which would place his date of birth in 1710. It is quite possible however, that this patent should have been dated 1758, in which case the discrepancy would be reduced to 3 years ... which would be fairly accurate for the times.

It is also possible that Martinez passed himself as younger than he was in his certificate of catholicism. Perhaps a third document will turn up one day and settle the question.

We think the Masonic Patent of Martinez' father is quite important from a historical point of view, so we shall give here an English version of the whole text:

> "The 4 Doors of the Temple being opened, by the Power of the Great Architect of the Universe and of Charles Stuard (sic), King of Scotland, Ireland and England, Grand Master of all > Lodges spread over the face of the Earth, The Lodge of Stuard having right of jurisdiction over the French Province of Aix, the 20th of May, 1738, by virtue of our Power and Authority, We, Grand Master of Scottish, Irish and English Masonry, have entrusted our right and power as Grand Master of Lodge to our Respected Master Don Martinez Pasqualis, Squire, aged sixty-seven, born in the Spanish city of Alicante, so that he may direct and build in peace on any point of the Earth, a Temple to the Great Architect, having thus constituted it to this effect and constituting it by virtue of our power good and valid, Amen, Amen, Amen! We, Grand Master of the Lodge of Stuard, order our Deputy Grand-Master to direct our labours and those of his eldest son, the Powerful Master Joachim Don Martinez Pasqualis, aged 28, born in the French City of Grenoble, and this same Patent and Constitution will he remit to him in the usual way before his death or at his pleasure, so that he may in turn enjoy and exercise his rights and powers, having made public this Constitution and Patent of Grand Master of Lodge of Stuard, this 20th of May, in the Grand Lodge of the East and in 1738."

We shall see from this text that Martinez himself was born in France and that his father was born in Spain. Most works of reference that give Martinez as a Portugese Jew are therefore mistaken. Martinez was French-born, of Spanish origin. Researches undertaken in Spain would tend to show that the original spelling of his name was "PASCUALLIS" (spell out) and that his family was descended from converted Jews from Majorca.

(M.O.L. will pause here and repeat any of the above for note-taking).

Now ... what kind of a man was Martinez? Everything tends to show that he was a man of extraordinary abilities. He was however of poor education. His works are extremely difficult to read owing to the poorness of their style. Martinez had many faults: He was given to making irresponsible verbal statements. He was imprudent with money. He was inclined to communicate his secrets too easily ... and used to promise for a given date Rituals and Instructions which he could not prepare in time. He met with strong opposition from the great Masonic Obediences once it was clear that he was not going to participate in their actions in the normally expected way.

But in spite of all these faults ... this man was able to attach to him some of the most brilliant personalities of his time. His disciples, although ready to admit among themselves to his human foibles ... had an unshakable faith in his mission and the greatest loyalty to his person. Martinez' own faith was so powerful that he could make his disciples share it and surmount all obstacles. Let us see what has been said of him:

The Baron de Turkheim, writing to Prince Christian of Hesse-Darmstadt said: "...This I can say of this so-called Jew of whom you speak: he was the most extraordinary man I was given to know..."

The Abbé Fournié, writing to Franz von Bader said: "...he was the vehicle of one of the Seven Major Spirits..."

Our Venerated Master Papus wrote: "Martinez belonged to those evolved people, the chosen ones, whom the encyclopedias call 'the Illuminates.'"

What was that power that inspired with such a fire of enthusiasm, people who were not simpletons but worldly characters who had delved into sundry activities before meeting him?

The answer was quite simple: Martinez was a DOER and not a dreamer given to vague speculations. Martinez did not convince his disciples by the persuasion of his arguments, the impeachable quality of his logic, the awe-inspiring nature of his erudition and knowledge. He brought them into the Temple, he placed them in the Circle, he lighted the Luminaries ... and he peopled the empty chairs before their very eyes with visitors from the Invisible Realm. What lecture or discourse was then necessary??? Martinez brought a palpable proof of the working of his system. Once having witnessed his power ... the disciples had no doubts left.

I will end by quoting Saint-Martin, answering a letter from Willermoz who was complaining that he could not repeat the operations that Martinez had performed:

> I applaud your perseverance, Très Cher Maître, and I shall never cease to encourage you in persevering. It is not by our success that we must judge ourselves but on the state of peace, of confidence, of hope, of humility and of courage in which we find ourselves. The rest is in the hands of HIM WHO LEADS US and if we could but remember always that HE OWES US NOTHING, patience would support us ever and would put a term to the whispers...." (May 15th, 1773).

(M.L.: Repeat any part requested, however, have no discussion).

Close accordingly.

Dear Brothers & Sisters: #96

At our last conventicle we studied briefly the personality of the Founder of Martinism as such: Martinez Pasquales. We saw that his name was slightly different from the way we spell it, but we shall go on using this name for the sake of simplicity.

We shall not delve any deeper for the time being into the history of Martinez because this will be taken care of in the conventicles which will be devoted exclusively to the history of the Order. We feel at this stage it is better to acquaint you with the personality and works of Saint-Martin (as we have done) and with the personality and work of Martinez, before undertaking any serious study of the history of Martinism and of the Martinist Order. Without some knowledge of the doctrinal background and of the different elements of Martinism, such a study would prove frustrating. By studying in detail certain aspects of the doctrine and of the activities of the Founders, all the pieces will fall into place when we look at the general history of the movement.

You already know that Martinez founded an Order of Elus-Cohen (Elect Priests), composed exclusively of high degree Freemasons and that he taught in its Temples a particular system of philosophy based on the Re-integration of Man into his original virtues and powers. This system had two aspects: one doctrinal, and the other, practical. The first, known in the Elus-Cohen circles as the "General Doctrine", treats of God, of the Universe and of Man; of the Fall and of its consequences. The second which is called the "Particular Doctrine", concerns the theory and technique of the Theurgic practices which we call "operative Martinism."

The "general doctrine" is to be found in the work of Martinez called: "Traité de la Réintégration des Etres dans leurs premieres propriétés, vertus et puissances spiriteulles et divines". (Treatise on the Reintegration of Beings into their First Estates, Virtues and Powers, both Spiritual and Divine.) This work existed only in manuscript form, being copied by hand by Martinez' assistants, particularly by Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin. It is now very rare. IT IS ALSO VERY OBSCURE AND DIFFICULT TO FOLLOW.

We shall now begin our study of the "General Doctrine" of Martinez. Before we do so it is well to underline the extremely esoteric character of this doctrine, due to an extreme form of anthropomorphism ... that is a "personification" of the forces and beings described.

IT IS UP TO EACH STUDENT TO TRANSLATE THE TEXT INTO METAPHYSICAL TERMS.

THE GENERAL DOCTRINE

Before the present Universe was created, God emanated Spiritual Beings who prevaricated. These emanated Spirits, having their origin in the fourfold divine essence, were distinguishable by their virtues, their powers and their names. They formed four ontological classes infinitely superior and more powerful than the Cherubim, the Seraphim, the Archangels and the Angels who were created later ... because these Emanated Spirits held within themselves a part of the Divine Power.

Directly emanated from the Divinity and innate in God, like the seed of the reproduction of forms in the sundry organism that constitutes the Universe, these Spiritual Beings alone are real and imperishable. They have a personal, absolute, eternal existence and will always exist in the Circle of the Divinity.

Let me try to define here the nature of these Beings who were not Angels.

We find a parallel in the Gnosis with its "Aeons". God, having within Himself all the possibilities, knows them all. But he leads into being only that which he wishes, concedes and approves by reason of His infinite wisdom. He leaves in a state of non-being, all that He refutes, rejects and disapproves of, by reason of the same wisdom. He cannot however prevent his own divine nature from knowing and bearing these last ones, because God cannot limit His own knowledge.

It so happened then ... that some of these Spiritual Entities to whom God had given, in himself, a personality, by the fact that he knew them and made them distinct from the divine emptiness ... some of these Spiritual Entities, I repeat, rebelled. They abandoned the plane of non-being or non-existence, wanting to acquire an existence. God had left them free to move as they wished but on the plane of non-existence only where there was no danger that they would actualize the Evil which some of them held latent in them.

Once having passed to the plane of existence, they exteriorized that Perversity which some of them had in their own nature.

It is this passing on to a plane that was forbidden them, or was "out of bounds", that constitutes the Initial Revolt.

The Rebel Spirits then wanted to play a more important part than the one that had been ordained for them. They wanted, in turn, to emanate spiritual beings whom would depend on them alone. They pretended therefore ... to give birth to third and fourth causes. They attempted to transform themselves from second causes to first causes.

DISCUSSION / QUESTIONS

This then, Brothers & Sisters, is Martinez' version of the First Revolt, which, you will note, is not that of the angels familiar to the student of Christian Theology ... but of Beings which were Divine, higher and anterior to the Angels.

I shall not carry our study of the General Doctrine any further tonight. Let me just say however, that the idea expressed by Martinez that the creation of our Universe was preceded by other creations, is confirmed by other traditions. Furthermore, if we refer to the first passages of Genesis, we see that:

"IN THE BEGINNING, GOD CREATED THE HEAVEN AND EARTH ..."

then immediately the text proceeds with the creation of the Earth:

"THE EARTH WAS WITHOUT FORM AND VOID ....."

It would seem that Moses had no information on the first creation .. that of Heaven.

Dear Companions: #97

As I told you in my last discussion with you, my address tonight will be entitled: How to Heal a Broken Aura. I told you that the human aura is man's spiritual skin or spiritual covering. Now ... how do you protect your physical skin or covering from friction and breakage in the outer world? You cover it, or protect it with matter of a stronger substance than the physical body. Well: the same law applies to the other vehicles of man! The aura must be protected by a stronger mantle or covering ... and what is that? Spiritual Fire : Light. Love.

Spiritual Fire is the healing power of God on all planes.

You ask: "How can one consciously use this Spiritual Fire to protect one's own aura, or that of another, from becoming torn?" It is the simplicity of the operation which makes it difficult ... because somehow we seem to have gotten the idea that for anything to be worth something it has to be terribly difficult or complex.

The answer is: Visualize and believe and FEEL yourself completely immersed in Light. A vital, vibrant light. This must be taken up as a daily practise before starting the day. Try it and see what happens!!! As your consciousness increases and your awareness develops you will discover that this Light is in all things (just as Jacob Boehme tried to describe it), only most people are unaware of it ... and hence they don't use it.

As man's consciousness develops, as your consciousness develops, more and more will awareness of the tremendous forces that surround you be noticed. THEY ARE THERE FOR YOU TO USE AND SHARE WITH OTHERS.

This Light that we speak of, I just referred to as Spiritual Fire. It is, in fact, the very Essence of Fire itself ... or that radiance of our Heavenly Father. It is the Essence of Life itself, that is why it is a ray of such vital protection.

According to, or depending upon your individual mentality and degree, this may sound all too complicated or too simple. In these talks with you, I am striving to simplify many things, for, as I just said, man's tendency is to complicate and involve fundamental truths.

Just what are you doing when you mentally bathe yourself in Spiritual Light or Fire? You are consciously and with serious intent placing yourself in a position to receive the healing rays or vibrations that surround you at all times.

Fellow Companions: the door to most of our troubles (large or small), could well be labeled with one word - FEAR. Fear in some form or other. Think of all the vices of man ... 95% of them, if not 100% have their basis or origin in fear ... or the absence of love.

Think that over.

To heal another's aura is very difficult, in fact impossible, unless you know how to go about it the right way. Many people who go into spiritual healing will experience failure and become frustrated because of having never learned the fundamentals. Otherwise we can only teach each one how to heal his own aura for and by himself. (One must first surcharge one's own aura with the Spiritual Fire to such an extent that it over-flows ... and then you can heal and help all those with whom you come into contact.)

The early Christians had easy access to this Spiritual Fire (or one phase of the Holy Spirit) because the aura of the Cosmic Christ was so potently felt by them ... as a result they carried this Spiritual Fire into all their activities and their auras alone performed many healing miracles.

I am striving to use very simple terms for what are indeed very abstract truths, so as to make as plain as possible what I am endeavoring to tell you. You could ask: "Whence comes this Spiritual or Invisible Fire when we visualize it about us?" Well ... it is there all the time! It is everywhere. Your visualization simply concentrates it and brings it into focus. (NOTE - Your previous instruction on concentration & visualization should render all this quite clear. Ed.).

The Holy Fire (or one phase of the Holy Spirit), is a fact in nature and every living soul has access to it. All that is required is the WILL and DESIRE to reach for it and to be in it and of it. Become aware of it and its all-pervading protection from all ill. Learn how to draw it around you like a cloak. VISUALIZATION is the simple technique! It requires no other magic but consciousness of its existence and a desire to become a part of it. It can be likened unto the man who walks in the sunlight or in the shadow. Both are there. The choice is his.

In the realms of matter, the things of the earth and out of the earth are important to sustain and repair the physical body or structure.

In the realms of Mind and Spirit, the things of the Mind and of the Spirit become the sustainers of Mind & Spirit.

Surely this is not too abstruse to comprehend?

The human aura, being an "in-between" condition, requires both Mind & Spirit, using matter as a vehicle, to repair and sustain it. Light is of the realm of Spirit. Visualizing is of the realm of the Mind. By "visualizing yourselves in Light" you are unconsciously, yet consciously co-ordinating both mental and spiritual faculties and setting them to work.

When trying to help another whose aura you have reason to believe is shattered or torn, visualize such an one completely bathed or immersed in Light. Have no fear that this can hurt anyone. Spiritual Light never hurts anyone. Darkness? --- yes. Light? --- never.

If, through your effort, you succeed in placing Light around another, the aura will instinctively absorb that Light and automatically be healed, for the spiritual cells of the aura will co-ordinate. Remember before you begin the exercise to first visualize Light all around yourself; saturate yourself with Light. Then visualize the Light all

Remember before you begin the exercise to first visualize Light all around yourself; saturate yourself with Light. Then visualize the Light all around and pervading the one who you are endeavouring to help. If you can have yourself or those whom you desire to help actually IN sunlight it will aid your efforts.

The glory of Light is all about you and yet: you see it not.

As was noted at the last conventicle, there are persons who have a very exhausting aura. They are really unconscious and unintentional vampires and have given rise to many legends. By exhausting, I mean that they actually do exhaust all those who are around them. They have a porus or spongy aura and they unconsciously absorb and draw vitality from those around them.

In such cases you cannot help them as easily at first ... as you can protect your own self. Follow the same course: visualize yourself bathed in Light and protected by this Light. If your visualization is intense enough the Light will effectually shut out your aura from all that surrounds it. This is why some teachers refer to this Light as a "Wall of Protection."

Man is only now beginning to sense and discover the invisible rays and vibrations that surround him. As his consciousness increases and his ability to use these powers constructively develops ... he will learn more and more of the wonders that surround him at all times. The first step in such increased consciousness is AWARENESS of the thing itself. The fact that one becomes aware of another's aura is an indication of the awakening of consciousness in that particular sphere. The next step is control and co-ordination or balanced activity. This same law applies to all of man's vehicles. But first he has to become aware before he can use anything.

Therefore: regard with joy the fact that you are aware of the auras of others ... but do not stop there! Use your increased consciousness for good ... shedding Light and Love. He who misuses any powers, not only loses the powers entrusted to him but finds the results of his misuse returning to him like boomerangs from which there is no escape. When man surrounds himself with The Light, his aura not only becomes impervious to other auric emanations, but he can associate with all types of auras without any detriment to himself while at the same time being of great help to all those whom he contacts. Look about you and you will find living examples of what I mean.

In time man will learn to heal through the aura when he learns the value of those things of which he is presently unaware. Let us hope that YOU are learning and putting this knowledge to good use.

Brethren: to you it is given to do much for mankind. Stretch forth your mind, expand your souls ... and permit the Light of the Holy Spirit to shine through you.

Here is the technique and prayer to use when you are about to visualize for another's healing:

THE TECHNIQUE

"The Cocoon of Light" "The Wall of Protection" "The Healing Flame"

(1) Visualize your own self completely inbued and surrounded with the Light. See it streaming forth from you.

(2) Use this prayer when you are about to visualize for yourself or for another's healing:

> "May the Spiritual Healing Light of God that > pervades all things, surround, heal and protect > you (give here the name of the person).
> Be full of Light and Love.
> You are full of Light and Love.
> You are protected by the Invisible Light of Love."

(3) Now, visualize Light completely enveloping the person (be it yourself or others). Repeat the last line of the prayer three times. Feel and mean every word of it. While saying these words visualize the Light actually shining.

What you actually accomplish by this mantram is the focussing of your own consciousness to the Reality that surrounds you. By becoming aware of the Light, you then proceed to absorb it and then to redistribute it. The effects and results you will accomplish with this operation will seem nothing less than magical. They will far exceed any attempts I can make to illustrate or describe them to you.

Well: you have been given the method! The rest is up to you.

Perhaps you might like to ask why, if Light is everywhere, it is necessary to visualize it surrounding anyone. Is it presumptuous on our part, if Light IS, that we should have to visualize it to help another? If everything is immersed in this Spiritual Fire, or Light ... what need is there for us to visualize something that IS? Remember the constant reference to physical analogies in the spiritual realms. In reality, the reference should be - "As above, so below; as in the Spirit, so in Matter." But to make things clearer for you, we reverse the analogy to - "As below, so above."

On the physical plane, in order to make fire visible through flame, you cause physical friction to bring into physical manifestation what is everywhere - Fire.

Likewise: in the realm of mind, Light is everywhere, but so as to have this Spiritual Fire or Light manifest, it requires friction in the mental realm produced by Thought. Thought produces in the realm of mind, the same effect as physical activity or friction produces on the physical plane.

Friction in matter releases fire ... thought, in the mental realm, is the catalyst of Spiritual Fire or Light. Have I made this point clear?

Remember always that thought has vibrational power. Just as man is now devoting most of his energy to physical science, he is nevertheless turning more and more attention to real mental science, for physical science is leading him deeper and deeper into the invisible causes which are aback of the physical world.

I have told you something about the healing power of the Spiritual Fire and Light. The process is called by some mystics, - - "Holding the one to be healed in the Light." The phrase is correct, but it often fails simply because those who so glibly use it do not always understand all its implications.

In our present stage of understanding, we have come to acknowledge that mental science and medical science often overlap. The symptomatology of everyday conditions is easily recognized and we seek to drench the system with medicaments, or we rush to a psychiatrist, psychologist or psychoanalyst to have the condition corrected. Such conditions cannot be permanently CURED by any of this latter group for the simple reason that: as the condition originates within ... the cure must also come from within ... and by one's own self. Else there is no complete merit developed. Here are some of the symptoms we have in mind:

For instance: co-relating the mental and physical reactions, we know that fear and worry seriously affect the kidneys, from our knowledge of the part that adrenalin plays in the time of great fear. Sustained and continuous worry break down the kidneys.

Emotional crises, large or small, directly affect the heart and therefore the pulse and circulation.

Desire expressed by appetite, affects the digestion and the functions of assimilation and excretion.

Great and prolonged grief affects the brain cells and nervous system.

An unyielding, inflexible and rigid attitude of mind tends to give rise to stiff joints and "arthritis".

Hate consumes ... not only the mind that indulges it but the tissues that support the vehicle through which it expresses.

On the other hand, intense love of the right kind undoubtedly gives greater will to live and a stronger hold on life, hence a quickening of the vital organs.

Anticipation and "looking forward" quickens all the nerve centers ... keeps them "on their toes" and vitalizes the whole system. (There is far greater real pleasure in anticipation ... than in realization with the resultant "let down.")

Now, in each of the "negative" cases just instanced, there is a consumption of energy and a consumption that spells waste ... for there is no adequate compensation of a constructive nature for the energy that has been expended. Where there is consumption of anything, there is fire ... not simply flame, of course, but consumption of tissues and material. It is the same fire we have been speaking about but it has been wasted and wrongly used. We can mis-use spiritual things and spiritual power just as well as we mis-use so-called material things. We all know full well how wasteful material flame and fire can be. It is the same with Spiritual Flame and Spiritual Fire.

So, instead of drenching the system everytime with medicines, why not stop the causes right at their points of origin ... the mind? Instead of taking kidney pills, why not stop worrying? Instead of taking purgatives and antacids why not curb the compulsive appetite? Stop stuffing the body with unbalanced meals. Eat properly, see that the diet has sufficient crude fiber, that refined white flour and refined sugar products are held to a minimum and that sufficient fresh fruit and vegetables are included daily.

Why not stop hating and start loving? Cherish appreciation and abandon resentments. Nurture a cordial disposition and turn away from manifesting an unpleasant attitude most of the time. Do not fear ... Face facts; meet them courageously and the causes of fear will vanish. Do not become unduly agitated over everything that occurs. Cultivate poise, balance and equilibrium. Do not revile against the world. Make the world your friend. YOU CAN DO IT.

It should be quite simple to understand now, that whenever we feel any such symptoms ... a broken aura is indicated. Others will notice the results of your broken aura, even though they may not see the aura itself, for the feelings we are aware of are expressed to others around us. For instance, how often do we hear it said about someone, "He is so impossible or unbearable today." "I can't do anything with her, she's in one of her moods." Now the way these statements are phrased show that the moods referred to are not the normal or permanent ones but something unusual. The unusual attracts attention. Such moods or indications are not cured with drugs or tranquilizers ... but by the mind and spirit of the individual. The fact that one feels himself to be "persona non grata" at times, when normally he is sought by all ... ought to be a sign that something is wrong.

Do we not, each and all, experience such periods? Well, why not try healing your broken aura at such times and note the seeming miracle? Knowing the sources from which these symptoms arise, why not try, by the strength of your mind and spirit, the abolition of the causes: worry, fear, anger, hate, resentment, revenge, gross appetite, emotional extremes .....

There is something to be said for the alleged "European culture" that teaches the control of the emotions (it is not "good form" to allow one's emotions to become too publicly known, seen or felt). CONTROL is what is needed ... not repression or concealment.

So, when you become aware of the need for healing, hold yourself or the one you wish to help "in the light" using the formula given earlier ... and note how quickly nature herself will repair the damage.

Whenever you feel out of sorts or on edge with the world, just remember - - it is not the world's fault - - it is your own fault - - and YOU must repair the breaches in YOUR OWN broken aura ... for breaches in any sort of wall allow free entrance to just the very things it was constructed to keep out ... and if you have a breach in your aura ... it lets in the destructive vibrations, thought-forms and ideas that radio science and astro-physics has demonstrated the atmosphere about us is surcharged with everywhere and at all times.

It is necessary to have a good knowledge of what the aura really is, so as to understand its importance and the thought you should give it. Some people, when pressed for their concepts concerning the aura, say that, to them, it is something in the nature of a "sort of gas" all around the body. Well, this idea is not bad ... but it is more than a gas! It is a compound of several things. Basically, it is composed of "emanations" not unlike those of radium in its active state. But these emanations do not all come exclusively from the physical body. They come from the physical, etheric and astral vehicles and also from the mental "stuff" or photons.

The etheric body extends only a very short distance about the physical body and is almost perfectly concentric with it. The astral body is not concentric with the physical but "overlaps" it about 12 - 16 inches and its aura therefore gives extension, although more impalpably and tenuously. The mental aura goes to a considerable distance, sometimes several feet, and this is why you feel the presence of another personality in the same room with you, although it may be dark and you cannot see the person.

If a person enters a room while you are facing in the opposite direction, you will very often "feel" them even before you turn and see them. When entering a strange room, one can often tell whether or not another is present, though unseen, simply through contact with the mental aura of the other person.

So the emanations of all these vehicles: etheric, astral, physical and mental ... are mixed in what is commonly called "the aura" and a break in the emanations of one, is apt to cause a similar gap in the others.

While in school, in science class, did you ever lay a sheet of thin paper over the poles of a horseshoe magnet and then dust fine iron filings upon the paper? ... Try it, and note how perfectly symetrically those filings arrange themselves. This is because they are conforming to the power of the magnetic field. You cannot see that magnetic field ordinarily, but this simple experiment proves it is there.

It is the same way with the auric field. If there is a gap and you could do some experiment similar to that with the magnet, you would find , whereas normally the field was harmonious and symmetrical in its lines of force and energy, the presence of a gap would prove the broken aura by the absence of lines of force in the locations affected.

Normally, the emanations described flow together harmoniously. With a broken aura, the flow is impeded. Separations amongst the emanations occur. These express as various kinds of distress and such signs of distress should not be ignored any more than cutting, breaking or otherwise abrading your physical skin, ... for remember ... the aura is the spiritual skin.

In this mass of auric emanations, there are vortices of energy that are embryonic sense-centers and these become more and more definite as one develops one's spiritual powers and insight, or as one evolutionally develops the individual vehicles: etheric, astral and mental, into true bodies.

There is a continuous interchange of the sub-photonic matter of these emanations of the auric skin, with the ethers ... the chemical, life, light and reflecting ethers. It is due partly to this continuous interchange that the phenomenon of consciousness is made possible. When, under the influence of an anaethetic one loses consciousness, it is because the etheric flow is shut off from the brain and the cerebro-spinal nervous system.

These details are not cited here to make the subject of the broken aura more confusing, but in order to show that there is a very definite reason for having the aura in the first place. The aura serves a unique and all-important purpose and anything that does that ... deserves immediate attention just as seriously as any of the more apparent portions of the physical vehicle.

The important point to be emphasized is this: by taking care of your aura, you are helping to improve and perfect the vehicles - - visible and invisible - - and this means nothing more than improving and perfecting your HEALTH, well-being, and all the other positive factors that go to make for superlative living.

One must take care of their mind and keep it healthy, or they will be worse than useless to themselves and to the world ... and yet no human being has ever seen a mind. Do not therefore downplay or overlook this subject of the aura just because you may not have experienced it as yet. You have never seen your mind either ... but you would be quite indignant if someone asserted that you didn't have one.

In the not too distant future, this subject of the aura and certain other metaphysical principles, will be found to belong ... not within the realm of the mystic or occult ... but within the domain of everyday practical science.

Go to work upon yourself. Study yourself. Wonder about yourself and your surroundings. Great results nearly always ensue from comparatively simple origins. Most obvious of all will be your own astonishment at the attitude of the world - of your friends - toward you. It will seem to you that you yourself are the same as ever ... and that you have done nothing at all ... yet the world seems to draw closer and closer to you in the most friendly way.

And yet, Companions, it will have been you who have done the changing.

You have been working with subtle powers and energies, in subtle phases of matter or substance, in the subtlety of mental activity ... unseen and unknown to anyone else ... but the OUTER RESULTS will make their effect known most potently.

Let the Spiritual Fire, Light and Love do their inner work upon you, and upon your aura, using the techniques outlined. THEY NEVER FAIL. They CANNOT fail because they are divine and they are co-operating with the divine in you. DIVINE POWER NEVER FAILS.

Study this lesson and the last one on the broken aura (#94), until everything is clear. IT IS IMPORTANT. We have brought it forth at this time because so many people need it. Heal your own aura. Then heal the broken aura of others.

Even if you are not yet clairvoyant ... we have given you the signs of it and the indications that point to it. And we have given you, as well, the simple method of how to look for and perceive the aura. Do not get the idea that auras are that difficult to see! If you want to see them...LOOK FOR THEM!!!

You have the methods, now prove your ability to use this knowledge and your right to have it.

Questions to test yourself on your comprehension:

1. What salient thought has this lesson left with you?

2. What is the human aura?

3. What is a brittle aura and how does it become brittle?

4. Do you begin to understand the importance of the "introspection exercise" given ever since Liber 1?

5. When we bathe ourselves or others in THE LIGHT what are we doing?

6. Does Spiritual Light or Fire manifest where there is no love?

7. How can one see the aura?

8. Have we more than one aura?

9. Explain the technique to be used to invoke The Light.

10. Do you have a better understanding of the importance of the command "Love thine enemies"?

Emile Dantinne Occult Writer

It is true that Dantinne nevertheless signed several studies devoted to occultism with his patronymic (changed by adding an extra 'n'). In this way, he contributed to the Lausanne review "Inconnues" (Unknowns), edited by Pierre Genillard, which included several articles written by him about rosicrucian esotericism. He also wrote prefaces to each of the four volumes of 'La Pensée et les secrets du sâr Péladan' (Thoughts and secrets of Sâr Péladan) by his friend Edward Bertholet. With him, he published in 1952 'Les lettres inédites de Stanislas de Guaita au Sâr Joséphin Péladan' (Unpublished letters from Stanislas de Guaita to Sâr Joséphin Péladan).

However, special mention must be made of his remarkable biography of his master, published in 1948 under the title of 'L'Oeuvre et la Pensée de Péladan' (Life and thoughts of Peladan), sub-titled 'La Philosophie rosicrucienne' (The Rosicrucian Philosophy). In this way, Dantinne wished to clear the name of his initiator in a "synthesis of his philosophy, which he himself did not write down, but the true merit of which is to have given the Rose+Croix its living meaning." This is what he wrote about his own work a few years after its publication:

"When I introduced the 'Doctrine and Works of Péladan' to the general public, my aim was not only to attract the attention of the intellectual world to this great unknown personality, and to try to establish a reputation for Péladan which would be even greater than that which literary critics had achieved for Baudelaire and Rimbaud, those great visionaries of poetry; my aim was above all, to open, to minds which were enthusiastic about ideals, the door of the Rosicrucian Philosophy, which had been closed for too long. In fact, this revelation had not gone beyond the atrium of the Temple restored by Péladan."

We will return to the reports of Dantinne and Péladan as necessary at the appropriate time.

TESTIMONIES

Here now, by way of an interlude, are some testimonies about this man, from various sources, which are not without interest, and which help us to portray him. The first comes from Lydie Martin, a French Martinist, who took an active part in the affairs of the FUDOSI, and it is contained in a letter written to Lelarge, dated 3 May 1936, exactly one month after the death of the son-in-law of the correspondent whom we understand is being referred to here:

"Our good master, Sâr Hiéronymous, also sent me a whole treasure of comforting thoughts, of sublime teachings and ... his blessing, of which we have all felt the effects. I ask you, my beloved brother, to thank him on my behalf, for you would be able to express better than I could, all my affection and my infinite gratitude for the prayers he says for us to the Divine Master. He is so close to Him, and his soul is so beautiful that he must obtain much for those for whom he beseeches Him."

Again from Lydie Martin, on the same subject in different circumstances, still about Dantinne: "Grant us a little of the divine powers he brings forth."

Here now is another testimony, written in a letter dated 25 October 1938, from Jules Rochat de l'Abbaye, grand master of the French University Rose+Croix, to Lelarge and Mallinger:

"As a good egotist, I will begin with myself, as I hasten to announce the profound impression I felt immediately the first time I encountered our Grand Master. His bright look, which probes the depths of your heart, and that expression of infinite goodness, penetrate you, and you immediately feel you are in the presence of one of the disciples that God likes to send you to instruct and guide you in the accomplishment of His will for the advancement of His Kingdom."

Spencer and Ralph Lewis, successive imperators of AMORC, both wrote a few lines about Dantinne, which show their admiration. The work of the former, "The Secret Doctrines of Jesus", offers a dedication "To Sâr Hiéronymus of Belgium, whose spiritual value and purity of character lend definite charm to the magnificence of his wisdom." Here is a testimony by Ralph Lewis on his meeting with the Imperator of the Rose+Croix for Europe in 1936:

"I was facinated by one of the people. He was standing right in the middle behind the table at the end of which forms the closed part of the horse shoe (of the table). He was directly opposite me. I did not wish to appear impolite; however, as if attracted by a magnetic force, I was conscious of the fact that I had once more turned towards him and caught his eye. He would have attracted attention anywhere. He was tall, of handsome stature, neat, dressed in classic fashion. He wore a white, neatly-trimmed beard, which gave him a look of discreet distinction (...) From where I was, I could not tell the colour of his eyes. To me, they looked like sparkling precious stones, like points of light, to describe them perhaps more accurately."

"(...) He then smiled and held out his hand to me as a sign of welcome. When he smiled, his whole face lit up with a radiant brightness. Then I became conscious of what it is that master artists tried to capture on their canvasses in their effort to make their subjects - saints, mystics and great philosophers of the past - appear to radiate the esoteric light they had within them."

Finally, I would like to recount one last testimony by Jean Mallinger. The reader can make of it what he will.

"In daily life, Sâr Hiéronymous was also a perfect hypnotist and an astonishing diviner. Thus, he harmoniously combined knowledge with its practical applications.

"He also had a special gift, which his friend Léon Lelarge, and I have witnessed for ourselves more than once: he was able to stop rain completely and send the clouds to another area. That would seem improbable to some people. However, I can only say, in good faith, that I have seen it!"

MAN'S LOVE AFFAIR WITH GOD

Meditation is a subject that is both popular and greatly confused in modern times. To the Eastern mind it comes natural because the religious conditioning of people of the East is more inner-centered. Western religion has been centered in ritual and ceremony and wordy prayers. The follower of Judaism and Christianity, for instance, has had little experience in the withinness of spiritual seeking. His God has always been "out there" or "up there," and his prayers have been a reaching out and up, an attempt to relate to or communicate with a Deity who is much like an absentee landlord of the world.

So, the tendency in attempts at mediation is to try to experience inner communion with the same kind of tense reaching. As Teilhard de Chardin, the Catholic priest-paleontologist, puts it, "The presence is so universal and we are so surrounded and transfixed by it--there is no room to fall down and adore it, even within ourselves." The goal is not to reach something, even to reach for something. It is letting go of the very desire to reach. There is really nowhere to go, nothing to do. We simply get ourselves out of the way and let the transcendence of us become the living reality of us.

Plotinus had an amazingly simple and yet extremely dynamic insight. He was probably one of the very first persons to conceive of man as being at the center of a totally supportive universe. He suggests that we let the soul banish all that disturbs it and the body let go of its tensions, and then think of Spirit as streaming, pouring, rushing, and shining into us from all sides while we stand quiet. In other words, God is seeking us! This is a vital prerequisite in dealing with the meditation approach to prayer. To engage in what I call the "love affair with God," it is necessary to hold the conviction that there is a center within you and within the universe, and that at that Center of convergence with the Infinite within you, your self is the emanation or image-likeness of God, and thus totally good.

There is little point in going to a bank for a withdrawal unless you know that you have an account there with adequate deposits. There is no purpose in engaging in meditation unless you believe that God is a Presence that is present, unless you believe that there is a "point of total convergence" at the root of you where you are (not can be, or "dear Lord help me to be") created in the image-likeness of God. Meditation is not the means of painting your inner self with a gilding of divinity. It is, rather, the gentle call to "awake thou that sleepest," to realize and release the Allness of love, and to "open out a way whence the imprisoned splendor may escape."

At the very root and center of you, there is only God, which means there is a point in you where you are only God. "Be still," says the Psalmist,"and know that I AM god" (46:10). At the Center where there is only God, who is love, I am God and I am love. It is this knowing that God is and I AM which brings us into a consciousness of "total synthesis." This is the great love affair with God. This is pure meditation. It has no object, seeks no experience, desires no thing, works for no demonstration. It does not even try to create oneness; it is Oneness, a great fusing of light at the Center, "the same light that lighteth every man coming into the world."

Meditation is the path you cut for yourself while seeking to get beyond the limitations of human consciousness into the transcendence of spiritual unity. It is and must be a continuing adventure--and proficiency and progress in depth can only come through practice. You will blaze your own trail, create your own gospel, be your own teacher, and follow your own master, which is the God-self of you at the heart of you which is created in the image-likeness of God who is love.

How does this meditation process relate to what we have traditionally called prayer? It must be said that meditation is irrelevant to the old concept of duality, where prayer is reaching out and up to God, asking for things or for mercy. In the concept of unity in which the meditation process functions, prayer is a projection of a consciousness which must first be experienced. Meditation is the inward experience, the in-building, the recharging, the mobilizing of the energy. Prayer is the conditioning of outer things, experiences, relationships, by speaking the word of truth. Thus prayer should not be asking or begging, but affirmation and accepting--a kind of letting.

You may have a great desire to see a cessation of war and of "man's inhumanity to man" in the world. And you may have prayed long and hard for peace through years of religious practice. Perhaps now you can see in a totally new sense that love is the answer. How do you pray for great waves of love to sweep over the earth, healing and harmonizing and protecting all people? There is a popular song that says, "Let there be peace on earth and let it begin with me."

To truly pray for peace in the world, we must find the Center of peace and love in ourselves. For what is peace except the all-pervading activity and energy of love that unites people in a way that completes and fulfills them, and joins them by what is deepest in themselves. There is a consciousness of inner peace arising out of the fullness of transcendental love. Prayer is the projection of this realization out into the world of men and experience.

However, we can project only what we have or what we are. To pray for world peace in the concern over war or in the feeling of fear and insecurity or with a sense of revulsion at widespread injustice and crime is to pray with empty vessels. In the old days a volunteer fire department was composed of individuals who responded to the fire bell by joining a bucket brigade that conveyed buckets of water to the fire from the nearest water source. How futile would have been this process if each volunteer fireman had picked up a bucket and raced to the fire to throw his bucket of nothing on the fire. In this instance the bucket was useless without the water with which to extinguish the fire. And the prayer of words, no matter how fond the hopes or sincere the wishes of the one who prays, is but a conveyance of empty buckets. Or, in the case of the person praying in a great consciousness of fear or worry, the buckets could even contain inflammable material that would heighten the fire.

Meditation is the key to the storehouse of power which prayer can effectively project. As the fireman went first to the source of water, in prayer we must go first to the depth of our inmost self, not to get the power, but to realize that "I AM the power." Thus, meditation cannot be a tense reaching for anything. It must be the immersion of ourselves in the Allness of life in which we have true being. Meditation is not trying to create oneness with God, or even to seek it as a "gift of God". To try to effect oneness is to acknowledge twoness. It is simply going deep within ourselves, away from the point where there appears to be duality, to the point where oneness is all there is. Then, resting in that oneness, feeling the fullness of love, which at this point is the only reality of us, we are ready to speak the word of love.

We have traditionally prayed to God for things. This is an idea that must be unlearned, a practice that must be changed. First we follow the ideal, "Be still and know that I AM God." We get the consciousness of oneness, the feeling of the Presence of Infinite Love and Life and Power which is present in us--and as us. This is meditation. And then we speak the word of truth. Praying, not to God, but from the consciousness of God. Praying, not to make things happen, but to accept them on a level beyond appearances where that which we seek is already done. Praying, not to change things or set them right, but to accept things and see them rightly.

If you would pray for peace in the world, or for harmony between men or nations, or for love in the lives of lonely or discouraged persons, turn from the condition and your great concern about it to find and feel your own point of oneness in God, your own awareness of the Allness of love. Dwell as constantly upon this as two lovers dwell in the feeling of mutual love and adoration. Celebrate the reality of you that is created in and of love. Know that you are in love with all God's creation and that all things and people are in love with you. Then, when this becomes a reality to you, your bucket is filled--you are ready to act on the fire.

Brothers & Sisters:

You will recall in Liber 27 we expressed the feeling that the papers in John Yarker's Notebook are far too important to overlook, but we also observed we have a hard time deciphering them and we felt since we could do only an imperfect job that, perhaps, many Companions might find reading them too tedious. We therefore said we would give actual photocopies so that those interested can enjoy "fighting" with them ... and those uninterested can just leave them alone.

Well ... as promised ... we have included in this Liber a photocopy of one of the lectures. We would like to say that the original copies we have are slightly clearer than the reproductions given here and anyone who might get stuck on a word can write us, tell us exactly the page and paragraph and we will try to help as much as we can. We know these lectures will be of immense interest to our Freemasonic brethren.

Have fun!

Dear Brothers & Sisters: #99

We continue with our study of the teachings of Martinez Pasqualez. So far we have seen that Martinez' "General Doctrine" tells us that before our own Universe was created, God emanated Spiritual Beings who prevaricated. We have learned that some of these Entities existed only in the Mind of God who kept them on a plane of non-existence because of the evil potentialities He knew them to possess.

What Martinez called the "Initial Revolt" was the passing of these Entities from the plane of non-existence to that of existence, or being. Being "of God" these Entities emanated from the First Cause, and therefore, as Second Causes, had inherited some of the Divine Powers. Further, they were brought on to the plane of Existence through their own will. Once having brought themselves into being, they in turn wanted to give birth to Spiritual beings and so usurp the functions of the First Cause. They manifested on the plane of existence where they now were, the potential evil they harboured, evil which they now exteriorized.

In order to prevent the multiplication of the Absolute Evil which these Beings could spread ad infinitum by virtue of their powers, God created the Material Universe to be a limited and localized place where these Entities could act and exercise their evil impulses, isolated from communications with Himself.

In other words --- the Material Universe was created to be the prison of evil, thus to prevent it from spreading elsewhere.

PAUSE FOR DISCUSSION. IS EVERYTHING CLEAR SO FAR? NOTE: THIS "MATERIAL UNIVERSE" WAS ONE BOUNDED BY FORCE -- THIS WAS NOT THE DENSE PHYSICAL UNIVERSE WHICH WAS NOT YET IN EXISTENCE.)

We can now understand what Origen meant when he said that the object of the material Creation was not to make good things ... but to prevent the making of bad things!

The Divinity then proceeded to give to this prison a warden. It brought into being a second emanation, the Primitive Adam. Primitive Adam was provided with three gifts: the Thought, the Image and the Nature of his creator. Adam was perpetually opposed to the Prevaricating Spirits imprisoned in the world of force which God had created in order to contain and fight them.

So as to be adequately armed for this task, Adam was given the powers which these Spiritual Beings had received when emanated. Although emanated after them, he was superior to them by reason of the glorious and powerful circumstances in which he had himself been emanated.

All the spiritual creatures emanated after the Primary Spirits were therefore subordinate to Adam.

As the Fall of the First Spirits had occured BEFORE the emanation of these spiritual creatures, they were not tainted by it. Their prime function was to act on matter and to turn it into a world where the Perverse Beings would be imprisoned. Then they were to be Adam's assistants and help him in his duties regarding the Perverse Beings.

Now: Primitive Adam was an individual entity but he was also a COLLECTIVITY in that he was composed of numerous "cells" just as, for instance, one's own body is composed of milions of cells. He was what the Gnostics conceived of as the "Primordial Church", or the "Assembly of Pre-born Souls." If we may here refer to Willermoz' letter of August 18th, 1821, to the Baron de Turkeim:

> "Adam was emanated in the supercelestial immensity with an unlimited multiplicity of human intelligences, representing until then the universality of his class...."

It is at this time that occured the Temptation of Adam by the Leader of the Perverse Beings. This leader instilled in this Universal Soul called Adam, and though him, to the individual Souls (cells) of this true Angelic Choir, the criminal desire to become, in turn, a First Cause -- by creating entirely new spiritual entities that would owe him, and to him alone, their existence, without the intervention of God.

Let us once again refer to Willermoz, who wrote:

> "Tempted and seduced by the Demon, Adam fell and sinned gravely by his faculties of thought, of will, and of action. The unlimited multiplicity of his class became immediately aware of this and sinned in their turn as much as the possibilities permitted. Some resisted as much as they could, others participated to the full. The entire class is therefore sullied by Man's prevarication. By virtue of an unbreakable tie of solidarity, the just are bound to the guilty and all will have to pay their share of the debt by a passage of varying length, in material corporization, and by corporeal death which they will have to suffer, as well as all the other purifying trials that the Divine Mercy has in store for them....."

DISCUSSION

We have learned so far in Martinez' General Doctrine of the beginning of the divine emanations until the time of the Initial Revolt, or Fall of the Spiritual Beings, and we have seen what happened from then until the Fall of Man. Next week we shall study the consequences of this Fall.

Kindly allow me to remind members once again that the General Doctrine is expressed in anthropomorphic terms, that is: in terms that have been clothed with human likeness in order to render them more easily intelligible (in much the same way that a great amount of Biblical teaching is cast in stories about people.) We ask each one of you to interpret the "General Doctrine" according to your own understanding.

There are in the General Doctrine, some notions which are fundamental and which have been retained in all Martinist philosophies of latter days. One is that of the Pre-existence of Souls. All our individualities had potential existence in the collectivity of Primitive Adam before he "Fell" and was shattered and the final re-integration entails therefore the reunification of all these "individual souls" (which are the individual people of the world) ... when they have been purified by the trials of Life to the point of regaining the pristine purity of the One-Soul.

DISCUSSION/QUESTIONS

In the Order of Elus-Cohen, Martinez' doctrine was divided into two sections. Name the two sections and describe the differences.

What was the name of the work in which Martinez' doctrine is outlined?

What constituted the "Initial Revolt?"

Having arrived at the Plane of Existence, what happened next?

Why was Primitive Adam created?

Describe Primitive Adam.

Was he adequately armed?

Tell what you know about the Primary Spirits.

Greetings my Brothers & Sisters: #100

We had come last week, in our study of the General Doctrine of Martinez Pasquales, to the point where Primitive Man, tempted by the leader of the Perverse Beings, had Fallen in his turn, carrying with him all the pre-existing souls of human individuals which were held there in his collectivity.

What exactly was the sin of Primitive Adam?

Remembering that Willermoz, besides knowing the "Treatise", had received verbal instructions from Martinez himself, let us see again what he has to say on this point:

"Adam was privileged to create "glorious forms" for the beings of his class for whom he would ask of God temporal emancipation to serve as his assistants. On the advice of his Seducer, he went against God's intention and succeeded only in producing a mass of animated matter. Peeved at this result, he dared to summon the Creator to fulfill His promise and to animate spiritually any work of his. The Creator thus summoned, by his immutability, did animate it : inde omnia ....."

One familiar with the "Thirty-two Paths of Wisdom" and the early Gnostic writings will read between the lines of this initiatory legend, and will find again the traditional descent of souls into bodies, the successive clothing of leaves and skins spoken of in Genesis ... the embodiment of Human Souls in Matter as a consequence of the Original Fall. (Genesis 3: 7&21).

From here on, the Global Being that was Adam is no more. Like the pearls of a necklace whose string has broken, the Souls will roll here and there, from form to form, from life to life, until the time when the Repairer (as Martinez calls the Christ) comes to take them away from the grasp of the Master of the World, the Leader of the Perverse Spirits. Around this corner-stone, the reconciled souls will gather and amalgamate to form again the primitive collectivity, the Original Adam.

So: Adam brought down with him the whole of Nature which was penetrated by the evil principle, and precipitated the physical world. The Spirits which God had put at the service of Adam to help him rule the Material Universe, spirits which Martinez calls Ternary Spirits, were also affected by his Fall, having lost their chief, their leader and their protector. The Universal Reintegration is therefore not limited to Universal Man and to the repentance of the Perverse Spirits, but is also extended to the Planetary and Stellar Spirits.

To help with this gigantic task, it is once again to Adam -- that is: to collective humanity -- that God appeals. Adam's duty remains unchanged. The Fall has only interrupted it. Reconciliation must remain the ultimate object of any man worthy of the name -- and it is of his own FREE WILL that he must enter the Path of Salvation, or Reintegration as Martinez calls it.

Man is essentially "free will." Thoughts and impulses, good or bad, are usually the work of distinct beings. Pure thoughts are suggested to him by a divine Spirit and criminal thoughts by a demoniacal spirit. Man retains his freedom of choice because, he can accept or reject the suggestions.

It would appear that Man, surrounded by the demonaic atmosphere of this malevolent world is poorly placed to resist the pressure of evil. The Creator has however re-established a balance by detaching from his "Divine Spiritual Circle", a Major Spirit who will act as the guide, the support, the advisor and the companion of Man who, when his turn comes, leaves the primitive collectivity to descend into the material world. (Distribute chart #MP99 at end of lecture).

Furthermore, God has given rise to Human Guides who in Martinez' terminology are known as "Elect Minors" and who are ten in number:

Abel, Enoch, Noah, Melchizedek, Joseph, Moses, David, Solomon, Zerubbabel and Jesus.

They appear when the time is ripe to remind Men of the essential Truths which, under the effect of the demoniac influence, tend to be forgotten.

Then come the temporary guides who are far lower in the Hierarchy. They are what Martinez called the "Regenerated Minors." They are the Adepts or Masters of the Spiritual Doctrine. It is a level to which some Martinist Reaux-Croix have attained.

After these come the "Reconciled Minors." They are the Initiates, inferior to the above Masters.

Lastly come the "Deprived Minors" or profanes, enmeshed in the net of the low desires without even the passing light of a flash of spirituality. These are the "Men of the Stream" of Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin.

This, then, is Martinez' doctrine of Creation. We have given only the outline in these last conventicles. Next, we shall examine a few interesting points of this General Doctrine before coming to the "Particular Doctrine" which treats of the theurgic theories and practices of the Elus-Cohen.

DISCUSSION/QUESTIONS

What exactly was the sin of Primitive Adam? He went against God's intention. He wanted to himself become a First Cause and create entirely new spiritual entities that would owe him alone their existence, without the intervention of God.)

What was the result of Adam's effort? He bungled the job! He in fact brought about the creation of the physical world, by bringing down the material world, which rose around him and trapped him.)

Why did God create the material universe? He created the material universe as a limited and localized place to prevent the multiplication of the absolute evil which the Perverse Beings could spread ad infinitum, by virtue of their powers.

What did Father Origen say about the object of the material creation? That it was not to make good things, but rather to prevent the making of bad things.

What is the most urgent task that faces Man? To get out of this physical jail and become reintegrated to the level he occupied before the Fall.

Divine World

SPIRITUAL BEINGS These are the "Mother-Ideas" which exist within the bosom of Infinity. They are the Aeons* of the Gnostics. The sphere of Ain Soph.

SUPERIOR SPIRITS also called Denary or Divine Spirits. They are the Sephiroth or Divine Numbers.

Supercelestial World

MAJOR SPIRITS These are the intermediaries between Man and God. They surround the Inferior Kingdom made of the Celestial and Terrestrial Worlds. They are the Agents of Universal Law, the Guardians of TIME or the Vital Energy of the Material World. They have no power to create material essences.

Celestial World

INFERIOR SPIRITS These assure the continued existence of matter, they are the powers of the elements, the beings of the Higher Astral Plane, the Planetary and Stellar Spirits, etc..

Terrestrial World.

MINOR SPIRITS or Spiritual Minors. They are responsible for the erection of the Material World and number among them the individual Human Souls.

These Minor Spirits are subdivided into 4 classes:

1) Elect Minors: The 10 great guides of Mankind: Abel, Enoch, Noah, Melchisedek, Joseph, Moses, David, Solomon, Zerubbabel and Jesus.
2) Regenerated Minors: These are the ADEPTS, the Masters of the Spiritual Doctrine or Science.
3) Reconciled Minors: These are the Initiates.
4) Exiled Minors: or Minors in Privation, - the profane

*Aeon - Originally "age," in the sense of a long period of time; then used of space, or the spiritual being governing a vast space either in the Pleroma above or here below. (Pleroma - the totality of the highest Aeons, the fullness of God).

Dear Brothers & Sisters: #101

In our last two Conventicles, we have outlined Martinez' conception of Creation, under the title of "General Doctrine." Let us now examine a few points of detail before reaching any conclusions on the importance of the doctrine and the particular significance it gives to our principle of Re-integration.

The first important point on which Martinez' Doctrine differs from the generally adopted Christian version of Creation is that God, the First Cause, is not directly responsible for the creation of the material universe. Between God and the material universe, we find intermediaries which we could call Agents of Creation.

God, the First Cause, emanated secondary causes which were of God but not GOD. We see here that Martinez has brought Qabalisic ideas into the Christian theogony. We saw in our short study of the Sepher Ietzirah, how, from the incomprehensible abyss of His Abstraction, God created the World and Man by intermediary agents of whom the first series is represented by 10 Numbers. As the Qabalah itself developed, we see in the Zohar and subsequent writings, that this idea of 10 Numbers issuing forth from Nothing has evolved into the doctrine of the Emanations or Sephiroth. Briefly stated, this doctrine explains how Ain Soph, the "Boundless One," emanated 10 Sephiroth through the agency of which all and everything was created. These 10 Sephiroth constitute the Tree of Life of the Qabalah and their existence is reflected in the 4 Worlds of the Zohar.

Martinez was well versed in the mysteries of the Qabalah and because he was also a fervent Christian and at the same time, by virtue of the Rose+Croix's Obligation of professing the religion of the land in which he lived, he interpreted his Qabalistically-inspired Doctrine in the light of Christian Theology. We shall see soon, when we look at the "Particular Doctrine", that he had other reasons for using Christian Terminology.

Meanwhile, let us see what foundation there is in the original Scriptures for the Martinist doctrine of Intermediary Agents of Creation.

We find in the first chapter of St. John that:

"IN THE BEGINNING WAS THE WORD AND THE WORD WAS WITH GOD, AND THE WORD WAS GOD....." If we analyse this text, in the original version perticularly, we are struck first of all by the use of the word 'BEGINNING'. God, it is admitted, is Eternal. In this contest then, there is no place for the word 'beginning' if we are simply attempting to describe the Word as always existing in the bosom of God; - which meaning is the one generally attributed to this phrase. But on the contrary the word BEGINNING describes the opening of an ERA, at a definite point in "Eternity". (Pause and repeat). Let us then consider that 'BEGINNING' means the start of TIME as we know it. We see then, that in the Boundless Eternity of God ... time is born, and at that moment also is born the Word, the Logos or Divine Word.

"...and the Word was WITH God..." It would be more accurate to translate this literally as: "...and the Word was NEAR God..."

We then come to this phrase: "...and the Word was god." In the Greek version from which this is translated, the word "god" has no article, --- it should therefore be spelt with a small "g". This phrase then tells us that the Word was "god" or simply DIVINE. Reinterpreted in this way, the complete phrase reads:

> "In the beginning of Time, The Logos was emanated in the bosom of the Eternal, and this Logos was near God and this Logos was Divine."

In fact, the Logos was one of the Elohim or Sons of God --- "And through Him all things were made that are made!"

DISCUSSION/QUESTIONS

According to Martinez, the Logos Who created all the inferior beings by NAMING them, or calling them into existence, was Adam Kadmon, the Celestial Man (or Archetype) of the Qabalah.

We see also in Genesis 2:20 - "...and Adam gave name to all cattle, to all fowls of the air and to all beasts in the field." This is the creative power of the Word: Adam Kadmon calling the animals to life by NAMING them, by formulating his Idea of them and bringing them into being. These beasts brought into existence by Adam Kadmon were not yet the physical animals we meet on this earth. Adam is still on the Celestial Plane, performing the function for which He was emanated, --- the animals are inferior beings belonging to the Spiritual Regions. They are what other schools would call "Elementals". It is only after the Fall that Adam's creation becomes, like Him, enmeshed in matter.

We remind the Brethren for the third and last time that the terms used have been often given an anthropomorphic or human form and that they should be correctly interpreted. The Elementals for example, often clothed in the garb of gnomes or salamanders, can be considered as the forces that govern the material world in their particular sphere: e.g. gravity, cohesion, atomic forces, etc..

SECOND DISCUSSION

The subject of tonight's lecture, Adam Kadmon as the Creative Word, is very important if one wishes to understand the Martinist Doctrine. The exact role and the function of Archetypal or Celestial Man is one of the keystones of Martinism because we are mainly concerned with the study of Man, and the nature of Man as he now is -- and as he once was -- must ultimately govern our conception of re-integration. We have spoken often of Man's First Estate. The return to this First Estate is the prime objective of a Martinist and it is imperative that we define what this First Estate was, so that we may have a clearer and more "localised" idea of our task and also of our limitations.

In the preparatory work in Libers 1 - 22, we used a form of expression that was deliberately vague when we spoke of the return to Omneity and of re-absorption into the ABSOLUTE. This remains of course the ultimate goal, -- but it is a goal which is beyond Man's endeavour as Man! Primitive Adam , or, as we shall call him from now on: ARCHETYPAL MAN, was a Secondary Cause and our Great Work, or Opus Magnum, is to work to the re-integration of Man from what he is now -- to the Unity that he was as an Archetype. This is as far as Man can go. The recall of the Secondary Cause into the bosom of the First Cause which emanated it by an act of Divine Will can only be achieved by another act of Divine Will from this First Cause. Then, at the End of Time, a reverse process to that which occured IN THE BEGINNING will take place and the WORD will cease to exist, although GOD will continue to BE in its incomprehensible Boundlessness, beyond time, throughout Eternity.

THIRD DISCUSSION

We will continue this discussion at our next conventicle.

May you ever dwell in the Eternal Light of Divine Wisdom.

"ON THE CREATION"

This paper was presented by a Brother at a meeting of the Rose+Croix Chapter of Lodge Sol, Germany. We in turn are giving it at this point because we think it timely.

Brothers & Sisters:

All philosophers, who approach the most elevated conceptions that the human mind can embrace --- are forced to end in the Kabalah. The Treatise on the Reintegration of Beings by Martines Pasquales is largely Kabalistic.

The object of this paper is to see what evidence there is to support the idea that the creation was brought about by "intermediaries" or "Agents of Creation" and was not the work of God Himself.

A fundamental Kabalistic doctrine is that God, i.e. the "Highest" God, the Absolute, in the Kabalah: The Ain Soph, did not Himself create the Universe, but rather, He emanated "Agents of Creation" who proceeded with the creation. These "Agents" are in the Bible called the "Elohim." In some translations of the Bible, the word 'Elohim' is used, but in most versions Elohim is translated "God."

(The Absolute, the Ain Soph, is not mentioned at all in the Bible.)

What is there in traditional scripture that parallels or supports the idea of creation by intermediary Agents?

In Genesis 1:1 - the first seven words are: B'RAShITh BaRA ELoHIM ATh HaShaMaIM VaATh HaAReTz. This is translated in most Bibles as : "In the beginning, God created the heaven and the earth" and in so doing the Bible is made to start with an error for here the word 'God' is a mistranslation. The Hebrew word is 'Elohim' and this is a plural name, the singular form being 'Eloh' i.e. a 'god.' Furthermore 'Eloh' is a feminine singular. To this feminine singular -- Eloh -- has been added 'im', a masculine plural termination. So we have here a word which gives the sense of a male & female potency, i.e. a potentiality capable of producing an offspring.

In this connection, some scholars suggest that a more accurate translation of Gen. 1:1 would be - "In the beginning the mother and father gods ...", or "In the beginning the male and female gods...", or "In the beginning the gods and godesses...created the heaven and the earth."

Other scholars render 'Elohim" as follows:

"personifications of divine attributes or the forces at work in Nature."
"a sevenfold power of Godhead."
"the male-female Hierarchies of creative Intelligences or Potencies through which the Divine produces the manifested Universe."
"the unity of the powers, the attributes and the creative activities of the Supreme Being."

The Elohim are also conceived as a Unity in the sense that They all work together as One, expressing One Will, One purpose, One Harmony, thus, their activities are regarded as the manifestation of the Eternal One, the Absolute.

"Elohim" might be explained as "the Unity of gods", "Sons of God" -- "gods" and "Sons" to be here understood as being male and female -- just as the word "mankind" includes both men and women.

One cannot but wonder why this mistranslation of 'Elohim' has been allowed to go on uncorrected. Is it because it has been a male dominated society in which we live that the concept of God is not only singular but also masculine? I merely ask the question. Perhaps one of you might like to take up this investigation.

Returning to Genesis 1:1. Properly understood, the Bible opens with the affirmation that an intelligent, self-knowing group of Formative Agencies of male-female stature was responsible for the form-producing impulse which arose in pre-cosmic Space. Where ever the term 'God' is used in Genesis, the word in the original text is 'Elohim', meaning not a single being, but a group of Creative Intelligences.

A distinction must therefore be made between Elohim and the ETERNAL ONE, the Absolute, who is not mentioned at all in the Bible and Who, in fact, emanated the Elohim. On the Tree of Life the Absolute, the Eternal, the Ain Soph (all names for the same Thing) is represented on the Tree above or before Kether. The Elohim are at Sephirah #3, Binah.

Remember always: from the Qabalistic point of view, the "Creator" is not a single being alone. "He" should be more properly described as: a Totality in unity, the collective, natural agencies, forces and Intelligences which arise from within, and emanate from the Absolute (Ain Soph) at the dawn of each epoch of creative activity.

An "epoch of creative activity" begins with an 'out breathing' by the Absolute, when a creation comes into existence. In due time there is an 'in breathing' when the creation is withdrawn. In some Eastern religions, the period of manifestation is called Manvantara, and the period of rest or nothingness between one Manvantara and the next is called Pralaya. (This is symbolized in Genesis and in all flood legends by their deluges.)

Kindly allow me to belabour this point at the risk of being excessive, but I wish it to be clear: the term "God" as used in Genesis should be understood to refer to ELOHIM, meaning the group of Intelligent, productive Agencies (male and female), emanated from pre-cosmic space (the Ain Soph) and not to the Absolute God, which is the Ain Soph of the Kabalah and who is not mentioned at all in the Bible..

I will now sum up two explanations of creation. First Martines Pasqualez': Martines Pasquales states that before this present Universe of ours, the Absolute created other worlds which did not last and were subsequently destroyed. From these preceding creations there issued forth Beings who are sometimes refered to as "Angels". (These beings formed four ontological classes infinitely superior and more powerful than the Cherubim, the Seraphim, the Archangels and the Angels who were created later, because these Emanated Spirits held within themselves a part of the Divine Power. In other words these Beings were Divine, higher and anterior to the Angels of Christian Theology.) Pasquales states that Primitive Adam was emanated to be a warden over these Beings. Primitive Adam was an Individual made up of a collectivity of cells. After Adam succumbed to the temptation initiated by the Leader of these Perverse Beings, he Fell, became shattered, his cells forming the souls of the individual men and women of this world, which he (Adam) brought down into materialization. Primitive Adam, or Archetypal Man, was therefore, according to Pasqualez, the Creator of our world --- and not the Absolute God.

Now the creation story from Genesis: Here we find that it was the Elohim, the Unity of male-female Intelligences, (and NOT the Absolute God) that created the world. Genesis 1:26: "And God said: Let US make man in OUR image, after OUR likeness ..." Gen. 1:27, the verse following: "God created man in his own image." Here we see an obvious inconsistency, in verse 26 God (Elohim), is correctly translated plurally, then in the next verse, 27, He/They are translated as singular!

If I may now turn to Genesis 2:3, we read there, "And God blessed the seventh day and sanctified it: because that in it he had rested from all his work which God created and made." Translating literally from the Hebrew (if less clearly!) this verse would be: "And Elohim blessed the seventh day and hallowed it, because in it He returned from all His work, which He, the Elohim, had created in order to make." The word 'Sabbath' means literally 'the returning' and the 'seventh day' means 'the day of full realisation.' Genesis is here stating that the Elohim came forth from the unknown Eternal One in order to make Him manifest, knowable, through the process of creation. Having finished his creative work, Elohim returned to the divine unity, the univeral Sabbath.

Remembering from previous lectures that we have already found that the Word as mentioned in the first verses of John 1, was one of the Elohim though whom all things were made that were made, we see that the First Man, Adam Kadmon, the Archetype, the Celestial Man of the Kabalah is identified with the Word, the Spirit of God, Logos, Elohim or Sons of God who created the World.

These passages from Genesis, I submit, (there are others), do support the concept of Pasqualez and the Kabalalah of creation by intermediaries and do give "orthodox" support to the idea of creation via intermediaries. There is more to be said of course, but not wishing to make this paper too long or too tedious, I will bring it to a close at this point so we can have some discussion ... I thank you for your kind attention!

Brothers & Sisters:

Lectures 94 and 97 in Libers 26 & 27, about the "brittle aura" contain a key to the many reasons why you may react as you do to certain situations and persons in your immediate environment. These lectures have also given you the keys as to just how you should handle them so as not to allow them to affect you adversely. They have specifically stressed the importance of LOVE.

After completing your introspection exercises upon retiring send a thought of blessing and love to every person who may have caused you annoyance, distress or actual unhappiness during the day. Notice whether you discover any change in yourself and report your observations to us when you write. The thought of blessing to be used may be simply: "May God bless you with His Light, Life, and Love." This is a most potent formula for restoring harmony to one's innermost being, when it is sincerely felt and said.

Very important information has been shared with you about your invisible bodies and auras, but the most important information dwelt upon, I repeat, is the requirement of LOVE. When you have sincerely striven to cleanse yourself of all negative feelings and thoughts, and have replaced them with constructive and vital ones, you will readily discover that the truths shared with you have become a part of yourself.

Practice actively the prayer given in lecture 97, with the accompanying visualization of LIGHT impinging on every part of you from within and without, so that you feel this Light is every atom of your being. At first it may not be easy ... but gradually you will feel it growing stronger and stronger ... not because the Light is not there, but because your consciousness was not fully aware of it at the start. You will become fully conscious of it ... if you faithfully keep up the exercise. Write to us of your results when you have the opportunity.

SAR HIERONYMUS

Emile Dantinne loved secrets. And no doubt he considered it necessary to conceal the most important side of his personality which was indicated, to some people who knew, by his mystical nomen of Hiéronmus, the enigmatic, the "Great Chief" of the European Rose-Croix according to Grüter's amusing expression. Emile Dantinne a Great Chief? In fact, I believe he was in no way a chief according to the common meaning of the word, that is: a leader of people. But it is nonetheless true that he was considered by his occultist friends to be the most educated, noble and wise one amongst them. And, throughout their lives, most of them considered him to be a master and a sage. For my part, I agree with them in seeing him as a wise man and a precious guide whose erudition was only equalled by his modesty.

'Hiéronymus' is the latin for the name Jerome. It is also in a way the latinisation of the French 'hiéronyme' : sacred name. By entension, it could mean the person designated by that sacred name. Pure conjecture. To this nomen, Dantinne added the Baroque title of 'Sâr' which he had borrowed from Joséphin Péladan. The latter, we remember, had borrowed it from the Kings of Assyrian antiquity and introduced it to occultism at the end of the XIX Century when he started his Order of the Catholic Rose-Croix. At that time, the mockery of the Papus-Guaîta group made good progress with regard to the newly designated 'Sâr'. But who could have believed then, amongst the brethren of the Qabalistic Order of the Rose-Croix, rival to the Catholic Rose-Croix, that this title would be unanimously in vogue a few decades later amongst the initiates of both groups, reconciled under the auspices of the F.U.D.O.-S.I.? Since this title has become respectable today, its esoteric meaning, upon which I will not comment, requires me to refer to Jean Mallinger, who also used it himself, along with so many others, within and outside of the FUDOSI:

"... This title of Sâr, limited to certain directors of initiation, is an Egyptian prefix; in hieroglyphs, it means: son of Rê, son of the Sun God. (SA = son; R' = RA or Rê)."

DANTINNE AND PELADAN

Dantinne, as I explained, considered Péladan to be his spiritual master. However, these were two men whose character traits were not alike. The former liked secrecy, cherished discretion and simplicity; the latter, on the contrary, liked public appearances, eccentricities, even showy extravagances. But Péladan did not allow himself to be reduced to the over-schematic portrait I have just painted of him and today nobody would dream of denying that he had deep esoteric thoughts, sometimes theosophical, in addition to the literary, artistic or social extravagances which he was known to possess and which he himself recognized as such towards the end of his life. The merit of Dantinne (and later of Bertholet) was that they acted on the synthesis of the rosicrucian philosophy and thoughts of Péladan, which the latter had been unable to carry out. If one looks closely, more than one objective, more than one tendency in common finally brought the two men close to each other, beginning with their deep faith in Christian values and the teachings of Christianity, which, in their case, was the result of an unconditional fidelity towards the Roman Church. Then there was literature, where Dantinne and Péladan, who were true poets, represented, each in their own way, an important trend. Finally and above all, there was occultism, in which Hiéronymus became involved in about 1905.

Here, before coming to the meeting between Dantine and Péladan, it will be necessary to refer back to the following facts. In 1884, Stanilas de Gauïta met Péladan, who introduced him to the occult sciences and, apparently, to a friendly, informal Rosicrucian circle formed around him. In 1888, Guaïta and Péladan formed, along with other occultists of the times (Papus, Barlet, Paul Adam, who were with them on the Supreme Council), the Qabalistic Order of the "reformed" Rose-Croix (OKRC). This is divided into three degrees which can be entered by examination: bachelor, graduate and doctor of the Qabalah. In 1890, Péladan, who was still a member of the Supreme Council, formed the Catholic Rose-Croix of the Temple and of the Grail, with the position of Grand Master and the title of Sâr. For fear that the activities of their college on the Supreme Council would have repercussions on their Order, the Directors of the OKRC then asked Péladan to resign from the Supreme Council. This he did, and they set about making it known that their Order should not be confused with that of Péladan's. The quarrel intensified, which some people no doubt enjoyed prolonging, and which others liked to call the "war of the two roses", each accusing his adversary of heresy concerning the eternal ideals of the Rose-Croix. The friendship between Guaïta and Péladan was harshly put to the test, and it ended in 1891 without the two men feeling bitterness towards each other. Later, in 1899, after the death of Guaïta 2 years earlier, an attempt was instigated at a reconciliation between the two Orders, but without success. (However, this reconciliation was to occur under the auspices of the FUDOSI).

In 1891, Péladan branched out his Catholic Rose-Croix movement into an aesthetic Rose-Croix, which, in 1892, organized the first Rose-Croix exhibition to which painters and sculptors were invited and which attracted the whole of Paris. Five other exhibitions followed at the rate of one per year until 1897, when, in all, some one hundred and seventy artists exhibited their works.

The introduction of Péladan's movement into Belgium was highlighted by Dantinne and Bertholet. As a result of the third exhibition of 1894, a Rosicrucian Circle was formed in Brussels. This group of disciples of Péladan met at the Ravenstein Hotel under the leadership of the painter, Jean Delville. The Péladan collection at the Arsenal Library in Paris has kept the roughly drafted text of a talk which Péladan was to give in Brussels, where he made it clear that "from now on, the Rose-Croix will be amongst you."

In 1897, the aesthetic Rose-Croix was put to rest by its Grand Master. A seventh exhibition, planned for 1898, did not materialize. But Péladan continued to spread occultism and his esoteric version of the world through his lectures, many of which still took him to Belgium. It was at the end of one of these lectures that Dantinne mer Péladan:

"I met him at the end of one of those lectures in which his ardent eloquence was reminiscent of the mystical knowledge of those who constructed cathedrals.

"His hieratic appearance of an Assyrian wise man has an orential appeal, the magnetism of his expression, which radiated out to the audience, commanded attention. He was indeed a man of his books, the servant of a great ideal, his words making him a Prince of Letters, a magician of ideas.

"And those who, like me, had poured over the first books of the 'Amphithéâtre des Sciences Mortes' (Amphitheatre of dead sciences) applauded with youthful enthusiasm and ardent admiration, the Grand Master of the Temple.

"Only a few bourgoise affected a surprised, sceptical smile at this vehement outburst of eloquence.

"When I reached him, I greeted him by his title taken from the Preface of the salons of the R + C. I expressed to him my admiration, my desire to know more about his initiatic philosophy. As soon as I had uttered my first words, he expression suddenly became deeply affable, all the traits of his face expressed kindness. He let me speak. It was, however, not for long. I had told him my plans. I was working with La Verveine, who, one week before, had devoted a whole page to him, which was full of praise for him.

"His long hands stretched out in a friendly way towards mine: "You are worthy to become my disciple" and his gentle, serious voice, which contrasted strangely with that of the keen orator of just now, gave me the advice of the master. But time was passing, he invited me to see him again..."

Dantinne did in fact see him again and went regularly to the Circle of the Hôtel Ravenstein. I do not know how big this fraternal group was, whose members, according to Dantinne himself, were dispersed by the Great War. In 1918, Péladan died of accidental poisoning from shellfish. The Catholic Rose-Croix group in Paris seemed to disappear, but, at the beginning of 1919, the Belgian brethren began meeting again under the leadership of Dantinne. Let us hear what he had to say:

"His adepts of the Rose-Croix, dispersed by the war, had found each other again, and less than a year after the death of the Master, Sâr Hiéronymus resuscitated the torch of the universal Rose-Croix which will never again be extinguished."

From Henry Hotham down to 1894 the right to Make "free from Harodim" was centered in the Knights Grand Cross of the H.R.D. of Jerusalem i.e. Past Commanders conferred the degree down to that time.

In 1894 a new organisation was formed of which Henry Hotham was the head retaining within itself supervision of the superior body; this organisation is called the Imp. Rom. On 1 January 1897 the whole rights and privileges of this Tabernacle, but not of the Grand Cross Knights of the H.R.D. of J. were ceded by deed to the Grand Council of the Allied degrees. DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

ANSWERS TO SECOND COLLEGE EXAM

1. The five pages of the Book of Nature are: Motion / Rythm and Vibration / Harmony / Man and Nature / Dreams.

2. The fourth page of the Book of Nature treats Man and Nature as dual aspects of Omneity, being controlled by Divine laws. Since Omneity expresses itself through both Man and Nature, the main lesson to draw from this page is, by observing the order in which Nature vehicles Divine expression, to learn how to become an equally ordered channel of such expression, thus forming a harmonious concord with Nature and enable oneself to participate more fully in the Light.

3. The sephiroth forming the Martinist World of Orbs are: Chokmah, Binah, Chesed, Geburah, Tiphereth, Netsach, Hod and Yesod.

4. In stating your question, you point to page 5 of the same Liber. Here I find the following: "It is only when man by his deeds disturbs the balance among the Sephiroth that the quality of Power becomes unbalanced and isolated ... and this results in the existence of evil." Truly, when the balance is disturbed by man's deeds we may experience evil, but the deeds of man are not the basic reason for evil, but an expression of evil. Thus man is an agent of evil when his acts are inspired by ignorance. Ignorance is the more profound reason for the appearance of evil in the life of man and society. It is only due to ignorance that man is tempted to act in such ways as to disturb the universal balance. And - underneath this ignorance, lurks reasons deeply embedded into the spiritual make-up of man; profound reasons why he is an ignorant being, reasons all escaping his own comprehensional faculties being hid in the reasons why he ever came into being. As I understand Martinism, its major effort is to cope with man's spiritual illness, heal and restore him so that he will become a knowing being and his deeds establsh balance with wisdom, strength and beauty in all fields, and finally uplift him through regeneration to reintegration.

5. The word emanation means flowing forth or coming forth from. Through the acts of creation, the world was emanated into being in accordance with Divine Will in a manner that might be described as an outpouring or irradiation from the Divine Being itself, the material creation appearing as the result of a process compareable with condensation. Moses called the emanations Days, being steps in the unfoldment of creation. Equally St.John sees the Word as the unity from which all numbers in creation descended through emanation. "The Celestial Hierarchy", a work attributed to Dionysius the Aeropagite, calls the emanations "choirs" and divides them inti three triads: Seraphim, Cherubim and Thrones; Virtues, Dominations and Powers; Principalities, Archangels and Angels. Here is also stated that the force of the emanations decreases with the distance from the Divine source. One might say that the emanated force becomes almost as if "diluted". This is a close parallell to the Quabalistic version, connecting the emanation of the ten Divine attributes to the ten sephiroth. In conclusion Divine emanation may be defined as God projectig a virtue or power of Himself into manifestation in time and space, the final emanation being the visible and tangible creation, the point of reflexion or the Day of Return.

Greetings, Brothers & Sisters! # 105

Let us return tonight to the study of Adam Kadmon, the Archetypal Man, whom Martinez Pasquales considers to be the Word, the Agent through whom God created the World. We saw that the first verses of St. John's Gospel could be interpreted to confirm this point of the Martinist Doctrine. Some of you will be interested to know that various "versions" of the Bible do, in fact, translate/interpret the opening verses of Saint-John's Gospel quite variously and it could be an interesting exercise to make a collection of the different translations.

Some time ago I came across an article on this subject and I share this paragraph with you since it is relavant to our subject:

> " ...In many translations John 1:1 says, "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." However, conscientious translators have found it necessary to acknowledge that there is a difference between the two uses of the word "God" in this text.
> The New English Bible says, "What God was, the Word was." Today's English Version says "He was the same as God." An American Translation says "The Word was divine." Why do not these translations simply say that the Word "was God" ? ... Because in Greek, in which the original was written, the second use of the word "God" is not the same as the first. The definite article "ho" (the) appears before the first use of the word God --- but not before the second. So The Anchor Bible says: "To preserve in English the different nuances of theos [god] with and without the article, some (Moffatt) would translate 'The Word was divine' ..."

Let us now continue and turn to Genesis to see whether we can find further confirmation. We see in Gen. 1:1-3 that :

"The earth was without form and void and the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters."

In this text, the word "Spirit" has a capital "S" and this would seem to indicate that we are refering to an individual Spirit, independent of God himself, and not to 'God's spirit' -- which interpretation would be nonsensical, God being spirit.

The "earth" in the text quoted, refers to CHAOS or Primeval Matter and the "waters" over which the Spirit of God moved were the Nous, the subtle element of matter.

In Genesis 2:15, we read -

"And the Lord God took man and put him in the Garden of Eden to dress it and keep it."

We know that the word Garden in Hebrew GUINETH, is the Mystic Orchard of the Qabalah, symbol of the Divine Knowledge. The word Guineth is made of the 3 Hebrew letters: Gimel, Nun and Thau, initials of GEMATRIA, NOTARIKAN and TEMOURAH, the 3 secondary sciences which are the keys to the Qabalah.

This Primitive Man, symbolically* described in Genesis, is not a man of flesh and bone, like ourselves, but a pure Spirit, emanated from God, having for form what theologists call the "the body glorious" and animated by a spark purely divine which is the Breath of God Himself. The Archetypal Man is therefore semi-divine, issuing forth from Primeval Matter (the CHAOS symbolised* by the mixture of earth and water) which is his form, and issuing forth from God by the Divine breath animating him.

Primitive Adam and the Creative Word are thus identical, as Archetypal Man carries on the work initiated by the "Spirit of God" in the symbolic* Orchard of Eden.

Let us now try to recapitulate: Martinez accepts on the whole the Christian doctrine of Creation, but he uses his knowledge of the Secret Science of the Qabalah to interpret the texts in a way which makes certain aspects clearer, although it differs in some points from the generally taught version. (Let us make a note here that Martinez is not the first person to have done so and that elements of his doctrine can be found in other systems also.)

There are two main points that must be understood if you wish to penetrate the meaning of the Theurgic Discipline which is the basis of Martinez' "Particular Doctrine" which he taught to his disciples, the "Elus-Cohen." :

The first point is that before this Universe of ours, God created other worlds which did not last and were subsequently destroyed. From these preceding creations, there issued other Beings who are sometimes referred to as "Angels", and are not accounted for in the sacred texts dealing with the creation of OUR World, -- but are to be found in other traditions and studied in all theologies.

The second point concerns the identification of the First Man, Adam Kadmon, the Archetype, the Celestial Man of the Qabalah, with the WORD, the Spirit of God, Logos, Elohim or Sons of God who created the World. This is the corner-stone of the whole system because it sets at one and the same time, the objective and limit of Reintegration. Thus, the First Estate of Man was not that of the generally accepted Adam — but that of Adam the demi-god, emanated by God to become the Agent of Creation.

Archetypal Man is therefore Creator of the Universe. He is the hand of God and we, men of the Material Universe, are the fragments of the Creator.

* Note the use of the word "symbolical". The Genesis story is an allegory.

Our world is not a creation of God Himself, but a creation of Archetypal Man who directed and supervised the operations.

It is He whom Martinists and Freemasons, call the Sovereign or Great Architect of the Universe. And it is because of this that Martinism and Freemasonry and all other systems using this name of Great Architect, do not follow a cult of Worship which would be satanic because it would be directed towards Man and not towards the Absolute. We INVOKE the Sovereign Architect without ever WORSHIPING Him.

DISCUSSION / QUESTIONS

We have observed that this identification of Celestial Adam, the Archetypal Man, with the Creator of the World or Sovereign Architect of the Universe offered us a better idea as to the aim or objective of our re-integration and also of its limits.

Martinez's work was entitled "Treatise on the Reintegration of Beings into their virtues, qualities and powers originally held." By this thesis on the nature of Primitive Man and the conditions of his First Estate, Martinez sets the goal of our re-integration.

We know what the traditional attributes of the Creative Word are, and we know what were his powers. These then are what Man can - and must - regain.

All individual men and women, who are the cells of the Archetype, must, on the low scale of their own level, shake themselves free from that matter which imprisons them, so that, after their natural death, they may re-integrate finally into the "body-glorious" of the Archetype and thus escape the cycle of reincarnations.

It is only when thus re-constituted by the re-integration of all his cells, that Archetypal Man will be able to regain his original Splendour and Liberty, freed from the shakles of matter.

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

On the Tree of Life, the re-integration of Archetypal Man will take place below the Abyss that separates the Upper Trinity from the Lower Seven Sephiroth. After Archetypal Man has been reconstituted, he will then have to await the will of the First Cause, (Sephiroth 1, 2 & 3, who emanated him, to re-absorb him). The Elohim are placed on the Tree at Sephirah #3.

Brothers & Sisters: # 106

Before concluding our study of the "General Doctrine" of Martinez Pasquales, it may be well to remind ourselves that Martinism, as presented in our Order (OM&S), is never dogmatic. We realise that to speak of Planetary Spirits and of Elemental Spirits in the second half of the 20th Century could be regarded as out of date and even naive. Let us point out, therefore, that we are not asked to believe in the literal interpretation of the doctrine given at the present time. This doctrine could undoubtedly be modernized, streamlined, and given a more scientific turn by altering the terminology. This however would entail the risk of depending entirely for the understanding of Martinez's work, on the understanding of the person interpreting the ancient doctrine in modern times.

As we are Martinists, it is fitting that we should be familiar with the background of the Martinist Movement and: however much is due to Saint-Martin, Papus and other modern Martinists in evolving the present-day system of Martinist Philosophy -- the fact remains that the whole system rests on the original work of Martinez.

Let us therefore keep an open mind, and study his General Doctrine as it was in his day. We are all at liberty to accept what suits our understanding -- and to leave the rest.

DISCUSSION

(During the discussion one of the brethren said that his feeling was that the first Fall resulted in the creation of a 'material world', a world of forces, which was grosser than the original higher spiritual environment, and that at the second Fall, the dense physical matter came into being. We share this insight here so that home-study brethren can reflect on it.)

We said last week that Martinez identifies Man, the Archetype, with the S.A.O.T.U., the creator of our own world. Beside this Primitive Adam, we learned that there existed other Spiritual Beings belonging to other Planes of Creation, or to Creations anterior to our own. We studied some weeks ago the principle of the Fall of the Angels, which was followed by the Fall of Man -- and we saw that our Material World was the kind of prison where Fallen Beings or Perverse Spirits were isolated.

We also said that Man must attempt to reconquer his First Estate by re-uniting his consciousness to that of the Archetype in order that, by the return of all his individual cells dispersed by the Fall, the Archetype may be reconstituted.

Man, however, is surrounded by the Material World, the abode of the Perverse Spirits, and he is therefore continually exposed to their evil influences. Because Man is thus poorly placed to resist this overpowering influence, God has re-established a balance by detaching from His divine Circle (the Supercelestial World, see diagram MP99, Liber 28), a Major Spirit who will be the companion, guide and advisor of the MINOR (the Human Soul) when this Minor emanates from the celestial immensity to descend and to become embodied in the world of matter, there to work according to the impulses of his free will. (We find here the familiar concept of the Guardian Angel of Christian Theology).

According to Martinez however, the guidance of a Major Spirit is not sufficient for the Minor to progress on the path of return. He requires also the operative assistance of an Elect Minor, one of the 10 great Guides of Mankind. (Again, see chart MP99). The reconciled Minor then receives a two-way assistance from the Elect Minor: he receives from him the direct instructions of God as to the Culte (i.e. Rite) to be rendered and practised, and he transmits to the Men of Desire to whom he is sent, the gifts he has received. This he does by MARKING them with the MYSTERIOUS SEAL without which no Exiled Minor may be reconciled.

This mysterious Ordination, this Initiation, is the "sine qua non" condition of reconciliation, because without it, the MINOR remains in privation, or in exile, that is: deprived of means of communication with GOD.

To escape from the wheel of rebirth or the cycle of re-incarnations in this world, Individual Man must free himself from everything which binds him to matter and liberate himself from material sensations.

He must also uplift himself morally. *It is against this attempt at perfection that the Fallen Entities ceaselessly fight to keep Man within the bounds of the visible world and to keep him in subjection.

Besides the help granted him by Initiation, Man is given, through his knowledge of the Secret Science, practical means to unmask these evil influences, to fight them and reject them from his kingdom. Through the Mysterious Seal, he will be linked to the Regenerated Minors who have already reintegrated in the Archetype and who will "grant him the powerful help of their Compassion and of their Wisdom."

DISCUSSION

(* What are some of the tactics the Fallen Entities use against man?)

We have said that Man needs the effective help of a Minor Elect, and that they come to transmit the direct instructions of God on the practices to be followed, and to start or INITIATE a line of sincere disciples on the Path of Return. This they do by MARKING a few Men of Desire with the Mysterious Seal of Ordination or Initiation, thus transforming them from Exiled Minors into Reconciled Minors by establishing a link or channel through which they may communicate with God's Agents.

These Reconciled Minors, having received the Seal and the instructions, are thus armed for striving at their advancement, by working jointly at the uplifting and refining of their moral qualities and at the following of the revealed practices which will enable them to contact the Major Spirit commissioned by God to guide and advise them in their efforts. Through fulfilling these parallel tasks, the Reconciled Minor works to turn himself into a Regenerated Minor, an Adept, a Master of the Divine Science. In receiving these privileges, the Reconciled Minor has however incurred a solemn debt; that is: to transmit in his turn to other Minors in Exile, the link of Divine Communication. In other words, he must MARK with the Mysterious Seal, the Men of Desire who cross his path.

By doing this, he opens for the Exiled Minor the door of Regeneration and offers him the means of becoming a Reconciled Minor. He does not make him a Reconciled Minor -- he INITIATES him -- meaning that he STARTS him on the Path by giving him a little of the Divine Breath which has been handed down to him. By giving him this SEAL, he marks him and ensures he will be recognized by the Masters Invisible who move on the Astral Plane to help the Bearers of the Seal.

MASTER INTERRUPTS THE LECTURE HERE AND ASKS THE BRETHREN WHETHER THEY WOULD LIKE ANY PART OF THE ABOVE READ AGAIN

Let us pause a minute and see whether we can find in other Traditions and in the Great Religions, this same idea of a Mysterious Seal, a Mark, without which the Man of the Stream, the Profane, is unable to begin his journey on the Path of Return.

In the Jewish religion, we find that a mark is made on the faithful and is called Circumcision. It is said that according to the Covenant, God will recognise as His, only the circumcised ones. In the Christian religion, we have the mark made with water, called Baptism, which is also said to be indispensible for salvation. In other ancient religions there were also Marks made with water, fire, oil, salt and other ingredients. In the many kinds of Primitive People, marks are actually cut into the skin and reveal the qualities of the bearer. In more evolved religions, these marks are no longer physical but symbolic and sometimes, as in the case with the Brahmins, the Initiate wears a symbol or a sign from that day on.

We can see therefore that all these customs rest upon a very ancient belief, common to most faiths. Without wishing to compare the relative values of these different practices, let us observe that the Mysterious Seal of Martinez is a symbol of a far more subtle and refined nature than most of the other Marks. The reason may well be that in many cases the original meaning of the Seal has been lost or corrupted, importance or stress being given to the visible or physical marking. Martines did much to restore the purity of this symbolism without detracting from its effective power.

SHORT RECESS

We have seen that individual man, surrounded by evil influences, had to proceed nevertheless with the help of a Major Spirit and of a Minor Elect, to free himself from everything material in order to complete the Cycle of re-incarnations and return to the Archetype. How will he do this? He will succeed on the one hand through INITIATION which binds him to those elements of the Archetype who have also re-integrated (call them Masters or Saints as you please). On the other hand, he will succeed through knowledge (Gnosis) of the Liberating Science which teaches him the means of hastening the remainder of spiritually blinded Mankind, through his personal efforts towards final liberation.

Among the methods offered him by the Secret Science are the great Equinoxal "operations" which tend to purify the Aura of the earth through exorcisms and conjurations belonging to the rite of High Magic which the Elus-Cohen called the "Labours" or the "Cult".

Only then may the ultimate liberation of the individual lead to the great collective Liberation which will permit the restoration of the Archetype and its eventual re-absorption into Divinity from which it emanated. When this takes place, the Material World, left to itself by its Animator and no longer vivified by the Archetype or S.A.O.T.U. will dissolve.

Under the impulsion of the Fallen Entities eager to break up their prison, this deterioration will gather momentum. The Universe will cease to be -- and it will be the End of the World announced in all traditions.

The Divine Essence will then gradually RE-OCCUPY the regions from which it had withdrawn. The momentary illusions called creatures, beings and worlds will disappear, as GOD IS ALL and ALL IS IN GOD. In fact, it is only the temporary WITHDRAWAL of the Divine Essence from selected "regions" which permits the creation of Worlds, whether Angelic or Material, and also the emanation of Spiritual Beings. Then will come the Symbolic Victory of Good over Evil, of Light over Darkness, - by a simple return of everything to the Divine Unity.

Such is the development of the Universal "Opus Magnum".

This terminates our study of Martinez's "General Doctrine" as such. Following is a synopsis of Martinez's work 'The Treatise'. This synopsis was being offered as a Supplementary Discourse when we first began our works but it has since been withdrawn from general availability and placed at this point in the studies because we feel it will be most useful here. It will help clarify some areas which are still a bit shadowy and also throw new light.

Beginning in the next Liber we shall scrutinize a few individual points of the doctrine and if time permits, begin to examine Martinez's "Particular Doctrine". We will also begin the series on Alchemy. Stay tuned!

THE "REINTEGRATION OF BEINGS" by Martinez Pasquales.

A synopsis of the Cosmology and Anthropology of Martinez Pasquales

The "Treatise of the Reintegration of Beings into their First Estate, Virtues and Powers both Spiritual and Divine" is a compendium of the Secret Doctrine taught by Pasquales and is presented in the form of a lecture given ex-cathedra. The author in addressing the reader, assumes the tone of a teacher chatting with his disciples; he foresees their objections and refutes them in advance. He anticipates the questions they might put to him and strives to dissipate their eventual doubts by affirming his good faith and exactness of his information.

This treatise was written exclusively for the members of the Order of Elus-Cohens and was their "instruction manual." All members in good standing were given a copy of it as well as the degree books and instructions. In addition there was, of course, verbal tuition. The work which was begun in February 1771 and to which Pasquales consecrated himself entirely in the beginning of 1772 ... remained unfinished. However, incomplete as the Treatise might be, it nevertheless reveals enough important points to give a good idea of the mystic system of the Society. What may console the reader finding himself reading the last page ... and facing a text suddenly interrupted ... is that the doctrines which constitute the matter of the Treatise can only be extracted at the price of very laborious effort. Pasqualez was uneducated to the rules of basic composition and the work betrays at once the author's literary inexperience. We must excuse him on this point. The reader may therefore experience some fatigue due to the primitive style and obscurity of terms.

The Treatise seems to have been thought out in a foreign language although it was written in French. This is revealed by certain expressions used and numerous errors in the language and syntax which render certain passages practically incomprehensible. The style, although puzzling and obscure, is however counter-balanced by some beautiful passages which give an idea of what Pasquales is capable of when he aspires at the sublime. Here are two passages chosen at random. Moses, in offering a sacrifice to the Lord somewhere between the Madian desert and Mount Horeb, offers the following prayer to Him:

"O Eternal, Creator of all powers!
Accept the sacrifice I am offering Thee in all holiness and purity of the divine power which Thou hast pleased to grant me in Thy mercy and for Thy greatest glory!
I surrender myself wholly to Thy infinite Greatness!

"Dispose of me as Thou wilt; receive the sacrifice I am making to Thee which comes from my soul, 247 my heart, and my body, and from all that I have spiritually and temporally; accept it in expiation of the sin of the father of all men and of all his posterity.
Thus, since all comes from Thee, all returns to Thee".

Adam, in the act of contrition after his first Fall, thus expresses himself:

"O Father of charity and mercy;
Vivifying Father and of Eternal Life;
God, Father of heavens and earth;
Strong and mighty God,
God of justice, of punishment as well as reward;
God of peace and mercy, of charitable compassion ...
God of peace and reparation ...
Magnificent God of all contemplation of created beings and of unchangeable rewards! 30-31
God, Father of boundless mercy toward his feeble creature, grant the prayers of him who is grieving bitterly in front of Thee the abomination of his crime."

The Treatise on the Reintegration of Beings is a sort of summary and a secret version of the first books of the Pentateuch, in particular that of Genesis and Exodus. In it, Pasquales explains his didactics of the creation of Adam & Eve, deals with Original Sin, tells the story of the posterity of the first couple and of the descendants of Cain and Seth, describes the flood, then passes on to Noah, to Abraham and his progeny, to the generation of Isaac, narrates the Exodus from Egypt, then writes at length on the role played by Moses ... says a few words on Judges ... and suddenly breaks off.

The legislator of the Hebrews is our author's central figure. Under the pretext of explaining the teaching which Moses gave as a spokesman of Jehova to the people of Israel, Pasquales looks upon the prophet as "one who speaks with truth according to the Eternal" and thus presents as revealed by God Himself the metaphysical doctrines he taught to the Elus-Cohen. This tendency, quite evident in the second part, can be noticed in the first part as well, and serves to illustrate allegorically the mystical doctrines exposed in the Treatise. These doctrines constitute an esoteric cosmogony and anthropology; they claim to give the key to the destiny of man, past, present and future, and are justified by a biblical exegesis which borrows its methods from symbolism, arithmosophy and mystical geometry.

The cosmology of the Treatise is essentially a pneumatologic one. "Before the beginning of time, God emanated spiritual beings." "These spiritual beings emanated from the quaternary divine essence were distinguishable among themselves by their virtues, power and names. They formed four classes, much more powerful than those of the Cherubims, Seraphims, Archangles and Angels which God created afterwards, because they had in themselves a part of the divine power." Only these "spiritual divine beings", emanated directly from God and endowed with divinity as "the seminal of the reproduction of forms" and innate in the different organisms composing the material universe ... are "real and imperishable", i.e. they have a personal existence, absolute and eternal; they will always exist "in the circle of divinity." 17 8 170-17

Now, it happened that some of "these chief spiritual divine beings prevaricated" by abusing the freedom God had given them. God had, in fact, allowed the emanated beings the freedom to act "in conformity with their particular thoughts and will, as it is not in Him to read in the secondary causes neither to hinder their action without imparing His own proper existence as Necessary Being and His divine power." "God can read the thought only after it is conceived and He cannot destroy the will of the spiritual beings." 21-22 49

The rebellious spiritual beings wanted to play a higher role than the one assigned to them. As "secondary agents" they were to act only as instruments of divinity. Driven by pride however, they too wanted to emanate spiritual beings who would depend solely on them. Thus, they infringed upon the Almighty Divine Power pretending to give birth by their own power "to third and fourth causes." 11

(This action brought about the Fall of the first spiritual beings.)

The fall of the first spiritual beings, this "simple criminal will" which is the "principle of spiritual evil", had three important consequences. First, God created the material world "to become a set place for these perverse spirits to act and exercise in privation (i.e. deprived of all communication with God) their malice ... and to be the boundary of their evil operations." In this prison, (i.e. the material world) the fallen spirits being no longer a part of divinity, who had broken all connections with them, were "emancipated", that is, free not only to will but also to act entirely independently in the domain assigned to them. 12

(The sense of the word "emancipated" is not always clearly shown. Pasquales seems to have distinguished in principle:

1. Emanation: State of spirits existing in the circle of divinity to act according to His views.
2. Emancipation: which is the state of spirits sent by the Creator to other circles where they may enjoy, at their own risk and peril, a complete freedom of action. This is how he defines (page 293) the actual man: "An emancipated being of the circle of divinity."

However, it happens also that he often uses the word "emancipated" in the sense of "emanated", as for instance on page 299 where "divine emancipation" means exactly "emanation". The problematic terminology of the Treatise contributes much to its obscurity.)

Divinity then, in order to appoint a sort of guardian to this prison brought forth a second emanation, that of the "Spiritual Minor", ... commonly called Adam or the "First Temporal Father", (but which the Initiates called "Réau" or "Roux",) ... terms signifying "Man-God", very strong in wisdom, virtue, and power. This spiritual being, endowed with three gifts: "the thought, image and resemblance of the Creator", was appointed to oppose continually the "evil demon, to restrain and combat him". In order to be equipped for this task, he was given the same power which was given to the first Spirits at the moment of their emanation and whoever emanated after them. Adam became their superior and elder because of his glorious estate and power to command conferred upon him by the Creator. 32 223 13

All Spirits were subjected to him ... the perverse Spirits because they had lost their original power as punishment for their prevarication; and also the good Spirits because the Minor had received upon his emanation the power which was originally given to the first emanated Spirits. "As the prevarication of Spirits occured before the emanation of the Minors, they could not have become defiled nor contaminated; also, as no change occured in their class this is the reason why they were depositories of the great power of divinity." The formidable quaternal power (authority over the Spirits), was conferred upon the Minors because they were "pure and unstained Spirts, emanated from the bosom of Justice and holiness to manifest the power and glory of the Creator." 19 313

The First Adam, the eponym type, and portraying the class of Spiritual Minors in the biblical history, ranked in the celestial hierarchy immediately after the Creator. He had not a particle of matter in his being. True ... he had an assumed form ... but it was a "glorious form" "to enable them to act at will upon the active and passive forms" (living organisms and inanimate bodies). 12 (eponym ... from the Greek, meaning: he who gives his name.

"glorious" ... equivalent of luminous.
Pasquales probably gave it this meaning by analogy with the Shekina, the fiery cloud through which Jehova revealed his presence in the bosom of the burning bush and on the Propitiatory in the Holy of Holies. The luminous manifestation by which divinity became perceptible to the course senses of human beings had according to the Jewish conception nothing material. This idea inspired the scene of the Transfiguration of Jesus. The Elect Cohens witnessed certain manifestations of luminosity in their theurgic ceremonies and considered they had obtained satisfactory results when they had seen it.)

This "Emanated God", to whom were subjected all the angels, was the "Emulate" (disciple) of the Creator. His power extended over the entire universe, or "universal creation", and over all its parts, that is on earth or "general creation", "that general part from which emanate all the necessary elements to substantiate the particular", and over the "particular creation," or the "ensemble" of beings existing "in the celestial as well as the terrestrial body", ... the "particular" meaning "all active and passive beings living, from the terrestrial surface and its center up to the celestial center mysteriously called (by the Initiates) the heaven of Saturn." In short, the universe, the earth, and all the inhabitants of the celestial circles ... were submitted to the First Adam. 25 13, 14, 50, 320.

Finally, because of the revolt of the first spiritual beings, "all the Spirits, even those who remained loyal, were subjected to the Minor and the inhabitants of the divine world feel the effects of the first prevarication and will do so until the end of time. They are paying for the crime of the first Spirits, just as the present Minors are paying for the crime of the first man." "As soon as the perverse spirits were banished from the presence of the Creator, the inferior Spirits and ternary Minors received the power to operate the law inherent in them to produce spiritual essences, to form the temporal world, to contain the prevaricators within the dark confines of the divine privation. In receiving this power they became immediately emancipated; their action, which was pure, spiritual, divine, changed as soon as the Spirit had prevaricated; they were now only spiritual temporal beings appointed to operate the different laws which the Creator prescribed to them for the full completion of His will. It was then that the quaternary Spiritual Minors were emanated from the bosom of divinity and occupied, in the divine immensity, the place from which the ternary Minor Spirits have just emancipated to operate temporarily." 347 312-313

"Without the prevarication of the first spiritual beings, the divine Spiritual Beings would never have been subjected to the temporal world. Without this prevarication no change would have occured within the spiritual creation; no divine boundary either supercelestial, celestial, or terrestial would have been created, neither would have there been any spiritual beings sent out to act in the different parts of the creation, as the ternary Minor Spirits would never have left their place in the divine immensity to bring about the formation of a material universe." 319-320

The universe being composed henceforth of four worlds: 331
the divine, the supercelestial, the celestial and the terrestial ... God formed four classes of Spirits: - Superior, major, inferior and minor. The superior, and the major Spirits acting in a medium where all is spirit 309 and nothing is matter ... have never had the power to produce "spiritual essences". The inferior and the minor spirits had the faculty of producing "spiritual", temporal (material) essences", but used it only at the moment of their emanation to form "the temporal world which was to serve to molest the prevaricating Spirits." (In other words, the inferior Spirits created the celestial or heavenly bodies; the minor Spirits the terrestial body, i.e. in total, the two material worlds.)

The role assigned to the supercelestial Spirits was to secure the correspondence between man and the Creator and to serve as a double boundary for the creatures who rule the celestial and material 332-334 worlds where the prevaricating Spirits are contained. As Adam's assistants, they kept watch to ensure the inviolability of the boundaries between the supercelestial world and the prisons of the evil spirits. Agents 321 of the laws of the universe, they were particularly responsible for the preservation of time, i.e. the preservation of the vital energy in the material universe. Inferior Spirits, beings of the celestial world, were entrusted especially to secure the existence of matter. The Man-God, residing in the same domain, acted as a "pure divine Spirit." 331

This order established by the Creator was not only to ensure the firmness of the prison enclosing the revolted Spirits, but especially to place the Man-God in a position and in the best possible conditions, to fulfil the duty delegated to him. Placed in the celestial world, a place very similar to the supercelestial and divine worlds where 331
the divinity also resides, Adam was assured of the latter's direct help since, on the other hand, he was in contact through the intermediary of the supercelestial Spirits with the agents of Providence. It may be said then "that all these things had been thus assigned exclusively for (the use of) man", and "as they were to serve as boundaries for the perverse Spirits, they (these things) were depending on the Minor so he could exercise upon them his power and command according to his will and the laws of order."

SUCH WAS THE SUBLIME ESTATE OF ADAM, THE MAN-GOD, ALSO CALLED BY THE INITIATES RÉAU OR ROUX. Unfortunately for him, however, like the first emanated spirits, he used his free will and just like them ... he abused this dangerous privilege. His pride made him think that the power which God had given him over the universal creation was almost as great as that belonging to the Creator Himself. This sinful pride made itself known at once to the "evil demons, i.e. to the fallen spirits.

One of the chiefs of these Spirits presented himself to Adam "under apparent form of glorious body", and persuaded him to "operate the demonacal science in preference to the divine which the Creator gave him to dominate over all the inferior beings." The tempter said 15-16 to Adam: "Adam, you have inherent within yourself the word which can create every kind ... operate (i.e. create) creatures since you are a creator. Operate before those who are outside of you; they will render all justice (tribute) to the glory which you deserve." This assertion 27 made by the "evil demon" was only partly true as he purposely ignored one important detail. Adam did have in him "the deed (power) to create posterity having a spiritual form, i.e. "glorious", he did possess "a word for bringing forth spiritual and glorious reproductions", but he could not use this power without the cooperation of the Creator. 316

"The will of the First Man having been (when the will had been) that of the Creator, thus as soon as the thought of man originated, the spiritual divine thought had likewise acted immediately bringing forth the fruit of the operation of the Minor, a being as perfect as 26 himself. Adam would indeed have created a posterity of God." "From his unconscious (impassive) form (not subject to suffering) there should have emanated glorious forms like his own to serve as vehicles for the 28
Spiritual Minors which the Creator Himself would send, "thus from the Man-God of the universal earth" would have sprung "a divine posterity and not a carnal one." 13

By yielding to the perfidious suggestions of the tempter, Adam attempted to create "spiritual beings" without the divine cooperation 17 and in the presence of "those who were outside of himself" to earn their admiration. This was a greater sin than the one to which the universe owes its origin. It is true that Adam's crime "while it sprang from his will, it had not come from his own thought" since the whole idea had been inspired to him by the perverse Spirits. However, the prevarication of Adam was even more notable than that of the first Spirits because he applied all his virtue and divine power against the Creator, by performing an act of creation, yielding (on their wish) to the demons and of his own proper will, a thing which the perverse Spirits had not had the time to do as the Creator prevented their evil will from manifesting itself." 21

The punishment was not long in coming and was doubly severe: it manifested first as a consequence of the criminal act ... and then as a change in the estate of the guilty. God "enclosed a minor being in 36 the material form created by Adam whom the unfortunate Adam confined into a frightful prison of darkness." Instead of a glorious form similar to his own, Adam produced only a "sinister form" (material) which he named, 53 after having seen the result of his rash work, "HOUWA" or "SHE-MAN", i.e. mystically speaking: "flesh of my flesh, bones of my bones, product of my operation, conceived and executed by the work of my stained hands." The Creator permitted the impure work of the Minor to subsist so that he should be disturbed from generation to generation, for an endless time, having always before his eyes the picture of his crime ... and that his own succeeding generations might not ascribe to ignorance the cause of his prevarication, but should learn that the miseries and hardships they are and shall be enduring until the end of time ... are not caused by the Creator but by our own first father, the creator of impure and passive matter." (subject to suffering).

In addition to this, Adam was banished from the celestial world and thrown "into the abysses of earth from where came the fruits of his prevarication." At the same time God transformed the glorious form of Adam into a form which was "material, passive, and subject to corruption." This second body made of earthly matter had the same apparent form, as the glorious body into which Adam was (originally) emanated. This corporeal form similar to the one which Adam had involuntarily given to HOUWA was a gross copy, a clumsy reproduction of the glorious pure and unchangeable form with which the Man-God had been originally vested. 30 28 54 28-35

Adam, a prisoner of this material form, was to live on the very same earth "over which, before his crime, he ruled as Man-God without becoming confused with it or its inhabitants." There, he was "bound to operate (to act) as a being purely spiritual temporal (having a soul and body), subject to and under pain of time" (death), to which he was not subject before. The material form he had created through his criminal pride, HOUWA, served to perpetuate the race of the fallen Minors, as "condemned to reproduce himself materially, he could use only material-spiritous essences for his reproduction." He made use of a "Word which set in action, emanated and emancipated, outside of himself the spirit essences according to the law of spiritual temporal nature", thus only "corporeal material forms" could issue forth from him. 315 315 315-316

Finally, as this was the most horrible consequence of his error, Adam found himself, henceforth, separated from God and exposed to the snares of the perverse Spirits. When he still was in his "glorious estate" he knew directly the thought of the Creator and that of the demons. He could read in the one and in the other like in an open book because, "the privilege of the pure and simple Spirit (not imprisoned in matter) is to be able to read in the Mind due to his natural spiritual correspondence". In consequence of this immediate communication with the divine thought he was a "thinking being". Nevertheless, if "nothing can escape the knowledge of the Mind, it is the opposite with the Minors who have been incorporated into a visible apparent material form", as "the body is only a chaos (prison) for the soul, i.e. for the Minor Spirit captured therein." 139 162

Likewise, as "the form became passive instead of remaining impassive, which would have been the case had Adam united his Will with that of the Creator" so also "the soul became subject to suffering through privation"; in such a way that after his fall, Adam became from a "thinking being," which he was previously when "as pure Spirit he could read the divine thoughts and operations like an open book", instead ... a "thoughtful being", ... which means that henceforward he would have only a passing and fragmentary knowledge of the divine thought through a sort of effluvium which the Initiates call "good intellect". (Pasquales seems to have given this particular and unusual sense to the adjective "pensive" by analogy with "passive" which for him, as we have already seen, means: subject to suffering.) 53 29

Moreover, unfortunately for him, he became also more open to demoniacal influences because he was now in constant and direct communication with the demonacial thought through the "evil intellect", whereas the divine thought could not penetrate into his mind without first having been cleared by the good intellect "which prepares and makes ready that particular Minor soul to receive the impression of the good Major Spirit", so that "the Minor is a thinking (being) only occasionally, through his contact with the 34-35 good Spirit." In other words, the Minor, (Pasquales' particular terminology for "human being") who was at first in a constant communication with divine thought when he inhabited the celestial world in his luminous form, found himself after having been exiled into the terrestrial world and clothed in a body of matter ... dominated by perverse Spirits, whose prison he inhabits ... is therefore unable to resist their seduction except by the grace of God, which helps him at times to triumph over "the intellectual ideas implanted in him by the evil Spirits." 75-76 36

Nevertheless, the part which God assigned to Adam upon his emanation, had imprinted upon him an indelible character. The power conferred upon the Man-God was "so considerable that in spite of his own prevarication he was still superior to all the other spiritual beings whether emanated or emancipated. Thus, "the Minor did not lose direct contact with the Creator and his intelligences, as was the case with the prevaricating Spirits. He preserved the original faculty and power which he had received upon his emanation into the universal body. Besides, the severe punishment imposed upon him made him repent. 314 313

Adam repented his crime and God had pity upon him. He did not put Adam within the rank of a "Minor among the demonical Minors whose subject he became." He was spiritually reconciliated with Him and thus reinstated "into the same virtues and powers which he held previously over the infidels of the divine law. It is due to this reconciliation that he (Adam) obtained, for a second time, powers for and against all created beings." However, the terrestrial Adam, degraded and plunged as he was into matter, could no longer expect to possess intact all the privileges he was enjoying in his state of innocence as Man-God. Anyhow, "the Creator gave back to him only one power that was inferior to the one he had given him before his crime." 24 50

The fall of Adam, like that of the first Spirits, had universal repercussions. The emanated Spirits who had already suffered through the revolt of their brothers, were doubly affected by the prevarication of Adam and by his subsequent pardon. "The prevarication of Adam was infinitely greater than that of the demons as the Spirits inhabiting the (divine) immensity felt then a much stronger attraction than the first time and this execrable operation of man brought about a new change in their laws of action and operation. It means that the instant Adam committed his crime the Creator brought the law to bear upon the spiritual beings of his immensity and their laws of action and operation were no longer the same as they have been not only before the prevarication of the first Spirits but since the prevarication of the First Man." "Just as the inhabitants of the divine world pay tribute to the Justice of the Creator for the expiation of the crime committed by the first Spirits, so also the spiritual inhabitants of the general terrestrial world pay tribute to the Eternal for the prevarication of the First Minor committed in the center of the temporal universe." 317 348

As the guardian placed in charge of the prison enclosing the perverse Spirits had left his post because of unworthiness, the good spirits alone remained to ensure the supervision of the two lower worlds, to prevent the perverse Spirits from leaving their place of exile. They were at the same time also bound to serve as intermediaries between God and the Minor. "Without the prevarication of man 334

the divine beings would have been subjected to the temporal only in one way (to contribute to the maintenance and fixed duration of the universe); because of man's prevarication, the inhabitants of the different classes in the immensity were required to contribute to the reconciliation and the purification of the Minors." 319

Adam, fallen but forgiven, proved himself unworthy of the divine mercy as he committed a new error. When Adam and Houva "came out of their first place of Operation i.e. they were forced to leave the celestial world where beings made partly of matter, (what they became), could not stay ... they were ordered to reproduce forms similar to their own, but they obeyed "with such furious passion of their material senses," that the Divinity refused to cooperate in their work. Also, their first born, Cain, signifying "Son of my suffering", fell under the influence of the demoniacal powers to the utter despair of Adam. 61-62

This new punishment caused only a passing repentence by the culprit as he soon fell back again into the same error. He abandoned himself once more with Houwa in the frenzy of the senses and procreated two daughters: Cainan and Aba 1 and, after an interval of six years, four other children were born, two males and two females. However, the first-born of this second series was begotten and conceived 63-64 in conformity with the intentions of the Creator. "Adam and Houva cooperated in forming their son Abel by a short operation of matter, i.e. without any excess of their material senses." Thus, "the Creator could not refuse his approval of their operation and gave the form they had operated upon, a minor being endowed with all spiritual and divine wisdom." Adam called this child Aba IV, which means a 101
"Child of Peace", or Aba X, a "being elevated above all spiritual 67 sense," and he was "like Man-God only on earth." 65

Cain, furious at having to give up his birthright as elder to Abel, and encouraged in his rebellion by his two sisters, Cainan, and Aba 1, "conceived to operate a culte to false gods and to the prince of demons, asking them to grant him a power greater than that given by the Creator to his brother Abel," and overcome by hatred, he killed Abel while pretending to kiss him. The atoning 71 blood of the just whom the Lord endowed with His own wisdom, sealed 73
Adam's second reconciliation with God. Adam, announcing to Houwa the tragic end of his beloved son, assured her "that his crimes had just been atoned for by the victimized Abel, his Son." 74

However, the murder of Abel deprived men of a light which illuminated their gloomy path. God transferred the gifts of this Just one to another Minor. "Adam then conceived, with the approval of the Creator, a third posterity which he named Seth, meaning: Admitted to the posterity of God", and "the Creator Himself taught the blessed 118 man Seth, through his spiritual messenger Eli (Heli), the secrets of the spiritual divine powers, which contained and controlled the whole nature, both spiritual and material." 119

From Adam's third posterity onwards, the fate of humanity had been sealed forever. The plot and the people taking part in the drama which is being played on earth right up to our days, have been set for the "duration of time". Mankind falls into two classes: the descendants of Cain, and the posterity of Seth. The first are the outcasts, the prisoners of matter, skilled in useful grossly material arts. They discover the means to build cities, to smelt metals, to exploit the mines, hunt wild beasts. The Lord, however, keeps them 90-91 wandering about in spiritual darkness. When the Flood will have have destroyed the first perverted humanity, the accursed race will be reborn with the descendents of Ham.

Those belonging to the second class learned from Seth how to practice a culte in a manner agreeable to God but these favourites of the Lord are as weak as the First Man was. In spite of divine inter- 129 diction, the posterity of Seth united itself with the "children of men", : (i.e. the concubine daughters of Cain's posterity) and "deprived itself 130 of all the divine spiritual knowledge which Seth had imparted to it." The history of the Jewish people is but a detailed account of such relapses followed by ephemeral repentance and reconciliation. The Hebrews, although enlightened at different times by a divine messenger, soon forgot the sublime truths revealed to them. Thus they lost all communication with God and entire generations fell back into darkness, until the reappearance of a new prophet, whose teachings will not have any more lasting effect.

The Bible, properly interpreted, teaches us thus the destiny of the Minor who forms part of the posterity of Seth. As a Spirit fallen from heaven, his decadence has never been definitive. "All corporeal form is always a chaos for the spiritual divine soul, because such material form cannot receive the communication from the spiritual divine intellect, being itself only an apparent being; the Minor, to the contrary, because of his emancipation is sensitive enough to receive 162 communications at any time because he is an eternal being." He can be "reintegrated", even in this world, into the same estate God had placed Adam after his second reconciliation with Him, and to enjoy the same privileges which had been given to the father of sacrificed Abel.

This reconciliation should become the supreme goal for all the efforts of the Minor and he must enter the path of Salvation himself, willingly. He is essentially a free agent. It is true that good or evil thoughts are impressed upon him by entities outside of himself. The "holy" thought is suggested to him by a divine Spirit just as the criminal thought by an "evil demon." However, he can use his free 32 will as such suggestions are not "operating wills, therefore the Minor is his own master, he can either accept of reject them." On the other 34 hand, divine prescience would not bind the human will, as God cannot force the decisions to be undertaken by the Minor nor the actions that will follow them, and though He has established absolute laws governing all that exists in the universe, He has left His creature freedom (of choice) "as prescience is proper to Him" (sic) and as He takes no part whatsoever in the second causes of this universe." 386

Finally, if man, plunged into the demonical atmosphere of this material world where he inhales at every moment the evil mind, "finds himself in a bad position to resist it, the Creator has on the other hand restored an equilibrium by detaching from His spiritual divine circle, a Major Spirit to be the guide, support, and companion of the Minor who emanates and descends from the immensity to be incorporated in the center of the elementary matter (material world) to act in the terrestrial circle according to his free will." Thus the Minor in his fight with the perverse Spirits, can use three very strong spiritual forces against the two weaker evil influences. They are: his soul endowed with the innate knowledge of good; the suggestions made by the Major Spirit detached, but near him; and the good intellect. 290 20

However, if this victorious struggle against the demonical temptations and bonds of matter is a preliminary and necessary condition to effect the reconciliation, it is not enough to assure oneself about it. To reach his goal the Minor must receive the help of an Elect-Minor. The help which this "Reconciler" extends to him is twofold: he transmits to the Minor the instructions received directly from the Creator regarding the culte he should render the divinity through a "spiritual operation", he communicates to the "men of desire" to whom he is sent the gifts he has received, marking them with the "glyph" or "Seal" without which no Minor can be reconciled as without this mysterious ordination he remains, no matter what his personal merits may be, a "Minor in privation" (without communication with God). 129, 40-4 43 40, 42, 45, 48, 49

The supernatural beings, the Elect-Minors, "appointed by the order of the Creator to designate the minor spiritual beings who must accompany the triumph of the manifestation of divine Justice, are born and receive temporal life by sheer will and divine inspiration. Whatever be their form emanated from the posterity of Adam, the Minor who inhabits this form is a truly thinking (being) and never a thoughtful one, because the Eternal manifests to Him his own will through the vision of one of his deputies who tells him, without any mystery, exactly what he must do to act according to the divine will."

The Elect-Minors live on the borders of the human society, not to be contaminated by the contact with it. "The Eternal keeps them apart from the profane (causes them to live away from the profane) and the permanently impure (beings) of the earth, shielding them from any intellectual communications with the ordinary Minors."

Elect Minors appear as luminous meteors in the course of time: the Eternal calls them back to Himself through some unknown ways, and the subsequent generations do not know that they have even existed, as the "Creator with the passing of time allows the ordinary mortals to forget the memory of these happy beings, that being ignorant of their true abode and the way they took towards it, they may also ignore their works, actions and their spiritual temporal operations (operations through which the divine Spirit manifests itself in the material world)". Thus men whom the Eternal wanted to make "Children of God", soon forget the formulae and ceremonies of the divine culte which was taught to them by the last Elect-Minor appearing among them. They transgressed the prohibition put upon them not to enter into the union with the "Children of Men", i.e. the Minors "in privation", in such way that their posterity "was deprived of any spiritual divine knowledge" and it became necessary to send another messenger.

MARTINIST QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

General information about the Martinist Order.

"Our purpose is not to establish dogmatizing Masters but to gather together humble students devoted to the brotherhood of eternal truth."

(1) What is the Martinist Order? "The Martinist Order is an Order of Christian Knighthood, a close organization that preserves within a small body of Initiates something it has inherited from distant Adepts, a link with a few enlightened beings, and an unpretentious way of life for people who are of this world ... and who live in this world." The words of Sâr Gulion which answer the question succinctly!

(2) What is the purpose of a Martinist Lodge? (a) To perpetuate the Martinist Initiatic Tradition and thereby lead its members to a higher spiritual life. (b) To study the teachings of Martinez Pasquales and Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin and the Traditional Esoteric Arcana. In short: to provide a place where Martinists may come together for the purposes of Martinism!

(3) What is Martinism? It is, before anything else, AN ATTITUDE OF MIND which determines a way of life, based on certain doctrinal principals. These doctrinal principles have to do with a particular conception of the origins of Man and his place in the scheme of creation.

(4) Very briefly, can you say something about the history of the Order? Martinez Pasquales founded the Order of Elus-Cohen (Elect Priests) in the 1760's. L-C de Saint-Martin was a keen Elu-Cohen and the author of several books. Later, he became a member of the Order of Unknown Philosophers. The teachings of Pasquales & Saint-Martin became known as 'Martinism'. In the 1890's, Papus, GrandMaster, reconstituted the Works and gave the organization the name of 'Martinist Order' to commemorate the names of Martinez Pasquales and Saint-Martin. A few years after Papus died, the Order divided into three branches. One of these branches became known as the Ordre Martiniste et Synarchique. This Order is known in Barbados simply as 'The Martinist Order of Barbados' because English- speaking people find difficulty in pronouncing the French name. The OM&S is the only one of the Martinist Orders which has operated continuously since its inception, the Works of the others having been disrupted by World War II.

(5) Do all branches of the Martinist Order follow the same system of operation? While there are certain standard and traditional practices, lodges are flexible and work according to their own particular environment, thus there will be differences in curriculums, meeting schedules, etc.. The information presented here specifically concerns Lodges working under the Grand Lodge of Barbados. Lodges working under different dispensations probably have different procedures.

(6) Who determines how often the Lodge should meet, monthly dues, etc..? Lodges discuss and decide on their own particular activities. Regarding Lodge dues, these are usually by voluntary donation.

(7) How do new Lodges start? Usually either by a Lodge dividing or as an Associate Circle. (It takes three Initiated brethren to form a Circle under Dispensation.)

(8) What is the ideal number of persons in a Lodge? Groups are more cohesive and effective when numbers are kept relatively small. Martinist activities are of interest only to persons who can nurture ideas of the most sublime kind. It is better to have a small number of sincere brethren, than a large number of vaguely interested. If the Lodge is working as a single unit a maximum of 22 brethren seems to be a practical number; should the membership increase it is often better to "split" the Lodge in half and form a second one, because the larger the number, the less closely knit the group becomes. Lodges working separate degrees i.e. a Lodge and two Heptads, seem most effective, again, if they keep the numbers in each of the heptad degrees under 22. The salient point is: there is no magical number! But experience shows small groups are more cohesive than large ones; it is up to each Lodge to determine its own the "best number".

(9) Describe an ideal conventicle. Martinist activities are very mystical and transcendental and a conventicle is a sacred experience. Brethren should pay close attention to the ritual and understand what it is intended to accomplish. Prayer, meditation, reading from the scriptures, and singing sacred songs or hymns help to create the proper atmosphere. To create this beautiful atmosphere and bathe in it, is the chief reason for the conventicle. A lecture is also given which is usually debated however: the emphasis is to be placed on the spiritual aspect of the conventicle. The lecture/discussion is of secondary importance.

(10) Are there any 'official' or compulsory lectures? There are some traditional and particular lectures and a copy of these is given to each new member. At regular conventicles, the Lodge Master will either prepare and give the lecture, or he will ask one of the brethren to do this.

(11) You said the Lodge Master or some other person prepares the lecture, did'nt Lodges previously have a series of fixed lectures? Yes, and mainly for this reason: Until a few years ago, all Martinist material was in French, simply because this was the language of our founding Past Masters. Therefore, to aid the Work in English-speaking countries, a series of lectures had to be formulated. Under the circumstances, these 'set' lectures were useful and served a valuable purpose at the time, but there was the problem of a drop in interest after members had heard them several times. With the influx of Martinist material now available in English, and the ever-growing fund on which to draw, it is no longer necessary to have to rely on a series of 'set' lectures.

I might mention that the French Lodges never had any system of fixed lectures for the simple reason that they could go directly to source material!

(12) From where is the English Martinist material available? The International College of Martinist Studies is the primary source but some work is also being done by the OM&S in England and the United States.

(13) Does one have to be a member of the I.C.O.M.S. in order to become a Martinist? No, however we do encourage all Martinists to support the ICOMS because of the great amount of information they are making available, both on Martinism and the Traditional Esoteric Arcana, generally. Right now there is available in English:

Man, His true Nature and Ministry by LCdeSM.
Volume of Correspondence between Saint-Martin & Baron Kirshberger.
Five Christian Principals.
Several Volumes of The Martinist Tradition.
etc. etc..

(14) I appreciate the purpose of a Martinist Lodge is to study Martinism, but can't other topics be considered as well? Martinists are esotericists so there certainly is room for a study of the traditional Hermetica in a Martinist Lodge.

(15) Are persons required to change their religious beliefs, or accept some new doctrine? No! ... and to be very clear: No! THERE IS ONLY ONE TRUTH and all people, everywhere, are trying to perceive this Truth as clearly as they can. No one, or no organization for that matter, (whether scientific, philosophic or religious) should ever be so bigoted as to think that their own conceptions are Absolute ... and everyone else's is folly! A Martinist Lodge is one of the few places on earth today where people may congregate without having to surrender their individual right to freedom of thought -- and have to subscribe to a set of beliefs formulated for them by some supposed authority! In other words: Martinism is not dogmatic! Martinists assemble in their search for Truth, in an atmosphere of freedom, -- and freely share their insights without fear of being ostracized or laughed at. Each person is free to take what they can use -- and leave what they can't.

(16) But is'nt it said somewhere that "the teachings of Martinism is dogmatic since original light must be transmitted in the form it had in the beginning"? This is in reference to the Initiation and certain traditional landmarks and practices-- which we rigidly guard and protect.

(17) Are Martinists required to be vegetarians or teetotallers? As already pointed out, Martinism is not dogmatic and does not lay down a set of prescribed rules that members MUST follow. It might suggest, but it never enforces. Martinism is opposed to all forms of extremes, indeed, the exoteric passwords of the Order might well be:

Tolerance and Moderation. As a practical system of study, Martinism recognizes the existence of material contingencies and physical appetites. It is concerned with regulating rather than with suppressing them. It is also tolerant of other teachings and recognizes the value of certain practices for certain people. It is in this spirit that we make the following statement: Martinism does not teach or encourage any of the following practices:- vegetarianism, absolute continence, abstinence from smoking, teetotalism, asceticism Martinists may, of course, as individuals, indulge in any practices they like, but they should not mislead people into believing that these practices are part of Martinism.

(18) Is there any prerequisite for becoming a Martinist? Membership is open to any man or woman over 21, who is of good report and who professes a belief in a Supreme Being or God.

DEVOTED TO THE ADVANCEMENT AND MYSTICAL ENLIGHTENMENT OF MAN

Dear Brothers & Sisters: #108

It is not possible to divorce Martinez's General Doctrine from the system of Ceremonial Magic practiced by the members of his Order of Elus-Cohen and which is known under the name "PARTICULAR DOCTRINE". The General Doctrine gives a structure of creation in which Archetypal Man occupies a position which has been lost through the Fall and which must be regained by Man. The Particular Doctrine gives the practical steps through which Man may work at the re-integration of the individual and at the re-constitution of the Archetype.

Let us then examine briefly the main lines of this Particular Doctrine through which Martinez, a person of no great culture nor of high social position, was able to convince the mighty of his time of the truth of the sometimes seemingly farfetched tenets of his General Doctrine.

Here is a point that should always be kept in mind: Why should Martinez, who certainly had no great eloquence -- but an atrocious style and uninspiring manners -- have been able to get such a following of worldly wise high-ranking military gentlemen, aristocrats and businessmen? The doctrine he taught was abstruse, sometimes even preposterous-sounding. And yet, all who became his followers remained unflinchingly faithful and loyal to him even, as was the case with Saint-Martin, when they decided that his way was not theirs. No one ever turned round to say he was a fraud or a false prophet. The only possible reason for this loyalty is that Martinez could offer irrefutable proofs of his authority. These proofs were to be found in the "Operations" of the Order Elus-Cohen.

In examining the nature of these operations, it is essential first of all to place them in their proper sphere. To many superficial students, Martinez was simply a "magician" and the mystery surrounding the Works of the Elus-Cohen tended to give the impression that their Rites were somewhat tenebrous. In fact, however, they took place within the general framework of an essentially Christian and sacramental way of life. In the "Breviary of the Réaux-Croix"(1) we find Invocations directed to God the Father, to the Son, to the Holy Ghost and to the Virgin Mary. Practically all the "Operative Conjurations" ended with the formula: "In the Name of the Father Creator, the Son Redeemer, the Spirit Preserver..."

Let us mention in passing that there is nothing surprising in the Christian background of this Theurgy. Henry Cornelius Agrippa and others have stressed the potency (?) of Christian Formulas. Martinez remains thus in the great Rosicrucian Tradition of the 15th, 16th and 17th centuries.

(1) Some of the prayers from the 'Breviary' can be found in The Martinist Tradition, vol two, by Rene Cossey. It is possible that the entire 'Breviary' may be translated and published in English.

Martinez's rituals, on the other hand, are entirely different from all previous traditions. In no other system do we find the quarter-circles, the half-circles and the multiple circumferences of the operation carpet. Martinez's comprehensive table of 2,400 names, characters and hieroglyphics has nothing in common with the Angelic Seals of the ancient Keys of Solomon. Instead, we find the classical planetary seals, the names of the Apostles, the Divine Names of the Qabalah, the names of the Angels of the Elements, of the Days, of the Hours and of the Seasons. We may say therefore that a major part of the Martinezist system of evocations is peculiar to Martinez.

But what were the "operations" of that system? They fall into two main categories:

a) EXORCISMS designed to control and impede the demoniacal action in the Cosmos, to fight its effect on men, to eliminate its power over the "operator" and his assistants, to end or limit certain plagues of Mankind and to counteract the operations of Black Magic.

b) CONJURATIONS designed to bring the Operator in contact with the Angelic World and with the Holy Assembly or Communion of Saints where he will select respectively Patrons and Guardians. As he rises in the Universal Order and receives successive Ordinations, the Elu-Cohen is able to contact higher and higher hierarchies. All these contacts must be confirmed by the phenomenon called "passes" with the apparition of certain luminous hieroglyphics or with audible communications.

c) In addition to these two main categories of operations, there are some beautiful prayers, very mystical, asking God's Grace and assistance in achieving re-integration.

All ancient traditions point in the same direction. The Initiate rises from plane to plane, from sphere to sphere, in a world invisible to the eye. At each and every step, the Initiate must pronounce the WORD and show the Seal or Mark in order to be permitted to enter the higher sphere by the Angel who guards the Portal. The Martinezist system follows the same pattern. The words and seals are knowledge, the secrets, the mysteries that must be penetrated to accede to these spheres.

When the cells of the Archetype were separated and dispersed into matter by the Fall of Man, they were also separated from a completing element that remained on the Divine Plane. The Hebrew word for Spirit:- RAUCH, and Soul:- NEPHESH, have different genders and this gave rise to the doctrine of the Mystical Marriage between the Spirit and the Soul. It is that mystic union between Man's Spirit and the supplementary principle existing on the Divine Plane that constitutes the ultimate aim of the Martinezist operations.

This then was the secret of the mysterious authority of Martinez. His Initiates were privileged to witness the Master at work and to witness the manifestations establishing and confirming the success of the communications with the invisible. What were the details of these manifestations? The outside world will never know. They were too sacred to the Initiates to be discussed with the profane - even with the members of the lesser degrees. Louis-Claude de Saint-Martin, who showed some drawings of passes observed by himself, to Baron de Gleichen, never did talk much about them. He restricted himself to affirm that in what he saw : "signs of the Repairer (Christ) were manifested."

These manifestations must have been pretty convincing for from that moment, the Initiate always showed respect and obedience to Martinez in spite of his human foibles. After this "demonstration", the disciple worked to achieve similar results by himself. If we consider that it took Willermoz nineteen years to achieve personal results, we will understand that Martinez's authority in the matter must have been quite remarkable if he could inspire a disciple to practise that length of time without any tangible form of reward.

(Before closing, enquire whether the brethren wish any part re-read.)

* A Ritual of Exorcism has been published by Rene Cossey in The Martinist Tradition, volume one, for those interested.*

Brothers & Sisters, Greetings! #109

We said last week that, apart from forms of prayers, the Theurgic Operations of Martinez fell into two main categories: exorcisms and conjurations. It is not our intention to go too deeply into the details of these operations which would require a study of Practical Magic that would be out of place in our Conventicles. The Brothers and Sisters interested in the subject should follow this study on their own. Many books are available on the subject. We can recommend those of Papus and Eliphas Levi, as well as any good treatise on the "Keys of Solomon" and the Magic of Abramelin.

Let us simply list the 10 operations of the Elus-Cohen:

1) Cult of Expiation
2) Cult of Personal Grace
3) Operative Cult against the Devils
4) Cult of Prevarication and of Conservation
5) Cult directed against war
6) Cult of Opposition to the Enemies of Divine Law
7) Cult for the Descent of the Divine Spirit
8) Cult of consolidation of Faith and of perseverance in the Divine Spiritual Virtue.
9) Cult to secure the Conciliating Spirit of God within oneself
10) Cult of Annual Dedication of all operations to the Creator.

In this list, the word cult should be understood as "Rite".

Although mainly traditional, the Magic of Martinez had a few special features. The "Magic Circles" are more in the nature of figures of a superphysical world than an object of protection as in conventional magic. They are in fact a sort of "spatial model" in which and upon which the Operator intends to work. The Luminaries are less sources of light of a decorative or symbolc nature than once again figures or models within which are condensed invisible presences, those of distant operators working in sympathy with the actual Operator or of deceased or superhuman Protectors, evoked by the Rite.

There is no sword and no metallic items used in the operations, the incense burners being replaced by an earthenware dish. The participants removing their shoes in exchange for cork-soled sandals. The protective pentacles which are usually made of gold, silver, lead or tin are replaced by a small shield of virgin parchment.

There is one more particularity in Martinez's Rites: the "Potent Names" of all traditional forms of magic, which are usually the names of Spirits from Beyond, of Angels, Genii, gods, etc.. are replaced by the names of Partriarchs, of Apostles and of Angels. This was part of Martinez's "Christianisation" of Magic. He was in a way extending the practice of the Christian Churches themselves which had gradually introduced cults of Saints in order to replace the pagan cults that had survived the spread of Christianity.

Through these Rites, the Elus-Cohen could and did enter into contact with the Invisible from which they received by means of "passes" or manifestations, and without any intermediary, answers and instruction. The identity of the Intelligence thus contacted was hidden under such names as "la chose" (meaning the Thing), "l'Agent Inconnu" (the Unknown Agent) or the Philosophe Inconnu (the Unknown Philosopher).

This Unknown Agent is said to have inspired Saint-Martin's early books and to have given numerous instructions.

DISCUSSION

Next week, instead of revising the work of the past several conventicles on the doctrine of Martinez and the Rites of the Elus-Cohen, we shall examine some parts of the ritual from the Order of the Knights of Saint-John, a theurgic Order- descended from the Elus-Cohen, and to which many of you belong. In so doing you will be able to discover whether you have acquired any new understanding of "the works of the day".

Before closing this chapter, however, let us recapitulate in our minds, all that has been said about Martinez's doctrine. We will find that the Theurgy of the Elus-Cohen, given as it did, in accordance with the doctrine of Re-integration, precedence to the superior elements of Mankind (already re-integrated with the Archetype), rather than to non-human entities abiding in the Worlds of the Beyond. Thus in full agreement with the occidental tradition, in the mysterious "Kingdom" promised to him, Man remained that which he was conceived and emanated for by the Creator : the KING.

Let us emphasize once again the overwhelming spiritual and moral superiority of Martinez's Réaux-Croix over the innumerable sorcerers-apprentices and magicians of all times. Their motives were of the purest. They did not invoke the assistance of the Beyond for any form of material or sensual success. Their sole desire was to have a glimpse beyond the "veil" lifted for a moment, of the Gates of the Celestial Jerusalem, the fabulous "city of beatitude", the Kingdom of an eternal morning.

Brothers & Sisters: #110

Tonight we are going to have a look at some parts of the rituals of the three degrees of the Order of the Knights of Saint-John: Novice, Squire and Knight. Most of you here belong to this Order and you will be able to see whether the knowledge you have acquired about Martinez's Doctrine will enable you to understand them better.

In the opening of the degree of Novice, the Herald is requested to invoke the INVISIBLE MASTERS of the Order. The term Invisible Masters could mean many things. To you, however, it can only mean those whom Martinez calls "Regenerated Minors" and who are the High Initiates of the Order who have attained Adeptship and have reintegrated with the Archetype. They are now the Masters, members of the Holy Assembly who "exist" on a plane of high astrality.

"O ... of ... Past ... have ... the S... L... and have ... in ... activities ---"

We see here that the invocation is addressed specifically to the Regenerated Men, who, during their earthly existence, participated in the works of the Elus-Cohen, our spiritual ancestors. The S... L... they knew was the manifestation of the Unknown Agent in the Temples of the Elus-Cohen. These manifestations were usually of a luminous nature, in the form of "glories", and the word L... is used here both literally and symbolically to describe the manifestation and the knowledge it supplied.

You will have noted that although the luminaries, dedicated to the attributes of the Sovereign Architect, are lit early in the ritual, the other lights are not lit until the invocation is over. It is only after this invocation that these candles are lit. We shall remember that to Martinez, the flame of candles constitutes the effigy of a higher world, a place where the Invisible Presence can condense.

By lighting the candles after the invocation, the Preceptor gives an abode to the invisible presence of the M... invoked. Once the last candle is lit however, the B.I. invites the brethren to form the c..., symbol of a vortex carrying our raising aspirations and also model of a world above where the ascending aspiration of the participant can meet the descending astral influence of the Masters. Then, in the words of the B.I. :

"Let us raise our t..., our h... and our W... , ... the PRESENCE of ... I... M..."

The lights are lit, the abode is ready and the c... creates a vortex uniting the 2 planes. We are therefore in the PRESENCE of the I... M... . A revserse process takes place in the closing when the invoked M... are released whilst the lights are extinguished within the c... .

In the opening of the works of the degree of Squire, we hear for the first time the name of U... S... applied to the I... M... . Then comes the invocation which is extended beyond the realm of Regenerated Minors as it calls first of all on the "U... A..." which is said to be the "I... C... who manifested Itself u... o... M...". We have here again a reference to the manifestations occuring in the Temples of the Elus-Cohen. Furthermore, the M... are named:

XXX, called here the Sovereign Founder of the Order, the Knights of Saint-John being considered as a continuation of the Order of Elus-Cohen.
YYY, ZZZ,

and all the others are grouped under the heading of Faithful Knights of Truth. In the closing of the Works of the Squire's degree, the prayer of thanks also extends beyond the realm of Regenerated Minors, the U... A... having been invoked, it is fitting that he should be thanked. The Preceptor says:

... "O REGENERATED MEN, P... evolving towards the I..."...

We know indeed that according to Martinez, the Regenerated Minor is still evolving as he has not reached the top of the hierarchy. Then, the thanks are extended more especially to the "U... M..., perpetually ... in the ..., D... and v..."

In the Knight's Degree, the Invocation begins with the I... B... and equates it with Iesous, or Jesus. "S... of the C... I..." . This underlines the predominantly Christian character of the Knights of Saint-John, without eliminating the possibility of other saviours in other religions. The invocation descends then to the level of the Regenerated Minors, the Masters, who are named in the second degree and accompanied by all the unnamed Regenerated Ones.

Other parts of the rituals reflect the masonic affinities inherited from the Elus-Cohen. The Tyling of the Temple, the question of the H..., the T... Lights and other details are found also in masonic temples. At the present time, the Knights of Saint-John has no ties with freemasonry but it has inherited a tradition which originated in a period of the 18th century when many masonic rites were being formed and which went on evolving chiefly in France and other European countries where freemasonry has not got so rigid a structure as in Anglo-Saxon countries and where it is not always easy to know exactly where masonry ends. This subject will be more easily understood during the study of the History of Martinism, starting at our next conventicle. (In the next Liber.)

This history will be fairly comprehensive and in order not to clutter our minds too much with lengthy lectures, it will be spread over several weeks.

DISCUSSION

Closing.

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

We are now about to begin our series on Alchemy and present hereunder the first instructions. In the immediate beginning we will have to devote a little time to understanding the Alchemical Vocabulary!

Respected Postulant: 111(A)

In various preceding lessons, especially those carrying the suffix (H), we have considered some of the essential principles on which the Hermetic Philosophy is based. Continuing our introduction, we shall begin to consider the practical operation of some of the principles of Alchemy. It will be necessary for us to establish in our minds, many important definitions.

The word "alchemy" is from Al and Chemi, fire and the god or patriarch, also from Khem, the name of Egypt, thus meaning in one sense, the "fire of Egypt" ... in a literal rendering: the essence of Nature's mysteries. Rosicrucians* of the Middle Ages like Fludd, Paracelsius, Aquinas, Von Helmont, Vaughn and others, sought for the "hidden spirit" in every form of matter. Alchemists have been accused of charlatanry, but such men as Roger Bacon, Agrippa, Khunrath, and the Arabian Geber (first to introduce into Europe the secrets of modern chemistry) can hardly be called imposters. Scientists today, who are remodelling the text books on physics on the basic of the atomic theory of Democritus, as reformulated by John Dalton and our present-day researchers, conveniently forget that Democritus of Abderea was an alchemist. Olas Borrichus states that alchemy dates from the most remote times.

Further, we may also state that as the Hermetic Art has been preserved to the generations succeeding the Ancients through the Qabalah, our study in this Art will to a large extent be a study of many parts and phases of the Qabalah itself, this latter being the ANCIENT TRADITION based on the single dogma of Magism.

One of the principal means of interpretation of the Qabalah is an understanding of the Sephiroth, which we will study in later instructions. The principle item for us to keep in mind in connection with them, as we proceed, is the doctrine that "the visible is to man, the proportional measure of the invisible."

From what we know from our Martinist studies, and from the study of Natural Philosophy or Physics, we observe that EQUILIBRIUM IS THE UNIVERSAL LAW, and is the result of the opposition of two forces ... hence the esoteric principle underlying the Sabbatical idea. God worked. He created. Then he rested. God's creative activity and the resultant activity of His creation; the opposition between ADAM Kadmon (or the Cosmos in the form of Man; i.e. the Macroposopus) and The Absolute, is GOD'S REST, THE NIGHT OF BRAHM, GOD'S SABBATH.

In God we comprehend:

a. Stability and Movement.
b. Necessity and Liberty.
c. Order Dictated by Reason, and Self Rule of Supreme Will.
d. Justice and Love.
e. Severity and Grace.
f. Mercy and Benignity.

The Equilibrium of the Divine Mind, or the Mentalism of the Absolute expressed as male in one phase and female in the other, is maintained by the Supreme Will which is also Absolute Reason, and this principle is the "foundation of all religions and sciences; the primary and immutable idea of things." It is the ultimate aspect of Mastership, to which all Masters lower in the Hierarchial scale aspire.

It is in this concept of His mentalism that God made man in his own "Image" ... that is, a "reasoning creature".

To mundane science, creation is the result of mechanical process; to the Hermetist it is the Principle of Generation in manifestation. All proceeds from the egg, cosmic or protoplasmic. All animal and human production is oviparous. Generation occurs through the interaction of the Active Principle and the Passive Principle. The nature of the former is to diffuse; of the latter to collect and make fruitful.

Creation is the habitat of the Creator..Word. In creating, the Generative Power and the Productive Capacity unite; the Binary becoming Unity by the conjunction. The WORD is the first-BEGOTTEN, not the first-created Son of God.

In proceeding further in this study we must keep in mind that we are entering the very Holy of Holies of Hermeticism and the Lesser Mysteries, and while we are told that if we seek, we shall find, and that if we knock it will be opened unto us, nevertheless we must also remember that only those who sense the holiness of Hermetic Art and Truth will understand what they find ... and to all others the mysteries of Hermetics and Qabalah will remain forever sealed. Sancta Sanctis.

It was for this reason the Alchemists concealed their knowledge under symbols and chemical nomenclature, incomprehensible except to Initiates. Ordinarily, the purpose of Hermeticism and Alchemy is understood to be the ability to change Lead, Mercury, or Silver into Gold, to gain the secret of the Universal Medicine or Elixir of Life.

This was termed the "GREAT WORK." The Magnum Opus

The secrets of the Great Work are three: Religious, Philosophical and Natural.

Thus ... the Alchemical, Philosophical or Hermetic Gold is:

a. The Absolute and Supreme Reason in Religion,
b. The Truth in Philosophy,
c. The Sun in Nature,
d. Perfect and Pure Gold in the mineral and subterranean world.

The profane believe that the Alchemist searches simply for mineral gold.

In reality, the Great Work is the search for the Absolute, the Great Central Sun of Cosmos.

But to whoso attains the knowledge of the Absolute, the Great Central Sun, or the Pure Gold of Cosmos, comes also the material results alluded to by the ignorant.

The UNIVERSAL MEDICINE is the medicine of the soul, which is the Supreme Reason and Absolute Justice (a);
(b) Mathematical and practical Truth for the Mind,
(c) The Quintessence, a combination of Light and Gold, for the Body.

Gold is also defined as "an emblem of perfection upon the terrestrial plane, as the Sun is a symbol of perfection on the superterrestrial plane."

Of the "Philosopher's Stone", or the Lapis Philosophorum as it is termed, little more may be said than what has already been given. This is the central mystery of Hermeticism and the Rose+Croix and may not be written down or even uttered but must be known and understood only by those who have earned the right to it, and in such hands it will be safe. At best it may be defined as "a MYSTERY" known only to the successful, practical occultist who has experienced its power.

The striving for the attainment and the degree of its accomplishment in regard to the principles just described, that is, the "Great Work", was known to Alchemists, and is known to modern Initiates as the "Work of the Sun".

In the furtherance of the Great Work, the Alchemists while knowing that all the Worlds composed one unit or whole, nevertheless used terms to express the dual or spiritual and physical phases, thus the terms Superius and Inferius designated the

a. Above and Below,
b. Internal and External,
c. Celestrial and Terrestrial.

Each item while appearing to be two ... is in reality ONE.

Sometimes a third phase was used, known as the intermediate, referring to the environment of the physical world, in distinction to the lower and nature phase of the same. Thus the prima materia of the Magnum Opus is, in the (a) Superior World ... Enthusiasm and Activity,
(b) Intermediate World ... Intelligence and Industry,
(c) Lower World ... Labour. And in
(d) Science ... it is SALT, SULPHUR and MERCURY.

These three, in turn volatilized and fixed, compose the AZOTH of the Alchemists. Azoth may be further defined as the "Fire of the Salt," "The Universal Creative Principle of Life."

Salt, Sulphur and Mercury comprise what are known as the "THREE SUBSTANCES".

a. Salt, alchemically, is the Will; Wisdom. (See Matt V-13; Luke XIV:34).
b. Sulphur, alchemically, is the Principle of Love, the Invisible Fire. (See 1 John IV:8; Matt XX:34; Eph V:2; 1 John IV:13; Prov VIII:35; 1 Cor XIII:2).
c. Mercury, alchemically, is the Astral Light ... the Principle of Mind; the Spiritual Quintessence of all things.

The correspondences are as follows:

a. Salt, with the elementary form of Earth.
b. Sulphur, with the elementary form of the Fire.
c. Mercury, with the elementary form of the Air and Water.

Now, the Great Work consists of this: the creation and recreation of MAN, in and by himself, by which he gains full and perfect control of himself, his faculties, potencies and powers, enabling him to regulate and control the present, and arrange and fix his future. It gives him complete liberty of WILL, and enables him to function in the powers of Azoth, and further gives to him who triumphs, the power to weild the Universal Magical Agent.

This Universal Magical Agent has been referred to in this instruction and elsewhere in the Rosicrucian and Hermetic philosophies as Prima Materia. By the name now given, it will be known to us as the principle that determins the forms maintained by the modifiable Substance we term Cosmic Root Substance, and it is by the knowledge of this magical agent that the transmutation of metals is attained.

In the practice of transmutation, the Hermetic Art includes two operations, one of a spiritual nature; the other of a material, dependent one upon the other ... but principally the material is dependent upon the spiritual.

The Hermetic Art in its entirety was found complete in the engraving on the Smaragdine Tablet or Tablet of Emerald. In that tablet the instructed can read the following:

"Thou shalt separate the earth from the Fire, the subtile from the gross, gently, with much industry.

"It ascends from earth to Heaven, and again descends to earth, and receives the force of things above and below.

"Thou shalt by this means possess the glory of the whole world, and therefore all obscurity shall flee away from thee.

"This is the potent force of all force, for it will overcome everything subtile, and penetrate everything solid.

"So the world was created." (Students are asked to re-read the explanation of the Martinist Pentacle in Liber 3.)

As you have previously been told, the alchemists and illuminati concealed their ideas and knowledge under symbolic and figurative expressions, intended to prevent those who were not entitled from receiving the arcane and mystic science. Thus we note the following:

Gold is symbolized by the Sun ... King.
Silver is symbolized by the Moon ... Queen.
Mercury is symbolized by the Man-Woman, winged and bearded, and seated on a cube, crowned with flames.
Salt (or Matter) is symbolized by the Winged Dragon.
The Metals in ebulition are symbolized by the Lions of different colours.
The entire Hermetic Art is symbolized by the Pelican and the Pheonix.
The Hermetic Art as a Religion began with the Hierophants of Atlantis and Egypt.
The Hermetic Art as a Philosophy began with the Alexandrian and Pythagorean Schools.
The Hermetic Art as a Science began with demonstrable laboratory processes of Paracelsus, Flamel, Lulle and the notable Alchemists.

The Science of Hermeticism alone, will be unintelligible to any student. Only those who probe deeply into philosophy, by the light of the Spirit of the religious phase of the Art will understand. In alchemical parlance such a one will become a King of the Elementary World, for the great agent of the "operation of the Sun" is the force we have previously described as the Universal Magical Agent. This agent is the Spiritual, Fiery, Motive Power; known to the Hebrews and to some moderns as the OD Force, to others as the Essential Astral Light. It is the Secret Fire, living and philosophical of which all the Hermetic philosophers write with the utmost reverence and reserve. It is the Universal SEED, the secret of which was profoundly and carefully guarded, and known only under the figure of the Caduceus of Hermes.

The Sun we will always hold in mind under different aspects. "In itself it is the symbol of Wisdom, the Center of Power, or the Heart of things. The Sun is a center of energy and storehouse of power. Each living being contains within itself a center of Life, which may develop into a sun ultimately. In the heart of the regenerated man, the Divine Power stimulated by the Light of the Logos, GROWS INTO A SUN WHICH ILLUMINATES HIS MIND.

The Natural Sun is the center of all powers contained in our solar system.

The Spiritual Sun is the sun of grace, the Logos or Christ Principle.

Our terrestrial sun is the image or reflection of the invisible celestial sun; the latter is in the realm of Spirit, what the former is in the realm of Matter but the former receives its power from the latter.

The Alchemical SEED is the germ, element, or power, from which a being may grow. Thus, there are germs of Elementals, Minerals, Plants, Animals, Human Beings and Gods.

We have stated that the Hermetic Art is symbolized by the Pelican and the Phoenix. The Pelican is always shown feeding her young ones with her own blood, accompanied by the motto, Ut vitam Habeant. It is one of the Hermetic symbols of the Divine Child born of the Universal Seed.

The Phoenix is the fabulous bird symbolizing death and regeneration, rising from the ashes. Thus the Hermetic Art comprises the mysteries of birth, death, and regeneration of man, accomplished under the Oculus or Eye of the normal consciousness, and the Oculus Divinus or the EYE of spiritual consciousness and knowledge. This is the symbol so familiar to Initiates and Masons, although the esoteric significance is not taught to the latter and is known simply under the name of the "All Seeing Eye."

The Normal eye, and the Astral Light are both designated as the Oculis Naturae.

Now, note this particularly:

Dead Matter is the name applied by the Initiates to ALL LIVING BODIES in the NATURAL state, or as found in Nature.

Living Matter is the name applied to substances assimilated and magnetized by the science and will of the operator, and thus regenerated.

This constitutes the greatest truth in the Grand Hermetic Arcanum, indicating that to the Initiate, the Great Work is vastly more than a mere chemical operation, it is a real creation of the human word initiated into the power of THE WORD OF GOD.

* Please note that whenever we refer to the Rosicrucians or the Rose+Croix, we are speaking about the Rosicrucians of the Middle Ages and not of any modern-day organization using this name.

DANTINNE, ROSICRUCIAN

In the discussion of the initiatic career of Sâr Hiéronymus, we have to leave out a testimony which I had first thought to be essential: that of his daughter, Marie-Louise, to whom I have just referred on several occasions on the subject of his secular life. Contrary to my hopes, she regretted that she was unable to tell me anything about it, not out of duty or because she liked secrets, but simply because she did not know any more than what others had told her about it, which was very little. Her father never shared his memories of occultism with her. It turned out that the little I knew myself in the beginning was already much more than she knew on the subject.

In Péladin's sphere of influence, and carrying on from there and, going by what he said, in the long line of Rose-Croix orders, or so-called Rose-Croix orders of the XVIIIth Century, Dantinne was therefore a Rosicrucian. All his life he dedicated himself to restoring and and preserving the Rosicrucian heritage in the initiatic societies in which he worked, usually unknown and which regarded him as their venerable Imperator. He was also a Martinist, as we shall see. But I do not know whether he attended Masonic Lodges, although it seems probable to me that he did, albeit under the auspices of the occult rite of Memphis Misraïm, and I believe that as far as Masonry was concerned, he did not feel attracted to it. We will come back to Hiéronymus' connections with freemasonry later on. But for now, we are concerned with rosicrucianism, or indeed with the Rose-Croix where, after Péladan, but in his own way, Hiéronymus enjoyed great success between the two wars in Belgium and its neighbouring countries. First of all in Belgium, as we have just seen, where in 1919 he took over Péladan's torch.

Since the third chapter devotes much space to this question, I will only say in a few words about it now to give a general outline of the movement. The Catholic Rose-Croix, also known as the Rose-Croix of the Temple and of the Grail, had three degrees: squire, knight, commander.

Dantinne's re-emergence remained faithful to this system as well as to the constitution of the order. But in 1923 the University Order of the Rose-Croix was formed as a stepping stone to the Catholic Rose+Croix which from then on was referred to as Universal or Inner. The University Rose-Croix, mainly reserved for students, was divided into 9 grades according to a classical system based on the former Rose-Croix d'Or. Having gone through the first nine degrees, the initiates could request admission to the inner Rose-Croix.

To Hiéronymus, "The R+C is an order of Christian Knighthood which is faithful to the Christian tradition, and which considers itself to be the guardian of the Holy Spirit." This is how he defined its entire programme, which he endeavoured to bring to fruition in undertakings which we will see further on, amongst which the FUDOSI must be included first and foremost.

DANTINNE, MARTINIST

It would have been surprising, or even impossible for Dantinne not to have belonged to the main stream of the Martinism of his time, or not to have been enthusiastic about the theosophy and Christian Knighthood offered by Martinism, for he was a wise man of God, a Knight of the Grail, the unknown silent one in the "crazy years". He was indeed a member of the Martinists, but, probably for geographical reasons, that was quite late in time. He was a member of the Ordre Martiniste et Synarchique, and it appears that his initiator was George Lagrèze in 1934. Some indications lead me to believe that, after breaking away from Blanchard in 1939 (see next chapter) he joined the Traditional Martinist Order, of which Augustin Chaboseau was the Grand Master. However, again I do not know what his position was. I venture to suggest that he was an Unknown Superior in the strictly Martinist meaning of the word.

I would also like to note that in August 1939, Dantinne became one of the directors of the Qabalistic Order of the Rose-Croix, which was complementary to Martinism at that time, and of which Augustin Chaboseau became President at the same time, replacing Victor Blanchard. Thus, once and for all, the old quarrel of the two roses came to an end, although it is true that it had already calmed down for quite some time.

Finally, on the subject of Dantinne, Martinist, a direct testimony came to us from Jean Mallinger. It was found contained in a letter written by him before the war to Léon Lelarge:

> "The Martinist Rituals, which are fervently "Christic"(1) delighted our Master, who now feels a great love for this Order through spiritual harmony."

(1) Translator's note: pertaining to Christ as opposed to Christian.

Hiéronymus' tomb (which I will refer to again later) in Huy cemetary, has engraved on it, amongst other symbols, the Martinist Pentacle.

DANTINNE, FREEMASON?
