The Hartley Film Foundation began in 1965 with the dream of producing films on all the world's great spiritual traditions. Having achieved that goal, we moved on to films on personal growth—psychic research, holistic health, meditation, death and dying, steps toward peace—and began calling ourselves FILMS FOR A NEW AGE. We now have a library of over fifty films and have worked with some of the foremost spiritual leaders of our time.

But our real goal all along, much more than making films, has been to promote an understanding of ourselves and our interconnectedness that transcends race, religion and national boundaries—an understanding of our spiritual oneness that can ultimately lead to world peace.

In this goal, we feel that we have fallen far short. That's why we are seeking your support.

Until now we have been a self-porting foundation, funded solely the sale and rental of our films. reliance on self-sufficiency limited to which we can convey message of love, peace and understanding to the public at large. It limits the extent to which we lower our prices. It limits the time we can spend on developing new programs and exploring new avenues for disseminating information.

Your membership pledges, while helping you the advantages listed below will help us—lower our prices—more programs—open up new channels of information (like our newsletter) and in some cases actually us to give our films to communities who can't afford to pay them.

Let us know you care, about the goal of spiritual oneness and peace by pledging your support to HARTLEY FILM FOUNDATION.

HEALTH AND HEALING

Dolores Krieger teaches nursing at the doctoral level at NYU, is a member of Sigma Theta Tau, has done research in healing for ten years, is published nationally and internationally, and her latest book is "How to Use Your Hands to Help or to Heal".

THE THERAPEUTIC TOUCH: Healing in the New Age

Research in paranormal healing has been carried on by a few dedicated scientists - Drs. Elmer and Alyce Green, Sr. Justa Smith, Dr. Bernard Grad, and Dr. Dolores Krieger. This film deals in brief with the work of the first four and in detail with the work of Dolores Krieger - a professor of nursing at NYU who has trained more than 4000 health professionals in the use of what she calls "the therapeutic touch". We see her hemoglobin research, attend one of her seminars and learn her techniques, watch her do an "assessment" of a patient whose malady she does not know, and discover the rationale that motivates her work.

BIOFEEDBACK: The Yoga of the West

"If we can make ourselves sick, then perhaps we can learn to make ourselves well." Based on that assumption, Dr. Elmer Green and his wife, Alyce, daughter Judy, and colleagues at the Menninger Foundation research the ability of the mind to control the body ... they test Indian yogis who can stop their hearts at will or remain in an airtight box for over seven hours ... they study a Dutchman who can skewer his arm with a rusty needle and prevent pain, bleeding and infection ... they use biofeedback training to help patients overcome disease, to give prisoners a sense of self-mastery, and to give ordinary people deeper insight into their subconscious.

HYPERTENSION: The Mind/Body Connection

Elmer and Alyce Green of the Menninger Foundation have pioneered in the use of biofeedback for the treatment of migraine headache and some vascular diseases. Now their colleagues, Drs. Pat Norris and Steve Fahion, have developed techniques for the control of hypertension through the use of biofeedback. These techniques are clearly demonstrated in this film.

The success of the program has been outstanding. Of those who enter, ninety percent are returned to good health and are permanently freed from the many side effects of the drugs used in other treatments.

Appropriate for anyone treating or experiencing stress.

HEALING AND WHOLENESS Holistic Health in Practice

A childhood bout with polio and a football injury sent Bob Keck into a deepening spiral of pain. The doctor's prognosis: permanent confinement to a wheelchair probable. Yet Keck emerged 80 percent triumphant over the unremitting back pain by learning medical hypnosis. Acupuncture, biofeedback, and other altered states of consciousness were explored by the young minister as he sought a road to physical wholeness. What he learned he is passing on now in a holistic health center set up at his church, First Community Church in Columbus, Ohio. It will serve as a model for other such centers. The cooperation of the entire community—medical, scientific, academic, and religious—is the foundation. The objective is health maintenance. Clients learn thru various techniques the part their mind plays in their body's health. It is an inspiring story. The film is a re-enactment of that story.

BODY, MIND AND SPIRIT

Holistic health centers are springing up all over the country. Their emphasis is on prevention and the part the mind plays in the body's health.

We follow four people as they enter a large holistic health center where western medical technology is combined with psychotherapeutic techniques. With them we experience structural alignment, dream analysis, music and color therapy, biofeedback, and other methods for integrating body, mind and spirit.

People interested in holistic medicine, both practitioners and patients, will enjoy and learn from this film.

TIBETAN MEDICINE: A Buddhist Approach to Healing

Tibetan medicine heals both the physical and the psychic being, treats the patient rather than the disease. The three "poisons" of ignorance, passion, and aggression are considered the cause of disease. Medicines of animal, vegetable and mineral substances, gathered in the surrounding mountains, as well as acupuncture and moxabustion are used by Arna Lobang Dolma, the first lady doctor of Tibet. Filmed at the Tibetan Medical Center of the Dalai Lama in the Indian Himalayas.

CONSCIOUSNESS RESEARCH

LIFE AFTER DEATH

Brings into focus the question of the persistence of consciousness after biological death. Dr. Lawrence LeShan presents the scientific view. At a session at the Monroe Institute with Robert Monroe, author of "Journeys Out of the Body", participants learn that they are more than their physical body... Dr. Kenneth Ring interviews four who were 'clinically dead'... Margaret Flavell, British medium, communicates with the late A.D. Mattson, who describes the hereafter. This film reviews historical beliefs about immortality and concludes with the view of modern physicists that at one level of reality we are indeed immortal.

CHRISTIAN MYSTICISM AND THE MONASTIC LIFE

Filmed in the great monasteries of Europe and America, both Catholic and Protestant, with the recurrent theme of all the Western mystics that love leads to enlightenment.

This film attempts to give the viewer the feeling of the mystical experience, through the use of music and nature photography, enhanced by the concepts of the great Christian mystics, such as St. Teresa, who said: "It is not necessary to know much (in the rational sense) but to love much."

"If you're looking for a film to stir spiritual awareness, consider CHRISTIAN MYSTICISM AND THE MONASTIC LIFE. It's a perfectly beautiful film, imparting the peace and the passion of the Man of God. It provides breathtaking views of Europe's massive cathedrals and the great monasteries of both Europe and America. The sound track is superb, as well. A lovely experience."

THE BODHISATTVA WAY OF PEACE Lay Buddhism in Japan

This historic film attempts to suggest much more than its surface theme of "Lay Buddhism in Japan." On the surface this documentary explores one lay Buddhist group, Rissho Kosei-kai. Written and directed by an American scholar, the film was funded by a Japanese foundation, giving it an unusual multicultural intention in production and concept.

Taking one group as representative, George Williams of California State University explores Buddhism in general. An evocative marriage of dance, quotations from religious and philosophical writings, and images reflecting beliefs and customs of six religions make a fascinating program that asks viewers to consider the universality of certain articles of faith. Opening with dancers in front of six stained-glass symbols, the production eschews instructive narration for the reading of edited literary passages that are accompanied by scenes of religious practice, for example of Muslims in a mosque, and by more representative sequences, such as those of a quiet brook that bring to mind the harmony emphasized by the Tao. Beliefs from these two religions as well as those from Judaism, Hinduism, Buddhism, and Christianity focus on the relationship of God and the believer and on ethical principles for the conduct of one's life. Some of these ideas are condensed in the guide, but it might have been even more helpful to have a complete listing of references. The dances and accompanying music play an important role in creating a fluidity in the presentation that echoes the interplay of religious concepts. A valuable resource for comparative study of religions in high schools and religious organizations, this title is also a stimulating choice for public library screenings. Ages 12–adult. BAH.

THE ART OF MEDITATION

Watts demonstrates what he considers the most important dynamics of the art of meditation. The film brings him right into the midst of the viewing audience who can follow along as he leads them step by step in the disciplines of body posture, breath control, and concentration, toward that state of relaxation that stops "the chattering in the skull." Watts claims that most of us are too hung up on the past and future. Through meditation, one loses himself in "the eternal now", devoid of goal orientation. The film does not set forth the principles of meditation in academic fashion, it is experiential...we hear sounds of water over rocks and gulls along a beach; we see closeups of flowers and leaves...all of which function as an aid to relaxation, to "calming the mind", which, when emptied, rests, leaving one with a feeling of peace and well-being.

"An entrancing, seriously made film."

MEDITATION
CRYSTALLIZED

Mandalas, paintings, and sculpture of Tibet are combined with the music and chants of lamas to create an experiential understanding of an art which is the crystallization of centuries of meditation. Lama Govinda, a leading interpreter of Tibetan Buddhism, explains the paintings as guides to the deepest strata of the human psyche.

ALAN WATTS

GOING WITH THE FLOW

Extols the virtue of flexibility. Instead of resisting change Alan Watts suggests we go with it and, like water, follow the path of least resistance. The visuals and narration use this analogy of flowing water to beautifully illustrate the point. As Watts says: "Water in a stream is alive and vibrant, always moving—that same water in a bucket quickly becomes stagnant and dead." Useful for classes and seminars in stress reduction, philosophy and psychology.

MEDITATION: THE INWARD JOURNEY

From the opening sequence—an arresting call to prayer from a Moslem minaret—to its closing footage showing a young man meditating as he walks through the woods, the atmosphere is conducive to meditation. The film explores some of the techniques developed thru the ages for this journey inward...the importance of posture, the use of mantra, the imageless silence of the Buddhist, the Sufi's use of dance as a meditation, the Christian's use of the Jesus prayer. As a young man walks thru the woods rapid-fire titles flash on the screen: "I want", "I need", "How do I get a job?" and other world-absorbing thoughts are replaced with more calming ones, such as: "I have love" and "I am". THE PICTURE SHOW says, "It was a beautiful transition from the hectic to the more wholesome spirit of the tranquil mind. I felt I had meditated too...an excellent introduction to the essence of meditation."

WHAT MAKES JAPAN WORK

Poses the question: What is the influence of Buddhism on Japan's people, her workforce, and her fantastic rise to economic superpower? Three Japanese workers demonstrate an attitude that definitely influences the quality of their work. Their remarks help to illustrate larger Buddhist concepts about life. These concepts are brought into focus by Alan Watts who, with the help of beautiful nature footage and soothing music, provides the viewer with an actual demonstration of what it is like to "Live in the NOW."

ZEN AND NOW

The visual content of the film consists of nature shots from one garden, the idea being that one need not travel around the world to see a universe, that we can develop our sensory awareness and learn to BE HERE NOW. Meditation is part of the structure of the film, meditation which counters the compulsion to be active, to be constantly busy and doing, has no purpose except to be here now. "Stop thinking altogether and be aware of what is. Don't name anything, allow light and sound to play with your senses. There is no past, no future, only Now." RELIGION TEACHERS JOURNAL says, "All five Watts films are worth many showings."

"Useful in many situations, from creative writing to psychology."

FLOWING WITH THE TAO

Alan Watts explores the nature of reality as illustrated in the flowing forms of water. Not didactic, it gives the essence of Taoism through the synthesis of beautiful photography, a special musical score by Jasos, and Alan Watts' inspired narration. This was Alan Watts' last film...it is one of his best. Especially valuable to those interested in developing greater flexibility to life's rhythms and sensitivity to the beauty around them.

THE GLOBAL BRAIN

This 35 minute multi-media presentation is based on Peter Russell's highly acclaimed book, The Global Brain (published in the UK as The Awakening Earth). Using music, specially generated graphics and visual collages, a rich variety of images ranging from atomic particles to galaxies, and his own commentary, he presents an inspiring and optimistic vision of humanity's future in a dynamic and captivating form, and one which reconnects people with their deeper intuitions and inner visions.

The video puts forward the idea of the Earth as an integrated self-regulating living organism and considers what function the human race may be playing in this planetary system. It suggests that humanity stands on the threshold of a major leap in human evolution, as significant as the emergence of life some 3,500,000 years ago. Spiritual growth is shown to be no less than the force of evolution working through the human mind. Moreover, Peter Russell maintains that only through this inner exploration will we find the resources to take us through the current set of global crises into a new era of human development.

GREEN WINTER

Green Winter
is the discussion starter you need for:

- Community programs on aging
- Senior adult health fairs
- Focus groups on death and dying
- Retirement planning seminars
- Geriatric nursing and patient education

Green Winter
provides a basis for ACTION on:

- designing programs of benefit to the senior adult
- addressing the problems/needs of the Alzheimer patient and family
- meeting crucial needs of our aging population
- creating networks for chronic and acute care between senior adults and your community

Green Winter offers a new perspective on aging, partly because it is produced by a very active filmmaker in her mid seventies, Elda Hartley. Her outlook on aging is both funny and reflective, informative and inspiring, realistic and idealistic. The film touches the viewer with its sensitive treatment of retirement vs. continuing to work, attitudes toward death, life after death, longevity, cosmetic surgery, nursing homes, and the role of spouse when one partner ages faster than another, including a difficult move to a nursing home. Footage gathered here and around the world offers the perspective of many cultures. From an inspiring look at a 95 year old weaver still active in a community where people commonly live to be a hundred or more to a Hindu cremation ceremony on the banks of the Ganges, this film offers much to stimulate discussion on the issues of aging.

GREEN WINTER

Reprinted from Video Librarian.

This is a moving and inspirational look at the process of aging. Filmmaker Elda Hartley, who, with her husband, Irving, has spent some forty years in the filmmaking business, gives a candid account of her coming to terms with the inevitable physical and mental deterioration we all face. During the course of the filming Mrs. Hartley watched her husband lose a good portion of his mental and locomotion skills.

Although bewildered by her husband's decline, Mrs. Hartley found solace in the Buddhist teachings of Alan Watts on eternal life promised by Christian theology. She also sought out many elderly people who attributed their good health and high spirits to eating frugally and working regularly at a job or hobby which made them happy. Mrs. Hartley, herself, has found much joy working in all aspects of a business which, until quite recently, was almost exclusively male dominated. The film ends with Irving Hartley entering a convalescent home. Recommended, especially for libraries with extensive

MANDALAS: Visions of Heaven and Earth

Just as her marriage to Izhak Bentov was a union of scientist and artist, so Mirtala's work is a beautiful example of the blending of intellect and intuition. MANDALAS is a flowing sequence of images that evoke our sense of the sacred in all life, with themes that encompass both the visible and the invisible. Sparse verse and Steve Halpern's "Spectrum Suite" support the exquisite visual images.

OTHER LIVES, OTHER SELVES

Roger & Jennifer Woolger

with Roger Woolger, Ph.D.

Made at a workshop for therapists, this video illustrates the remarkable therapeutic power of past life regression. Featuring the work of Dr. Roger Woolger, a certified Jungian analyst, it shows how past lives are a springboard for understanding our current problems.

While not discounting the possibility that these past life stories could all be fantasies, Dr. Woolger feels that "if the unconscious mind believes them, it doesn't matter whether they are true or not." Woolger looks at the way the person is reliving this story in his or her own current life. This is where past life regression becomes present life therapy.

By stressing forgiveness, positive affirmation and learning to die, the chronic pain and illness in these past life injuries is astonishingly eradicated.

Remarkable footage of actual past life regressions include:

- A woman who sacrificed children as an Aztec priest is sacrificed herself and forgiven by the children whom she meets in an after death state.
- Another remembers being the last survivor in a village wiped out by famine and suffers in the current life from "survivor guilt."
- Another participant uncovers a life as an Indian shaman and finds unresolved feelings of being burdened by the needs of his tribe.

With its dramatic examples of past life regression, this video is both a gripping and informative account of this radical yet holistic approach to altering destructive emotional patterns and alleviating illness.

OCEANIA: The Promise of Tomorrow

A video from Australia with extraordinary footage showing our connection with dolphins. Myers spent eight years gathering the material. It has just won the Media Peace Award.

It shows:

- British researcher, Horace Dobbs and American therapist, Betsy Smith in their work with dolphins and severely schizophrenic and autistic patients.
- The development of children's sensitivity to the environment through their interaction with dolphins.
- People who claim to have had contact with O.T.'s ocean terrestrials, dolphins and whales. All agree that the contact changed their lives.
- The work of Igor Jarkowsky, charting the frontier of underwater birth. Extraordinary scenes of tin babies swimming underwater, like dolphins, inspiring the hope for an evolutionary leap—human being with strong inter-species links with oceanic life, particularly dolphins.

Myer's hope is that this new species will help dolphins, "be able to live in peace and harmony with humans."

LEARNING TO CHANNEL Creating Your Own Reality

Meredith Lady Young was a housewife who, during meditation, began to hear the voice of an entity who called himself Mentor and called her Agatha. She wrote a book, "Agatha", which presented his advice for developing higher consciousness. The book sold so well that she was asked to give workshops. This video records a workshop and participants as well as incidents in her personal life and an extraordinarily powerful meditation sequence. You will learn to develop intuition and how to get in touch with your own non-physical guides.

STAIRWAYS TO THE MAYAN GODS

Joseph Campbell, expert in world mythology and author of "The Hero With a Thousand Faces," wrote the narration for this journey to the ceremonial centers of the Maya. THE HUNDREDDTH MONKEY

We all want to know what we can do about peace but few feel we can really make a difference. THE HUNDREDDTH MONKEY (phenomenon) proves we can. The film reviews the research that shows how the thoughts of individuals affect the world.

While feeding monkeys sweet potatoes on a Japanese island, a group of scientists discovered that when a critical number of monkeys learned a behavior, all the monkeys in the tribe began exhibiting the behavior — without being taught. Ken

Keys brought attention to this research book. THE HUNDREDDTH MONKEY, introduces the concept in our film. Both and the film support the notion that when an idea reaches a critical level, the news spreads exponentially and becomes universal. Dr. Rupert Sheldrake, author of SCIENCE OF LIFE, and John White, author of POLE SHIFT, also support this thesis, and author Robert Theobald acts as narrator.

HOW TO BE EXCEPTIONAL

Dr. Bernie Siegel and ECAP patients share their stories

(ECAP stands for Exceptional Cancer Patients, those people who are willing to fight to save their lives)

This video captures the essence of Dr. Siegel's best-selling books, "Love, Medicine and Miracles" and "Peace, Love and Healing".

LEARN . . .

- How to help cure yourself of almost any disease
- To live in this moment
- That all life is terminal
- That illness may be a gift
- The techniques used in ECAP sessions

All this and much more when Bernie Siegel shares with the many people who come to him for help. In interviews on talk shows and a PBS special, Bernie (he prefers first names) reveals the basic philosophy that drives him to share his life, not just his skill as a surgeon, with his patients. The results are spectacular. The patients tell you why and what they have learned.

(50% of the proceeds from this video will go to help establish ECAP groups across the country, because, as Bernie says, everybody, even healthy people, need a support group).
