SWOLLEN INTO A RAGING TORRENT, the Arno engulfed the beloved city of the poet Dante. Partially dammed by the Ponte Vecchio (Old Bridge), downstream at left, and other spans, the angry river sluiced into the venerable heart of Florence. Waters polluted with silt, sewage, oil, and carrion marooned the mayor in the tower-topped Palazzo Vecchio; center and swirl around the cathedral; right — both under construction when Dante served as city councilman in 1300. Before the flood (inset), the tile-roofed Tuscan city basks under a warming sun.
