HARMONY BOOKS

POSITIVELY MOTHER GOOSE

by Diane Loomans, Karen Kolberg & Julia Loomans

illustrated by Ronda Henriksen 36 pages $14.95

Positively Mother Goose.

From creative juices, loose.

Now brings us the stories.

Minus all the gorias.

It's okay for your papoose. (C.L.)

Here is the children's book for all the parents, grandparents and caregivers who want children to grow up gently, who may feel that some books written for children are sending unwanted messages.

The authors and the illustrator have taken some of the best-known Mother Goose tales and poems and removed their sting. The new versions are lovingly expressive and free of negative behavior.

They maintain the same life, movement, strength and vigor of the old ones that may have produced nightmares in our own little heads, years ago.

For a 40-year-old, male purist who stated "I want the real thing", the authors have provided the original Mother Goose (sans pix) on the inner sides of the covers.

Positively Mother Goose is over-sized, hardcover, of heavy-weight paper with large print. All poems, etc. are boxed. Illustrator Ronda Henriksen has done a marvelous job with beautiful color creations that are well delineated, easy to understand, and which lend an aura of safety and love to each subject.

"Spend the night with me."

MOVIE REVIEW

THE RAPTURE

directed by Michael Tolkin

This film, showing around the country, is drawing a large audience of the curious, as well as people who are better acquainted with the religious doctrine known as "The Rapture".

The rapture is the doctrine held by some Christians that true believers will be called up to heaven without dying, an event that will mark the beginning of the end of the world.

This movie is low-key and realistic. The heroine is vulnerable as are many of us, to the persuasive promise of - not only a pain-free existence - but the imminent arrival of Christ, who will gather in the "saved". As you watch the abduction of this woman's emotional self and realize how her mind is working, you will either shiver with fearful resistance or be filled with hope and anticipation of the event.

Here we see a worst-case scenario, where the mindless addiction to an idea ends in murder and insanity. Belief in the "rapture" has disrupted many lives and is reported to have caused great family and financial harm. Seeing this movie is more than an education - it's self-defense!

Before we take a step from which we may not easily return, we should review our resource material. Whereas the rapture seems to be supported by certain Bible passages, in other places we are told to be cautious of those sources. There is more to the Bible than literal interpretation. There may be more to the "rapture" than a narrow interpretation.

We need to remember that God has given us a life to experience. When we try to shorten our allotted time here, we are trying to circumvent God's plan for us. We are here to live to experience. Why hurry?

Shakespeare said, "He that would have a cake out of the wheat must tarry the grinding."

KINDLE MY HEART VOL 2

by Gurumayi Chidvilasananda 205 pages $10.95

Kindle My Heart is "wisdom and inspiration from a living master" in the form of transcribed talks made by Gurumayi during her tour in 1986. She draws upon many traditions, and uses events in her own life to comment on the ageless wisdom. "She speaks with great wisdom about duty, courage, sacrifice, meditation, longing for God, and the highest inner state."

These talks took place in 1986 in Manhattan, May 8, 12, 13, 20, in Shelburne, Vermont, May 29, in Boston, June 2, in South Fallsburg, New York, July 1, 18, 23, 25, 26, 30, August 4, 23, and in London on September 14.

Gurumayi Chidvilasananda is a Siddha Guru - a master of meditation - and a student of Swami Mukhananda Paramahansa who bestowed upon her capable shoulders the mantle of leadership shortly before he died in 1982.

These are beautiful discourses that will uplift the reader whether he or she is interested in this tradition or not.

DOUBLEDAY BOOKS

NAVIGATING BY THE STARS

by Edith Hathaway 295 pages $14.95

The subtitle, Astrology and the Art of Decision-Making, removes the Columbus-looking-for-the-New-World connotation in the title and allows us to recognize and work with this unusual book that deals seriously with a number of rarely-used techniques of astrology.

Enhanced by drawings and charts Navigating by the Stars offers the beginner and the professional astrologer "concise definitions of some of astrology's major tools, its philosophical underpinnings and specific examples of how events and outcomes in people's lives reflect the reality of astrology."

Ms. Hathaway uses 45 stories of well-known figures to demonstrate the full range of her astrological techniques. Elizabeth Taylor, Arnold Schwarzenegger, Shirley MacLaine, Robert Redford, Greta Garbo, JFK, Gandhi and John Lennon are among the many interesting personalities mentioned, as well as Manson, Jones, Speck and Hauptman.

Robert S. Hand gives this book a rave review. LEWELLYN

COMMON BOOK OF CONSCIOUSNESS

by Diana Saltoun

134 pages

$11.5

The Common Book of Consciousness was written those who seek true change, who accept the necessary lifetime exercise, and those who see the gradual success that comes with careless eating habits."

Here you will find help in choosing the areas your life that can benefit from change, help in making those changes, and help in developing your own process for personal exploration, growth and transcendence.

The author does not advocate a surrendering religious extremism, nor moving to the country, rather, expanding of one's awareness whenever wherever the decision is made. Into life we've come here we must make our way - but not without help.

The Common Book of Consciousness asks us consider seriously the affects of our lifestyle and reminds me of the few good books about mind, body & spirit that were available BNA (before New Age). It gives good advice based on sound principles and offers simple things we can do to fulfill our lives in ways that mat without artificial trappings.

Included are drawings of exercises and suggestions for breathing and diet.

Recommended for the timid, and for people who re Eastern or New Age philosophies.

THE SECRET OF LETTING GO

by Guy Finley 220 pages

$9.95

According to well-known people who wrote forward, the introduction and the special message appearing at the front of this book, Guy Finley offer great deal inside The Secret of Letting Go. As you read through, you'll see that they're right and, although admitting it and doing something about it may not be easy to most of us, the practical results are definitely worth it.

The author offers ways to eliminate our fears about who we are and what we are afraid to demand, or demand, from life. He states our case clearly and it gives us the means to heal ourselves.

Here is a way to "stop self-defeating habits, conquer stress, live a fearless life, recognize and clear away obstacles to our happiness. Excellent. LEWELLYN

FOUNDATIONS OF A SPIRITUAL

COMMUNITY by Eileen Caddy 165 pages $5.95

For anyone who might have been living on Mars, the last 30 years, this book is about Findhorn, community that became famous for growing enormously successful garden. That, in itself, would nothing unusual except for the fact that it was done very poor soil with the help of unusual entities.

The Findhorn Community is unique and has been called a place of vision, a place of demonstration and place of transformation. It all started in November 1962 when Peter and Eileen Caddy parked their house-trailer on a dreary spot near the coast of the Moray Firth Scotland. With them in their cramped quarters were their three children and a friend. What happened next is a kind of magical history, one you won't want to miss.

COSMIC KEYS

by M. Blackerby 179 pages

$12.95

Cosmic Keys is all about "Fortunetelling for Fun a Self-Discovery". It teaches us how to use numerology, Chinese astrology, color work, card reading, a palmistry, as well as how to use a Master Dream Key. This workbook is written in simple, easy-to-read language and does not presume nor require background in these arts.

I turned to the Chinese astrology section and immediately found that I was a "Sheep" on the ruli years chart, and also on the hours chart and the ruli signs chart. I read about myself twice - and it was pretty much right on! Drawings, charts and pictures support and enhance the instruction.

Cosmic Keys is a great book for the beginner who wants to start getting results right away. I did and you can, too. LEWELLYN

Free your spirit, free your life

In each moment of our lives, we are faced with choices that can begin to release the essence of who we are. We can instantly change the course of our lives by going within and hearing what our soul is saying. It is a very simple process and one I, like most people I know, have made very complex.

My whole life has been a search for that core essence. Everything I have done has been with the desire to reach the freedom I have felt was right there. I just wasn't able to see it or touch it, and it kept eluding me. Day after day, I was filled with feelings of sadness and remorse. I was not telling myself the truth. What was worse, I didn't know how. My life was extremely painful. From the time I was old enough to have conscious recollection, I had the feeling that I was two people. One was the me who had a life on the inside, a free spirit that could fly. The other was this girl, the one who behaved the way she was supposed to. Neither one of us could may sense of anything. The me, the inner one, was able to talk to her friends, the unseen ones who understood her. She was free to play with the trees and flowers and she knew who she was. The other one, the one who pretended, was always trying to please. She tried to please her parents, her friends, her teachers, everyone in the world. She never felt good enough. She just wasn't. That was all.

She did have time to sneak around and find herself when nobody was looking. She found herself in the books she read, the movies she saw, and in her times with her imaginary friends. That always kept her hoping and dreaming that maybe someday, when she got bigger, she would really be herself. She thought that might be worth waiting for. One day she did grow up. Life was still not very much fun. She just kept getting bogged down with responsibilities.

As life progressed along these lines, I became aware that I had to change it. I tried just about everything that my finances would allow. I began with traditional therapies and continued on with more esoteric studies. They were all of great assistance, but still didn't fill that gnawing ache in the depths of my soul. I kept asking God for assistance and, when I finally stopped seeking the answers outside of myself, I found the spark I was seeking in a very unexpected place - within me!

I could actually feel the strength and the power of my own inner light, when I allowed myself the time and the space to communicate with all levels of my being. It required my focus to change. For me to spend more time alone and to deal with the feelings that came up in the moment, and to have the willingness to allow them to tell me the truth. Then to be willing to make the changes necessary to align myself with that truth.

This is what creates the feeling of wholeness that can then be followed by making new creative choices in our lives. We can bring to the surface the talents and gifts that we may have been told we didn't have permission to express in our childhood. It is a very practical process. If a little girl loved to play with her dolls and to create all kinds of costumes for them to wear, she has a talent for clothing she can incorporate into her adult life. If, in our childhood, we love to read and create stories and plays, we have the ability to do that now. If a small boy loves to take apart his cars and trucks and has the uncanny ability to put them back together, we know that he can utilize that talent in engineering or some other mechanical field.

I have a dear friend who loved designing solar systems and finding out about all the buried information in ancient sites. If she had followed her dreams, today she would be an archaeologist or an astronomer. But instead, she still only pines to go on digs to look into the ancient secrets hidden from us.

As we realign ourselves with these desires and memories, we are taking the most practical steps towards the direction of our dreams. Sometimes, when we look back, we find we have lived out a good many of our childhood expressions.

As I examined my childhood delights one by one, I found out that I had expressed them at different phases of my life. I loved to pretend I was cooking in the backyard using all the weeds, and as an adult I was known for making the best salads around. I did love to play with dolls and to create things to make them more beautiful. As an adult, I had a business in which I designed and made fashion hair accessories. I loved to read as a child, and have been writing and expressing in this field of communication for years. I loved to put on plays, act, and direct with my friends in my grandmother's backyard. I have and am still experiencing the joy of interacting with friends when I present workshops. Most of all, I loved and still do love to talk. As a counselor, teacher and psychic that is what I do most.

As you can see, all we have to do is to uncover our potentials and desires one by one. Then all that is needed is to live out each one until we feel completed. They can be expressed one by one or simultaneously, depending upon your personality and its needs. It is a grand adventure, and one I would encourage everyone to enter into if they feel a lack of joy and spontaneity in their lives. It just requires some time and introspection. The results can open up a whole new realm of possibilities and fulfillment.

During the period February 25 - March 12 1992 PSI TECH explored the ramifications of the purported "ozone problem." Five viewers were instructed to first target ozone degradation as a continuum, then to focus upon "human options."

The outlook is grim.

The attached report is provided for your evaluation and comments. As always, I am available at any time to discuss these results and make recommendations.

Respectfully,

FINAL PROJECT REPORT

Atmospheric Ozone Depletion - Projected Consequences and Remedial Technologies

March 1992

Notes:

The following technical remote viewing report represents the work of five expert remote viewers who conducted multiple sessions against the target. The information is composed primarily of raw, unanalyzed data and conceptual sketches. To accommodate the project's topical focus, independent viewer descriptions have been compiled and presented in a combined format, versus individual summaries.

Time references are only general "feeling" estimates. In places where a viewer's personal thesaurus lacked an empirical label for concepts associated with a perceived gestalt, then those ideas found expression in simile, analogue, metaphor, or allegory. Numbers in brackets refer to accompanying sketches. - E.A.D.

Atmospheric ozone depletion/replenishment was perceived to be driven by a natural ebb and flow process--a geophysical cycle. But this process has become overwhelmed by manmade activity. The effects are most pronounced at very high altitudes where solar energy is intense, accelerating/catalyzing the chemical reactions that are responsible for the problem [1]. In short, the periodic (ozone) degradation part of the natural cycle has become aggravated--overburdened.

Much more energy/heat than ever before is penetrating into lower layers of the atmosphere, where it is being trapped [2]. This energy eventually dissipates, but not without first causing chemical reactions on a greatly increased scale. It is as if the layers were consuming themselves via autocatalysis [3].

Temporarily trapped between the atmospheric layers at very high altitudes, clouds or pockets of caustic, burning, aerosol chemicals clump together into aggregates which grow larger, break up and recombine over an increasingly wider area. This process is eating out towards the edges, like ringworm; it leaves some patches inside the circumference of the "infected" area intact, i.e., the destruction is not evenly distributed [4].

The complex natural ozone cycles/patterns, in combination with the man-made alterations, make it extremely difficult for present scientists to figure out just what is happening. A long series of tests, research, and small scale experiments, (using several types of chemicals) will be undertaken in an attempt to study the problem and modify the atmosphere. But these efforts to stop the ozone decay will have little or no impact; they are only "band-aid" approaches.

A critical point is reached, ca. 2005-2012, where the destruction will begin a runaway course, in a fashion analogous to metastasis. During this period, the problem--and its potential consequences--will no longer be subject to question. A trajectory for the related events is depicted [5]. We are currently observing the early phase, where few effects can as yet be observed upon life at the planet's surface.

The ozone decay will not necessarily be slowed down, but its effects temporarily ameliorated by coincidental volcanic activity, possibly beginning as early as 1996. One such related event will be the explosion of an "extinct" volcano in the North American Cascade chain. This, as well as volcanic activity in other parts of the world, will inject a large amount of (microscopic) particulate matter into the atmosphere which will be rapidly dispersed over vast distances [6]. The volcanic activity will literally and figuratively eclipse the ozone "problem", but decreased sunlight will wreak havoc with crop production in many places.

Chaotic weather patterns in combination with decreased sunlight will necessitate the construction of huge environmentally-controlled greenhouses, so that food production can carry on without being subject to vicissitudes of climate/weather. Unwittingly, these structures form the templates for technologies which will become increasingly critical to sustaining human life. They will begin to be seen as sanctuaries--then habitats, as society begins to "migrate" into them.

After a number of years, particulate matter from the earlier volcanic activity begins to settle, slowly exposing the surface to even higher levels of ionizing radiation as the skies clear. The immediate consequences are most damaging to single-celled plants and animals--the absolute bottom of the food chain. The environment becomes deadly to them. Thus, a vital link in the ecosystem will become catastrophically disrupted.

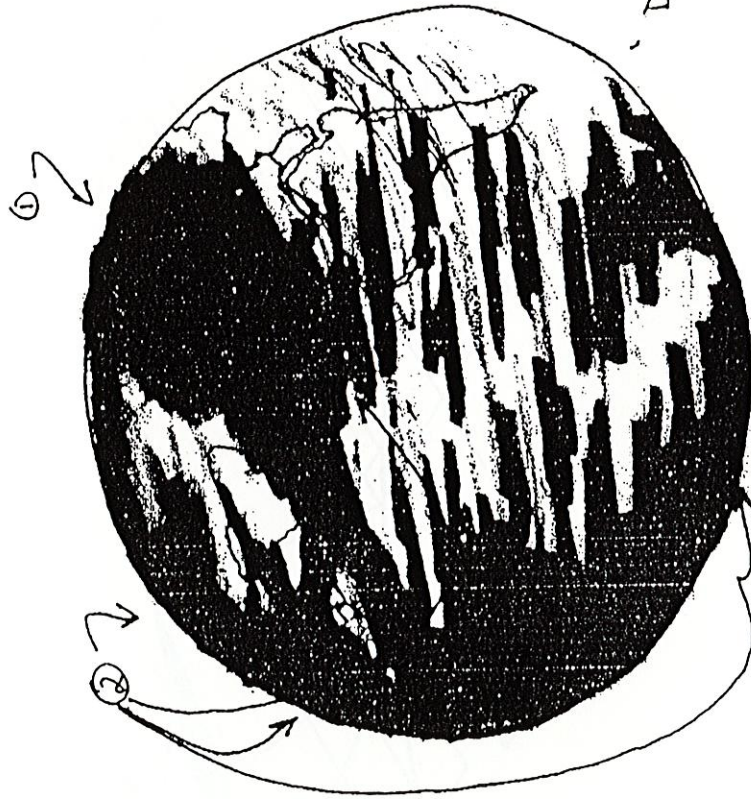

The long term results will be devastating. The effects are irreversible. Die-off will occur on a global-ecological scale. Much of the world's human population is pale, weak, dying. Many species become extinct. Earth is beginning to appear very different.

A point is reached where very little life is seen outside of the artificial structures. The atmosphere outside of these "biospheres" is almost antiseptic. The sky is striated and multi-hued. Earth's remaining (surviving) inhabitants have either been driven underground or into these very large, climate controlled domes which now house complete medium-size cities [7]. "Our children's children" are resident here. There is no perceivable violence. Most creative energy is directed to questions of survival.

Our race adapts to conditions within these encapsulated cities. We undergo a transformation/regeneration, to a slightly different form. Humans are less attractive (by present standards); bodies are more streamlined--"durable." There is another race present that has come from somewhere else (not Earth). They are different, wiser than us. They were once endangered also and suffered similarly, but now serve as "consultants", friends--"brothers from another place."

Eventually, the inhabitants jointly build very large generators which produce molecules (not oxygen) that rise to "seal" and form a protective layer, artificially restoring the Earth's atmosphere [8].

(AOL-like snowflakes, for example... although and they are symmetrical, every one is unique they have different... like pollen particles are even different... like edges... some are even sharp points and edges... invisible spiked.)

These particles are so tiny that they are invisible to the human eye... requires a great deal of magnification to perceive them.
