

FOUR PSYCHIC "SELVES"

Probably up to now, you have thought you were made up of only one general thing, a name with a body dressed in designer jeans or Wall Street suits de rigueur or some other form of ego armor (make-up, $2000.00 perfume purchased on Rodeo Drive?), eating your food, drinking your beer or vintage wines, wearing your clothes, getting what sex you can, doing your bit to support technocracy, and so forth, all the while trying find opportunities to dazzle your friends and audiences with your intelligence. You know you were born one day in the past and that you (this you are not really sure about) will die one day, since everyone else seems to do that. Death is not really real to you; you try not to think about it. In between, you try to get all of what life offers you.

It probably never dawned on you that how and in what circumstances you were born, how and when you will die, and what you will have or not have in between, depends totally on the psychic balances fate and destiny in your minuscule share of the emerald kingdom. Since this reality will never have dawned upon you, you will have no idea at all that unless you intervene psychically in the balances of fate and destiny, The I, The You and The It, all parts of your humble self, will as a whole be slipping constantly in the direction of the fates. For, you see, it is the fates that don't want you to be psychic.

Just because you are at the top and can afford to buy $2000 bottles of perfumes, or own a Lear jet, etc., does not mean that the fates have been defeated. Many a person, rich beyond the reach of others and with everything seeming to go for him or her, has suddenly met a destructive fate which reached out to also include his or her entire family, and everything she or he touched. This "everything" can include a whole nation (look at Hitler's Germany), or a whole philosophy or a whole religion, a whole army, or a whole culture (looked what happened to ancient Rome and its empire -- gobbled up by "barbarians.")

Yet, you cannot intervene in the psychic realms until first of all you find out where your psychic "eyes" are. We are, of course, using the term "eyes" only figuratively.

The psychic-occult traditions have indicated, each in their own way, that the average human has four general types of psychic "eyes" that will work on his or her behalf, providing the trinity of The I, The You and The It can locate them and agree to their reality. In almost all cases, it is the ego (The You) that says "Nyet." This is because the ego is the vehicle of all the intellectual programs that have been fed into the person, or that the person has adopted "willingly" (not knowing, of course, that he is only responding to some fate-destiny script already in the works). When intellectual programs have strong anti-psychic commands in them (as in our present technocracy), then the ego's will to spurn all things psychic will probably win out.

We will refer to the four sets of psychic "eyes" as "selves." The traditional symbol for things psychic was eyes, but then in those olden times, the eye also meant the self, for it was thought that the self lived in the eyes. It was the self that could see physically as well as psychically.

So, today, we can't really write about our "psychic eyes," since science has proven, it says, that the self does not reside in the eyes at all, but somewhere in the brain, although it is not exactly certain where in the brain. What we are after, of course, are words that communicate to the psychic centers and allow them to know we are thinking of them. The psychic centers like to be called "selves" well enough, since each of them operates independently and, as you will now see, are legitimate separate selves, indeed.

Now, for example, if you get the idea that the bio-organism which is your "body" has psychic talents of its own, you will find that "something" in your body immediately becomes attentive to your idea (can you feel it's response?).

It may surprise you that "the bod," as the bio-organism is often referred to today, has emerald talents of its own. But look at it this way. We think that the bod is a separate entity, when it really is not. It is The You (your ego) that actually thinks this, and so your ego tends to think that if IT is a separate entity, then its body is separate also. Actually, the bod thinks no such thing. The body is formed from the joining of two cells manufactured for the purpose of reproduction. These two cells are only the most recent in a very long train of predecessor cells that have done exactly the same thing. This train is so long that science has had a lot of trouble finding its beginning, and has not done so yet. There is, today, a growing consensus that this bio-organismic line did not originate on this planet.

Nevertheless, on this planet, the bio-organismic line has been handed down through ancient stock which tended to live always under the threat of great danger (great deluges, cave-man horrors with flesh eating dinosaurs, barbarians, pagans, you know, the blood and guts type of life). The bods that survived the best were those that were somewhat psychic, since being psychic gave them an edge over sudden life-threatening dangers. This led to a natural selection of bio-organisms psychically suited to face the rigors and dangers of unpredictable life. Those bio-organisms that were not psychic got eaten by dinosaurs.

As a result, there is carried in the general reproductive line a psychic element that has not escaped the notice of careful observers. The body is quite psychic. It knows when it will be in danger, and seeks to tell you so. We call this type of thing premonitions of danger. The ego likes to think it was itself who had the premonition, but more likely than not, it was the bio-organism, since the ego seldom is truly psychic. The bod is also very good at reaching out with psychic fingers of its own and assessing the vibes of other bio-organisms. It will tell you right away who is okay and who isn't.

The bio-organism also creates telepathic hookups to family members and loved ones and maintains these hookups in perfectly good working order for long periods of time. The most pronounced examples of this kind of thing occur when mothers instantly "know" when their sons have been wounded or killed on far distant battlefields. There are many thousands of incidents involving this form of bio-organismic telepathy between mother and son. The bio-organisms of parents are always psychically trying to watch over their genetic offspring.

The psychic bio-organism also has some interest in the people The You (the ego) proposes to get involved with. You know what I mean -- sexual partners, marriage partners, intimate comrades, possible leaders you might want to follow. The psychic bio-organism is very good at telling you which of all these will be good for you and which ones will be destructive. After all, the genetic line of the bio-organism has had a lot of experience in these matters, and its psychic emerald talents can be quite honed and sharp.

We can refer to the highly-psychic bio-organism as the intra-psychic self, to give it a little class, but probably the best way to refer to it will remain "the bod."

For the most part, whatever psychical events most people will experience (if they ever experience any at all), will be those arising from the bio-organism, and will always concern clairvoyantly foreseeing immanent danger, telepathically assessing vibes of other people, or will be examples of intra-family telepathic hookups (also called telepathic bonding) which are sometimes extended to friends, lovers, even to pets upon many an occasion, and even sometimes to important figureheads depending on the degree of emotional attachment that has developed.

All by its self, the bio-organism might be a better psychic than most people will ever become, even if they work at it. If you will but spend some time trying to intercept the psychic signals normally going on in your bod, you will soon find that it will be grateful you are finally listening to it and will set about being very helpful in your daily affairs.
