

THE PSYCHIC MATRIX

THE PSYCHIC INFORMATIONAL MATRIX

within

The psychic self exists/and works with energies and forces, but basically all energies and forces consist of either potential or actualized information. This should not be too hard to grasp, because we all today live in an Information Age. To one degree or another, the ~~entire~~ world societies have become aware of the value and power and of information, that it drives,/empowers all things.

The Modernist idea that the world is made up of contrasting world views is now gone, and has been replaced by the idea that the world, as a whole, needs to know how to share information, and to find information that is sharable. The new world culture now forming is, among other things, an informational culture.

Forces seek to acquire the direction and flow of information, to mold the flows of consciousness, so that minds are brought into conformity, either by persuasion, education or duress. Forces are made up of information that has become structured, information that has become actualized in a structured form, or is in the process of doing so, or is in a state of following the life cycle ~~exactly~~ that any structuralized information goes through.

Energies consist of potential information, information in a raw state, unformed, unshaped, unstructured. It might seem contradictory, therefore, to say that there are different kinds of energies, because this gives the idea that they are, somehow, pre-shaped. The way around this apparent contradiction is to get the idea that energies are colored, that is they have intensities, hues, shades and tints. The esoteric arts and the works of occultism have, indeed, referred to energies as colors in terms that there is a spectrum of them. But, in the psychic and cosmic sense, they are primordial and "exist" in an undifferentiated form. Putting the three ideas together -- coloration-information-undifferentiated -- gives an approximate idea of the unstructured energies.

The potential information of energies can be realized, that is, actualized, in its own right, as human intuition and high-stage creativity often do. Or the information in energies subsumed goals /can be ~~formed~~ into the ~~services~~ of one force or another and made to do service, much as a slave would do. When energies become so enslaved, much of man's psychic nature does also, since the psychic nature is itself in close connection to the colorations of energies.

Taken together, that is as a combined energy-potential-information and a force-actualizing-information, the whole can best be conceived of as a matrix. The word "matrix" comes from the Latin idea meaning "womb," meaning essentially a place out of which things come. In our modern scientific times, womb has psychologized and clinicized as only the feminine uterus. But our present last hundred years is only a smallest ~~xx~~ fraction of the entire human collective that has traditionally used the word "womb" ~~known~~ as a gestalt symbol for a "wholeness" out of which things come.

In our informational age, the word matrix has been reinstated much along the lines of the traditional idea.
Information is, in advancing physics, being thought of as pre-existent, and that pre-existing information underwrites all forms of physical and mental actualizations or realizations.

We have only to add the word "psychic" to physical and mental to achieve the new totality we are interested in achieving for our new brain-mind program.

"Matrix" refers to that within which, or within and from which, something originates, takes form, or develops -- that is a source or origin.

All things physical and all things mental as well as some things psychical ~~are~~ are manifestations (actualizations) of either energies or forces; but even so, all these are "in touch" with the original information that made or was used to make the actualizations possible, and, more importantly, is keeping the actualizations actualized.

When the information that is maintaining any given actualization is withdrawn from it, the actualized thing, event, or situation, soon ceases to exist. It is for this reason that esotericists and occultists have always considered that all actualized things are only illusions -- projections of information in a given manner so as to make up the whole of what is being perceived or experienced as real, or is being mistaken as the basic reality. Whereas the real reality is the information that is underwriting the manifesting phenomena. The word "illusion" apparently has been universally chosen because the transcending psychic functions of the seer (the psychic man or woman) can "see through" the manifested phenomena into the informational matrix out of which the actualizing developed.

This has also been termed "looking behind phenomena" to see what is making them tick. Our society as a whole is better prepared than it ever has been to conceptualize all this, because science ~~XXXX~~ has finally begun to wonder about what underlies all manifested phenomena -- from genetic coding to the entire cosmos -- and all these efforts have popularized the basic conception that information of some kind does, in fact, underwrite all things. And, of course, computers, ~~XXXXX~~ which deal essentially only with information, have brought to the forefront of human considerations the enormous importance about how information itself should be viewed.

The word "matrix" has never before been coupled to the word "psychic", nor has the concept of the psychic been coupled to the concept of information, even though we can now see that it is extremely logical to do so. Psychics have most usually been thought of as only possessing some extrasensory means of preceiving what is already manifested, which can be done, to be sure, as research has demonstrated. We have to go back to as far as the Greek oracles before we find, in a societal context, the idea of tapping into the information matrix. The Greeks apparently conceived that the oracle could tap into the information matrix to see how and in what direction the energies and forces were forming.

But in our times, when psychical research and parapsychology have sought to reinterpret the psychic realms in terms of the manifested physical ~~phenomena~~ or manifesting mental phenomena, any greater contact and understanding of the larger psychic realms have, of course, been lost.
