FLYING SAUCERS AND AMERICA'S DESTINY

Does America have a prominent place in the future destiny of this planet? I believe it does. Time and again when you delve into the literature having to do with today's crisis in world affairs you find references to the leadership planned for America after the cataclysm is over.

It is my purpose in this talk to make use of various sources, old and new, in referring to the cataclysmic activity which is presently upon us; and to emphasize as much as possible the positive aspects of the change. I believe all of you here are searching for truth, for answers to some of these great problems; you want some assurance that it is possible to survive and thus to share in the building of the New Age. I do.

I am sure many of you are familiar with the work of Meade Layne and the Borderland Sciences Research Associates. I have been a member since 1951 and recently Mr. Layne asked me to take over and carry on the work which he started in 1946. A large part of that work has been the dissemination of information received through the mediumship of Mark Probert, of San Diego.

The controlling group of individuals who use his body for communicating with us here in the three-dimensional world call themselves the Inner Circle. To get this show on the road I'd like to quote from one of the seances of the earlier days. It was held in San Diego on March 3, 1949. A Control who identifies himself as Kay Ting, of Tibetan origin, is speaking:

"There will come a time when your civilization will be as greatly advanced as the East in the study of life -- what you call metaphysics. Man is ever striving to find his way home, home to oneness with the Father. When that time comes for you Americans, you will then have the most advanced state of civilization on all the earth. In all past history of man never has there been a time such as there will be when this comes to your country. Why? Because you are so far advanced in your material science, which was something that was very much neglected in my time on earth.

"That is why they went down, India and China -- almost all of the East, they neglected the material, concerning themselves only with the spiritual and mental. That is so always: if man neglects the physical he loses the mental. It is impossible to take care of either one alone. Man is a holy trinity of physical, mental and spiritual. . . "

It is true that we have over-emphasized the material here in the West but that was and is necessary. As Kay Ting put it, "It is better that you understand the world you are in, in all of its parts; then you can go ahead with the spiritual."

One of the important studies of the planet we are in -- or on, is the earth itself, its cycles, its rhythms. Some of the planetary rhythms are comparatively short and easily observed: night and day and the four seasons, spring, summer, fall and winter. The longer ones, however, are more difficult to observe: the emergence and submergence of land masses, glacial periods, the shifting of the poles; these seem to be governed by cycles or waves of energy which are thousands of years from peak to peak. One civilization may come and pass away entirely on the rising swell of a cosmic wave. Its inhabitants, under this mighty, subjective and positive influence, may thus create a culture whose beauty is the envy of mankind. Another civilization, born after the crest is passed, and spending its entire life of a thousand years on the downward slope, may create nothing but misery for itself and all around it! In each case only the disinterested observer standing outside the civilization would be aware of the difference, and its cause.

There are many indications that we are in the midst of a changeover from a negative to a positive period in the long, long history of this planet. You can find them in science, in astrology, in philosophy, and in religion.

In speaking of this mighty change it might be well to keep in mind the difference between cataclysm and catastrophe. Cataclysm is Nature at work. The breaking up of ice in the northern rivers in the spring is a good example of this. Who could or would stop that from taking place? It becomes catastrophic, however, when an ice jam threatens a man-made bridge, and destroys it. One or two may be hurt; a few are inconvenienced; to the rest of us it's just an item in the daily paper.

Cataclysm is always going on, sometime, somewhere on the face of the globe as the earth goes on about its daily business. Catastrophe, too, is always with us as some human beings get caught up in these things. The only advice I can give is to keep yourself so in tune with Nature, with the mighty Consciousness which lies behind all manifested life, that you are always in the right place at the right time.

As the space visitor, Des'ka, told Doris Lovcaguo a couple of years ago: "Catastrophe can be avoided by Christ-like thinking, and will be averted for those who think Christ-like."

One form of cataclysm which has aroused considerable scientific interest of late is the so-called Polar Flip. More correctly this should be labeled "the movement of the earth's crust into and out of the polar regions."

Space visitors have told their contactees that they were here to observe a crisis of planetary significance. A shifting of new lands into the North and South Polar regions would indeed assume celestial importance. The Antarctic continent would find itself in a temperate climate, and a new equatorial bulge might bring new lands to the surface in the Atlantic and Pacific.

This subject is discussed in a book issued last year by professors

Charles H. Hapgood and James H. Campbell. The title of the book is "The Earth's Shifting Crust." In it they review at length the various theories put forth by science to explain the so-called glacial periods. In it they propound their own theory that a glacial period on any continent indicates the time when that continent was in one or the other of the polar zones!

Every continent shows evidence of having been encased in ice at some time or other. Yet entrenched doctrine maintains that the poles have always been in their present location. This in spite of the fact that fossil remains of domesticated animals have been found on Siberian islands in the Arctic ocean - among the bones of mastodons and other prehistoric monsters. Also in these regions can be found the remains of tropical plants!

The growing accumulation of evidence of this kind, against entrenched doctrine, has kept the polar shift controversy alive. In school years ago you and I learned that the poles have been in the same locations for millions of years. This accounted for the gradual accumulation of ice on the Antarctic continent and on Greenland. Researches of Navy scientists at the South Pole in 1957 revealed that the South Polar ice cap is of comparatively recent growth. Through radio-carbon and isium testing of the age of the ice it was found that the 10,000 foot plateau at the pole is only about 10,000 years old!

Now, geologists are pretty well agreed that it was about that long ago, 10,000 years, that the North American glacier melted away. Comparing these two facts, Hapgood and Campbell came to the conclusion that the shifting of the earth's crust was the cause of these simultaneous events. The North American continent moved away from the North Polar zone; the Antarctic continent moved into the South Polar zone at the same time.

Hapgood says that the simplest and most obvious theory for explaining any ice age is that the area concerned was at one or the other of the poles during the period of glaciation. Previous to the last polar shift the North Pole was in the Hudson Bay region. A glance at the world map shows that the land mass lay to the southward of the pole. Thus the off-center thrust of the weight of ice as southward. When the billions of tons of ice finally overbalanced the centrifugal force of the earth's spin, it pulled or tipped the earth's crust southward, on our Western side of the world, over two thousand miles, setting up new locations of the North and South Poles where they now are.

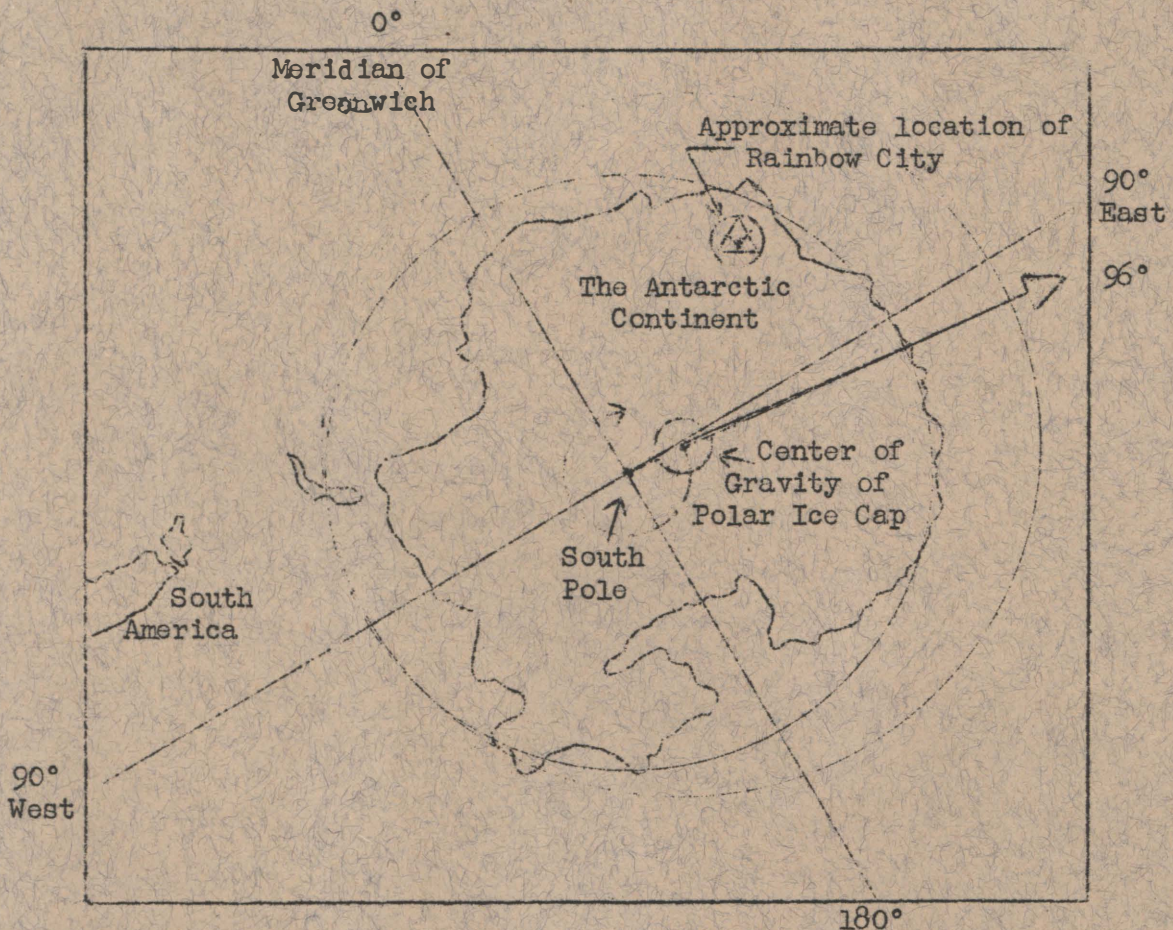

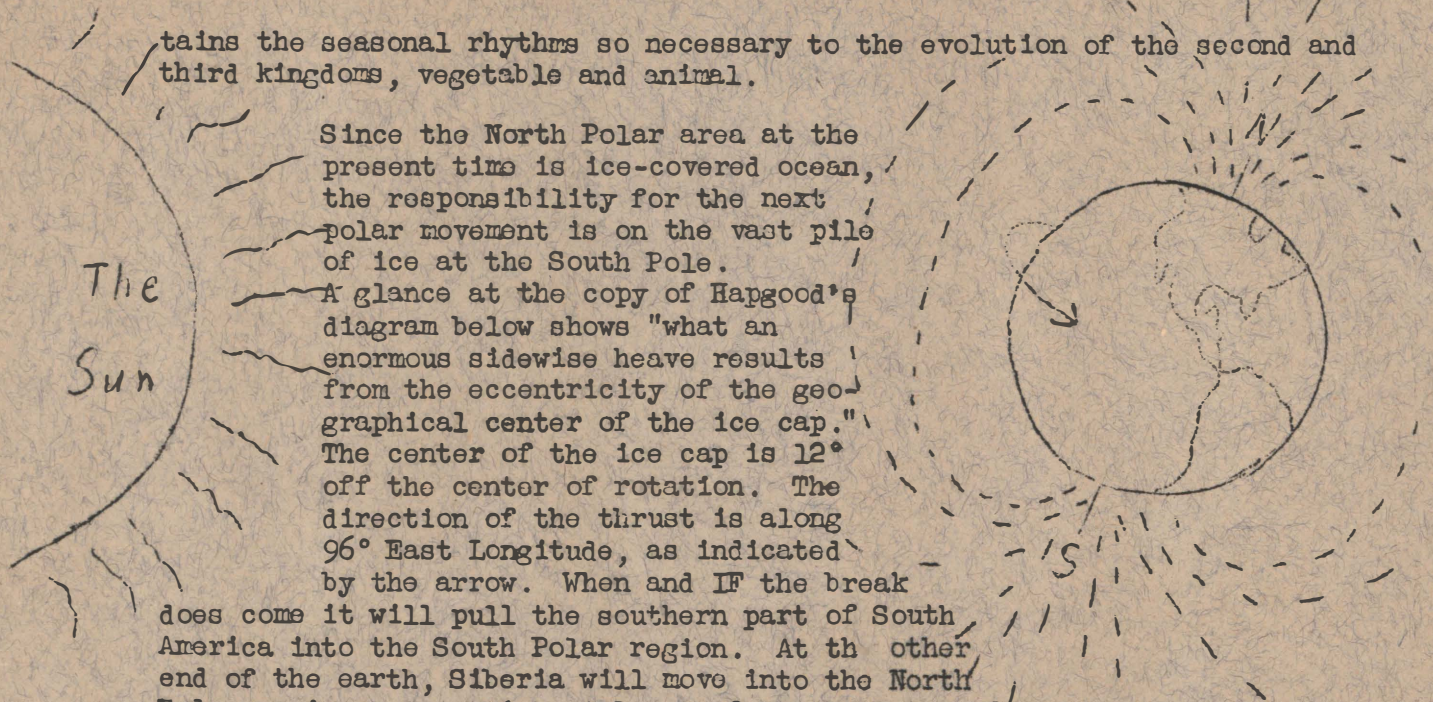

To simplify our understanding of this problem we'll have to assume arbitrarily that the angular relationship of the earth's axis to the sun will remain unchanged during the shift we are discussing here. The axis of rotation is represented by the North and South Poles in our drawing (next page). The direction of rotation at present is shown by the curved arrow coming around over the Pacific. The magnetic field or vortex is shown by the dotted lines. The shifting of the earth's crust occurs within this invisible cage. I believe the polarity of the earth's magnetic field may be reversed at the time of a flip. In fact this may be the invisible, cosmic trigger which sets off the physical movement! How this may be accomplished will be discussed later. But I believe the axis and the magnetic field maintain their tilt, 22° away from parallel to the sun. This latter condition maintains the seasonal rhythms so necessary to the evolution of the second and third kingdoms, vegetable and animal.

Since the North Polar area at the present time is ice-covered ocean, the responsibility for the next polar movement is on the vast pile of ice at the South Pole.

A glance at the copy of Hapgood's diagram below shows "what an enormous sideways heave results from the eccentricity of the geographical center of the ice cap." The center of the ice cap is 12° off the center of rotation. The direction of the thrust is along 96° East Longitude, as indicated by the arrow. When and IF the break does come it will pull the southern part of South America into the South Polar region. At the other end of the earth, Siberia will move into the North Polar region and America will move further southward into the tropics. If the move is anything like the one which occurred some eleven thousand years ago, it will put Southern California within 5° of the equator!

A BORDERLAND SCIENTIST'S RESEARCH

A long and thorough study of polar movement has been made by Hugh Auchincloss Brown, member of BSRA for many years. Several of his fact filled articles on this subject have appeared in Round Robin, the BSRA Magazine. Mr. Brown lives in Douglaston, Long Island, NY.

He says the earth is $4\frac{1}{2}$ billion years old and during that time it has rolled sideways a million times! Each movement has added a new strata of soil and rock to the earth's surface. To put it crudely, every time the earth turns over in bed, it gets a new set of bed covers!

"Our own epoch of time has run 7,800 years," Brown figures. And for measuring scales he uses the speed of erosion of the gorge of the Niagara river and the buildup of the Mississippi delta in the Gulf of Mexico. His figure doesn't agree with the one of 13,000 years-plus I just gave. In fact you'll find by the time this talk is over that none of the prophetic estimates agree at all. And that's a good thing, for the sake of our peace of mind! We are going through a big change now. Whether or not any ordinary human can put his finger on any one year and say, This is it! is anybody's guess; and your guess is as good as mine.

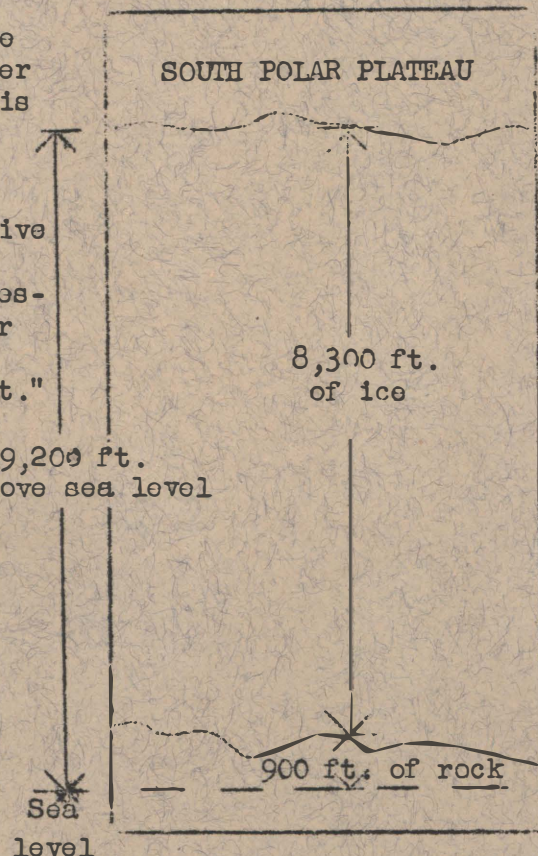

"The Antarctic Ice Cap is the divinely appointed executioner of our civilization," says Brown. It receives 18 inches of rainfall yearly in the form of snow, which adds 20 billion tons of weight per day to the ice cap. The ice accumulation covers 6 million square miles. This is double the area of the United States. His estimate of the thickness of ice at the pole, 1.2 miles, was pretty close to the Navy's 1957 measurement - 8,300 ft.

Brown estimates that if this ice were spread over the earth it would form a layer 120 ft. thick. The natural control of this great mass is the continual flow of icebergs into the South Polar seas. The release of pressure amounts to $5\frac{1}{2}$ trillion tons annually, he believes. The destructive side throw is created by the off-center mass and the speed of rotation. Under pressure of these two forces the weakest layer of earth finally gives way "when the off-center distance becomes one inch too great."

For those of a technical turn of mind Brown has developed a mathematical formula for figuring the forces involved: $E = \frac{1}{2} M V^2$

E = the Energy developed
M = Mass
V = Velocity

"To survive, we must accelerate the flow of icebergs." That is Mr. Brown's gloomy conclusion.

ANOTHER PROPHET OF DOOM AND GLOOM

Many of you no doubt have heard of Adam Barber, Washington, D.C. attorney, and have read his book, "The Coming Disaster Worse Than The H-Bomb." He, too, has spent years of study on the Polar Flip problem. He advances much evidence to show that periodic movement of the poles can be "astronomically, geologically and scientifically proven."

Barber believes that the poles will shift within the next fifty years (from 1957) on either June 21st or December 21st. The new North Pole will be on the 45th Parallel of Latitude. The move will start gently, something like the surge of a starting train, and will last about five minutes! The earth, moving under the oceans, will cause huge tidal waves to move across the land - at 2,000 miles per hour!

New polar areas will be flattened, says Barber, the earth will bulge at the new equator, raising new lands from the bottom of the ocean. The shift occurs every 9,000 years as the earth makes a 135° turn at right angles to the plane of rotation. The North Pole moves through an arc of 90°. After this happens the sun will rise in the West and set in the East for 9,000 years! And I'm not sure I want to be around the first day after the change. Barber says it will be two years before the earth will grow crops again, after the salt water tidal wave soaking.

WHO IS RIGHT?

As I said before, the field of prophecy is wide open and your guess is as good as mine. Being a philosopher rather than a scientist, I incline toward philosophical interpretations of phenomena, turning to technical data for support or clarification only as the need arises.

We have one interesting date in history which might give a clue as to when the North Pole moved from the Hudson Bay area to its present location. That is the date of the sinking of the last remnant of Atlantis. Somewhere around 600 B.C. one of the wisest and most highly honored of Greek statesmen, Solon, made a trip to the Egyptian city of Sais. There to study in the Mystery Schools of the time. The priests of Sais showed Solon historical records going back thousands of years. Among other things they revealed to him the date of the great cataclysm, the sinking of the Island of Poseidonis in mid-Atlantic some 8,000 years earlier. To be exact, 9,564 B.C. Thus the closing of that planetary cycle occurred during what geologists call the Miocene period. Now Solon, "one of the seven wise men of Greece," was grandfather of the great Greek Philosopher, Plato; and Plato gives this date in his "Timaeus."

There is an awe-inspiring account of the sinking of Atlantis in that most fascinating of books, "Phylos, Dweller On Two Planets." In it, Phylos describes the decayed condition of the last great electro-mechanical civilization on earth, prior to modern times. He writes that the island, with all its hapless inhabitants, dropped a mile in about twenty seconds.

The intrushing ocean waters rebounded outward in 1,700 foot tidal waves which swept around the world.

America is Atlantis come again, says Phylos, but now the human race is on a higher cycle, carried resistly forward by that great cosmic wheel of which our sun and its planets are but a tiny part, the Milky Way.

THE VOICE OF A MASTER

Back in 1881 an Englishman had a chance to carry on an unusual correspondence with a Master of Wisdom, through the mediumship of H.P. Blavatsky. His name was A.P. Sinnett and he was editor of the British magazine in India, the "Pioneer," and a member of the Theosophical Society.

Sinnett propounded questions on science, philosophy, ethics, civilizations, conditions after death, etc., and the Master Koot Hoomi gave lengthy answers. Years afterwards much of this correspondence was edited and put in book form by C. Jinarajadasa. It was entitled "The Early Teachings of the Masters."

Concerning the recurring crises in human affairs Koot Hoomi had much to say in the section headed "Races and Sub-Races." For everything comes in its appointed time and place in the evolution of races; otherwise it would be impossible for the best seers to calculate the exact hour and year when cataclysms great and small have to occur. According to him events resulting in great geological changes can be predicted with mathematical certainty.

Koot Hoomi refers to the exact date of the sinking of the last island of what was formerly a great continent, Atlantis. This was the date of 9,564 B.C., now 11,523 years ago. He also pointed out the unaccountable tropical fossil remains found on islands in the Arctic ocean; unaccountable, that is, by the geological dogma of the late 19th Century.

"Every Root Race has to be cut in two by fire or water," Koot Hoomi wrote. "Atlantis was destroyed by water. . . When your race, the Fifth (European-American culture. Ed), will have reached its zenith of physical intellectuality and developed the highest civilization, unable to go any higher in its own cycle, its progress toward absolute evil will be arrested by a cataclysmic change."

Then the Sub-Races or offshoots of our Euro-American culture will be found "going down their respective cycles after a short period of glory and learning." This would seem to indicate a new America in every sense of the word after the great change; for indeed, how can you build anew on old and crumbling foundations? That it cannot be done is indicated by Koot Hoomi in the final paragraph of the chapter.

"No Mother Race, any more than her sub-races and offshoots, is allowed by the one reigning law to trespass upon the prerogatives of the Race or sub-race that will follow it; least of all to encroach upon the knowledge and powers in store for its successor."

THE COMING OF THE GUARDIANS

One constant and refreshing source of illumination on this time of crisis has been the messages received from the Inner Circle, a group of sixteen beings from our own evolution, presumably without physical bodies at the present time, who speak through the medium Mark Probert here in San Diego.

The head of the Inner Circle is a person who calls himself the Yada di Shi'ite. At a seance in February, 1956 he made passing reference to the Visitors from outer space, and to possible polar movement.

"The space beings who are drilling deep in the ocean are not coming with any great interest of man at heart, but are studying the earth and testing the heat conditions here."

I know statements like this from the Yada are a great blow to the conceit of Western man, people like you and me. How dare anyone make a multi-million mile trip through space and not even bother to say "hello" in passing!

"The undercrust is deteriorating rapidly," the Yada said. "These space beings are charting and testing the earth, the rock, the water, the mountain tops, the atmosphere, etc. . . The universe in which you live is going through a rapid change." I take this to mean that there will be shifting of crusts and magnetic changes on other planets of the solar system at the same time as we go through the wringer.

"These changes can bring around a different kind of evolution. Drastic changes will take place in earth bodies. The space beings know your earth is not going to have another ice age, but that you are going to have a water age; you are living in the Aquarian sign, the snow and ice are not going to pile up, they are melting. The earth is becoming tropical. But it is not going to cause a tipping of the earth in a violent way." This is good to hear, after reviewing the evidence of a violent tip the last time. Animals have been found encased in ice in Alaskan glaciers. They were standing up, with unchewed food still in their mouths!

"Weather conditions will change, but there will be no violent changes in the magnetic poles. There will be great floods that may in time wash over a continent. They will not harm you." Kind words from one in whom I have developed considerable confidence over the years. So often he has been right.

DICKOFF, SUNGMA RED LAMA

Of all fantastic books in the Flying Saucer library is the one "Agharta" by Robert Ernest Diskoff, but it supplies an interesting offshoot to the study of the Antarctic and the Polar Flip problem. For in this book Dickoff describes a vast network of tunnels radiating outward from the Antarctic continent to every other continent on earth! He says they were built by men of pre-glacial civilizations for several purposes: communication, transportation, to search for minerals and for special fuels for space travel!

One tunnel surfaces in the Matto Grosso, Brazil, another in the southwestern part of the United States, others to Tibet and to certain islands in the Pacific. These "men of pre-glacial civilizations," according to Dickoff, were colonizers from the planet Mars who built the tunnels as part of a great defensive system. Then, as now, there developed a conflict for possession of the earth. The Martian colonizers built seven beautiful cities on the land, tropical then, which is now the icy wastes of the Antarctic. They had atomic power, as we do now. And when the showdown came, they used every available weapon in the desperate fight, as we would now if forced to. The result was world wide catastrophe and radioactivity which made the surface of the planet uninhabitable.

The Martian colonizers fled in their space ships, but the earthmen who went underground to survive stayed there in the tunnels and great cavern cities. Dickoff says this happened about eighty thousand years ago.

Then, as now, our planet had reached the end of a cycle evidently. All upon it went through a great change. There was a shifting of the earth's crust. Parts of Lemuria and the Atlantean continent went down. The land of the colonizers moved into a polar zone. The beautiful cities were encased in ice, all but one. This one is called Rainbow City, and, according to Dickoff, is still used as a space base. Judging from his map in the book "Agharta," Rainbow City is located in the one of the least explored areas of the Antarctic continent. We've marked it on the map on page four.

THE YADA CONFIRMS DICKOFF

The Director of Borderland Sciences Research Associates, Meade Layne, read "Agharta" early in 1953. Then he attended one of the Mark Probert seances, March 10th, and put the question to the head of the Inner Circle.

"Most of what Dr. Dickoff says about the tunnel system is correct," replied the Yada. "The tunnels themselves were not primarily designed for living, but in many cases they lead into vast caverns, natural or artificially hollowed out, where a great number of persons spent all their lives. It is true that the tunnel opening under the pyramid of Gizeh leads into caverns under Tibet. As to size, a common diameter of these tunnels was about 150 feet."

Then the Yada went on to say that the tunnels were constructed by a sort of "super heat deteriorator" which burned its way through the earth by controlled, atomic heat. "It was a very dangerous process, for if the heat-blast went out of control the whole globe might suffer most serious consequences. The molecules disintegrated. The substance of the earth is very porous and the gases were largely absorbed by it."

Our present-day atomic scientists discovered this to be true when the underground atomic blasts were set off two years ago in the Nevada desert. The explosion literally created a huge hole, a temporary vacuum, in the rock. This was filled with debris from above.

The Yada made one more comment in connection with the tunnels. It is worth recording here.

"In some quarters much is still known about these tunnels. The two great religious Hierarchies of your plane (Catholic and Buddhist?) have such knowledge, and in fact have stored great supplies of food in underground depots - they are aware of the approach of their twilight hour."

AND NOW THE MOLE

Fantastic as the tunnel idea seemed in 1953, now, in 1959, it seems that the American government is planning on drilling plenty of holes of its own, using the disintegrative power of atomic fission. In October, 1958 Meade Layne received an interesting news clipping from BSR Associate T.C. Dibble of Portland, Oregon. Meade published it in the BSRA "Clips, Quotes and Comments" for Oct. - Nov., 1958. The item appeared in William Moyes' news column in the Oregon Journal for Sept. 22, 1958:

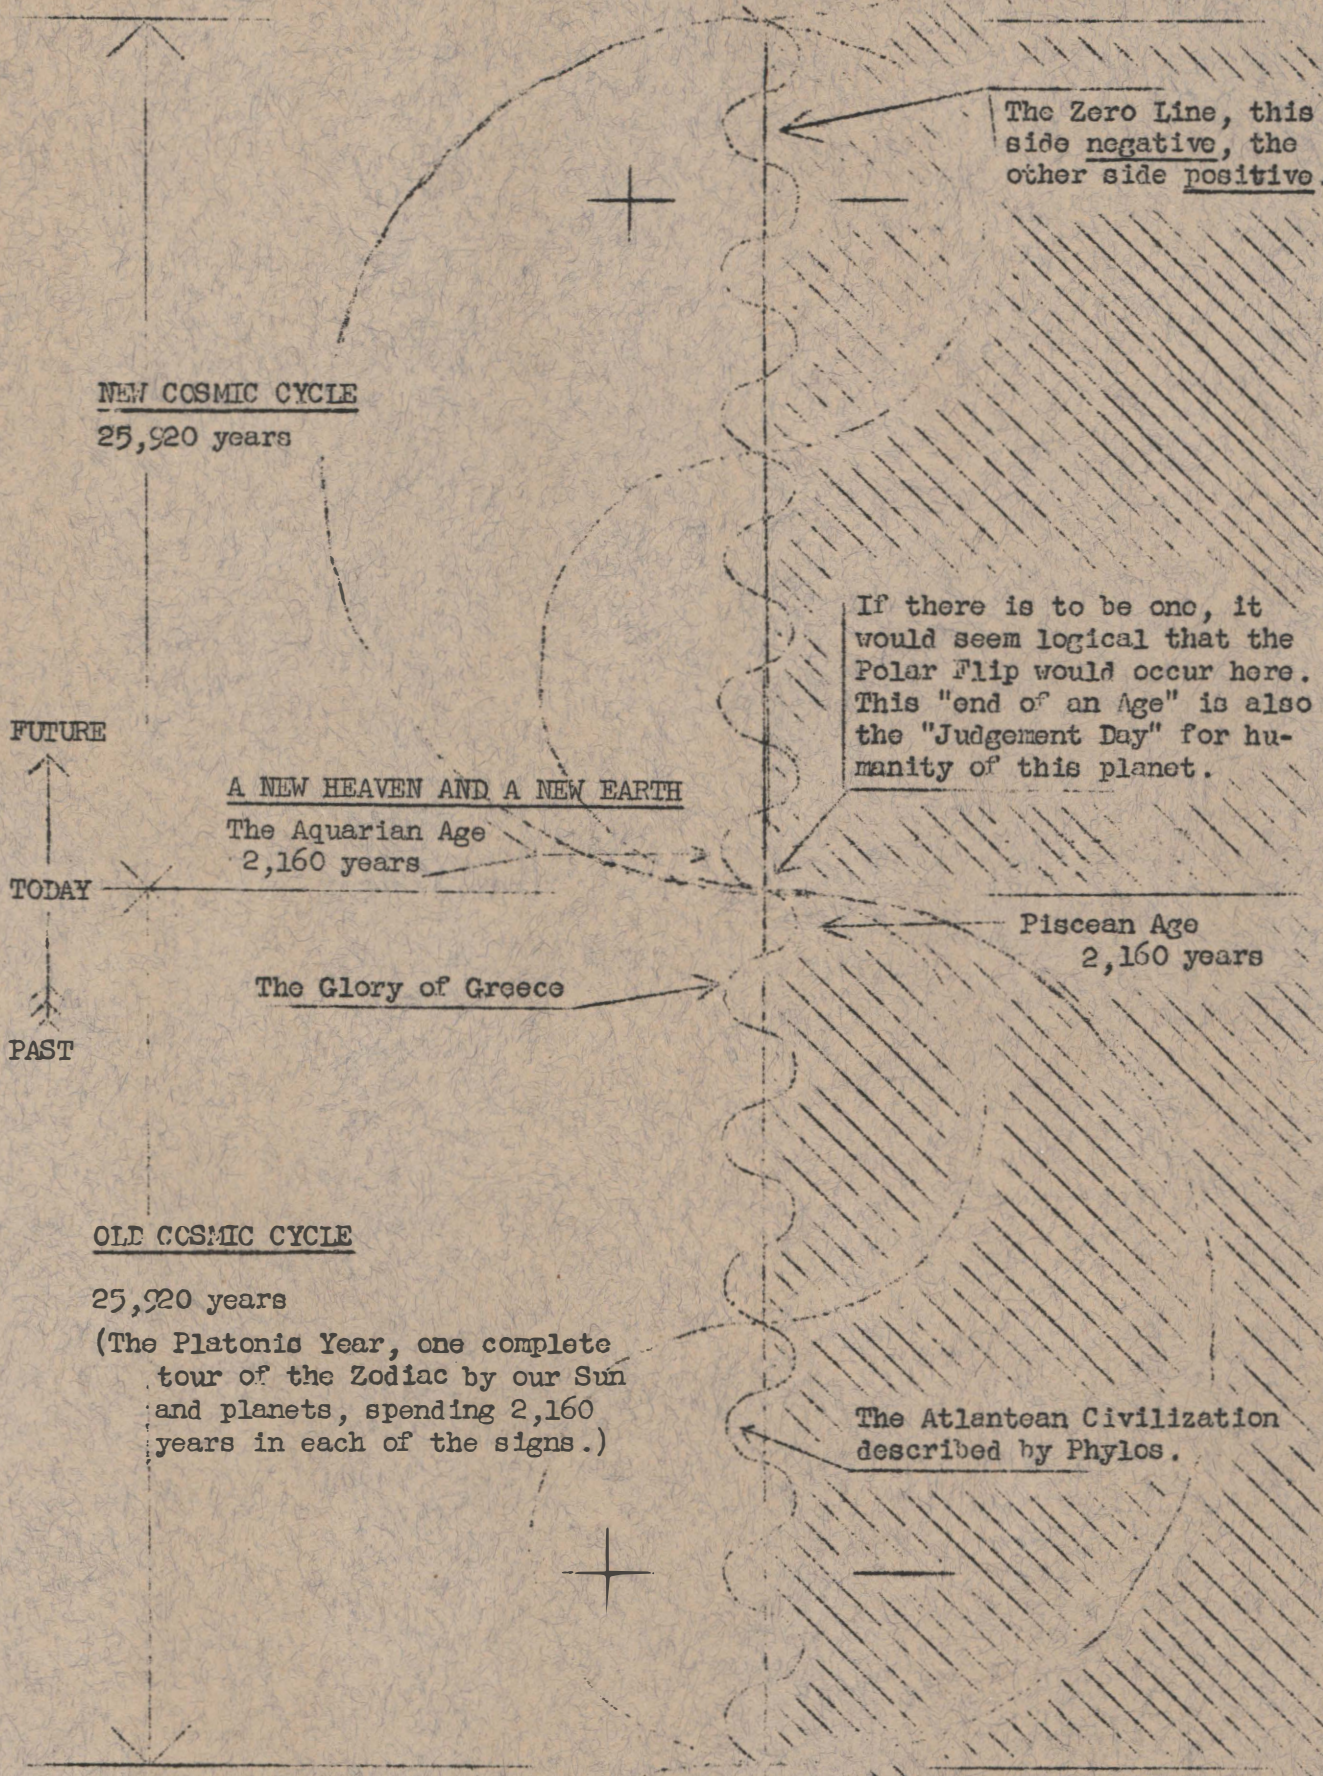

"Electronics manufacturers hereabouts were excited when they received bids last week inviting them to state their qualifications for sub-contracts in the development of a revolutionary new inter-continental weapon. Known as Project MOLE (Molecular Orbiting Low-Level Explorer), this new concept, they were informed, promises to obsolete all presently operational missiles and to solve the problems that have limited their size, range and speed.

"The MOLE, stated the secret prospectus, should put an end to the threat of war, which even the hydrogen bomb has failed to do. It is virtually in-destructible, and no location on earth will be secure from the MOLE."

Reading further in the Prospectus, Moyes learned that the MOLE is to be launched down instead of up, and, since its orbit is below ground rather than up in the sky, re-entry into the earth's atmosphere at high velocity is no problem. The MOLE is to be self-propelled by an atomic engine energized by the molecular disintegration of whatever element it traverses.

What a sad spectacle, to see the best products of our best universities using the best brains and best equipment to build the fastest and most secret vehicles to carry the biggest bombs to kill the most people in the shortest possible time. Has the slogan, America first, ever had more meaning?

General Omar Bradley put it so succinctly back in 1953, in "Newsletter:" "We have grasped the mystery of the atom and rejected the Sermon on the Mount. . . The world has achieved brilliance without wisdom, power without conscience. Ours is a world of nuclear giants and ethical infants. We know more about killing than we do about living. This is our twentieth century's claim to distinction and progress." All this is nothing new, of course. 2400 years ago Plato bewailed the lack of spirituality in the decline of Greek culture. "Barren times" he called those days, cheerless and dark with the threat of war even as today. Plato divided the cycles of mankind into fertile and barren periods. He observed that during the barren periods the spiritual sight of man is so blinded by materialism as to lose every notion of the superior powers of its own divine spirit. The divine intellect in man is veiled; only his animal brain philosophises. We found these ideas of Plato's in Blavatsky's "Isis Unveiled."

The Zero Line, this side negative, the other side positive.

If there is to be one, it would seem logical that the Polar Flip would occur here. This "end of an Age" is also the "Judgement Day" for humanity of this planet.

OLD COSMIC CYCLE

(The Platonis Year, one complete tour of the Zodiac by our Sun and planets, spending 2,160 years in each of the signs.)

I believe that the "barren times" Plato speaks of can fairly clearly charted, as I've done on the preceding page. Through his profound studies of life the great old Greek came to realize that the earth, the solar system and even the larger system of suns of which ours is a member, the Zodiac - all these are affected by and governed by rhythms which originate from the movement of the Milky Way itself. All these rhythms, from our alternating night and day, to the 25,920 year cosmic cycle depicted on the preceding page,, have their positive and negative aspects.

And you and I, crawling specks on the surface of the earth, are dragged through these major and minor cycles whether we will or no. I've charted the end of this Age to show that several cycles, all on the negative side of evolution, appear to be coming to an end now. This negative bias, cosmic in origin, brought to bear on human affairs would help to account for the destructiveness, the materialism of mankind during this cycle.

This would help to account for the fact that reform movements have had so little affect in our time, beyond the life and death of the leader. The reformer was on a positive, personal cycle, perhaps, but he was working against the tide.

The student of Tao and other Chinese philosophies will notice that my chart takes its basic figure from the familiar Yin and the Yang, good and evil or positive and negative, depending on the point of view! I wouldn't be surprised but that Lao Tzu, one of the Inner Circle controls, was the source of the inspiration.

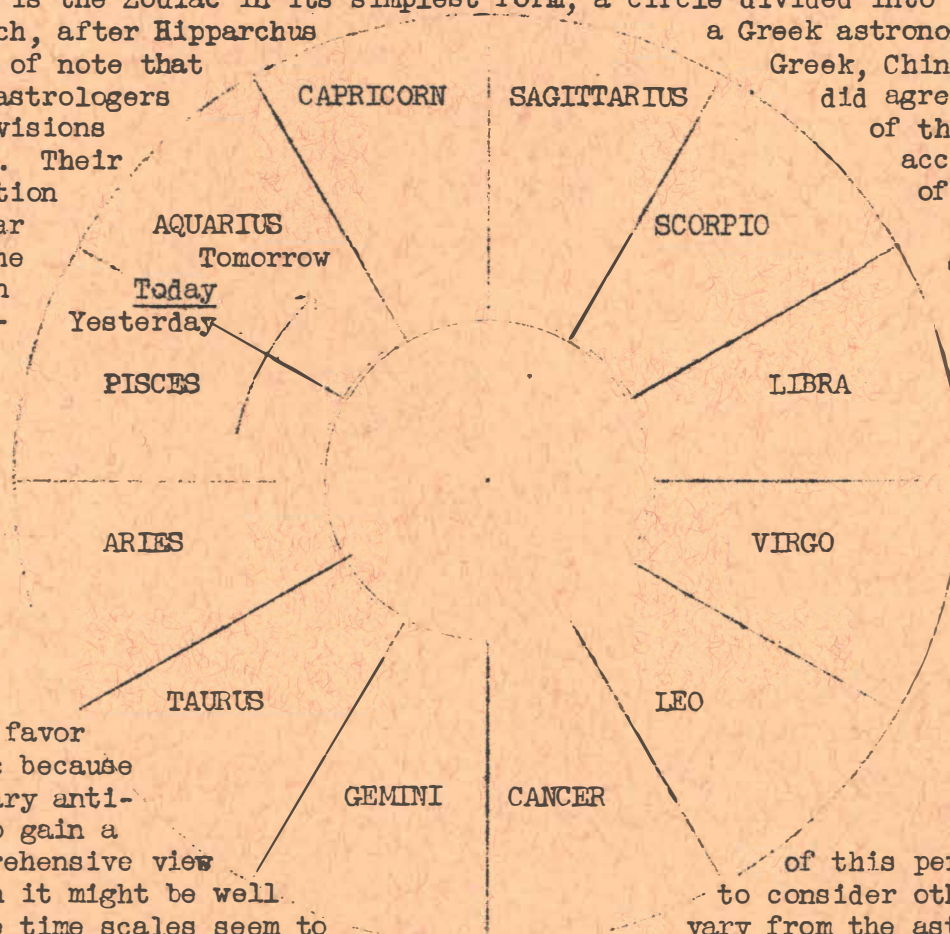

Below, I've sketched an idealized view of our Milky Way Galaxy. The great, majestic turning of this Cosmos about the Great Central Stillness at the center would be the primary movement of our universe. Secondary movement or rhythm would be our own family of suns, the Zodiac, wheeling at right angles to this. Succeedingly lesser rhythms would be the movement of our sun through the Zodiac, earth turning around the sun, and the earth turning on its own axis. Astronomers "guesstimate" that it takes 200 million light years for our Galaxy to make one turn on its axis. One zodiacal cycle is 25,920 years. Our sun and planets spend 2,160 years in each of the twelve signs. We are now leaving the preponderantly negative influence of the sign Pisces, and coming under the preponderantly positive influence of the sign Aquarius. The keynote is brotherhood.

THE "MILKY WAY" GALAXY

THE ZODIAC,

Here is the Zodiac in its simplest form, a circle divided into segments of 30° each, after Hipparchus a Greek astronomer. It is worthy of note that Greek, Chinese and Egyptian astrologers did agree on the twelve divisions of this cosmic wheel. Their accurate determination of the cycle has won the admiration of modern astronomers.

I tend to favor the Zodiac because of its hoary antiquity. To gain a more comprehensive view of this period of transition it might be well to consider other systems whose time scales seem to vary from the astrological but who at least agree that we are in the midst of a mighty change which is far more than world-wide in its significance.

This is confirmed by the contactees... Many of them claim to have received messages from the space Visitors, indicating they are here to observe and to take technical data on the physical and other changes of the planet. An interesting chart of the cosmic system and our present place in it was received by George Van Tassel, of Giant Rock, California. He published it in his "Proceedings" of the College of Universal Wisdom for February, 1955.

The "Vela Sector System" which Van Tassel received from his instructors seems to indicate that space is marked off into very definite zones or sectors, each appropriately named, each with its governor or overlord along with his retinue of minor officials or "gods." When a planet such as ours, with its cargo of trouble, enters their zone of influence, it is understandable that they will look us over with some misgivings. But, dedicated to the Service of the Light, they take us on for the next cycle, laying out a plan of action best suited to carry out the archetypal ideal of evolution held in the Mind of the Creator.

Van Tassel's teachers speak of these different regions in terms of "The Third Density," George writes, "where (trouble) could exist in the triangle of confusion, is all but finished. Humans on earth are going to have to conform to the requirements of the Fourth Density, or take the grade over again. The requirement to pass - is to live the Golden Rule. Not to profess it, or expect others to live it, but to live it individually. You are the only one responsible for yourself."

Each density is a vortex. The even numbers are of positive polarity. The uneven are of negative polarity. Each density is composed of many solar systems. In addition to these, note the alternations of rotation. Our solar system is located at present in the Arc of Cosmo, see the dot. Seen edgewise the circles would actually be huge vortices, one with the apex up, the next with the apex down, as we'll show later with an illustration from Oahspe, the New Bible.

OAHSPE, A NEW BIBLE

"In the words of Jehovih and his Angel Ambassadors, a Sacred History of the Dominions of the Higher and Lower Heavens on the earth for the past Twenty-Four thousand years."

That's what it says on the fly leaf of my 1891 edition of Oahspe, and 900 pages of strange and wonderful information follow, all typed through the mediumship of a New York dentist in the late 19th Century. His name was John Ballard Newbrough. The first edition was published in 1881. Ray Palmer, in the June, 1959 issue of "Search," says that this first edition was recalled from public circulation by the United States and British governments and the second edition was printed and distributed at government expense. Ray says he can't understand why Newbrough yielded to government pressure. He is now threatening to publish a photo-offset copy of that first edition of Oahspe.

Anyhow, on page 603 of our copy of Oahspe is this curious drawing, Plate 71. The caption says that from A to A is the road of travel of Tow'-Sang, the solar phalanx (our solar system). B and B are deviations from a straight line. C, C, C, C are vortices of other symptoms (?) of worlds. From D to D is 3,000 years. The open space in B (arrow) indicates the place of the Serpent (our solar system) in this day. It occurred to me that this drawing in Oahspe illustrated the vortexes of the Vela Sector System in Van Tassel's "Proceedings."

According to the writers of Oahspe the dawn of the new era, the Kosmon Era, as they call it, occurred in the year 1848. It is historically true that the fires of revolution against tyranny in many a nation of the earth, in that year had their beginning..

Of more interest to us is the period of years from 1875 to 1890, when several outstanding pieces of literature, of unusual interest, were produced here in the Western world. In addition to the writing of Oahspe, by Newbrough, H.P. Blavatsky produced Isis Unveiled, Edward Bellamy wrote Looking Backward, over in Paris Camille Flammarion was writing about life on Mars and Jules Verne his startlingly true predictions, and out here in California, in 1884, young Frederick S. Oliver began to put down those descriptions of an ancient Atlantean civilization which were beyond belief - until the science of the Twentieth Century proved such electro-mechanical marvels a reality. In Phyllos, Dweller On Two Planets you read of the television of ancient days. 15,000 years ago these Atlanteans used aluminum for the bodies of their airplanes, just as we do today. But they were beyond us in that their airplanes had no wings nor propellers as ours do. They apparently used electro-gavitic forms of propulsion as yet undiscovered by our science.

Then, as now, aluminum was one of the most common metals in the earth. Here is the technique of its production as described by Phyllos. "We transmuted clay, first raising its atomic speed so that it became white light of a pale illuminating power and then reducing it to the, so to speak, chemical 'mile-post' of aluminum, and this at a cost not nearly so great as in this modern day (1884) it takes to get iron from its ores."

The clairaudient dictation of the manuscript, by Phyllos, to young Oliver was finished in 1886; but publication was held up by the author until 1899. In that year Phyllos added the final chapter.

THE DIVIDING OF THE WAY

The division of the way hath come, Phyllos said, the midnight hour of the cycle which, more than any other, formed life's great divide, hath struck. . . Now for some seconds hath been fulfilled the initiation of that saying of Him who sitteth upon the throne, "Behold, I make all things new!"

Another cycle has reached its end. All imperfect in the now closed Sixth Day is come to face judgement by the standard, Truth. Those who in this cycle failed to gain supremacy over their lower selves win no place in the Seventh.

Centuries of prophecy have looked forward to the end of the Age as a time of awful woe. Is the Book of the Apocalypse mere allegory? Would that it were! Shall all be wiped out of existence, leaving a planet in ruins? Unto the end of full obedience and the coming into harmony with divine law shall the lash be applied.

"The day of vengeance is in mine heart, and the year of my redeemed is come nigh:" Isaiah.

"Behold, the day that burneth as an oven." Malachi.

The hour hath struck but in all this there is no mystery, says Phyllos. It is all man's own doing. He hath wandered from the Way, from reverence of the God-nature in him, to worship himself. Love is replaced with violence and greed. Man, a being of free-will, hath wrought all coming woes to be inevitable. And so it hath been at the end of every age, but it can never be so again!

Here the Way divides. No place of safety shall be found for the unchanged of heart. In full time, by fire, the Reaper shall reap.

The time shall be foreshortened, else no flesh could survive. The roar of armed hosts must succeed the thunderous mutterings of the times. A short but sharp conflict, fiery beyond belief, even now reddens on the horizon. The trained armies. . . now engaged in conquest will but little longer submit to having themselves and loved ones ground under the heel and strangled by the hand of that organized thing, Capital. . . Soon millions of trained soldiers will turn upon the visible representatives, the wealthy and worldly prosperous. . . Later they will break up into lawless bands bent on satisfying Ishmaelitish tendencies, each self-server's hand weaponed against his fellow creatures. . .

Then will break such a storm of unbridled animalism as the world hath never seen. . . Hard and fast after the human conflict will come pestilences unparalleled, sweeping the wide earth. The dead of plagues will be as thousands for every one killed by violence, and none will pause to bury them.

Nature follows man, wherefore the waters of the earth shall dry up, cyclones sweep. . . and an earthquake come such as was not since man was on the earth. . . As lust, greed, anger, depravity blaze in the human breast, so shall the air, dry and vaporless under brazen skies, develop solar heats more fierce than history knew. . . Turn now, and read, while yet the last midnight stroke reverberates.

"Teacher, when will these things be?" The disciples asked the Great Master.

"When you see surrounded by encampments the Jerusalem," He said, "Then you may know that has come near the desolation. . . For days of vengeance these are, to be fulfilled of all judgements."

It is written that "a little child shall lead them." Verily, the "little child" of the Spirit of the New Time shall be ruler over the animal within the man.

In the New Time, no longer shall any beast, whether in human form, or in animal body, or merely apparent as a raging tempest or a disease, be free to do evil. All things must become new TODAY because conditions will soon so differ. . . They who would hold fast to the old will find nothing, either in Nature or elsewhere, that will longer yield to the old powers. The Seventh Cycle is that of the Spirit. . . TODAY existence will demand a spiritual eye, and ear, and that every sense be raised to the heights! . . . As on Venus, we will use the standard of the Cross in our every act, swerving neither to the right nor the left. . . Then will be those times when "all things are made new."

America and the rest of the world will be more glorious than we have dreamt! . . There shall be few where were many, tens replacing thousands.

Yet never shall a soul be lost; God hath place for every one.

Thus, fifty-nine years ago, did Phyllos describe the ending of the old Age, the beginning of the New, and hint at America's place in it.

THE JUDGEMENT DAY

"Those who in this cycle failed to gain supremacy over their lower selves, win no place for themselves in the next cycle." Phylos said. What does he mean? He means that we are in the midst of an examination. We are being tested on how well we have mastered the lessons of this age which is coming to a close. Those who fail will have to take the work over again, with another class coming up, in another class room.

In slightly different terms, Van Tassel refers to this same "Judgement Day" idea in the Vela Sector System article we drew from earlier. He writes: "Humans cannot reproduce in the Fourth density (with their present physical, emotional and mental makeup) and will become extinct as an animal-and-man-mergence in the first 100 years (after the cataclysm). . . The humans that survive through the cataclysm of the coming polar flip will gradually die off. The Fourth density is not designed for destructive principles, or humans. Those who do not conform to the requirements to emerge - will be re-incarnated back in the 12th phase of the Third density and have to live through this mess again."

Theosophical literature makes reference to the "Judgement Day" idea time and again. Many of these references have been gathered under one heading in LtCol A.E.Powell's book "The Solar System." The book is plentifully illustrated with drawings to illustrate the complex ideas. For further study of this problem I recommend it to you. Powell's books can be found in most Theosophical libraries, or can be purchased from headquarters at Wheaton, Illinois. Mr. Powell has been a member of Borderland Sciences Research Associates for years.

As would be expected, Theosophical terminology regarding the "Judgement Day" differs considerably from Van Tassel's; but the basic idea is there. Here is a portion of a paragraph from page 14 of the Theosophical book, "Man, Whence, How And Whither" by Besant and Leadbeater, 1913.

"The human beings who, in any Chain, do not reach by a certain time the level appointed for the Humanity of the Chain, are its 'failures'; the 'failure' may be due to youth and consequent lack of time, or to lack of due exertion, and so on; but, whatever the cause, those who fail to reach a point from which they can progress sufficiently, during the remaining life of a Chain, to attain the required level by its end, drop out of its evolution before that evolution is completed, and are obliged to enter the succeeding Chain at a point determined by the stage already reached, that they may complete their human course. . . ."

Also from Theosophical literature you may learn that the percentage of passes and failures at the time of judgement is fairly constant, at least on the planets in this solar system. It is three to two; sixty percent pass and forty percent fail. Using that ratio on my lecture audience here, say there are a hundred of us, forty of us are failures from a previous human evolution on another planet; and sixty of us started from "first grade" on this planet. Do you find the thought rather disturbing? I did until I got used to the idea. In the New Bible, Oahspe, you read of huge space ships, capable of carrying millions of souls, carrying vast cargos of humanity to new planetary homes elsewhere in the universe. From Phyllos, from Theosophy, from the Mark Probert Controls, and from other metaphysical sources you learn that there is a constant traffic of individual souls between the planets, all for purposes of service, for study and for experience.

Time and again in my lectures, where this problem of reincarnation comes up, I get listeners who object to the idea. They don't like it. One reason seems to be that they don't want to have to come back here again. Considering the general conditions I don't blame them! I'm trying to learn how to get off the damn place myself! AND the U.S. Government, your government and mine, is spending billions of dollars on the space program, trying to find out how to get off the earth, fast!

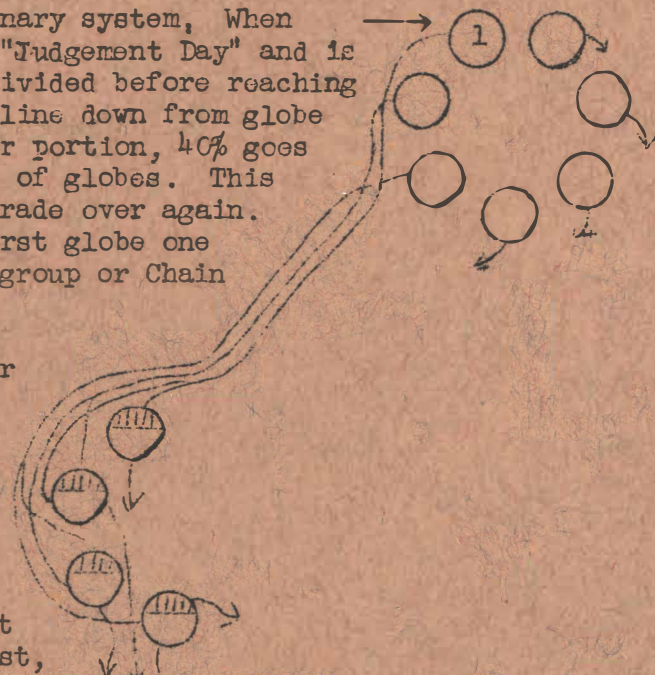

If the idea of reincarnation is distasteful to you. If you really don't want to come back here again in a physical body, tell me, how are you going to avoid it next time? If you didn't know any better than to make the plunge into physical matter last time? How are you going to go to a place you don't know about? Unless you can find someone to take you to another world which you think is better, I'm afraid you are stuck here, until you learn how to get off.

So many of the Visitors from outer space have told their contactees, "You are buried in the physical matter of the planet earth, so buried that you've forgotten completely your Divine origin. The glitter and glamor of three-dimensional matter has you hypnotized. You've forgotten how to travel among the stars. You don't even remember that such travel is possible."

The drawing at the right is a crude attempt to reproduce a small portion of the beautiful, colored Frontispiece from "Man, Whence, How And Whither." The original illustrates the movement of life waves from globe to globe in an evolutionary system. When the wave on globe one reaches the "Judgement Day" and is tested for the grade ahead it is divided before reaching the next "class room." Follow the line down from globe one and you'll see that the smaller portion, 40% goes into globe one of the second group of globes. This wave takes the work of the first grade over again. The larger portion of the first globe one goes into globe two of the second group or Chain of globes. They passed.

Thus the life waves make their rounds of the planets in the long, long course of evolution, from the most primitive forms of cell consciousness, to ultimate Godhood.

And humanity stands at the mid-point in that evolution. Man combines within himself the lowest from whence he came, and the highest, toward which he is going. We are Gods-in-the-becoming.

Years ago, in Honolulu, I presented this "Judgement Day" idea to a group. It was received with mixed reactions. One lady, a student of metaphysics for many years, was horrified.

"God would not be so cruel as to separate people from their loved ones and haul them off to a strange planet!"

I asked her if she had children. Yes, she did and they were smart. Would you want your children held back in school by the failures, the laggards and the wont-studies, I asked? No, she certainly wouldn't, but the schools of earth were quite differently administered than God's plan for man! To which I countered with the idea that God wouldn't be so cruel as to expect the swiftest to drag along at the pace of the slowest in evolution.

Not long after that newspaper columnist Robert Ruark touched on this very same problem during one of his world trips. The column I refer to appeared in the Honolulu Advertiser for Sept. 24, 1953. It was the behavior of certain of the world's population in North Africa that posed this question in Ruark's mind: "How can a world of sweetness and light be devised from such raw material?"

The raw material he had reference to was the Arab of Algeria who "while admirable in many ways is almost devoid of the emotion we call 'kindness' and 'pity.' This applies to animals, enemies and their own kind. They can derive an amusement from torture, mutilation, of both animal and man." He then gave several examples observed during his experiences in North Africa during World War II.

It was while he was in Oran, Algeria on this particular trip that the problem came into focus. At his typewriter in the hotel his concentration was disturbed by an unearthly racket in the street outside. "It sounded like a crippled cat in a hell full of dogs!"

"I had noticed before one of the forgotten of Allah, a piteous cripple, an idiot, half blind, horribly deformed, who dragged himself along making mewing sounds and begging for alms. . . The cripple had been teased by a street cleaner. The cripple, mewing and yowling horribly, would lurch at the sweeper, a brawny six-footer, who would laugh and push him away into the gutter. There the cripple would lie in the filthy water struggling horribly to get up, and making sounds I never heard a human make.

"He would get up, finally, and drag himself with an obscene bravery toward his tormenter, who would cuff him into the gutter again, and the awful business would start all over again. Meantime a crowd of some 200 people had gathered. Their laughter, highly amused laughter, added to the awful din.

"Finally, a cop came. He watched the spectacle for a good five minutes, laughing heartily. Then, good-humoredly, he dispatched the crowd. Chuckling, he walked over to the crippled idiot and booted him to his feet, then took him by the arm and hauled him across the street."

Ruark went back to his typewriter, not to write, but to wonder about the hopelessness of trying to get everybody, everywhere "to love one another and quite killing one another all over the world." Ruark concluded his column with this thought. "You wonder how they will ever be able to build a United Nations-type world of sweet accord with such raw material to work with."

Well, I believe the answer is in the "Judgement Day" idea presented here. It was all thought out and arranged for by the Logos, the Creator, of this system, long before the planet earth ever developed a crust solid enough to support a human being. For those who prefer to read it in obscure, religious terms, try Revelations, the last book of the Christian Bible.

There are millions of men and women of good will on this planet who consciously, and unconsciously, are daily praying for a world of sweetness and light. I believe that prayer is going to be answered. I believe it is being answered.

On the other hand there are millions of men and women on this planet who are interested only in continuing to indulge in their vices. I don't want to interfere with their choice of behavior, any more than I want them to interfere with mine! But in the "Dividing of the Way" spoken of by Phyllos, I believe you will find the answer to the problem. The ones who wish to continue living below the belt will be segregated on a planet whose physical environment is well suited to their needs. While here the vibratory rates will change, creating new conditions suited to those who want to live the ideal of Brotherhood.

The thing I must emphasize here is that the each individual makes the choice himself! This comes up time and again in the teachings, and when I say individual I mean the Inner Self of man, the soul and the Divine Spark, not the personality we see here in the three-dimensional world. And, as you would expect, indirect references to this individual, "Judgement Day" decision are beginning to appear in occult literature.

I'll give you one which I found in the comparatively new book, "Lychgate," by Air Chief Marshall Lord Dowding, Chief of the British Fighter Command during the Battle of Britain. Lord Dowding endeared himself to Saucerers several years ago by making a public statement to the press. It started off something like this. "I believe Flying Saucers exist, though I've never seen one. I also believe Australia exists; I've never seen it, either."

Lord Dowding is an occultist and during World War II he was drawn into rescue work, helping the "Invisible Helpers" rescue British pilots from the terrible emotional conditions of their passing. On page 49 of his book he describes a rescue of a different kind. Lord Dowding and his medium, "L.L." assisted in freeing a British inn keeper, earthbound for 300 years.

He said his name was Ezra Martin. He owned the "Dun Cow" on the Dover Road, "famous for its ales." After the usual arguments, prayers and pleadings with Martin to "see the Light" while he was occupying the medium's body, Lord Dowding succeeded. Martin's most dearly beloved wife appeared to him and he abruptly left. The next day the medium, L.L., felt a presence and was strongly urged to pick up a pen and write.

"6th Day of June, 1648. I am very grateful to you for your help to me. This is a wonderful country. Tho they tell me it is England I know better than to believe them. I have lived in England all my life and I be 64 come next Martinmass. I did not like the dark cave I were in last night, and you show me the way out to my Betsy who is my wife who died in childbirth aged 23 years. I was a bad man after my Betsy die. . . "

Then Lord Dowding says one of the Guides spoke (clairaudiently, to the medium?) in explanation. "Martin has realized now what has happened to him. That is why we wanted him to write. We showed him this earth of yours, and its wonders amazed and delighted him. Now it is time he realized that he is in a new world never to face death again. . . Ezra Martin had murdered five travellers in their beds, by smothering them. The last of them has now forgiven him, and not until then could he be liberated."

That phrase "never to face death again" stuck in Lord Dowding's mind. Later in the book "Lychgate" he brought it up again, in the chapter concerned with belief in reincarnation, Chapter XII. He had come to realize that reincarnation doesn't necessarily mean rebirth on this earth, but he was also familiar with the Law of Retribution. The case of the innkeeper, Ezra Martin, seemed to him an example of very uneven distribution of retribution.

"Is this the Law that those who pass through Hell are released from the wheel of rebirth?" Dowding asked his Teacher. "It was stated that the last of Martin's five victims had now forgiven him. Is this also the Law?"

"First concerning the innkeeper," the Teacher replied. "He will not face death again in this evolutionary period. It was necessary for him to be confronted on his full awakening with the fact that each one of those he had wronged had fully forgiven him."

Lord Dowding still wasn't satisfied. "Do I understand that any soul after passing through Hell can reach perfection without again incarnating?"

"Not perfection. There comes a time in the evolution of a spirit when the choice of a return, or of moving on to a different line of evolution is given. Knowing this soul, I know the choice he will make."

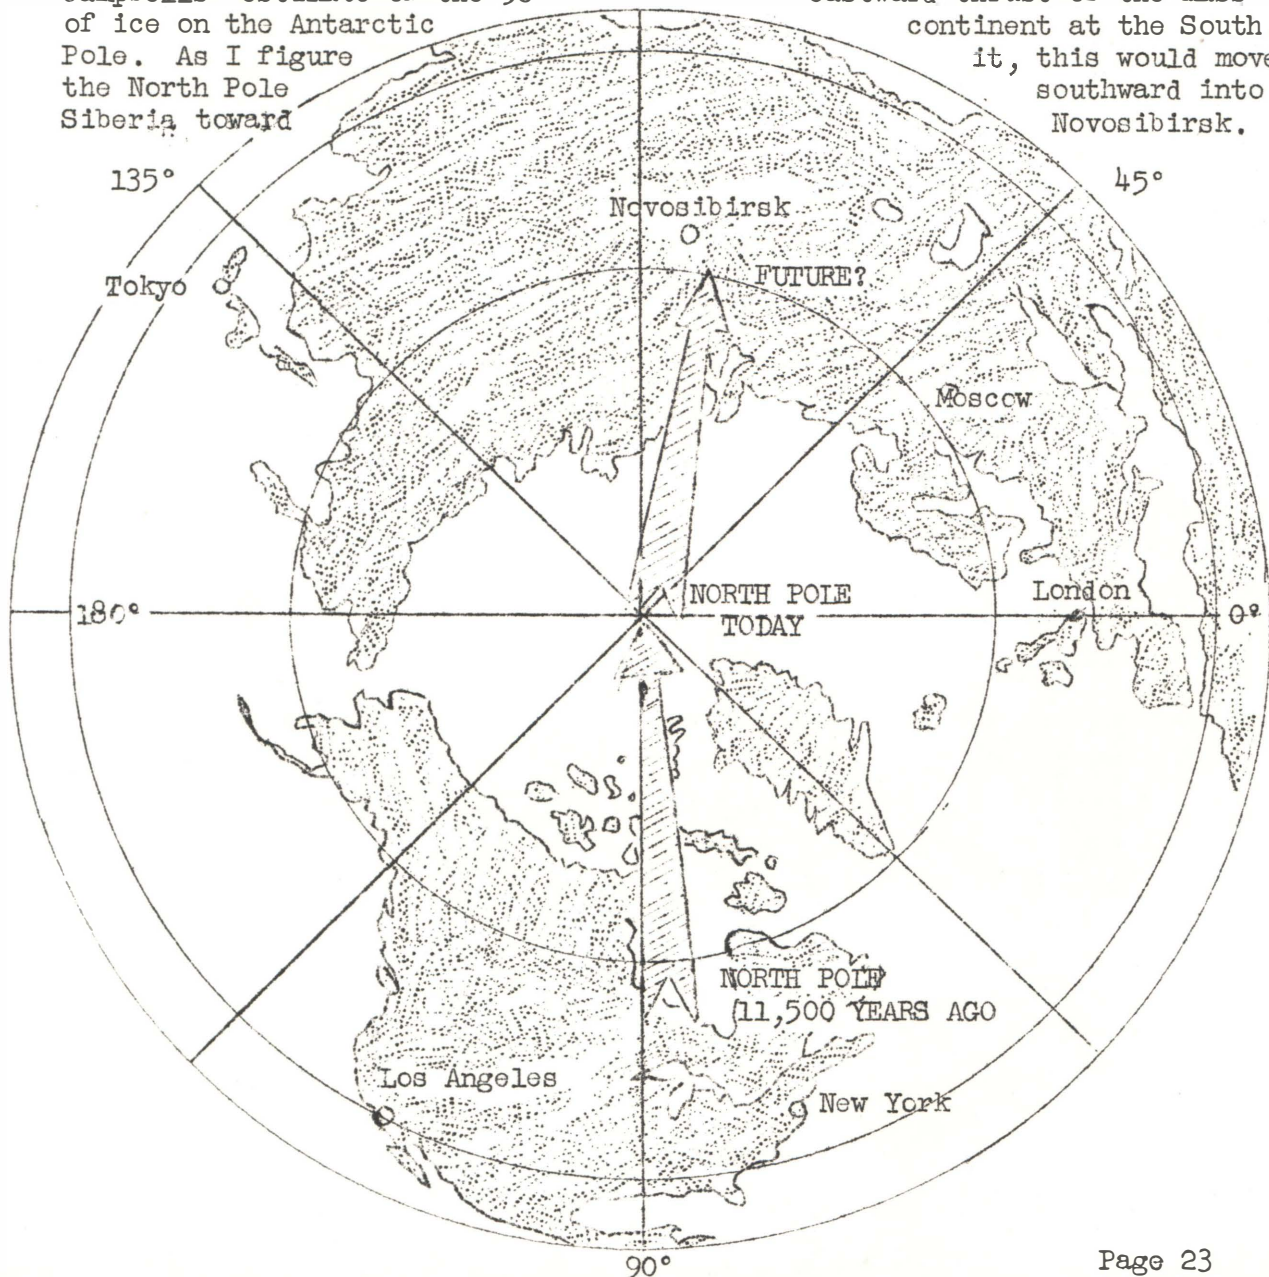

The key idea here is the choosing of a different line of evolution, by a soul whose last physical personality was dominated by greed. And I suppose that Polar movement and other forms of cataclysm wont take place on a world-wide scale until every last soul on the planet, in or out of the flesh, has had a chance to decide which way he wants to go. This example from Lord Dowding's book seems to indicate that the testing and the choosing may have been going on for some centuries.

Sometimes it really surprises me, how materials come to hand once I have chosen the title for a lecture, sometimes before! Last fall I was browsing through the fine, occult library of the Theosophical Society at Krotona, in Ojai, California. My eye was attracted by a white book which carried the name of Cheiro, the famous palm reader and astrologer, on the cover. It turned out to be a book of prophecy, printed in the 1920s.

EUROPE WILL GET COLDER

The thing that interested me was that Cheiro's long range predictions of weather changes for Northern Europe seem to coincide with the results of Polar movement as worked out by Hapgood and Campbell. Time and again Cheiro touched on changes brought about by a shift of the earth on its axis. He saw the nations of Northern Europe, Norway, Sweden, Russia and even as far south as Germany and England, gradually becoming uninhabitable because of increasing winters and shortening summers, until Polar conditions would prevail. Though Cheiro didn't speak of a Polar Flip as such, he attributed the weather change to the stoppage of the Gulf Stream in mid-Atlantic. This would be caused by the heaving up of new land in the Atlantic ocean, so he said. We could attribute this land rising in the Western Hemisphere to the new equatorial bulge, further north, on this side of the world.

GENERAL McCLELLAN'S DREAM

To return to main theme of our lecture, America's Destiny, let us now skip back in time to November, 1861. It was almost a hundred years ago that General George B. McClellan was made Commander in Chief of the Union Armies by President Lincoln. The Nation's capitol was threatened by Confederate forces when McClellan took over. One night in his quarters, as he was going over maps in preparation of his campaign, he fell asleep or into a trance.

A thunderous voice awoke him, to look at a living map of the entire eastern part of the United States, It showed the positons and planned movements of the enemy. Somehow, McClellan's own plans had been betrayed. Quickly he transferred data from the living map to his own maps on the table. Curious as to the identity of the Visitor who had invaded the privacy of his quarters, McClellan finally looked up. He was confronted by the glorified face and figure of George Washington.

"General McClellan, while yet in the flesh I beheld the birth of the American Republic. It was indeed a hard and bloody one but God's blessing was upon the nation."

After this reminder of the Nation's founding the bewildered McClellan was told how America "has been brought to her second great struggle. . . by far the most perilous she has to endure; passing as she is from childhood to opening maturity."

The war to preserve the Union, Washington said, would force the nation to learn self-control, self-rule that would place her in the van of civilization. Then came his reference to the third and last great crisis of this nation, the prophecy so poignant with meaning for us today.

"But her mission will not then be finished. For ere another century shall have gone by, the oppressors of the whole earth, hating and envying her exaltation, shall join themselves together and raise up their hands against her. But if America still be found worthy of her high calling they shall surely be discomiftted, and then will be ended her third and last great struggle for existence. Thenceforth shall the Republic go on, increasing in power and goodness until her borders shall end only in the remotest corners of the whole earth, and the earth shall beneath her shadowing wing become a Universal Republic. Let America in her prosperity, however, remember the Lord her God, her trust be always in Him, and she shall never be discomiftted."

According to Manly Hall this story first appeared in the Portland, Maine "Evening Courier" of March 2, 1862 in General McClellan's own words. Mr. Hall made it the subject of a chapter in his timely book, "The Secret Destiny of America."

And so, in two more years: a full century will have gone by since that momentous night in November, 1861 and America is in the midst of a great crisis. As we read the scare headlines in our daily newspapers some of us might think the issue is still in doubt. Down deep inside we know better.

The forces of Light will win out on this plane. I believe They have won out on the inner planes. It is my belief that the forces of evil tried to precipitate the planetary crisis back in the late 1940s with the atom bomb experiment program. I believe it was their intent to catch the swell of the cosmic movement in such a way that the polar movement would shatter the planet into bits and pieces, as apparently happened to the planet of the fifth orbit ages ago. I believe also that the prayers of men and women of good will all over the world, in every race, in every nation, brought in the cosmic intervention. I don't believe any one individual on earth could have saved us.

I don't believe we can prevent what our military men call "grass fire" wars from starting, before this year 1959 is over. World War III, if you want to call it that, will probably start somewhere around the perimeter of China. It will cost us plenty in men, material and money. But I believe with Phyllos and other prophets that Nature will take up so quickly in the wake of such conflict that our war-making potential will very quickly be neutralized. "Earth changes will take place in the very middle of the conflict."

That last phrase is from an interesting four pages of prophecy I found recently in the files of material at Borderland Sciences Research Associates Headquarters. The prophet, or should I say the medium through whom the visions came, is C.H. Kramer, 4102 Kostner Ave., Chicago 41, Illinois. These statements were made in June, 1946. His prophecy is weakened by the fact that he was sure the cataclysmic activity would occur within four years. That is by 1950. Another nine years have gone by now; nevertheless some of the things he said are interesting enough to bear repeating as a semi-close to the lecture.

Kramer supports the Washington prophecy with this observation: "At the start of a new cycle there is always a Mother Nation - a nation that serves to lay the foundation for the new civilization. America will be the Mother Country of the Sixth Race. Many people from other lands will come to the United States, when signs reveal the doom of their homeland. They will branch out later to new lands."

He predicts that America will be a vast land when the cataclysmic changes are over, gaining much land from the receding seas. "The seas surrounding this continent will sweep over the coastal regions, then recede for some distance beyond the old shores. New lands will rise from the seas not far from the new coastline."

The above prediction reminds of a question from the audience when I gave this talk at Santa Ana, California in June.

"Do you think Southern California will go under the ocean as some have prophesied?" a lady asked me.

"Of course not!" I replied.

"Why not?"

"Because I live here, Ma'am!" (Laughter from the audience.)

"Though this country, America, will survive," Kramer said, "most of its people will not survive the change. Neither will there be many people left in the lands that remain. . . Everything will crumble under the trembling earth. . . The passing of the old world will see this planet in darkness for three days and nights, accompanied by a violent shaking."

Now here's a detail about the actual change which I haven't seen anywhere else. I pass it on for what it may be worth.

"People may be on safe ground," Kramer said, "but they will not remain conscious through the earth change. As they hug the shaking earth they will fall into an unconscious sleep which will last for the duration of the change. When the survivors regain consciousness they will not remember the former world. This blankness of mind regarding the past will last for some time."

Here, you see, is an indication of how complete the change will be. Those chosen to survive, to father and mother the new race, will have the past blotted out completely for a time. They will literally have to build new personalities, new emotional and thinking patterns, based on the higher principles of the New Age! Truly when Jehovah says, "I will build a new heaven and a new earth." He means it.

"Memory of the past will gradually return to the people," Kramer prophesys, "yet they will not be the same people, in mind. Their minds will be changed, as changed as the world. . . When the change takes place on this planet, changes will also be occurring on other planets. There will be a new sun and moon. The new sun and moon will be much brighter."

You and I know that you cannot build a new building on the crumbling foundations of the old. The outworn, outmoded social and economic institutions of our day wont be dragged over into the New Age. As would be expected, Kramer takes a swipe at them, too, saying, "The old dogmas and their useless rites, confessions and saviors will perish with the old world. There will be no religious beliefs in the new world, but there will be the code of Right Thinking, which will reward the race with peace and contentment."

He gave other details of the change which time and space wont allow here, but I like the way he ended the discourse, "Farewell to a delusional, disintegrated humanity. Farewell to the bigotry, the ignorance which held man in bondage so long. Welcome to a new era, an era of peace and brotherhood, an era where man shall live in the Light of Reality."

Times of crisis are times of opportunity for the forward-looking, but they are times of tragedy for those who cling to the past. Inspiring as some aspects of this subject may be, there are other aspects which are extremely heavy and depressing regardless of how they are handled. I could scarcely have pushed through it in the way I have if I weren't sure that others, like me, are engaged in the search for Truth, wherever it might lead. I sincerely hope that the ideas presented here may help you to see some semblance of order behind the chaos which daily confronts us. It looks as though conditions will continue to be chaotic for the unchanged of heart. For those whose lives are established on a firm, spiritual foundation there should be nothing to fear, or such fears as do arise should be washed away by the Light of that Spirit which passeth understanding.

THE TIME OF DECISION

In searching about for a message with which to close this talk I found it in George Van Tassel's "Proceedings," a telethought message received by him from Contamarra, from Arcturus, on July 16, 1955:

"Since we have arrived near your solar system, we greet you there on Salon Shan. We recently tried to contact you from our system, recognized by your people in the skies as Arcturus. We are known in the Confederation as the 'Sons of Adonai.' We have come on a volunteer mission, to do service to the people of your planet.

"Our craft is sitting here in space, outside your Solar Vortex. This craft will carry close to twenty-five million people; and we have just discharged thirty-eight thousand of our smaller ships from it. It is difficult for minds such as yours, that function by the brain, to comprehend the magnitude of our operations throughout the Universe. We never do things on a small scale. We only serve to our greatest capacity as servants and instruments of a greater capacity.

"You have always had the right to choose, since your birth and in all generations of your humanity. You have not chosen wisely; because under your social and economic systems, and under your religious administrations, you have been subject to custom and to class distinction.

"So we have come. You will be awakened in great numbers, not to a service, not to any great knowledge. You will be awakened to a choice. Great multitudes of you will suddenly discover that there are two ways to go, and you will have to make a decision. If you decide to become servants in the Light of an Everlasting Love then you will be guided. Some of you will be directed, following a strong inspiration that will change with each moment. This we have come to do for you and with you. We can only influence and direct those who make the choice to serve humanity in every possible way.

"We do not especially like this assignment. It should never be, that any people should have to be directed and guided to bring about their own survival!

"In addressing you at center 'C', as we understand your point has been designated, each one of you this night has either made a choice or is about to make one. To those whom we see have made a choice, we pledge to you in the Living Light that we shall not at any time lead you or direct you in any way detrimental or injurious to your individual person.

"In this service to your people, in this great crisis of your system and your planet, we understand the failures of your civilization. We have come to help you. We shall move in with protection, with power, with Light and Truth, and surround and guide everyone who makes the choice rightly.

"Those who do make the choice in complete faith in the Everlasting Light shall not be touched by anyone who would harm them. No jail shall hold them. Their blood shall not flow from wound of foe. When we pledge our assistance in the Light of Understanding we stand on our oath.

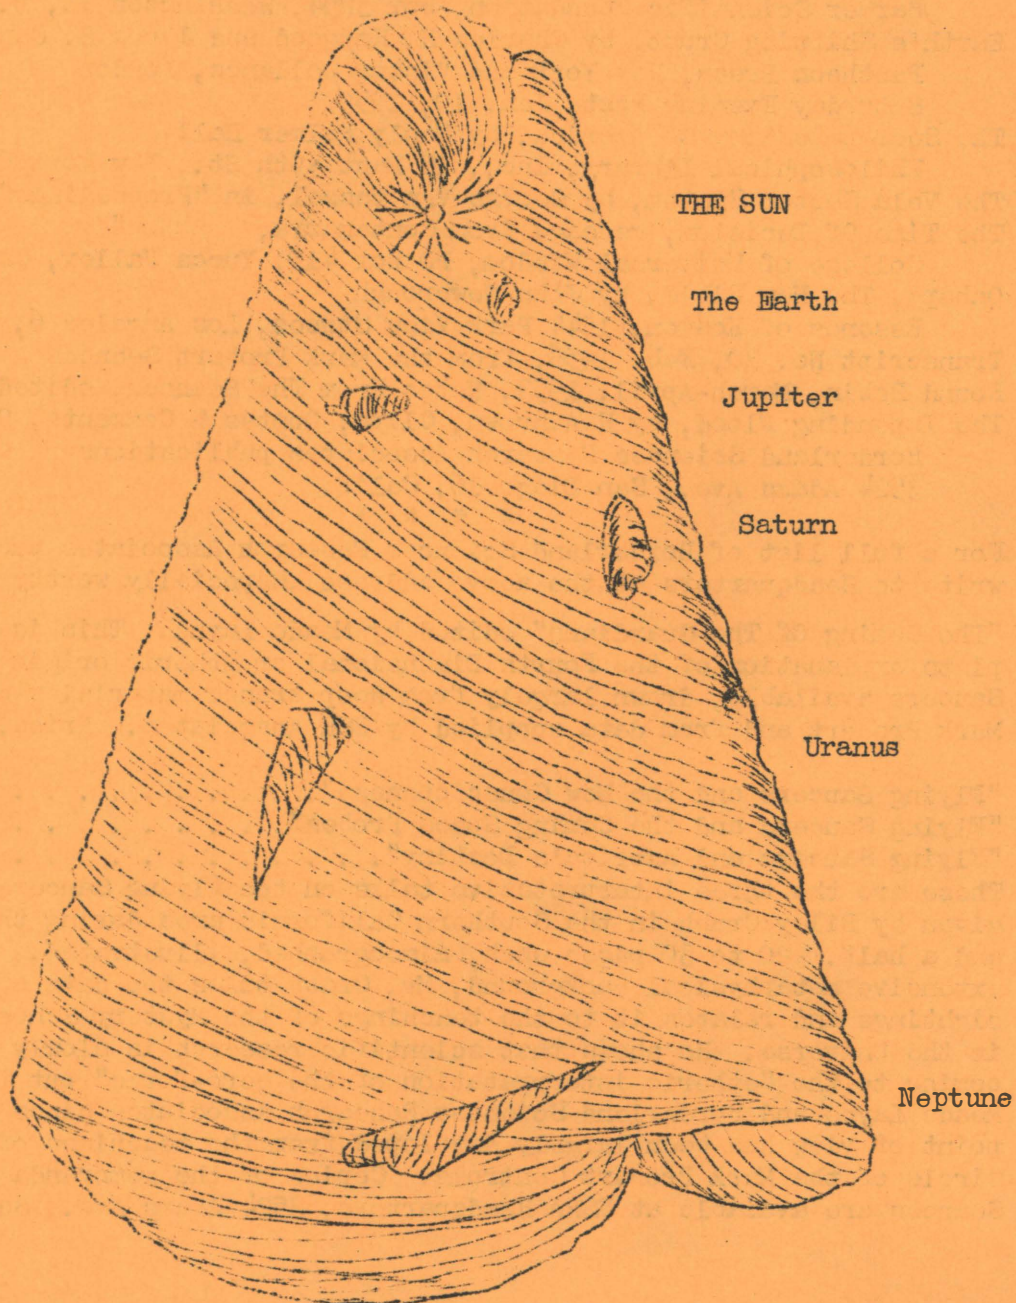

"So, from the system of our sun, Arcturus, we the 'Sons of Adonai' are in your skies. We are watching individuals; we are waiting for your decisions.

"I leave you by extending the love of our people. I am Contamarra."

The End.

The Solar Vortex

This is a copy of the drawing of Tow Sang, the Solar Vortex, appearing on page 563 of the New Bible, Oahspe. According to John Newbrough it was drawn by the Angels who wrote the book through him as medium.

Here is a drawing of the great magnetic field of the Sun, containing within it the magnetic fields and bodies of the planets, not all of which are shown.

For a full list of Borderland Sciences Research Associates publications write to Headquarters at the above address. Especially worthy of note:

"The Coming Of The Guardians" edited by Meade Layne. This is the most complete explanation of the Fourth Dimensional or Etheric origin of the Flying Saucers available, drawn largely from deep trance material received through Mark Probert and from data supplied by BSR Associates. Price. . . . $3.00

"Flying Saucers and the New Consciousness" $1.00
 "Flying Saucers and the Coming Space Probes" 1.00
 "Flying Saucers and America's Destiny" 1.00

These are the three interpretative talks on the Flying Saucers phenomenon given by Riley Crabb in the Southern California area during the past year and a half. 20 to 30 pages each, mimeographed, illustrated. From his own extensive metaphysical background, Mr. Crabb takes the data of the UFO sightings and relates it to the teachings of the Mystery Schools about life in the Universe. He shows that scientific research is slowly but surely coming to the "etheric interpretation of the aero-forms" put forward by Meade Layne and Borderland Sciences Research Associates since 1946. This point of view has been largely developed from the teachings of the Inner Circle of the Mark Probert Controls. Copies of the memoranda of the early Seances are available at BSRA Headquarters, 3524 Adams Ave., San Diego 16.
